INCREASE OF SUFFERING ON COAST OF MOBILE BAY CAUSED BY HEAVY RAIN

Five Hundred Homeless on Dauphin Island and Little Shelter.

Heroic Rescue of a Lighthouse Keeper and His Family.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 1.—A heavy rainstorm, which is greatly interfering with the railroad and telegraph companies, began last night, and still continues. No wind accompanied the rainfall, but the downpour was exceedingly heavy, and enormously increased the difficulties of construction gangs.

It was feared, too, that it would cause much increase of suffering and some deaths along the coast of the south end of Mobile bay. Many people are homeless in that section, and are living in the woods with scanty supply of provisions. On Dauphin island there are 500 persons homeless, and only three small buildings in which they can obtain shelter. Despite the fact that two relief expeditions were sent out yesterday, there are enough provisions for one day only, and additional supplies were sent down early today. While there is no suffering in Mobile proper, there is urgent need at many points on the southern part of the bay, and assistance for these people will be gratefully received.

Arrests were made at some of the lower coast resorts today of negroes who were caught looting wrecked houses. Additional details of militia will be sent to Coden and other points nearby to protect property. Word was received last night that from thirty to forty Creoles on Mon Louis island are destitute and in imminent danger of starvation. It is doubtful, however, if anything can be done for them before tomorrow.

The citizens of Mobile have undertaken relief measures with energy, and are sending food and clothing to the stricken points as rapidly as possible, but there is so much distress at various points to which access is difficult, that it is certain great suffering must follow. Next to food, the great need is for clothing. Men and women in some places have been compelled to wear coffee sacks for clothing, and there are few sacks to be had.

The first thing done by the relief expedition sent from here yesterday to Coden was to give the people clothing. The suffering has been in-

TERRIFIC GALE AT HONGKONG

The Entire Water Front is Again Heaped With Wreckage.

London, Oct. 1.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Kongkong, daied Setp. 29, says:

"The observatory signals gave warning of an approaching typhoon Friday afternoon and by midnight a terrific storm was raging. The violent gale was accompanied by a phenomenal rainfall and was still blowing Saturday afternoon. The devastation of the typhoon of the 18th has been repeated. The entire water front is agin heaped with wreckage.

AMBASSADOR'S NARROW ESCAPE

Baron Rosen in an Automobile Collision But Not Injured.

Manchester-by-the-Sea, N. H., Oct. 1.—Baron Rosen, Russian ambassador to the United States, had a narrow escape in an automobile collision in Manchester Sunday afternoon. The axle of his machine was broken, but neither the baron nor any member of his party was injured. The Russian ambassador, with three friends and a chauffeur, drove to Manchester from Colldge's Point in his large touring car. When nearing Manchester the car rounded the corner into Washington street at good speed just as a runabout belonging to Edgar S. Taft, a Gloucester lawyer, made the sharp turn, coming from the opposite direction.

Mr. Taft saw the danger in time to bring his machine to a stop, but as the big touring car was passing its rear wheels skidded. The car struck the forward part of Mr. Taft's machine, breaking the machinery and demolishing the front wheels and giving the occupants of both cars a severe shaking up. Mr. Taft was accompanied by his wife and two sons, but none of them was hurt. Baron Rosen's car suffered a broken axle.

HUNDREDS HOMELESS

At Pensacola, Without Food or Clothing, and Need Aid.

Committees Are Working Night and Day to Relieve Suffering.

Pensacola, Fla., Oct. 1.—Not since the Galveston disaster has such a hurricane swept the gulf coast as the one which struck this city Thursday morning with an all-impelling force, and raged for twelve hours, the wind blowing steadily at eighty and ninety miles an hour, with occasional gusts of 100 miles an hour. The known loss of life up to date is thirty, which will probably be increased to seventy-five, while the property loss will exceed $5,000,000.

Never in the history of this port or in Florida has such wreck devastation been wrought. Hundreds of persons are homeless, without food and clothing, and cared for by charity. Many are suffering for want of the necessaries of life, and others from exposure. Great steamships and ocean-going sailing vessels, which have withstood the hurricanes of oceans, were helpless before this terrible death-dealing force, and are to-

FIRST SPEECH OF KING FREDERICK

From the Throne Delivered to the Danish Parliament.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 1.—The Danish parliament was opened today by King Frederick in person. His first speech from the throne was almost entirely devoted to the internal affairs of the kingdom. His majesty congratulated the country on the excellence of its foreign relations but added: "At the same time I feel sure that parliament will always co-operate in the work of preserving the independence of the country and people."

Continuing, the king announced that with the object of further strengthening the foreign relations of Denmark he proposed to visit the sovereigns of various countries.

King Frederick also announced that steps would be taken to meet the wishes of Iceland regarding the reform of its constitution.

The opening of parliament was attended by King George of Greece, the dowager empress of Russia and many other members of the royal family; Mr. O'Brien, the American minister and the rest of the diplomatic corps.

SAYS PALMA HAS LOST FORTUNE

Senor Quesada Asserts That Ex-President is Practically Penniless.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Senor Quesada, the Cuban minister, when seen today, had not received any reply from Secretary Taft to his letter of resignation transmitted Saturday. The retiring minister entertains toward Former President Palma feelings of the greatest attachment and sympathy.

"After spending forty of the seventy-three years of his life in fighting for Cuban liberty, President Palma leaves the palace in Havana without a dollar," said Senor Quesada.

"His private fortune, as well as the best energies of his life, have been patriotically poured out in the cause of his country.

"I have cabled to President Palma an invitation to make my house his home if he decides to come to the United States. Although President Palma is practically penniless, he has hosts of friends who will remain steadfast, even though adversity has become his portion."

Mr. Quesada made known today for the first time that a year ago he had tendered his resignation, but that President Palma had declined to accept it. He said it was not his purpose to return to Cuba and participate in the election to be arranged by the provisional government, as he had no ambitions for future office.

PRISON WARDEN DEAD.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Oct. 1.—William A. Hunter, warden of the state prison at Anamoosa for twelve years, died last night, aged 70 years. Hunter had come into national importance because of his advocacy of prison reforms.

IMPORTANT DECISION AS TO RAILWAY RATE LAW REACHED BY COMMISSION

State Rates Should be Filed With the Commission

Where They Form a Part of the Interstate Rate.

Law to be Construed in Advance of Any Complaint.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The interestate commerce commission has reached a most important conclusion with respect to the railway rate law which it has been embodied in a general order made public today. It holds that where a state rate forms a part of an interestate rate, the state rate should be filed with the commission. This is an entirely new feature in connection with the operations of the interestate commerce commission.

The further announcement was made that the commission intends, wherever possible, to construe the law in advance without waiting for any particular complaint to be made upon which to base its decision. In this way it is expected that a large number of complaints will be anticipated and the work of the commission correspondingly lessened.

Uniform classification will form the subject of a conference by the interstate commerce commission here tomorrow. The members wh owill participate in the discussion are Commissioners Cockrell, Clements and Lane. The object of the meeting is to ascertain, if possible, if the railroads cannot be induced to agree to the proposition without the necessity of further legislation by congress.

IS IN FINE CONDITION

President Leaves Oyster Bay, Ending His Summer Vacation.

His Appearance Shows Effect of Life in Open Air.

Oyster Bay, Oct. 1.—President Roosevelt, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Ethel, Archie and Quentin, and his staff of executive clerks, left Oyster Bay for Washington at 9 o'clock today. The White House will be reached at 4:15 this afternoon. The trip to Washington was begun in a special train to Long Island City from whence a tug will convey the party to Jersey City. The last stage of the journey, which will begin at 11:15, will be made in two private cars attached to the regular train for Washington over the Pennsylvania road. Many of the president's village neighbors gathered at the station here to say good-byc. Out of deference to President Roosevelt's expressed wishes, the customary leave taking function, participated in by the school children, was omitted. The official village good-bye was said as usual by ex-Sheriff Jerome B. Johnson, heading a committee of prominent citizens.

The president has spent three months at his Sagamore Hill home and has had the first real vacation since he assumed office as the chief executive of the nation. Today he is in splendid physical condition, and his appearance shows the effect of life in the open air.

New York, Oct. 1.—President Roosevelt and party arrived at Jersey City on their way to Washington at 10.50 o'clock. The party made the trip from Long Island City in the steamer Nassau of the Long Island Railroad in 26 minutes. The president was cheered at Long Island City and Jersey City by large crowds who had gathered to see him.

Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate of governor of New York, had a conference with President Roosevelt in the president's private car in Jersey City.

ANOTHER PEACE CONFERENCE.

Rome, Oct. 1.—The convening of the second peace conference at The Hague is being urged by Great Britain and also by Russia, the latter wishing to show that the internal situation in that country is again becoming normal and that in any case it does not affect her foreign policy.

THE THIEF IS CAUGHT IN ACT

Hibbing, Minn., Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Early Saturday morning Louis Najar, a saloonkeeper of this city, heard some one in his place of business, and calling another man who slept with him above the saloon, they went down stairs and found Toni Kenta, an Austrian, attempting to break into the cash drawer. The two men were armed with an ax and a rifle and they took Kenta in charge. He will be given a hearing tomorrow.

AL ADAMS IS FOUND DEAD

Former Head of Policy Gambling Combine Shoots Himself.

In Poor Health Since His Release From Sing Sing.

New York, Oct. 1.—Albert J. Adams, who made a fortune as the head of the policy gambling combine, shot himself in the head last night at his home in this city. His dead body was found this morning.

Adams had been in poor health since his release from Sing Sing prison, where he served a term for having conducted a policy game in this city. Soon after his release he became president of the Guanajuato Amalganated Gold Mines company. He was reported to be the financial backer of the firm of M. J. Sage & Co. of this city and New Jersey, the offices of which were raided in August on a complaint that the company was conducting a bucket-shop. Mr. Adams' son, Albert J. Adams, Jr., however, declared that the only Albert J. Adams connected with the Sage company was himself.

The fatal shot was fired while Mr. Adams sat in a chair in front of a mirror in his room in his apartments in the Ansonia. Death must have been instantaneous. The body was found lying on the floor by a hall boy who went to the rooms at 7:30 o'clock, according to his custom to call Mr. Adams.

"Al Adams took his life primarily because of the hounding he has received at the hands of the newspapers," said W. E. D. Stokes. "When I went to Sing Sing, I found Parks in a hospital cot. Nursing him was Al Adams who had known me for years. He said: "'Why don't you do something with the governor to get me out of here? You know I am here under an indeterminate sentence. Think of the grief to my family. I know if you will use your influence with the governor, he will do something for me. If I remain much longer here I will dit. I told him I could do nothing for him unless he agreed to sever his connection with the policy business.'

Mr. Stokes said that Adams agreed and was released from prison.

Lately, Mr. Stokes said, Adams told him that he had suffered losses amounting to $800,000 of which $20,000 was lost in Union Pacific stock. According to Mr. Stokes Adams told him that he had loaned $2,000,000 to his son, that he had loaned $40,000 to a trust company and that he had much money

CANAL WORK IS DELAYED

By the Labor Question But is Making Fair Progress.

Governor Magoon Says That Government of Zone is Good.

New York, Oct. 1.—Charles E. Magoon, the retiring American minister to Panama and governor of the canal zone, arrived here today on the steamer Panama from Colon. He was accompanied by Joseph W. J. Lee, American minister to Ecuador, Thomas W. Cook, collector of revenue for the canal zone, and J. Gabriel Duque, a Panama newspaper man.

Discussing conditions on the isthmus, Governor Magoon said:

"The work on the isthmus is going on well. I can safely say that the government of the zone is as good as that of any other locality in this country. My relations with the Panama government have been most pleasant throughout.

"The canal work is progressing as rapidly as possible, but as yet it is merely the work of preparation. The main difficulty there is the labor question. Our labor is drawn from Jamaica and Barbadoes. Those people are intelligent and with some education, but the trouble is that the West Indian is a bird of passage. You get him to understand what you want and fairly educated to his work, when he suddenly drops everything and goes away. What is needed on the isthmus is organization of the laborers. They should be divided into gangs with a skilled man at the head of each gang to instruct them in the work and to advance those who become proficient in any line. Organization along this line is under way at the present time."

Governor Magoon is not favorably impressed with the Chinese as a factor in the construction of the canal. "There are at present from 2,000 to 3,000 Chinese on the isthmus," said Governor Magoon, "and as a citizen I do not think they make desirable laborers. They cannot be depended upon as much as can the Barbadoes, or native negro. As soon as the Chinaman has earned enough money, he starts a shop of his own, and the government loses a man. The good results that have been attained in several parts of the world by the use of coolie labor have been due to great power exerted by the coolie contractors. This would almost be a system of peonage that the United States would not tolerate. If we were to employ coolie labor we would have to depend on the Chinaman as an individual, and in my opinion that would not do, as the coolie will work as little as possible unless under contract. I feel certain that the Chinese would not be a benefit to the United States."

SURPASSED ALL PAST RECORDS

Washington, Oct. 1.—The geological survey today made public statistics on the production of coal in the United States in 1905. From these it appears that, both in quantity and value, the production surpassed all previous records in this country. The output amounted to 392,919,341 short tons, which had a value at the mines of $476,756,963. Compared with 1904, the output in 1905 exhibits an increase of 41,101,943 short tons, or 11.7 per cent in quantity, and of $32,385,942, or 7.3 per cent in value.

Of the total production in 1905, 69,339,152 long tons (equivalent to 77,659,850 short tons) were Pennsylvania anthracite, with a value at the mines of $141,879,000. The total production of bituminous coal and lignite was 315,259,491 short tons, valued at $334,877,963. The production of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania in 1905 was 4,020,622 long tons (or 4,503,151 short tons) more than that of 1904, while the increase in the production of bituminous coal and lignite was 36,599,82 short tons. A portion of these increases was due to the efforts of operating companies to provide a supply of fuel in anticipation of a suspension of mining in April, 1906.

The total production of this coal last year was nearly 50 per cent larger than that of Great Britain, which until 1899 was the leading coal producing country of the world, and was more than double that of Germany.

The larger part of the increase in the production in 1905 was due to the great activity in the iron industry.

DRUGGISTS' CONVENTION.

Atlanta, Oct. 1.—Delegations to the eighth annual convention of the National Association of Retail Druggists are arriving and it is expected there will be present from 1,500 to 2,000 representative retail druggists from all over the United States when the first session opens this afternoon. The convention will remain in session three days.

Preparations for First Army Expedition to Cuba Hastened.

Troops Will be Ready When the Transports Are Available.

Departure of Senor Palma From Havana Has Been Postponed.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The battleship Texas has been held at Cape Henry awaiting further instructions from Secretary Taft. The secretary wired the navy department that he did not need any more battleships, but wanted more marines. He has been informed that the Texas has 200 marines aboard and further supplies for land service.

Secretary Taft is in constant communication with President Roosevelt concerning the Cuban situation, but has not seen fit to communicate with the war department officials since Saturday. Preparations for the first expedition to Cuba are being hastened with all possible speed. Officers and clerks at the war department worked practically all last night and advices from the troops ordered to mobilize at Newport News indicate that they will be ready as soon as transports are available.

The second battalion of engineers left here today to go aboard the Sumner at New York. Two complete field hospital outfits will go to Cuba sailing on the first transport leaving Newport News. Another company of the hospital corps is on its way from San Francisco, a regimental hospital and a full quota of medical officers.

Havana, Oct. 1.—A brigade of marines, consisting of 760 men, commanded by Maj. Wendell C. Neville, was landed at 8 o'clock this morning from the United States warships Kentucky, Indiana and Minneapolis, and proceeded by trolley to Camp Columbia. There was no demonstration of any kind.

All the marines landed within two hours from the starting of the operation, which was carried out with great precision, tent supplies and general equipment were brought along in the boats with each detachment, so that each boatload of men had with them full equipment for a long stay ashore. Several field guns were also landed. All the landings were made at the new wharf of the Havana Central Electric railway. Thirty street cars and several freight cars for the supplies were run directly out upon the long pier and the ship's boats, laden with marines, were towed to the shore in strings of three and four by the launches. As the marines with their equipment reached the wharf they were passed into the street cars, which at once started, two or three at a time, for camp Columbia. The freight cars followed as fast as they were loaded. All the cars passed over the Havana Central tracks to near the arsenal, thence going through the city and Vedado to Camp Columbia. The sight of so many carloads of troops created considerable interest, but there was not the least excitement.

The departure of Senor Palma from Havana has been postponed until tomorrow.

Governor Taft offered Mr. Palma a warship to convey him to Matanzas or elsewhere but the ex-president courteously declined to travel in that manner. It is known that Palma's family are not willing to traverse the island until the pacification has begun, but they are no longer apprehensive of a personal assault upon the ex-president.

London, Oct. 1.—"It is the best thing that could have happened to Cuba," is the opinion of the foreign office here as expressed to the Associated Press today, after full consideration of the American action. The foreign office thus far has not received any official communication regarding the change in the conditions in the island, but the officials evidently anticipate that the intervention of the United States will tend to the annexation of Cuba.

UNION IRON WORKS

At Frisco is Planning Large Extension of Its Plant.

San Francisco, Oct. 1.—W. B. Cox, president of the ship building plant of the United States Steel corporation at Wilmington, Del., has come to the city to assist John A. McGregor, the newly appointed president of the Union Iron Works, in straightening out the affairs of the company.

A report is current that the Union Iron Works is planning large extensions to the works, and will try to make a bid for many of the contracts that are now being sent to other places.

AGAIN POSTPONED.

Audience of Ambassador Leishman With the Sultan Delayed.

Constantinople, Oct. 1.—Ambassador Leishman's audience of the sultan, which was to have taken place Oct. 2 after a number of postponements, has again been postponed. The ambassador has been informed that, in view of the fact that the sultan's birthday is celebrated Oct. 2 and is always succeeded by a religious festival, his reception must be put off until Oct. 5. The audience, however, is a mere formality and in no wise effects the relations between the embassy and the government, which are normal and friendly.

The further announcement was made that the commission intends, wherever possible, to construe the law in advance without waiting for any particular complaint to be made upon which to base its decision. In this way it is expected that a large number of complaints will be anticipated and the work of the commission correspondingly lessened.

Uniform classification will form the subject of a conference by the interstate commerce commission here tomorrow. The members wh owill participate in the discussion are Commissioners Cockrell, Clements and Lane. The object of the meeting is to ascertain, if possible, if the railroads cannot be induced to agree to the proposition without the necessity of further legislation by congress.

THE THIEF IS CAUGHT IN ACT

Hibbing, Minn., Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Early Saturday morning Louis Najar, a saloonkeeper of this city, heard some one in his place of business, and calling another man who slept with him above the saloon, they went down stairs and found Toni Kenta, an Austrian, attempting to break into the cash drawer. The two men were armed with an ax and a rifle and they took Kenta in charge. He will be given a hearing tomorrow.

AL ADAMS IS FOUND DEAD

Former Head of Policy Gambling Combine Shoots Himself.

New York, Oct. 1.—Albert J. Adams, who made a fortune as the head of the policy gambling combine, shot himself in the head last night at his home in this city. His dead body was found this morning.

Adams had been in poor health since his release from Sing Sing prison, where he served a term for having conducted a policy game in this city. Soon after his release he became president of the Guanajuato Amalgamated Gold Mines company. He was reported to be the financial backer of the firm of M. J. Sage & Co. of this city and New Jersey, the offices of which were raided in August on a complaint that the company was conducting a bucket-shop. Mr. Adams' son, Albert J. Adams, Jr., however, declared that the only Albert J. Adams connected with the Sage company was himself.

The fatal shot was fired while Mr. Adams sat in a chair in front of a mirror in his room in his apartments in the Ansonia. Death must have been instantaneous. The body was found lying on the floor by a hall boy who went to the rooms at 7:30 o'clock, according to his custom to call Mr. Adams.

"Al Adams took his life primarily because of the hounding he has received at the hands of the newspapers," said W. E. D. Stokes. "When I went to Sing Sing, I found Parks in a hospital cot. Nursing him was Al Adams who had known me for years. He said: "'Why don't you do something with the governor to get me out of here? You know I am here under an indeterminate sentence. Think of the grief to my family. I know if you will use your influence with the govenor, he will do something for me. If I remain much longer here I will dit. I told him I could do nothing for him unless he agreed to sever his connection with the policy business.'

Mr. Stokes said that Adams agreed and was released from prison.

Lately, Mr. Stokes said, Adams told him that he had suffered losses amounting to $800,000 of which $20,000 was lost in Union Pacific stock. According to Mr. Stokes Adams told him that he had loaned $2,000,000 to his son, that he had loaned $40,000 to a trust company and that he had much money

CANAL WORK IS DELAYED

By the Labor Question But is Making Fair Progress.

Governor Magoon Says That Government of Zone is Good.

New York, Oct. 1.—Charles E. Magoon, the retiring American minister to Panama and governor of the canal zone, arrived here today on the steamer Panama from Colon. He was accompanied by Joseph W. J. Lee, American minister to Ecuador, Thomas W. Cook, collector of revenue for the canal zone, and J. Gabriel Duque, a Panama newspaper man.

Discussing conditions on the isthmus, Governor Magoon said:

"The work on the isthmus is going on well. I can safely say that the government of the zone is as good as that of any other locality in this country. My relations with the Panama government have been most pleasant throughout.

"The canal work is progressing as rapidly as possible, but as yet it is merely the work of preparation. The main difficulty there is the labor question. Our labor is drawn from Jamaica and Barbadoes. Those people are intelligent and with some education, but the trouble is that the West Indian is a bird of passage. You get him to understand what you want and fairly educated to his work, when he suddenly drops everything and goes away. What is needed on the isthmus is organization of the laborers. They should be divided into gangs with a skilled man at the head of each gang to instruct them in the work and to advance those who become proficient in any line. Organization along this line is under way at the present time."

Governor Magoon is not favorably impressed with the Chinese as a factor in the construction of the canal. "There are at present from 2,000 to 3,000 Chinese on the isthmus," said Governor Magoon, "and as a citizen I do not think they make desirable laborers. They cannot be depended upon as much as can the Barbadoes, or native negro. As soon as the Chinaman has earned enough money, he starts a shop of his own, and the government loses a man. The good results that have been attained in several parts of the world by the use of coolie labor have been due to great power exerted by the coolie contractors. This would almost be a system of peonage that the United States would not tolerate. If we were to employ coolie labor we would have to depend on the Chinaman as an individual, and in my opinion that would not do, as the coolie will work as little as possible unless under contract. I feel certain that the Chinese would not be a benefit to the United States."

Washington, Oct. 1.—The geological survey today made public statistics on the production of coal in the United States in 1905. From these it appears that, both in quantity and value, the production surpassed all previous records in this country. The output amounted to 392,919,341 short tons, which had a value at the mines of $476,756,963. Compared with 1901, the output in 1905 exhibits an increase of 41,102,943 short tons, or 11.7 per cent in quantity, and of $32,385,942, or 7.3 per cent in value.

Of the total production in 1905, 69,339,152 long tons (equivalent to 77,659,850 short tons) were Pennsylvania anthracite, with a value at the mines of $141,879,000. The total production of bituminous coal and lignite was 315,259,491 short tons, valued at $334,877,963. The production of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania in 1905 was 4,020,622 long tons (or 4,503,151 short tons) more than that of 1904, while the increase in the production of bituminous coal and lignite was 36,599,82 short tons. A portion of these increases was due to the efforts of operating companies to provide a supply of fuel in anticipation of a suspension of mining in April, 1906.

The total production of this coal last year was nearly 50 per cent larger than that of Great Britain, which until 1899 was the leading coal producing country of the world, and was more than double that of Germany.

The larger part of the increase in the production in 1905 was due to the great activity in the iron industry.

DRUGGISTS' CONVENTION.

Atlanta, Oct. 1.—Delegations to the eighth annual convention of the National Association of Retail Druggists are arriving and it is expected there will be present from 1,500 to 2,000 representative retail druggists from all over the United States when the first session opens this afternoon. The convention will remain in session three days.

Preparations for First Army Expedition to Cuba Hastened.

Troops Will be Ready When the Transports Are Available.

Departure of Senor Palma From Havana Has Been Postponed.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The battleship Texas has been held at Cape Henry awaiting further instructions from Secretary Taft. The secretary wired the navy department that he did not need any more battleships, but wanted more marines. He has been informed that the Texas has 200 marines aboard and further supplies for land service.

Secretary Taft is in constant communication with President Roosevelt concerning the Cuban situation, but has not seen fit to communicate with the war department officials since Saturday. Preparations for the first expedition to Cuba are being hastened with all possible speed. Officers and clerks at the war department worked practically all last night and advices from the troops ordered to mobilize at Newport News indicate that they will be ready as soon as transports are available.

The second battalion of engineers left here today to go aboard the Sumner at New York. Two complete field hospital outfits will go to Cuba sailing on the first transport leaving Newport News. Another company of the hospital corps is on its way from San Francisco, a regimental hospital and a full quota of medical officers.

Havana, Oct. 1.—A brigade of marines, consisting of 750 men, commanded by Maj. Wendell C. Neville, was landed at 8 o'clock this morning from the United States warships Kentucky, Indiana and Minneapolis, and proceeded by trolley to Camp Columbia. There was no demonstration of any kind.

All the marines landed within two hours from the starting of the operation, which was carried out with great precision, tent supplies and general equipment were brought along in the boats with each detachment, so that each boatload of men had with them full equipment for a long stay ashore. Several field guns were also landed. All the landings were made at the new wharf of the Havana Central Electric railway. Thirty street cars and several freight cars for the supplies were run directly out upon the long pier and the ship's boats, laden with marines, were towed to the shore in strings of three and four by the launches. As the marines with their equipment reached the wharf they were passed into the street cars, which at once started, two or three at a time, for camp Columbia. The freight cars followed as fast as they were loaded. All the cars passed over the Havana Central tracks to near the arsenal, thence going through the city and Vedado to Camp Columbia. The sight of so many carloads of troops created considerable interest, but there was not the least excitement.

The departure of Senor Palma from Havana has been postponed until tomorrow.

Governor Taft offered Mr. Palma a warship to convey him to Matanzas or elsewhere but the ex-president courteously declined to travel in that manner. It is known that Palma's family are not willing to traverse the island until the pacification has begun, but they are no longer apprehensive of a personal assault upon the ex-president.

London, Oct. 1.—"It is the best thing that could have happened to Cuba," is the opinion of the foreign office here as expressed to the Associated Press today, after full consideration of the American action. The foreign office thus far has not received any official communication regarding the change in the conditions in the island, but the officials evidently anticipate that the intervention of the United States will tend to the annexation of Cuba.

UNION IRON WORKS

San Francisco, Oct. 1.—W. B. Cox, president of the ship building plant of the United States Steel corporation at Wilmington, Del., has come to the city to assist John A. McGregor, the newly appointed president of the Union Iron Works, in straightening out the affairs of the company.

A report is current that the Union Iron Works is planning large extensions to the works, and will try to make a bid for many of the contracts that are now being sent to other places.

AGAIN POSTPONED.

Audience of Ambassador Leishman With the Sultan Delayed.

Constantinople, Oct. 1.—Ambassador Leishman's audience of the sultan, which was to have taken place Oct. 2 after a number of postponements, has again been postponed. The ambassador has been informed that, in view of the fact that the sultan's birthday is celebrated Oct. 2 and is always succeeded by a religious festival, his reception must be put off until Oct. 5. The audience, however, is a mere formality and in no wise effects the relations between the embassy and the government, which are normal and friendly.

MISSABE'S MONTH BIG

More Ore Was Shipped During September Than During August.

Season's Shipments Up to Date Greater Than Last Year.

A month ago it was freely predicted that the amount of ore shipments would show a falling off in September, the first month of autumn, and this proved correct in the case of all ore roads except the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, which shipped more ore during the past thirty days than it did during August of this year.

The falling off is expected every September. It is considered a bad month from an ore-shipping point of view. After August, the monthly shipments are expected to gradually diminish until the close of the season of navigation. But this September the Missabe road had the boon of a new dock, or rather half of a new dock, for it is not completed yet, and during the month which ended yesterday, the road shipped 1,750,117 tons, as compared with 1,602,000 tons for August and 1,197,887 tons for September, 1905.

It is expected that by the middle of October, all of the Missabe's new dock will be in operation. Only half of it has been in commission thus far. It was in use for the last two weeks of the month.

The new dock has proved very satisfactory thus far and during the past week, a fast loading record was made. A cargo of 9,277 gross tons of ore was loaded onto the steamer E. J. Earling in seventy minutes of actual working time. This is considered a remarkable record and the officials of the road are much pleased over it. The highest record is held by the Great Northern docks at Allouez. There, last season, 10,245 tons of ore were loaded in the Augustus B. Wolvin in an hour and forty minutes, but thirty minutes of this time was used in shifting the vessel from one part of the dock to the other so that the cargo was loaded in about seventy minutes, actual working time.

The Duluth & Iron Range and the Great Northern showed a slight falling off in the amount of their shipments, from last month. During the month which ended yesterday, the Duluth & Iron Range shipped 1,179,635 tons, as compared with 1,015,955 tons for September, 1905. The Great Northern shipped 869,678 tons last month and 698,752 tons a year ago.

The complete table of shipments for last month as compared with those of September, 1905, follows:

Roads—	Sept. 1906.	Sept. 1905.
D., M. & N.	1,750,117	1,197,887
Duluth & I. R.	1,179,635	1,015,955
Great Northern	869,678	698,752
Totals	3,799,430	2,912,594

The season's shipments to date are as follows:

Roads—	1906.	1905.
D., M. & N.	8,334,448	6,787,377
Duluth & I. R.	6,341,357	6,048,067
Totals	19,123,716	16,699,329

SEVENTY-FIVE

Meat Dealers Without the Pale of New Inspection Law.

Washington, Oct. 1.—At least seventy-five meat dealers and packers throughout the United States are without the pale of the new meat inspection law, which became effective today, according to a statement by Secretary Wilson today. Twenty-five of these already have had inspections, but it was found that their plants were not in shape to permit them to engage in interstate business. Fifty others, many of them from New York, have notified the department that they have just heard of the extent of the law and asked for inspection.

MARKET HAS ADVANCES

Cananea Central and Superior & Pittsburg held the center of the stage in the copper stock market today, both making good advances and closing strong.

Cananea Central made a new high mark, selling as high as $21.75 during the day. At the opening, it sold at $19.87½, advanced almost steadily to $21.75, but fell off a little at the close, which was about $20.50 bid and $21 asked.

Superior & Pittsburg, where a good strike has been reported, sold early in the day at $20, advanced to $21.50, and closed at $21.37½ bid and $21.50 asked. The new find of ore is in one of the drifts from the Briggs shaft.

The listed copper shares had a strong tone throughout the day. North Butte opened at $99.50, advanced to $102.12½ and closed strong at $102 bid and $102.25 asked. Amalgamated opened at $111.87½ sold as low as $111.50 and advanced to $113, closing at $112.87½ bid. Anaconda opened at $283, declined to $282, rallied to $285.75 and closed at $285.50 bid. Butte Coalition opened at $39.75, advanced to $39.87½, declined to $39.25 and closed at $39.50 bid and $39.75 asked. Calumet & Arizona opened at $119.50 asked, sold at that price, advanced to $120 and closed at $119 bid and $120 asked.

Warren sold at $14.50 and closed at $14.25 bid, Globe Consolidated at $6.75 and closed at $6.75 bid. Denn-Arizona was inactive and closed at $19.50 bid, Keweenaw at $11 bid and $11.50 asked, Hancock Consolidated at $7.75 bid and $8 asked, Copper Queen of Idaho at $1.75 bid and $2 asked, Calumet & Montana at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked and Cliff at $5 bid and $5.50 asked.

Black Mountain sold at $9.50, declined to $9 and closed at $9 bid and $9.25 asked.

THE GIDDING WINDOWS

Show Stunning Styles---The Store Now At Its Best.

Superior street is thronged these days with women, who find a pleasure in inspecting the different styles of the season. The windows of J. M. Gidding & Co. are attracting special attention, accepted, as they are, as the criterion of fashion. Each day sees something new, today's display being especially worthy of attention.

Inside the store is at its best. The cloak and suit and fur departments are thronged from morning until the store closes, with admiring shoppers, enthusiastic over the charming new styles, which are generally conceded to be the most attractive in years. Those who have not as yet paid the store a visit have a treat in store.

Gets Prison Sentence.

J. W. Booth, who worked in Duluth as an operator for the North American Telegraph company for two months last fall and was later manager of the Postal company's office at La Crosse, Wis., has been sentenced to eighteen months in the Wisconsin state prison at Waupun, for embezzlement. He was convicted of embezzlement of $200 of the company's funds. Fast living and an affection for a married woman are said to have led to his downfall. After the money was taken, he and his paramour left La Crosse and he was arrested at Jackson, Mich., where he was working as a train dispatcher.

Willis E. Boyer Gone.

Eastern theatrical papers last week contained news of the death of Willis E. Boyer, the theatrical manager, at his home near Saugerties, N. Y. Heart trouble was the cause of death. Mr. Boyer was taken ill in Duluth, where he had many friends, during the engagement of "The Maid and the Mummy," a few weeks ago. He was associated with Joseph M. Gaites in the management of the company and was for many years Daniel Sully's manager.

From Fargo Judge Morris will go to Minneapolis the early part of the week to hold the regular session of the federal court. The court sessions in Minneapolis will take about two weeks, as there are eighteen cases on the calendar.

Powell Goes to Calumet.

L. W. Powell, general manager of the Bonanza Circle copper properties, who has been in Duluth for the past week, leaves tonight for Calumet, where he will spend a few days. Upon his return to this city, he and Mrs. Powell will start back to Bisbee.

PERSONALS

FATAL SCUFFLE WITH POLICEMAN

Man Received Injuries From Which He Died at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—During a scuffle with two police officers at an early hour this morning, a man, whose name is supposed to be Brandenburg, received injuries from which he died on the way to the South Side police station. From the reports of Officers Munger and Quislin, it appears that the man and a companion were in a state of intoxication and were causing much disturbance in the neighborhood when the policemen ordered them to move on. Instead of obeying the order, the men are said to have cast slurring remarks at the officers. The latter then decided to arrest the men, and a fight ensued, during which Brandenburg was violently thrown to the ground. His head, the officers say, hit upon the curbstone.

When the South Side patrol wagon arrived, Brandenburg was unconscious. Both he and his companion were taken to the police station in the wagon, and when they arrived it was discovered that Brandenburg was dead. The body was removed to the morgue. The other man was unable to give his name, and was locked up at the station.

An investigation at the morgue showed that the dead man had his right eye badly blackened and that he had been bleeding from mouth and nose. He had only 5 cents in his pockets.

RESULT OF HURRICANE.

Around New Orleans Is Fourteen Dead And As Many Missing.

New Orleans, Oct. 1.—Fourteen dead and as many missing is the result of last Thursday's hurricane in the vicinity of New Orleans. Twelve persons were drowned in Mississippi sound, two were killed in the interior towns of southern Mississippi and more than a dozen fishermen are reported missing in the delta region of the Mississippi river.

This summary is based upon the reports from almost every town or settlement in or about the regions named, such places as could not be communicated with by telegraph having been reached by boat or horse. New Orleans is still without sufficient telegraph communication, and Eastern mails are three or four days overdue.

FREIGHT LINE COMPANIES

Operating Private Cars to Have Their Assessments Raised.

St. Paul, Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Freight line companies operating private cars are due for a liberal raise in their assessments by the state board of equalization. In all thirty-one companies were cited to appear, but of these only the Nelson Morris company appeared. This company claimed that as its personal property and real estate was already listed for taxation, to assess the rolling stock which was assessed in other states would be wrong. Their assessment now stands at $1,500. One of the members sugested $10,000 as being more in line with a proper valuation, but this the company's representative refused to acknowledge.

The Armour Car Line company is listed at $15,000 and the Swift Refrigerator Car Line at $13,500. The others run from $1,500 to $2,100. The raise all around will be about 50 per cent.

NEEDED AT PENSACOLA.

MAKE STRONG PROTEST.

Tangier, Morocco, Oct. 1.—Through the connivance of Kaid Relia, a soldier, who assaulted the son of Thami Shaoul, a Moroccan subject under the protection of the United States, was allowed to escape and the American minister, Mr. Gummere, has lodged an energetic protest, demanding the dispatch of cavalry to capture the kaid, a large indemnity and the punishment of the guilty persons.

ASSURED OF A NEW PARK

Deal For Lake Shore Park May Be Closed Very Soon.

Mayor Cullum Expects to Get Amount of Money Needed.

That the success of the Lake Shore park project is to be secured within a very short time, is the assurance given by Mayor Cullum, who has been giving a great deal of his time during the past several weeks toward that end.

Recently there have been conflicting reports as to the status of the park project and it has even been said that the option given by the railway company had expired. Such is not the case however, and Mayor Cullum still has five or six weeks grace, but the present indications are that the deal will be closed up in a much shorter time. Mayor Cullum said today:

"In regard to the lake shore park matter, I have to say that during my absence there have appeared several somewhat garbled or at least misleading statements. The situation is this: I have been endeavoring to raise by popular subscription as much money as possible, not only for the acquirement of this park, but for the improvement of it. The park board has intimated that it would pay one-half the purchase price if the other half could be raised either by popular subscription or assessment.

"Wishing to avoid the necessity of assessing the adjoining property very heavily, I have urged those in a position to do so, to subscribe as liberally as possible. A great many have come forward very liberally; others have not as yet done their share.

"I have every reason to believe that a sufficient amount will be subscribed by the end of this week to enable me to close the deal. About $2,500 more is needed and I hope those who can afford to help this scheme out will do so promptly by letting me know the amount they are willing to give. I hope to announce the final closing up of this matter early next week."

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Threshing Engineer Literally Roasted by an Oil-Fed Fire.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Valley City—At noon Saturday one of the most shocking accidents in the history of Barnes county occurred about twelve miles north of this city.

Charles Ford, an engineer in charge of a threshing rig on the farm of William Avers, met an awful death. A fire started under the engine and the flames threatened to injure it. Ford mounted the footboard to get the engine out of danger. His clothing, saturated with oil, caught fire and he became panic-stricken and ran wildly across the stubble field, the flames enveloping his figure.

The members of the crew gave chase, but he dropped from exhaustion before they could reach him. He was about a quarter of a mile away before the flames were extinguished. His body was literally roasted and he died shortly afterward. He was a well-known Barnes county farmer and left a wife in poor health and two small children.

Fargo—After deliberating forty-five minutes, a jury brought in a verdict of acquittal in the case of J. W. Brisbon, who killed an Indian policeman, Albert Smuttybear, at the Standing Rock reservation last October. The case has been on trial all week in the United States court.

Bismarck—This section is wildly stirred up by the holding up and shooting last Frnday night of Louis Lindquist, a butcher, at Driscoll, thirty miles from here. Lindquist has a shop in Driscoll, but lives a mile or two from town. He was driving home after the close of business when a man called to him from the road ahead to stop, which Lindquist did. The man came to the side of the wagon and at the point of a pistol ordered him to throw up his hands. Lindquist whipped up his horses and the man fired, the ball striking Lindquist in the hip and seriously wounding him. The team ran home and the wounded man was brought here to a hospital. The wound is a bad one, but he may recover.

The railroad and warehouse commissioners have just closed an important session. The question of the approval of the bonds of elevators and warehouses was taken up. It was found that several bonds were signed by non-residents and also that several elevator companies were foreign corporations and had not taken out articles of incorporation in North Dakota; also that several of the bonds had been signed with the copartnership name instead of giving the individual names of the members of the firms. These bonds were disapproved and foreign corporations were ordered to incorporate under the laws of this state and give new bonds to conform to the law. The board also revised the rules to correspond with the present statutes and will require each elevator to keep a copy posted in a conspicuous place in the elevators.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Ellendale.—Because he refused to deed his property into his wife's name, John Bolan of this city, who has enjoyed married life only one short week, was so severely mauled by his wife that he is in a serious condition.

Rev. Father Gallahue was brought into police court to answer to the charge of assault and battery and pleaded not guilty. Bolan swore that both the priest and his wife tried to get him to deed his property to her, and upon his refusal they set upon him and pounded him until he was unconscious. The wife, for the apparent reason of shielding Gallahue, testified that she only pounded Bolan. Notwithstanding the court saw fit to impose a fine upon the parson.

Salem.—Rodney Hall and Mrs. Ezra Smith, both of this place, were married at Mitchell on Thursday, thus ending a courtship that has had many entanglements, even to getting into the courts.

Mrs. Smith is the widow of Ezra Smith, at one time register of deeds of the county, and who died about three and a half years ago. She is about 62 years old, and recently became heir to several thousand dollars. Hall is scarcely 40 years old. They were to have been married a few weeks ago, but the children who live here took the matter before the probate judge, asking for a guardian for their mother, on the ground that she was not responsible. The hearing was set but the couple attempetd to leave town to get married, and were arrested for contempt of court.

When the hearing was had Judge Todd of the probate court granted the petition of the children and Tom Bishop was appointed guardian. It was thought by many that Mr. Hall was marrying Mrs. Smith for her money alone, and that was one reason the children objected to the match although they also objected to the man himself and his age.

But "true love" laughs at courts as well as locksmiths, and the pair were married Thursday, arriving home the next day to make their home on the property owned by the bride. Whether they will be forgiven or not remains to be seen.

LATE DOINGS IN UPPER MICHIGAN

Young Woman Teacher Fights Board Which Ignored Contract.

Crystal Falls—Backed by a contract duly executed and signed, a woman teacher in Stambaugh township persists in conducting her classes, although the board of education has formally dispensed with her services and has engaged her successor.

The young lady held the position last year and gave satisfaction until near the close of the term, when, after the board had re-engaged her for another year, she is alleged to have developed such strict disciplinary tendencies, apparently adopting the motto, "Spare the rod, spoil the child," that a vigorous demand went up for her discharge. The board met the request by appointing her successor.

Escanaba—One man was suffocated and another was buried alive but rescued, in a heavy landslide near Escanaba, last Friday. William Keek was caught in an avalanche of sand, while working beneath a steep bluff, three miles north of the city, and was buried under nearly twenty feet of earth. Alfred Keek, brother of the unfortunate man was working near the same spot, and although he was completely buried, was rescued by fellow employes before death came.

Norway—Marriages in which the bride is nearly three times the age of the bridegroom are exceedingly rare, yet a nuptial event marked by this remarkable discrepancy in age is reported from Quinnesec. The bride was a Mrs. Day, who confessed to 67 summers, and the bridegroom, Joseph Shea, 24 years old.

Marquette—That hemp some day, and that in the not far distant future, will unquestionably be a common crop throughout the upper peninsula, and will lead to the establishment of industries that will manufacture the fibre, is the opinion of Leo M. Gelsmar, superintendent of the state experimental station at Chatham, Alger county. Hemp fibre is commercially used for the best grades of ropes, the backing of carpets, and the weaving of other articles where great strength is required. At present the domestic crop is almost exclusively grown in Kentucky, where the plants reach an average height of about nine feet and thrive best in the so-called Blue Grass region of that state. In the upper peninsula of Michigan there are more than 6,000,000 acres identical with the Blue Grass lands, and experiments conducted at the state farm the past two years show that the plant will thrive in this latitude in remarkable manner.

CURIOUS SUIT

To Determine Whether Man Is Dead or in Insane Asylum.

St. Louis, Oct. 1.—The trial of an insurance suit was begun today in United States circuit court to determine whether George A. Kimmel, former president, director and cashier of the Farmer's State Bank of Arkansas City, Kas., is dead or is a maniac confined in the Mttawan asylum for the criminal insane, in New York. The suit involves the payment of $5,000 life insurance.

The man in the Mattawan asylum claims he is Kimmel, but Kimmel's relatives declare the man is not Kimmel, that Kimmel has not been heard from since his mysterious disappearance Aug. 1, 1898, and that they believe him to be dead.

The suit was first filed in the state circuit court of St. Louis and was then transferred t othe United States court.

"KICKS"

On Columbia Boys' Clothes are never heard, because we allow in our big stock none except such responsible kinds as can be sold with the Columbia guarantee. We will gladly exchange goods or pay your money back and in general try hard to make you feel kindly towards this store. If this policy doesn't pay in every single instance, it pays in the long run, and we expect to have the boys of Knickerbocker age for customers when they reach the full dress period of their life.

Columbia Boys' Clothes stand the kicks of the young football enthusiasts and all other hard raps to which lively youngsters subject their suits.

Again a favorite this season is the Norfolk Jacket, with Knickerbocker Trousers, made but slightly different from before, and some with yoke and plaited. The materials are Scotch cheviots, homespuns, fancy cassimeres, worsteds and the conventional blue serge. For ages 8 to 17, and ranging iun price from $3.50 to $12.00.

REMNANT OF GULF STORM.

Central Through Northeastern Portions of Gulf of Mexico.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The weather bureau says: "The remnant of the gulf storm of last week is central through the northeastern portions of the Gulf of Mexico. It has not developed as yet sufficient energy to cause more than fresh winds and rain in the gulf and South Atlantic states.

"The winds along the Middle Atlantic coast will be fresh northeast; along the South Atlantic coast brisk probably high northeast; along the east gulf coast fresh to brisk northwest; lower lakes fresh southeast."

CITY'S FUNDS SHORT.

Kansas City, Kanses, Face to Face With a Financial Crisis.

Kansas City, Oct. 1.—If the Kansas City, Kas., council passes the city pay rolls tomorrow night, the general fund of the city will be exhausted in a few days, and Acting Mayor Joseph Laughlin will be face to face with the permanent order of the common pleas court, enjoining the mayor from signing certain certificates against an exhausted general fund.

Last month's city scrip, with which patrolmen, firemen and other city employes were paid, was mostly taken up by discount shavers. Most banks have decided not to take the scrip this month and, where taken up, it must be discounted heavily.

W. J. BRYAN'S PLANS.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 1.—W. J. Bryan, who returned to his home near this city yesterday, will entertain at his residence tonight more than 100 Nebraskans who comprised the "Home Folks" delegation that met him in New York when he returned from his trip around the world. Wednesday of this week Mr. Bryan will go to St. Joseph, Mo. He will speak in Nebraska Thursday, Friday and Saturday and next week he will go to Kansas for a speaking tour.

ACTION APPROVED.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—The Rock River conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, in session here today, approved the action of the Methodist Book concern in granting an eight-hour day to the printers.

MORE PEOPLE DROWNED.

New Orleans, Oct. 1.—The deaths of Lighthousekeepers Neil Neilson and Andrew Hanson, and the washing of their lighthouse into the sea, were reported today by Light Inspector Sears, who returned from a trip of inspection on the sound. This makes six lives known to have been lost in the wrecking of sound lighthouses alone. Mr. Sears also reported six beacon lights destroyed and Ship Island lighthouse ruined.

CONNORS IS CHAIRMAN.

New York, Oct. 1.—The Democratic state committee met today at the Hoffman house and elected William J. Connors of Buffalo, chairman, without opposition. Mr. Connors led the fight at Buffalo for the nomination of Mr. Hearst. After the meeting today, most of the members of the state committee were received by Mr. Hearst at his residence.

MILLIONAIRE TO WED STENOGRAPHER

EDWARD C. WALL.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 1.—Edward C. Wall, aged 63, a widower of two years, Saturday formally announced his engagement to Martha Ahrndt, of this city, formerly his stenographer, aged 26. Wall is a millionaire several times and was a candidate for the presidential nomination on the Democratic ticket, was member of the national committee and chairman of the state central committee. Up to Saturday Wall refused to deny or affirm the report generally circulatde.

"The Exhibit of the S. & B. Store seems to possess a very evident atmosphere of honesty, of truthfulness, of unstilted dignity."—Dry Goods Economist.

Costumes and Wraps of Quality.

That means the S. & B. kind, for whether the price is much or little, the style and tailoring are the same. The difference lays chiefly in the materials and trimmings used. While quality is high and styles exclusive, prices are not at all so much as you would expect the garments to be markt. So wide is the variety, so comprehensiv the showing, that a satisfactory selection is assured.

Other costumes in Chiffon Voile, Taffeta Silk, Crepe de Chine and all-over net.

Handsome black, white and cream broadcloth Evening Coats, full, loose back, silk braid trimmings around collar and cuffs. Entire coat lined with satin.

The Vogue of Plaids in Suits

is well illustrated in our Suit Department. Right plaid models are not so easy to find—for plaids and checks are far more difficult to tailor than are plain goods. A single wrong seam and the whole effect is spoiled. We have selected our line of plaid suits with special care and we think we're safe in saying there's none better anywhere. The prices may interest you—but should be compared with the suits to be fully appreciated—$29.50 to $45.

FORCE FOR CIENFUEGOS

American Marines Go There to Prevent a Possible Conflict.

Revolutionists Well Satisfied With Result of Uprising.

Havana, Oct. 1.—The first landing of any considerable number of American troops took place last night when 450 marines came ashore. This force proceeded to Cienfuegos. It was explained that this movement was not made on account of any actual trouble in Cienfuegos, but for the purpose of exerting a calming influence on the local situation which contains some possibility of a conflict by reason of the tense feeling existing between the government volunteers and the insurgents.

Yesterday at the palace passed quietly and rather gloomily. There are yet no signs of Secretary Taft's actual occupancy of that place, which yesterday was the scene of a number of farewells to ex-President Palma and his family. The members of the diplomatic corps and the foreign consuls called in a body to say goodbye. They gave expression to many sincere words of friendship and appreciation of the character and kindliness of the late head of the republic. Senor Palma received all his visitors with quiet dignity and seemed entirely reconciled to going, although he still appears dejected at the outcome of the revolution.

Toward evening the private reception room of the palace was thrown open, and scores of personal friends called and remained for some time with Senor Palma, his wife and other members of the family. The ex-president is besieged by requests for interviews by cable and in person. The London newspapers are urgent in asking for an interview. To the cablegrams the ex-president has not replied, while to the newspaper correspondents here he has sent word that he has nothing further to say.

The provisional government has no expectation that even a considerable number of the revolutionists will surrender their arms. Most of the weapons are the personal property of the men carrying them. The first of the disarmament commission left here last night for Puerto Principe. Others started today for Santa Clara province on a special train, which will pick up the arms turned in at the various places on the way. As Santa Clara province contains the largest number of rebels in arms, the work there will be especially arduous. Gen. Guerra himself will assist in superintending the work of the return of his men to their homes after the forces in Pinar Del Rio province have given over their arms.

Gen. Funston expects to remain in Havana in general charge of the work of disarmament. When this is completed he will take command of all the United States troops in Cuba.

Gen. Pino Guerra, speaking yesterday of the new situation, said all the men of his forces were eminently satisfied with the arrangements. He expressed the belief that the stability of the government was now assured, and predicted that never again would there be a revolution in Cuba, thanks largely to the United States government for the hand it had taken in the settlement.

While many of his men wanted to parade in Havana before dispersing, their commanders regarded this as unnecessary and Gen. Guerra said there would be no demonstration that would permit of the possibility of a renewal of the previous ill feeling. Asked whether his men shared his contentment with the proposition to return quietly to their homes, Gen. Guerra said:

"The men under our commands will obey us. Those who do not, certainly never were with us. The revolution is ended and we have won, so we are supremely content."

Gen. Del Castillo said: "We would have preferred a peaceful solution arranged, if possible, between the Cubans themselves instead of intervention, but we are satisfied because the corrupt administration has fallen and an honest election can be depended on next year. We consider our fight has not been in vain. We have faith that the independence of Cuba is not endangered by American intervention and together with Gen. Funston we have drunk a toast to President Roosevelt and the independence of Cuba."

LAND FOR PEASANTS.

Final Step to Put Russian Government's Plan Into Effect.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 1.—The final step to set in action the machinery of the government's plan for the disribution of land to the peasantry was taken yesterday by the publication of voluminous regulations to the local agrarian commissions, under which the sale of 11,000,000 declations of land in European Russia will begin immediately. The acreage in Eastern Russia and on the Siberian steppes, surrendered by the emperor, will be sold on easy terms. The price is less than $2 an aere and payments are spread over fifty years.

With the Constitutional Democratic congress only one week away and the formation of a formidable new party on Count Heyden's platform, peaceful regenration seems fully assurred.

READY FOR GOVERNOR

Two Audiences Will Hear Him Speak in Duluth.

Tour of the Ranges Will Start Tuesday Morning.

Everything is in readiness for Governor A. Johnson's speech-making tour of the ranges, and for the two Duluth meetings he will address this evening. The governor will arrive in the city at 7 p. m., and almost immediately will step into an automobile and be conveyed to Lincoln park, where, in the roller rink, he will hold a meeting lasting from 7:03 to 8:15 o'clock. At 8:30 he will deliver a second speech at Great Eastern hall, West Duluth.

The West Duluth meeting, which will be in charge of Alderman Getchell, will begin at 8 o'clock. Judge L. G. Pendergast of Bemidji, nominee on the Democratic ticket for lieutenant governor, who arrived in the city last evening, will discuss political issues of the present campaign until the arrival of the governor. William Bernard, committeeman from the Seventh ward, will have charge of the Lincoln Park meeting.

W. E. McEwen, chairman of the Democratic county committee, will have two automobiles in readiness to convey Governor Johnson and friends to the western part of the city. Among those in the machines will be T. T. Hudson, Democratic national committeeman; Charles d'Autremont, member of the Democratic state central committee; C. O. Baldwin; Chairman McEwen and representatives of the press.

The governor will start for the ranges tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock. The first speech of the trip will be delivered at Proctor at 7:30 o'clock. It will last about half an hour, and then the car and engine provided for the occasion will proceed to Biwabik, where the governor will speak at 10:30 a. m. The schedule of the remainder of the trip is as follows: Eveleth, 11:30 a. m.; Virginia, 1:00 p. m.; Chisholm, 3:30 p. m.; Hibbing, arrive at 4:30 p. m., evening address, leaving for Tower at 11 p. m.; arrive Tower 3:00 a. m.; Wednesday, leaving at 10 a. m.; Ely, 11 a. m.; Two Harbors, 5 p. m.; evening address. Arrive Duluth at midnight.

The governor will not speak in the main part of Duluth this trip, but will visit the city later on. He leaves here Thursday for Grand Rapids, where he will speak in the evening. Among those on the car with him on the range trip will be Judge Pendergast, T. T. Hudson, Charles d'Autremont, Mayor M. B. Cullum, State Committeeman A. G. Kingston of Eveleth, County Chairman W. E. McEwen and Charles F. MacDonald.

INCREASE OF SUFFERING

tense at Bayou La Batre, and is still acute. Members of the relief committee which visited that place reported that they were followed through the streets by little children, who were crying and begging for a piece of bread. A large number of tents were taken to Dauphin island last night, and more will be taken today.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 1.—The revenue cutter Winona, which for a time was thought to have gone to the bottom in Wednesday's storm, arrived in Mobile last night. Her crew tell a thrilling story of dangers through which they passed and narrate in a modest way the heroic conduct of Master-at-arms Peterson and Quartermaster Peterson, who rescued the East Pascagoula lighthouse keeper and his family. When the Winona arrived off the Pascagoula lighthouse, it was said that it was almost destroyed, nothing being left but the tower, which was swaying in every gust of the gale and threatening to collapse at any minute. It was soon seen that the keeper, wife, and two children who had sought refuge in the tower must be given speedy relief or they must be lost. The two Petersons embarked in a small boat with other members of the crew, and, after a desperate fight with the waves, reached the base of the tower. The keeper threw to them a line which he had carried up. The rescuers then climbed up the rope, the wind dashing them against the building with such a force as to bruise them badly. Then they lowered to the men waiting below the keeper's entire family, afterward sliding down the rope themselves and returning to their ship.

The Winona was at Scranton, Miss., when the storm broke and, although she weathered the blow without serious damage, she had a hard timo in doing so. The wind at times was so severe that, although the boat had out four anchors, she was compelled to maintain full speed ahead to hold her position. While the storm was at its height, the wreck of a sloop drifted past and, although the Winona was having all she could do to save herself, Capt. Hanks lowered a small boat and, after a seemingly hopeless struggle with the water, managed to rescue seven persons, most of them women.

The captain reported that as he steamed past Dauphin Island yesterday on his way to Mobile, a message was sent to him through the megaphone stating that there are 300 people on the island who are suffering for supplies. A relief expedition was sent to them early this morning.

Nearly every aid to navigation between Mobile and Gulfport has been destroyed and Round Island light is the only one on that part of the coast which now burns at night. The quarantine station at Ship Island was damaged to the extent of $60,000, but no lives were lost. Capt. Hanks reports that there are wrecked vessels all along the east end of Cat island, on ship island, on Horn island, on Petit Bois island, and Dauphin Island was so fiercely swept by the storm that it can hardly be seen, but the channel itself has not been changed.

Maj. Slaker, commanding the United States forces at Fort Gaines and Fort Morgan, which are situated at the entrance to Mobile Bay, has recommended to the government at Washington that the troops now stationed there be relieved as speedily as possible. The barracks have been almost destroyed. All sanitary arrangements have been rendered useless and Maj. Slaker is apprehensive that unless the men are quickly moved, there will be much sickness.

The following list yesterday received from Herron Bay of lives lost and boats destroyed is the first complete returns:

Schooner Oyster Plant, total loss, one unknown man drowned; schooner Ethel, total loss, William and Richard Talland brothers, drowned; Lyre Bird, total loss, Capt. Jones and Mate Mitchell Pendleton, lost; Governor Stone, wrecked, no lives lost; Edward L, wrecked, no lives lost; Country Girl, total loss, no lives lost; Etta, of Point Clear, Ala., Capt. Philips, two sons and one unknown man drowned; Agnes, total loss, Capt. Wm. Jones and Mate Yeaker, drowned; Nellie, total loss, Captain James Read, John Stahl and an unknown Norweglan, drowned; Meadow Spring, total loss, Capt. Sam Hahn, a boy named Windburg, drowned; Sloop Two Friends, Capt. Milton Jones of Alabama Port and two boys named Jackson, drowned.

The following boats were destroyed, no one being on board at the time: J. T. Little, A. L. Mangold, Omaha, Never Tell, Edna B., Little Kelly.

Other lives lost at Heron bay were: Mrs. Oliver Doran and two children. All the houses in Heron bay except four were destroyed and only two houses remain in Alabama Port.

Paul J. Wilson, secretary of the Commercial club of Mobile, Pa., requested the Associated Press to send out a denial of the stories regarding the loss of life and suffering. Not a single life has been lost and the citizens of Mobile have the local situation in splendid shape. Offers of assistance have been received and while the residents of Mobile appreciate these at their full value, there is no suffering in this city which calls for outside aid.

Impassable swamps surround the city on all sides. The only passageways through these swamps are the roadbeds of the railroads and those reaching the stricken territory are not in shape to allow the running of trains.

A Reasonable Plea For The Stomach

If Your Stomach is Lacking in Digestive Power, Why Not Help the Stomach Do Its Work—Especially When It Costs Nothing to Try ?

Not with drugs, but with a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach? Scientific analysis shows that digestion requires pepsin, nitrogenous ferments, and the secretion of hydrochloric acid. When your food fails to digest, it is proof positive that some of these agents are lacking in your digestive apparatus.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain nothing but these natural elements necessary to digestion and when placed at work in the weak stomach and small intestines, supply what these organs need. They stimulate the gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been subjected to critical chemical tests at home and abroad and are found to contain nothing but natural digestives.

London, 9th Aug., 1905.

I have analyzed most carefully a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets (which I bought myself at a city chemist's shop for the purpose), manufactured by the F. A. Stuart Co., Temple Chambers London, E. C., and have to report that I cannot find any trace of vegetable or mineral poisons. Knowing the ingredients of the tablets, I am of opinion that they are admirably adaptable for the purpose for which they are intended.

(Signed) John R. Brooke, F. I. C.,F. C.S.

There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Their composition is commonly known among physicians, as is shown by the recommendations of 40,000 licensed physicians in the United States and Canada. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, water brash, insomnia, loss of appetite, melancholia, constipation, dysentery and kindred diseases originating from improper dissolution and assimilation of foods, because they are thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are at once a safe and a powerful remedy, one grain of these tablets being strong enough (by test) to digest 3,000 grains of steak, eggs and other foods. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

Ask your druggist for a fifty cent package or send to us direct for a free trial sample package and you will be surprised at the result. F. A. Stuart, Co., 64 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

AL ADAMS FOUND DEAD

About six months ago, Mr. Stokes said, Adams appeared to be greatly depressed and Mr. Stokes asked him if he was worried by business troubles.

"No, it is not that," replied Adams, "but the newspapers and magazines have been hounding me so long about the policy and bucket-shop business that I can stand it no longer, and if there is not a let up I will kill myself. I can't stand it, old man; there has got to be a stop to it. I am an old man, and I might as well finish it."

At the office of the Colonial Securities company, of which Adams was treasurer, it was said today that Adams had been ill of diabetes for a year and that it was this illness which must have prompted him to commit suicide. An official of the company said Mr. Adams did not end his life because he had lost his fortune, for he did not lose it. At the time of his death he was a very wealthy man. He was one of the largest individual holders of corner real estate in the city. He was also interested in other business ventures paying large returns.

day a mangled heap upon the beaches, mingled with the wrecks of fishing schooners, the tug boats and pleasure boats, while thousands of stacks of timber and homes and wharves are intermingled with this aggregation of wreckage.

From Ft. McRae to Escambia bridge, a distance of ten miles, the bay shore has been swept clean, except a few wharves, where floated a fleet of seventy-five large ships before the hurricane. McRae, one of the modern coast fortifications, has been swept from earth, and five lives lost; five other people are insane from their terrible experience. They saved themselves by lashing themselves to the batteries. Fort Pickens and Fort Barancas are badly damaged, the former almost wrecked. The navy yard has suffered to the extent of over $1,000,000. Five war vessels were sunk and driven ashore, the floating dock crushed and other damage sustained. Three lives have been lost there. The life saving and immigrant stations on Santa Rosa island have been swept completely off the map, and five persons are known to have been drowned there.

The magnificent Escambia drawbridge, costing hundreds of thousands of dollars, is gone, and three lives were lost. It was more than a mile in length, and owned by the Louisville & Nashville. Three immense export docks of that company have been swept away or damaged. Every wharf and warehouse along the city front has been demolished, and the Red Snapper fishing industry, the largest of the world, destroyed. The immense packing houses have been carried away, and of a fleet of about sixty vessels two of them remain.

From 800 to 1,000 homes have been destroyed, fully 2,000 damaged to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars. The city is in a terrible condition, and relief committees are working night and day in an effort to relieve the suffering of the hundreds of destitute.

SAYS FAREWELL TO PEOPLE.

Rev. Charles Fox Davis Preaches Final Sermons Here.

"There is not a government in the world, all things considered, equal to this great country of ours," said Rev. Charles Fox Davis of the Lester Park M. E. church. The occasion was his farewell sermon. Taking for his text, "Render unto Ceaser the things that are Ceasar's, and unto God the things that are God's." He said in part:

"Jesus Christ was the great interrogation point of His time. He was questioned by all of the great men of His day, and the lawyers were even called upon to try and catch Him stumbling, but to all of the questioners He gave instant replies. We have outlived Socrates and all the other great thinks of the age, but the teachings of Jesus Christ will live as long as the world reigns.

A nation flourishes according to the rules of its government, he said. Washington said, "Religion and morality are inseparable." The constitution of the United States is founded on the Mosaic code and the beatitudes of the Bible. It was the only nation that he knew anything about where life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness was the fundamental principle laid down for the guidance of its 80,000,000 people, and so long as the human and divine institutions were so closely intertwined, the country would surely flourish.

Very general regret is expressed at Mr. Davis' leaving. After four years' incumbency, he has been very popular, not only at Lester Park, but all over the city. At the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. he was almost as well known as in his own congregation, and he leaves the church with the best wishes of the congregation for his success wherever his lot may be cast.

DECLARES BIBLE NOT WORD OF GOD

Bishop Williams of Michigan Talks to Detroit Y. M. C. A.

Detroit, Oct. 1.—Bishop Charles D. Williams of the Episcopal diocese of Michigan, in an address to Y. M. C. A. members here yesterday on "The Bible and the Word of God," declared that the Bible was not the word of God and that the teachings to the contrary are the most prolific source of unbelief the church has to contend with. The bishop said:

"Nowhere does the Bible declare itself the word of God. Yet we are told we must take it in its entirety. It is a venerable museum and visitors are requested not to touch it. As it is the word of God, there is no other.

"Take the young man just from college. He reads Genesis and finds impossible beology, astronomy and ethnology. His teacher says, when questioned, manipulate it until it fits your sciences.' If too honest to handle the word of God craftily, the young man gives up the Bible. He refuses to stultify his reason. The Bible needs no defense; all it needs is a square deal. There are those who read it decently, diligently. But I never say the Bible is the word of God. I say the Bible and the word of God.

To those who accept the entire book as the literal word of God I would point out that it is nowhere so stated. Christ tore asunder the Old Testament precepts, the law of Moses, and furnished some new ones. Where the Old Testament directed men to hate their enemies, the teachings of Christ were to love your enemies."

There is nothing that takes away the beautiful, womanly charms like a plodding, stooped, awkward carriage. There is absolutely no excuse for that as long as Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea is made. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

ANOTHER PIONEER IS NO MORE

GEORGE NELSON LAVAQUE.

George Nelson Lavaque, of 917 East Fifth street, a resident of Duluth for more than thirty-five years and a prominent figure in the business and civic life of Duluth in the seventies eighties and early nineties, died shortly before midnight Saturday night after an illness of about one week with pneumonia. For a time he seemed to be sucessfully combating the ravages of the dicase but Saturday a turn for the worse came and he passed away without rallying.

Mr. Lavaque was born February 8, 1843, in Milwaukee, Wis., and was therefore a little more than 63 years of age. The family moved to Stevens Point, Wis., about 1850 and remained a little more than ten years, moving to St. Cloud, Minn., in the fall of 1861. A year later, in the fall of 1862, in the stirring days when the Indians were harassing the whites in the Northwest during the absence of so many of the fighting men in the civil war, Mr. Lavaque enlisted in Company D, First Minnesota, Mounted Rangers, and served in the campaigns against the Indians in the fall and winter of 1862 and the summer of 1863. He was mustered out in November 1863 at the expiration of his term and returned home. The following spring he re-enlisted, this time in Hatch's battalion of cavalry, and served on the frontier of Minnesota and Dakota, fighting the hostile Sioux. He was not mustered out until the summer of 1866, a year following the close of the civil war.

Released from army duty, Mr. Lavaque again went to St. Cloud and for several years was a traveling salesman for N. B. Harwood of St. Paul. About 1870 he came to Duluth and with his brother, John H. Lavaque, engaged in the painting business under the firm of Lavaque Bros. He continued in that until elected county auditor in 1890, assuming office in January, 1891, and serving six years, being three times elected.

He was also a partner with J. E. Cooley and J. P. Johnson, with the firm known as Cooley, Lavaque & Co., in the fishing business and sailed a great deal on Lake Superior, having a pilot's license and being recognized as a very careful and competent navigator. The firm owned the tug Siskiwit, which is indelibly associated with Duluth's early history, and he often sailed her. During one of Lake Superior's terrible storms he contracted a severe cold due to exposure, and it gave him a bronchial trouble which he was never able to shake off, and to which his death can be attributed. The firm finally sold the fishing business to the A. Booth company.

After his retirement from the county auditor's office Mr. Lavaque engaged in several lines of business and recently has been conducting a feed store on east Superior street.

He was a member of J. B. Culver post, G. A. R. and junior vice commander of the state G. A. R. He was a worshipful master of Palestine Masonic lodge at one time and was a charter member and first worshipful master of Ionic lodge. He was also a member of Keystone chapter No. 20 and a Scottish Rite Mason of the thirtieth degree. Mr. Lavaque was also a member of the soldiers home board of Minnesota for several years and he always took a deep interest in the management and welfare of the home for old veterans.

He was married about 1869, shortly before coming to Duluth, to Miss Janie Arsneau of St. Cloud and she survives him. They have one son, J. Charles Lavaque. He is in the steamboat business, working now near Harbor Beach, Mich. He arrived in Duluth Saturday morning and was with his father when the end came.

No man in Duluth numbered more warm and loyal friends among the pioneers of Duluth than George Lavaque. He was a man of very quiet temperament, but firm and inflexible of purpose, sympathetic and scrupulously honest in every dealing.

The funeral took place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Masonic Temple, the services being in charge of Ionic lodge, and the Grand Army also conducting a short service. The pall bearers were: J. E. Cooley, C. R. Haines, Austin Moody, Walter Van Brunt, S. C. McCormick and J. R. Randall. The interment was at Forest Hill cemetery.

WATER OF SALTON SEA

May Soon Submerge the Tracks of the Southern Pacific.

San Francisco, Oct. 1.—The Chronicle says: Although the work of the Southern Pacific is going rapidly forward to check the rising waters of the Salton sea, all effort so far has been unavailing, and the officials in charge of the work have given orders to construct a new track further from the track of the rising sea.

The water of the Salton sea is already lapping dangerously near the present roadbed of the Southern Pacific. It is calculated that if the present rate of inflow is maintained, the tracks of the Southern Pacific will be submerged in a few weeks, in fact before it has been checked by the new dam.

Coffee vs. Brains

A London physician commenting on the increase of "coffee drunkards" in Great Britain, says:

"Coffee is a cerebral (brain) stimulant ranking with alcohol." He condemns the after-dinner black coffee, (vaunted by the coffee defenders as "harmless"), saying it is responsible for many cases of insomnia.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

Y. M. C. A. Gets Distinguished Men for Sunday Meetings.

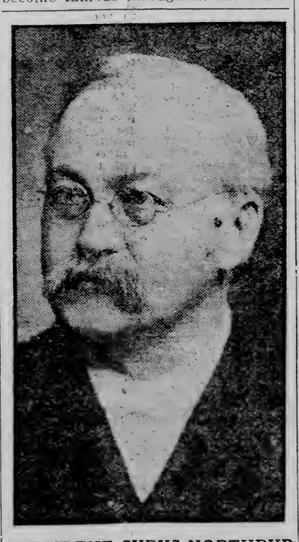

Cyrus Northrop, President of University of Minnesota, Coming.

Men of all classes and conditions in Duluth will have an opportunity during the fall and winter months to hear some of the most able and prominent platform speakers in the country, free of charge, through the efforts of the Young Men's Christian association of this city.

These men, many of whom have already been definitely secured and dated, will come to Duluth at regular intervals, probably three or four of them each month, and will speak at the Lyceum theater, which has been secured by the association for its Sunday afternoon meetings for men.

For the past twenty-four years the Y. M. C. A. has held a meeting for men every Sunday afternoon in the association lecture room, but these meetings have been upon a small scale only and no very prominent speakers have been secured. This year, however, a large and aggressive policy will be entered into by the association and the plan is to conduct from two to three big theater meetings each month on Sunday afternoons. Several prominent speakers have already been booked for a number of these meetings and others are being engaged as rapidly as possible.

One of the most prominent is Cyrus Northrop, president of the University of Minnesota, who has consented to come here to address the men of Duluth Sunday afternoon, Nov. 11, at the Lyceum theater. The association considers itself very fortunate in securing Mr. Northrop as he is a man who has become famous throughout the country as a foremost educator and lecturer.

PRESIDENT CYRUS NORTHRUP

The date, Sunday, Nov. 11, is the beginning of the week of prayer, which is set aside by the Young Men's Christian associations all over the world as a time for special thought and effort in behalf of the young men, and although the subject of Mr. Northrop's address has not yet been learned, it will probably be along the lines of the advancement of the young men.

On account of President Northrop's visit it has also been proposed to make the date a special day for the university alumni who are now residing in Duluth and Superior and as many of these as possible will be urged to be present to greet Mr. Northrup. There are probably over a hundred alumni at the Head of the Lakes who will greatly appreciate the opportunity to hear and greet the president of their alma mater.

Among the other prominent speakers who have been engaged is Miss Florence Ben O'Liel of Jerusalem, who will be in the city next Sunday and will speak at the First Methodist church. Miss Ben O'Liel is an English Christian Jewess, a daughter of the eminent missionary, Ben O'Liel. She has lived and studied in England, Africa, Italy and Palestine and her expositions on the Bible and the Holy Land are intensely interesting and rich throughout. In all her presentations Miss Ben O'Liel uses the costumes of the native Jews of Palestine. Her lecture will begin at 3:30 Sunday afternoon and the meeting will be for men only. The local association has set aside this date as Bible rally day to be devoted to a special study of the Bible in connection with Miss Ben O'Liel's lecture.

Besides the two lectures already mentioned, eight other prominent speakers have been already definately booked. They are as follows: G. A. Gearhart, of Buffalo, N. Y., who will speak some time in December; V. W. Helm, of Tokio, Japan, booked for Jan. 6; Sylvester A. Long, of Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 20; Dr. A. W. Hawks, of Maryland, Jan. 27; Lou Beauchamp, of Hamilton, Ohio, Feb. 17; Dr. Ora Samuel Gray, of Amherst, Mass., March 3; Col. George Bain of Lexington, Ky., March 17 and Dr. Charles Bayard Mitchell of Cleveland, Ohio, March 31.

The securing of these speakers has demanded a lot of work and persuasion as well as patience on the part of W. H. Lippold who has had charge of the religious department of the Duluth association. The association is somewhat handicapped this year by the fact that while it is building a new home it still has to occupy the old building which is not large enough to accomodate the members.

At the big Sunday meetings this year an excellent musical program consisting of orchestra music and vocal and instrumental solos will be given. A collection will be taken up at the meetings to help defray the expense of the lectures but no charge for admission will be made.

FREEMAN IS THE WINNER

Baseball Season Closes at Hibbing With Fast Game.

Hibbing, Minn., Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Freeman's team" showed its superiority over "Craemer's team" in an exciting ten-inning game played yesterday before about 800 enthusiastic fans from all parts of the range.

The two pitchers of the fast Hibbing club selected their men, filling up with "scrubs" and brought the season to a close in a fitting manner. The proceeds of the game went to the players, it being in the nature of a benefit for them.

Interest in the game ran high, and there was considerable betting. Craemer's men scored in the fourth and sixth, but Freeman's players came back with four runs in the seventh, and won out in the tenth.

The line-up:

Brady	c	Kauffman
Craemer	p	Freeman
Monohan	ss	Head
Vanch	1b	Kieffman
Colligan	2b	Parker
Cox	3b	Kerr
Congdon	lf	Kiser
Dwyer	cf	Lemieux
Beno	rf	Baker

Score by innings:

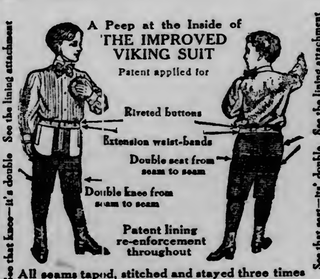

Freeman	0 0 0 0 0 0 4 0 0 2—6
Craemer	0 0 0 1 0 3 0 0 0 0—4

Attendance, 800.

THE POPE SAYS

The Attacks of the French Ministers Are Not Justified.

Rome, Oct. 1.—The statements made yesterday by the French premier, M. Sarrien, and Interior Minister Clemenceau, on the subject of the church and state separation law in France, have much impressed the Vatican. The pope said that the "attacks of the French ministers are not justified," as he had always been "inspired by love for France, and had never been affected by German or other foreign influences." He added that he drafted his last encyclical according to the rights of the church and the sentiments of the French clergy, as proved by their unanimous adhesion to it.

WEST DULUTH

TO FINISH RESERVOIR

Efforts Being Made to Complete It Before Winter Arrives.

One End And Side of Tank Are Nearly Done.

Work on the new West Duluth reservoir is being rushed as fast as possible in order that the big tank may be complete before cold weather. A crew of twenty-five men is kept busy on the excavating and lining work, Sunday work being started last week, and every means possible will be used to get the work completed before snow flies.

Below the frost line, where the layer of cement is thinner, two sides of the reservoir are now nearly complete, the final layer of concrete having been applied last week. Above the frost line an extra two feet of stone, laid in cement, has been applied over the side and end of the excavation and is ready for the completing coat of concrete, but the other end and side of the hole are as yet untouched, and considerably shaping is left to be done before the cement can be applied, while the bottom of the tank, 200 by 300 feet, is also left to be lined before the big job is complete.

Trouble in securing an adequate working force has been one of the chief obstacles in the way of completing the work on time, though a number of unforseen difficulties in the structure of the ground where the pit was dug also hindered. The connections from the reservoir to the West Duluth water system are already made, the pipe line having to be blasted out of solid trap rock a good deal of the distance to the nearest main, on Fifty-ninth avenue, so as soon as the work of lining is completed the water can be turned on.

The reservoir is of sufficient capacity to keep the western end of the city from a drought for some time should anything happen to the Lakeside apparatus.

Dyspeplets Quickly relieve Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Nausea, and all other discomforts of indigestion and dyspepsia. Sugar-coated tablets. 10c. or 25c. Druggists or by mail.

Catarrlets Give instant relief in Nasal Catarrh—allay inflammation, heal mucous membrane, sweeten breath. Best gargle sore throat. 50c. C. I. Hood Co., Lowell, Mass.

LOOKING FOR NEGRO.

Man Loitering About Oneota Is Sought By the Police.

The West Duluth police are strenuously engaged in the search for a negro, who has been loafing around the West end and Oneota, especially between Thirty-ninth and Forty-seventh avenue west. They have nearly secured the man a number of times, but he has always slipped through their clutches and escaped. The nominal charge against the man is vagrancy, but the police have a number of more serious charges against the man. He is reported to have threatened several of the residents of the district, especially school girls on their way to and from the Oneota school, and is in every respect a dangerous character.

He was first reported to the officers as begging for food around Oneota, and it is thought that he is living somewhere in the woods north of town. He is dressed in blue overalls, and wears a soft black hat.

Yesterday afternoon some one telephoned to the police station that he had been seen at the corner of Thirty-ninth avenue and Grand, and the police made a hurried run to that district, but could find no traces of their man. The residents of Oneota are considerably excited over the presence of such a character in their neighborhood, and are very anxious to have him taken.

BAZAAR CLOSES.

St. James Parish Will Realize Large Sum From Affair.

Saturday night brought to a close the St. James bazaar and the affair wound up in a blaze of glory. The $300 aquerel painting of Father D. W. Lynch, which he donated to the bazaar to be raffled off, was won by Kenneth MacDonald, who at once presented it to the former owner.

In the contest for the diamond ring, Miss May Connelly won by a good majority over her competitor, Miss Felix, with a total of 2,344 votes to Miss Felix's 1,433. As only those who had paid ten cents for each ballot were allowed to vote, the contest netted the bazaar $377.70.

In the contest for a gold watch, Miss Elizabeth Campbell won out by a goodly majority, with a total of $64.00, or 640 votes.

Mrs. Casey defeated Mrs. Regan in the chair contest with a total of 600 votes to Mrs. Regan's 340.

The booths all paid well, and in fact every feature of the bazaar was conspicuously successful, and it is thought that the total receipts after all expenses have been deducted, will be over $2,400.

MILLERS WIN.

West Duluth Team Now Head of Lakes Champions.

The Universal Millers are now the semi-professional baseball champions of the Head of the Lakes. Their decisive victory over the Superior Hooligans in an eleventh-hour finish yesterday afternoon, gives them the title beyond a question. Ernie Larson, the prize box artist, held the unfortunate Hooligans down to three hits in the entire nine innings, while the Millers got thirteen from the Hooligan mixer.

The really exciting part of the game, however, did not come until the last stage, when the Millers woke up to the fact that the score stood 7 to 4 against them, and began pounding the unlucky boy, who occupied the slab for the swamp jumpers. Two-baggers came in rapid succession. Tommy Robinson got two, McLaughlin one, and Salvoy one. Every member of the team swatted the ball out for a safe one, and when the smoke began to clear away, the Millers had run in ten scores. The Hooligans scored once in the ninth and the final score was 14 to 8.

The score by innings:

MAD DOG SCARE.

Animal Is Seen Acting Strangely Near St. Louis Mill.

West Duluth had a sensational mad dog scare Saturday. The dog was first noticed acting strangely in the neighborhood of the St. Louis mill, snapping at the horses in the stalls of the mill barn, and at the men about the stable. Saturday he sighted an inoffensive puppy and went after him with energy and would soon have finished him had not Tom Cashin seen him and interfered. The dog then turned his attention to the rescuer, and Tom, noticing that he was frothing at the mouth, took to his heels, the dog was almost on him when a bull dog who had been watching proceedings butted in and engaged the mad dog's attention. A battle royal was in progress when Superintendent Van Orden of the mill appeared with a revolver and soon ended the career of the mad dog.

The health department has the bulldog, which was quite severely bitten, tied up, and is also watching the pup to see if any symptos of rabies develop.

Ready For Governor.

A record breaking attendance is expected at the Great Eastern tonight at the Johnson-Pendergast meeting, and Chairman Getchell will introduce Mr. Pendergast at 8 o'clock sharp. Governor Johnson will not arrive until after the conclusion of his speech in Lincoln park, and he is expected in West Duluth about 8:45.

Mr. Getchell wishes it announced that ladies are especially invited and he expects a large number of the fair sex to be present.

West Duluth Briefs.

The West Duluth Athletic association will hold its first meeting of the year tonight at the gymnasium in St. James' hall.

Patrick Lee, who has been at the Duluth hospital for some time, after undergoing an operation for appendicitis, returned home Saturday.

John D. Meldahl of Sixty-third avenue is attending the convention of the International Wire, Metal and Wood Lathers, now in progress at Toronto, Canada.

The funeral of Joseph, the 9-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. White, who died yesterday after a prolonged illness, was held this morning from St. James' Catholic church. Interment was made in Calvary cemetery.

Jewelry repairing—Hurst, 301 Central.

Mrs. John Bujold of 31 South Sixtieth avenue is in a very dangerous condition as a result of a stroke of paralysis Thursday morning. She was removed to St. Luke's hospital Saturday, and while she is said to be improving, she is by no means out of danger, and her many friends are much concerned about her.

The West Duluth clothing merchants who lately signed an agreement not to open their establishments on Sunday, last week served notice that they would no longer remain closed, and yesterday they were all doing business again. The firms are: A. Fieldman, M. G. Levi, Kastriner & Neuman, D. Haws, George Harris, J. Leberman and I. Lieberman.

Miss Alice Bailey left last week for a lengthy visit with friends in the Twin Cities.

S. C. Murphy, who has been visiting relatives in West Duluth for the past few days, returned to his home in Grand Marais, Mich., yesterday.

Palmer & Palmer, Milliners, 515 East Fourth street, invite the ladies of Duluth to call and inspect their superb stock of new fall hats.

Eugene Bouchard and John Cashin went up the river yesterday morning in Mr. Bouchard's launch and secured four mallards before 8 o'clock. Mr. Bouchard says that duck hunting will be fine up the river in a week or so.

A son was born Sunday to Mr. and Mrs. Hans Jensen of 618 North Fifty-sixth avenue west.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Robert Loraine in "Man and Superman."
METROPOLITAN—Dreamland Burlesquers.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM — Tuesday and Wednesday, "The College Widow."
LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, "In the Bishop's Carriage."

IS THE BEST EVER.

Dreamland Burlesquers Surpass Any Attraction Metropolitan Has Had.

The highest class show ever given by a burlesque troupe at the Metropolitan is that furnished this week by the Dreamland Burlesquers. Not only is the entertainment away above the ordinary as to the scenery and foundation, but it is downright clever and gave great satisfaction to two record-breaking audiences yesterday.

As each pretty number is sung, one has a fear that perhaps the element in the audience which prefers comedy broad enough to penetrate a Lake Superior fog will not receive it kindly, but the success which was the Dreamlanders' yesterday shows that your burlesque audience like a good, clean musical comedy sort of entertainment at a burlesque house, now and then. In fact, most patrons of the theater would like to have organizations of the merit of the Dreamland company there every week.

Instead of two burlesques, the company offers a two act musical comedy called "Roseland," with book, lyrics and music by Dave Marion. It is evident that Mr. Marion modeled his numbers and, in fact, his whole piece on the George M. Cohan style, which has been so popular in the East for the past two seasons. But a successfull man like Cohan is a good one to look to for guidance and Mr. Marion need in no way feel ashamed of his "Roseland."

It has some little plot and is carried through by a very excellent company. The first act takes place on Times Square, New York, and the scenes of the second are laid in the mythical "Roseland." Both permit the introduction of some musical numbers, written especially for the production by Mr. Marion. The best songs are "Hannah from Louisiana," "Good Bye, Dear Old Broadway," "Roseland," "Rose, My Little Rose," and "Good Old Uncle Sam." Comedy is supplied in plenty by Harry Fox, William Laurence, and Dave Marion. Agnes Behler, one of the best ever in burlesque is the prima donna.

The play is musical all the way through and there is plenty of it all in the excellent acts of the olio. Thompson and Laurence have a funny sidewalk conversation, the Bijou Comedy Trio sings delightfully, and Harry Fox and the Meinotte Sisters have a dandy song and dance act. All three are clever dancers and Mr. Fox has little comedy methods all of his own that are screaming. Dave Marion and company in "East Side Life" present a novel and interesting turn. It is very funny but true to life at that.

"MAN AND SUPERMAN.

Tonight Robert Loraine will be seen at the Lyceum in "Man and Superman." When Robert Loraine entered upon his career of star in "Man and Superman" at the Hudson Theater in September of last year, the impression made upon the theatergoing public was of so emphatic a nature tha both Mr. Loraine and Mr. Shaw's comedy received more attention in the shape of public approval, as well as general discussion of the wisdom displayed by the author, than any stage production that has been brought forth for a great many years. Mr. Loraine as a star, reached the summit of distinction in a night, as it were.

THE COLLEGE WIDOW.

With Miss Louise Rutter in the title role, "The College Widow" returns to the Lyceum, tomorrw and Wednesday, to repeat its highly successful engagement of last year. Since last seen here, "The Widow" has played in nearly every city with identical results. Even the South, where football vogue is not as pronounced as elsewhere, took so kindly to the Ade comedy, that new records for receipts were made.

Besides Miss Rutter, the cast will include Estella Dale, Bessie Toner, Patty Allison, Frances Chase, Rosalind Allin, Elizabeth VanSell, Helen Torrey, Robert Kelly, J. Beresford Hollis, Otis Turner, Alan Brooks, Frank Wunderlee, Wilson Deal, George S. Trimble, George C. Odell, John Fenton, Allen Bennett, and Ernest Anderson.

SUIT TO DISSOLVE.

Alleged Combine of the Terminal Railroad at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Oct. 1.—The hearing of the government's suit to dissolve the alleged combine of the Terminal railroad was begun today before Special Commissioner R. H. Rombauer. The suit is based on the government's allegation that the Sherman anti-trust law is being violated by the alleged monopoly of carrier and railroad interests among St. Louis railroads. The government expects to complete its case by Oct. 20, as agreed between counsel, and the defense will then have ten days to introduce its evidence.

When the civedence has been taken by Commissioner Rombauer, it will be submitted to the United States circuit court of appeals. It is expected that it will reach that body in time for consideration at its December term. Sixty-one witnesses in behalf of the government have been subpoenaed. Former Attorney Governor General Crow of Missouri is senior counsel for the government.

DEATH AT FOLEY.

Foley, Minn., Oct. 1.—Cormack McNulty, an old and highly respected business man of this city, is dead. Mr. McNulty's death was due to a complication of diseases. He was 59 years of age and leaves a widow and four children.

LAST GAME OF SEASON.

Eveleth Ball Team Defeats Virginia In a Slow Game.

Eveleth, Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The last game of the local baseball season was played on the home grounds Sunday afternoon, Virginia being the opposing team. The game was a rather slow and uninteresting one, as Eveleth took a commanding lead in the second inning and kept it throughout the game, the final score being 14 to 4 in favor of Eveleth. The features of the game were a double play unassisted by Driscoll, second baseman for Virginia, and a one-handed catch by Meade, Eveleta's center fielder. Score by innings:

										R.	H.	E.
Virginia ..	0	2	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	4	4	7

EVELETH GIRLS

Will Play Ely High School Basket Ball Team Next Saturday.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The girls' basket ball team of the Eveleth high school will meet the girls' team from the Ely high school on the Eveleth grounds next Saturday, Oct. 6. The members of the Eveleth team are experienced players and, as they have been practicing hard for a month under the direction of Coach Harry Lyons, they should be able to play a fast game. The home girls suffered a stinging defeat at Ely last season and are determined to get even next Saturday. In consequence an earnest and exciting game may be expected. The Eveleth girls will play as follows: Centers, Estella Owens and Pauline Rabinowitz; guards, Nellie Donovan and Edith Knight; forwards, Georgena Powell and Cora Williams; substitutes, Mamie Brown and Edna Bonathan.

FREIGHT SHEDS FIRED

At Fort William and Strikers Hoot the Firemen.

Fort William, Ont., Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attempts have been made to burn the Canadian Pacific freight sheds, but the blazes were discovered early, and were put out without serious damage. While the firemen were at work, the strikers stood by and hooted at their efforts. Special officers have since been placed on all the property of the Canadian Pacific. Freight handlers on the Canadian Northern docks, 150 in number, have not yet gone out.

Fort William, Oct. 1.—The Port Arthur freight handlers on the Canadian Pacific docks, about 100 in number, have gone out on strike, with no settlement in sight. Boats awaiting to be unloaded are the Athabasca, Northern Light, Ford and Ionia.

OLD BOAT GOES DOWN.

Steamer City of Concord Sinks and Three Men Drowned.

Cleveland, Oct. 1.—The old wooden steamer City of Concord, having three barges in tow, went down Saturday night in the storm on Lake Erie off Huron, Ohio. Three of the crew of twelve were drowned. The other nine, after a terrible time in their yawl boat, landed at Cedar Point at 2 o'clock yesterday morning and walked into Huron seven hours later in an exhausted condition. The drowned:

FRANK PETERS, fireman, Muskegon, Mich.

JOHN WISER, watchman, Milwaukee.

ROY WAKEFIELD, deck hand, Sanilac, Mich.

The City of Concord was built thirty-eight years ago, but notwithstanding her age, her captain, Charles McEcheran of Buffalo put out of this harbor in the face of the high wind Saturday night with three barges in tow. For several hours she was able to proceed only a few miles from port. In spite of the increasing storm she made no effort to return to this harbor, but, late in the afternoon, steamed westward. That was the last seen of the vessel until the news of the sinking reached here yesterday. Nothing definite has been received as to the fate of the barges, and it is feared that some of them may have gone down. The nine survivors on the Concord were tossed about in their yawl boat for more than five hours before effecting a landing at Cedar Point.

UNKNOWN FOUNDERED.

Boat Goes Down in Lake Huron With Entire Crew.

Port Huron, Oct. 1.—An unknown steamer foundered with its entire crew in Lake Huron, off Sanilac, at 3 o'clock yesterday morning during the terrible northwest gale. The tragedy was witnessed by the crew of the passenger steamer City of Mackinac, which arrived at Harbor Beach. The Mackinac was some distance from the vessel when it was seen to plunge beneath the surface, and immediately started for the scene at full speed, but was too late to render any assistance. The Mackinac cruised for some time in the vicinity in the hope of saving some of the crew, but no trace of any of its members could be found in the darkness and storm, nor was there any clue as to the identity of the ill-fated craft.

Efforts today to discover some trace of the steamer reported to have sunk early yesterday morning in Lake Huron off Port Salinac have been fruitless. Inquiries at the towns and villages along the Lake Huron shore have brought no knowledge of a wreck and no floating wreckage nor boats have been reported yet. The Gilchrist steamer City of Rome is thought by some marine men to possibly have been the unfortunate steamer. She is said to be the only one of sixteen boats which left Port Huron Saturday that has not been accounted for since then.

The Crete Released.

Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 1.—The barge Crete, upbound, in tow of the steamer Roumania, stranded at the foot of the dyke through the breaking of its tow post. It was released by the tug General and brought here yesterday morning.

The Vulcan Stranded.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—In leaving last night, the steamer Vulcan stranded on Middle ground. Tugs are now trying to get the steamear afloat. The sheltered fleet all departed early today. The wind is now light from the southeast.

Fayette Brown Ashore.

Lorain, O., Oct. 1.—The Northwestern Transit company's steamer Fayette Brown which was beached here in the gale of Saturday night, is still fast in the sand west of the west breakwater and is apparently resting securely. No effort was made to rescue her from the predicament, a high sea running all day. Added to this was the fact that in her present position the steamer is drawing less water than would be necessary for any tug to reach her. The vessel carried a crew of eighteen men all of whom are safe and sound.

MAKE IRON AND STEEL

Report That Steel Corporation Will Install Furnaces Here.

Local Officials of the Company Doubt Its Authenticity.

A New York dispatch says: Immense blast furnaces for the reduction of ore will probably be installed in Duluth by the United States Steel corporation as the result of its having leased the vast Hill properties on the Mesaba range.

It has been demonstrated that the Steel company can distribute its finished products from Duluth much more cheaply than it can ship ore via the lakes and rail to Eastern smelters, and Minnesota has excellent prospects of obtaining a most important industry by virtue of this saving.

Another argument favorable to the rumor that smelters will be established in Duluth is the big market for rails and other finished products in the West and Northwest. These markets could be more speedily and less expensively served from Duluth. The big inroads which the Consolidated Lake Superior company is making in the Canadian market are another spur for a Minnesota plant.

The immensity of the Steel corporation's ore deal in Minnesota is not yet fully appreciated, but there is no doubt that the steel trust has been figuring on the advantages it will reap when the Mesaba range comes fully under its control for a long term, and extensive plans have been mapped out, which have not yet been communicated to the public. However, within the next week it is expected that the company will take the public into its confidence and give it some idea of the great works which are to be erected in Duluth.

A representative of The Herald saw several leading Duluth officials of the Steel corporation, and they denied all knowledge of the statements made above, and expressed doubt of the authenticity of the story. They admitted, however, that the establishment of blast furnaces in Duluth had been discussed, and that when the Steel corporation management decide that it would be more profitable to manufacture iron and steel here than in the East to supply the Western trade, undoubtedly Duluth will become an iron and steel manufacturing point on a large scale.

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

Judge L. G. Pendergast of Bemidji Talks of Political Chances.

He Finds That Sentiment Generally Favors State Development.

Judge L. G. Pendergast of Bemidji, the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, is in the city today, calling on old friends and getting in readiness for his speech in West Duluth this evening, at Great Eastern hall. The judge appears to be well satisfied with the outlook, so far as politics go, and is confident that he will be carried into office with Governor Johnson.

"Everything is looking fine for the governor and myself in Northern Minnesota," said the Bemidji man. "Some of the Northern counties are ordinarily pretty strongly Republican, but I am sure they can be depended upon to give us a reasonable percentage of votes. I can see no chance of a defeat for Governor Johnson, and naturally hope and expect that I will be elected with him.

"Governor Johnson is heartily in favor of the state development proposition, and has been all along. Anything that will advance the interests of Northern Minnesota, or any other part of the state, so far as that is concerned, he is willing to work for. He would be on the tour of the business men who are to look into the agricultural and drainage possibilities of the lands along the Minnesota & International tomorrow if it were not for the fact that he is so busy with his campaign.

"The people up our way are very much in favor of the drainage of state lands, as is every one else who is at all acquainted with the country and its possibilities. Governor Johnson has displayed an active interest in the matter, and is in a position to accomplish a great deal in the direction of state development. I am confident that the business men's tour of inspection tomorrow will result in a verdict favoring the drainage of state lands."

ADVERTISE THIS CITY

Mayor Cullum Says That Not Enough Is Being Done.

He Talks About the American League of Municipalities.

"The convention of the League of American Municipalities at Chicago was the most successful affair that organization has ever had," said Mayor M. B. Cullum, who with President Emil Tessman of the city council and City Comptroller W. S. McCormick, returned Saturday from the meeting at Chicago.

"The membership of the league has increased about one-third over that of the preceding year. About 200 cities were represented at the convention by about 800 delegates, but there were several times as many cities belonging to the league as had representation at the annual meeting this year.

"We made no attempt to get the 1907 convention of the league in Duluth, because it was well understood that it was to go to Norfolk next year. We made a strong representation of Duluth's claims, however, and with the proper effort and inducement there is no reason why the 1908 meeting should not come here.

"I could not help feeling much impressed at the big gathering that Duluth is not being properly advertised. I'll have to admit that there are a great many other cities that have done far more in the way of advertising themselves than has Duluth. It strikes me, however, that this fact should only spur on every citizen and civic or commercial organization for even greater effort along this line than we have been making. The position that this city occupies, her wealth, her class of citizens, and the opportunities that she offers in the field of investment and industrial enterprise are not yet as fully advertised as they should be.

"I found, on talking with the representatives from other cities that Duluth is much better taken care of in the way of public utilities than are many of the municipalities including those about the same size and some even larger than this city. In fact, it occurred to me that we stand pretty well toward the top in a comparison.

"The most interesting and generally discussed question was undoubtedly that of municipal ownership. The league, as an organization, declined to go on record in the matter but a very large majority of the individual members of the league favored municipal ownership of public utilities, each within certain limitations as to what utilities the municipality should own.

"The matter of taxation also received considerable attention in the discussions.

"We were treated in an excellent manner in Chicago and the weather was fine."

FALL OPENING AT FREIMUTH'S

Beautiful Display of Cloaks and Hats at Big Store.

After a part of Sunday spent in admiring the new and festive garb of nature, no woman can find greater enjoyment than in spending all day Monday in admiring and choosing something new for herself, and that is what a good part of Duluth's womankind did today at Freimuth's store, where the first of a three-days' fall opening was held. New and fine things are shown in every department, but, of course, it is the hats that almost everybody is interested in, and after them the gowns and costumes and skirts and waists and gloves and handkerchiefs and furs which are displayed in lavish prodigality at this store.

The hats are especially tempting, from the creation of exquisite blendings in French blues of soft velvet and droopy plumes, to crisper styles of Rob Roy toques, a pert invention, which is properly worn when what ought to be the front is placed directly above the right eyebrow. The Pompadour is another model which turns up at the side front, and looks terribly swell, if one is young and beautiful, with soft, fluffy, curly hair, and large, properly set, eyes of a becoming shade. The hats in black are also becoming and beautiful, and the street hats, and the Sunday hats, and the theater hats, and the party hats, are all beautiful and waiting to be seen.

In dresses which are so beautiful they are called costumes, many models in colors of delicate beauty and individual fashioning are shown, trimmed elaborately with lace and applique, in contrasting or blending shades. The opening will continue tomorrow and Wednesday, and these days ought not to be planned by any woman without including a visit to this store.

Have Your Bumps Read

At the request of a large number of ladies who could not get a reading when the machine was here before, a ladies' parlor will be opened at room 203 Axa block, 221 West Superior street, over "Victor Huot," where readings will be given to ladies and children on the Lavery Phrenometer, the machine which reads your head. This machine, which is manufactured in Duluth, has created wonder and astonishment whereever it has been shown and is absolutely correct. It reads your head by actual measurement, prints and delivers the reading and tells you in thirty seconds what it takes some people a lifetime to find out. Bring your children; have their heads read. It will tell what they are best adapted for.

Parlor will be opened Friday, Sept. 28. Price, 25 cents.

GREAT CROWD GATHERED

At Northfield to Hear and See Governor Johnson.

Northfield, Minn., Oct. 1.—With Govenor John A. Johnson and A. L. Cole, the Democratic and Republican candidates for the governorship in attendance, Northfield Saturday celebrated the climax of its three days' harvest festival. It was a fitting finale for the most successful carnival in the city's history. Hundreds of farmers came in.

Mr. Cole arrived in the morning. He was taken in town by the Republican committee and introduced him to the prominent residents of the city and to the visitors. His address was given from a platform erected on the large square in the center of town.

Mr. Cole made an excellent impression from the start and was heartily applauded. He spoke chiefly upon state development.

Govenor Johnson arrived in the city about 3 p. m. The large square was literally packed with people who had stood during the afternoon to hear and see him. When he came through the crowd to the platform he was cheered. The governor did not touch upon politics in his address.

You know what you are eating when you use Hunt's Perfect Baking Powder. It conforms with the strictest pure food laws of the state.

GOES TO CINCINNATI.

New Priest is Created a Monsignor by the Pope.

Rome, Oct. 1.—Baron Paul Von Mathias, a private chamberlain of the pope, and who recently abandoned the world, becoming a priest, was received this morning in private audience by the pope, who created him a monsignor, and appointed him a parish priest at Cincinnati, saying:

"There you will have a vast field for your energies."

THREAT TO KILL

Whole Family at Racine Unless $20,000 is Paid Over.

Racine, Wis., Oct. 1.—Mrs. Robinson, wife of Richard T. Robinson, secretary of the J. I. Case Threshing company, has received a letter purporting to be from two men who either live in Milwaukee or Racine, demanding $20,000, and, unless the money is paid over, all of the Robinson family will be killed. After the letter was received, Mr. Robinson consulted his lawyers and an investigation was made. It is believed the two men are living in Milwaukee at the present time, and a warrant was issued in John Doe proceedings.

WON BY THE AMERICAN.

Yokohama, Oct. 1.—The ocean race against the new and heavily increased customs tariff, which went into effect at midnight, Sept. 30, was easily won by the American, from San Francisco, Sept. 14, for this port, and the Denbighshire, from Middlesbrough, Eng., July 14, but the Sequoia broke down at Singapore and is belated. The heaviest advances in duties are chiefly on wines, liquors, watches and metal manufactures.

SOCIETY WOMAN ROBBED.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Mrs. Ellen Nagle, a society woman of Canton, Ill., was robbed of $28,000 cash and diamonds at the Saratoga hotel today while she slept. A bell boy who disappeared after the report of the robbery is being sought by the police.

GUARDIAN SUES FOR BIG SUM

Mrs. Arseneau Demands $30,000 for Her Son's Broken Leg.

The Duluth Street Railway company is the defendant in a big suit for personal injuries, which was instituted by Mrs. Margaret Arseneau on behalf of her son, Bertford Arseneau, the trial of which was begun in district court this morning before Judge Cant. Mrs. Arseneau is suing for $30,000 for injuries which she claims her boy sustained by being kicked off a car operated by the company in this city.

The complain tstates that the boy, Bertford, is 10 years of age and that on the evening of Sept. 8, 1905, he boarded a car on West Third street near Fifty-ninth avenue while it was in motion. He climbed aboard at the front end of the car by hanging to the hand rails at the entrance and, after riding some distance, was given a vicious kick it is claimed by the motorman of the car who had ordered him off. The car was still in motion and the boy lost his balance when the motorman kicked him and fell in front of the car which passed over the right leg. As a result his leg had to be amputated and the boy is a cripple for life.

The railway company denies all of the allegations made in the complaint and denies that it is responsible for the boy's injury.

Attorney John Jenswold is in charge of the case for Mrs. Arseneau while Thomas S. Wood is defending the company.

RELATIVES OF DEAD WOMAN

Carry Dispute Over Her Personal Property Into Court.

The trial of Mrs. Cora Cumming's suit against Bernard J. Madden, administrator of the estate of Julia Madden, alias Irene Marvin, was begun before Judge Dibell and a jury in district court this morning. Mrs. Cummings is suing for the recovery of certain personal property which she claims was left her by her sister, Irene Marvin.

The property consists of a certain amount of household furniture and several articles of cut glassware valued at about $250. Mrs. Cummings maintains that the property was taken to her house with the understanding that she would keep it for her sister and that in case the latter should die it would be the property of Mrs. Cummings. Before the death of Irene Marvin, the property had been seized on a writ of attachment for the non-payment of a grocery bill by the Marvin woman. Mrs. Cummings now seeks to regain possession of the property which she claims is rightfully her own. Mr. Madden claims that the property was never actually given to Mrs. Cummings and that it should be cosidered as a part of the estate.

On the stand this morning, Mr. Madden stated that he had offered to pay Mrs. Cummings for the property at the time it had been attached but that she had refused this offer.

Mrs. Cummings was upon the stand for the greater part of the morning and stated that her sister had taken the property to her house because she wanted her, Mrs. Cummings, to retain it as her own. She denied that her sister had supported her or paid any of her bills since she had been living in Duluth. She stated that the furniture and cut glass was worth about $250.

OTHERS OCCUPIED LOT.

Defense In Trespass Case Shows B. J. Toben Was Not Only One.

The trial of the trespass case begun last Friday by George Bessar against Bernard J. Toben was continued this morning before Judge Ensign and a jury. Besser demands $600 as compensation for the use of a lot which he owns and which is located on East Superior street next to Toben's meat shop. He claims that Toben has used the lot exclusively during the last six years.

Mr. Toben was recalled and asked a few questions by the plaintiff's attorney and his testimony was followed by that of Luther Mendenhall, who stated what he should judge would be the value of the use of a lot of the kind owned by Mr. Besser. He thought $15 a month could have been secured for it in the year 1900.

Other testimony brought out during the morning session showed that Tobin was not the only one who used the lot as it was used by many people as a short cut to the alley. Others used it to store various articles of machinery upon.

REBATING CHARGED.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—The hearing of the Peavey Elevator company case was resumed before the interstate commerce commission. The case is one in which it is charged by the Chicago, Great Western, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroads that the Union Pacific railroad has been paying the Peavey Elevator company 1¼ cents per hundred weight for grain handled by it, the grain being owned by the elevator company. This, it is charged, constitutes a rebate in favor of the elevator company.

HIS WISE SUGGESTIONS.

In our scheme of government the governor of a state, like the president of the United States, must execute the laws as he finds them. He may not change them, but he may recommend changes to the legislature, which adopts such suggestions or not, as it sees fit.

The test of the capability of a governor, therefore, lies in the manner in which he executes the laws upon the statute books, and in the pertinency and sagacity of the suggestions he makes to the legislature looking to the enactment of new laws.

The public is familiar with the manner in which Governor Johnson has executed the laws of this state. It knows that he has looked to the people's interests at all times, and that he has firmly and fearlessly enforced the statutes. But the public may not be so familiar with the results of his suggestions to the last legislature, and the degree of credit to which he is entitled for some of the legislation enacted by that body.

He recommended the submission of an amendment to the constitution giving greater latitude to the legislature in regulating taxation, and as a result the legislature adopted an amendment which the people will vote upon in November.

He recommended the passage of a new inheritance tax law, and one was passed as a result of which the state is adding materially to its receipts of revenues.

He recommended that the attorney general be given an assistant to push timber trespass cases. The legislature conceded this, and the governor saw that the cases were pushed to a successful conclusion, as a result of which the state has $400,000 coming in.

He recommended an investigation of railroad freight rates, and the legislature made it, the result being many concessions by the railroads. The investigation has been taken up by the railroad and warehouse commission, and further reforms are hoped for from that body.

He recommended the adoption of an anti-pass law. The legislature did not adopt it, but it will at the next session.

He urged action on drainage, and the redemption of the state's contract with the federal government to drain swamp lands granted to the state by the nation, and the result was a law providing for a survey on which a comprehensive system of drainage is to be based. Candidate Cole is making his campaign in Northern Minnesota on this bill.

He urged that the fat fees of the insurance commissioner be turned over to the state instead of going into the commissioner's pocket, and it was done.

He recommended good roads legislation and an increased state tax for road purposes, and the result was a state highway commission and the submission to the voters of a constitutional amendment raising the state road tax.

He recommended the creation of a state immigration bureau to attract settlers to our idle lands, and the result was that the state auditor was given money to advertise state lands, and that Candidate Cole is making his campaign on "state development."

There were other recommendations that have been crystallized into law, but lack of space forbids their repetition here.

These are only a few of the many things that Governor Johnson has done.

A FLIMSY OBJECTION.

The Newark, N. J. Advertiser, which has recently been acquired by Senator Dryden of that state to push along his candidacy for re-election, puts out an ingenious argument against government ownership of railroads, and triumphantly pauses to await reply, with the air of having dealt a crushing blow.

It says that under government ownership the railroads would pay no taxes, and the various cities and states of the country would lose the $50,000,000 which the railroads of the country now pay in to the support of state and local governments.

If you take it as it stands and don't think it over, it sounds very much like a real argument, too. But it isn't. There are infinitely better arguments against government ownership than that. In fact it is no argument at all.

It is true that when the railroads are turned over to the public they will no longer pay taxes. Public property does not pay taxes. But to offset the loss in taxes there should be a gain in freight and passenger rate reductions that would compensate several times over, so that the people would be ahead on the deal instead of losing. The railroads pay taxes, such as they are—in no state are they anywhere near as high as other business enterprises pay—but the people pay them first through freight rates, and if the railroads did not have to pay any taxes, that much could come out of the rates paid by the people.

Also, the railroads would not have to pay any dividends on watered stock, and the people pay the dividends as well as the taxes.

So it isn't much of an argument after all, and a question so vast and momentous is not to be settled offhand by such flimsy criticism. There is much to be said on both sides of the question, and much will be said before anything is done. There is little probability that any serious attempt to bring about public ownership of the railroads will be made before public control proves to be a failure, if it does prove to be a failure. But the subject is up, and it will be discussed voluminously.

A much better argument than this is the fear that under government ownership the railroads and their operating forces would make a tremendous political machine, but even this is not alarming. The postoffice department employs thousands of voters, but it is not even a cog in any political machine. Most of the employes are under civil service rules, and there is no class in the country that takes a less aggressive part in politics than those whose positions are secured to them, immune from political attack, by the civil service system.

GETTING TOGETHER.

Twenty-nine states have given notice that they intend to be represented at the convention to be held in Des Moines, Iowa, in December, to prepare a plan for a concerted movement among the states to bring about popular election of United States senators.

There is little doubt that most of the states will be represented there, and those that are not will fall into line with the movement once it is fairly started.

It is unquesioned that of the two ways open to bring about popular election of senators the only one available is to have two-thirds of the states petition, through their legislatures, for a constitutional convention. The other method, direct action by congress, is not to be hoped for. The house has passed a resolution providing for a constitutional convention on numerous occasions, and that has been the end of it. The senate has ignored the proposal to place that body within the reach of the popular will, and very likely the house members knew that it would so act, or they would not have been so ready to make a good record with the people by voting for popular election of senators.

While selection of senatorial candidates at the primary elections takes the place of popular election in some states, and while one state, Oregon, practically has popular election now, the senate will not be the way it ought to be until every state in the union selects its representatives in the upper house by direct vote.

It is absurd to think that men like Platt, Depew, Aldrich and other senators who are there to represent the large interests could squirm into the senate through popular suffrages. They may buy and corrupt legislatures, but they can never manage to purchase the voters of an entire state.

The floor of a popular law-making body is no place for the representatives of special interests, whatever they may be. The men comprising such bodies should be men who will look to the common good, and who will not seek to serve selfish interests at the expense of the common welfare. The way to crowd out the lobbyists who hold public office is to cut out the intervention of the legislature, and to let the people themselves elect their representatives.

That this is coming nobody can doubt. That it is slow work has alrady been made very evident. But the idea of having a national convention to start a concerted movement for it will hurry matters very materially, and the country is indebted to the Iowa legislature, which made the suggestion and invited the states to send representatives to Des Moines in December.

POISON IN CANDY.

Every manufacturer and dealer who is put to any trouble or expense by the federal pure food law, which goes into effect the first of the year, has naturally cried out against it and protested that he was being abused.

But the most pitiful and ignoble plaint comes from the candy makers of the country, who are prohibited by this law from poisoning innocent children with the aniline dyes they use to produce brilliant and attractive colors in their candies.

They declare that a large quantity of these aniline dyes, which come from the deadly coal tar products, are used in the manufacture of candy, and that if the dyes are prohibited the candy business will be seriously affected. To this the officers charged with the enforcement of the law respond that there are plenty of animal and vgetable dyes that can be used, and that there is, therefore, no need of poisoning candy with aniline dyes. The candy manufacturers are not satisfied, however, but complain that mineral dyes are less expensive than the others, and that they cannot afford to buy expensive vegetable dyes.

Are you not proud of them? Mineral dyes are cheap, so it makes no difference that they are poisonous. A high British medical authority, according to Dr. Wiley of the department of agriculture, says that 30 per cent of the kidney and intestinal troubles of the people of Great Britain are caused by improper preservatives and dyes used in food, and Dr. Wiley says the same thing is true in this country. Aniline dyes are generally made from coal tar, a deadly poison. It makes much more brilliant colors than other dyes, but it is a crime to put it into anybody's stomach.

Children are naturally attracted more by brightly colored candy than they are by sweets that are dull in hue, yet the latter are infinitely better for them, and the pretty candies are likely to contain substances that will injure them seriously.

The candy makers will get little sympathy from the public in their discontent over the requirements of the pure food law. In this state, under the present efficient administration of the dairy and food department, mineral dyes have been strictly prohibited for a year or so, and the candy makers continue to do business, apparently at a profit, even though they are compelled to use the more expensive vegetable dyes. The same rule should apply all over the country, and it will after Jan. 1, when the federal pure food law becomes effective. No doubt it will be rigidly enforced, and it is proper that it should be. The fact that the candy dealers can get a few more pennies from the children by feeding them poison will not weigh very heavily with the officers whose duty it is to execute this law.

THE PASSING SHOW.

If this weather does not put life into you it is your fault, not the weather's.

St. Louis county extends a warm welcome to Governor Johnson, and it will show him in November that it means it.

The Twin City people that are looking over the north country are due to have their eyes opened to its growth and possibilities.

The coming of Governor Johnson actually opens the campaign in this corner of the state and there are but thirty-seven days more of it after today.

The Princeton Union notes that the independent papers of the state are fast lining up for Johnson. It is a mighty poor showing for the other fellow, Mr. Union, when the independent newspapers and the independent voters are lined up for a candidate.

An exchange labors to prove that prosperity is general over the world. It cannot be possible. The Dingley tariff is confined to this country, and we have, therefore, the only simon-pure prosperity in existence. If you don't believe it read the Republican campaign textbook.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"A logging company that must keep 1,000 men busy in the woods every day of the season except Sunday in order to get out the amount of logs figured on, generally has the names of about 4,000 men on its books before spring," said C. S. Clemens of Cass Lake, Minn., at the St. Louis. "Very few lumberjacks stick to one job all through the winter, and the various changes that are constantly taking place are what bring the totals up so high.

"A lumberjack is a particular sort of a person. Everything must be just so in a camp to suit his taste, and as the tastes of woodsmen differ about as much as the clothes they wear, it is no easy matter to satisfy them. If they do become satisfied they are just as apt as not to leave for that very reason. They want to kick at something, and I do not doubt they would offer objections if things were run in an entirely satisfactory manner, on the ground that they would then have nothing to kick about.

"Some of the foreigners working in the woods for the first season or two are all right. If they are given decent treatment they will remain until the end of the season. But the longer they associate with the American lumberjacks, the more they fall into their habits and customs, and after awhile they become just as bad as any of the others. There seems to be something about life in the woods that makes a man indepedent. You notice it in the trappers, settlers and timber cruisers. They get so used to doing about as they please that they want to do it all the time, even after they are back in civilization. This would hardly explain the attitude of the lumberjacks, however, for they always have a foreman over them. But for some reason or other this independence takes possession of them, and the majority would just as soon 'bunch' their jobs any time for any cause.

"Now that there is a labor shortage, this independence is more marked than ever. It has been this way for the last two or three seasons. The woodsmen know they can easily get work elsewhere if they lose a job in one camp, and therefore do not hesitate to quit on the slightest provocation. In the natural course of events they quit about twice a winter anyway, regardless of the conditions under which they work. This is at Christmas and once later in the winter. This twice is the average. A few do not think of quitting at all, and others quit every time they feel like going to town and getting drunk, which is quite often in many stances."

"I saw some great horse racing down in New Orleans last winter," said W. F. Barnard of Grand Forks, N. D., at the Lenox. "I went down see the country and stayed over to see the races. They were simply great. The strange thing about it all was the fact that I had never before taken the slightest interest in the sport. Once or twice up in this country I had attended events of the kind, but it was more work than pleasure.

"I went to the New Orleans track one day to oblige a friend. The crowd was something immense. The grandstand and all available seats were filled to their full capacity. People were standing around all sides. Everybody was intensely interested. One could feel it in the air. Even before the races started, I was surprised to find myself getting anxious and interested in the coming events. The fever seemed to be contagious. By the time the first horses had lined up for the start, I was almost tingling with excitement, and at the end of the first race I had forgotten everything in the world except the animals down on the track. The transformation was complete. From that time on I was a changed man so far as horses were concerned. I could not go too often to the track, and the inetrest grew on me, if anything, instead of falling off.

"And at every visit there was the same enthusiasm and excitement betrayed by the crowd. It had baseball excitement beaten to a frazzle. Nearly everybody was betting, and I took a hand in it myself to a limited extent. I was fortunate enough to come enough ahead of the game to pay my fare home."

THE WEATHER.

The ideal days of autumn appear to be here, days which no country can furnish in such superexcellence as Duluth can. The air is clear and clean and wholesome; the skies are clear except for fleeting clouds and a tinge of Indian summer smoke; the temperature is mild but bracing and invigorating. The weather man sees nothing worse than partly cloudy weather in the indications for tonight and tomorow. Yesterday's highest temperature was 60 deg. and last night's lowest was 46 deg.

A year ago yesterday the weather was fair, though a northeaster threatened, but a year ago today it was still fair, and no northeaster disturbed the calm of conditions.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Barometric pressures are low again over the Gulf of Mexico, causing a continuance of rainy weather since Saturday in the Ohio and lower Mississippi valleys, Atlantic and Gulf states. Disturbances also overlie Alberta and Southern California, while over the middle west, north of Manitoba and over New England States the barometer is relatively high. Temperatures continue chilly throughout most of the northwest. In north Pacific districts and the extreme southwest and southeastern states temperatures are rather warm this morning. Existing pressure conditions favor partly cloudy weather in this locality tonight and Tuesday."

PLEASANTLY POINTED.

Philadelphia Press: Kulcher—Summer reading, so called, is pernicious. The average woman's reading is not productive of any profit.

Marryat—Don't you believe that! When she reads the bargain ads it's productive of profit to the advertisers.

Chicago Tribune: Rooter—If they win this game, by George, it'll be eight straight!

The Inevitable Girl—Eight straight? Why, how absurd, Harry! Eight is the crookedest of all figures.

Philadelphia Ledger: "Stocks were all down a few points today," remarked the broker.

Cleveland Leader: "What are you taking for your cold?"

"Nothing."

"Nothing? But, my dear fellow—"

"Nothing, I say, not even advice. Fine day, isn't it?"

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Yes, his wife is considered peculiar."

"In what way?"

"Why, she invariably gets off a street car just as a man would."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The Playwright—Didn't I see you in your seat some time after the final curtain fell?

The First Nighter—Yes, the usher forgot to come around and wake me up.

Washington Star: "That is the most avaricious man I ever saw," remarked one business man.

"Yes," answered the other. "I sometimes suspect that his ambition to get to heaven is due to the fact that he had heard the streets are of gold. He thinks he may get a paving contract.'

Baltimore American: "I believe there are some ugly features about this display," said the malicious gossip at a swell entertainment.

"There are," answered the cheerful guest, "and if you will look in that mirror over there you will see them."

Chicago Tribune: "What's the use of carying on a mud-slinging campaign," queried Uncle Allen Sparks, "when it's ever so much easier to throw dust in the eyes of the voters?"

St. Louis Republican: "Professor," we say to the expert on political economy, "what would be, in your estimation, the perfect government?"

"The perfect government," he explains, "is something we can never attain. It would mean a land in which every citizen held a government job."

Children.

We know we must be civilized because of all the ways
Of killing off the children we've invented in these days.
We kill 'em off with factories to fill the owners' maws—
Protecting "infant" industries with brutal tariff laws.
We kill 'em off with patent foods before they're in their teens.
We kill 'em off in the schoolrooms, and in the Philippines.
We kill 'em off with autos, we kill 'em off with vice.
We kill 'em off with coddling when beatings don't suffice.
We kill 'em off with cigarettes. We make them deaf and dumb.
We vaccinate, inoculate and kill 'em off with rum.
Can savage nations do as much? Well, we should be surprised!
We rather guess they'll have to wait until they are civilized. —Life.

His Only Concern.

Harper's Weekly: A well known member of the New York bar, a man of most patronizing manner, one day met John G. Carlisle, to whom he observed loftily:

"I see, Carlisle, that the supreme court has overruled you in the case of Mullins vs. Jenkinson. But," he added, in his grand way, "you, Carlisle, need feel no concern about your reputation."

Carlisle chuckled, "Quite so," he agreed, "I'm only concerned for the reputation of the supreme court."

The verdant meadows and the cornfields hide;
Full many a baseball hero gathers in
Your nickle when you take a street car ride. —Cleveland Press.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1886.

The ball game yesterday between Duluth and Minneapolis resulted in a victory for Duluth, the score standing 9 to 8. The game decides the championship of the Northwestern league, and Duluth is now assured of getting the pennant.

Duluth will one day become famous as a cattle market. She is naturally the shipping point for the thousands of droves raised in the West, and men cannot fail much longer to take advantage of the opportunities offered in the way of cheap transportation.

St. Paul ice palace literature is already being distributed around the country.

Hubbard & Vincent's mill started up yesterday with thirty-five men.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Y. M. C. A., the following officers were elected: President, Z. D. Scott; vice president, J. F. Patten; general secretary, W. H. Holmes. The institution is in a flourishing condition and doing good work.

Mrs. D. J. Sinclair has gone to Chicago to visit friends and relatives.

C. J. Nye, Tower's bright young attorney, and brother of the humorist Bill, is in the city.

After Jay Anderson gets through with the baseball club, he is going to organize a toboggan association, and will build a slide from the top of the hill to the lake.

The Democrats think F. W. Paine will make a hard fight for county treasurer.

Since some of the Democrats have found that Anton Schultze is a Republican they are not so anxious to nominate him for the position of register of deeds.

J. L. MacDonald is the Democratic opponent of B. B. Herbert for congress from the Third district and is expected to make a strong run.

The Republican legislative convention will meet in Turner hall, this city, on Oct. 11.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Red Wing Republican: Any town can well afford to build good roads from the neighborhood of its patrons, into its business section. It is a paying proposition every time. Better roads bring the patrons closer to town and is an excellent method of combatting the mail order houses of the great cities who are competing with country merchants.

Sauk Center Herald: Anyhow J. Adam Bede did not make any Chautauqua addresses during August and September.

Cannon Falls Beacon: The Duluth News Tribune exhibits signs of extreme disgruntleism over the renomination of J. Adam Bede by the overpowering majority of nearly 5,000. It is evident that the N. T. did not have its ear to the ground, or else that an implacable prejudice is directing its course.

Redwood Reveille: The defeat of Buckman for congress in the Sixth district was one of the best things that happened to Minnesota. Jacobson and his voice helped lay Buckman out; and yet the Republican state central committee is reported as pleading with "Jake" not to buck "Buck." Comment is unnecessary.

Hibbing Tribune: Congressman Buckman has congratulated his successful rival, Mr. Lindbergh, but it is dollars to doughnuts that there will be trouble for one J. Jacobson when next he launches his gubernatorial boom.

Owatonna Journal-Chronicle: Lindbergh, who beat Buckman for the congressional nomination in the Sixth district, carried Douglas county, Senator Nelson's home, in spite of the fact that Nelson was supporting Buckman. The senior senator seems to have more influence in the state at large than in his own home.

Red Wing News: This is the time of the year when the traveling public has to stand aside sometimes and give the bumper crops the right of way.

Milaca Times: Advocating socialistic ideas is not a popular thing, but it is perhaps true that nine-tenths of the thinking population of this country are at heart favorable to many socialistic tenets.

Fairmont Sentinel: There is something extremely shallow on the part of the Republican cry to stand by Roosevelt and elect Republican congressmen, when it is recalled that at the recent session of congress the Democrats almost to a man stood by Roosevelt's reform measures, while his bitterest opponents were the men of his own party.

Red Wing Republican: Taft at last has found a lid that is hard to keep down.

Appleton Press: Mr. McCleary's majority was cut down to about 200. One of these days it will be about 10,000 less than that.

Stillwater Gazette: The fellow who returned $1.50 of $100 stolen, accompanied by a note stating that he was gnawed by remorse, didn't have muoh of a gnaw.

TWO VIEWS OF HEARST.

Arthur Brisbane in the New York Times: Hearst has made dishonest wealth disreputable throughout the nation. He has convinced the people that the rule of organized capital is not American government or honorable government. He has been the greatest creator of intelligent dissatisfaction, the basis of improvement, this country has seen.

Hearst has made innumerable fights in the interest of the people at his own expense, with great expenditure of money and of personal energy. Various trusts have been fought by him through the courts and up to the supreme court. He certainly has the honor of being hated more deeply by the public enemies of this country than any other man in it. A mere enumeration of the law suits that he has begun and prosecuted on behalf of the public welfare fills out a considerable pamphlet.

Mr. Hearst is already the greatest awakener and director of public opinion and of public anger against injustice that the country has seen in many years.

In the way of actual good, Hearst has accomplished much by his influence in increasing the distribution of money.

He has sided with workmen in just fights against corporation employers and has helped them to win. This means that additional money has been divided among the families of working people instead of being added to dividends on watered stocks.

Tens of millions a year are added to the incomes of wives and mothers in this country because of Hearst's activity in promoting the legitimate distribution of wealth.

New York Times (Dem.): It is fitting and, indeed, a manifest duty, in connection with the publication of Mr. Brisbane's eulogy, to set down calmly and dispassionately the simple facts respecting, Hearst, the force. They are substantially as follows: As a journalist, though keen, enterprising and resourceful, he is a burning disgrace to the craft; as a politician, though shrewd and at times even sagacious, he is no more scrupulous than the basest of those whom he has stigmatized as criminals; as a partisan, though earnest and efficient in appealing to the masses, he is a traitor; as an officeholder he is preeminent in a shameful neglect of his duties: as an agitator, his delight consists in reveling in the indictment of evil passions; as a dual personality, though possessed of many engaging qualities, he is utterly devoid of character, so unsteady in even his own recklessness, so faithfully disregardful of moral responsibility, so addicted to detestable practices in efforts to gratify his ambitions, so sinfully persistent in stirring the caldron of discontent, envy and hatred as to be a living and glaring reproach to American civilization.

Simple English.

Philadelphia Record: Prof. Thomas R. Lounsbury, the noted grammarian of Yale, discussing the question of simple English, said:

"There was a little boy who began to keep a diary. His first entry was: 'Got up this morning at 7 o'clock.' He showed the entry to his mother, and she, horror-stricken, said:

"'Have you never been to school? "Got up," indeed! Such an expression! Does the sun get up? No; it rises.'

"And she scratched out 'Got up at 7,' and wrote 'Rose at 7' in its place.

"That night the boy, before retiring, ended the entry for the day with the sentence:

"'Set at 9.'"

"OUR NEXT GOVERNOR."

Red Wing News: Every time Johnson addresses the people he drives a long spike in the cofin of Shevlin and the lumber ring, the backers of Cole.

Crookston Times (Rep.): Governor Johnson's opening speech of the campaign is confined almost exclusively to an accounting of his personal stewardship to the people of Minnesota, and a very clean looking balance sheet he makes it. It is a pretty good argument and it will make votes. Whether it can make votes enough to offset the votes which the hungry office-longing Republicans can gather is the question that will be determined in November.

Albert Lea Standard: Governor Johnson's opening speech is strong, statesmanlike and convincing. Every voter should read it if he would be well posted on state affairs and the manner in which they have been administered. It rings with truth and good faith and makes impressive the duty of every fair-minded citizen to reward this loyal and devoted public servant by electing him governor for another term, and thus insuring to the people two years more of rarely efficient and honest state government.

Princeton Union: Mr. Charles H. Warner has resigned the secretaryship of the Republican state committee. The reason—the real reason—for his resignation is not given in the daily papers. But, knowing Mr. Warner as we do, we unhesitatingly assert that he never would retire from the firing line when a battle was raging unless the provocation was exceedingly great. We are extremely sorry that Mr. Warner has felt called upon to resign, for he was the only active member of the committee who represented the loyal republicans of two years ago.

Redwood Reveille: If the Republican state central committee is so cock sure that Cole will be elected, why is it devoting all its energies to the head of the ticket and leaving the rest of the nominees to work out their own salvation?

Hibbing Tribune: The state campaign languishes to an extent that nobody makes puns with the name of the Republican candidate for governor any more. We confess to some uneasiness on this score. It is a bad sign.

Wabasha Herald: John A. Johnson is a Minnesota product. He was born in the state, educated in the state and has given to the state the best services of his life. He has made a good governor and a fearless executive and has enforced the laws. He is entitled to a second term and will get it if agricultural Minnesota does its duty.

Annadale Advocate (Rep.): Governor Johnson was renominated by the democratic convention held at Minneapolis. He has made a most excellent governor and despite the fact that he received many votes in revenge instead of admiration will make a strong run this time. Mr. Cole, the Republican nominee, is handicapped by a following who threw down Jacob Jacobson in the interest of corporations, when it became evident that they would defeat him at the polls. So we might call this a "handicap campaign" and we can only guess how it will wind up.

Indianapolis News: In his speech in the New York Democratic convention deprecating but accepting the nomination of Mr. Hearst, Bourke Cockran said he supported Heart because he could not help it. "If Hearst represented socialistic ideas," he said "many of those who opposed him represented corruption indescribable" and he added, "If I must choose between rottenness and riot, I must choose riot, for that can be cured, but rottenness never." With all Mr. Cockran's fondness for epigrammatism, here is something for people to think about. A partisan and a member of congress, he frankly admits that the ruling faction of his party in New York tends to riot, or anarchy, while another is so hopelessly corrupt as to compel him to side with riot rather than rottenness. Such an incident as this, not from a political opponent, but from a member of one of the great political parties, speaking of his own party's convention, is calculated to make honest men wonder where civic virtue really resides. For the honor of American politics and in behalf of popular government, it is to be hoped that the public description of this condition will be one of the things leading to its speedy cure.

Conjugal Arithmetic.

Gil Blas: "If you are going to Paris to see some fun, you'll require at the very least $15 a day."

"As much as that? It's pretty heavy, especially seeing that I'm taking my wife with me."

"Oh, you're taking your wife? In that case, about $3 a day will be ample.

ANDERSON GETS SMALL VERDICT

Jury Awards $2,900 as Damages in Personal Injury Suit.

The jury, in the trial of the suit of Nick Anderson for damages amounting to $30,800 against the Pitt Iron Mining company, determined that $2,900 was about the right compensation which he should receive for the injuries which he sustained while at work in the company's mine two years ago. The jury retired Friday noon, but did not decide upon a verdict until early Saturday morning. The verdict was read before Judge Dibell at the opening of court this morning.

Anderson was at work as a timberman in the mine at Elba location, when a body of ore descended upon him, and in falling he broke his leg and was otherwise injured. He claimed that the company was responsible for leaving the drift untimbered for too long a time. The testimony brought out during the trial showed that there was room for several sets of timbers in the drift before the timbermen were ordered to place them there.

The mining company maintained that Anderson was responsible for his injuries, as he knew of the risk he was taking when he went to work. He was also aware that the timbers should have been placed in the drift the Saturday night previous to the accident, but he had not done this.

Attorneys Hollister and Heino represented Anderson in the trial of the case, and the railroad company was defended by Attorneys Bailey and Mitchell.

POISONED BY PUDDING.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Oct. 1.—John Reisman and six members of his family, nearly died from eating bread pudding made by his mother-in-law. The woman was on a visit there, and while her daughter was away, she decided to do some culinary work. In making the pudding, she picked up some bread scraps which had been poisoned for rats. At dinner the pudding was joyously eaten, but later, every one became ill and a doctor found it a difficult task to save their lives.

THE ALBERTA OIL FIELDS

offer a different proposition from any ever placed before you for investment.

The promoters of this company, five of the leading men of Canada, developed these new oil fields with their own money for four years and never asked the public for one dollar, until they had demonstrated that there was plenty of oil, three wells finished and and ready to refine.

When you buy stock in the Alberta Oil Fields, you are buying an interest in six sections of Crown Granted Land, a townsite "Oil City," millions of feet of milling timber (a valuable asset), three up to date drilling rigs, hundreds of tanks full of oil and more ready to be pumped—a lot of machinery including two 35-H. P. engines and boilers, five cars collar casing, etc.

In fact, you are buying into a "business"—the best business on earth—

Oil and Its Product.

There are no better men in Canada than the men managing this property and you will get a square deal for your money.

To those who are skeptical and have been humbugged by fake concerns, I will make this offer, as we want you to investigate and be satisfied.

If after a trip to the oil fields you find that they are not better than represented, I will pay all expenses of the trip and $5.00 a day for your time. We need your money to help us refine our product and get in shape to supply the trade of Western Canada, and believe you have never been offered such a chance to make money. Will be pleased to give you all particulars if you will call.

RAILROADS

BIG TRAVEL EXPECTED

Hunters From Outside Will be Numerous This Fall.

Railroad Employes Dread Approach of Big Game Season.

Local railroad men are looking for an unusual heavy travel of big game hunters to Northern Minnesota this fall. It is believed that in some respects the season will be a record-breaker. Every year the patronage of this class of passengers is quite large, and generally an increase is shown, more outsiders being attracted in this direction as the value of the Minnesota forests as hunting regions becomes better known.

The territory where the best moose and deer hunting is to be found is more easily accessible just now than ever before, on account of the new railroads that have been built during the past year. The Minnesota & International, the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg, and a new line extending northward from Bemidji for fifty or sixty miles, have all been extended this summer, and in each instance the extension reaches into a country abounding in game. The fact that railroads have never before penetrated these regions makes the sportsmen all the more anxious to hunt there, for they feel they will be practically the first on the field.

The extension of the Lake Superior & Southeastern road from Ladysmith, Wis., to the Head of the Lakes, is also passing through a fine game and fish country for a part of its length. Deer are to be found all along the right-of-way, but they are understood to be particularly plentiful between sixty and eighty miles from Superior. Extensions of logging roads in Minnesota and Wisconsin offer new openings to good hunting grounds.

Northern Minnesota always has been a popular hunting ground, but many parts of the country, where the best hunting was to be had, have been so difficult of access, where the majority of city hunters could not spare the time to make the trip, and have, therefore, sought other hunting grounds. Two years ago, for example, it took a week to go from Duluth to Big Falls, the terminus of the Minnesota & International, a point that can now be reached in twelve hours.

The hunting season is not welcomed by employes of the railroads. It means a lot of work for them. The small game season isn't so bad, but as soon as it is allowable to shoot deer and moose the express cars are filled to overflowing with the carcasses of the dead animals, and the brakeman, agents about the depots, and men in the cars themselves, are kept busy handling them. A great many of the carcasses have to be transferred at junction points, making just that much more work. The movement of game through Duluth is very large, particularly from north shore points.

HILL TO BUILD TO FRISCO.

Has Secured Point on Bay Shore for Railroad Terminals.

San Francisco, Oct. 1.—The Call says: James J. Hill has stolen a march on E. H. Harriman and is getting ready to build into California. Not only has the Great Northern magnate completed a survey of a proposed new line from Boise City to San Francisco, but he has secured quietly a valuable point on the bay shore for railroad terminals and figuring on the cost of construction work with the avowed purpose of having San Francisco lay on his own railroad map inside of the next six years.

It became known yesterday that Hill, through representatives sent here several months before the earthquake, tied up the Bay Farm island property in Alemeda county, which will be filled in and extended for a ferry system across the bay.

Hill is coming to San Francisco by way of the Pitt river, which affords him the only means of entering this state and crossing the Sierra Nevadas on an easy grade. His surveys from Boise City carry his proposed new route into the southeasterly part of Oregon to Lakeview.

INSANE MAN USES KNIFE

Saginaw Man Becomes Demented and Tries to Kill Self.

With a big gash in his throat stretching from ear to ear and apparently suffering from a bad attack of insanity, a man who claimed his name was Alfred Frederickson was placed in a cell in the county jail this morning and will be examined by Judge Middlecoff of the probate court this afternoon.

Frederickson, who was brought down from Saginaw this morning, could give no good account of himself to the sheriff's officers, but it is thought that he became suddenly demented and attempted to commit suicide. The wound is a ghastly looking one, but the man will recover and will be in condition to be examined this afternoon.

GETS MORE CARRIERS

Six Men Are Added to Postoffice Force of Duluth.

Increase Will Facilitate Delivery of Mail Over Entire City.

A Washington dispatch Saturday evening stated that Postmaster General Cortelyou has authorizzed the appointment of six additional carriers for Duluth and fourteen for Minneapolis.

Postmaster Guy A. Eaton says that he has not yet been officially notified of the increased force of carriers, but has no reason to doubt the truth of the report. It is stated that the carriers' appointment will be effective from Oct. 15.

Following up former Postmaster E. L. Fisher's efforts to get the additional carriers, Postmaster Eaton has been energetically pushing the matter, and recently caused Postoffice Inspector Nolle of St. Paul to be ordered here to make an investigation of the needs of the local department. The inspector's report was in accord with the requests of Postmaster Eaton, and the force will have six new men working by the middle of the month.

The addition to the carrier force will mean a greatly improved delivery and collection service. Postmaster Eaton says:

"We are aiming to get the best possible service for the citizens of Duluth, particularly in the business section. Every business man wants his mail the first thing in the morning; in fact, he can do practically little until he gets it. We are aiming to get the service down to such a point that the business man will have the mail on his desk at 8 o'clock every morning. Formerly he could not get it until about 9:30 o'clock.

"Two of the new men will be put on the delivery of mail in the hill district and at the West end around Thirty-third avenue west, but the chief thing will be to get a better service in the districts already covered. With the additional force we will ge able to put one man on collections alone.

"One innovation that has taken place in the last three weeks is the placing of a man on night duty until 2 o'clock in the morning. To do this each day man is assigned the night work for one night out of every seven weeks. The night man works up the mail for the districts, so that when the day force comes on at 6:45 o'clock in the morning each carrier has his mail ready and all he has to do is to sort it according to his route before starting on the delivery. This means that the carriers can get started on deliveries at 8 o'clock. Formerly the carriers had to work over the mail and that occupied considerable time in the morning.

"I have requested the appointment of two additional men for night duty and when we have these the work will be continued all night and the carriers can get started on the deliveries of the mail the first thing in the morning.

"Because of the topography of the city, the routes in Duluth are hard ones. Not only are the hills hard to climb, but the city is spread out over a great deal of territory and it takes much time for the carriers to get out over their routes.

"It is only a question of about a year when the additional force of carriers will be inadequate and I shall make a request for ten or twelve more men.

"A carrier is limited to eight hours' work a day. This is a rule of the department that cannot be violated under penalty of dismissal from the service. Formerly they were given overtime, but this got to be such an expense that the department made the eight-hour rule. It can be readily seen when the work is very heavy that the service must necessarily be somewhat impaired if we have not enough carriers."

DOUBLE EVENT.

Fall Opening At Albenberg's Is Also the First Anniversary.

In a setting of autumn leaves, orchids and roses, the hats of the Albenberg company are shown in the east window and have attracted many passersby today. This department of the store has been doubled in size, and the display that is shown proved that it is well able to supply hats, and beautiful hats, for every possible occasion. In grays and blacks and the season's exclusive shades, the hats are shown in a variety of beauty and style.

The entire store is teeming with new fall merchandise which was purchased by Mr. Albenberg upon his recent trip to the East. These delightful things will be shown at the store to the many interested women of Duluth during the fall opening, which is also the first anniversary of this store.

IS UNLUCKY NUMBER.

Thirteen Drunks Were Taken In by the Police Sunday.

Thirteen was the unlucky number again this morning in the municipal court, that number of persons appearing to answer to the charge of drunkenness. The sentences ranged in severity, according to the number of appearances made by the offenders.

Edward T. Bisson pleaded guilty to the charge of keeping his saloon open on Sunday and was fined $32.

Joseph Wallace, who pleaded guilty to petit larceny, was given his choice of a $52 fine or a term of sixty days in the county jail.

William Harvey, who was taken in by the police last evening on a drunk and disorderly charge, paid a fine of $10.

GOVERNOR TOOLE

Of Montana Announces Candidacy for United States Senate.

Helena, Mont., Oct. 1.—Governor J. K. Toole today announced his candidacy for the United States senate to succeed W. A. Clark, whose term expires March 4 next.

Two years ago, Governor Toole, who was the nominee of the Democratic party, entered into an agreement with the Labor party that if elected governor he would serve a full four-year term. The State Labor convention at Butte on Wednesday released him from this pledge, the copper war having been settled.

In his announcement, Governor Toole says that he was a territorial delegate to congress and his last act was to secure the passage of a bill admitting Montana to statehood. He felt then that the senatorship was his just reward, but stepped aside to give older party leaders a chance.

COPPER IS STILL HIGH

Walker Says Supply is Not Sufficient for the Demand.

He Declares Prices of Shares Likely to Go Down.

"Lake is selling at 20 cents per pound and electrolytic at 19¾ cents, for delivery up to the end of this year. Sales are being made a quarter of a cent below these prices for deliveries in January and February. According to the best information that can be obtained there is not sufficient metal available to supply the present demand. Consumers are bidding against each other and it is not improbable that prices may go two or three cents higher temporarily.

"The copper famine, which has been predicted for several years past, is apparently at hand. It is a demonstrated fact that the consumption is exceeding production. Advancing prices are not curtailing the demand. The prospect is now favorable to a continuance of present market conditions for many months, and perhaps for two or three years to come."

Of the copper share market, Mr. Walker says:

"The coppers sold off this week in sympathy with the decline in the general securities market. Apparently the short supply of money was responsible for the liquidation. Bear traders were extremely numerous, and there is reason for the belief that there is a very large short account in such stocks as Amalgamated, Anaconda, North Butte and Greene. It is not improbable that prices may work lower during the remaining days of the month, but after October there should be a substantial recovery and a renewal of bullish activity.

"There is now every possible basis for the belief that the price of copper will average between 19 and 20 cnts per pound during th coming twelve months. As the average cost of production is not over 9 cents per pound, and as the mines of the United States will produce an aggregate of about 1,500,000,000 pounds during the year 1907, the net earnings of the copper industry for the period should approximate the astonishing sum of $110,000,000.

"The largest amount of money ever disbursed in the copper mines of the United States in one year was about $45,000,000, in 1905. This year dividends will approximate $55,000,000. The treasuries in the copper mining companies are now full to overflowing, and during 1907 the companies will feel called upon to disburse practically their entire net earnings. We have the prospects before us, therefore, that $2 will be paid in dividends next year where $1 has been paid this, and that a total of fully $100,000,000 will be disbursed to the holders of copper mining shares; an average from now on of more than $8,000,000 monthly.

"Such remarkable distributions of profit as are here indicated can hardly fail to result in a tremendous increase in the investment demand for copper mining securities, and this will undoubtedly be accompanied by rampant speculation. If monetary conditions will permit, the coming year will undoubtedly witness the biggest boom in copper mining stocks ever recorded. It would seem that ever the smallest producers will be able to pay dividends.

"As the market now stands it would seem that the stocks of the large producers are relatively the cheapest. Companies like Calumet & Hecla, Calumet & Arizona, North Butte and Utah Consolidated, which are carrying abnormal treasury reserves, must of necessity increase their dividends. Amalgamated, Anaconda, Butte Coalition, Copper Range, Old Dominion, Greene, Granby and the several other companies, having large and increasing outputs, may also be expected to distribute big profits during the comnig year. Among the lower priced stocks, Shannon, Michigan, East Butte, Balaklala, Utah-Apex, Davis-Daly, Helvetia, Butte Copper Exploration and Bingham Central appear the most attractive at the present time."

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Saturday afternoon the primary teachers of the city held a delightful reception at the home of Mrs. F. C. Berry of 12½ Chester terrace in honor of Miss Lucinda Washburn, who has been prominent in the primary grade of the Duluth schools for the past sixteen years. Miss Washburn has resigned this year, and left today for Ripon, Wis., where she will pass the winter. The affair Saturday was given by her associates to her many friends before here departure.

Mrs. Berry opened her home for the reception, and a special note of interest was added, as Mrs. Berry's father, D. B. Lyon, who is her guest at present, was the first superintendent under whom Miss Washburn taught in Wisconsin, some thirty years ago.

The hall and parlors were brilliant in decorations of mountain ash berries and leaves, and red candles. In the dining room, beautiful lavender and white asters were used, and white candles in pretty holders. The guests were received by Mrs. Berry, Miss Murdock and Miss Grace Ely, with the guest of honor, and assisting about the rooms were Miss Abbott, Miss Jessie Nichols, Miss Carter and Miss Hollinshed. At the punch bowl Miss Bessie Bunting and Miss Richards presided.

During the receiving hours Flaaten's orchestra, stationed in an upper hall, played, and more than 100 guests called. Miss Washburn has taught school for fifty years, and the affair Saturday was a slight recognition of her helpful and inspirational years in this city.

Luncheon.

Mrs. A. D. Thomson entertained at luncheon Saturday in honor of Miss Putnam of Saginaw, who is the guest of Miss Simonds. The guests were seated at a round table and the decorations were in pink and white, the centerpiece being an immense arrangement of asters: The guests were:

Mesdames—
G. A. Tomlinson, W. G. Crosby,
J. A. Stephenson, D. G. Cutler,
C. W. Andrews, B. F. Myers,
W. S. Bishop, H. T. Abbott,

Bridge and Dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. John Panton entertained Saturday evening at one of the most delightful functions of the week, at their home on East Second street in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Powell. Bridge was played at twelve tables and the favors were won by Mrs. A. B. Wolvin and Mrs. W. H. Salter and the men's prizes went to L. W. Powell and R. M. Sellwood. The hall was bright with decorations of autumn leaves. After the play the guests were shown to the ball room which was brightly decorated in red, white and blue, and dancing was enjoyed until 12 o'clock. Flaaten's orchestra played.

Maude Fealy.

While reading of Shakespeare's heroines of sixteen paltry years, who possessed all the fervor, and passion, and poise, and maternity of modern 40, the time and environment are taken into account, but there is of necessity much of interest in a 16 year old girl of today who can play Juliet with success before an American audience. This is what Maude Fealy has done and although her playing of Shakespeare's heroine was presented a few years ago, she has done much of value in her work since. She has been leading woman with Irving, and is now appearing in a modern comedy and is all in all one of the most interesting young women of the stage.

Business Meeting.

The first regular business meeting of the year of the Saturday club was held Saturday afternoon at the club room of the library. The plan of work for the year is complete and the regular weeks of study will be begun next Saturday afternoon. In place of Miss Evelyn Abbott, resigned, Mrs. Nichols was appointed as one of the leaders for the year of current events. The club members also voted $5 to be used in awarding prizes at the flower exhibit held by the children of the Emerson school.

Church Wedding.

The members of Circle 8 of St. Paul's Episcopal church will meet Wednesday afternoon of this week with Mrs. H. R. Spencer of 5935 Oneida street.

DULUTH and SUPERIOR FERRY FOR TEAMS

Makes round trips hourly from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m., from Garfield avenue to Tower bay slip.

A CHARMING COLLEGE WIDOW.

MISS LOUISE RUTTER.

When people saw Dorothy Tennant as the widow of the Presbyterian college it seemed impossible that another could assume the captivating role with equal winsome sweetness and charm to the satisfaction of patrons of the play, but all doubt is dispelled when one views but the pictured loveliness of Miss Louise Rutter who is the widow with the company which will appear in Duluth tomorrow and Wednesday. There are several companies playing the Ade comedy under the direction of Savage, who maintains a uniform degree of excellence. The company which will appear here has but recently played in New York as did the former company, and the people who are to enjoy the play for a second time and those who have that really exquisite pleasure to come, can not but be pleased with the girlish grace and beauty of the present widow.

What Retail Markets Offer

Parsnips, 30 cents a peck.

Navy beans, 4 cents a lb.

Wagner apples, 40 cents a peck.

Tomatoes in grape baskets, 40 cents a basket.

Concord grapes, 20 cents a basket.

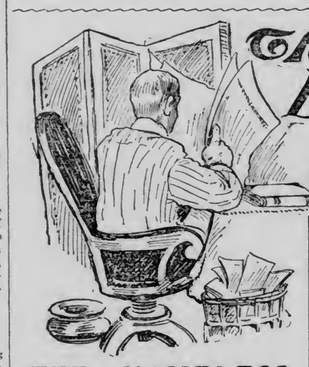

Sweet pickled pork, 17 cents a lb.

Smoked whitefish, 12 cents a lb.

Mloaters, 5 cents each.

The kind of apples which have been added to the selections already in the market are not pronounced "Vogner" although the folks who have by this time educated themselves to talk about the gentleman who wrote soundful music in that way, will undoubtedly have some trouble in calling plain American apples in the plain American way.

Pork and beans taste better in the fall and best in the winter, and those who have not yet begun to have weekly or semi-weekly pork and beans and brown bread, would best begin at once. Smoked fish, really lovely looking things, especially the bloaters which look almost like great overgrown gold fish, are in the market and if you cater to folks who like a toasted smoked fish, now is the time of year to easily satisfy their logings in that direction.

THE EVENING STORY.

THE NAMELESS LADY

By Mrs. B. M. Croker.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

All the foot passengers streamed from St. James station through the park. All but one, who was evidently waiting for some one—a most fortunate some one—for this passenger was young and amazingly pretty—a lady, too.

As she caught the glance of keen, interrogative eyes of an old gentleman standing near, she reddened and looked down, apparently overcome with shyness and embarrassment. What were her people about to allow this mere child to stand by the wayside—a gazing stock for all men?

Sir Richard was dining that night with friends in St. James' square at 7:30 sharp, as they made up a party for the theater. Having effected his usual leisurely and careful toilet, as it was a lovely May evening, he returned on foot across the park. He was not a little surprised to find the same girl he had noticed before standing in precisely the same spot—still gazing into the park with her great, wistful gray eyes.

Sir Richard had a kind heart as well as an attractive and paternal manner. He paused, and said, as he swept off his hat:

"I am afraid—you are—er—a—tired—standing. You have been here for some time. Can I help you in any way—or get a cab?"

The girl shook her head slightly, and then, to his dismay, burst into a storm of tears—yes—loud, half-hysterical sobs! There would certainly be a crowd round them in half a minute; already the policeman was looking in their direction.

"Here! come with me," he said, in an imperious tone. "Come over here," hastily leading the way to a sequestered seat—"and tell me all about it."

The girl followed him with childlike obedience, sat down beside him on the green bench, and continued to sob—and sob—and sob.

"Oh, this won't do at all," he exclaimed, impatiently. "Come now, let me hear all about it—your friend has never turned up. Have you been waiting long?"

"Since 6 o'clock; I came over from Ireland this morning."

No need to mention Ireland, for the brogue was sufficient guarantee of her nationality.

"Yes; and drove straight from Euston here?"

"Yes; I was so afraid I'd be late—at—at—"

"At the rendezvous, I see. And so she has disappointed you?"

"Oh, sir," and she blushed to her hair, "it is not a lady who was to have met me."

"Not?" with well affected surprise. "Then your father—or some relative?"

"No, indeed; but a stranger—that is," she stammered, and her voice fell to a whisper, "a stranger to them."

"No, not one—I don't know a soul except him."

"The stranger?"

"Yes; and I've— Oh, sir," and she dropped her hands in her lap with a sudden dramatic gesture, and looked up at him with a lovely but tear-stained face—"I know you are kind and good, and so I must tell you the truth. I have run away from home, and all I have in the world is a crooked sixpence. I gave my last half-crown to the cabman who drove me here."

"Go on," he urged. "Tell me all about it, my dear; you are quite safe."

"Oh!" and she covered her face with her hands. "I feel so deadly ashamed; please don't look at me, and I will try to tell you."

"All right; then I won't look—honor bright."

"We live out in the west of Ireland, and I came up to Dublin to have music lessons, and to stay with Grannie. She is old, and nearly blind, and has a companion to read to her, and housekeep—Miss Tooke. She was my chaperone—and went with me shopping, and to my music lessons—and the dentist's—and once or twice to concerts—and the theater—matinees, of course." Here she came to a dead stop.

"Yes; and at the matinees?" he went on, briskly.

"I—I—there was one actor. He had the best part. He was the hero—he was so handsome, and—and—and—a hero, indeed. I lost my head—I fell in love with him."

"Or with the imaginary hero?"

"Yes. Miss Tooke was just as crazy. We went to every matinee. Grandmamma thought it was to the dentist. He noticed me from the stage, and smiled at me. After that Miss Tooke wrote, and asked for his photograph, and then I got to know him—and oh, I felt so proud—and happy!"

"Yes?"

"He seemed everything I had dreamt or read of—and far more. I met him at a confectioner's. We had tea. We walked in St. Stephen's green. Of course, I dared not tell grandmamma, or let them know at home. They did not approve of theaters or actors. At last his engagement was up; he left, and it seemed as if my life had been ended; then he wrote to me several times, and such beautiful, beautiful letters. In the one I received on Friday he implored me to come over—to meet him here today. He could make me do anything—if he had told me to kill myself I'd have done it. I left Dublin this morning. Miss Tooke told grannie that I was in bed with toothache; she has managed everything splendidly for me, and when we are married she is to live with us always."

"May I ask this actor's name?"

"Must I tell you?"

"I think it would be better, my dear."

"Rupert Wolferston—he is acting in 'The King's Secret.' Oh, do you know him?" she exclaimed with tremulous eagerness.

"Yes; as one of the most attractive men in London—a spoiled darling. He is married to a good little humdrum wife—"

"What did you say?"—springing to her feet.

"Married to a dowdy little woman—a woman with money; he leads her a devil of a life, but she adores him."

"Married! No—impossible! It is not true!"

"Yes; everyone knows that."

There was a long, long silence.

"And I thought he loved me. Oh, my heart is broken! Oh, what shall I do?" And she put her handkerchief to her face and began to cry softly.

"No, no; your dear little heart is too young to know what the word 'broken' means. Tell me how old are you?"

"I am 17 in a month."

"And you are a wild, enthusiastic, impulsive Irish colleen. Now, shall I tell you what you will do?"

"Oh, I think I shall die of shame!" she moaned hysterically.

"For God's sake don't cry—the policeman will be coming over to ask if I'm ill-treating you. We will just take a hansom and drive straight to Euston, and you will return to Dublin by the night mail. Your toothache is, I presume, still very bad; but you can present yourself to your grandmother tomorrow morning, and tell her you are quite recovered."

"Yes; I only want to go home—and hide myself the rest of my life."

"You'll never give a thought to that scoundrel again. To think of his luring you over here—and you little more than a child—ignorant, penniless and friendless!"

"Yes; I've no money, but I have this," producing a tiny gold watch; "it will pay for my ticket."

"No, no; I'll lend you the fare, whatever is necessary, and give you my card, and you can return me the money at any time. After all, on second thought, we had better remain incognito; my address is No. 19 Saxe-Coburg mansions. You will be the nameless young lady, I the nameless stranger."

"Oh, how kind of you, you dear, good old gentleman—it is as if you had saved my life! I feel so frightened and strange, and in another world over here, and people stare so dreadfully, as if they knew how wicked I had been."

"Well, now, come along, let us be off," he said, rising briskly; "you can catch the 8:30, with lots of time to spare. You will have spent just three hours in town. I hope you will never have anything more to do with Miss Tooke; I declare she deserves to be skinned alive!"

As he talked they walked out of the park; in another moment had driven away together in a hansom behind a smart horse.

Just as they moved off another cab came rapidly toward them, and drew up at the gate. The fare sprang out—a good-looking, slim, well-groomed man; he caught a fleeting glimpse of the pale face and great, tragic eyes of the pretty Irish girl, of a man's shoulders and tall hat, and in another second they were out of sight—and Rupert Wolferstan was left standing by the gate, with a real frown on his flushed face and bad words on his clean-shaven lips.

* * * * * * *

Five years had elapsed, and Sir Richard's nephew, who had been quartered in the West of Ireland, had there met his fate—a certain Miss Kathleen O'Hara—a lovely, unsophisticated jewel of a girl, an only daughter, and considerable heiress.

According to Capt. Guy Tracy, his fiancee was so entrancingly lovely, so simple-minded, so witty and so graceful, that, naturally, all his relations were clamorous to see her, and he brought her in triumph to London, in order to present her to his mother, his sisters, and, above all, to his Uncle Richard.

Uncle Richard made the lady's acquaintance at a formal family dinner party. The instant their eyes met they recognized each other; he was the "nameless stranger" in the park, she was the nameless young lady he had seen off at Euston, and the cause of his leaving an empty chair at the Grevilles' dinner party, on a certain evening in May some years previously—a girl who had inclosed him a postoffice order for three pounds, with "From a grateful friend" written in a childish scrawl.

It was wonderful how she retained her self-possession; but her hand was icy cold as she placed it in his.

As the head of the family, Sir Richard conducted his future niece to dinner; the fingers on his arm were now trembling perceptibly.

"Did they ever find out?" he murmured in his most fatherly tone.

"Never," she whispered back.

"The toothache was so very bad?"

"Yes; and I—was—so—bad—"

"And now you have cut your wisdom teeth?"

"Oh, I hope so," she answered in a low voice.

"And no one knows except you and me?"

"And Miss Tooke—and him—and—Guy—and—mother."

"Oh, so you've told Guy! That was right, my dear—and we will keep this little trip to ourselves. They all believe that this is your first visit to London; they have never heard of your flying visit!"

"No; and I recall it as a sort of hideous nightmare—sometimes I almost persuade myself that it was only a bad dream! Oh, I'm so glad you are to be my uncle—scarcely a day has passed that I have not thought of you. What can I do to show you my—gratitude?"

"That question is easily answered. Come for a walk with me tomorrow morning—in St. James' park."

THE DRAINAGE PROPOSITION

Business Men Will Inspect Northern Minnesota Lands Tuesday.

The Duluth Commercial club committee, consisting of W. A. McGonagle, A. H. Comstock and Secretary H. V. Eva, appointed to become members of a party of Minnnesota business men on a tour of investigation of the drainage proposition in the northern part of the state, will leave this evening for Brainerd, where they will meet the Twin City contingent and members of the State Drainage league. A special train will convey the party to Ripple, the town located where the Minnesota & International road crosses the big falls of the Big Fork river.

In all there will be seventeen men on the trip, consisting of members of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth Commercial clubs, drainage league officials and a few men from Southern Minnesota. Stops will be made at various points along the line, and an effort will be made to determine the agricultural possibilities of the soil. Various products of the farms along the Minnesota & International will be displayed for the inspection of the visitors.

The necessity of drainage will also be investigated. Governor Johnson has taken an active interest in the drainage proposition, and would undoubtedly be a member of the party if the fact of his being engaged in an energetic campaign did not prevent. The Minnesota & International is especially interested in proving the worth of the land along its tracks, and will do all it can to assist the party in obtaining an accurate knowledge of the resources of the country.

The main party will leave the St. Paul union depot in a special sleeper at 6:30 o'clock this evening, arriving at Brainerd at 11 15 tonight. With the Duluth men they will leave on a special for Ripple at midnight, arriving at Ripple, the terminus of the line, at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning. Members of the party will be back home Wednesday.

WILL ATTEND CONFERENCE.

Methodist Ministers Leave to Attend the Annual Meeting.

Methodist ministers of this city and the towns on the range will leave this evening for Minneapolis to attend the annual state conference of the church. Bishop Wilson of Chattanooga, Tenn., will preside over the meeting and the ministers will be assigned to their charges for the coming year.

An excellent report will be brought to the conference from the congregations from the charges in this city and the surrounding country, which is known as the Duluth district, and many requests will be made by the parishioners to have the ministers reappointed to their old churches.

The Hennepin avenue church of Minneapolis will be the meeting place of the ministers, the following of whom will attend from this city and surrounding towns: Thomas Grice, Asbury church; John W. Powell, Endion church; Joseph W. Robinson, Graco church; Charles Fox Davis, Lester Park church; S. G. Briggs, Merrit Memorial church, all of Duluth; Rev. R. J. Taylor, Eveleth; Rev. Henry Logan, Virginia; Rev. Hubert Swinnerton, Hibbing; Rev. James Geer, Chisholm; Rev. C. H. Blake, Ely; Rev. H. G. Goodell, Cloquet; Rev. C. H. Hawn, Deer River; Rev. H. W. Knowles, Brainerd; Rev. C. W. Lawson, Aitkin; Rev. H. H. Parrish, Carlton.

MADE BED IN OLD BASEMENT

Two Little Urchins Found Sleeping Under Old Parlor Theater.

Tony Joseski and Frank Kmieack, aged 8 and 10 years respectively, were found sleeping in the basement of the old Parlor theater building at an early hour Sunday morning by Officer John Hunter. The policeman was coming down the hill when he happened to see one of the boys stick his head out of the aperture by which they made their way into the cellar. He investigated the matter and found the boys curled up on a heap of old clothes and rags.

At police headquarters it was learned that the Joseski boy resides at Ninth street and Second avenue East and the Kmieeak boy at 227 East Fourteenth street.

The youngsters told the police that they caught an old hen belonging to a neighbor Saturday evening and sold it to a Chinese restaurant keeper for fifteen cents. They claimed that they were too tired to walk home and went into the old basement. Tony Joseski claimed that other "kids" have slept in the basement except Saturday evenings when they must be home.

The boys' parents came after them Sunday morning and they were permitted to go home.

The police discredit the story of the Joseski boy that other urchins have been sleeping in the basement.

FIREMEN HAVE FIRST DRILL

Volunteer Company Tests Duluth Heights New Water System.

The volunteer fire department of Duluth Heights was out for practice for the first time Saturday evening and the new hose which is part of the company's equipment showed that it was fully capable of the enduring strain of the big stream which was forced through it from the new reservoir on the hill top. The evening was an ideal one for practice, there being plenty of light from the moon and stars and the atmosphere being cool and invigorating.

The general verdict after the boys had kept up the drilling for an hour was that the new waterworks which has just been installed, is adequate for the fiercest fire which might invade the district. Under high pressure the stream went twice as high as the houses on the hill and 100 feet was thought to be about the record altitude.

The volunteer company consists of thirty men, the foreman of the hose company being W. E. McEwen, while A. G. Burneau heads the ladder force.

Old Fashioned Jewelry Modish

Heirlooms Now in Demand by Women Who Follow Fashions.

To be quite smart and up-to-date a woman must now bedeck herself with her grandmother's brooch, bracelet or necklace, for old-fashioned jewelry is quite taking the place of articles of modern manufacture and the goldsmith's art is feeling the effect keenly. But fashion has set the pace, and women who are lucky enough to possess these charming old time relics are more than willing to follow suit.

While perhaps bracelets have experienced to a greater extent than any other article of jewelry, the fulness of this revival, any thing that savors of the antique is considered quite as smart and lends a touch of quaint charm to an otherwise commonplace costume.

The broader the bracelet the better, and one of the quaintest styles seen is that made like the old-fashioned "book" chains, each link fitted into the other and overlapping so that the method of joining them is not at once apparent, the bracelet resembling fish scales when laid flat. It is, however, pliable and easily adjusted in spite of its intricate workmanship. Occasionally a row of gold fringe will finish the end of the bracelet or a rim of filigree gold, while the decoration, if any, is invariably an oval gold ornament set with corals.

From many an antique collection of the family jewel box comes necklaces of one sort or another to grace the charms of the maiden of today and of all there is none which is more effective than one of rose gold which savors somewhat of Syrian manufacture. The original of the one shown in the illustration was formerly in the possession of a wealthy New York woman, whose fortunes have now long since been dissipated and her jewels, many of them famous, found their way into antique shops of the city to be bought up by those who were on the lookout for treasures of that sort.

No jewels were used in this necklace, the beauty of the necklace depending upon the design and workmanship. Coral strings are in the greatest favor and lucky is the woman who has had one handed down to her as an heirloom for to buy one will cost from $40 for a short neck string, up to $100 and over, for the longer strings are more ,according to the size and color of the beads.

To possess a necklace or a bracelet composed of watch cocks is the desire of smart women today. These watch cocks, which are exquisite specimens of the goldsmith's art, were years ago used in old time watches of a certain make. To obtain a sufficient number to form either a bracelet or necklace is quite a task, though it is being constantly done. They are being gradually collected by dealers and are in great demand. The work is like the most delicate etruscan goldsmithing, and when finished in rose gold the articles constructed are marvels of beauty.

While the old-fashioned brooches are not worn to such an extent as other articles of jewelry, they are made over into pendants and make really beautiful neck charms, which lend a pretty finish to a white lingerie waist or gown.

One of the styles of old-fashioned brooches most often seen is that set with a carbuncle or coral with gold or coral drops. Occasionally the earrings are worked into a pretty design in connection with the brooch. With cameos, where there are a number of them, the most fascinating dog collars may be made, the stones being simply set, and linked together with chains of gold, either plain or ornate, according to the fancy of the wearer and the size of her purse.

For a time silver filigree work was quite the rage and nearly every woman has now in her possession some pieces of this dainty work. Some charming necklaces and dog collars are being made from these odds and ends and even the handles of souvenir spoons have been brought into requisition for the purpose. When gold plated they are stunning and an addition to the gowning of any woman. There is, as a matter of fact, no end to the possibilities of these odd bits of old-fashioned jewelry and many of the jewelers and goldsmiths of the city are making a business of originating designs to utilize them.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS

DULUTH IN FIRST GAME

High School Football Players Easily Defeat Two Harbors.

Interference is Good and Fairly Snappy Play Shown.

The Duluth high school football team made good in its first game with the Two Harbors Y. M. C. A. Saturday in a way which was most satisfactory to the coach and to the most sanguine of its supporters. At the end of two fifteen-minute halves Duluth had made five touchdowns, three of which Capt. McDevitt converted into goals, and the Lake county bunch never came within a mile of making their ten yards in three cowns, to say nothing of scoring.

The new rules are very little in evidence, Duluth having no cause to use trick plays, or the somewhat risky forward pass. The rule which permits the kicking side to recover the ball after it has touched the ground came into play on one occasion, when Bradley tore down the field after one of Capt. McDevitt's well placed punts, and secured it with a clear field before him, scoring one of the touchdowns for Duluth.

Barring a number of fumbles, which are always to be looked for at this stage of the play, the Duluth team's plays worked like a charm, and Findlay's interference proved impregnable to the Two Harbor's defense. Cummings made the most sensational run of the day, eighty yards for a score, under perfect interference, and Capt. McDevitt was responsible for the other three touchdowns.

In the absence of Spencer at full, Cummings was brought back to half and McKinley shifted to the full back position, and while this may not be the final arrangement, it worked well enough yesterday, to insure a formidable back field at any rate.

Ryan and Caulkins, the two candidates for quarter, were both tried out in the position, and from all evidences this is going to be one of the prettiest fights for position in the team. Ryan has about fifteen pounds' advantage in weight, and runs the team with consummate ability, but Caulkins is a fast, heady little player, whos tackling is sure and swift, and his plays get started with fully as much snap as do Ryan's. The whole question is which man can run the team so as to make its work count the most efffctively.

FOUGHT TO A DRAW.

Joe Walcott and Billy Rhodes Have Twenty-Round Bout.

Kansas City, Oct. 1.—Joe Walcott of Boston and Billy Rhodes of this city, fought a twenty-round draw yesterday afternoon on a sand island in the Missouri river twelve miles below Kansas City. The fighters and spectators went to the island by steamer and the ring was pitched in the sand, 2,000 men standing around the ropes to see the contest. The island being uninhabited and unassigned to either of the neighboring counties, neither sheriff concerned himself about the fight. Walcott was the aggressor, Rhodes contenting himself with cleverly blocking the negro, who was unable to land on Rhodes at any time.

While Walcott did most of the work and had a shade the better of the contest, both men were in good condition at the end of the scheduled twenty rounds. The fight was announced to be for the world's welterweight championship, which Walcott claims.

ORGANIZE ANOTHER

New Soccer Football Team Comes Into the Field.

Players Who Won Renown in Scotland Are Members.

The Superior Pickets are not to be the only soccer football organization at the Head of the Lakes. Wednesday evening a little band of the faithful, at the instigation of John Smith of the Marshall-Wells Hardware company met at Mr. Smith's home at 428 Second avenue east and organized a competing team. About thirty were present and they completed an organization, electing their officers and arranging for practices at once.

John Kelley was chosen captain, Malcom McDonald secretary, George MacCauley treasurer, and John Smith, the organizer of the club, was unanimously elected president and manager.

The organization will be confined entirely to members of the Clan Stewart, and while nothing definite in this line has been decided upon, it is thought that if the clan's sanction can be obtained the new eleven will be known as the Clan Stewarts.

A couple of balls have been sent for, but as it was necessary to send to New York for them, a ball was borrowed from the Pickets to start practice and about thirty players have been out for work every night since, the bright moonlight of the last week having been especially favorable to evening work. This gives material for two good teams and some besides, and a total of thirty players to pick from for each game, so Mr. Smith is confident that they will have one of the fastest teams in the Northwest.

There are a large number of experienced soccer men, who were rated as professionals in Scotland who have been out the three nights that the team has practiced. George Todd was a goal keeper of no little renown in bonnie Scotland, and he will be a formidable rival even for the great Colquhoun of the Minneapolis Thistles. John Kelly the captain of the team was a noted left forward in the old country, and Alec Brown played right forward on some famous Scotch teams. Allen McCauley and James Baillie, are formidable candidates for center forward, and both are well known players, while candidates for back field positions, are Alec Scott, half back; Alec Nickelson, half back; Huot, full back; George Iddle, full back; Lachlin MacDonald, half back; and Earl Morrison, full back; all crack players of long experience.

Manager Smith is negotiating with the Minneapolis Thistles for a game or series of games, and he expects to take on the Pickets for a game at the Athletic Park in about two weeks. He is also endeavoring to get games with the Port Arthur and Fort William teams, and though he has received no answer from them as yet, he is confident that they can be brought here for a series of games before the close of the present season.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Back From Target Practice of the North Atlantic Fleet.

Oyster Bay, Oct. 1.—President Roosevelt returned to Oyster Bay on the Mayflower at 10:30 a. m. yesterday. He had been afloat forty-eight hours and had witnessed the target practice of the North Atlantic fleet, off Cape Cod.

It is understood that the Cuban situation influenced the president to hasten his return. Assistant Secretary Latta went at once to Sagamore Hill with lengthy cables from Havana. He remained with the president throughout the day, and last night announced that the president had no statement to make on the Cuban situation.

The president and family leave Sagamore Hill for Washington today, arriving at the White House at 4:15 p. m.

The work of the "summer capito" came to an end last night. The executive staff, with the office paraphernalia, will go to Washington with the president. Two cars also were loaded with the president's horses and such household effects as are needed in Washington.

The occasion of the president's participation in the target practice of the fleet was the only time he had been away from Sagamore Hill since his arrival here, July 1.

HIS DUTIES AT AN END

Spends Twenty Years in the Service of the City.

After twenty years faithful service in the Duluth police department. William McEwen retired yesterday, on the pension provided by the police association for men who have been in the service that length of time. Mr. McEwen is the second of the oldest men on the force to be thus retired.

A pleasing tribute to Mr. McEwen's popularity and the esteem and regard with which he is regarded by the members of the department, was shown at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when they went off duty. In the presence of the men with whom he had so long been associated with in the work of keeping peace and protecting life and property in Duluth, Mr. McEwen was presented with a handsome gold-headed cane bearing his name and the inscription, "Presented by the Duluth Policemen."

The presentation was made on the upper floor of the station where about fifty of the officers and patrolmen were gathered.

The presentation speech was made by Capt. F. E. Resche who paid a tribute to the retiring member in the following words:

"It is not idle curiosity that has brought your fellow officers together this afternoon, but we have come here on your last day of service on this force to attest our friendship for you and to express our appreciation of your many good qualities, and our regret that hereafter you will not be found in the position you have so long and so ably filled.

"To the average citizen you are known as a faithful officer who has spent long years in the service. To us, who have known yon as a co-laborer, you are one of God's noblemen, with whom it has been a pleasure to associate. You were ever ready with kind deeds and words to help out any one in distress—always the same—ever friendly and sociable.

"We shall miss you, but shall not forget you, and hope you will often visit the scenes of your long labors.

"Mr. McEwen, your brother officers desire to express their kind regard in some material way, and on their behalf I present to you this cane, hoping that it may be years before it becomes necessary for you to use it; and knowing that such will be the case, and desiring that you may have something that will be a constant reminder of your old friends in the service, they also present you this meerschaum pipe.

"May you live long to enjoy it is the wish of all."

Mr. McEwen was greatly affected by this tribute of the esteem and affection of his fellow officers and when he found his voice he expressed his appreciation in a feeling manner. He said it was with mingled feelings of pleasure and regret that he left the station house where for so many years he has been attending his duties. He thanked the men for the kindness with which they have always treated him and said that the memory of their treatment will remain with him during the later years of his life.

Besides the cane, gift of the entire force, Mr. McEwen was the recipient of a number of useful individual gifts from the men with whom he has been so long associated.

STUDENTS WILL STOP CHEATING

Honorary System Among the Pupils Will be Inaugurated.

Minneapolis, Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—A committee of students has been appointed in the engineering department to ascertain to what extent cheating in examinations is carried on in that department, and whether or not it will be possible to establish an honorary system among the students. The fact that there is considerable cheating in the engineering and academic departments was discovered by Dean Jones, in his opening lecture to his students. In the course of his lecture he inquired of an academic whether or not there was any cheating in the academic department. The student replied that he had never noticed any among academics, but that he had seen considerable of it among the engineers. This statement aroused the ire of an engineer in the class, and he immediately said that the engineers were souls of honor, but that he had never been in an academic examination in which there had been no cribbing.

This exchange of compliments aroused both classes of students, and though the matter was not allowed to wax any warmer at the time, it was noticed that several groups seemed excited after the meeting, and that discussion was rife.

A prominent member of the faculty had this to say upon the subject: "There is no doubt that there is a great deal of cheating in the university. At the present time I would not limit it to any department, or to any class of students, as it can be found in many places. To my mind it is one of the worst characteristics of the university, and is in itself an evidence of personal meanness and lack of true Minnesota spirit."

"I am very glad to hear that the honorary system has been proposed as a remedy for this evil. It is the best thing that can be done, and will mean a great deal to this university. I am somewhat familiar with the honorary system that now obtains at Princeton university, and believe it is one of the finest things about that institution. At Princeton the professors do not remain in the room during an examination, but place entire reliance upon the honesty and manliness of the students. Cribbing is practically a thing of the past at the Tiger college, and when it is discovered by the students, they take it into their own hands and deal summarily with the offenders. It has brought a new spirit into Princeton life, that is doing more to bring fine men to Princeton than any other thing that I know of. It will certainly be a great day for Minnesota when the honorary system is established."

Activity in the debating society work of the University of Minnesota will soon begin, now that the opening rush attending the first two weeks of school is over. The formal meetings of the various societies have taken place, and the rush of the Freshmen who are gifted in debate and oratory has begun and preliminaries for the Freshmen debating team will soon be held.

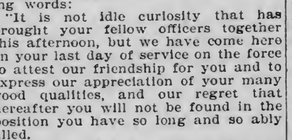

Among the debaters, Albert Evans and Walter Dacey, the Duluth boys, who have performed remarkably well, are prominently mentioned as the best speakers in the 'varsity. Especially Evans, who was the star of the Duluth Central high school debating team of '03-'04, and also winner of several oratorical prizes, while in the high school. At the university he is cutting a wide swath in literary work. He holds the highest literary honor in the 'varsity: president of the literary Union, a combination of all the societies connected with the university. The standard of work in the Literary Union is very high, and certainly reflects great honor upon the Duluth youth.

Walter Dacey, the other Duluth debater, was recently elected president of the Pattee Debating club, named in honor of Dean Pattee, of the law department, and which is comprised of all the classes of that department. The other Duluth students in the law department who are taking activs part in the Pattee club are, Russel McLean, Harold Crassweller, Arthur Michaud, Edward Furni, and Earl White.

PURE FOOD IN SAXONY

Washington, Oct. 1.—According to Consul Carl Bailey Hurst of Plauen, praiseworthy care has been devoted for some years to the inspection of food products in Saxony. He writes:

The whole system of supervision, organized into two state institutions, three municipal inspection laboratories and fourteen subordinate laboratories, is under the direct control of the government. The report of the inspection exercised in Saxony during the year 1904 has been recently prepared in the ministry of the interior and given to the public. A decree of Aug. 15, 1901, directs that for every thousand inhabitants at least thirty samples of food, beverages or utensils shall be inspected. During the year under consideration, within the five chief districts of the kingdom, 93,332 analyses were made, in addition to 22,148, which, as an exception, were divided among the three municipal laboratories, making a total of 115,480 analyses. Not all of the examinations were begun on the same basis, because many food products were brought voluntarily by storekeepers for their own enlightenment, while others were gathered in the open market. Particularly in the latter cases, where adulteration was discovered, the sellers in question were warned against further disposal of the wares, so that out of the 15,000 samples inspected about 5½ per cent were directly challenged on the initiative of the government chemists. In 1903, 10.8 per cent, and in 1902 11.6 per cent of the samples examined were declared injurious.

These statistics show that the food inspection system as practiced here has had a very satisfactory effect, and that each year the market is becoming gradually purged of deleterious food products. The action of the inspectors, at the instance of the government, has been considerate and advising rather than tending to wholesale indictments, with the result that the inspection system has not only gained the confidence of the consuming public, but apparently that of manufacturers and merchants. The laboratories are accordingly looked upon by all classes as an unqualified boon. Experience has also shown that judicial proceedings against pure-food offenders do not infrequently end in the acquittal of the defendants through some technicality. So that a conciliatory attitude has been here both more efficacious and easier, a simple warning emanating from the inspectors having a salutary effect in checking the sale of articles found unwholesome or injurious. Among the specific cases examined, the grounds for objection to meats were the use of a harmful preservative salt, and in several instances preserved fish and crabs had been treated with borax. The records show that a number of new preservatives offered to the butchers were brought by the latter to the laboratories for an opinion, and upon learning that the preparations contained injurious ingredients, of their own accord declined to use them.

Most frequently, and in most districts, sausage, used in tremendous quantities here, is adulterated with meal or bread. Occasionally the wares were found spoiled. From many hundred samples of sausage inspected only one was found to be artificially dyed, and one sample revealed the presence of an innovation in the way of a glutinous preparation to give the mass greater consistency. Many samples of milk were found diluted, and cheeses adulterated with potato flour or grated potatoes. The chief objection to the butters examined was an excess of water, reaching as high as 21 per cent. Occasionally the butter was over-salted. Oleomargarine was used in great quantity, but seldom was fault found in the many samples examined as to the substances in composition. The chief difficulty lay in contravention of the regulations governing packing and sale. In many instances, especially with small dealers, oleomargarine was sold as pure butter, and often in the printing of the labels the words, "Substitute for" were printed in small letters and the word "butter" sufficiently large to be read across the shop, so that people were presumably led to buy oleomargarine when they were of the opinion that they were getting a dairy product. No case was reported of harmful effects in the case of the substitute. Considerable quantities of table oil, sold as pure olive oil, were found upon analysis to contain a large admixture ad cheaper oils, and one variety that a wholesaler had put on the market as an olive oil blendwas found to contain entirely inferior substitutes, or at most only a small percentage of pure olive oil.

Trade in spices has become easier to handle, as there have been comparatively few cases of adulteration found. In some districts rigid inspection failed to reveal any instances of falsification, and in others, where formerly adulterated spices had almost entirely excluded the condemned brads from their stores. The grocers themselves have been very watchful, and have in a commendable manner refused to accept any but pure spices, and in consequence the spice millers offer a better class of goods. Frequent analysis disclosed only four cases where sugar has been found objectionable. Twice on account of a too high percentage of ultramarine, once on account of uncleanliness, and once on account of adulteration with meal. In this connection the local courts have held it unlawful to sell candies or cakes, generally bought by children, to which small metal pieces were attached. A former vigorous campaign against fruit syrups and bottled lemonades has been so far successful that objection was found during the year in only very few instances. Inspection has been carried to the extent that at country fairs lemonade has been objected to that was being sold in uncleaned herring tins or cooled by bad ice. Fruit jams have been found to contain glucose, grape skins and dyes; seldom, however, salicylic acid. One ingenious manufacturer discovered how to make pure plum jam with beets, but as his attention was called to its lack of harmony with the pure food laws the sale of this product was discontinued.

Cognac, rum and cordials were frequently found to have been made from essences, blended unlawfully or containing dyes or preservatives, among which salicylic acid was most found. Many analysis showed that the wine offered on the market was only slightly or not at all adulterated. Objection was found to on account of lack of clearness or on the ground of deterioration. There were only two cases in which objection was found to coffee, and these because too long storage had deprived the coffee of its aroma. Chicory correctly sold as a substitute for coffee was in one case found to be spoiled. All samples of tea were found good.

Trade in cocoas and chocolates has met with a marked improvement, particularly on account of the energetic action of the Union of German Chocolate Manufacturers. The commendable regulations governing this body prohibit, among other things, the use of scraps in the making of first-grade products, the use of the name of pure chocolate or cocoa where waste has been employed in its composition, and heavy fines for cases where courts may have decided that there has been a contravention of the mutual agreements of the union. These strict measures, together with the surveillance of the supervising chemists, have fully done away with gross adulterations in this line here. The new cases that came under observation were those where chocolate wares were mixed with artificially colored flour, or sugar was added in too great a degree, in one instance as high as 90 per cent. It is worth mentioning that one manufacturer brought into the market a so-called extra fine "Nutrition-Cocoa," composed of cocoa and potato flour, that was eventually objected to and brought into court but the manufacturer was acquitted.

All smoking and chewing tobaccos were found to be entirely free of objection. One sample of snuff discovered to contain powdered glass was challenged and the sale stopped.

The activity of the inspectors was as usual extended to all manner of utensils used in eating, drinking, and cooking, and an over percentage of lead was found in many of the articles examined. In earthenware pots a deleterious glaze was repeatedly found, while glazes containing antimony were frequently observed. Brass spigots on vinegar vessels were discovered covered with verdigris. In a number of examinations solder such as used on cooking vessels was found to be surcharged with lead. Injurious dyes, as chrome, lead and zinc were found in pastels, India ink, colored pencils, and billard chalks. In toys lead in non-permissible quantities was found. As a rule cosmetics analyzed were discovered to be unobjectionable. Only in one case was lead found in a hair-dyeing remedy and another time copper. Soft soaps were found to contain potato flour and other foreign substances, in spite of the fact that local soap makers have openly condemned soap adulteration.

Only in isolated cases was the action of a grocer signalized as subject to complaint. Most dealers are not only contented with the supervision, but apparently grateful for the information given. In nearly all instances the cooperation of the police, who often secured samples where the inspector was not able to get them, was of great assistance. On the whole the Saxon pure-food laws have been cordially sustained by authorities, dealers and people. The decreasing number of objections found in foods, beverages, and utensils clearly demonstrates the effectiveness of the official surveillance as exercised here, as well as the beneficial result attained in behalf of the public.

CONTEST FOR THE BALLOONS

Starts in Paris in Presence of Over Million People.

Paris, Oct. 1.—Sixteen balloons, averaging over 2,000 cubic metres capacity each and representing seven countries, sailed away from the Tuileries gardens, in the heart of Paris, yesterday afternoon in the first competition for the Gordon Bennett cup for international aeronauts.

The contest was primarily a long distance race. The date had been carefully selected when the prevailing winds were from the west in the hope of giving the aeronauts an opportunity to break the record of Count De La Vaulx, made in 1900. When his balloon landed in Korostycheff, Russia, having covered a distance of 1,185 miles in 35 hours and 40 minutes. But yesterday the wind was light, hardly more than eight miles, and from the east, thus making the shores of the Atlantic the limit of distance and robbing the occasion of its choice as a test of long distance aerial traveling. On this account the race was a keen disappointment to the aeronauts who had come from every corner of Europe. The rules of the contest, however, provide that in case of unfavorable atmospheric conditions, the judges could, at their option, make the test one of endurance to remain in the air.

Nevertheless, as a spectacle the event was a brilliant success. It is calculated that over a million people saw the balloons as they sailed away.

Each contestant is an experienced aerial pilot, but contrary to expectations, Santos Dumont, one of the two representatives of the Aero club of America, proved to be the only one to inaugurate a novelty. For the purpose of keeping afloat as long as possible he had equipped his car with a six horse power vertical propeller with the object of lifting and lowering his balloon without discharging any of its precious ballast. The enthusiastic cheers of the multitude which greeted the ascent of Santos Dumont showed that he was a favorite and quite as poular as his French rivals. Maj. Hersey, the companion of Walter Wellman in the Wellman-Chicago Record Herald north pole expedition, acted as assistant to Frank P. Lahm, lieutenant in the sixth United States cavalry, the other American competitor.

Each balloon carried a sealed recording barometer to work for 24 hours and a number of envelopes to be thrown out every two hours in order to mark the individual trail. Food for three days was also on board each car.

SAYS SHOOTING WAS ACCIDENTAL

Wallace Obern Explains How He Shot Walter Lasinsky.

Wallace Obern, a 12-year-old boy whom the police wanted for shooting Walter Lasinsky through the side, Saturday, was taken to police headquarters by his mother, yesterday afternoon.

Questioned by the police, the boy explained that the shooting was entirely accidental, and he was permitted to go home on his promise to be in attendance at the juvenile court next Saturday.

The Obern boy said that he and his brother had been hunting in the woods back of the hill, when they met the Lasinsky boy in the ravine, in the district known as "Goosetown," above Tenth street. He says he was carrying his rifle under his right arm, with the muzzle pointing away from him, and in the attempt to change arms the hammer caught in his coat sleeve and the weapon was discharged.

The Obern boys were very much frightened, and ran home. Mrs. Obern told the police she gave her boy the gun so he would stay about home and not be playing down town.

The Lasinsky boy, who is 8 years old, is the son of Anthony Lasinsky of 405 East Fourteenth street. His wound is not serious. It was made with a bullet from a 22-calibre cartridge.

SIX MORE DEATHS

Added to List of Drowned in Mississippi Sound Region.

New Orleans, Oct. 1.—Six more deaths were added to the list of drowned in the Mississippi Sound region yesterday. Capt. NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

RETURN OF PRESIDENT

To Washington Puts New Life Into the Nation's Capital.

"Dollar Campaign Fund" Has Not Been a Howling Success.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Oct. 1.—(Speiacl to The Herald.)—With the return of President Roosevelt to Washington this afternoon, the national capital will again be the real seat of government, in fact as well as in name. With President Roosevelt's retirement to Oyster Bay, immediately after the close of congress, Washington took on a dullness such as has not characterized it in many years. It was a dreary, deserted town, Heads of departments, cabinet officers followed the president to their summer homes, chiefs of bureaus went upon their annual vacations, the politicians were out in the country looking after their fences, and the people who could not get away from Washington either because of business or the lack of the wherewithal to carry them away were the only ones remaining here. The newspaper men were compelled to say and write what news they could of politics and other subjects in which the public show more or less interest. All this, however, will be changed with the president's return. Cabinet meetings will be resumed, politicians will be reporting at the executive offices and once more the air of Washington will be surcharged with busy activity, and that is what the president does for the nation's capital.

The "dollar" campaign fund inaugurated by both political parties looking to the popularization of politics, it is conceded by the chiefs in charge of the two national congressional committees, has not been a howling success. The people have utterly failed to recognize their great opportunity to pay the expenses of the campaign, and as a result the rival committees have gone out on a still hunt for money. At Democratic headquarters they admit that they have some money, but nothing like the money they had in former campaigns. Chairman Griggs, who is a successful beggar of campaign shekels, frankly admits that the "dollar" contributions are falling off and that his mail is getting considerably lighter than it was in the early beginning of the campaign. From this time on, day and night, the spellbinders of both parties will be going up and down the country urging the voters to get out and do their duty, otherwise the country will go to the demolition bowwows."

Vice Chairman Tawney of the Republican congresional committee, who was in town last week, said that his committee was feeling the general apathy so far as campaign contributions went, and that unless there was a decided increase in the amount of the contributions a number of extremely close districts would be lost to the Republicans because of the inability of the committee to get the vote out. Mr. Tawney, who is a practical politician, frankly admits that the Sixtieth congress will not contain nearly as many Republicans as the Fifty-ninth congress. Districts that are normally Democratic, but which in the Roosevelt tidal wave elected Republican congressmen, will, it is generally expected, return to their old faith. Mr. Tawney, however, is confident that the Republicans will have a comfortable working majority in the Sixtieth congress, a majority which can be easily handled by Speaker Cannon and which will be on hand when votes are needed. It is a fact that the majority of 112 in the present congress is extremely unwieldly. Speaker Cannon had to exert all the power of his office and even had to go so far as to threaten members with the defeat of their pet measures if they did not remain in Washington and assist by their vote in putting on the statute books the laws which will make the Fifty-ninth congress one of the most notable in our political history. While Mr. Tawney has not gone into the predicting business, believing that it is entirely too soon to give anything like a correct estimate of the Republican majority in the Sixtieth congress, he said he confidently looked for at least thirty Republican majority. When this was told to Chairman Griggs of the Democratic committee, he said that if the Republicans conceded a reduction of their present majority of 112 to thirty, he saw no earthly reason why the Republican majority should not be completely wiped out. Be that as it may, both committees are out gunning for money and it would not be at all surprising if government clerks were not reminded by some outside party that help in the way of cash contributions would be very acceptable in order to perpetuate the Republican party in power.

THE EXCHANGE OF MESSAGES

Between Wireless Telegraph Systems to be Considered by Conference.

Berlin, Oct. 1.—Delegates representing thirty-one governments will assemble here Oct. 3 by invitation of the German government with the object of reaching a common agreement for an exchange of messages between the users of various wireless telegraph systems and to determine the basis on which private wireless telegraph companies may operate with the consent of governments. The conference is a result of the Marconi company having refused to allow its stations to do business with persons using other than Marconi apparatus.

This controversy began soon after the Marconi company in 1901 set up stations for public telegraph purposes. The refusal of these stations to take messages sent out by the Slaby-Arco (German) apparatus, brought about the International wireless conference, also by invitation of Germany, in 1905. Eight governments took part, the United States, Germany, Great Britain, France, Italy, Spain, Russia and Austria-Hungary. The delegates of six governments agreed in the final protocol to a series of recommendations that looked toward the co-operation of all users of wireless telegraphs. The delegates of Great Britain and Italy, because their governments had contracts with the Marconi company, did not sign the recommendations.

The Marconi has since continued to set up stations and to refuse the messages of rival systems. The most important act in the controversy in the interval was that of the United States government in 1904 directing the Marconi to remove its apparatus from the lightship Nantucket.

Germany will propose the conference that an international bureau shall be created for the control of wireless telegraphing; that each wireless station must be connected with the ordinary telegraphs by special lines; that the conditions under which wireless stations shall work with companies that do not subscribe to the conclusions of the conference shall be laid down by the conference so that governments which do not adhere to the convention may do so later; and that when controversies arise over the interpretation or application of the convention they shall be submitted to arbitration.

S.S.S. CURES ECZEMA

The real cause for Eczema is the presence of humors and sour acids in the blood. These impurities get into the circulation because of imperfect action of those members of the system whose duty it is to collect and carry off the refuse and waste of the body. As this effete matter lies in the system it ferments and generates acrid humors which are absorbed into the blood, overcharging this vital fluid with acid. In its effort to keep the system healthy the blood throws off the humors through the pores and glands of the skin, causing this tormenting skin disease. The escape of acids and humors through the pores and glands irritates and burns the skin, producing pustules filled with a clear, sticky fluid, which dries in crusts and patches causing the most intense itching, and often pain. The trouble is in the blood, and S. S. S. is the remedy for Eczema, because it is a real blood purifier. It goes down into the circulation, removes all acids and humors and makes the blood rich, pure and healthy. When S. S. S. has done this the symptoms pass away, the blood is cooled and the disease cured permanently. Nothing acts so promptly or pleasantly in all skin diseases as S. S. S., and it is at the same time a fine tonic to the entire system. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

DISCUSS TAX LEVY

Council is Not Likely to Take Action for a Week.

Several City Departments Anxious to Get Increased Appropriations.

The next city tax levy is likely to be the matter of chief importance to be considered at the council meeting this evening. While the council will probably devote some time to the discussion of the various appropriations as fixed by the conference committee, it is believed that final action will not be taken before next Monday evening.

Whether the aldermen will see fit to make any changes in the appropriations fixed by the conference committee to cover the expenses of the various city departments the coming year is a matter of some doubt. It is known that some of the members of the council are quite anxious that certain of the departments get a larger appropriation, but so far no feasible way has presented itself, whereby this can be done, as all the departments claim they are not now allowed as much as they really need for their expenses this coming year.

The council has the authority, under the city charter to increase or decrease or adjust the various amounts appropriated so long as it does not increase the total amount of the levy. The council may decrease the total amount if it is so disposed, spreading the decrease over any or all the appropriations.

The total amount to be levied, according to the figures fixed by the conference committee is $715,000, of which amount $220,000 will be provided by the funds derived from saloon licenses, fines, etc., leaving a balance of $495,000 to be raised by direct taxation. This will give the city a tax rate of 14.9 mills.

The board of fire commissioners, it is understood, claims that its appropriation of $110,000 is wholly inadequate to meet the needs of the department the coming year. If the board cannot get an increase, some of the members may favor retrenchment along some line, but as to just what method will be attempted there is a difference of opinion. One of the commissioners is said to favor the closing up of one fire hall. Another is said to have suggested the cutting down of the force of firemen employed.

The provision of funds for the fire department is a serious problem and the fact that a number of the old men on the force have been resigning to accept other positions that pay them better salaries is understood to have caused much discussion among the aldermen, of late, regarding the advisability of increasing the salaries of the men in the department. Within the last ten days, three of the oldest men on the force have quit and it is stated that fully one-third the force stationed at headquarters is made up of men who have not been in the service more than six months.

On the other hand, some of the aldermen claim that the city is paying more in the aggregate to keep up its fire department than any other municipality of the same size and the wages now paid are claimed to be about as high as those paid firemen elsewhere, except, perhaps, in a few of the largest cities.

It is expected that Mayor Cullum, President Emil Tessman of the council, and City Comptroller W. S. McCormick will make a report about the annual convention of the League of American Municipalities that they have been attending in Chicago the past week. It is understood that the canvass of the Duluth delegation met with encouragement and that this city is in a fair way to get the 1908 convention of the league.

The council will also have quite a number of routine matters to dispose of, including the passing of the monthly payrolls.

PREVENTION OF ACCIDENTS

Expected to be Result of Use of the Telephone.

New York.—If experiments which are now being made with a new device, known as the telegraphone, succeed, another long step toward the prevention of railroad accidents will have been taken. The advantages which the telegraphone affords in train dispatching have attracted the serious attention of railroad officials, and it is expected that before long the new apparatus will be in use on several of the big railroad systems.

It has been found that the telegraphone makes a permanent record of all train dispatching orders sent by the telegraph ticker or over the telephone wire. The sound waves sent up by the ticker act upon the diaphragm of the transmitter attached to a thin steel wire, where they are electrically stored. As soon as a record of the orders has been made upon the wire, the train dispatcher places the receiver attached to the telegraphone to his ear and immediately hears the orders just as they were given.

Records may be repeated as often as desired, but as soon as there is no further need to keep them they may be wiped out by passing a strong magnet over the wire, thus making it ready for use again.

In this way the possibility of error in train dispatching orders will be greatly reduced. There is no need to trust to the memory, as the orders are there upon the wire and can be referred to at any time. The records can be transferred for future reference by connecting the receiver of the machine in daily use with the transmitter of a large storage telephone. Should any mistake occur the responsibility can immediately be located by reference to the records on the storage machine, an indicator showing on just what portion of the wire any particular record has been made. The record will give so perfect a reproduction of the dispatcher's voice, even after months have elapsed, that it can be at once recognized.

SENTENCES OF SAILORS

And Others Who Participated in the Mutiny at Cronstedt.

Cronstadt, Oct. 7.—The sentences of the courtmartial on the sailors and others charged with participation in the mutiny at Cronstadt last August have been delivered subject to confirmation. M. Onipko, one of the leaders of the peasant party in the outlawed parliament, is condemned to deportation and the loss of all his civil rights. Nineteen sailors are condemned to death by shooting, twelve to life servitude, and 120 to terms of servitude varying from four to twenty years, and 429 other sailors to service with the displinary battalions and various terms of civil imprisonment. All the condemned prisoners forfeit their military privileges. One hundred and twenty-nine sailors were acquitted.

SUITS TO BE BROUGHT

Against Railroads for Violations of the Safety Appliance Law.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Attorney General Moody has directed that suits be brought against a large number of railroad companies to recover penalties for violations of the safety appliance law through failure to keep their equipment in proper condition. The largest number of violations attributed to any road is fifty-one against the Delaware & Hudson company. The total number of violations is 181.

Included among the defendants and districts in which suits are brought are: Duluth, Missabe & Northern, district of Minnesota; Great Northern, distof Minnesota; Minneapolis & St. Louis, district of Minnesota; and Northern Pacific, district of North Dakota.

Testing the Brew.

The monks of old were the original brewers---and the history of brewing was for years the history of the cathedral. Beer was rarely found outside the convents and monasteries. In 1146, A. D., a brewing charter was granted the Abbey of Weihenstephan in Bavaria, which was then, as now, famous as the home of the finest hops.

Seven hundred and thirty-three years later, in 1877, August Fitger graduated at the Weihenstephan Brewers School and came back to America and brewed as the famous old-world brewers had taught him. Since that time history shows that Fitger's Beer has been the leader, others have followed. Every one who loves good beer deserves a case at home.

HORSES ARE EXPENSIVE

Just as they were last season, heavy work horses, or any other kind for that matter, are bringing good prices this fall.

Consignments of horses are being received daily by local concerns, for use in the woods during the coming winter. The woodsmen are beginning to look around for the animals which are such important aids in their annual operations in the tall and uncut.

And prices are good. It is a poor horse that does not bring at least $100 and the good ones sell for amounts considerably larger than that.

The animals which are purchased for heavy work in this part of the state must be sound of wind and limb and for such, good prices must be paid. The men who are raising horses and sending them to this north country are realizing good profits.

The demand for horses has been large during the last twelve months. Much improvement has been going on though out the northern part of this state and Wisconsin and there has been need of horses. Every year Duluth becomes of greater importance as a horse market and most of the big users of horses buy here.

Business in horse selling is getting brisk now and will continue so for the next three months.

Most of the horses being received by local dealers at present are heavy draft animals, admirably suited for work in the woods. Sums as high as $250 and $300 apiece are paid for some of the best of these animals but other good ones can be secured, of course, for less.

FARMING IN THE COPPER COUNTRY

Exhibits Which Show How the Industry is Progressing.

Hancock, Mich., Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Houghton county, with its numerous big mines, is the greatest producer of native copper on the globe, and naturally the mining industry directly and indirectly, supports the great bulk of the population of some 70,000 people. But that agriculture is making rapid strides in the land of the red metal is a development amply borne out by the display of farm products on exhibition at the second annual Copper Country fair. The showing in this department of the exposition has proved an agreeable surprise. In the vegetable line were ripe tomatoes, cucumbers twenty inches long, a 165-pound Hubbard squash, a thirty-seven-pound rutabaga, a twenty-seven-pound cabbage, beets, carrots, turnips, 175 different kinds of potatoes, onions, everything that one would expect to see in lower Michigan, hardly north of the straits, in fact. In the fruit department were 300 entries, among them apples of various varieties, grapes, peaches, raisins, muskmelons, citron and watermelons.

A queer exhibit noticed was a sunflower standing sixteen feet high. The growing of sunflowers might not appear to the uninitiated to be a very important matter, but as a matter of fact the sunflower furnishes a valuable crop, its seeds being excellent feed for poultry and also being used to produce an oil, while the stalks make a good fuel. The corn shown is excellent, and this is emphatically not a corn-growing country, but among the ears was one, of flint corn, that was a foot in length and possessed sixteen rows of grains.

To show that the Copper Country farmer is an experimenter, there was on display an entry of peanuts rivaling the Virginia article; the largest English flag leeks ever grown so far north, measuring four feet high; white Belgian carrots, cardoone, Italian cabbage and Italian kale, sugar beets, English vegetable marrow, celery that would challenge the Kalamazoo product, and Jerusalem artichokes. Of cereals, there was an abundance, and the fact that Houghton county's first grist mill has recently gone into commission with sufficient grain in sight to insure it a four or five months' continuous run gives evidence that something more than hay is being grown in the district.

It was not so long ago that hay and potatoes were about all the Copper Country farmer raised in the way of crops, but these days are past. There are hundreds of farms in the red metal region now, and each season sees thousands of acres put under cultivation. The time is coming when the Copper Country will not only raise all the farm products it requires for its own consumption, but will have a surplus to ship to outside markets.

UNIQUE SCHOOL HAS BEEN OPENED

At Columbus, Georgia, as Result of Child Labor Law.

Columbus, Ga., Oct. 1.—Embodying a unique effort to provide an industrial education for some of the tens of thousands of children who under the new anti-child labor legislation of Georgia must leave the factories on January 1, 1907, and go to school, the Columbus Secondary Industrial School opened its doors today.

Child labor legislation and the great demand for skilled labor in the South are responsible for the founding of the Secondary Industrial School here—in the heart of one of the most important centers of cotton manufacture in the South. Children under fourteen years of age will not, after January 1, 1907, be permitted to work in any factory in Georgia. There will be thousands of boys and girls between ten and fourteen years of age forced out of the factories and into the schools. The grammars schools of the State are already overcrowded, and many of the factory children will not find places. In large cotton mill centers this will work a great hardship, and the real purpose of the child labor bill, passed by the Georgia Legislature in June, will, in nearly all the large cities of the State, be defeated for a time at least, by the lack of public school facilities.

Realizing that child labor legislation was inevitable, the manufacturers of Columubus, led by G. Gunby Jordan, President of the Eagle and Phoenix Cotton Mills, founded the Secondary Industrial School, a distinct departure in the field of education. Its purposes are twofold, to offer the children of the three thousand cotton mill operatives of Columbus an education in trades in which they have already had practical training, and to furnish the mills and factories of this city and vicinity with skilled labor.

Located on a hill overlooking Columbus, in a settlement but a year old, which has grown from a wide expanse of vacant lots to a manufacturing city with three thousand inhabitants and two large factories, this school, an industrial experiment, is thoroughly at home. It is a new school, embodying a new idea, located in a new town, where there are people living who are new to the South.

When completed there will be eight buildings on the campus of the school, each devoted to one of Columbus's several industrial activities. The buildings will be grouped in a quadrangle, with the main building in the center. Devoted entirely to the study of cotton mill machinery, the textile building, as the department of the school expected to furnish the cotton mills of this city with all classes of labor, will receive the most attention from those back of the institution. Here the sons of the present cotton mill operatives will learn to be skilled weavers of both plain and colored goods of the finest qualities. Four years' training in this building will give the students sufficient training to command within a short time after they reenter the mills, wages as good as their fathers are now drawing. The breaker room, the card room, the spinning room and dye house will all be supplied with labor from this textile building, which will graduate seventy or eighty boys a year, as well as turning out a large number who have taken only a part of the course, but who cannot continue the work.

With the advent of the manufacture of the cotton goods in the South, there is a great demand in all mill cities for experienced dyers. The Secondary Industrial School will endeavor to supply the mills with all the labor of this class needed, the graduates of this and all other textile departments will be well drilled in the fundamental principles underlying the various processes in the manufacture of cotton goods.

Italian and German immigrants are being sought by the foundries of Georgia. The Secondary Industrial School will have a special department for teaching the children of any foreigners who may come to Columbus to settle, trades which they will be able to follow in the industrial plants of the city. For this work there will be a foundry, blacksmith and machine shop.

There is a big demand in Columbus for skilled cotton mill labor. The same conditions exist all over the State. Progress in the manufacture of fine cotton goods in the South has been retarded because of the inability of the mills to secure the necessary labor for the machines.

As it is located in one of the largest cotton manufacturing cities in the South, the school will perfect the textile course as the most necessary one. At the same time, that the idea embodied in it may be successfully worked out, students will be prepared in all industrial courses, that every factory in Columbus may be benefited. Domestic arts, including sewing, cooking and housekeeping, will be taught to girls. Shorthand and typewriting will be taught to both boys and girls.

Governor Joseph M. Terrell of Georgia, Governor Foster Peabody and Robert C. Ogden of New York, were present at the laying of the corner stone of the first building of the Secondary Industrial School. In an address made on that day, Governor Terrell remarked that a far-reaching step forward had been taken by Columbus. The entire group of buildings forming the school will be completed in about two years.

SHAFT THROUGH THE QUICK SAND

Virginia, Minn., Oct. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The attempt to sink shafts through quicksand and by the driving of interlocking steel piling at the Syracuse and Bangor mines east of Biwabik has been abandontd and Picklands, Mather & Co., the operators have let a contract to the Foundation company of New York to sink the shafts. It is understood that this concern uses compressed air in prosecuting its work and has had great success in excavating for and building foundations in quicksand. The local representative of the Foundation company is Fred W. Adgate, who will have charge of the work of sinking the shaft. He is confident that he will experience no particular difficulty in getting down to bedrock. The air compressor and other machinery is now being installed and it is expected to begin sinking in about thirty days. Most of the skilled labor employed on the work will be brought from New York.

Recently an attempt was made to shut out the water and sand from the Syracuse shaft by driving pipes to bed rock and then forcing cement down to the bottom. This also proved a failure. The company has already expended many thousands of dollars in an effort to reach the ore on these properties and nearly two years has been consumed in the attempts by different methods. It is hoped that the Foundation company will make a success of the undertaking as the properties contain large bodies of ore and as soon as they are developed will furnish employment to many hundreds of men.

The Rhodes Mining company has placed an order with the Fairbanks-Morse company to furnish the Hobart mine, near Sparta, and the Nassau mine, near Hibbing, with large pumps. The one for the Hobart mine is to be the largest on the range and will have a capacity of 3,000 gallons, capable of a 5 per cent overload and is designed for a lift of 400 feet. It is to be a triple expansion pump with cyclinders 18, 29 and 46 inches in diameter by 36-inch stroke and 16-inch water plunger. The pump for the Nassau will be a 1,600-gallon, compound condensing type with steam cyclinders 15 and 24 inches in diameter by 18-inch stroke and a 14-inch plunger. These pumps are the first of this size and type that Fairbanks, Morse & Co., have furnished on the range.

The Iron Range road will lay a spur track this fall to the property between Biwabik and McKinley, recently explored by the Tesora Mining company. The grade on the old Roberts mine spur will be utilized a part of the way.

Preparations are being made at the Hector mine east of Biwabik for a large output next year. A new shaft is now being sunk at the east end of the property. About 400 tons is being shipped daily at present. It is loaded by hand from the open pit. Shipments from the shaft put down last year were discontinued soon after being started because of the low grade of ore encountered. The new shaft, however, will tap a considerable body of good grade ore.

It is probable that this season will see the finish of the Holland mine at Biwabik operated by Swallow & Hopkins. But the new property recently explored by M. L. Fay nearby will more than fill the gap. The new property will be opened up this winter but Mr. Fay says the company is still undecided whether it will operate the mine or sell it.

The Biwabik Mining company has taken an option for a lease on Pine island in Vermilion lake, about five miles north of the mines of the Minnesota Iron company at Soudan. Pine island contains a slaty hematite formation that has a fine appearance of ore to the casual inspection, though how this may be borne out by underground developments no one has yet learned. The Biwabik company will find out, for drills are to be placed on the lands at once. This lease will call for a 25-cent royalty. The Kittos of Tower, who own the property, leased it about two years ago to Alfred Merritt of Duluth, who intend to explore the property, but did not do so. He considered the outlook very favorable.

Swallow & Hopkins, who operate the Holland mine at Biwabik, are about to undertake extensive explorations on the Vermilion range, in the neighborhood of Ely. They have secured options on the Anderson, Lucky Boy and Camp properties, the claim belonging to W. L. Hill of Biwabik and other lands in that vicinity, and intend to explore the whole tract in systematic manner. Explorations already made on some of the properties indicate that ore will be found.

PENSION ROLL DECREASED.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The net decrease in the pension roll of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30 last amounted to 12,470, the largest decrease ever known in the history of the country. These facts are brought out in the annual report of Commissioner of Pensions Warner, which has just been completed. In the report the commissioner expresses the opinion that there will be a still more marked decrease during the present year.

Irondequoit Port Wine.

There are many reasons which account for the sperior quality of Irondequoit Port Wine. It is made from the Oporto Grape, which was propagated in 1832. The shores of Irondequoit Bay and Canandaigua lake are particularly well adapted to the growing of this fruit. The vines are thrifty and receive careful attention in every way. The grapes are allowed to ripen thoroughly before harvesting, after which they are crushed and pressed. Then the juice is transferred to large fermenting vats. This is the beginning of Irondequoit Port Wine. For seven years it is allowed to mature and it is carefully handled under expert supervision.

These facts give this Port Wine what has popularly become known as "Irondequoit Body and Flavor." As a table tonic and for use in the sick room, it is the peer of all port wines. Physicians have freely recommended its use for seventy-four years, with an ever increasing degree of satisfaction. Quality Guaranteed to be the Highest—

WHEAT HAS GOOD BULGE

Closing Prices Are Higher In All the American Markets.

Flax is Active and Has Better Tone in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 1.—Light offerings, higher cables and a continuance of light receipts in the Northwest put the price of wheat up in the American markets today. All of them closed higher than Saturday, and New York advanced the most. The crop is moving very slowly and it has a decided bullish effect on the market. Liverpool closed ½d to ¾d higher, Berlin ¾c higher and Budapest ¾c lower.

The world's shipments of wheat were about as estimated. The amount of wheat on passage decreased about 1,000,000 bus.

The December option closed ⅞c higher in Duluth, ¾c in Chicago and St. Louis, ⅝-¾c in Minneapolis and Kansas City, and 1⅛c higher in New York. The October option closed ⅞c higher in Winnipeg. The May option closed ⅝c higher in Duluth, Chicago and Winnipeg, ⅞c in Minneapolis, 1⅛-1⅜ in New York, ⅝-¾c in St. Louis and ⅝c in Kansas City.

Corn was unchanged in Chicago for the December option. It closed ½d lower to ½d higher in Liverpool. December oats closed ⅛c higher in Chicago.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the week previous and the corresponding week last year are shown as follows:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Strong on Firm Cables and Small Receipts.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Firm cables and continued small receipts in the Northwest brought out an active demand for wheat in the local market today. Offerings, however, were light, and consequently the market manifested considerable strength. Shorts and commission houses were the principal bidders. December opened ⅝@⅞c higher at 75¾@76c, and sold at 76⅛c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 930 cars against 833 cars last week and 1,440 cars a year ago.

The buying of 1,000,000 bushels of the December option by a leading bull forced the price of that option up to 79⅝@79½c. The market held strong throughout the entire session, closing prices being almost the highest point. Final quotations on December were up ⅜c at 78¾c.

The corn market was quiet but firm, the strength of wheat being the dominating influence. Buying was mainly by commission houses. December opened unchanged at 45¾c and sold up to 45⅝@45¾c. Local receipts were 455 cars, with 279 of contract grade.

Oats were firm in sympathy with wheat and corn. Trading was quiet. December opened a shade to ⅛c higher at 34⅝@34⅜c to 34½ and advanced to 34⅝c. Local receipts were 288 cars.

Trading in provisions were quiet and the tone of the market was steady. January pork was unchanged to 5c higher at $13.40 to $13.45. Lard was up 2½c at $7.57½. Ribs were up 2½c at $7.17½.

Close: Wheat—December, 78¾c; May, 80¼@80⅝c. Corn—December, 45½c; May, 45⅜@44c. Oats—December, 34⅜c; May, 35¼c. Pork—January, $13.42½. Lard—October, $8.82½; January, $7.57½. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago.—Wheat—Advances, with so much bull news in sight, is what very many friendly to that side of the market have been waiting for—a sharp setback to get in. There is too much in the way of bull news at the present writing to permit of very much of a setback. Longs take profits on swells. This makes it a safe market to get into at almost any spot. Possibly a temporary reaction is due, but unless the spring crop moves in larger volume than it has the crop of bulls will increase and the market will gain fresh strength.

Corn—Prices had a rather strong turn on the early market. The market showed dullness most of the session and a good share of the support no doubt came from the strength in wheat. There is nothing particularly bearish in sight as the receiving houses are not reporting any anxiety on the part of the country to offer new corn at present prices. We prefer fair reaction in May corn before taking hold on buying side.

Oats—May oats closed same as Saturday, after showing ⅛c advance for the morning. Export clearances were 187,-000 bus. Local stocks and local receipts are moderate enough to give buyers the best of it in this market, taking into account the short crop for the year.

Copper Gossip.

Sturgis to Gay & Sturgis: The market was stubbornly all day and closed at about the best. The strength of steel issues foreshadows early announcement ore deal. Far further sensational rise in copper was followed by marked strength in all metal issues. North Butte made a new record and looks higher. Coalition suffered from profit taking. The market looks generally well and will continue to improve in all probability until Wednesday when the probability of a raise in Bank of England rate on Thursday may cause a small setback.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS, ETC.

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis, —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, Sept. 24th, 1906.

Upon reading and filing the petition of Colette T. Overton, administratrix of the estate of Edward Overton, deceased, representing, among other things, that she has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of her administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law, and for the discharge of the administratrix and the sureties on her bond,

It is Ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by this Court on Monday, the 22nd day of October, A. D. 1906, at ten o'clock A. M., at the Probate Office, in the Court House, in the City of Duluth, in said County.

And it is Further Ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minn., the 24th. day September, A. D. 1906.

By the Court,
J. B. MIDDLECOFF,
Judge of Probate.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

Which Opened Strong Under the Leadership of Reading.

Good Demand for United States Steel—Close Irregular.

New York, Oct. 1.—Prices of stocks advanced on the opening dealings of the week, gains amounting to a moderate fraction in the majority of cases. There were running sales of 20,000 shares of Reading at 150¾ and 151, compared with 150¼ on Saturday. Northern Pacific rose 1¼ and B. & O., Rock Island preferred, Wisconsin Central and American Smelting large fractions. Business was animated and widely distributed.

Only a few of the prominent stocks shared substantially in the active buying movement that arose after the opening. Outside of St. Paul and Reading the buying did not make much of an impression on prices. Realizing in the Pacifics had much to do with keeping the general rise within restricted limits. St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred improved 3, St. Paul, Reading and Pacific Coast 2¼ to 2½, Great Northern preferred and National Railroad of Mexico preferred 2, the second preferred, Wisconsin Central preferred and Smelting 1¼ to 1½, and Union Pacific, St. Louis Southwestern and Wisconsin Central and International Pump 1. Northwestern fell off 1½ when the general list was receding at 11 o'clock.

Prices wavered when call money rose to 9 per cent, but the strength of St. Paul sustained the market by sympathy. The stock rose 3½ over Saturday. Union Pacific rose 2. The market became very dull. Bonds were steady.

The market fell back for a time, St. Paul, Union Pacific and Reading giving away about a point. New stocks were taken up afterwards, notably Smelting which scored an advance of 2¾. The general active list, however, did not recover appreciably. St. Louis Southwestern preferred rose 3½, Delaware & Hudson 1⅜, United States Rubber and Kansas City Southern preferred 1½ and Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago Great Western and Sugar 1.

A more general show of strength occured after noon, bouyant advice in the Hill stock. St. Paul, Union Pacific, and Reading inducing throughout the list. The demand for United States Steel which rose to 47 coincident with the jump in the Hill stocks attracted notice. Wisconsin Central preferred gained 3¼; Great Northern preferred 4½, Reading 3½, Northern Pacific 3¼, Union Pacific 3, Louisville & Nashville 2½, Pennsylvania, Atchison preferred, United States Steel preferred, Amalgamated Copper, Lead, Republic Steel, Colorado Fuel and United States Pipe, 1 to 1¼.

The market closed rather irregular in spite of strength in new points. Atchison forged upwards 3 with some sympathetic effect on other Southwestern. In the general list there was a disposition towards profit taking which held prices back.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The stock market opened strong and higher under the leadership of Reading. The standard stocks were selling throughout, and in most cases closed right at the top. There was a new air of confidence taken on at the opening, and it looks as though the public is becoming interested. With the money situation becoming easier, we believe that the standard stocks will do to buy on any recession.

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened steady and then showed a great deal of strength. The heavy gold engagements today abroad was the cause of the heavy buying. The money market was strong at the opening and then eased off. We look for a strong market tomorrow and a very active trading one. The feeling at the clase was bullish and many pool stocks are being manipulated.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 1.—The cotton market opened strong at an advance of 14@18 points on higher cables, reports of damage of the storm of last week, the report of another storm on the gulf coast and unfavorable weather in the Northwestern belt. Trading was very active and the market held firm during the early session. Prices were nearly a cent a pound up from the recent low level on some of the later months, such as May, while near positions sold 75 to 85 points above the low figures of last month. There was heavy realizing after the call, but offerings were well absorbed and the market during the middle of the morning was within 3 or 4 points of the top.

Cotton spot closed quiet 35 points advance. Middling uplands, 10.25; middling gulf, 10.50; sales, 45,705 bales. Cotton futures closed firm, closing bids: October, 9.83; November, 9.98; December, 10.00; January, 10.05; February, 10.12; March, 10.19; April, 10.22; May, 10.30; June, 10.32; July, 10.36.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Cattle—Estimated receipts, 23,000; market, 10@15c higher; beeves, $3.80@6.95; cows and heifers, $1.60 @5.15; stockers and feeders, $2.60@4.50; Texans, $3.70@4.40; Westerners, $3.50@5.40; calves, $6.25@8.25. Hogs—Estimated receipts, 30,000; steady; mixed and butchers, $6.30@6.77; good heavy, $5.40@6.75; rough heavy, $5.20@6.25; light, $6.20@6.72½; pigs, $5.70@6.40; bulk of sales, $6.20@6.65. Sheep —Estimated receipts, 42,000; 10c lower; sheep, $3.65@5.35; lambs, $4.85@7.50.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, Oct. 1.—Barrett & Zimmerman's report: The horse market is very sluggish. The receipts of the heavy drafters is large, but the market is dull with few sales. A slight increase in the price of mares will be noticed:

Drafters, extra	$220 to $250
Drafters, choice	190 to 220
Drafters, common to good	170 to 190
Farm mares, extra	125 to 150
Farm mares, choice	110 to 125
Farm mares, common to good	85 to 110
Delivery, choice	160 to 180
Delivery, common to good	130 to 160
Drivers	130 to 250
Mules, according to size	140 to 225

Hives, eczema, itch or salt rheum sets you crazy. Can't bear the touch of your clothing. Doan's Ointment cures the most obstinate cases. Why suffer. All druggists sell it.

AMERICAN IS WINNER

In the Balloon Race for James Gordon Bennett Cup.

Lieut. Frank P. Lahm Made Best Record in the Contest.

Endurance Medal for C. S. Rolls, Longest in the Air.

Paris, Oct. 2.—All the uncertainty regarding the result of the balloon race for the James Gordon Bennett cup, started from here on Sunday afternoon, was ended at noon today when a dispatch was received by the Aero club, announcing that the Hon. C. S. Rolls and his companion, Col. Capper, in the balloon Brittannia, landed at Sandringham Upland at 6:30 last night, thus establishing that Lieut. Frank P. Lahm, Sixth cavalry, U. S. A., the American competitor in the race, who descended near Whitby Yap in the balloon United States, is the winner.

The race was started Sunday afternoon when fifteen balloons, representing seven countries, sailed away from the Tuileries gardens, Paris.

The members of the Aero club are inclined to believe that the United States was only prevented from proceeding farther because a current of air again threatened to carry her over the North sea, with no apparent prospect, unless the direction of the wind changed, of finding land before making the coast of Norway.

Signor Von Willer, Italy, is second, Count De La Vaulx, France, third, and the Hon. C. S. Rolls, Great Britain, fourth.

Some anxiety was felt on account of Mr. Rolls, it being feared that he had attempted to cross the North sea. The delay in reporting his descent is not yet explained.

Lieut. Lahm's friends are enthusiastic over his victory. With the exception of Senor Salamanca, the Spanish aeronaut, Lahm was the youngest competitor. Since his assignment to the cavalry school at Saumur, Lahm has devoted much attention to aerostatics and his rapid advance as an aerial pilot has already attracted considerable attention. He made a dozen ascensions during the summer, the longest voyage being from Saint Cloud to Saint Brieuc. The lieutenant took the place of his father in the race, the latter, who is the best known American aeronaut in Paris, being called home on Saturday, Maj. Hersey's trip, as Lieut. Lahm's assistant, was quite accidental. A Frenchman, Levec, had been selected as his assistant, but the Aero club of France protested, and Maj. Hersey, who has just arrived here from Norway with Walter Wellman, leader of the Wellman-Chicago Record-Herald expedition, eagerly seized on the chance.

Lieut. Lahm, who is expected to arrive in Paris today, covered 415 miles against 370 miles, covered by Von Willer, his nearest competitor.

The beautiful cup presented for competition by James Gordon Bennett, becomes a trophy of the Aero club of America. The first cash prize of $2,900 goes to Lieut. Lahm and the endurance medal to Mr. Rolls, who was the longest in the air.

London, Oct. 2.—Later in the day the Aero club of England received a telegram announcing that Hon. C. S. Rolls descended between Sandringham and the sea at 6:30 last night, 26¼ hours from the time of his departure from Paris.

LAW DECLARED VALID.

Kentucky Racing Commission Law Held to be Constitutional.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 2.—The Kentucky Racing commission law was declared constitutional by the United States court of appeals in this city today. The information against the racing commission was dissolved and the case remanded to the lower court for further proceeding. The decision was announced by Judge Cockran.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 2.—The state racing commission law, which was upheld by the federal circuit court of appeals today, was passed by the last session of the Kentucky legislature.

It places the regulation of the state under the state board of racing commissioners, appointed by the governor, which has full power to grant dates or prevent race meetings, as it sees fit. Suit to test the law was begun by Louis Cella of St. Louis and others, members of the Western Jockey club, and owners of the Douglas Park track at Louisville. They were at first refused dates, and sought an injunction in the federal circuit court here, which was granted, Judge Evans holding that the law was unconstitutional. The decision of the circuit court reverses this decision.

WILD WEST SHOW IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Geneva, Oct. 2.—Cummins' Wild West show, owned by Walter L. Main, was destroyed by fire in winter quarters here, early today. One man, an employe, was burned to death. All the animals, except four elephants and two horses, were consumed by the flames. The loss will be about $40,000, with no insurance.

The fire is supposed to have started from a lighted cigarette or cigar.

FEAR OF ANOTHER STORM IS STILL FELT AT MOBILE BUT BAROMETER RISING

Repairs on Buildings in the City Rapidly Proceeding.

Forty-Four Lighthouses Are Wrecked and Four Keepers Drowned.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 2.—No storm appeared during the night, and there was none immediately at hand this morning. The barometer was still low, but the decline was gradual and, although some wind may strike this city, no storm of great severity was expected.

At 8 o'clock this morning the barometer had begun to rise slightly for the first time in thirty-six hours, and it was evident that no immediate danger was at hand. Local Forecaster Ashenberger, however, declined to grow too optimistic, and warned all merchants who applied to him for advice that it would be just as well if they allowed the bulk of their goods to remain some time longer on the upper floors. He said: "The barometer may go down in a hurry at any time, and then we may get another storm. The great difficulty now is that we have no comparative readings from outside points."

Telegraphic facilities are gradually being restored, all of the railroads, except the Louisville & Nashville, are running on schedule time, the city streets have been cleared of debris, and save for the battered conditions of so many buildings, Mobile is outwardly, at least, as good as ever. Repairs on buildings are proceeding rapidly, especial attention being given

MARSHALS TO BE REMOVED

By President for Making Political Assessments and Unfitness.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The president has determined to remove from office Vivian J. Fagin, United States marshal for the southern district of Ohio, upon the report of the civil service commission, that he had been guilty of making political assessments, and Marshal O'Neil of the western district of Louisiana on the allegation of general unfitness, as disclosed by the report of a commissioner of the department of justice.

VICE-CONSUL FATALLY SHOT

At Batum, Being the Second Consular Officer Murdered.

Batum, Trans Caucasia, Oct. 2.—M. Hager, the Swedish vice consul here, was mortally wounded today while driving in a carriage in the outskirts of the city, and died in the hospital to which he was conveyed. His murderers escaped. M. Hager, who was manager of the Nobel Naphtha works, is the second consular officer murdered, the first victim being William E. Stuart, the American vice consul, who was shot and killed at his country place, near here, May 20.

HISTORIC INDIAN BATTLEFIELD FOUND

Madison, Wis., Oct. 2.—The exact site of the battle of Wisconsin Heights of the Blackhawk war has been discovered by C. N. Brown, a Madison abstract man, who has found it described in records of early surveyors.

The general impression is that the battle was fought just across the river from Prairie du Sac, but Mr. Brown locates it three miles farther down the river in the town of Roxbury, Dane county. At the first annual pilgrimage of the Sauk County Historical society Saturday, Mr. Brown pointed out the site of the field for the first time.

Dr. R. G. Thwaites, who was also speaker, regards it as an important historical discovery.

APPEAL FILED.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The cases of the utility corporations of Chicago against the treasurer of Cook county, involving the tax valuation of the franchises and other property of those corporations under the Illinois state law, have been filed in the supreme court of the United States.

WERE GERMANS.

Lusanne, Switzerland, Oct. 2.—It is now believed that the four tourists, whose bodies were recently found at the foot of the glacier of Plain-Nev, of the Dent De Morocles, were Germans.

THOUSANDS LOSE LIVES

From Vile Climate While Building Railroad in China.

Death Rate Among the Coolies is Seventy Per Cent.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Consul Haynes of Nanking sends to the department of commerce an extract from a report issued by the imperial customs authorities of Mengtse. It deals with the dangers from disease and the difficulties of various kinds confronting the builders of the railway that is to pass through the Namte valley. It would seem as if China has her hands full of evils not unlike those encountered upon the isthmus of Panama. The report says:

"The construction of the railway between Laokai and Yuannanfu (the great enterprise to which all wishers look forward as one of the means of permitting this province to take her proper place in the markets of the world) has been perseveringly pushed forward in the face of great difficulties, both climatic and economic.

"The vile climate of the Namte valley has levied a heavy toll on those who have dared to open up its primeval jungles and gullies. The death rate among the coolies imported from various parts of the empire and put to work in this dreaded valley may, without exaggeration, be estimated at 5,000, or 70 per cent of the total number employed on that particular section of the line."

CHIEF OF POLICE DECLINES TO QUIT

East St. Louis, Ill., Oct. 2.—The city council last night, for the fourteenth time, dismissed George O. Purdy from the office of chief of police, and instructed Lieut. Michael Doyle to assume charge of the department. Notwithstanding his many dismissals, Purdy has refused to vacate his office, being upheld by Mayor Cook. Factional troubles in the municipal government are the basis for the dismissals. Lieut. Doyle will not state whether he will assume the office. If he obeys the council he will be dismissed by Mayor Cook, and it is stated, if he fails to obey the council, that body will discharge him.

SECRETARY TAFT NOT TO STAY IN CUBA FOR MORE THAN TWO WEEKS LONGER

Troops Now All on the Way to Newport News.

Ex-President Palma Leaves Palace and Starts for Matanzas.

No Demonstration of Any Sort at His Departure.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Fred G. Carpenter, Secretary Taft's private secretary here, this morning received a cablegram from the secretary, dated at Havana, last night, stating that he should probably remain there not more than two weeks longer.

New York, Oct. 2.—Amid the cheers and farewells of wives, sweethearts and friends, 900 men, composing the first portion of the Cuban expedition forces to sail from any city to the island, sailed from the New York navy yard, a few minutes before noon today, on board the United States transport Sumner. There was a big gathering of friends and relatives of the troops on the dock to witness their departure.

As the transport passed down the bay, amid the salutes from the harbor craft, she was accompanied by a tug carrying Gen. Grant, commander of the department of the East; Mrs. Grant, Admiral Schley and Mrs. Schley, Gen. Weaver and Maj. Sherman. The tug escorted the big ship to the sea to see her clear of the channel.

The troops on board the Sumner comprise three battalions of the Fifth infantry, from the Plattsburg barracks, with 28 officers and 517 men, commanded by Col. C. D. Cowles; the battalions of Engineers from Washington, comprising 12 officers and 341 men, commanded by Maj. M. H. Patrick, and a detachment from the hospital corps, numbering 2 officers and 22 men.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Practically all of the troops detailed for the first Cuban expedition now are en route from their stations to Newport News, Va., the point of mobilization and embarkation. Gen. Humphrey, quartermaster general, has completed his arrangements for transports and they will BROKE WORLD'S RECORD.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—Dennis Bennett of Hamilton, Can., broke the world's record in the forty-kilometer Marathon race here yesterday, winning in 2:46:05. Sidney H. Hatch of Chicago ran second. Time, 2:46:55. J. T. Armour, unattached, finished third; Fred Lorse, New York, fourth; Alex Thibeau, Chicago, fifth.

PENSACOLA IS SCARED

By Report of Another Storm Off the Coast of Cuba.

Fort McRae Has Been Swept Almost Off the Earth.

Pensacola, Fla., Oct. 2.—After a restless night Pensacola woke this morning to renew the work of rescue and rebuilding. The chamber of commerce and city officials have formed a relief committee and have raised thousands of dollars for the care of the worthy. The poor of the city are being well cared for under the circumstances.

Probably at no time since the hurricane have the people been given such a fright as this morning, when official news came from Washington of the appearance of another disturbance off Cuba. Special weather bulletins were posted advising vessels not to venture out in the gulf, but there were none to leave except a few steamers in the middle of the harbor which are loading.

The list of the dead has not grown any. There is a stench arising from the mile or more debris along the water front just west of the city. Along that route the water front was the most thickly populated, and the fishermen's cottages were within a short distance of the water. These were cleared away as if by one stroke of the storm, and it is believed that any the piles of debris will be found many bodies.

Rear Admiral Capps, chief of the bureau of construction and repairs, who came from Washington, is at the navy yard supervising the work of raising the wrecks and making temporary repairs. Many of the fine new buildings, some of which have not even been completed, have been damaged to a great extent. In fact outside of the city, the navy yard and Warrington, its residence section, have suffered more than any other vicinity.

No move has been made by the army to rehabilit it. Fort McRae has been swept almost off the earth with its modern batteries, and it is reported that five men were drowned and five more underwent a harrowing experience and are now chained in the army hospital raving maniacs.

Fort Pickens has been greatly damaged, but not to the extent of Fort McRae, and although many of the buildings there have been wrecked, the army has found sufficient room for men to man the batteries. Capt. Broadbeat, in command of the life saving station, of which there is not even a board left, has received advices to care for the life saving crew in the city until Supt. Hutchins can reach here. The temporary quarters will probably be arranged on Santa Rosa island for the men.

GUN KILLED HIM.

Le Sueur Center, Minn., Oct. 2.—Charles Deutsch, 7 years old, was shot in the heart and killed by the accidental discharge of a shotgun, on a farm a mile east of this village Sunday night.

THAW TRIAL NEXT MONTH

Defense Will Try to Show That He is Now Insane.

Thaw, However, Still Insists That He is Perfectly Sane.

New York, Oct. 2.—Although the efforts of Harry Thaw's counsel to get his case transferred to the supreme court with the view of getting a speedier trial failed, it is likely that the district attorney will now ask that the trial be placed on the calendar of general sessions as early as possible, and then probably transferred to the criminal branch of the supreme court.

If the case is transferred to the criminal branch of the supreme court it was said the trial might be begun some time next month. A special panel of 200 talesmen will be drafted, from which to select the jury.

Thaw has been examined twice in his cell this week by alienists retained by his counsel, and it is said the defense will try to show that the prisoner is insane at the present time, whether he was insane at the time he shot Stanford White or not.

In case Thaw is proved insane he could not be tried, but would be confined in Matteawan asylum for the criminal insane until he was cured. He might be tried then, and, on the other hand, he might not be tried.

If he was forced to spend three or four years in the asylum the chances are he would never be brought to trial.

Thaw has submitted to the present tactics of his counsel with bad grace. He still insists that he is perfectly sane and is anxious to go before a jury

FIRST CABINET MEETING HELD

For Three Months and Cuba Was the Chief Topic.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The first cabinet meeting for more than three months was held at the White House today. It was attended by Secretaries Root, Bonaparte, Wilson, Metcalf, Postmaster General Cortelyou and Attorney General Moody, the absentees being Secretaries Taft, Shaw and Hitchcock.

There were a number of important matters brought up. Cuba naturally occupied the most conspicuous place in the discussion. It is understood that a proposition was under way to send Governor Magoon of the canal zone, who arrived in Washington this morning, directly to Havana to act as the representative there of the civil branch of the war department, in case such an official is deemed necessary. This, of course, would indefinitely postpone the assumption by Mr. Magoon of the office of vice-governor of the Philippines.

MORE RIGID RULES

Governing the Admission of Persons to the United States.

St. John, N. B., Oct. 2.—The American immigration inspectors here have received a new set of regulations governing the admission of persons to the United States. The rules are much more rigid than any ever enforced here.

The immigration department of the United States in an effort to exclude from that country all who may in any way be considered undesirable citizens has decided that an examination similar to the one for "first papers" or the preliminary step toward naturalization shall be made at the border. Hence under the new regulations all persons from Canada who intend residing in the States will be questioned at great length.

In the past no physical examination of passengers has been made unless the appearance of the persons was such as to attract attention, nor will this rule be changed for the present, although it will be more strictly observed. The financial requirements remain the same, but it is understood that certain amendments on both of these points will be made shortly.

CANNOT COMMIT TO HELL.

Iowa Judge Denies Motion to Send Reporter to Inferno.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 2.—After declaring that a local reporter had been guilty of contempt of court in writing the story of a case in which he was concerned, Attorney O. C. Tredway applied to the court commissioner for an order committing the reporter to hell. After considerable discussion among the officers of the court and lawyers as to whether this could be done, Judge Kennedy solemnly informed the attorney that it was without the jurisdiction of the court to commit anyone to hell, but if the attorney desired he could have opportunity to show why the reporter should be committed to jail.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON OFF FOR IRON RANGES AND BEING WELL RECEIVED

Shops Closed at Proctor and Large Crowd Heard Him.

Was Given Warm Greeting at Biwabik and Eveleth.

Biwabik, Minn., Oct. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The arrival of Governor Johnson at Proctor found the entire force of the shops and a large number of the citizens awaiting him. Work was suspended during the stay. Supt. Kreitter met the governor and escorted him to the new paint shop, where he addressed the voters briefly. He told them that he would like to meet every taxpayer personally, if it were possible, but would assure them that every man under his administration had had a square deal, and that policy would always be continued. He sketched in a few words the accomplishments of his administration and then shook hands all around.

Judge Pendergast also spoke briefly. Much enthusiasm and interest was shown among the men.

At Biwabik, a large crowd met the train. One hundred and fifty school children marched to the depot and shook the governor's hand. He spoke briefly to the voters and was warmly greeted.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Miners' union band and several hundred people welcomed Governor Johnson's party upon its arrival in Eveleth at noon. Headed by the band, the governor's party was driven through the streets in carriages, finally going to Vail hall. Charles Jessmore, president of the village, and Judge Pendergast spoke briefly and then Governor Johnson addressed the crowd. His speech was a brief resume of his work during the two years of his administration and was made in his happiest manner. Great applause and cheers greeted him as he arose, and his speech was punctuated with enthusiastic demonstrations.

ADMIT THEY ARE GUILTY

Of Trying to Extort $20,000 From Mrs. Richard Robinson.

Racine, Wis., Oct. 2.—Fred C. Stocking and H. D. Miller, who were arrested in Milwaukee last night on a charge of trying to extort $20,000 from Mrs. Richard T. Robinson of this city, were brought here from Milwaukee and are still in jail. Stocking is said to have admitted that he wrote the letter to Mrs. Robinson demanding the money and that he wrote it left-handed, so as to disguise his original writing. Miller, who is his brother-in-law, now admits, that he was an accomplice and both are expected to plead guilty. They have not engaged any attorneys and it is believed that, when brought into the police court this afternoon before Court Commissioner John Wentworth for a preliminary examination, they will waive a hearing and be bound over to the municipal court, or possibly an adjournment may be taken. The men are said to be anxious to plead guilty, however.

The penalty for a crime for which they are charged is from one to two years in the penitentiary or a fine not to exceed $500 or less than $100.

HARRIMAN LINE

Of Steamships to Run From New Orleans to New York.

San Francisco, Oct. 2.—Announcement has come to the officials of the Southern Pacific that Harriman is pushing a scheme of a trans-continental line to completion. At the end of the Sunset route in New Orleans a line of steamers will be run to New York. The Creole, the first of the steamers to be built, was recently launched at Quincy, Mass., and the reports say that the new vessel will prove most satisfactory in every respect. Two other vessels are now under construction and will be launched in the near future. Others will probably be added later to the equipment of the line.

WRECKED TRAIN TO BE BLOWN UP BY DYNAMITE.

Kingfisher, Okla., Oct. 2.—The smoking car of the Rock Island passenger train which plunged into the Cimmarron river at the bridge near Dover, on Sept. 18, will be blown up with dynamite by the railroad company. The bodies of several passengers who were on the train at the time of the wreck and have never been accounted for are believed to be in the coach, the interior of which is inaccessible on account of the sand.

WEATHER FORECAST — Partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday. Warmer tonight. Fresh winds.

CONTROL TO PASS INTO NEW HANDS

Wisconsin Central Railway to Undergo Change of Ownership.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 2.—The Evening Wisconsin says today:

"That the control, if not the sole operation of the Wisconsin Central Railway is about to pass into new hands and that this change of ownership and control will be officially announced within a short time is now quite certain.

"In just what hands the Wisconsin Central property will pass is a mystery.

"In this connection, it is learned on good authority that while in Milwaukee upon two occasions during the past three weeks, Fred D. Underwood, president of the Erie system, had two long conferences with President Whitcomb of the Wisconsin Central. While these visits may have been of a social nature, many believe they related to the probable sale to the Erie interests of the Central road."

In other quarters it is still believed that either E. H. Harriman or J. J. Hill are the controlling interests in the Central.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured in Three Days.

Morton L. Hill, of Lebanon, Ind., says: "My wife had Inflammatory Rheumatism in every muscle and joint, her suffering was terrible and her body and face were swollen almost beyond recognition; had been in bed for six weeks and had eight physicians, but received no benefit until she tried the Mystic Cure for Rheumatism. It gave immediate relief and she was able to walk about in three days. I am sure it saved her life." Sold by all druggists.

NORTH BUTTE HITS $107

Cananea Central and Superior & Pittsburg Are Features.

North Butte, Cananea Central and Superior & Pittsburg reached new high marks in the copper market today. Butte Coalition and Calumet & Arizona were also features of the strong market.

During the day, North Butte sold as high as $107, which is higher than it has ever sold before. Cananea Central sold as high as $22.50 and Superior & Pittsburg at $22.25.

North Butte opened at $104, declined to $103.50, rallied to $107 and closed at $105.75 bid and $106 asked. Cananea Central sold at $21.25 during the early part of the day, advanced to $22.50 and fell off a little at the close, which was about $21.62½ bid and $21.75 asked. Superior & Pittsburg started out the day by selling at about $21.75, advanced to $22.25 and closed at $21.62½ bid and $21.75 asked.

Amalgamated opened at $113, declined to $112.25, rallied to $113.75 and closed at $112.50 bid and $112.75 asked. Anaconda opened at $285.50, advanced to $286.50, fell off to $284.50 and closed at $285 bid.

Butte Coalition opened at $39.87½, declined to $39.75, which was the low price of the day, rallied to $41.12½ and closed strong at $40.87½ bid and $41 asked. Calumet & Arizona opened at $120, advanced to $122 and closed at $121 bid and $122 asked.

Warren sold at $14.25 and $14.50 and closed at $14.50 bid, and Globe Consolidated at $6.75 and $6.87½ and closed at $6.62½ bid.

Denn-Arizona was inactive and closed at $19.50 bid, Keweenaw at $11 bid, Hancock Consolidated at $8 bid, Copper Queen of Idaho at $1.75 bid and $5 asked, Cliff at $4.50 bid and $5 asked, and Calumet & Montana at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked.

Black Mountain sold at $9.37½ and closed at $9.25 bid and $9.50 asked.

DISARMAMENT PROCEEDINGS

Going on Without Hitch in the Vicinity of Havana.

Havana, Oct. 2.—The disarmament proceedings are going on without a hitch in the vicinity of Havana. Elsewhere they have not yet begun. While there is some question as to whether the disarmament will be accomplished in the Cienfuegos region without some friction, no opposition of consequence is anticipated.

The news from Cienfuegos, province of Santa Clara, is that the 450 marines from Havana, arrived there none too soon, as the situation was threatening, caused partly by the dissatisfaction of the volunteers over the prospect of being disbanded with pay only for the actual time served, and partly because of the uneasiness of the revolutionists surrounding the city. In Santiago province the revolutionary movement has caused lack of work and actual suffering

The disarmament commission sent from Havana began work today in the vicinity of Santa Clara city and it is expected that 1,000 of Pino Guerra's men will be mustered for their homes in Pinar del Rio province tomorrow from a point near Havana.

The provisional government is considering whether it is wise to send an escort of 200 marines on the train to the city of Pinar del Rio, with the homeward bound insurgents.

Maj. Ladd of the disarmament commission, reports that he is having no trouble whatever with the insurgents in Havana province, many of them actually laying down their arms and others retaining their own rifles.

The American marines at Camp Columbia have been ordered to keep within the government reserve, so there will be no mixing with the rebels and little with the government soldiers.

Business is picking up wonderfully. Contracts are being renewed, enterprises of all sorts are being revivified and more people are being employed. The confidence of the business elements in the provisional government is apparently unbounded and they are all persistently hoping that the intervention will be permanent.

STATE OF ARKANSAS

Makes Agreement With Attorneys of Chicago Packers.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—The state of Arkansas ended its first attack on the Chicago packers today by making an agreement with attorneys representing Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Nelson Morris & Co., and the Cudahy Packing Co., in the suits brought by the state for violations of the anti-trust law. Representatives of the local packers refused to appear before Lyle D. Taylor, appointed commissioner of the Arkansas court, and the attorneys for the prosecution did the next best thing—they went to see the packers. Upon their return they reported that the case against the Hammond Packing company was the only one that would be prosecuted at the present time. Judgment will be given against that concern and then the case will be submitted to the Arkansas supreme court, which has yet to pass on the act.

DIVORCE GRANTED.

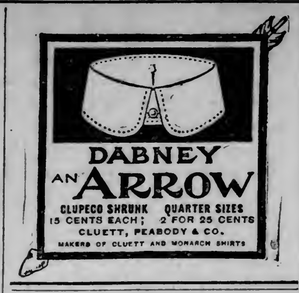

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 2.—Judge Phillips of the common pleas court today granted a divorce to Mrs. W. J. White, wife of the millionaire president of the American Chemical company, known as the chewing gum trust. Mrs. White charges her husband with desertion.

WILL RECEIVE AID.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The American National Red Cross today decided to receive contributions for the relief of the storm sufferers in the gulf states.

ASKS PRISON SENTENCE.

Madrid, Oct. 2.—The attorney general, who originally demanded that the court impose sentence of death on Senor Ferrer, director of the modern school of Barcelona, for his connection with the attempt on the life of King Alfonso, May 31 last, now asks for a sentence of sixteen years in prison.

WAS WARM MONTH.

Temperature for September Third Highest in Thirty-Six Years.

The local weather bureau has issued its monthly statement regarding weather conditions in September.

The highest temperature of the month was 89 deg. on Sept. 8. This is but 5 deg. cooler than the hottest day in any month of September for the past thirty-six years.

The average temperature was 67 deg., which is, with two exceptions, 1891 and 1897, the warmest month of September since the establishment of the local weather bureau. The average temperature for September for that length of time is 56.7 deg.

During September there were sixteen clear days, six on which the sun was hid a portion of the time, and eight cloudy days, while rain fell on eleven days out of the thirty.

The total precipitation for the month was 3.66, while the average is 3.69, so it was a very ordinary month in this respect.

Los Angeles, Oct. 2.—Abe Attell and Harry Baker, will meet in a 20-round bout Oct. 30, for the featherweight championship of the world.

SCHISMATIC SOCIETIES.

Paris, Oct. 2.—Two new schismatic Catholic associations organized for the purpose of taking over church property have been formed in the department of the Eure.

INTEREST IN BARRELS.

Boston Herald: Bill R., a silent member of a local express company in Lynn, could stand up with the best of them when it came to "salting down" drinks. His folks began to worry, and then started in to make it warm for him.

He belonged to a local golf club, and was invited to take part in a golf match with the Vesper club of Lowell. After the game a member of the Vesper club invited the Lynn men to go through one of the breweries, of which he was manager. After the crowd had been in nearly all parts of the brewery they were taken into the storage room, where over 1,000 barrels of beer were piled, waiting to be put on the market.

"What is the mater?" he asked.

"Matter!" replied Bill. "I'd give anything to have my mother see that pile of beer."

"Why?" asked his friend.

"Why? Lord, she thinks they make only a little more than I drink, replied Bill.

WHERE POETS LIE.

Few of the many pilgrims to the cemetry where Keats lies, and to that which may or may not contain the heart of Shelley, remember the "delightful child" whom Shelley buried in the older and wilder ground, then the only one, the place with its "light of laughing flowers." A tombstone there bears the child's name, says the Kansas City Journal. It stands in the bright open sunshine, between the grave of Keats and the pyramid and boundary wall. That ancient Roman wall is now disfigured by the gap filled up with black boarding, made with the intention of running the tram-line through the cemetery. Having torn down the wall, the municipality changed the "great mind" they had to destroy this beautiful and sacred place, and allowed the trams to make the small circuit—it is but a few feet.

MRS. CARNEGIE A COOK.

There are few people outside the Carnegie household who have any idea of Mrs. Carnegie's solicitude for the material comforts of her husband, says the Kansas City Journal. In this she can be compared to the late Mrs. Gladstone. Like a good Scots, Mr. Carnegie likes his porridge and has it served up in real Scotch fashion. The millionaire is an early riser—he is usually out in the grounds at Skibo castle at 7:30 every morning—and, as Mrs. Carnegie will not allow anyone except herself to cook the morning dish, she must get up at least an hour earlier. Mr. Carnegie has declared that if it were not for the fact that Mrs. Carnegie had learned to cook the early morning meal he could not have lived in the United States.

CHAMPION RUNAWAY.

Stanley Condor is an 11-year-old boy of Liverpool, England, who is believed to hold the runaway record. He has visited all parts of his native county by riding under railway cars, and recently eclipsed all his former feats by traveling to Winnipeg and then to New York. He was discovered by the officers of the ship on which he sailed, without a ticket, from New York to Liverpool. He will probably be sent to a reformatory.

"NEW WOMEN" IN JAPAN.

They have "new women" in Japan. One of them recently arrived in Tacoma, Yessu Hatfori, a widow of 35, to enter Witworth college to study domestic science, says the Kansas City Journal. She said to a Tacoma Ledger reporter the other day: "Oh, I am only 35; I have plenty of time. I can stay in America five, ten years, if it takes that long." Yessu Hattori comes from Formosa island, where for ten years she has acted as trained nurse in one of the hospitals.

SMALEST INHABITED ISLAND.

Jethlou island is by far the smallest o the channel islands, and boasts the distinction of being the smallest inhabited island in Europe, having, indeed, only one dwelling house upon it, says the Kansas City Journal. It has a population of seven souls. It has no road or pathway or post. At the last census more than half the population of the island was absent, having gone into Guernsey market with the butter and cream from the Jethou cows. The weather being bad, the visitors had to stay at Guernsey during the census time.

HANDLING OF MAILS

Important Changes Urged by Assistant Postmaster at Chicago.

Newspaper Publishers Show Their Mail is Carried at Profit.

New York, Oct. 2.—Important changes in the laws governing the handling of second class mail matter were recommended in a statement by John M. Hubbard, assistant postmaster at Chicago, which was read today to the post commission which is investigating the subject in this city. Mr. Hubbard said:

"That second class mail matter has made itself sustaining.

"That a law obliging bulk matter to be carried outside of the mails would go a long way toward solving the problem.

"That if these two propositions are rejected, the rates on bulk packages be increased to 2 cents a pound to news agents and dealers and to 3 cents a pound to subscribers, advertisers and exchanges.

"The abolition of the sample copy privilege, the transient rate of postage and the compulsory routing of second class matter by publishers.

"The passage of a stringent law to punish violators of the law."

Mr. Hubbard's statement argued that a self sustaining rate would remove the deficit in the postoffice department, enable congress to increase the pay of deserving employes, cheapen the cost of administering the department and make the press independent of the department.

The carrying of bulk outside the mails, the statement declared, would result in immense saving to the department and it is thought that the publishers can make better terms with the transportation companies than with the department. It was said that the cost of handling unrouted mail is 41 cents a hundred and routed mail 4 cents a hundred.

New York, Oct. 2.—A brief on behalf of the American Newspaper Publishers association was submitted today to the congressional commission on postal matters which is in session here and which is inquiring especially into what steps shall be taken by the government to obliterate the large annual deficits in the postal revenues, due, it is alleged, to the handling of so many tons of second-class matter at the rate of 1 cent per pound.

The brief is designed to show that the legitimate daily newspapers are not the cause of the deficit, and consequently are entitled to a continuance of the prevailing rate. It is asserted that while the government itself has to pay more than 10 cents to carry the 10-cent magazine from the publishing office to the newstand and subscriper, it derives a profit from the carrying of the daily newspapers. It is declared that the newspapers have been improperly included in sweeping assertions that all those entitled to the second-class mailing privilege enjoy a gratuity and subsidy from the government. The brief points out that the recent deficits in postal revenues were anticipated by Postmaster Generals Smith and Payne, because of the establishment of the rural free delivery system, and that the deficits need not be viewed with apprehension. The brief suggests steps that may partially remedy the abuses which have furnished occasion for the complaint.

The belief is expressed that the transportation of newspapers at 1 cent per pound is profitable, inasmuch as express and railroad companies find a profit in carrying newspapers and other articles at rates varying from ¼ a cent a pound to 1 cent a pound, giving more and better service for the money and carrying long distances at the cent a pound rate.

The brief asserts that the situation as to postal deficits is not so bad as appears at first glance. The country is growing with amazing rapidity. The revenues of each year are always more than enough to pay the expenses of the previous year, so that an end can be put to deficits if a stop is put to the increase in expenditures. Comparing the United States postal service to that of Great Britain, it is shown that England pays $441 to the mile for transporting mails, whereas the United States pays but $196. Yet Great Britain make a profit of $22,000,000 a year, mainly due to the short haul and the dense population.

The brief states that the second-class rate should be restricted to the dissemination of public information and that its employment primarily for mercantile purposes should be stopped.

TWO SHORT HANDS.

Great Bluffing When Two Senators Split the Jack Pot.

"The most shocking, not to say scandalous, instance of poker bluffing between gentlemen in high station that I ever saw occurred in a game here in 1888," said a former representative in congress from the South, who makes his residence in Washington, according to a Washington correspondent of the New York Sun. "The queer part of it was that that fool, grimacing imp that tempts the most cautious and conservative poker players to try the bluffing business at certain weak moments of their lives sprang upon and vanquished both of these gentlemen that I'm speaking about at the same time.

"The two were Senators Zeb Vance and Matt Ransom, both of North Carolina. There wasn't much money involved, but, being earnest and thorough men, they both handled their shameless bluff as if lands the size of a Texas county were at stake. And they split about even in the matter of nerve.

"Four of us, the two North Carolina senators, Representative Mansir of Missouri and myself, the only survivor of the group, used to get together at our respective houses on Saturday nights for the little game of $1 limit, which was occasionally stretched to $2 limit if a working majority of us felt flush—none of us was rich or even especially well to do.

"The rugged Mansir was the lucky man of our party, and he contrived to make the pace, pretty comfortably in the lead about all the time. I came next in the matter of luck, just about holding my own in the game and maybe a little more.

"Senator Zeb Vance played a steady, but uniformly unfortunate game, never getting his head high enough above water to give him a breathing spell. The out and out Jonah of the game was the courtly Matt Ransom, one of the most amiable and perfect mannered men I ever knew.

"Some men who trail in a poker game, sitting after sitting, month in and month out, let the thing get on their nerves and become peevish about it, but the almost weirdly persistent bad luck of Senator Ransom at our little game was only a joke with him. Mansir got to be ashamed to win all the time, and I used to feel some mean myself when Mansir and I would be sort of heading a little parade of our own, away out in front, with the two senators lagging in the rear, and poor Ransom getting hammered every time he thought he had something that would at least enable him to apply the mallet to his colleague and friend, Senator Vance.

"Just for the fun of seeing these two accomplished men of the old regime fight out their little battles between themselves Mansir and I would often toss our cards when we were pretty sure we were at least as well off with something to draw to as either of the two senators. On these occasions Vance and Ransom would play their hands for all they were worth, with mighty little bluffing, but even when Ransom didn't overappraise his hand, as he sometimes did, it almost always fell out that Vance had him on the hip.

"This Saturday fell three days before the close of a short session and it was to be our last game for the season. In celebration of this fact we made it $2 limit from the beginning of the game.

"Mansir, a poor man, with nothing but his salary, felt so mortified over the fact that he was some $800 to the good on the season in our little game that he immediately began to bluff like a Chinese mess cook. For every time he bluffed he got away with it, and he couldn't lose.

"This wouldn't have been so bad, but the bluffing bug, which is both infectious and contagious, I am told by experts, seized all the rest of us. I tried it as soon as I began to suspect that Mansir was winning more than the strength of his hands warranted, but, becoming the immediate recipient of bumps, quickly piped down on the bluffing business and played my cards as they looked.

"Not so Senators Zeb and Matt. The bluffing bee gripped them for keeps, and they were particularly industrious in whanging away at each other with bluffs when Mansir and I had dropped out.

"The luck, as usual, was with Vance in these little side battles with his colleague. Neither of them, however, got on to it that the other was bluffing almost throughout the evening.

"We always stopped the game a couple of minutes before midnight in particular deference to Senator Matt, who was a man of strong religious feeling and, therefore, averse to violating the Sabbath in any way. We began the last round of jackpots at 11:40, figuring on five minutes for each jackpot with leisurely playing.

"We made quick work of the first three of the last round of pots on this closing night of the game, and it lacked about thirteen minutes of midnight when the final jackpot hand was dealt by Vance. I was under the guns with nothing but the makings of a low straight open at both ends, and Ransom, who was next, passed.

"Mansir cracked it for $2. Vance, looking extremely owlish, boosted it $2, and I stayed on the chance of nailing something to my two-ended straight. Ransom muttered, as if to himself, that he had at least $4 worth of cards, and stayed along.

"Mansir drew three to his pair of jacks. Vance said that a couple 'd do for him. I got a dead one to my straight and quit right there. Ransom observed that one, preferably pink, would suffice for him.

"Mansir, who hadn't caught anything to his pair of opening jacks, bet $2.

"'Boys,' said Senator Vance, who hadn't even picked up the two cards he had drawn, 'as this is our last night and this the last pot till next December, or maybe till after the next holiday recess, how about making the limit for this one pot five dollars?'

"I was already in the discard and so had nothing to say.

"'Curious thing, this telepathy—there must be something in it,' said Ransom. 'I was just on the pinpoint of suggesting that myself, Zeb.'

"'Agreeable,' said Mansir, and then Senator Vance, still without looking at the two cards he'd drawn, raised Mansir five dollars.

"Senator Ransom had picked up the card he'd drawn and when he caught sight of it he leaned back in his chair and seemed to fall into a respective state as he gazed dreamily at the ceiling and began to softly whistle a most plaintive minor air.

"'Queer thing how those tunes stick in the mind,' he observed, breaking off his whistling when he saw how expectant Senator Vance looked. 'Now, I first heard that air—it's a gondolier's song—when I was in Venice as a very young man, and it only darts into my mind every two or three years or when—'

"'I'd like to hear you whistle it all through with variations, Matt, after we get through with this pot,' suggested Senator Vance. 'You know how addicted I am to your music, old man, here and elsewhere, even on the floor of the senate. But cards is cards. Mansir thinks his openers are worth two dollars and I'm raising him five. I'm waiting for—'

"'Only darts into my mind, that song, as I was saying,' put in Ransom, 'once every two or three years, and always when I'm in a particularly lucky streak, or just about to begin one. I am seeing those seven dollars, and it's five dollars more.'

"'Oho! What am I up against?' inquired Mansir then, and he showed his opening pair of jacks and dropped.

"He couldn't see how both of the senators could be bluffing at the same time, took no stock in a pair of jacks in a pot at best, and, anyhow, he foresaw more fun in a little battle between Ransom and Vance for a windup. So he and I got up from the table to address ourselves to a bit of refreshment on the sideboard.

"'So your Venetian air is the harbinger of a lucky streak, eh, Matt?,' said Vance, beaming affectionately upon his cards. 'Glad to hear that. Have to raise you $5, though, Mr. Gondolier. Just naturally have to.'

"'And five dollars,' said Ransom drumming rythmically on the table to keep time with the air he had resumed whistling.

"'Well, you'll have to invoke the genii of the Adriatic with stronger whistling than that Matt, this time,' said Vance, boosting it another five.

"'This hour, if never again, I hold the magic lamp,' replied Ransom, seeing Vance and boosting him the limit.

"The supreme confidence exhibited by both of them drew Mansir and me away from the sideboard. We wanted to have a peek at their hands and see what made the note of triumph so resonant in the voice of both of them. They both smilingly drew the cards close to their waistcoat buttons as they saw us approaching.

"'Not this time, old man,' said Vance to me when I leaned over his chair. 'I'd feel it was a sort of profanation if any mortal eyes barring my own viewed this hand till the denouement.'

"'You can have a good long look at it when I have the hand framed,' said Ransom to Mansir when Mansir made as if to stoop over and look at his cards, and then the two senators resumed their betting.

"It passed back and forth between them rapidly until there was $137 in the pot, and then Ransom suddenly caught sight of the clock on the mantelpiece. It was lacking only two minutes of midnight and Sunday morning.

"'Zeb,' said Ransom, in a tone of high generosity, to his colleague, 'only a moment or so remains of this day. We cannot encroach upon the day to follow. Do not think I hurry you to your doom and extinction, but—'

"'Five more, Matt,' put in Senator Vance. 'What are you going—'

"The clock suddenly struck 12 and Senator Ransom rose from the table.

"'Zeb,' he said to his colleague, 'let the hands be placed in envelopes and sealed. You know where I stand in respect to this day.'

"'Sealed they'll be, Matt,' replied Vance. 'I'll have our friend here,' indicating me, 'seal my hand, and Mansir can take care of yours. How do you like the looks of these?' Senator Zeb went on, as he spread the cards out in front of me, fan wise, and gave me a sly and most confident dig in the ribs.

"Shocking? It was horrifying!

"The venerable gentleman had three clubs and two spades. He'd drawn the two spades in an effort to fill a three card flush. And here he was poking me in the ribs and inviting me to look ecstatic over a ten high hand!

"'Noble assortment, eh?' he said, giving me another dig in the ribs, and, of course, I could do nothing else that exclaim:

"'Extraordinary! Perfectly extraordinary!'

"I wasn't lying, either. It was extraordinary.

"In the meantime Mansir was putting Ransom's five cards away in a long envelope. Ransom didn't invite Mansir to say anything about the looks of the hand, for Ransom wouldn't even talk about cards on Sunday; but Mansir looked after gazing at the cards, as if he had enjoyed quite an unusual experience, and, of course, it then seemed certain to me that Ransom had his colleague beaten to a standstill.

"Mansir gathered the chips in the pot together and counted them, and we separated, arranging to come together on Monday evening solely for the purpose of giving Ransom and Vance a chance to fight it out over that last jackpot.

"On Monday I released Vance's hand from the envelope and he spread the worthless cards out lovingly in front of him, and Mansir gave Ransom his cards out of the envelope and Ransom regarded his papers with equal pleasure. Then, after Mansir had placed the chips constituting the pot in the middle of the table and all was set just as it had been at the leave off on Saturday night, Ransom suddenly became serious.

"'Zeb,' he said, 'this little extra session, as it were, has been called, it seems to me, for the manifest purpose of carrying on a plain gambling transaction, and to make it worse a gambling transaction between two old friends, neighbors and colleagues. I maintain that it is impossible for our harmless and cosey little four-handed game, organized and carried on for fun, to lapse over from Saturday to Monday.

"'Therefore that four-handed friendly game having ethically and actually come to a conclusion on Saturday night last, here are you and I met together, with all of the paraphernalia and properties assembled in front of us, for the promotion and solution of a gambling transaction.

"'In justice to you and to me, to both of us, I ask you is it right that either of us should abide by the outcome of so deliberate and sordid and obvious a gambling chance, decidedly outside of the pale of merely friendly playing, as this arrangement? Not, Zeb, but that I am not perfectly confident that I've got you beat to—'

"'Matt,' said Vance, seeming to catch at that last phrase, 'I think you're right. Our real game did actually conclude on Saturday night, and this hang-over shouldn't be allowed to go. While I am assured by my innermost comprehension of the laws of chance that I've got you punished, I am perfectly willing that we should—'

"'Split the pot?' suggested Ransom, taking advantage of a slight pause on Ransom's part.

"'Yes, that's it—we'll split the pot,' quickly replied Vance, and split it was.

"We parted in fine spirits.

"'Your man,' said Mansir to me on the way to the cars, referring to Senator Vance, 'seemed powerful willing to agree to Ransom's proposition to split the pot. Must have been weak, eh?'

"'Oh, I don't know,' I told Mansir. 'Vance had what you Western folk call a lulu—three cards of one suit and two of another—he was bobbing to a three card flush, and was as good as ten high when he finished.'

"Mansir stopped and slapped his thigh.

"'I reckon your telling me that entitles you to know what Ransom had,' he said, laughing till the tears showed in his eyes. 'Matt had a busted diamond flush, nine high.'

"The two Senators went to their graves without either ever knowing what the other's hand was on that occasion. They wouldn't tell each other, and Mansir and I agreed not to give it away."

A BOY'S DONTS'.

Kansas City Journal: The pupils in one room in the Sabetha schools were each required to write a short composition. One of them, a boy of 13 years old, wrote the following:

"Us boys and girls are always bossed around, and everybody says don't to us. Here are some don'ts for you grown people that I am going to write in this essay, because I dassent speak up and say 'em to anybody's face:

"Don't tell us boys and girls what we can't eat and when we've got to quit eatin'. We don't try to give you advice about your eatin's.

"Don't get excited when we have been away from the house a few hours. We're all right. Ladies shouldn't get so nervous.

"Don't tell us you're going to lick us when we've got to bed. There ain't any fun till after it is all over.

"Don't blame us when you can't find any one else to blame. We're dead tired of getting the worst of it.

"Don't make us apologize. People ought to apologize to us lots of times, but they never do it. You bet we notice it, too.

"Don't be everlasting grabbing us and straightening us out and pulling at our clothes and poking your fingers in our ears to get the dirt out. We don't like it.

"Don't always make us do your way. We want to do our way once in a while.

"Don't nudge each other and ask us silly questions. We're onto you old smart Alecs.

"Don't make fun of us. We've got feelings, although the big people never seem to know it.

"Don't make us 'show off.' How would you feel if somebody made you do tricks like an Irish setter?

"Don't make us 'thank you' and all that kind of business every time somebody hands us something. They don't do it because they want us to bow and scrape around. They do it because they were us themselves once.

"This ain't all the don'ts I know, but I'll have to stop because the teacher won't let me make the piece any longer."

REBATES GIVEN TO GRAIN FIRMS

Which Enabled Them to Undersell Others In Foreign Markets.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—William H. Sufferns of Decatur, Ill., was the first witness at today's session of the interstate commerce commission, which is investigating alleged rebate cases. Sufferns said that he entered the grain exporting business over nine years ago. Three years ago he said he discovered that the Harris-Scotten company, grain men of Chicago, and Rosenbaum & Co., were receiving an elevator allowance at New Orleans of 2 cents per hundred pounds from the Illinois Central railroad.

"The rate on grain for export via New Orleans was 12 cents per 100," said the witness. "Two cents of that went to the export elevator interest and the remainder to the railroad. The rebate allowed these firms prevented me from competing with them in the European markets. I discovered they were offering grain in Europe at what it cost me here. They had an actual advantage of 1¼ cents. I quit the export business last winter because I could not live, let alone make anything."

R. J. Barr, of New Orleans told a similar story. In regard to the export situation at New Orleans he said that the Illinois Central railroad is heavily interested in export elevators in New Orleans and that it leases one of its houses to Harris-Scotten company. In view of this, he said, the elevator owned by the railroad interest gets the allowance of 2 cents and the same thing is true in the case of the leased elevator.

BISHOP WILLIAMS

Says His Remarks on the Bible Were Incorrectly Reported.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 2.—Bishop Charles D. Williams of the Episcopal diocese of Michigan today declared that he had been incorrectly quoted in the published report of his sermon, Sunday, to the Y. M. C. A. members, in which it was stated he said that the Bible as the word of God is the most prolific source of unbelief the church has to contend with.

"I am neither ultra-conservative, nor yet a Robert Ingersoll, and I wish to emphatically deny the report," declared Bishop Williams.

"I did say that a certain view of the Bible is a most prolific source of unbelief. To say that the Bible is the most prolific source of unbelief I would be the rankest kind of a Robert Ingersoll. The Bible must be read thoughtfully and meditatively, and a man with a conscience will find the word of God in it."

WARSHIP MOVED.

URGE COUNCIL TO PROTECT CITY IN GIVING FRANCHISE

Real Estate Dealers Adopt Resolutions on Railroad Tunnel.

Advocate Securing Certain Concessions From Wisconsin Central.

For the purpose of guarding against the possibility of the Wisconsin Central railroad monopolizing the only available entrance to the city from the west, and to save the city enormous expenses for street improvements, the Duluth Real Estate exchange held a meeting in the Commercial club today and adopted a set of resolutions which will be presented to the council.

The meeting was attended by nearly all of the real estate dealers in the city, and the sentiment was very strongly in favor of exercising great care in the granting of a franchise for the proposed tunnel through the point of rocks.

There is a strong sentiment among taxpayers in general, in regard to this matter, and the real estate dealers have taken the initial steps.

Following are the resolutions:

"Whereas, the Wisconsin Central Railway company is about to apply to the city council for a franchise for a tunnel in Piedmont avenue and Michigan street from Eighth avenue west to Twelfth avenue west; and

"Whereas, the building of such tunnel will appropriate space of great value for subways that must some time be necessary to carry the street traffic through this narrow passage, connecting the east and west ends of the city; and

"Whereas, the space so to be taken is of immense value for railroad purposes, as affording the only remaining available route to the central part of the city; and

"Whereas, said railway company, in entering the city of Duluth, has chosen to acquire a route abutting upon Oneota street and Jenswold street, from Fortieth avenue west to the Northern Pacific railway's right-of-way, and upon both Superior and Michigan streets from said right-of-way to Twenty-fourth avenue west, and upon Michigan street from Twenty-fourth avenue to Twenty-third avenue west, and upon Michigan street and Piedmont avenue from Garfield avenue to a point near Eleventh avenue west, and upon Michigan and Superior streets from Eighth avenue to Sixth avenue west, thereby acquiring a street frontage of thirty-seven blocks upon the principal thoroughfares of the city, equal to more than three and one-quarter miles, 90 per cent of which frontage is upon paved streets; and

"Whereas, the right of way of said railway is in places only fifty feet in width, which width we believe, to be ample for its legitimate purposes, yet throughout the entire distance that said route abuts upon the said streets, it has taken from 132 feet to 180 feet, shutting up the most available route for railways into the city of Duluth and so preventing other railroads from entering the city, and

"Whereas, The effect of said railway taking so great a width over said route and thereby bringing its right of way to the street line, is not only to withdraw large blocks of property from the tax rolls, and to diminish the taxable value of the remaining property upon said streets, but also to throw upon the general fund of the city the great burden of maintaining the half of the street abutting upon the route selected over a course of three and one-quarter miles.

"Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises, be it resolved by the real estate exchange of the city of Duluth, that the city council be requested, among other things, as a condition to the granting of said franchise, to require said railway company forever to maintain the grading, paving, curbing and sidewalking of the adjacent half of all the streets abutting upon their said route, as selected and proposed, in such a manner as may from time to time be directed by the council, to the end that the city be relieved from the burden of maintaining the half of the streets abutting upon said route, and

"Be it further resolved that the city council insist upon a clause being inserted in the franchise of the proproposed tunnel providing that other railroads desiring to enter the center of the city may use the same by paying their proportion of actual costs of maintaining and operating the said tunnel, together with an annual charge equal to their proportion of the 6 per cent interest charge on actual cost of the said tunnel."

"Resolved, further, that a committee of three be appointed to actively advocate before the council these resolutions, and that the secretary present a copy of this resolution to the city council and furnish a copy thereof to each member of the council and to the mayor and city clerk.

MULE KNEW A GOOD THING

Selected the Lonsdale Building as a Place of Refuge.

The spectacle of a mule being led by a policeman out of the hallway of the Lonsdale building, at the corner of Superior street and Third avenue west, this morning, caused many of the people who were passing at the time to pause in wonderment and make inquiry as to whether the owners of the building were contemplating the changing of the handsome office structure into a stable.

Probably the people on the outside were not nearly as much surprised as the persons who were occupying the offices inside were when the mule made his way through the front entrance and clattered down the hall, until stopped at the doors of W. M. Prindle & Co. and W. A. Eaton.

After the mule was located, another problem arose of getting it out without taking it into one of the offices, or backing it the whole length of the hallway, but the mule solved the question himself by simply doubling up like a knife and reversing ends, as easily as though it were half the size it really is.

The animal ran away from the Board of Trade livery barn, on First street, and happening to see the open door in the Lonsdale building as it came down the hill, it sought refuge from its pursuers.

High attorney—Miss Frances MacDonnell, Adolph Easter and Jeremiah Carmody of Chicago.

High auditor—Mrs. Minnie Duffy, Mrs. Mary Rayburn, Mrs. Jennie Johnson, Miss Foley, Miss Fraher and Mrs. Katherine Philips, all of Chicago; Kate McCarty, Dubuque, Iowa; and Mary Halloret, Detroit.

RUNAWAY.

Judge Middlecoff and J. N. Wharton Are Thrown From Buggy.

The horse belonging to Judge of Probate Middlecoff took fright this afternoon as the judge and J. N. Wharton were driving west on First street, near Lake avenue, and in the mix-up that resulted Mr. Middlecoff and Mr Wharton were both thrown from the buggy, while the horse broke away and ran to the Board of Trade livery barn. Neither of the occupants of the buggy was injured seriously, although they were somewhat bruised and shaken from their fall.

The horse became frightened at an engine which is used in the building operations at Bridgeman & Russell's. The engine is situated far out in the street, and is the cause of fright to many horses which pass that way.

Giddings Open Fall Season

With a wealth of handsome tailored suits for street and semi-dress occasions, with hundreds of beautiful coats and wraps of plain black or the season's correct shades, with exquisite displays of rich furs, with dozens of the prettiest styles in waists and skirts, the fall season of 1906 can be said to be fairly opened in a blaze of glory, figuratively speaking, for not only does the Gidding establishment offer a wonderful range of styles, but value of equal importance. Tomorrow, for instance, we offer lines of high class tailored suits regularly $29.50 and $32.50, at $25, and handsomely braid trimmed broadcloth coats usually $37.50 at $27.50. These two specials are but illustrations of the splendid values constantly offered by this house, many of which never find their way into the newspapers, for while the Gidding firm are standard believers in publicity they also believe in having value surprises in their store. That is possibly why they keep continually growing and becoming more successful. • • •

STORM MAKING DEVICES.

Some Very Ingenious Schemes Used at the Illusion Shows.

When the snow went up instead of down in the winter scene of a Coney Island illusion show recently, owing to the blunder of an unskilled operator, the audience laughed and the effect was lost. Nevertheless, the latter day illusion show is convincing, says the New York Sun.

All this realism, however, has only been brought about through the constant study of those connected with such enterprises, who are always on the lookout for new effects or to perfect existent ones.

Where a couple of years ago twenty-five or thirty men were needed to operate a big illusion, now a half dozen will suffice. Stationed in front of a gigantic switchboard covered with hundreds of levers, three or four men control the many contrivances. Nearly every part of the complex scene is thus manipulated. Each ship, steamboat, etc., that moves across the scene, instead of being drawn by a stagehand, is under the direct management of the operator. These pieces are all set on wheels and run along tiny rails. The piece is equipped with an electric motor or small power, the current is communicated through the rails, and thus the piece can be accurately guided to the desired point.

The numberless parts of scenery are likewise governed from the operators' platform. The view of a "devasted city," which greets the eye of the spectator after the great catastrophe, showing huge masses of tangled wreckage, is brought about by a simple movement of a lever by the operator, who thus lowers from view the painted representations of the streets of the city in its natural aspect, while with another movement of a different lever the piles of wreckage are brought up in their place.

New schemes are invented every year to perfect the illusions. The "thunder car" is an example. This is an entirely new scheme for making a noise resembling thunder, is a good deal simpler to operate that the old method, and far more realistic. The car is a heavy truck, weighing about 150 pounds, equipped with four wheels each of which is corrugated. This vehicle runs in a trough of two inch planking, which extends across the building, a distance of forty feet. At either end of the car is fastened a cable, which runs on a set of pulleys underneath from one end of the runway to the other, and attached to a motor.

As the car runs back and forward along this roadway of planking the corrugated wheels give forth a rumbling noise somewhat similar to that of a vehicle crossing a bridge, but multiplied a hundred times in volume. The car is directed by the operator, who can cause it to travel to and fro as rapidly as he wishes. The sound created closely resembles thunder.

Thunder was made in former days by hitting a huge skin similar to that used in drums drawn tightly across a square wooden frame. The stick was like the ordinary drum stick, but larger. With this instrument a fairly good imitation of the rumbling and booming of thunder could be made, but with nothing like the volume and realism of the modern "thunder car."

Another great improvement has been made in the device to imitate the shrieking of the wind. The old contrivance was a hollow wooden cylinder about three feet in diameter, with numerous slats running from end to end, three inches apart. Over this cylinder was stretched tightly a sheet of heavy canvas. Upon turning the handle of the cylinder the slats scraped against the canvas and gave a good reproduction of the sound of shrieking wind. gheoxe. fofkimneoicfdkcrfvhrhstsl

The modern "wind shrieker" consists of a huge galvanized iron funnel, at the bottom of which are fifty or more small whistless of different shapes and sounds. Underneath these is the mouth of a pipe attached to a powerful blower, run by a motor. The air rushing into the mouth of the funnel at first resembles the noise of a gale through areaways and around corners or whistling through rigging and trees.

With a slight movement of the lever controlling the blower, the operator can cause this devicce to whistle softly, gradually increasing in intensity until a cyclone seems about to turn loose.

The terrific crashes which accompany lightning are produced by streaming nearly a hundred one-pound iron balls from a height of ten feet upon a steel plate.

The balls are drawn to the top of the "crash" elevator, where they are suspended in a pocket. With a touch of a lever the operator releases the bottom of this pocket and the mass of iron globes fall upon the steel plate below. Then, having created the awful and terrifying racket, the balls rush down a steep trough of heavy planking, giving forth a close imitation of the rumbling that often follows a lightning crash. At the end of this trough there is another pocket into which the balls gather themselves, ready to drop another ten feet at the operator's command. After which they once more run down to another pocket. Following the third crash the balls scurry to and fro down a board runway, built zigzag fashion, heightening the thunder effect, and at last run into the pocket at the bottom of the elevator, ready to be drawn to the top for a repetition of the storm.

The old-fashioned way was by hand power. A wooden machine about four feet high, had a small cylinder, about a foot in diameter, and two feet long, resting in two upright supports. At intervals on this cylinder were projections about an inch high and three inches long. Against the sides of the cyclinder on both sides were tightly pressed long hickory slats. As the crank of the cyclinder was turned the projections would force outward the stiff slats, which would fly back against the revolving barrel with a resounding crash.

Even the little lighthouse is operated from the platform. This apparently contains a flash light like that at Sandy Hook, which in one instant gleams brilliatly in one direction and then, revolving, throws its light into another territory. The light of this miniature lighthouse s governed by clockwork from an ordinary clock.

At the back upon one of the axles is an eccentric shaped cyclinder. As the larger part of this eccentric revolves it meets the wire and forms the contact which lights the globe in the lighthouse. Then, passing, the smaller part of the eccentric, of course, interrupts the connection, the light goes out, and the effect of the flash is complete. Winding up the clock at the beginning of the show, it runs continuously until the end, the light breaking out brightly, then dying out again, requiring no more of the operator's attention.

The cloud effect is worked altogether by means of the stereopticon and the stereopticon too shows, by means of a "cloud film," the first few clouds of the approaching storm as they pass over the "doomed city." As the storm gradually grows greater the film changes until the whole sky is filled with rushing black clouds that have a most natural look.

The old way or reproducing a moon by means of a light thrown upon a transparent drop at the back of the stage is now done away with. All this is now worked by the stereopticon from the front of the house, and the present year even a better combination has been made by combining the moon and cloud machines.

The star effect is also new. In former days this effect was gained by making tiny holes in the back drop. Behind these holes were hung lamps to give the desired effect. This year each one of the stars is a tiny electric lamp of one volt power, or one-sixth of a candle power. They are all on one side of the curtain toward the audience, and so give an almost exact imitation of stars. The operator can make them twinkle brightly or cause them to fade away at will.

The falling rain is another of the stereopticon effects, and is nothing more than a film made to resemble rain, revolving swiftly in the machine.

The sunrise is also a new effect very much more realistic than the one formerly made, which was simply a red light shining through a transparent background. Now the sunrise is in front of the back drop at the bottom. Here are placed many lights in pink, red, purple, amber and green colored globes, which, combined with what is known as a "sun box"—a mass of about five hundred red and white globes in a large square box at the top of the files in front—throws the light over the whole back curtain or stage sky as the imaginary sun comes up.

The bolt lightning is made with the stereopticon or spot light. This machine works on a swivel and can be turned in every direction. In it is placed a slide with a representation of a streak of zigzag lightning. Over the aperture the operator places his hand, and then when the storm is at its height he turns the light so as to shine on different points of the back curtain, at each position rapidly running his hand up and down in front of the light, thus giving the quickness of the flash.

The flashes of lightning are brought about by the contact of iron and carbon, and are controlled by levers operating flashes in different parts of the stage sky.

The device to produce the effect of the patter of rain is a cylinder about six feet in diameter, lined with tin. The cylinder is swung on an axle, and filled with pebbles and shot. Upon turning slowly the sound is made similar to that of the first few falling drops of a rain, while upon revolving faster the sound broadens into a close resemblance of the noise made by a heavy rainstorm.

One of the improvements is that in the operation of miniature railroad trains, which lend a natural appearance to a city in its workday aspect. Each engine weighs about fifty pounds, and is weighted down with lead to keep it from jumping the rails. As it is not possible to have a third rail, the regular rails are charged with electricity, and thus the current is sent to the locomotive, which contains a tiny one-eighth horse-power motor.

To produce flame effects a small pipe conects with a blower underneath the scene. Over the mouth of the pipe is a quantity of red silk gauze. This material is cut in long strips to resemble flames. As the time for the fire to break out comes the operator releases a small quantity of air, which, acting upon the silk gauze, blows it into an upright position, increasing in power until the long strips of silk are swept upward by the pressure where they remain suspended, waving, to and fro, in close imitation of real flames, underneath, glaring brightly or drying out, being a cluster of red globes. The smoke is provided by means of "smoke pots," guaranteed to produce plenty of smoke and no flame.

KIND HEARTED KING.

Los Angeles Times: Of Alfonso, the young king of Spain, an art dealer said the other day:

"Alfonso deserves a happy married life, for he is a very fine young man.

"A friend of mine has a studio in Paris. Alfonso bought two of his pictures, and took a fancy to the man himself. He honored him, one afternoon, with a visit.

"The painter's studio was on the fourth floor of an old house in the Latin Quarter. The king asked the concierge, or janitor, if the painter was in, and the janitor ignorant of the identity of the royal visitor, replied:

"'Yes, young man. Fourth floor back.'"

"The king started up the old, steep, dusty and dark stairs. He had reached the second floor when the concierge, poking his head out of his little office, shouted:

"'Look here, young fellow, do me a favor, will you?'"

"'With pleasure,' said the king. 'What is it?'

"'Just carry this wash up to your friend,' said the concierge, tossing to the monarch a huge bundle tied in a white sheet. 'And tell him the woman left it this morning.'

"So the young king of Spain carried to the artist his big bag of laundry, and placed it, with a hearty laugh, on a settee.

"'Your laundry, he said, 'which the woman left here this morning.'

"The artist was embarrassed and shocked.

"'But, Your majesty, 'why have you brought it up?' he stammered.

"'The concierge asked me to,' said the king.

"'But even if, in his ignorance he did, you should——'

"'Oh, see here,' the king interrupted, laughing, 'why not? No matter who you are, it would be cruel and silly to refuse a favor to a fellow-creature when you could easily save him a journey up four flights of stairs.'"

JAPANESE RAILWAY ODDITY.

Some of the institutions of Japanese railways are peculiar to that country. One of these is a smear of paint across the windows of third-class carriages, says the Kansas City Journal. This is made necessary because thousands of native travelers in Japan, accustomed to only paper walls for letting in light, have no knowledge of glass. Its utter transparency leads them to believe that the window is simply a hole in the side of the car. With painful results many native passengers have stupidly attempted to stick their heads through the glass. For a long time ambulances from receiving hospitals had to meet nearly every train arriving in Japanese cities, and hence the streak of paint is a warning to the Oriental farmer from the back country that there is something more than atmosphere in the window.

AFRAID OF THE RESULT

County Republicans May Run Independent Candidate for Sheriff.

His Landing Second Place Would Insure Republican Victory.

The Republicans of St. Louis county are advocating an independent Republican candidate for sheriff, as a safeguard against letting the Democrats gain control of the office. It is hardly believed the independent man could beat Bates, but the party members who are behind the scheme hope to land the second Republican in second place, so that if Bates were ejected from office the position would still be in the possession of the party.

The way things are now it is much feared by leading Republicans that Bates will be disqualified if elected to office, and that the place will go to John Brady, the Democratic nominee, as second choice. Everything possible will be done to prevent this, but if the courts should decide against the present sheriff, in case the matter was pushed through, Brady would be the next sheriff, and the Democrats would be in a position to build up a much stronger organization all over the county.

Victor A. Dash, chief clerk to the clerk of district court, and fomerly an under sheriff when W. C. Sargent was in office, has been approached with a view to having him ule independently, and Mr. Sargent himself has also been urged to enter the race. Other names have been under consideration, but, so far as can be learned, no particular man has as yet been selected to get into the game.

It will be no simple matter to put the candidate in the running even after a suitable one has authorized the use of his name. The statute reads that 10 per cent of the total vote cast in 1904 is necessary before the independent can take his position as a candidate. In 1904 the total vote of the county was 14,317, making it necessary for 1,432 voters to sign the petition for the new candidate to file. It is also provided that the signers must be men who did not vote at the primary election. Probably that many signers who did not vote at the primaries can be secured, but it will be a pretty big task.

The splitting of the Republican vote would be much more apt to throw victory to Brady election day than if Bates were in the field alone, but if Bates is elected it seems to be a generally understood fact that ouster proceedings will be brought to get him out of office, because of the agreement he had with Miles, binding himself to pay $500 if Miles would file, an amount in excess of that allowed by law, to be spent in getting the nomination. The Republicans would very much dislike to see a Democratic sheriff, and they will exert every effort to prevent Brady's election.

The law says that regularly nominated candidates shall have until Oct. 15 to make their final filing for election, and it is understood that the independent candidates must have their filings in within the same period, although the county auditor's office does not seem very positive on that point, the question not having been raised before, it is said.

CARELESS HUNTER INSTANTLY KILLED

Winona, Minn., Oct. 2.—Charles Schnipp, aged about 18, son of Michael Schnipp, was accidentally killed at Bluff siding, Sunday afternoon. He was handling a gun preparatory to going hunting, and started to rest it on the tongue of a wagon. The stock missed the tongue, the trigger caught on the tongue and the weapon was discharged, the charge passing through the neck and head, causing instant death.

HEARING CONTINUED.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 2.—Hearing of the government ouster suit against the Terminal Railway association on the grounds of alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, was resumed today before Special Commissioner Saumbler. Former Attorney General Boyd, senior counsel for the government, is attempting to show by testimony of merchants and other business men shipping to and from St. Louis that the Terminal association causes delay in the transportation of freight.

UNITED IRISH LEAGUE.

Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—The annual convention of the United Irish League of America was opened in Witherspoon hall here today with about 500 delegates in attendance. The anniversary of the landing of Commodore John Barry of the American navy in Philadelphia in 1853 was observed by the convention before the business of the meeting was taken up, and a number of addresses in tribute to the memory of the commodore were delivered by delegates.

CAREFUL DOCTOR

Prescribed Change of Food Instead of Drugs.

It takes considerable courage for a doctor to deliberately prescribe only food for a despairing patient, instead of resorting to the usual list of medicines.

There are some truly scientific physicians among the present generation who recognize and treat conditions as they are and should be treated regardless of the value to their pockets. Here's an instance:

"Four years ago I was taken with severe gastritis and nothing would stay on my stomach, so that I was on the verge of starvation.

"I heard of a doctor who had a summer cottage near me—a specialist from New York—and as a last hope, sent for him.

"After he examined me carefully he advised me to try a small quantity of Grape-Nuts at first, then as my stomach became stronger to eat more.

"I kept at it and gradually got so I could eat and digest three teaspoonfuls. Then I began to have color in my face, memory became clear, where before everything seemed a blank. My limbs got stronger and I could walk. So I steadily recovered.

"Now after a year on Grape-Nuts I weigh 153 lbs. My people were surprised at the way I grew flashy and strong on this food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

"There's a reason."

WEST END

REV. MADSEN WELCOMED

Pastor of Norwegian Danish M. E. Church Given Reception.

He Has Just Returned From Four Months' Stay Abroad.

Rev. H. K. Madsen and Mrs. Madsen were the guests of honor at a reception held last evening at the church, Twenty-first avenue west and First street.

They have just returned from a stay of four months in Norway and the gathering last evening was in the nature of a welcome home for them. Mr. and Mrs. Madsen arrived in Duluth Saturday morning from Chicago, and Mr. Madsen preached his first sermon on his return Sunday morning.

The reception began at 8 o'clock and with the strains of music played by the church orchestra, the guests of honor were ushered in. The choir sang several numbers and Miss Minnie Olson gave a vocal solo. A prayer was offered by Rev. P. Jensen.

The address of welcome was given by J. J. Moe. He spoke of the work that had been accomplished by Mr. Madsen during his pastorate and of the pleasure it gave the congregation to have him back in Duluth again. Mr. Madsen responded, telling something of his trip and the gratification felt by him and his wife upon being cordially welcomed home.

Refreshments were served by the members of the Ladies' Aid society.

The Madsens were in Norway four months. On their return, they attended the conference of the Norwegian M. E. church in Chicago.

"We had a very enjoyable stay in Norway," said Mr. Madsen yesterday. "The country has had a good year and the people are happy and contented with their new rule. The majority of the people wanted a kingdom and they are more than satisfied with the consummation of their wishes. King Haakon is greatly loved by his people."

RETURNS TO CALIFORNIA.

But L. W. Hill Will Sell Out There and Come Back.

L. W. Hill, who last week came to Duluth with the intention of closing out his real estate holdings here and reinvesting his money in California, where he has a flourishing ranch, has returned to the golden West, to dispose of his ranch.

As announced in this column last week, Mr. Hill is so much impressed with Duluth as a place for investment and as a residence city that he will make his home here in the future and will sell all the property he now owns in California.

Mr. Hill owns considerable property in the neighborhood of Twenty-eighth avenue west.

A New Way.

"P. J. Cromwell, the Jungle."

That is the way it reads on the register of the Esmond hotel in the West end.

After the name had been written on the book, the clerk twirled the register around and glanced at it.

"Can give you a good room, Mr. Cromwell," he said. "How is everything in Chicago?"

This one was easy because every one has either read or heard of the book, but hotel clerks are often called upon to decipher some difficult puzzles placed on the registers by prankish guests. One man recently registered at the Esmond from "La X." That was easy, too, for it was obvious that La Crosse, Wis., was the place meant.

Bergman is Surprised.

Emil Bergman, of 2115 West Fourth street, was tendered a surprise party last evening by a number of his friends, the occasion being his birthday. He was presented with a beautiful chair and the evening was passed very pleasantly. Among those present were Misses Esther and Judith Anderson, Esther Skagerberg, Annie Erickson, Alice Sand, Marie Schelander, Minnie Johnson, Agnes Olson and Hilda Bergman and Messrs. Arthur Sundeen, Charles Carlson, Nels Bergman, Erick Bergman, George Sjoselius, Dunner and Nordberg. Mesdames Nordberg and Esther Johnson were also present.

West End Shortrails.

J. J. Frawley of St. Paul is registered at the Esmond.

Oct. 16 to 20 have been decided upon as the dates for the annual bazar of Bethany Lutheran church.

Rev. J. W. Robinson's term as pastor of Grace M. E. church, in the West end, expired Sunday, but so urgent is the wish of the congregation to have him remain that the conference at Minneapolis will probably assign him to the church again.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Swedish Baptist church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Jacob Paleen, 2629 West Fifth street.

Do you want the swellest hats? Do you want to save a dollar? Bring your old hat to be remodeled. We know how. Pearson's, 1814 Piedmont avenue.

The Swedish Christian Sick Benefit society will hold its regular meeting Friday evening at Sloan's hall.

William F. Schnuckle, proprietor of the Zenith broom factory, leaves this week for Oklahoma to buy six carloads of broom corn. He goes with the expectation of paying high prices for it. While the crop was good this year, it was damaged by late rains.

The Juten Shoe company is remodeling the interior of its store.

P. J. Jones of Spokane, Wash., is a guest at the Esmond.

J. U. Lemon and B. T. Greene of St. Paul are registered at the Esmond.

E. E. Dorsey of Proctor is a guest at the Esmond.

Rev. Gerhard Moe will speak Thursday evening at the First Swedish Baptist church. Rev. Mr. Moe has been preaching this summer at Crookston, and is now on his way to Chicago, to resume his studies at the university of Chicago.

S. Grefestad of 2427 West Sixth street, director of the well-known Swedish musical organization, the Gauken, was pleasantly surprised the other evening by the members of the club. He was presented with a beautiful violin.

Workmen are busy unloading machinery for the power house of the Great Northern Power company in the West end. It is being taken from the cars at Twentieth avenue and hauled, some by rollers and some on wagons, to the power house, by way of Michigan street.

If your are in need of medicine you need the best. Go to the Lion Drug store.

TOMORROW IS THE LAST DAY OF Our Great Semi-Annual Drug Sale!

THE PANTON & WHITE COMPANY'S cut prices were right at the start—other houses had to revise their prices to meet ours at the commencement of the sale. This is only another illustration that we are leaders, not followers. THE PEOPLE OF DULUTH AND SUPERIOR have long realized this fact, and it was never more thoroughly demonstrated than by the attendance of buyers at our Drug Counter Monday and Tuesday. The prices quoted below are for our Retail Customers—Positively not sold to dealers at these prices.

RAILROADS

AFTER NEW BUSINESS

Reported That Great Northern Will Parallel the Soo Road.

The Proposed Line is Projected in Central North Dakota.

It is reported unofficially from Hope, N. D., that the Great Northern is to have another line across Central North Dakota, in opposition to the Soo. It is announced that the line will start at Ayr, proceed in a westerly direction through Willow Lake county, cross the Cheyenne and strike the Cooperstown branch of the Soo somewhere between Cooperstown and Rogers. From that point it will parallel the Soo main line at Minot.

The proposed new line would draw considerable business coming Duluthward that otherwise would go to the new extension of the Soo when completed. According to the present survey the line will at no time be more than two miles distant from the present Soo line, thus serving the same country through practically the whole distance.

It is said this action on the part of the Great Northern in paralleling the Soo is due to the fact that within the last two years the Soo has built across the northern part of the state a line which cuts every one of the spurs from the main line of the Great Northern. The Great Northern is this year building a spur which begins from a few miles west of Minot and runs north until it nearly meets the main line of the Soo and then parallels that line and one of its spurs to the Canadian border. The greatest distance between the two lines is four miles, and at times they run within half a mile of each other.

TO PRESERVE YOUTH AND BEAUTY.

Every woman should be interested in preserving her youth and beauty. It is a simple matter if proper attention is given to the great natural laws of health. Keep the digestion sound, the habits regular; and clear skin, bright eyes and robust health are the sure reward.

Let every woman who values her health take Beecham's Pills—the great natural remedy for stomach, liver, kidneys and blood. They bring positive relief from the ills that beset womankind, and are the safest health preservative known to modern science. Every druggist sells them. 10 cents and 25 cents a box.

SANTA FE RUSHING WORK

To Complete Line From Galveston to San Francisco.

San Francisco, Oct. 2.—The Santa Fe is rushing work on its Belen cut-off, and it is reported that the next step of President Ripley will be to push the line to completion from Texico to San Angelo, and complete the Galveston line to San Francisco. In the country around Albuquerque the Santa Fe has to contend against several heavy curves, and the road in that section of the country is one of the most difficult on the line. The Belen cut-off will secure a grade of less than eight-tenths of 1 per cent as a maximum, and will allow the trains to make more speed. The cut-off will begin at Rio Puerco, and will run to Texico, to connect with the Santa Fe line at that point, thus giving trains easy access to Kansas City.

With the line completed as far as Texico, it will only be a short jump from that point to San Angelo, on the Santa Fe, and the through line from Galveston to San Francosci will be opened.

TAFT AS A LOBBYIST.

During the session of congress just closed Secretary of War Taft roused no little envy among members of both houses by the easy manner in which he promoted legislation of special interest in his department, says the Kansas City Journal. He had a bill passed by the house allowing the naval militia in the Philippines to use a government vessel stationed there. When the measure reached the senate the naval committee informed that no more meetings of the committee would be held. Mr. Taft, undaunted, saw each member of the committee and got a favorable report by polling them. Then the bill was passed during a lull in business and the senate adjourned without learning how the big secretary managed it.

JEWELS FOR BOOT HEELS.

Women whose jewel caskets metaphorically run over with precious gems may yield to the fashion, which is reported to have caught society's fancy in Paris, of studding the heels of dainty slippers with gleaming stones, says the Kansas City Journal. These may be all right at the "small dances," where jewels are worn with lavish and artistic profusion, but the instant such a mania reaches the street the fashion will cease to be attractive for the class of women who originally started it. The fear of highwaymen and the disgust at the imitations which almost defy detection will undoubtedly keep many from adopting what Parisian jewelers assert is a "fad" worthy of encouragement.

A Certain Cure for Croup—Used for Ten Years Without a Failure.

Mr. W. C. Bott, a Star City, Ind., hardware merchant, is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. His children have all been subject to croup and he has used this remedy for the past ten years, and though they much feared the croup, his wife and he always felt safe upon retiring when a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was in the house. His oldest child was subject to severe attacks of croup, but this remedy never failed to effect a speedy cure. He has recommended it to friends and neighbors and all who have used it say that it is unequaled for croup and whooping cough. For sale by all druggists.

QUEEN OF JERUSALEM.

Apropos of the Spanish queen's new title, Queen of Jerusalem, there is a claimant to that designation living in London, Princess Christofero, says the Kansas City Journal. She lives quietly in West Kensington, and is married to an Englishman, and has sons in the English army. She calls herself Queen of Jerusalem and Empress of Byzantium. Although not rich she keeps up a certain state and receives her adherents seated on a dias and with a canopy above her head. The members of the various royalist societies know her well. She attends the special services at the old chapel of St. Mary-in-the-Wardrobe, in the city, and heads the Jacobite procession, which once a year deposits wreaths on the statue of Charles I.

PASSENGERS PER TRAIN.

The average number of passengers in each railroad train in the United States in 1904 was 50.25. This represents a growth from about 39 a train in 1898, but is still far behind the development attained abroad, says the Kansas City Journal. In 1898 Germany carried an average of 71 persons in each train, and India had the large figure of 189. The development of the electric railway in this country and the frequent train service help to keep down the average. On each of the 212,000 miles of railway in 1904 there were carried an average of 104,198 passengers. That is to say, the aggregate passenger mileage of the country, according to the Railway World, divided by the mileage of the track, gives the figure named. In Germany, as far back as 1898, this figure was 342,000 persons; in France it was 283,000 in 1897; in India, 289,000, and in Austria, 214,000. The figures for Great Britain are not obtainable.

WHEN THE INDIAN UNBENDS.

It would brighten up the red man's reputation if a few more frivolous pale faces could take an occasional meal with a group of Navajo Indians on their native Arizona heath, as did Julian A. Dimock, a writer for Recreation.

"When the dinner hour found us far from the store," says he, "we often went to some nearby hogan, and joining the circle around the sage brush fire invited ourselves to dine with the family. Usually the dinner was of mutton, broiled over the coals on a gridiron improvised from pieces of heavy wire; ears of green corn roasted before the fire and a kind of ash cake made from corn ground with stones into a coarse meal, mixed with water and salt, wrapped in green husks and cooked in the ashes.

"Often the Indians were like a group of children; jokes passed back and forth and every one laughed between mouthfuls. Some merriment over a remark that seemed to have concerned me led me to ask for a translation, which was: 'The woman says that that one of the dogs has been carrying that you are using around in his mouth.' There was a single knife, and a family spoon did stirring duty in many cups, but the forks, being fingers, were individual.

"An Indian seated opposite me, with grave expression and dignified demeanor, seemed like a character from one of Cooper's tales. I looked for the passing of a pipe of peace and an Indian oration, but when this noble red man lifted his hand it was to reach forward and tickle with a feather one of the children. He then quickly resumed his former attitude and assumed an expression of outraged innocence when accused by the tickled child.'

THE SOURCE OF IT.

Candidate Cole is making his campaign for the governorship in Northern Minnesota on the "issue" of state development, which includes drainage, good roads and a campaign to attract immigration to the vacant lands of the state.

It's a splendid platform, too, and one of vast importance to Northern Minnesota. But as all the parties and all the people in this state believe in state development, there is no reason why Candidate Cole should replace Governor Johnson on this issue unless it is shown that the latter is unfriendly to the progress of the state, and that the former is the only champion of state development in the field.

As to this, there is not a single item of Candidate Cole's issue of state development that he did not take bodily out of Governor Johnson's recommendations to the legislature of 1905 at the beginning of his term. Candidate Cole is favorable to drainage. Here is what Governor Johnson told the legislature about drainage in January, 1905, before the voters knew there was an A. L. Cole of Walker:

> Vast tracts of lands located largely in the northern part of the state are at present a useless waste, because they are low, wet and untillable. This land drained would reclaim to the state countless acres rich in soil and capable of profitable cultivation. I urge upon your consideration the enactment of a law having for its purpose the drainage of this land under state supervision. To do this I recommend the establishment of a revolving fund * * * which would permit of a more rapid development of the drainage system and would relieve the legislature of future appropriations for drainage purposes.
> I deem it my duty also to call your attention to the national swamp land grant by which thousands of acres of swamp land were deeded to the state with the understanding and consideration that these lands were to be drained by the state. The duties and obligations thus imposed should be met, and the pledge made by the state to carry out its part of the agreement should most certainly be redeemed.

Good roads are a part of the state development campaign. Here is what Governor Johnson told the legislature of 1905 about that:

> The subject of good roads is prominent in the public mind, and there has been something done during recent years looking to the improvement of our highways. Suitable legislation is much desired, and I assume that you are sufficiently familiar with the situation to require no especial comment on the part of the executive. An increased tax for the road and bridge fund would undoubtedly accomplish good results, and state aid in township work would probably stimulate endeavor along this line.

Drainage and good roads are the foundation of state development, but the superstructure must be reared by a campaign for immigration. Here, too, Governor Johnson preceded Cole, as follows:

> Throughout the northern part of our commonwealth, large tracts of land are idle and unproductive because of the lack of people to till the soil. Our neighbors have been busy in the encouragement of settlers to locate with them, and within a very few years thousands of homeseekers have passed through our own state to find an abiding place in the Dakotas, Montana, Washington and Canada. Minnesota offers every advantage to the settler, and by well-directed effort a large proportion of people seeking new homes might be induced to locate in our own state, and materially aid in its growth and development. A state immigration society has been organized, but lacking state assistance, the result of their labor has naturally been limited. The establishment of a permanent bureau of immigration with sufficient funds to prosecute the work of urging settlers to locate here would result in great good.

Here, then, is the source of Candidate Cole's state development ideas, in the message of his opponent to the legislature in which Mr. Cole showed his first activity in behalf of the movement.

THE UNGRATEFUL RAILROADS.

It is perhaps too late to do anything about it now, but people are just becoming aware of the manner in which the railroads of the country have hoodwinked the government in the manner of disposing of their land grants.

The giving of vast areas of wild lands to railroads as a bonus for developing new territory was extravagant, perhaps, but when it was done it did not seem so, and the public was glad to get the railroads by giving away land whose ultimate value was not imagined by anybody, except perhaps the railroad promoters.

But the giving of these lands was surrounded by wholesome restrictions. It was not designed that they should be held for speculative advances, but it was intended that they should go into the possession of settlers at attractive prices. The government sells its own homestead lands for $1.25 per acre, and it was stipulated in every one of the land grant contracts that no railroad lands should be sold for more than twice that figure. This made the price very reasonable, and yet it gave the railroads a good return, because the lands cost them nothing.

So far as anybody has discovered, the railroads never violated this contract. No railroad has sold lands from its public grants at a higher price than $2.50 per acre. But they beat the government and the people on it, just the same, for there is more than one way to get around a little thing like that, and you can trust a railroad to find the way every time.

What the railroads did, in many cases, was to form outside corporations composed of their own officials, and to sell the lands to these corporations at modest figures. Some of them paid as much as $2.50 per acre, but many of them, since the buyers were also the sellers, went for merely nominal prices. The stockholders were plundered through such deals, but to the notion of many devotees of high finance, that is what stockholders were made for.

After the land grants had passed into the possession of these land companies, there was no restriction whatever upon their sale. They could be sold for $2.50 an acre, for $100 an acre, or tied up until the advance of civilization and settlement made them worth enough to make their owners willing to sell.

It has been suggested that proceedings should be instituted against such companies to restore these lands to the public domain. This might acomplish something, but most of the lands have passed into the hands of innocent purchasers, who have contributed handsome profits to the railroad land companies, and it is very doubtful if any large proportion of these lands could be restored. However, it is worth trying, at any rate, in view of the obvious fraud that was committed in thus evading the terms of the land grant contracts.

THEY ARE PROUD OF HIM.

This "apathy" about which the friends of Candidate Cole are talking so much was not evident in Duluth last evening when Governor Johnson addressed between 3,000 and 4,000 citizens of this community.

There were two "capacity" meetings, one in the West end and one at West Duluth, and besides those that were able to squeeze into the halls in which the meetings were held, there were several hundreds of others who were not so fortunate, and who had to go back home again.

If this is any indication, there is no apathy in Duluth, and if there is none of it applies to Governor Johnson.

As a matter of fact, however, the people of this city, like the people of the rest of the state, are proud of their governor. He is one of themselves, a man who was born on Minnesota soil and has spent his life upon it. He has risen from humble beginnings to the chief office in the gift of the people of his state, and he has conducted that office in a manner that has not only gained him the approval of his fellow-citizens of Minnesota, but no small fame abroad. So it is not surprising that the people love him, and turn out readily to hear him give an accounting to them of the work he has done during his first term as their chief executive.

The people not only turned out, but they greeted him warmly and even affectionately. They listened with deepest interest and respect to his straightforward narrative of what had been done during the past two years for the glory of the state and the peace and comfort of its people, and they marked by frequent and warm applause their appreciation of his excellent record.

His reception in Duluth must have been highly gratifying to the governor and encouraging to his friends. While last night's meetings were held in the western part of the city, many attended from the eastern end. Later in the campaign, though some little time before its close, the governor will address a Duluth audience once more, speaking next time in the Armory.

Today and tomorrow the governor is, circling the iron ranges, territory which one Cole partisan newspaper has been pleased to call the "enemy's country." The reports of the meetings that he is holding there today would hardly lead anybody to accept this description as conclusive. Though the governor has been instrumental in largely increasing the assessed valuations of the iron properties up there, the people will benefit from this act by having their own taxes reduced, and so far as the owners of the mines are concerned, they have never yet complained of an assessment for purposes of taxation, and it is highly improbable that they will complain of this.

The governor is in decidedly friendly territory this week, territory that will manifest its friendliness Nov. 6 by producing a very large number of ballots wherein his name shall be adorned with the "X" which is the highest sign of popular approval of a public official.

A LONG-LIVED CONVICT.

The case of Albert T. Patrick, convicted several years ago for the murder of Millionaire Rice, furnishes frequent new evidences of how slothfully Justice sometimes drags her feet.

Six years ago Rice was murdered, and six months later Patrick was convicted of murder in the first degree and condemned to die for the crime. While the evidence was largely circumstantial, and circumstantial evidence is deservedly under suspicion, particularly in serious crimes, there was not much doubt in the public mind that he was guilty. There appeared to be none in the minds of the jurors who heard all the evidence, or in the mind of the court that had the same opportunity of judging.

Yet Patrick is still alive, and his case has become a standing joke in the East if not all over the country.

The latest manifestation in the case is that 3,000 physicians of New York have joined in a petition for a delay of the execution of Patrick's sentence while they make a study of the case.

The skilled lawyers who have defended Patrick, who is a skilled lawyer himself, have exhibited a marvelous faculty for raking up technicalities on which to prolong his life. Year after year has sped on, and with one pretext or another Patrick has been kept out of the grasp of the electric chair. But the supply of technicalities appears to have been exhausted, and new methods are necessary. Hence the formidable petition in which so many New York physicians have participated.

These physicians have been led to believe that by a thorough study of the case they will find that Rice did not die from poison, as charged in the indictment against Patrick, but that he died a natural death.

If justice does not move more rapidly than it is moving in this case, Patrick himself will die a natural death before that waiting chair receives him.

THE PASSING SHOW.

If one good term ever deserved another, Governor Johnson's excellent first term does.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"With all the iron that is sent east from the upper lake regions, there is at present a big shortage of steel," said I. E. Mills of Pittsburg, Pa., at the Spalding. "The situation regarding raw materials is most phenomenal. Not in years has the demand for pig iron and open hearth steel been so active. Every plant of the Pittsburg companies is being pushed to their fullest capacity and if there was any way in which the output could be increased by the smallest margin it doubtless would be gladly done.

"Much of the enormous appropriations made by the steel corporation for improvements at the close of last year were for the establishment of blast furnaces and open hearth furnaces, in order that the demand for pig iron and open hearth steel might be supplied. One of the heavy expenses in the maintenance of a blast furnace is the power needed for the boilers which furnish steam to the huge blowing engines continually forcing air through the furnace system. Experiments have been made for many years on different processes for converting the escaping gases from the furnaces into power for running the plant, and it is now believed that the problem has been solved. In a new set of furnaces that are being built immense gas engines are being installed and by a system of purifying the gas from the furnace plant, it is rendered suitable for use in propelling these engines."

The bellboys at the leading Duluth hotels are pretty well used to celebreties, and it takes a big figure in the life of the nation to dazzle them, but for the last week or two one of the boys in a Duluth hostelry has been in a daze as the result of a visit from a mining expert from the West, who appears to have been an absent-minded man, or else something of a joker.

While the Westerner was engaged in a conversation with a friend in the writing room he recalled that he wanted to buy a postage stamp. Accordingly a bellboy was called to get the stamp. The boy came shuffling into the room, holding the stamp out on his tray. The Westerner, apparently engrossed in his conversation, reached in his pocket and pulled forth a hundred-dollar bill, which he tendered the bellboy in payment for the stamp.

The youth gave one glance at the bill. He gasped, gurgled and turned pale. His condition was so alarming that he attracted the attention of those in the room, and the bill immediately was exchanged for ten cents, with instructions to "keep the change." The boy did not say a word, but faded away quietly and in haste.

"Walker and some of the other towns up in the Leech lake country are developing into health resorts," said C. L. Murphy of St. Paul at the McKay. "Two diseases which affect mankind are greatly relieved and in most cases cured by a sojourn among the pines. Those who are in the first stages of lung trouble can, I believe, be permanently cured and made strong, and even those upon whom such diseases have made serious inroads may come out victors by living as much as possible in the fresh air of the pines.

"Hay fever always has been a puzzler to the physician, but as long as a person is in the pine woods of the North he does not seem to be bothered with it. Relief is the best that can be looked for for absolute cures have thus far been hopeless. The region around Walker and Leech lake has, they tell me, been pronounced by physicians as the best in Minnesota for throat and lung troubles and hay fever. This is largely because of the dry atmosphere, clay soil and the pines. Patients sent to Walker by physicians who are acquainted with the conditions as they exist there are not hampered by a lot of restrictions as to diet, etc., but are instructed to live almost entirely in the open air."

Need a New Vocabulary.

Indianapolis News: If Secretary Wilson insists upon food products being given their right names, we can foresee the gradual disappearance of those good old nances—olive oil, potted chicken, strawberry jam, maple syrup, veal loaf and mince meat.

A Conundrum.

Mr. Bryan's Commoner: An exchange says that Mr. Rockefeller is "trying to pat the public on the back." But how can Mr. Rockefeller do it and keep both of his hands in the public's pockets?

Pleasantly Busy.

Springfield Union: Texas is having difficulty in finding a man for Senator Bailey's place. Most of the Rough Riders are already dining table d'hote at the public crib.

With a Big Majority.

Chicago Record-Herald: John Smith is running for congress in Iowa. He ought to win easily if he can poll the full John Smith vote.

THE WEATHER.

It looked remarkably like a northeaster was impending this morning. The wind, what there was of it, was in the northeast, the skies were dark and threatening, and it was cool. But later the clouds broke, and the threats paled away. It was still cloudy, but the appearance of the skies was not at all suggestive of rain. The weather man sees no likelihood of rain tonight or tomorrow, though he says it will be partly cloudy and warmer. Yesterday's highest temperature was 70 degs. and last night's lowest was 48 degs.

A year ago today it was fair and cool.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Rainy weather continued Monday and last night in the Ohio and lower Mississippi valleys, Gulf and Atlantic states attending the disturbance central over the Gulf of Mexico. The barometer remains high over New England states. Pressures have fallen and temperatures have quite generally risen in northern districts during the past twenty-four hours with the exception that it is cooler in Alberta with temperature close to the freezing point there. Pressure disturbances also overlie Saskatchewan, British Columbia and Arizona. Partly cloudy weather is indicated for this locality tonight and Wednesday."

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, Oct. 2.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Wednesday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity: Partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday. Warmer tonight. Fresh winds becoming southerly.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Wednesday: Wisconsin: Fair and warmer tonight. Wednesday fair with warmer in east portion.

Minnesota: Partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday. Warmer tonight in east portion.

North Dakota: Showers tonight or Wednesday.

South Dakota: Fair and warmer tonight. Wednesday partly cloudy.

Upper Lakes: Light to fresh winds becoming southerly with fair weather tonight and Wednesday.

The State Campaign.

Minneapolis Irish Standard: As the state campaign progresses it becomes more and more evident that the position which Governor Johnson occupies before the people is unassailable. The campaign this fall, in so far as the state is concerned, cannot be very complicated. The only reason that Republican partisans have for urging A. L. Cole, the Republican candidate for governor, is that he is a Republican. On that basis alone they ask the voters of this state to reject Governor Johnson and elect Mr. Cole. Will that appeal meet with success? We do not think so. The people these days are taking a deeper interest in political affairs than merely asking what emblem a candidate carries. The issue in this state this fall is clear. It is John A. Johnson, with a splendid record behind him, on one side, against A. L. Cole, who received the Republican nomination simply because he was the most available candidate with which to defeat Mr. Jacobson, who was the real choice of a majority of the delegates to the last Republican convention. The corporate interests that were afraid of Mr. Jacobson nominated Mr. Cole. Doubtless he looks to them for his election. This is all there is to the fight. The Republican candidate hopes that the name "Republican" will carry him to success. If this were a conflict between the two parties he would be right. Governor Johnson was not elected two years ago by his own party, but by independent voters who could let their partisanship sink out of sight in their endeavor to secure a good public servant. It cannot be successfully denied that Governor Johnson has met the highest expectations of his best friends. If he was worthy of their votes two years ago he is doubly worthy of them now. The independent voters who elected him two years ago will re-elect him this year. As it stands today, Mr. Cole is the candidate of those who want him governor nor simply that they may obtain the appointive offices. The feeling is abroad throughout this state that Governor Johnson should be re-elected. That feeling will increase as the days go by. A comparison of the two candidates upon the stump will only increase the belief that there is no comparison between the two men in ability and fitness for the place.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: What a woman likes most about getting presents is trying to find out what they cost.

A nice thing about living in a flat is how much you will enjoy a real home when you get it.

A man is so constituted that he would kick against drinking whisky if the doctor prescribed it.

The only time a small boy appreciates his relatives is when he has a birthday and they remember him.

When a woman has a new hat it is a sign she tells her friends it cost twice as much as it did, and her husband half as much.

The Bedtime Troop.

A scurry of feet on the bedroom stair,
A titter along the hall—
And this is the charge of the night brigade,
To capture me heart and all.

And there is the Captain, Sleepy Eyes,
And there is Lieutenant Dream,
While the only arms of love are theirs
As into my heart they stream.

A low, little laugh as they form in line.
Robed in their slumber gowns—
No armor rude with its harsh intrude,
No helmets that clank and frown;
They come for the hug and the goodnight kiss,
And unto my heart they bring
The song of the bedtime troops of love,
With its old ineffable ring.

I sigh as I think of the lonesome folk
In their fortresses alone,
Where never the children charge with their cheer,
Where the bedtime song's unknown;
Who sit in their childless realm aloof
Nor ever behold at all
The Sleepy Eyes and the Golden Dream
Come marching down through the hall.

Who never have felt around their necks
Nor ever upon their lips,
The soft caress of a little arm,
Or a kiss with its sweet eclipse,
I do not know what I would do
Were the bedtime troops away.
And I almost dread the time to come
When they'll march to the grown-up fray.

In single file, to a merry tune,
Whispering, wild with glee,
They turn the knob and open the door
And rush to the heart of me,
Retreat is vain, resist I won't,
So on my lap they leap—
The troops of the night brigade that come
For the kiss of the tender sleep.

—Baltimore Sun.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

The Forty-sixth legislative committee met at the office of F. W. Eaton yesterday and decided on the call for the convention. Those present were: R. B. Wallace, Carlton county; H. C. Kendall, St. Louis county; Maj. C. M. Wilson, Cook county, by proxy, F. W. Eaton; E. S. Case, Wadena; Maj. C. A. Ruffel, Gull River. H. C. Kendall was chosen chairman, and R. B. Wallace secretary.

The Duluth Lumber company's mill will shut down this season on the largest work in its history. Unless more logs can be received from the Aminicon river next week the mill will close for the season without filling all its orders. This year has witnessed a remarkable boom in Duluth lumber, and the lumbermen express confidence in the future making Duluth one of the leading markets of the world. Minnesota lumber has found its way to Chicago and New York this year.

Sibley & Bearinger of Saginaw, Mich., are interested in the Grand Haven Lumber company and part owners of the Pillsbury tract of pine land bought last week.

Nearly all the space in the county fair buildings has been taken. There is not going to be room enough for the exhibitors.

Dr. Ames' campaign badges have reached Duluth. The handsome visage of the valiant doctor ornaments one side of the little trinket, and a dinner pail, emblematic of his friendship for the workingmen, is conspicuous on the reverside side.

A gang of workmen began today to transform the first floor of the Merchants' hotel. Loyahan & Cox, the commission merchants, will occupy the basement.

H. C. Bradley and wife of Worcester, Mass., are visiting friends in Duluth.

Dell Cooke, a nephew of Jay Cooke, was in the city last evening. He is operating a large wheat farm near Glyndon.

James Billings, formerly of the Hubbard County bank at Hubbard, Minn., arrived in the city yesterday with his family, and will make Duluth his future home.

Vesselmen are demanding 7½ cents for wheat to Buffalo, and one charter has been made at 7 cents—the highest rate ever paid.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Cannon Falls Beacon (Rep.): It would be interesting in these reform times, to know how much money the American Protective Tariff League put into the second district on behalf of Mr. McCleary. Mr. McCleary undoubtedly thinks he has saved the district to the standpatters, but we would not be surprised if in November it would be disclosed that he had made enough independents to lose the district to the Democrats.

Red Wing News: In about two months the Ski club will begin to have runs. Doesn't tempus fugit a few?

Austin Register: With all his standpatism, with all his financial backing, with all his education and oratory McCleary only had 279 votes to spare in the Second congressional district. And now that the first heat is over, Mac has a race with the most popular Democrat in the district for his opponent. Verily the way of the man who stands pat is hard, and expensive for the American Protective League to travel.

Virginia Virginian: The initiative and referendum ought to receive a pretty good boost from the next legislature. A large number of the newly-elected members have pledged themselves to further the reform. With the initiative and referendum and a graduated income tax in force most of our political ills would disappear.

Breckenridge Gazette: Stand-pat McCleary, who is one of the greatest clogs on the wheels of progress that Minnesota ever sent to Congress, defeated his opponent, Gilbert Guttersen, in the Second district, by the pitiful majority of 297 votes. This ought to make the Little Schoolmaster sit up and take notice of the fact that he is somewhat out of line with the sentiment of his district, but it probably won't.

Two Harbors Iron Trade Journal: It's a disgrace to the state of Minnesota that the chief advocate of the "stand pat" idea or the protection for trusts, should be one of her congressmen, James T. McCleary.

Anoka Free Press: Defeated office-seekers are reminded that people take no particular delight in gazing at sore thumbs. In fact such a course nauseates them.

Elk River Star-News: Several of the old senatorial combine got left by the wayside. Still there are enough left to get up a new one.

Little Falls Democrat: A contemporary declares that uprights desks are again coming into vogue. What the bank depositors would prefer is men of the same design to occupy them.

Le Sueur Center Leader: It is a curious fact that when the police break up a spiritualist seance, they never seem to scrike a happy medium.

Austin Transcript: Thirteen voting machines were used in Minneapolis at the primaries last week and within half an hour after the polls closed the returns of each machine were in the hands of the clerks at the court house. There was little trouble in teaching voters how to work the machines and they should be in use everywhere.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago Daily News: Little acts of kindness always come home to roost.

Most men think it is all up with them when they are down.

A pretty girl looks more so when the right man tells her so.

The longer a man aims, the more likely he is to miss the target.

Trying to induce some people to be thankful is a thankless task.

Love enables a man to reach the limit of either happiness or misery.

A woman considers a man worth only what she can induce him to give up.

Men dislike to blame themselves for their own faults, so they blame women for theirs.

A woman's face may be her fortune, but a man's cheek often enables him to acquire a fortune.

What a delightful old world this would be if fussy people would only lose their tempers for keeps.

Of course, a woman can't give her correct age when it is impossible for her to remember the day she was born.

Every girl makes at least one mistake on her wedding day—and that is when she thinks all her girl acquaintances envy her.

Evolution With a Plutocrat.

When my roll was very wee,
Poor my front,
Gotrox merely greeted me
With a grunt.

But I toiled from early dawn,
Glad to plod,
And he met me later on
With a nod.

I had plunkets by and by,
Quite a pile,
Whereupon from Gotrox I Got a smile.

Pile waxed fatter every day,
Grew and grew,
Gotrox as he passed would say:
"Howdy do."

I've a million now, gee whiz!
More, mayhap,
And his greeting to me is,
"Dear old chap."

—Pittsburg Post.

He Works Overtime.

Washington Post: An Omaha woman wants a divorce because her husband spends all his time at home making love to her. In other words, he works more than eight hours a day at the job, and she wants him expelled from the union.

Humiliating Coincidence.

Cleveland Leader: It is an evil and humiliating coincidence which fixes the attention upon the weakest spot and the greatest danger in American civilization. The Georgia mob has shamed the United States before the world when this country is obliged to take a small and virtually new-born sister republic to task for its failure to enforce the supremacy of its laws.

THE HUMORIST.

Her Husband—Well everybody pities me now.

Philadelphia Record: "With all your wealth are you not afraid of the proletariat?" asked the delver in sociological problems.

"No, I ain't!" snapped Mr. Newrich. "We boil all our drinking water."

Pele Mele: Blanc—I met a woman named Noir the other day, and I wondered whether she was your wife. I don't know Mme. Noir. What is she like?

Noir—She's a woman of 50, she does not look more than 40; she imagines she's only 30, dresses as if she were 20, and talks as if she were 10.

"Alas! sir," she replied, "it is the anniversary of my husband's death. The lion swallowed him."

Chicago News: "Women," growled old Baldwin, "have long hair because they are not yet civilized."

"Well," rejoined Mrs. Baldwin, "if you call that head of yours, which reminds me of a quinine capsule, a product of civilization, I prefer to remain a savage."

Judge: Inquiring Female—And what do you do, captain, when it's too rough to go out in the boat?

Captain—Well, ma'am, if the wreck ain't too far off we generally tries to rig a line to her, an' then we send out the breeches buoy.

Inquiring Female—Oh! the poor little fellow! But don't his parents object?

Judge: Mistress—What on earth are you doing with that auto horn?

Bridget—Oi always carry wan, mum, to warn the mistress to kape out av me way.

Catholic Standard: DeKiter—Wouldn't you like to read this new book of mine?

Kandor—No, thank you.

DeRiter—It's Cleverly's latest novel. I just bought it.

Kandor—Oh, let's have it! I thought you meant you wrote it.

Homekeeping Husbands.

New York Sun: Hear ye not the hum of mighty workings? The air vibrates with thought waves. Low rumbles, like distant thunder, sweep along the horizon. Occasional flashes of light cleave the clouds. All of it is caused by the bombardment of wisdom now going on in regard to various questions of human life. Forgetful of Solomon, Lord Chesterfield and Martin F. Tupper, wise men and women from Eastport to Seattle are pouring out the stores of their experience in letters to newspapers, telling the rest of the world how to live.

In the face of all this how can any one have the effrontery to go wrong? Let us join the humble camp followers astern of this great army of thinkers and ponder at least one piece of wisdom. A woman in Chicago tells other women: "Keep your husband home at night." Good advice. Keep him at home and sing to him that touching ballad, "He never cares to wander from his own fireside."

Dearly beloved sisters, try to bear in mind that in order to keep your husbands home o' nights you will have to stay there too. No more the glorious pomp and circumstance of evening hats for you. To the dust and silence of the storeroom the opera cloak and the white kid elbow gloves. At home by the domestic fireside with "hubby," what shall be the purport of these empty gauds?

No more the gladsome prance of "hubby" in the front hall, accompanied by the cheering call up the stairs, "Sis, I have two seats for tonight for the Celestial Theater. Get your wings on, angel." No, "hubby" has come home to stay home. No more white light district after the show for him. No more broiled live lobster and champagne. A home made Welsh rabbit, the chill of the chafing dish, and a bottle of beer off the window sill for him and for you.

Dost like the picture? If so, for how long will you like it? Who'll get tired of it first? Alas we see a vision of homekeeping "hubby," ere the winter has sped away, sitting in the lee of his kitchen chimney and murmuring to himself: "It is better to dwell in the corner of a housetop than with a brawling woman in a wide house."

Intervention Not Annexation.

New York Times: It will be understood, we hope, not only by the people of the United States but by the world, that intervention is not annexation.

—Needs.

Washington Post: Pittsburg is to have a new $10,000,000 union station, but from the stories we have been hearing about her, she is more in need of an addition to her jail.

THE FIRST BASE-BURNER EVER MADE WAS MADE BY P. P. STEWART NEARLY 75 YEARS AGO. BEST THEN—BEST NOW.

ABSOLUTE AND POSITIVE PROOF AS TO THE SUPERIOR QUALITIES OF "STEWART" STOVES AND RANGES!

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN STOVES READ THIS:

During the past week a customer came to our store and asked to see a "Stewart Base Burner." We showed him the "Splendid Stewart" Base Burner and explained to him a few of the many superior points about a "Stewart" Heater as compared with any other, whereupon he said: "Oh, yes, I know the "Stewarts" are all right and I would not have anything else. I have one in my home that I have used constantly for twenty years." This customer was Mr. J. H. Moork of 6211 La Vaque street, West Duluth.

This is certainly the most powerful and convincing argument in the world for a "Stewart" stove. A bank, a trust company, an insurance company, or, in fact, any institution is judged by what it has done, and not by what it promises to do. While other dealers take full page advertisements making promises for their stoves, we show you what the "Grand Old Stewarts" have done, can do, and are doing right today in Duluth.

READ WHAT MR. MOORK SAYS ABOUT HIS STOVE.

Size of house heated, six good-sized rooms. Average amount of coal used, only three tons per year. Cost of all repairs in 20 years, only $2.50 once for a new lining, and today the nickel work looks like a piece of silver. Ask Mrs. Moork if she would have anything but a "Stewart" in her home.

WE CHALLENGE COMPARISON!

WE TAKE YOUR OLD STOVE AS PART PAYMENT

On any Stewart Stove or Range in the house, and will make you a liberal allowance for it. The balance you can arrange to pay on the very liberal terms of

$1 Per Week

BONNY OAK HEATERS $4.95 UP — For Hard Coal, Soft Coal or Wood.

MILWAUKEE MEN ARE ARRESTED

For Trying to Extort $20,000 From Racine Woman.

Milwaukee, Oct. 2.—H. D. Miller and Fred Stocking, who reside at 738 Franklin street, Milwaukee, were arrested last night in connection with the alleged attempt to extort $20,000 from Mrs. Richard T. Robinson of Racine. The arrest of Miller is said to have been brought about through his efforts to arrange for the transfer of the $20,000 to his credit through the First National bank of Chicago.

Stocking is said by the police to have confessed his guilt, admitting the charges made. Miller, although closely questioned, refused to admit his guilt, other than to assert that he knew who the author of the blackmailing letter was. He denied further connection with the case.

Stocking is said, early in the spring, to have supervised the decorating and furnishing of the Robinson home at Racine, as an employe of a Milwaukee concern.

DEPUTY SHERIFF HAS CLOSE CALL

Since he has been in the sheriff business, Deputy Mike Horgan has had several close calls, but one of the closest came yesterday afternoon when he was sent to Wheaton's saloon to arrest a man named George Harris. When he asked if Harris was there, a man sitting on a table drew a big Colt 44 and leveled it at Horgan with the remark, "I am George Harris. What do you want?" Harris stopped to cock the hammer, evidently not realizing that it was a self cocker, as Horgan stepped forward. Horgan took advantage of this delay and leaped for his man, grabbing the revolver with one hand and felling him to the floor with the other.

Sheriff Bates received a telegram from Sheriff Meisen of St. Paul yesterday stating that a man named George, living at 200 Lake avenue, was wanted in St. Paul. Horgan was sent to get the man and on the way he was joined by Owen Gately, another deputy. The two believed Harris was the man wanted and arrested him. While they were conquering Harris another man tried to get into the game but Horgan put an end to his interference with a blow of his fist. Harris will probably be prosecuted for attempting to use his gun.

After Horgan had made the arrest, Sheriff Bates called up St. Paul and found that Harris was not the man wanted, George Coombs being the right party. Sergeant Wilcox was sent back to Wheaton's saloon to get Coombs who consented to accompany the officer without resistance.

Chief of Police Troyer feels confident that Harris is a bad man and therefore arrested the fellow who tried to assist him when he was being captured by Horgan. He was given a thorough sweating, but nothing could be learned from him that would incriminate either himself or Harris.

HEARST ATTACKS BOSSES.

Says He is Not for Murphy or Any Other Boss.

New York, Oct. 2.—During a political speech last night in which he was denouncing bossism, W. R. Hearst was interrupted by a man in the audience who shouted: "How about Murphy?" Several persons shouted: "Put him out," but Mr. Hearst said: "No, my friends, pay no more attention to him than I do to Murphy." Someone on the platform said: "That is the first rousing statement of the campaign."

Mr. Hearst replied: "I must correct the gentleman. This is not the first statement. I have said all along, no matter for what reason, Murphy or any other boss was for me, I was not for him. I have said all along, no matter what citizens or group of citizens or convention of citizens were for me, I would still stand as the candidate of the Independence league."

FOSSTON IS A WIDE-AWAKE MINNESOTA CITY

Leading Industries Include Flour Mills, Grain Elevators, Woolen Mills and Creamery.

By J. A. MONGER.

Fosston is one of the very progressive towns. It has 1,200 population, and is situated on the Great Northern railroad, 233 miles northwest of Duluth, and forty-five miles southeast of Crookston, the county seat of Polk county. This is a section of country so fertile of soil, and so rich in resources, is surrounded by so many advantages and so few disadvantages as to almost disprove the old adage, "The Creator never gave all the good things of earth to any one place." The country in and around Fosston is unsurpassed for the fertility of its soil, a rich black loam, with subsoil of clay, equally divided between prairie and timber land. The first settlers came in 1883, and from that day to this, there has been a steady development, until Fosston and this section of Polk county has become one of the busy marts of trade, in the very center of the choicest agricultural, dairying and stock raising area of the great state of Minnesota. Ever since the railroad era, the farmer settlers have realized the great fertility of the soil for growing all kinds of crops, wheat, oats, rye, flax, barley, clover and grasses, root crops and small fruits. This accounts for the line of grain elevators, flour mills and creamery industries, that are located here. They simply reflect the natural resources of the country. The climate of this section is a decided improvement over the bleak, wet atmosphere of the prairie states, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska. The summers are never exceedingly hot, the autumns are without a rival, being the most inviting period of the year, while the winters are bracing, the atmosphere being crisp and dry, making it a delightful health giving climate, free from catarrh and all malarial diseases.

Fosston, with its 1,200 inhabitants, is the principal city between Bemidji and Crookston. It has two banks, the First National, with a capital of $30,000; and First State, with $15,000; five grain elevators with a combined capacity of 115,000 bushels, but which handled 370,000 bushels of grain in 1905, and which will be increased in 1906; a woolen mill that gives employment to fifty hands, and turns out an annual product of $80,000; a creamery that uses hand separated cream from a thousand cows, making 600 pounds daily of "Fosston Gilt Edge" in bricks and tubs, and a flour mill that grinds 125 barrels a day, from No. 1 Northern wheat, grown within a radius of ten miles. Fosston owns its own waterworks and electric light plant, which cost $27,000. The water supply is taken from artesian wells, pumped into a standpipe holding 100,000 gallons, elevated at 115 feet, giving ample pressure for fire and other purposes. The electric plant has 1,500 incandescent and thirty-five arc lights on the circuit. In public schools it has the Fosston High, a pressed brick building, with stone trimmings, built and furnished at a cost of $17,500, and a graded school building, costing $7,000. In churches there are the Congregational, Synod, Norwegian Lutheran, Methodist and Free Methodist, while of secret and benevolent societies it has the usual quota. There are four hotels affording the best of accomodations, the Commercial, Fosston, Central and Northern. For the matter of publicity, the "Thirteen Towns," is a live, ably edited, six column newspaper, with all modern equipments, including cyclinder presses. A. W. Foss is the editor and proprietor, a man of wide experience and a city builder.

What a revelation it is for a man who has always lived in the malarial climate of the prairie states to come here, where the air is such a wonderful stimulant; it arouses a man to action, clears his brain, gives him new life and courage, makes him hope and dare to achieve greater things. To live, day after day, in such a climate, gives one a new and grander conception of life's battle. There is not a man with brain so dull or soul so dead, that does not love the beautiful and long for some small part of it to come into his life. Here, even though a man be digging in the earth, he has only to raise his eyes from the clods under his feet, to catch a picture which no artist can reproduce. This is the picturesque side, but there is also a practical side. This is eminently the place for the practical man. A man who, by perserverance, energy and frugality, has been able to make a living for himself and family elsewhere, will make a future here. Fosston's great need is more farmer settlers, capable and energetic men; those who understand farming and who are willing to make the best use of their knowledge. For all such prosperity waits, and what is more, they will receive a most cordial welcome.

ATTORNEY J. A. HENDRICKS.

The above building is built of pressed brick, with stone trimming, heated by steam, electric lighted and has the electric fan system of ventilation. The building with furniture cost $17,500, while the grade building cost $7,000. The studies include a full four years' high school course, all graduates being admitted to the state university on their diplomas. The school attendance at this writing is 375, an increase over that of 1905. The faculty is as follows: C. S. Yeager, superintendent; Martha Hazzard, high school principal; Mary Conant, Eighth grade; Capitola Lendo, Seventh and Sixth grades; Martha Idtse, Sixth and Fifth grades; Josephine Midgoeren, Second grade, and Emma Baldwin, First grade, all able and clever teachers, who reflect great credit on the public school system of Fosston. The board of education of independent school district No. 142, that are doing so much to keep up the high standard of the public school system are S. S. Stadsvold, president; Lewis Lohn, treasurer; I. L. Hillestad, secretary; Ole Pederson, Martin Randklev and L. G. Hancock, all true blue friends of the public school system.

FOSSTON'S CITY OFFICIALS.

The men who are at the head of the city government are business men and tax payers, who have the welfare of the city at heart. It is needless to say there is no graft, no needless expenditure of the taxpayers' money. L. E. Campbell is ayor; Ed Randklev, treasurer; F. E. Selner, recorder; and J. A. Hendricks, attorney. There are many blocks of cement walk, while the business and residence streets are graded and turnpiked making splendid walks and drives. A sewer system is being agitated and will no doubt be adopted in another year.

FOSSTON'S BANKING HOUSES.

There are no better financial institutions in Northern Minnesota than those located in Fosston, both as to financial stability and liberal treatment of those having banking business to transact.

The First National bank was established in 1903, and is successor to the Bank of Fosston, which was established in 1889. The bank's capital is $30,000 and surplus $2,000. They pay 5 per cent interest on time deposits and do a general banking business. The officers are A. D. Stephens, president; Lewis Lohn, cashier; and Hardin Helland, assistant cashier.

The First State Bank of Fosston has a capital of $15,000, owns its building and is liberally conducted. It was established in 1899 and has ever since enjoyed a large and growing patronage. L. W. Larson, the president, is one of the rich men of this section; Ed O. Randklev is vice president, and Sam Olson, the cashier, one of nature's noblemen, came here from Bagely, where he organized the First National in 1900. Mr. Olson is a very progressive type of man who likes to accomplish things for his city and county.

FOSSTON HIGH SCHOOL.

This gentleman is a native of Minnesota, being born in Dakota county, Dec. 13, 1865. Like most successful men he is a product of the farm and educated in the country schools, after which he attended Minneapolis Academy and later graduated from the law department of the University of Minnesota, class 1893. He was admitted to practice at Granite Falls in that year. In 1894 he began practice at Sacred Heart, but later located at Fosston, where he has since remained. There is not an attorney in Northern Minnesota that has a higher standing, or who has won greater success in the courts for his clients, many of his most notable cases having been successfully fought out in the state supreme court. Attorney Hendricks is now serving his sixth term as city attorney and is also court commissioner of Polk county. In addition to his extensive law practice he also does a large fire insurance business, representing five of the best known union companies. Those that desire inside information on Fosston real estate and farm lands should write a postal stating what information is desired and the same will receive prompt attention.

LARSON'S BIG STORE.

This was formerly the Fosston Mercantile company, but is now owned and conducted by L. W. Larson, one of Fosston's early pioneers. It is one of the "big stores" of Northern Minnesota, size 50x110, carrying all lines of goods kept in a first class department store; dry goods, women's ready-to-wear garments, men's and boy's clothong, boots and shoes, groceries and country produce, with a meat market in connection. It is a beehive of activity in all departments. This is only one of Mr. Larson's business interests, as he is sole proprietor of the Fosston creamery, president of the First State bank, and owns a 320 acre stock farm, three miles southwest of the city, on which are forty head of horned stock, fifty head of hogs and twelve head of sheep. There are modern buildings, residence, horse and cattle barns, hog house, sheep sheds and hennery. The crop grown this year was oats, barley, corn fodder, red clover and timothy. Mr. Larson is a pleasantly mannered man, a native of Iowa, born in Clayton county, on July 13, 1854. A thorough business man, with a practical education, that knows how to accomplish things and make a success of everything he touches.

FOSSTON'S FURNITURE EMPORIUM.

Pederson & Helland occupy a splendid corner store, size 48x80, with an up-to-date furniture line and warehouse 20x48. They carry everything in house and office furniture, beds and bedding, wall papers and shades. It is a splendid line sold at the right prices. There is not a piece of old style furniture in stock. The firm also carries full lines of undertakers' supplies, while Ole Pederson is a licensed embalmer. The business was established in 1888 and has grown from a small beginning to its present prosperous proportions. Mr. Ole Pederson is at present a member of the school board, while the other member of the firm, Mr. A. H. Helland, is a member of the board of health. They are both enterprising public spirited citizens, who do their share of boosting Fosston's every interest.

FOSSTON WOOLEN MILLS.

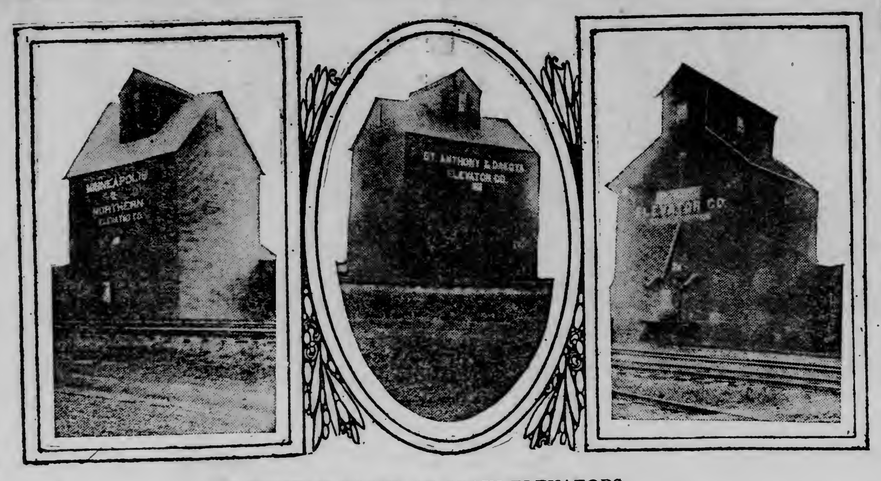

This plant was established in 1898, and incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000. The mill employs some fifty people, who turn out $80,000 in manufactured goods, flannels, mackinaws, shawls, pants and underwear of all kinds. The product is sold to jobbers and the trade. The building is of steel, three stories, size 40 by 80; dye and work house, 24 by 60; picking house, 24 by 60, and warehouse, 72 by 80. The first floor is the weaving and finishing department, where nine broad looms are in operation. On the second floor are two sets of cards, three self-operating, spinning and larding machines. The third floor contains stock room and tailor department, where the cloth and flannels are made into ready to wear goods, mackinaws, shirts, underwear and other lines in men's apparel. The whole plant is under the watchful superintendence of Claud Neilson. The officers of the company are: S. S. Stadsvold, president; L. W. Larson, vice president; Lewis Lohn, secretary and treasurer.

VAALER'S LEADING STORE.

The make-up of a city's importance is best judged by the type of its business men. In this particular, Fosston is the equal of any city in Northern Minnesota. One of the leading clothing, dry goods, shoe and crockery houses is that of O. R. Vaaler. Mr. Vaaler started as a clerk for O. L. Larson, in 1894 embarked in business under the firm name of Vaaler & Ekeland, and in 1900 bought his partner's interest. Mr. Vaaler has been a most successful merchant, having always carried the best of goods, giving his patrons the benefit of the best assortment to select from, and at prices always the lowest. Mr. Vaaler has served three terms as village treasurer, owns an attractive residence and two farms, which will make him a small fortune in the next decade. In business and social affairs Mr. O. R. Vaaler is one of the men who are always consulted, and also in matters pertaining to the welfare of Fosston and this section of Polk county.

FOSSTON'S FARMS AND FARM LANDS.

There has been more money made on farming land investments than from any other one source. All wealth comes from the soil, and those that invest in farm lands that grow 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre, oats 40 to 50, barley 35 to 50, flax 18 to 25, potatoes 300 to 400, and all other root crops, beans and peas in proportion; red clover from three to four tons to the acre, timothy and other grasses an average of three tons, make no mistake. This is the kind of soil that is being offered at $15 to $40 per acre, with good roads to market, well watered, with the choicest of prairie or timber land. The soil is a rich black loam, with subsoil of clay. The standing timber will pay the expense of clearing, being basswood, elm, poplar, oak and ash, as there is a steady market for poles, posts, ties and cordwood, at cost prices. There is not only the best of country schools, but rural free delivery. These lands will, in the next decade, bring $50 to $80 per acre, as there is no better land for diversified farming, dairying and stock raising than this section of Polk county, tributary to Fosston. The farmer homesteaders, who settled here two years ago, are all wealthy today, and they came with empty hands and without ready money. Those who desire full and complete information on these farming lands should write to J. A. Hendricks, farm land dealer, who has 5,000 acres in Polk county and 2,000 acres in Clearwater county, the richest and most desirable location in Northern Minnesota, close to the big markets of Duluth and the iron ranges, where prices are always 10 per cent higher for everything raised on the farm than in any other market. These farm lands are the last of the cheap, or low priced agricultural prairie and timber lands. They have been simply overlooked. There is no time to idle away if you are looking for the best farm lands, best climate and highest priced markets. There is but one choice—Fosston, Minn. You who purchase this land for $15 to $40 per acre will have no trouble to double your money in the next five years, on the general increase of farm land values. Buy now while the land is in the open market, before the speculators get busy.

A FOSSTON GROUP OF GRAIN ELEVATORS.

One of the best reflections of the fertility of the soil of this section of Polk county is her five grain elevators, having a combined capacity of 115,000 bushels, but where 370,900 bushels of wheat were handled in 1905, and which will be doubled in 1906. Following are the names of the elevators and their agents: St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator company, capacity 25,000, A. Huseby, who has been agent since 1902; National Elevator company, 20,000, Ing. Larson, agent since 1904; Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company, 30,000, H. C. Halverson, rated as one of the most experienced wheat buyers in this section; Farmers' Elevator company, 10,000, J. A. Widness, agent, and Fosston Elevator company, 30,000, K. K. Meland, grain buyer.

HOLDEN & HANCOCK, Merc. Store.

The enterprising, wide awake dealers in heavy and shelf hardware, stoves and ranges, tin and granite ware, table and pocket cuttlery, sporting goods, farm machinery and buggies are Holden & Hancock. The stock of goods carried equals that of many of the big stores in the cities. They own their business block, size 25x75, two stories; farm machinery and buggy warehouse, size 30x70 and general warehouse 30x75. They are pushers, and what is more, they have for their motto: "Merit always wins," which means that they only buy the best goods and give their patrons the advantage of the lowest selling prices. Mr. Oscar Holden came to Fosston as manager for Larson & Carpenter in 1892. Then Lewis Hancock and himself were taken in as members of the firm of Larson, Carpenter & Co. This firm remained in business down to Jan. 1, 1906, when Holden & Hancock purchased their partner's interests. They both take an active interest in the upbuilding of Fosston and especially in good city and county government.

CAMPBELL'S LIVERY AND SALES STABLES.

This is one of the busy places of Fosston and is owned and managed by L. E. Campbell, one of the live and active men of affairs. In March, 1906, he was elected mayor, this being the third time he has filled the office, while he has filled the office of councilman for eight years. He established the livery, feed and sale stables in 1887 and today has one of the best liveries between Crookston and Duluth. There are twenty head of first-class driving stock, fifteen single and double vehicles, all of the latest make and kept in prime condition. The livery and sale stable is 40x80, with hay loft, holding twenty-five tons and feed stable 32x80. Mr. Campbell is well-known at the Head of the Lakes, having been in the livery business in Superior during the boom days of 1887.

THE FOSSTON CREAMERY.

This is one of the important industries of this section and is the property of C. W. Larson. The capacity of the creamery is 1,000 pounds per day, but the average run is 600 pounds of "Fosston's Gilt Edge" in bricks and tubs holding 20, 30, 40 and 63 pounds. The hand separated cream of 1,000 cows is used. All the latest improved machinery known to the art of butter-making is in use, including the Disbrow combined cheese and workers, capacity 3,000 pounds of cream. The product of the creamery finds a ready sale on the Great Northern from Crookston to Duluth, Messabe Iron range and the Minnesota & International railroads. H. A. Lindenberg is the butter maker, one of the best in the state.

John Hillestad is the leader in his line, builders' and shelf hardware, stoves and ranges, paint and oils, table and pocket cutlery, tin and granite ware and sporting goods. It is now the oldest hardware store in Fosston, and is one of the best located. Mr. Hillestad occupies a building of 22 by 80 feet and a warehouse 24 by 38 feet stocked to the brim with all the goods in his line that money will buy. During the last four months Mr. Hillestad has been on a trip to Norway, his native land, where he renewed the scenes of his childhood. The business of the store has been left in charge of Mr. Segurd Lade, one of the bright young business men of Fosston.

* * *

L. S. Johnson, dealer in hardware, stoves and ranges, paints and oils, sporting goods, saddlery and farm implements, owns one of the leading mercantile houses of Fosston. Mr. Johnson established the business under the firm name of Jonnson & Reckansrud in 1894 and in 1901 purchased his partner's interest. The store occupies 24 by 100 feet, while there are two warehouses, 30 by 70 feet and 16 by 70 feet, stocked with reserved lines. Mr. Johnson has

FOSSTON HOSPITAL.

Dr. Robert Turnbull, Physician in Charge.

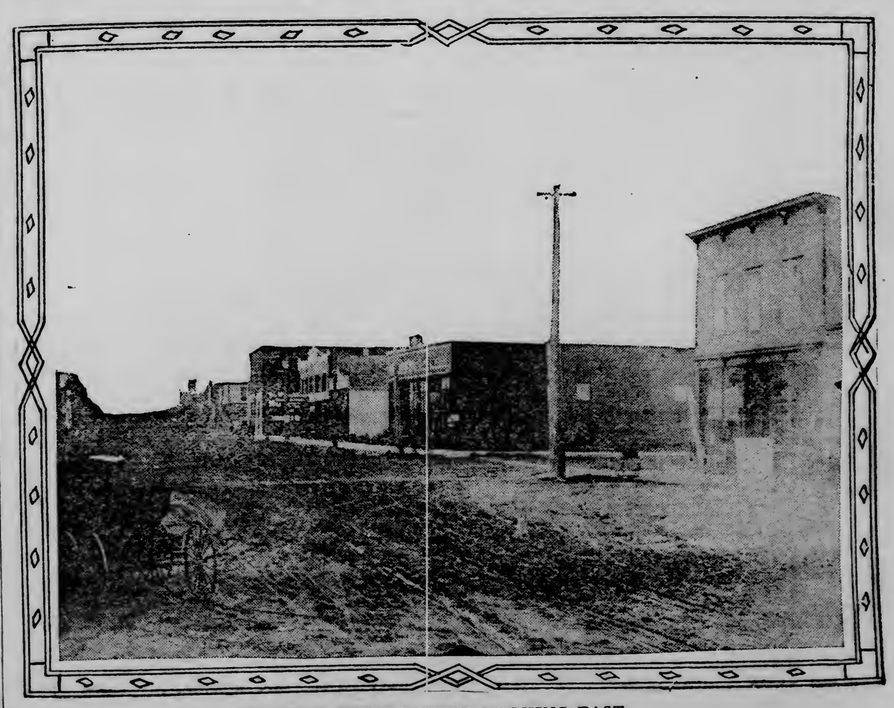

This is one of the best patronized private hospitals in this section of Minnesota. It is under the medical and surgical skill of Dr. Robert Turnbull, an honored graduate of the medical department of Trinity University, Toronto, Canada, class 1901, who also took a post graduate course at Chicago in 1904. The hospital has accommodations for twelve patients while a staff of trained nurses are always in attendance. It is one of the best equipped hospitals northwest of St. Paul. There are complete electrical appliances for X-ray work, with splendidly appointed operating room, with most modern methods of sterilizing. There are private bath rooms for patients. The hospital is heated by steam and lighted by electricity. Dr. Turnbull is a physician and surgeon of rare skill and is performing many wonderful cures. He is a native of Helton county, Ontario, Canada.

FOSSTON ELEVATOR AND FLOURING MILLS.

The real staff of life in its purity and highest perfection is manufactured by these mills, having a capacity of 125 barrels. The flour is made of No. 1 northern wheat, especially picked to make these brands of flour: "Best Patent," "Belle of Foston" and "Streight." In point of equipment this mill is the equal of any in the Northwest, as it is fitted up with the latest and best Stordyke & Marmon flour mill machinery. The elevator has a capacity of 30,000 bushels, but handles 200,000 bushels per season. They also operate a feed mill with a grinding capacity of twenty tons per day. The elevator and flour mills are built of steel and cover a ground space of 26 by 40 feet, three stories and basement, and warehouse 32 by 80 feet. This splendid elevator and flour milling property is owned by S. S. Stadsvold and gives employment to many men in the various departments. William H. Helfrich is head miller; K. K. Meland, superintendent of elevator, and Peter Huffman, chief engineer.

Hon. S. S. Stadsvold is one of the main props of the commercial and industrial make-up of this section. He came here in 1883, when Crookston was the nearest railroad town. Fosston was not on the map, but was a wild, unsettled tract of country. In 1886 Mr. Stadsvold built one of the first business blocks, size 24 by 70 feet, and warehouse, 26 by 70 feet, opening up a general merchandise store under the firm name of Larson Bros. & Stadsvold. In 1887 he established a sawmill; in 1888 he erected the first flour mill this side of Crookston; in 1893 he retired from the mercantile business, and in 1894 from the sawmill. Besides these interests, Mr. Stadsvold is president of the Fosston Woolen Mill company, president of Langby Brick & Tile company, and vice president of a chain of banks in and around Fosston. He has served his city five times as mayor, is now president of the board of education, and was tendered the legislative nomination of the Sixty-second district but declined with thanks. Hon. S. S. Stadsvold was born in Alamakee county, Iowa, Sept. 15, 1861. He was educated in the little red brick prairie school house, topped off by a course in the Waukon business college. Mr. Stadsvold is one of those splendid types of men we read about but seldom meet, a model family and business man.

FOSSTON STREET VIEW, LOOKING EAST.

served three terms as alderman and is one of the progressive men of affairs, owning a fine residence and a farm of 160 acres four miles northeast of the city.

K. Movold, manager for the Northwest Mortgage Security company, is one of the real live dealers in city and farm property. He has a thousand acres of the best farm lands for sale, improved and wild land ranging in price from $15 to $20 per acre. Those who want to buy a farm or place a loan in this section of Polk county can consult no better authority than K. Movold of the Northwestern Mortgage Security company, Fosston, Minn.

P. M. MARK MEDICINE CO.

This is one of the representative manufacturing firms in Northern Minnesota, established in 1896. From a small beginning it has been built up an extensive business occupying its own splendid block, size 25x50, two stories, where the widely known Mark's household remedies and a full veterinary line for horses and cattle are manufactured. As the true medical worth of Mark's celebrated remedies become known the greater their sale, which accounts for the increase in the capital stock to $50,000 in order to better handle the ever growing business. The officers of the company are Peter M. Mark, president, and Hoeld F. Mark, secretary and treasurer, men of known standing to dealers in drugs and medicines, as their preparations are all of the highest quality as to medicinal worth, and so recognized by the pure food laws of this and other states. Every label bears the true import of the contents of every bottle containing "Mark's celebrated remedies." This gives confidence to the sick and ailing and assures them they are getting the best remedy that medical skill can produce for the disease it is intended to treat and cure, which is the true reason for its universal popularity where known. Their leader is Mark's lung balsam with tar, for diseases of the lungs, throat and chest which are carrying off thousands upon thousands every year under the name of the whitep lague. It is only a cough or a cold in the beginning, but if left to run will soon develop into bronchitis and catarrh. There's but one absolute treatment and one for all kinds of lung and throat diseases, if taken in time, and that is Mark's lung balsam with tar, as it arrests the progress of the disease by renewing the congestion from the membrane of the bronchial tubes and air passages of the lungs, thus removing the cause. It is a certain and reliable cure, not a relief. It is pleasant to the taste, making it a desirable remedy for children as well as adults. In wasting diseases, known as consumption, there is no better remedy, as it gives relief where other remedies fail. We are writing this message to the sick and ailing sufferers from cough, cold, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh and lagrippe and those in the first stages of consumption to point out a remedy that will not only give relief but effect a cure. Those that are interested should write for Mark's household book, which will be mailed free on application to P. M. Mark Medicine company, Fosston, Minn.

IMPROVED CITY AND FARM PROPERTY AT A BARGAIN.

W. H. Cowing, one of Fosston's pioneer merchants, who came here in 1892, desires to dispose of his business block and two lots 50x140 feet on which is built a store building 24x60, and residence adjoining in one of the best locations. The business is also for sale with or without the real estate. It is the New York restaurant, confectionery, fruit, cigars and tobacco. The property is offered for $3,500, part cash and balance on time or the business for $600. This is a great snap, as the property is worth twice that amount. He also offers 160 acres located twelve miles south of town at $10 per acre. There is a new four-room, story and a half house, good new barn 16x16 with hay loft. There are 30 acres timber, oak and poplar, and 130 acres of prairie. Six hundred dollars down, balance on time, will take it. Land all around the Cowing farm is selling for $15 to $20 per acre without any improvements. The reason for this forced sale is sickness in Mr. Cowing's family. This is like finding money, so don't delay.

RESCUE OF A SAILOR

Who Floated on Two Planks for Twenty-Four Hours.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Capt. Fisk of the cruiser Minneapolis reported by mail the details of the rescue of James Olson of the schooner Twilight, which was wrecked in a gale off the Carlina coast. Olson, in his statement to Capt. Fisk, said that he and seven others were thrown off the schooner in a tremendously heavy sea, and encountered great danger from the lumber thrown into the sea, which was the cargo of the vessel. He secured two planks and with an arm thrown over each floated for a day in a heavy sea. When the storm abated somewhat, he tied the planks together, one across the others using strips of his oilskin coat for the purpose. He was able to sit upon this improvised raft and paddle himself along with a piece of wood which he had clung to from the time the schooner was wrecked. He had been twenty-four hours without food or drink at the time of his rescue, but was still able to paddle the raft and when he saw the lights of the Minneapolis he paddle it so close to her course that he was very near run down. The rescue took place at midnight.

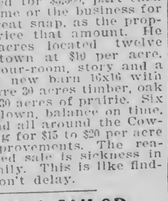

STRIKE IN MEXICO WHEN FESTIVAL WAS STOPPED.

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 2.—Mail advices to the Herald from Llanos De Oro, Sonora, tell of a strike and what came near being serious trouble there, incident to the holiday celebration, Sept. 10. An eight-day fiesta had been arranged, and the mine and mill were closed for two days, the men refusing to let work interfere with their merrymaking and gambling. Harry McKay, manager of the Llanos De Oro Mining & Milling company, went to the municipal officials, threatening to close the works, unless the festival was stopped. The authorities accordingly ended the festival. This angered the men, and they began a strike, and demanded $3 a day. Fiery speeches were made, and fifteen men were arrested. Five are yet in jail.

GOLF SEASON IS ABOUT OVER

Fall Championship Match Is Not Likely to be Played.

J. Q. A. Crosby's victory over B. F. Meyers, whom he defeated by a score of 3 up and 2 to play Friday, in the final round for the president's cup, practically concludes championship play on the local Northland Golf club links this year. The match Friday was exceedingly well played, and Mr. Crosby's title to the trophy is well earned.

The fall championship match may never be played. It has been postponed from time to time, as both Hopkins and McLennan, the two contestants left in the finals, have been out of the city, but as Hopkins has been here a number of times, and ready to play while McLennan has failed to show up, Secretary Alexander says that if Mr. McLennan does not put in an appearance in the near future, he will forfeit the match to Hopkins. This will give Hopkins permanent possession of the trophy, as the new ruling of the club gives the cup to the man who wins it in both fall and spring championships.

Good Sharpshooting.

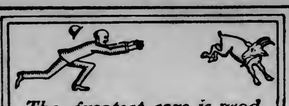

Davenport, Iowa, Oct. 2.—The championship match of the Central sharpshooters' association was won today by Otto Mueller of Wausau, Wis., who made the record score, 296, in the ten shot event out of a posible 250. Mueller also won the 100 shot match with a score of 2,196, and the medal for the largest aggregate score of the day. Tobias K. Watkins, Davenport, won the three shot match, score 69. Riflemen were present from Chicago, Milwaukee, La Crosse, Clinton, Lyons, Rockford and Wausau.

Won by Electioneer.

New York, Oct. 2.—J. S. Ness' Electioneer, winner of this years' Futurity, yesterday won the $11,000 Colts half of the produce stakes, six furlongs, at Brighton Beach. He was practically neglected in the betting, opening at 9 to 1. His price gradually went up to 12 to 1 at the close. P. J. Rainey's Demund, the even money favorite, was second, with H. P. Whitney's Paumonok, another 12 to 1 shot, third. The time was 1:12 3-5 which equals the best time of the stake.

PRESIDENT SMITH UNDER ARREST

On the Charge of Living Unlawfully With Five Wives.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 2.—The president of the Mormon church, Joseph F. Smith, was arrested yesterday on the charge of living unlawfully with five wives. The complaint was sworn to by a Mormon deputy sheriff, the warrant was served by order of a Mormon sheriff and the committing magistrate is also a Mormon. President Smith was arraigned immediately after his arrest and waived preliminary hearing. He was bound over and released on his own recognizance.

President Smith reached here two days ago on his return from Europe. He then learned that an attempt had been made to secure his arrest for a statutory offense in connection with the birth of his forty-third child. The complaint was made from a distinctly anti-Mormon source. The county attorney refused to approve prosecution on this charge. The attorney was then cited to appear in court and show cause why he should not be compelled to act in the matter. After the hearing the court held that the attorney was justified in refusing to prosecute, because the complainant offered no evidence that the mother of the child was not the wife of President Smith.

Whatever the motive back of yesterday's proceedings, the effect will be to disarm the criticism that has been directed against the authorities for their failure to take cognizance of the admissions made by President Smith before the senate committee during the late investigation of the Smoot case.

TO ADOPT NEW BULLET

Washington, Oct. 1.—The army will shortly adopt the new bullet, which was recently tested by several of the target experts at the national rifle meet at Seagirt, and found to be satisfactory by them. Instead of the rounded point of the present bullet, it has a long straight tapering point, and is also about one-third lighter, weighing about 150 grains. The new bullet has a greater velocity up to 2,000 yards, a greater energy up to 1,400 yards, a flatter trajectory up to 2,000 yards, and a little better accuracy up to 2,000 yards.

The new bullet will require a slightly different firing chamber in the rifle, but this can be readily effected in pieces now under manufacture, and the necessary changes can be made in the pieces now in use with but comparative small expense.

NEW ENTERPRISE HAS BEEN STARTED AT WALKER.

Walker, Minn., Oct. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—A new enterprise has been instituted at Walker by local men, with Bert Jamison as manager, and which calls itself the Balsam Bough Pillow company. The company will do a mail order business, and the success of the venture is assured, owing to the exceedingly large demand over the country for Balsam pillows.

KILLED BY TRAIN.

Laborer's Body Found on Iron Range Tracks Near Allen.

Biwabik, Minn., Oct. 2.—The body of a laborer believed to be Orville James Hubert that was found badly mutilated by the crew of an ore train along the Duluth & Iron Range tracks near Allen Junction Sunday morning, is held at a local undertaking establishment. The only mark of identification found on the man's body is a ticket to St. Mary's hospital at Duluth, bearing the name Orville James Hubert. He was a young man and dressed like a woodsman.

BACK GIVES OUT

Plenty of Duluth Readers Have This Experience.

You tax the kidneys—overwork them—

They can't keep up the continual strain.

The back gives out—it aches and pains;

Urinary troubles set in.

Don't wait longer—take Doan's Kidney Pills.

Duluth people tell you how they act.

Ernest Grotke of 926 Fourth avenue east, Duluth, Minn., mason, says: "I speak from experience when I say Doan's Kidney Pills are a reliable and valuable remedy. I first heard of their merits from a friend who had received gratifying results in his own case, and I was then suffering from severe, dull pains in the small of my back and loins, and had become so bad that I was almost compelled to give up work. I procured a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. Although other remedies had failed to help me, I soon noticed the benefit, and kept on using Doan's Kidney Pills until the pain and other symptoms gradually but surely disappeared, until I was entirely free from the trouble."

TAFT'S TALK AT HAVANA

Good Advice Given in His Address at the University.

Urges All Classes to Take Part in Political Matters.

Havana, Oct. 2.—The following is Secretary Taft's address before the Havana university yesterday:

"I count it a peculiar honor, in my temporary representation of the executive of Cuba, to participate in the exercises of this university. This is especially interesting to me, because, when exercising the executive function in the Philippine islands, I took part in a similar ceremony in a university founded by the same order, but more than a century before this university was founded.

"All the members of the Latin race are accustomed, and not without reason, to characterize us Anglo-Saxons as abrupt and conceited in our view of our power of pushing civilization; but those of us who have come closer to Spanish civilization have been impressed with the consciousness that the Anglo-Saxons have much to learn from the intellectual refinement, artistic temperament, poetic imagery, high ideals and courtesy of the Latin and Spanish races. Spain has exerted a tremendous force in civilization and progress, but nations, like men, suffer reaction. The great public works which Spain erected testify to her patience and enterprise when we Anglo-Saxons were struggling with less pretentious things. But the civilization of Spain and all her institutions were founded on the idea of the control of the state by one man or a few men. That idea has ceased to have force. The Anglo-Saxons have brought to the front the idea that a people sufficiently educated to know what their rights were could more safely be trusted to determine how those interests should be preserved than one man or a few men, and because in the development of that idea we have the advantage of 200 years' education in self-government, we unreasonably plume ourselves with superiority in the knowledge of government which only circumstances have given us.

"It has recently fallen to the lot of the people of the United States, who have struggled along the road to popular government and fallen down and picked themselves up again, to aid some country who have not had that experience in coming to the enjoyment of benefits of popular government. The republic of Cuba has progressed so rapidly in the last years as almost to intoxicate the believers in popular government. It was like the growth of a tropical plant which needed cutting in order that the stalk might gain strength. It is perhaps necessary that the Cubans should be warned that the foundations of self-government must be broad and solid rather than high and conspicuous. It is saddening to me to be called to Cuba and still sadder to President Roosevelt, who is so identified with the liberation, that we are here at the time of a stumble in Cuba's progress toward popular government, but it has given us an opportunity to assure you, in the name of the president and the American people, that we are here only to help you. With our arm under your arm we are lifting you again on the path of that wonderful progress you have traveled. We shall, I am confident, be able to point with pride to the fact that the United States is not an exploiting nation, but that she has such deep sympathy with the progress of popular government as to be willing to expend her blood and treasure in making the spread of such government in the world successful.

"Your difficulty was that you were brought up under the fifteen and sixteenth century ideas of government and were taught to look to others for the responsibility of government. You exercised only the function of criticism and most of your people, especially the educated and wealthy classes, trained themselves not only to indifference but to inactivity in the field of political and governmental matters. I find that law is committed to one class of people, medicine to another, commerce to a third and political matters to a fourth, and that the first classes lean back, through the influence of past association, and watch with intense interest, but I fear not with much influence, what is being done by the government. I venture the suggestion that if the other classes do not take a more active part and insist upon exercising their influece in politics, the question then naturally arises: What was the necessity of changing your form of government at all? The theory of popular government is that every class shall exercise a decided political influence, but it seems to me that your ideals have been too high.

"The hope of this country is in its educated youths. While I do not want to jar or make uncomfortable those youths who are entering active life, I must speak the truth. There are one or two traditions still persisting in this civilization. The first of them is that the learned professions are the only pursuits worthy of the graduates of this university. This is a great mistake. University education is not an obstacle to success in commercial life. I am afraid that young Cubans are not sufficiently infused with that mercantile spirit of which we have too much in the United States.

"What you need is the desire to make money, to found great interests and carry on the country's prosperity, and young Cubans, or rather most of them, ought to begin in business. There would be no trouble in forcing yourselves ahead in the next generation, so that the banks, comercial houses and shipping interests of Cuba would be in the Cuban hands instead of in the hands of foreigners. You must have foreign capital, and the debt of gratitude this country owes that great man, Estrada Palma, is that he realizes, more than other Cubans, the necessity of bringing in capital and convincing the world of the conservative character of your government in order that foreign capitalists might depend on its security. But the right of property and the motive of accumulation is the basis of all modern success and civilization, and until you have a community of political influence and control which is affected by the conservative influences of property ownership, popular government is impossible.

"Therefore, I urge the recipients of these diplomas, if they have Cuban estates, to devote themselves to the betterment of these estates, and that others enter commercial pursuits, so that when twenty-five years hence, a sympathetic stranger comes here, he may not find a political class, a commercial class, and the sciences, and professions all divided; so that you do not lack the benefit of a mixture of all to form that combination, without which a successful republic is absolutely impossible.

"Nobody ever achieved a high ideal without failing two or three times, and failures must be made vehicles to success. Each failure ought to teach avoidance of that particular danger. When everything goes smoothly and you seem on the high road to success, then is the most dangerous time. When humbled by the lessons of disappointment you are in a proper spirit to win success.

"Viva the Republica of Cuba."

She was driven on the beach at the entrance of Pearl Harbor, where she is now in a worse position than before.

MOHAMMEDANS SET FORTH GRIEVANCES.

Simla, India, Oct. 2.—The most influential body of Mohammedans that has ever approached the Indian government, headed by Agra Khan and consisting of thirty-six members, representing every province and every branch of the educated Moslem community, yesterday presented an address to Lord Minto, the viceroy of India, setting forth the grievances and aspirations of the Mohammedans of India, and especially their claim for a fair share in any modified system of representation that might be contemplated.

In reply, Lord Minto said he sympathized with sincere Bengali sentiment. He said their hopes and ambitions were not due to disaffection, but to their education growth, the seed of which had been sown by British rule. The educational harvest would increase, but British ideas must prevail. Lord Minto promised all reasonable aid to the desires of the deputation, and promised his hearers that in any attempted modification of their religious beliefs, the national traditions would be respected.

CONFIDENCE IN INSURANCE

New York, Oct. 2.—Prof. J. H. Gore of Georgetown university returned yesterday from Europe on the steamer Potsdam.

As the representative of the United States government, Prof. Gore attended the recent international congress of actuaries at Berlin.

"Discussions in the convention showed that confidence abroad in American life insurance companies has not been at all shaken by the recent insurance revelations," he said, adding that the question whether teetotalers should be accepted by insurance companies, as a special class, had been discussed, but no conclusion reached.

How to Cure a Cold.

The question of how to cure a cold without unnecessary loss of time is one in which we are all more or less interested, for the quicker o cold is gotten rid of the less the danger of pneumonia and other serious diseases. BIG DOCK IS DESIGNED

Structure Will be of Concrete and Cost About $300,000.

W. B. Patton, former city engineer, and manager of the Duluth Engineering company, left today for Texas City, Tex., to carry the plans and get the work started on the large new dry dock which is to be constructed at that point at a cost of about $300,000.

In view of the size of the improvement, it is a matter of no small local pride that the plans for the work should be prepared by a Duluth firm of civil engineers.

The plans, which are elaborate and complete in detail, were made by the Duluth Engineering company for R. P. Clark of Galveston, Tex., and his associates, who have bought for the purpose an extensive tract of land from the Texas City company, which is comprised of A. B. Wolvin and his associates. From the fact that Duluth men are so largely interested in Texas City, the big improvement planned is of more than passing interest to many Duluthians.

The dry dock, when completed, will be the largest one on the gulf of Mexico, outside the United States government dry dock at Mobile.

It will accommodate the largest boat now engaged in the gulf trade, or that is likely to need dockage.

The city of Galveston, Tex., has no dry dock, owing largely to the sandy nature of its soil and the fact that the ground is but little above sea level. The nearest dry dock to Galveston has been New Orleans.

Mr. Clarke and his associates, it is said, expect to put in an up-to-date shipyard at Texas City, and the big dry dock is the first step in that direction. The soil is of clay, and very deep borings in that material already having been made to a depth of eighty-five feet.

The new dry dock will resemble somewhat in appearance that in the shipyards in Superior, except that it will be constructed of concrete.

It will be 600 feet long, 90 feet wide at the top, with 19 feet of water over the sill.

One of the novel features will be a middle gate, which will permit of one half the dock being used at one time when there is a smaller boat to be put in for repairs.

According to the plans the dock can be emptied of water in three and one-half hours. This will be done by two centrifugal pumps, with the capacity each of 25,000 gallons per minute.

The power plant will comprise a building 90 by 55 feet, equipped with a 400-horse power engine and complete with all the mechanical devices known to modern engineering. Among these will be the air compressors for hammer and riveting work at the dock, an electric lighting plant and complete system of fire protection for the dock.

The construction of the dry dock is to be started immediately. It is expected that the work will be completed in about a year.

VILLAGE OF NORTHPORT IS ALMOST WIPED OUT.

Traverse City, Mich., Oct. 2.—Almost the entire village of Northport was wiped out by fire yesterday. The estimated loss exceeds $50,000. The principal losses are the Northern hotel, $10,000; H. E. Gills' general store, $18,000; car ferry dock and warehouse, $15,000, and residence of Carl Shroeder, $5,000.

Fits Like Your Footprint

ONE OF THE REASONS.

Copying the Foot — The Copy (called the last)

Structurally all feet are alike, but there are 72 distinct races of men, and each race has its characteristics. Moreover, each locality, occupation or mode of living develops its own peculiar kind of feet. People of the Northwest have what is known as the "full" or athletic type of foot, which is the most nearly perfect of any. This type has in itself dozens of varieties and subdivisions.

To make shoes which will fit these various styles of Northwestern feet, it is necessary to take plaster copies—foot prints—of hundreds of feet, and by careful study and classification, secure a composite "last" or copy for each style of shoe.

The Gotzian Shoe has been built for over 50 years from lasts made exclusively from Northwestern feet.

It costs about $6,000 to prepare a complete new set of lasts for any style of shoe for the Northwest alone. If we made shoes for all sections of the country, we would either have to make four sets of lasts, at a cost of about $24,000, or sell the Northwestern last everywhere.

This explains why shoes made over eastern lasts fail to fit western people as the Gotzian Shoe does.

Most first-class dealers handle Gotzian Shoes and will gladly prove this argument by fitting you with a pair. Price, $3.50 and $4.00.

An interesting and instructive booklet, "How Shoes Are Made," sent free on request. Also shows latest fall styles.

P. M. MARK MEDICINE CO.

This is one of the representative manufacturing firms in Northern Minnesota, established in 1896. From a small beginning it has been built up an extensive business occupying its own splendid block, size 25x50, two stories, where the widely known Mark's household remedies and a full veterinary line for horses and cattle are manufactured. As the true medical worth of Mark's celebrated remedies become known the greater their sale, which accounts for the increase in the capital stock to $50,000 in order to better handle the ever growing business. The officers of the company are Peter M. Mark, president, and Hjeld P. Mark, secretary and treasurer, men of known standing to dealers in drugs and medicines, as their preparations are all of the highest quality as to medicinal worth, and so recognized by the pure food laws of this and other states. Every label bears the true import of the contents of every bottle containing "Mark's celebrated remedies." This gives confidence to the sick and ailing and assures them they are getting the best remedy that medical skill can produce for the disease it is intended to treat and cure, which is the true reason for its universal popularity where known. Their leader is Mark's lung balsam with tar, for diseases of the lungs, throat and chest which are carrying off thousands upon thousands every year under the name of the whitep lague. It is only a cough or a cold in the beginning, but if left to run will soon develop into bronchitis and catarrh. There's but one absolute treatment and one for all kinds of lung and throat diseases, if taken in time, and that is Mark's lung balsam with tar, as it arrests the progress of the disease by relieving the congestion from the membrane of the bronchial tubes and air passages of the lungs, thus removing the cause. It is a certain and reliable cure, not a relief. It is pleasant to the taste, making it a desirable remedy for children as well as adults. In wasting diseases, known as consumption, there is no better remedy, as it gives relief where other remedies fail. We are writing this message to the sick and ailing sufferers from cough, cold, asthma, broncaitis, catarrh and lagrippe and those in the first stages of consumption to point out a remedy that will not only give relief but effect a cure. Those that are interested should write for Mark's household book, which will be mailed free on application to P. M. Mark Medicine company, Fosston, Minn.

IMPROVED CITY AND FARM PROPERTY AT A BARGAIN.

W. H. Cowing, one of Fosston's pioneer merchants, who came here in 1892, desires to dispose of his business block and two lots 50x140 feet on which is also a store building 18x50, and residence dwelling in one of the best locations. The business is also for sale with or without the real estate. It is the New York restaurant, confectionery, fruit, cigars and tobacco. The property is offered for $2,500, part cash and balance on time or the business for $800. This is a great snap, as the property is worth twice that amount. He also offers 160 acres located twelve miles south of town at $6 per acre. There is a new four-room, story and a half house, good new barn 16x16 with hay loft. There are 20 acres timber, oak and poplar, and 120 acres of prairie. Six hundred dollars down, balance on time, will take it. Land all around the Cowing farm is selling for $15 to $20 per acre without any improvements. The reason for this forced sale is sickness in Mr. Cowing's family. This is like finding money, so don't delay.

RESCUE OF A SAILOR

Who Floated on Two Planks for Twenty-Four Hours.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Capt. Fisk of the cruiser Minneapolis reported by mail the details of the rescue of James Olson of the schooner Twilight, which was wrecked in a gale off the Carlina coast. Olson, in his statement to Capt. Fisk, said that he and seven others were thrown off the schooner in a tremendously heavy sea, and encountered great danger from the lumber thrown into the sea, which was the cargo of the vessel. He secured two planks and with an arm thrown over each floated for a day in a heavy sea. When the storm abated somewhat, he tied the planks together, one across the others using strips of his oilskin coat for the purpose. He was able to sit upon this improvised raft and paddle himself along with a piece of wood which he had clung to from the time the schooner was wrecked. He had been twenty-four hours without food or drink at the time of his rescue, but was still able to paddle the raft and when he saw the lights of the Minneapolis he paddle it so close to her course that he was very near run down. The rescue took place at midnight.

STRIKE IN MEXICO WHEN FESTIVAL WAS STOPPED.

El Paso Tex., Oct. 2.—Mail advices to the Herald from Llanos De Oro, Sonora, tell of a strike and what came near being serious trouble there, incident to the holiday celebration, Sept. 19. An eight-day fiesta had been arranged, and the mine and mill were closed for two days, the men refusing to let work interfere with their merrymaking and gambling. Harry McKay, manager of the Llanos De Oro Mining & Milling company, went to the municipal officials, threatening to close the works, unless the festival was stopped. The authorities accordingly ended the festival. This angered the men, and they began a strike, and demanded $3 a day. Fiery speeches were made, and fifteen men were arrested. Five are yet in jail.

SPORTS

GOLF SEASON IS ABOUT OVER

Fall Championship Match Is Not Likely to be Played.

J. Q. A. Crosby's victory over B. F. Meyers, whom he defeated by a score of 3 up and 2 to play Friday, in the final round for the president's cup, practically concludes championship play on the local Northland Golf club links this year. The match Friday was exceedingly well played, and Mr. Crosby's title to the trophy is well earned.

The fall championship match may never be played. It has been postponed from time to time, as both Hopkins and McLennan, the two contestants left in the finals, have been out of the city, but as Hopkins has been here a number of times, and ready to play while McLennan has failed to show up, Secretary Alexander says that if Mr. McLennan does not put in an appearance in the near future, he will forfeit the match to Hopkins. This will give Hopkins permanent possession of the trophy, as the new ruling of the club gives the cup to the man who wins it in both fall and spring championships.

PRESIDENT SMITH UNDER ARREST

On the Charge of Living Unlawfully With Five Wives.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 2.—The president of the Mormon church, Joseph F. Smith, was arrested yesterday on the charge of living unlawfully with five wives. The complaint was sworn to by a Mormon deputy sheriff, the warrant was served by order of a Mormon sheriff and the committing magistrate is also a Mormon. President Smith was arraigned immediately after his arrest and waived preliminary hearing. He was bound over and released on his own recognizance.

President Smith reached here two days ago on his return from Europe. He then learned that an attempt had been made to secure his arrest for a statutory offense in connection with the birth of his forty-third child. The complaint was made from a distinctly anti-Mormon source. The county attorney is confused thus were unable to approve a prosecution on this charge. The attorney was then cited to appear in court and show cause why he should not be compelled to act in the matter. After the hearing the court held that the attorney was justified in refusing to prosecute, because the complainant offered no evidence that the mother of the child was not the wife of President Smith.

Whatever the motive back of yesterday's proceedings, the effect will be to disarm the criticism that has been directed against the authorities for their failure to take cognizance of the admissions made by President Smith before the senate committee during the late investigation of the Smoot case.

TO ADOPT NEW BULLET

Washington, Oct. 1.—The army will shortly adopt the new bullet, which was recently tested by several of the target experts at the national rifle meet at Seagirt, and found to be satisfactory by them. Instead of the rounded point of the present bullet, it has a long straight tapering point, and is also about one-third lighter, weighing about 150 grains. The new bullet has a great velocity up to 2,000 yards, a greater energy up to 1,400 yards, a flatter trajectory up to 2,000 yards, and a little better accuracy up to 2,000 yards.

The new bullet will require a slightly different firing chamber in the rifle, but this can be readily effected in pieces now under manufacture, and the necessary changes can be made in the pieces now in use with but comparative small expense.

NEW ENTERPRISE HAS BEEN STARTED AT WALKER.

Walker, Minn., Oct. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—A new enterprise has been instituted at Walker by local men, with Bert Jamison as manager, and which calls itself the Balsam Bough Pillow company. The company will do a mail order business, and the success of the venture is assured, owing to the exceedingly large demand over the country for Balsam pillows.

Laborer's Body Found on Iron Range Tracks Near Allen.

Biwabik, Minn., Oct. 2.—The body of a laborer believed to bo Orville James Hubert that was found badly mutilated by the crew of an ore train along the Duluth & Iron Range tracks near Allen Junction Sunday morning, is held at a local undertaking establishment. The only mark of identification found on the man's body is a ticket to St. Mary's hospital at Duluth, bearing the name Orville James Hubert. He was a young man and dressed like a woodsman.

BACK GIVES OUT

Plenty of Duluth Readers Have This Experience.

You tax the kidneys—overwork them—

They can't keep up the continual strain.

The back gives out—it aches and pains;

Urinary troubles set in.

Don't wait longer—take Doan's Kidney Pills.

Duluth people tell you how they act.

Ernest Grotke of 926 Fourth avenue east, Duluth, Minn., mason, says: "I speak from experience when I say Doan's Kidney Pills are a reliable and valuable remedy. I first heard of their merits from a friend who had received gratifying results in his own case, and I was then suffering from severe, dull pains in the small of my back and loins, and had become so bad that I was almost compelled to give up work. I procured a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. Although other remedies had failed to help me, I soon noticed the benefit, and kept on using Doan's Kidney Pills until the pain and other symptoms gradually but surely disappeared, until I was entirely free from the trouble."

TAFT'S TALK AT HAVANA

Good Advice Given in His Address at the University.

Urges All Classes to Take Part in Political Matters.

Havana, Oct. 2.—The following is Secretary Taft's address before the Havana university yesterday:

"I count it a peculiar honor, in my temporary representation of the executive of Cuba, to participate in the exercises of this university. This is especially interesting to me, because, when exercising the executive function in the Philippine islands, I took part in a similar ceremony in a university founded by the same order, but more than a century before this university was formed.

"All the members of the Latin race are accustomed, and not without reason, to characterize us Anglo-Saxons as abrupt and conceited in our view of our power of pushing civilization; but those of us who have come closer to Spanish civilization have been impressed with the consciousness that the Anglo-Saxons have much to learn from the intellectual refinement, artistic temperament, poetic imagery, high ideals and courtesy of the Latin and Spanish races. Spain has exerted a tremendous force in civilization and progress, but nations, like men, suffer reaction. The great public works which Spain erected testify to her patience and enterprise when we Anglo-Saxons were struggling with less pretentious things. But the civilization of Spain and all her institutions were founded on the idea of the control of the state by one man or a few men. That idea has ceased to have force. The Anglo-Saxons have brought to the front the idea that a people sufficiently educated to know what their rights were could more safely be trusted to determine how those interests should be preserved than one man or a few men, and because in the development of that idea we have the advantage of 200 years' education in self-government, we unreasonably plume ourselves with superiority in the knowledge of government which only circumstances have given us.

"It has recently fallen to the lot of the people of the United States, who have struggled along the road to popular government and fallen down and picked themselves up again, to aid some country who have not had that experience in coming to the enjoyment of benefits of popular government. The republic of Cuba has progressed so rapidly in the last years as almost to intoxicate the believers in the popular government. It was like the growth of a tropical plant which needed cutting in order that the stalk might gain strength. It is perhaps necessary that the Cubans should be warned that the foundations of self-government must be broad and solid rather than high and conspicuous. It is saddening to me to be called to Cuba and still sadder to President Roosevelt, who is so identified with its liberation, that we are here at the time of a stumble in Cuba's progress toward popular government, but it has given us an opportunity to assure you, in the name of that president and the American people, that we are here only to help you. With our arm under your arm we are lifting you again on the path of that wonderful progress you have traveled. We shall, I am confident, be able to point with pride to the fact that the United States is not an exploiting nation, but that she has such deep sympathy with the progress of popular government as to be willing to expend her blood and treasure in making the spread of such government in the world successful.

"Your difficulty was that you were brought up under the fifteen and sixteenth century ideas of government and were taught to look to others for the responsibility of government. You exercised only the function of criticism and most of your people, especially the educated and wealthy classes, trained themselves not only to indifference but to inactivity in the field of political and governmental matters. I find that law is committed to one class of people, medicine to another, commerce to a third and political matters to a fourth, and that the first classes lean back, through the influence of past association, and watch with intense interest, but I fear not with much influence, what is being done by the government. I venture the suggestion that if the other classes do not take a more active part and insist upon exercising their influece in politics, the question then naturally arises: What was the necessity of changing your form of government at all? The theory of popular government is that every class shall exercise a decided political influence, but it seems to me that your ideals have been too high.

"The hope of this country is in its educated youth. While I do not want to jar or make uncomfortable those youths who are entering active life, I must speak the truth. There are one or two traditions still persisting in this civilization. The first of them is that the learned professions are the only pursuits worthy of the graduates of this university. This is a great mistake. University education is not an obstacle to success in commercial life. I am afraid that young Cubans are not sufficiently infused with that mercantile spirit of which we have too much in the United States.

"What you need is the desire to make money, to found great interests and carry on the country's prosperity, and young Cubans, or rather most of them, ought to begin in business. There would be no trouble in forcing yourselves ahead in the next generation, so that the banks, comercial houses and shipping interests of Cuba would be in the Cuban hands instead of in the hands of foreigners. You must have foreign capital, and the debt of gratitude this country owes that great man, Estrada Palma, is that he realizes, more than other Cubans, the necessity of bringing in capital and convincing the world of the conservative character of your government in order that foreign capitalists might depend on its security. But the right of property and the motive of accumulation is the basis of all modern success and civilization, and until you have a community of political influence and control which is affected by the conservative influences of property ownership, popular government is impossible.

"Therefore, I urge the recipients of these diplomas, if they have Cuban estates, to devote themselves to the betterment of these estates, and that others enter commercial pursuits, so that when twenty-five years hence, a sympathic stranger comes here, he may not find a political class, a commercial class, and the sciences, and professions all divided; so that you do no; lack the benefit of a mixture of all to form that combination without which a successful republic is absolutely impossible.

"Nobody ever achieved a high ideal without failing two or three times, and failures must be made vehicles to success. Each failure ought to teach avoidance of that particular danger. When everything goes smoothly and you seem on the high road to success, then is the most dangerous time. When humbled by the lessons of disappointment you are in a proper spirit to win success.

"Viva the Republica of Cuba."

MOHAMMEDANS SET FORTH GRIEVANCES.

Simla, India, Oct. 2.—The most influential body of Mohammedans that has ever approached the Indian government, headed by Agra Khan and consisting of thirty-six members, representing every province and every branch of the educated Moslem community, yesterday presented an address to Lord Minto, the viceroy of India, setting forth the grievances and aspirations of the Mohammedans of India, and especially their claim for a fair share in any modified system of representation that might be contemplated.

In reply, Lord Minto said he sympathized with sincere Bengali sentiment. He said their hopes and ambitions were not due to disaffection, but to their education growth, the seed of which had been sown by British rule. The educational harvest would increase, but British ideas must prevail. Lord Minto promised all reasonable aid to the desires of the deputation, and promised his hearers that in any attempted modification of their religious beliefs, the national traditions would be respected.

CONFIDENCE IN INSURANCE

New York, Oct. 2.—Prof. J. H. Gore of Georgetown university returned yesterday from Europe on the steamer Potsdam.

As the representative of the United States government, Prof. Gore attended the recent international congress of actuaries at Berlin.

"Discussions in the convention showed that confidence abroad in American life insurance companies has not been at all shaken by the recent insurance revelations," he said, adding that the question whether teetotalers should be accepted by insurance companies, as a special class, had been discussed, but no conclusion reached.

BIG DOCK IS DESIGNED

Structure Will be of Concrete and Cost About $300,000.

W. B. Patton, former city engineer, and manager of the Duluth Engineering company, left today for Texas City, Tex., to carry the plans and get the work started on the large new dry dock which is to be constructed at that point at a cost of about $300,000.

In view of the size of the improvement, it is a matter of no small local pride that the plans for the work should be prepared by a Duluth firm of civil engineers.

The plans, which are elaborate and complete in detail, were made by the Duluth Engineering company for R. P. Clark of Galveston, Tex., and his associates, who have bought for the purpose an extensive tract of land from the Texas City company, which is comprised of A. B. Wolvin and his associates. From the fact that Duluth men are so largely interested in Texas City, the big improvement planned is of more than passing interest to many Duluthians.

The dry dock, when completed, will be the largest one on the gulf of Mexico, outside the United States government dry dock at Mobile.

It will accommodate the largest boat now engaged in the gulf trade, or that is likely to need dockage.

The city of Galveston, Tex., has no dry dock, owing largely to the sandy nature of its soil and the fact that the ground is but little above sea level. The nearest dry dock to Galveston has been New Orleans.

Mr. Clarke and his associates, it is said, expect to put in an up-to-date shipyard at Texas City, and the big dry dock is the first step in that direction. The soil is of clay, and very deep borings in that material already having been made to a depth of eighty-five feet.

The new dry dock will resemble somewhat in appearance that in the shipyards in Superior, except that it will be constructed of concrete.

It will be 600 feet long, 90 feet wide at the top, with 19 feet of water over the sill.

One of the novel features will be a middle gate, which will permit of one half the dock being used at one time when there is a smaller boat to be put in for repairs.

According to the plans the dock can be emptied of water in three and one-half hours. This will be done by two centrifugal pumps, with the capacity each of 25,000 gallons per minute.

The power plant will comprise a building 90 by 55 feet, equipped with a 400-horse power engine and complete with all the mechanical devices known to modern engineering. Among these will be the air compressors for hammer and riveting work at the dock, an electric lighting plant and complete system of fire protection for the dock.

The construction of the dry dock is to be started immediately. It is expected that the work will be completed in about a year.

VILLAGE OF NORTHPORT IS ALMOST WIPED OUT.

Traverse City, Mich., Oct. 2.—Almost the entire village of Northport was wiped out by fire yesterday. The estimated loss exceeds $50,000. The principal losses are the Northern hotel, $10,000; H. E. Gills' general store, $18,000; car ferry dock and warehouse, $15,000, and residence of Carl Shroeder, $5,000.

Fits Like Your Footprint

ONE OF THE REASONS.

Copying the Foot — The Copy (called the last)

Structurally all feet are alike, but there are 72 distinct races of men, and each race has its characteristics. Moreover, each locality, occupation or mode of living develops its own peculiar kind of feet. People of the Northwest have what is known as the "full" or athletic type of foot, which is the most nearly perfect of any. This type has in itself dozens of varieties and subdivisions.

To make shoes which will fit these various styles of Northwestern feet, it is necessary to take plaster copies—foot prints—of hundreds of feet, and by careful study and classification, secure a composite "last" or copy for each style of shoe.

The Gotzian Shoe has been built for over 50 years from lasts made exclusively from Northwestern feet.

It costs about $6,000 to prepare a complete new set of lasts for any style of shoe for the Northwest alone. If we made shoes for all sections of the country, we would either have to make four sets of lasts, at a cost of about $24,000, or sell the Northwestern last everywhere.

This explains why shoes made over eastern lasts fail to fit western people as the Gotzian Shoe does.

Most first-class dealers handle Gotzian Shoes and will gladly prove this argument by fitting you with a pair. Price, $3.50 and $4.00.

An interesting and instructive booklet, "How Shoes Are Made," sent free on request. Also shows latest fall styles.

INCREASE IN COKE MAKING

Due to Unprecedented Production of Iron and Steel.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The production of coke in the United States during 1905, according to a bulletin issued today by the United States geological survey, surpassed all previous records in the history of coke making in this country. Including the production of coke from by-product ovens, which in 1905 amounted to 2,462,948 short tons, the total output of coke in the United States last year amounted to 32,231,122 short tons against 23,661,106 short tons in 1904, and 25,274,281 short tons in 1903. The output of 1905 is an increase of 36.22 per cent over that of 1904.

The value increased in even greater proportion, from $46,144,941 in 1904 to $72,470,196 in 1905, a gain of $26,331,255 or 57 per cent.

The great activity in the coke making industry during 1905 was due to the extraordinary demand created by the unprecedented production of iron and steel.

The total number of ovens in existence at the close of 1905 was 87,564, as against 83,599 in 1904.

LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Mark Hanna's slogan in 1900 was, "Let well enough alone." He said McKinley had made a good president. confidence had been restored and the country was enjoying prosperity. The voters of America seemed to agree with him, for McKinley was re-elected by a large majority. I don't say it was a fair test of the strength of the two parties, for it is a matter of history now that the Republicans bled every trust and corporation to their full limit to carry the election. But however that may be, I for one am going to apply that rule to the present campaign for governor in this state. I am an independent in politics, and my best judgement tells me to take Mark Hanna's advice and let well enough alone. Governor Johnson has made as good a governor as McKinley made a president. The Minneapolis Journal, the Minneapolis Tribune, the St. Paul Dispatch, all admit he has made a good governor. Every other newspaper that I have read, regardless of party affiliations, says he has made a good governor. They all say they have faith in his honesty and ability. In fact, they are all proud of him, and every one I happen to talk to about Governor Johnson says he has been all right and has given us a good, clean administration of the affairs of the state.

But some say, "But he is a Democrat." But I say, what if he is a Democrat? If he has filled the bill; if he has administered the state's affairs according to law; if he has uncovered hidden corruption in insurance matters, and saved to the policyholders of this state millions of dollars that heretofore had been misused and gobbled up by reckless speculation; if he has saved to the state millions of dollars worth of timber trespass; if he has saved with one stroke of his pen more than $1,000,000 in freight charges to the shippers of this state, surely he has done something that merits the commendation of his political foes and the worship of his friends. One could go on and on enumerating the glorious achievements of our great executive, but space will not admit. Anyhow, the voters are better posted nowadays than they were when Clough beat John Lind. The campaign that year was the beginning of an age of reason. The Republican press told the people that if Lind was elected the state would be bankrupted, for, they added, millions of dollars of Eastern capital is invested in industries and millions loaned on chattel and real estate security that will all be withdrawn. Think of it—the great Republican organs like the Minneapolis Tribune, the Pioneer Press and the Journal, telling the people of Minnesota that after nearly fifty years of absolute Republican rule in all the branches of our state government, by a simple change in the governorship, only one branch of authority, the state would go bankrupt. In the winter of 1896 and 1897, after Clough had been elected and confidence restored, six or seven banks in Minneapolis and St. Paul went under and nearly $2,000,000 was lost to the state, besides a large sum to individual depositors. Yes, the voters of Minnesota, as in a great many other states, have been reading more and thinking more in the last ten years than at any other period in our existence.

Independence is the legitimate child of intellectuality, and we have nothing to fear from a voter who is posted on the affairs of his state. He is more liable to vote right than wrong. The class we may fear most are the extremely ignorant and the extremely wise. The former's condition we deplore, the latter's we abhor. The extremely ignorant may vote wrong more times than right, but he is not such a menace to society as the one that is too wise. The wise one says: "Well, I admit Johnson has made a good governor, but then Cole is a Republican and a Northern man, and I believe he will make as good a governor as Johnson." Another wise one comes up and says: "But Cole believes in state drainage." Now, what are we going to do with all these wise men, not from the East but from the North? If they would only stop to think where drainage and state development first began, I would think, from reading some of the little one-horse newspapers, that it emanated from the brain of A. L. Cole. Why, I remember six years ago we homesteaders down on the Big Fork used to get together in our log cabin homes and talk over the subject of drainage. We all had a practical knowledge of the necessities of drainage and good roads. We all agreed if we could get the lands drained, the good roads problem would be solved. Let a man carry a 75 or 100-pound pack on his back through several miles of swamp, and I tell you, my dear readers, he can talk state drainage to a governor or legislature like a Dutch uncle and not stutter either. Why, state drainage had become a bye-word with the settlers of Northern Minnesota before we ever heard of A. L. Cole. Mr. Cole may have done his duty as a member of the state legislature in an endeavor to get an appropriation for drainage, but he did it after the urgent appeals of his homestead constituents and the recommendation of Governor Johnson.

The Republican party in this state is now and always has been nothing more nor less than a huge machine kept in motion, not to carry out the will of the people, but to thwart it. The rank and file of the Republican voters wanted Jacobson as their candidate for governor, but the lumber interests wanted Cole and got him. But the independent voters will have a hand in saying who will be the next governor. The people are not all blind. The men of this state have made up their minds to think and vote as men and not as corporation assets.

STONE PRODUCTION

Increased by More Activity in the Building Trades.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The total value of the stone produced in the United States during 1905, according to a forthcoming report of the United States geological survey, was $63,798,748, a gain of $5,033,033 over 1904. The increased output for 1905 was caused by more activity in the building trades, and chiefly by a large increase in the output of limestone for use as furnace flux, which the reopening of many iron furnaces demanded.

Granite, marble and limestone increased in value of output, while sandstone decreased slightly.

Married Women

Every woman covets a shapely, pretty figure, and many of them deplore the loss of their girlish forms after marriage. The bearing of children is often destructive to the mother's shapeliness. All of this can be avoided, however, by the use of Mother's Friend before baby comes, as this great liniment always prepares the body for the strain upon it, and preserves the symmetry of her form. Mother's Friend overcomes all the danger of child-birth, and carries the expectant mother safely through this critical period without pain. It is woman's greatest blessing. Thousands gratefully tell of the benefit and relief derived from the use of this wonderful remedy. Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Our little book, telling all about this liniment, will be sent free.

LARGE CUT OF TIMBER

Would be Greater If More Labor Could be Secured.

Norway, Mich., Oct. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—For a region in which the white pine is no longer king, and which not so many years ago led all districts as a source of lumber supply, the cut of timber in the upper peninsula of Michigan will foot up a very considerable total during the season now opening, but it will be much less than were the suuply of labor adequate to meet demands. Thousands of men will find employment in the woods this fall and winter, and there is work for many more who cannot be procured. Numerous small jobbers who have operated in seasons past are making no preparations to open camps, for the reason that they cannot secure sufficient help nor can they afford to pay the ruling wages with the risk of serious losses resulting from unfavorable weather conditions.

It has been many years since wages in the woods have been as high, quality of much of the available labor considered. Nowadays, camp foremen do not inquire whether a man is a practical woodsman—the time when it was possible to make a selection of crews has passed. As one woods superintendent aptly puts it, "If I run across a man who can chop without cutting his foot, I hire him at $35 per month, which, of course, includes board and accommodations; in fact, the biggest part of the duties of a camp boss in these times is to keep his men from getting hurt."

The old time "lumberjack" is a decidedly scarce personage now. He has passed away along with the supremacy of the pine. His was a strenuous existence in the old days, and if he has not paid the penalty of the pace that kills and has fallen by the wayside, he has kept up with the progress of the big tree logging and will be found wielding the axe in the forests adjacent to the Pacific coast. His place is not being taken by the younger generation, for the reason that the lumbering industry is on the decline in the Lake Superior region and offers no particular inducements.

Formerly it was the custom, when the sawmills closed down in the fall, for the employes to go to the woods almost en-masse and work through until the "drive" was down in the spring. Now the most of these mills, the majority located on the Menominee river, have gone out of business and a considerable perecentage of those still in commission continue in operation during the winter season, their location now being so remote from the source of timber supply that they are no longer forced to depend upon the rivers as a means of getting in their logs, but receive their timber the year around by rail.

The Great Lakes Veneer company recently incorporated with a capital of $100,000 to take over the business of the Great Lakes Veneer & Panel company of Grand Marais, Alger county, has decided to transfer the scene of its operations to Munising, the county seat. A site has been donated there, and the plant will be removed to the new location and materially enlarged, considerable new machinery having been ordered. Construction will be started at once, and it is hoped to have the new factory in commission by Jan. 1. The product of the Munising plant will be furniture and piano veneers, and later on it is planned to erect a panel mill also. A ten years' supply of timber has been secured from the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, owner of upwards of a million acres of upper peninsula lands. The officers of the new company are: William Chandler, Sault Ste. Marie, president; E. L. Stanley, vice president; and Burdis Anderson, secretary, treasurer and general manager.

It is understood in lumbering circles in the east end of the peninsula that a deal is being closed for the sale of the Whitefish lake district of Mackinac county, and that the logs will be hauled to Grand Marais by the Manistique railway and sawed at the mill of the Marias Lumber company, which together with the rail line is controlled by Senator Alger of Detroit and associates. The identity of the principals to the pending transaction is withheld for the time being. The old Colwell shingle mill, tramway and wharf at Grand Marias has been sold by the Marais company to R. E. Schneider of that place, and it is said that the plant will be put in commission next spring. It has been idled for the last three years. Included in the transfer is 350 feet of the most desirable water front along the bay shore. A new and thriving little town, which has been given the name Cusino, is springing up at the Alger county headquarters of the C. H. Worcester company of Chicago, the largest cedar operator in the peninsula. A postoffice has recently been established, and it is understood that the shingle mill, which recently commenced operations, will continue in commission all winter. The Worcester company is conducting its operations by railroad out from Cusino and already has eight miles of track in place.

The South Side Lumber company of Traverse City, which recently purchased 800 acres of land in Schoolcraft county and has options on 200 acres in the same locality, has decided not to ship the timber to Traverse City, as first intended, but instead will erect a mill and engage in manufacturing operations at the scene of its logging work. A force of about 75 men will be employed, and sufficient timber is in sight to insure activity for several years. Timber as small as three inches in diamter will be utilized. A contract to cut the timber on twenty "forties" owned by A. McEachern & Sons of Gould City has been awarded to Hobson & McLaughlin, of Whitedale, Schoolcraft county, and camps are now being established. Pine, spruce, cedar and hemlock will be cut. C. G. Ekstrom of Manistique has recently purchased a million feet of standing timber, mostly maple, from A. McEachern and will log the tract this winter.

What is probably the choicest individual tract of white pine in the North country is that of Brown's Spur, where the Sawyer-Goodman company of Marinette has a big camp in operation. It is estimated that the timber to be cut from it will scale in the neighborhood of a hundred million feet. The cut of this company will probably be heavier this winter than that of any of the big concerns with mills on the Menominee river, its sawing operations being conducted the year round. A second camp of the Sawyer-Goodman company is located at Amberg, Wis., and a third is in commission near Mass City, in Ontonagon county.

The past sumer was the dryest in many years in the eastern portion of the peninsula, and loggers and timber land owners have been extensive losers. Even the cedar swamps, usually the wettest ground in the country, were affected by the drought, and men employed there were often forced to dig down into the earth in order to obtain brackish water with which to quench their thirst. Good-sized creeks diminished to ditches in width, or dried up altogether, and it was necessary to put on water carriers at many camps. Forest fires broke out and wrought great damage, burning ties, posts, poles and logs in many sections of Mackinac and Chippewa counties, besides destroying valuable standing timber. In the country out from Trout Lake these fires rages for weeks.

Hugh and John Whitwell of St. Ignace, have purchased 480 acres of timbered land in Town 43, Mackinac county, and have established a camp. Their cut will be pine, spruce and cedar, and they will bank on Pine river. Near Allenville, on the limits of John Wilson, the much despised balsam is being used in the manufacture of lath. The Oliver Roe Lumber company, a lower Michigan concern, has leased a sawmill site on Neebish island, in the St. Mary's river, Chippewa county, and will remove their plant from Allegan to the new location. Cutting 20,000 feet a day there is sufficient timber to last for several years. The Buckeye mill at Gladstone, Delta county, will run this season until the freeze-up, if not later.

Probably the most extensive individual jobber in the upper peninsula this season is Andrew Bjorkman of Iron Mountain, who has already commenced operations. He has several camps in commission, with 175 men on the pay roll, a force that later on will be increased to 450 men if that number is procurable. The labor supply and weather conditions permitting, Mr. Bjorkman will bank this winter 12,000,000 feet of pine, hemlock and cedar logs,, 50,000 cedar posts and 15,000 cedar poles. In addition he plans to cut 10,000 cords of pulpwood.

Half a dozen jobbers are cutting timber for the N. Ludington company, a large Menominee river concern, and the company itself is operating one camp. The Hamliton & Merryman company has a number of camps on the Menominee range, and has awarded contracts to two jobbers.

Much pine is still being cut in the upper peninsula, but a far greater number of operators are devoting their attention to hemlock, cedar, mining timber, cordwood and pulpwood.

MANY COMMENCE ATHLETIC WORK

Big Enrollment in Y. M. C. A. Classes at Opening Last Night.

With a larger enrollment than last year in nearly all of the classes, the athletic work of the Y. M. C. A. was commenced last evening under very favorable conditions. This is the last year in which the old building will be used for this work and the athletically inclined members of the association hope to make it a record year for their old home.

The classes are all arranged on schedule and are given accordingly, so that business men and others whose time is valuable can depend upon the classes being given at the appointed time. A large number of business men turned out at 5:15 last evening to attend the first meeting of the business men's class and a number besides have intimated that they will join. The lunch hour men's class is another popular one which will be well patronized this year. The young men's class will probably be the largest, however, and Director Maxwell expects some great things from those who have already joined or signified their intention of enrolling.

The schedule of classes which is printed upon a small card prepared by the association shows that the business men's class is instructed every Monday, Tuesday and Friday at 5:15, the lunch hour men's class at 11:45 Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, and the young men's class at 8:15 Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Wrestling can be practiced at any time excepting on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 8 to 9 p. m. The fencing class which is one of the features of this year's athletic work is scheduled for Mondays and Fridays from 7 to 8 in the evening.

"There is every promise of a very successful year in the athletic department of the association," said Director Maxwell last evening. "More and more men are enrolling every week and the classes this year are especially full. A great many business men are going to take advantage of the class set aside for them this year while the young men's class is nearly always well patronized. We intend to make some old building records this season."

THE PUBLIC DEBT

Washington, Oct. 2.—The monthly statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business Sept. 29, 1906, the debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $954,246,193, which is a decrease for the month of $16,122,190. This decrease is accounted for by a large increase in the cash on hand, due largely to increased receipts. The debt is recapitulated as follows:

Interest bearing debt $925,159,200; debt on which interest has ceased since maturity $1,126,375; debt bearing no interest $399,173,713; total $1,325,459,289.

This amount, however, does not include $1,067,323,869 in certificates and treasury notes outstanding which are offset by an equal amount of cash on hand which is held for their redemption. The cash in the treasury is given as follows: Gold reserve $150,000,000; trust funds $1,067,323,869; general fund, $189,049,387; in national bank depositories, $134,619,383; in treasury of Philippine islands, $5,314,734; total, $1,546,374; against which there are demand liabilities outstanding amounting to $1,175,094,378, which leaves a cash balance on hand of $371,213,096.

DR. FERRER RESIGNS.

Paris, Oct. 1—Dr. Ferrer, the Cuban representative here, has cabled to Senor Diago, acting chief of the state department at Havana, placing his resignation at the disposal of the provisional government of Cuba. The tender of Dr. Ferrer's resignation is in no sense a protest against what has transpired. On the contrary, like the resignation of Senor Quesada, the Cuban minister at Washington, it is offered in a perfectly sympathetic spirit, and with the view of facilitating and not embarrassing the task of the United States, Dr. Ferrer being convinced that American intervention was the only course open under the circumstances. It is believed that the other Cuban representatives abroad have taken similar steps.

Before submitting his resignation, Dr. Ferrer, acting upon instructions received from Senor Diago, transmitted to the French government an official notification of the institution of the provisional government of Cuba, including a textual copy of Governor Taft's proclamation.

No communication regarding Cuba has reached the French foreign office from the United States and, in view of the notification emanating directly from Havan, none is now anticipated.

THE WINNING STROKE

If more than ordinary skill in playing brings the honors of the game to the winning player, so exceptional merit in a remedy ensures the commendation of the well informed, and as a reasonable amount of outdoor life and recreation is conducive to the health and strength, so does a perfect laxative tend to one's improvement in cases of constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc. It is all important, however, in selecting a laxative, to choose one of known quality and excellence, like the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., a laxative which sweetens and cleanses the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after effects, as it acts naturally and gently on the internal organs, simply assisting nature when nature needs assistance, without griping, irritating or debilitating the internal organs in any way, as it contains nothing of an objectionable or injurious nature. As the plants which are combined with the figs in the manufacture of Syrup of Figs are known to physicians to act most beneficially upon the system, the remedy has met with their general approval as a family laxative, a fact well worth considering in making purchases.

It is because of the fact that SYRUP OF FIGS is a remedy of known quality and excellence, and approved by physicians that has led to its use by so many millions of well informed people, who would not use any remedy of uncertain quality or inferior reputation. Every family should have a bottle of the genuine on hand at all times, to use when a laxative remedy is required. Please to remember that the genuine Syrup of Figs is for sale in bottles of one size only, by all reputable druggists, and that full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co., is plainly printed on the front of every package. Regular price, 50c per bottle.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE—

Default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage executed by John Young and Margaret Young, his wife, mortgagors, to Duluth Brewing & Malting company, a corporation, as mortgagee, bearing date the 27th day of April, 1906, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of St. Louis County, Minnesota, at 8 o'clock A. M., on the 3rd day of May, 1906, in Book 231 of Mortgages on page 101. Said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to pay three installments of $50.00 each, with interest at 8 per cent per annum of a promissory note for $607.56 and interest at 8 per cent per annum bearing date the 27th day of April, 1906, one of which installments with interest thereon became due and payable on the first day of June, 1906, another on the first day of July, 1906, and another on the first day of August, 1906. By reason thereof the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has ever been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage. Said mortgagors have paid taxes assessed against the premises described in said mortgage, amounting in all to $28.15 and insurance premiums for insurance on the premises described in said mortgage amounting in all to $5.50.

Now therefore, in accordance with the provisions of said mortgage and because of said default, said Duluth Brewing & Malting company hereby elects to declare and does hereby declare the whole amount secured by said mortgage to be due and payable. The amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at this date, including the amount paid for said taxes and insurance is $661.00.

The property described in said mortgage and thereby mortgaged is situated in the County of St. Louis and State of Minnesota, and is described as follows, to-wit: Lots numbered eight (8) and nine (9) in block numbered two (2) in the village of Fall Lake, Minnesota, according to the recordded plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said St. Louis county, Minnesota. Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said premises above described, which sale will be made at public auction to the highest bidder for cash by the Sheriff of said St. Louis County, Minnesota, at the front door of the County Court House in the City of Duluth in said county on the 7th day of November, 1906, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage, including said taxes and insurance premiums and $50.00 attorneys' fees as stipulated in said mortgage, and the costs and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated Sept. 25, 1906.

Attorneys for Mortgagee.

Duluth Evening Herald, Sept. 25, Oct. 2-9-16-23-30.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage which was duly executed and delivered by John Felldin and Betsy Felldin, his wife, mortgagors, to Benjamine Johnson, mortgagee, bearing date November third (3rd), 1904, and which was duly recorded in the register of deeds' office for St. Louis County, Minnesota, on November fourth (4th), 1904, at 3:30 o'clock P. M., in Book two hundred twenty-one (221) of mortgages, on page one hundred twenty-seven (127) thereof; which mortgage, with the debt thereby secured, was thereafter duly assigned by said Benjamine Johnson to Annie Norling by an instrument of assignment dated May sixteenth (16th), 1905, and which was duly recorded in said register of deeds' office for St. Louis County, Minnesota, on May sixteenth (16th), 1905, at 3:15 o'clock P. M., in Book one hundred forty-seven (147) of mortgages, on page five hundred eighty-five (585); such default consisting in the non-payment of the principal sum thereby secured, with interest from May sixteenth (16th), 1906, no part of which has been paid;

And whereas there is therefore claimed to be due, and there is actually due, upon said mortgage debt, at the date of this notice, the sum of eleven hundred twenty-five and 60-100 ($1,125.60) dollars, principal and interest;

And whereas said mortgage contains a power of sale in due form, which has become operative by reason of the defaults above mentioned, and no action or proceeding, at law or otherwise, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof;

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, situated in St. Louis County, Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: The south half of the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter (s½ of ne¼ of ne¼) of section thirty-one (31), in township fifty (50) north of range fifteen (15) west, including the reversionary interest to the one acre tract in the northeast corner of said land conveyed by Martin Sandberg and wife to Aron Lundgren and Charlotta Lundgren by deed recorded in book 218 of deeds on page 154 in the office of the register of deeds of St. Louis County, Minnesota; which premises will be sold by the sheriff of said St. Louis County, Minnesota, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Duluth, in said county and state, on the eleventh (11th) day of October, A. D. 1906, at ten (10) o'clock A. M., at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty dollars attorney's fee stipulated for in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated August 28th, 1906.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON'S CAMPAIGN IN THE NORTH

Addresses Two Large and Enthusiastic Gatherings in Duluth.

Gives Clear and Comprehensive Statement of State Issues.

Governor John A. Johnson opened his campaign in St. Louis county last evening with two large meetings in Duluth, one at the West end and the other in West Duluth. No better demonstration of the governor's popularity was needed than the enthusiasm shown in the reception given him by the citizens from those two sections of the city. The halls in both instances were packed to the doors and at West Duluth many people who wished to hear the governor speak were unable to even get inside the building.

Governor Johnson reached the city from St. Paul at 7 o'clock and was met by William McEwen, chairman of the Democratic county committee; T. T. Hudson, National Democratic committeeman; Charles d'Autremont and a number of the other prominent local Democrats.

The governor's party was taken in charge by Albert C. Ribenack and Edward Filiatrault, who carried the members of the party to and from the meetings.

Before going out to the West end, Governor Johnson stopped at the St. Louis hotel, where a reception had been arranged for him by the Hebrew citizens of Duluth, and Oscar Tankenoff, a prominent Jewish citizen of St. Paul. The meeting took place in the parlor of the hotel and there were about fifty present. M. Z. Kasmir acted as spokesman for the Hebrews and in a short speech said many complimentary things regarding Governor Johnson's administration and told him that the Hebrews of Duluth feel very kindly toward him and will render all the assistance they can to have the governor returned to the executive chair for the next two years.

Governor Johnson responded and thanked the Hebrews for their expressions of good will. He declared that he has always endeavored to do what is right by all the people of the state of Minnesota and will, if re-elected, continue to treat them all fairly and see that the laws are enforced.

After the speeches, those present were presented to the governor and there were several minutes of handshaking and felicitations.

Following the reception at the St. Louis hotel, Governor Johnson and his party entered the automobiles awaiting them and were whirled out to the West end, where the first meeting of the evening was to occur.

The West Duluth meeting, held in the Great Eastern hall, was scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock. Judge L. G. Pendergast of Bemidji, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, was to occupy the first part of the evening until Governor Johnson arrived from his West end meeting. Long before the hour set for the speeches to begin the hall was filled and by the time Judge Pendergast arose to speak, standing room was at a premium.

Alderman Benjamin Getchell of the Eighth ward acted as chairman of the meeting. On the stage were Judge Pendergast, Mayor M. B. Cullum, T. T. Hudson, M. M. Clark, Charles Silger, J. J. O'Brien and J. Brotherton. After the governor's party arrived, the delegation on the platform was augmented by Kenneth McDonald, John Cashin, A. C. Weiss and others.

Chairman Getchell gave way to Mayor Cullum, who made a few opening remarks and introduced Judge Pendergast.

In introducting the speaker Mayor Cullum said:

"It is my duty to introduce to you the first speaker of the meeting. Owing to the fact that Governor Johnson has so many friends that he cannot crowd them all into one hall we have been obliged to string them out in halls between here and the city."

"On being introduced to Mr. Pendergast today I discovered that I had known him for a number of years, and was well acquainted with his honorable record. He was a member of one of the finest regiments in the Civil war. Forty-two and forty-three years ago tonight he was serving his country on the battlefield and he has a proud record. Since then he has occupied positions of public trust, and while poor in this world's goods, he is rich in all that goes to make out a well rounded man. Ladies and gentlemen

I take great pleasure in introducing to you Judge L. G. Pendergast, candidate for lieutenant governor."

Mr. Pendergast's talk was as follows:

"I will not attempt to address you on the record of Governor Johnson. He will be here himself and will be much better able to do so than I am. We came here tonight to get acquainted with you and to talk over some of the interests of this campaign.

"In a few weeks some of the leading politicians from outside of Minnesota are to come here to talk to you. Senator Beveridge of Indiana, Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, and Speaker Joe Cannon are to come here to tell us what is best for our individual interests.

"Now there is no national campaign, nor will there be one for two years, so we are not at all interested in national issues, or in subjects which these illustrious men may be interested in. Why then are they brought here to tell us how to run our private affairs.

"Suppose that you had a campaign on in West Duluth, with two political parties, one favoring improvements in your city, and the other maintaining that you ought not to add to its beauties or its attractiveness so as to induce people to settle here. Now, suppose the party which is opposing improvements should bring men from St. Paul, Minneapolis, or some other Minnesota town to tell you to 'stand pat' on the improvement question and enlighten you on what was best for your town; wouldn't you feel it an insult to yourselves and a confession of weakness on the part of the 'stand pat' party in West Duluth?

"Now, as Mayor Cullum has told you, I am an old soldier, older than I wish I was, and I want to talk to you on this soldier question. Do you know that for twenty-five years the Democratic party has been defeated simply as a result of the prejudice following the Civil war? This prejudice has been strengthened by press, public and pulpit during all this time. Why, the other day a gentleman of Bemidji said to me, 'It's an unpardonable offense for a Democrat to receive a pension from the government.' Now I'm a Democrat, and I'm receiving a pension, so I am guilty of that unpardonable sin.

"I believe, however, that this government owes me nothing. It was our duty to stand by the Union in that great conflict, and we all drew the $13 a month, which was all the government could pay at that time, regularly. Also, all the men who stayed at home and helped pay and feed that great army, and every woman or girl who sent her father, husband, brother or lover, to that war were doing their duty just as well and just as nobly as the men on the firing line.

"For that reason I don't believe the government really owes us anything, but if any of you think that a small debt of gratitude is due the soldiers who took part in that great struggle, don't think it is all due the Republican soldier. About 1,860,000 Republicans voted for Lincoln for president. If every one of these Republicans had enlisted there could have only been 1,860,000 men in the army. There were 2,850,000 men enlisted, and that other 1,000,000 were Democrats. Now, if you think that any wrong has been done the Democratic soldier, it is your duty to right that wrong, and unless you think my opponent can discharge the duties of his office much better than I can during the term of office, I think I ought to get your vote.

"Now, I want to talk to you a little about state politics. Duluth is the gateway of Northern Minnesota. Minnesota leads the world in the production of iron, and it is all shipped through here. Why don't you control it? Why isn't Duluth a city of 300,000 or 400,000 instead of 75,000? I think it is because there has been a little discrimination against her and against Northern Minnesota.

"Nature has been bountiful. There is in Northern Minnesota at the very lowest estimate timber aggregating $300,000,000 in value. There is territory which ought to have 5,000,000 people, instead of the bare 300,000 which are nowhere. Settlers are going into the Northwest territory, into a country far colder, far more difficult to cultivate, and far less productive than Northern Minnesota, and are leaving this great country untouched.

"It is to the interests of all Minnesota to see that this land is improved. A population of 5,000,000 people in the northern part of the state will not hurt the southern part. There are 5,000,000 acres of land unsettled. What has been done to make it attractive? The state received 2,500,000 acres of land from the government for the specific purpose of improvement, and what has been done? A few railroad lands have been drained, and that is all.

"I am not criticizing the state administration. I believe that the state auditor is doing what he thinks is right, and I believe that three-quarters of the people in the state are backing him up. They don't know as well as we do what is needed—that is all.

"I know. I have been a cruiser and a locater and have covered the country thoroughly, and I am sure that the management would be better for both north and south.

"It has been Minnesota's policy to hold land until settlers have come in around it and make it valuable an dthen sell at a high price. This is not right. Settlers will not occupy a place where large tracts of lands are held unimproved by the state.

"Now all this territory is directly tributary to Duluth. It is to your interest to secure men for state offices, in the legislature and elsewhere who will present this matter in its true light to the people of southern Minnesota and give them a correct understanding of the situation. We are not fighting them. The whole state is benefited by the settlement of its northern section.

"This question is most interesting, and it is bigger than the tariff question. It the interests of the northern section of Minnesota are attended to, Duluth will soon be among the biggest cities in the country.

"What are we to do about it? We must stand together and defeat men who are scheming for their own selfish interests. I naturally expect a larger vote here than farther south, and shall do all I can for northern Minnesota.

"Financially, I shall be much poorer if elected, but my interests in the development of this section of the country has led me to enter this race.

"As Governor Johnson has not yet arrived, and I have occupied the thirty-five minutes which I expected to take up, I will now introduce to you T. T. Hudson who will speak to you until the arrival of the governor."

Mr. Hudson then spoke at some length on political issues in general, and those of the present election in particular, and as the governor came in during his talk, he introduced him as our present, and, he hoped, our future governor. Mr. Johnson's entry was greeted with a burst of applause.

Governor Johnson said:

"I am not here to quarrel with anyone because he happens to differ with me politically. There is a decided awakening among citizens all over this country. We are realizing that because a set of men got together in Philadelphia and selected a list of officers they wanted, it is not incumbent on us to select that list. This sentiment of the people has been demonstrated the past year in Massachusetts, in Ohio, in Missouri and in other states. The people have demonstrated that they can select and elect their own men. They refuse to have the slate made up for them.

"The American people want the highest and the best form of government for all the people of the country. Their public officers must be governed by honesty of purpose.

"Two years ago I made the promise that, if I was elected governor, I should abide by and enforce the laws of our state as they stood upon the statute books, for the protection of the rights and the heritage of the people. I maintained that, if the laws were wrong, they should be corrected; but that no public officer in the discharge of his official duty had a right to assume that his position or authority was greater than the law of the state; that the constitution was more than a convenience; that it was a sacred instrument, and that in its declarations the people and their servants must abide.

"There are a number of achievements of which I and my associates are justly proud; but standing higher and above all these, we are proud of this fact, that we have abided by the laws of the state; that we have enforced the laws as we found them upon the statute books, and that, to the best of our knowledge and belief, there has been on our part no violation of the spirit or letter of a single law upon the statute books of our state.

"I maintain that it is the duty of every public officer to live up to the laws himself.

"You will remember that it was charged by the public examiner of this state, some time ago, that in the settlement of the state timber cases the law had been set aside. We do not claim that there was any dishonest purpose intended, but by reason of this disregard of the law the state of Minnesota lost many thousands of dollars to which it was rightfully entitled.

"I am satisfied that if all the state timber in Minnesota had been sold to the highest bidder, instead of $18,000,000 in our school fund we would have had $400,000,000, and the interest on this amount would have been enough to support all the schools without resorting to taxation."

Governor Johnson then dwelt for a little time on the method followed by some of the lumbermen in securing state timber permits. He said:

"A peculiar system sprang up. The timber men continued to neglect the cutting of the timber in the year for which they had a permit, but they would cut it a few years after the permit expired and when the timber had become more valuable.

"I said that if these charges by the public examiner were true I would collect the evidence and get every dollar that was due the state.

"One of my first official actions was to demand a complete transcript of all the charges thus preferred, and to submit the matter to the attorney general. In an official communication, dated Feb. 1, 1905, I made inquiry as to the status of all suits pending, and asked the attorney general whether his department was fully equipped to institute suits for the recovery of the money properly belonging to the state, and give immediate and continuous attention to the prosecution of these cases; that I considered it greatly important that their prosecution be immediate and continuous, and volunteered to co-operate to the fullest extent for the recovery of all moneys of which the state had been wrongfully deprived. The attorney general advised me that the current business of his office was sufficient to keep his office force industriously busy and that for the preparation and trial of the cases referred to, additional counsel would be required.

"On Feb. 5, 1905, this correspondence, together with a complete transcript of the public examiner's report, was submitted to the legislature in a special message urging that body to make proper provisions that there might be an enforcement of the law, and that the attorney general might have every facility for the prosecution of these cases. Pursuant to this recommendation, the legislature made provisions for the appointment of additional counsel by the attorney general, that suits might be instituted for the recovery of all the moneys belonging to the state. Suits were instituted. The defendants demurred to the constitutionality of the law providing for penalties for timber trespasses and illegal settlements. Necessarily the litigation has been somewhat tedious, but the supreme court of our state has finally handed down an opinion in which the constitutionality of the law is upheld, and there remains no doubt whatever of the successful termination and conclusion of these suits against a number of individuals.

"The result of this litigation has been that the state has received about $100,000 now and we have assurance of the recovery of $433,000 more.

"One of the peculiar things about the timber trespass is that all the timber men came in and claimed that the trespass was involuntary. Is it not a little strange that they never made the mistake of getting on each other's lands to cut timber? All the mistakes they made were in getting on the state lands. (Laughter and cheers.)

"That is the system that obtained in Minnesota for forty years and it seems no wonder that in Minneapolis so many magnificent homes have been built by the men who made their money in the timber business in this state in past years. I have no quarrel with the timber men where they have taken only what rightfully belonged to them.

"During our administration we have practically restored to the state $500,000 which the former administration said could not be collected.

"Our salaries aggregate only $10,000 per year so you see that the state has practically had a profit of $490,000 on our work. We are trying to convince you that it will be a good thing to continue your contract with us so that we can save the state money for two years more.

"Besides prosecuting the timber trespass cases we arranged for an examination of all state lands. We got through only six sections of state lands in Hubbard county when we found a discrepancy of 6,000,000 feet of timber estimated to be worth $8 per thousand feet. I am assured that we will find in this county alone, figuring treble damages, a discrepancy of fully $500,000.

"If we collect on all the timber trespass cases we will get at least $5,000,000. The question is this: 'Do you want us to go on with the work we have started or drop it?'

"Every man who ever took a stick of timber from the state should be made to pay not only full price, but a treble price.

"These lands were set aside for the people of the state and no lumberman had the right to cut off the timber. If I am elected the same policy will be followed as in the past two years and every man who has violated the laws of Minnesota will be brought to justice no matter what his position or wealth.

"In December of last year the state held its first real timber sale where the timber was sold in competition. The price secured for the timber was from 50 to 70 per cent higher than ever before. The state timber board held a meeting recently to arrange for another sale and the price of the timber in a certain tract was given consideration. State Auditor Iverson thought the timber should bring $8 per thousand feet. The cruisers thought the price should be $6 per thousand. Mr. Iverson held out for $8 and said that if the timber could not be sold for that price now the state ought to hold it; that the timber would be there to sell another year.

"I asked Mr. Iverson if he were sure it would be there, and he said, 'I want to say, Governor Johnson, that timber stealing has been stopped in Minnesota and that the timber will as surely be there next year and as safe as it would be locked up in one of the state vaults.'"

Governor Johnson next took up the railway transportation rate question and said:

"Two years ago I found that the rates of railway transportation were lower in Iowa than in Minnesota. I found this to be true of the rates in Canada, where they were much lower than in this state. I thought something was wrong, that there was a discrimination by the railway companies against the people of Minnesota.

"In my message to the legislature at the time of my inauguration, I took the position that there was an unjust discrimination of rates within our state. I still hold to that opinion.

"I pointed out on that occasion that the rates of transportation were from 25 to 40 per cent higher in Minnesota than in our neighboring state of Iowa and declared that any system which permitted this condition imposed a serious injustice upon the people of our own state. I took the position then that the failure of reform was not due to want of legal authority, but because of the lack of aggressive administration. The board of railroad and warehouse commissioners are today, and for several years past have been clothed with the legal authority to establish and enforce just and reasonable rates.

"In my inaugural message, I recommended the appointment of a joint legislative committee to make a full and complete investigation of the prevailing rates of transportation within this state, with a view of establishing a maximum tariff rate of transportation, which should be based upon a reasonable rate of interest and profit on the investment and which would be fair to all parts of the state and absolutely prohibit unjust discrimination between localities and individuals.

"The board of warehouse and grain commissioners took up the matter and started a hearing on railway transportation rates.

"During the pendency of the hearing the railroads proposed that if the warehouse commission would drop the matter of merchandise transportation rates they would reduce the rate on grain 10 per cent. This was regarded by me as an admission that the companies knew their rates were too high.

"I told the warehouse commission to continue the hearing and find out why we could not get a reduction on the rates for carrying all staples.

"The commissioners claimed that they could not do so now. They claimed that it would take two years to get ready to push the matter and gather such information as would be needed.

"The interview with the warehouse commission was a little stormy, but before we left it was agreed that the commision would accept the 10 per cent reduction in the grain rate, take up the matter of merchandise rates, and order a new hearing.

"Since that time there has been a reduction of 15 per cent in the coal rate and 10 per cent in the merchandise rate. This means a saving of more than $5,000,000 to the people of Minnesota.

"In order to get the information necessary to meet the objections of the railway companies, I employed a railway expert for the period of eight months to get up the schedules.

"If we have been tardy in the matter, as some of the Republican papers in the state have claimed, I want to remind you that there has only been two instances of reduction of railway rates in this state and those two were during the administrations of John Lind and myself. During the four years previous to my administration you never heard of any reduction being made in the rates.

"I believe that the railway companies are entitled to a fair and reasonable profit, to interest on their investment, and a fair profit above the operating expenses.

"I also found that the people of Minnesota were paying 2½ cents per mile for riding on the railroads. I found that if all the officials in the state who were riding on passes would pay their fares, the fares of the people could be reduced. I held out for a flat 2-cent transportation rate and public sentiment has been so strong for it that last summer, for the first time, a Republican convention in this county put a 2-cent fare plank in its platform."

Taking up next the subject of insurance, Governor Johnson said:

"When I came into office I found that a number of the insurance companies doing business in Minnesota were using their assets for their own particular advantage and not for the benefit of the policyholders. I found one company building $600,000 opera houses. The officers were receiving salaries from $5,000 to $20,000 per year. We started an investigation, got an expert to look into the matter, and found a deplorable condition of things. Every official connected with the company was removed and honest men were put in their places. In six months' time all the former officers of that company were under indictment by a grand jury of Ramsey county. Before our administration the insurance commissioner of Minnesota had made a report telling how safe and honest the concern was, yet in a few months after we took office the men running the company were under indictment and one has has since been convicted and sentenced to a term in the penitentiary.

"We found a number of other insurance concerns doing business along practically the same line. Every one so doing has been stopped or put out of business entirely. It is not alone in the matter of life insurance that the people of Minnesota are interested. They carry today more than a billion dollars in fire insurance and pay annually more than $7,000,000 in premiums for the fire insurance which they maintain. In addition to this, the people bearing casualty insurance pay upwards of $1,500,000 annually in premiums.

"Formerly the insurance commissioner of Minnesota had the office on a fee basis, but when T. D. O'Brien was tendered the position he refused to accept it unless he took it on a straight salary basis. The result is that last year, instead of being a burden to the state, the insurance commissioner's office earned $35,000 for the state.

"All this led us to investigate the insurance matter outside the state and we found that the same condition of affairs existed in other states."

At this point Governor Johnson touched on the history of the insurance scandals and the Armstrong investigation in New York.

Continuing, he said:

"We found the states powerless to control or regulate the insurance companies. I suggested to Insurance Commissioner Thomas O'Brien that we take the matter up with President Roosevelt. He thought that the president was too busy a man to attend to it. Anyway I wrote and the president replied that he was too busy to attend to the matter at that time. I then asked Mr. O'Brien to make a personal visit to the president and lay the situation before him. He did so and the result was that President Roosevelt called a conference of governors and insurance commissioners of the states who were to thrash over the situation and agree on a basis of life insurance in the country.

"The work of this conference was done so well that President Roosevelt sent its report in his message to congress, not forgetting to give us credit for our part in the matter. If our work has been important enough to attract this attention from the president, ought we not to get just a little credit from some of the state newspapers that have been maligning our administration."

"There are only two certain things," said he, "death and taxation.

"We all know that the small property owner has had to pay an excessive tax as compared with the other larger property owners. The state board of equalization seeks to equalize this distribution of taxes."

The governor then spoke of the big increase in mining property valuation in St. Louis county this year and remarked that the increased valuation in this one particular means a reduction of $700,000 in taxes to the people of the county. He considered that the part taken by the administration in bringing about the increase in valuation of the ore mines was a big return on an investment of $10,000 in salaries paid the state officers.

He talked interestingly of the work accomplished by the dairy and food commission of the state during its administration, the driving out of the box car merchant, the enforcement of the pure food and milk laws, and the prominence that Minnesota has been brought to by reason of its pure food laws.

He touched on the subject of state development and caused some amusement by stating that Mr. Cole is going about the state telling the people that the state is going backward and that the only way to save it is to have an immigration agent appointed to work over in the old country at a salary of $5,000 per year.

The governor dwelt with emphasis on the need of good roads and claimed that the people who live where it is proposed to build the roads will have to pay for them. He hoped that the state would exercise liberality, as far as it can, in the matter of road building and continue to spend money judiciously for the drainage of state swamp land.

Governor Johnson closed his speech with an eloquent tribute to the progress that has been made by the state of Minnesota during the last ten years, the patriotism and loyalty of her citizens and urged the people to take an optimistic view of Minnesota's possibilities in the future.

FOOD OR STIMULANT.

Ask your doctor if when he orders a patient to drink lots of pure milk he advises the addition of a large quantity of whiskey. He'll tell you "no" very emphatically. Yet there are people who, when ordered to get Scott's Emulsion, will accept some wine, cordial or extract of cod liver oil and think it is the same thing or better. If you want and need cod liver oil in its best, purest and most easily digested form, get Scott's Emulsion. If you want whiskey, that's another matter, but don't look for the same results.

Piles Cured Quickly at Home

Without Pain, Cutting or Surgery. Instant Relief.

We Prove It. Sample Package Free.

Seven people out of ten are said to have Piles. Not one man in a million need have them and we are proving it every day at our own expense. We send a sample package of the wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure to any person absolutely free.

We don't do this as a matter of ausement or philanthropy, but because it is to our interest to do so. We know that the sufferer from piles, tormented and driven almost crazy by this wretched trouble, will find such immediate relief that he will go at once to his druggist and buy a box and get well.

We know that we have got the greatest remedy in the world for piles, and we are ready and willing to stand or fall by the verdict of those who make the trial. We have been doing this for some years now and we never yet have had occasion to regret it.

And the remedy at the drug store is exactly the same as the sample we send out. As, for instance, here is a man who got such immediate relief from the sample that he at once bought a box. Was it just the same? Undoubtedly, since it cured him after all sorts and kinds of things had failed.

Here is a sample of the kind of letters we get every day and we don't have to ask for them:

Received your sample of Pile Cure and have given it a fair trial and it has proven the best I ever tried and effected a complete cure. I can recommend you highly in this vicinity. Have used your sample and one box and it has been a complete cure. It has been worth $100 to me.

Thanking you for the sample and the cure, I will recommend you to everybody. Yours Respectfully, Julius Mayer, Dealer in Feathers, Ginseng and Hides, Bedford, Ind.

Pyramid Pile Cure is for sale at every druggist's at 50 cents a box or, if you would like to try a sample first, you will receive one by return mail by sending your name and address to The Pyramid Drug Company, 59 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

THE WEST END MEETING.

Big Lincoln Park Auditorium Filled by Enthusiastic Crowd.

The Lincoln Park roller rink, with its capacity of 2,500 people, was well filled last evening for Governor Johnson's West end meeting. A conservative estimate of the number present would be from 2,000 to 2,200.

The governor and the members of his party, including County Chairman Mercen and other prominent local Democrats, arrived at the lower corner of Lincoln park at 7:45 and were escorted to the rink by a brass band and a torchlight brigade, the band furnishing music to announce the governor's arrival and the torchlight bearers lighting the party along the driveway of the park. At the hall the party was met by a reception committee composed of William Bernard, Aug. Hagberk, J. H. Schulenberg, A. C. Weiss, C. D. How David Nelson, Otto Johnson, Alderman Charles Mork and Alderman Frank Schaffer. The governor and his escort were piloted through the crowd about the entrance and to the front of the hall where Mr. Johnson was the first to step upon the platform. When the crowd caught its first glimpse of the chief executive of the state as he ascended to the platform, he was greeted by a resounding cheer and was obliged to bow before seating himself.

The governor was followed upon the stage by the members of his escort and by the West end reception committee of which William Bernard acted as chairman. Mr. Bernard stated that the time was too short for an introductory speech on his part and the governor was made known to the crowd immediately. The introduction of the governor was a signal for another demonstration on the part of the enthusiastic west enders and it was some moments before Mr. Johnson could begin his address.

When quiet was restored, the governor arose and began his short speech. He stated that he was very much pleased to be greeted by such a multitude at a meeting so early in the campaign, and went on to tell about the duties of the chief executive of the state of Minnesota and why the people should re-elect him for another two years. During the course of his speech, which was in the main very similar to his West Duluth address, the governor touched upon the timber trespass question and how the laws in regard to it had been enforced during als administration as they had not been enforced in the preceding ones. Mr. Johnson also discussed the great issue of state development and stated that he was heartily in accord with the idea of pushing forward the development idea. The insurance reforms were touched upon by the speaker who discussed what had been done along this line in Minnesota as well as in the eastern states.

After concluding his address, Mr. Johnson and his party again entered the two automobiles at the entrance to the park and sped off to the meeting at West Duluth. Just as the auto in which the governor was seated was starting one of the crowd watching the movements of the executive party shouted, "We are going to give you two years more, Mr. Johnson." The cry was taken up by the crowds leaving the park and the governor's exit was a triumphal one.

SPECIAL GUARDIAN

Appointed for the Young Son of Herman Oelrichs.

New York, Oct. 2.—Paul L. Kiernan, a lawyer of this city, yesterday was appointed special guardian for Herman Oelrichs, the 15-year-old son of the late Herman Oelrichs, for the purpose of protecting his interests in any suit that may be brought. The appointment was made upon application of the boy's mother.

Whether the appointment of a guardian for the lad is for the purpose of contesting the will is not known.

Of Farmers' Products to be Held at Frazee on Saturday.

Frazee, Minn., Oct. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The annual exhibit of farmer's products will be held here next Saturday. A fine display is promised. Over twenty cash prizes will be awarded. Among the amusement features will be, a tug-of-war, between Height-of-Land and Silverleaf townships, and another between Luce and McHugh. A lively day is expected.

The Becker County Teachers' association will hold its first session at Frazee, Oct. 13. The following program will be given: "Nature Study in Rural Schools," Roland Neal; "Arithmetic and Methods," President Shoemaker; "School Room Decoration," Miss E. Hildreth; "Language in Lower Grades," Miss Edith Colehour; "Grammar in Upper Grades," Miss Edna Danford; "Address," President Shoemaker, of St. Cloud. The executive committee consists of the following officers: President, J. J. Bohlander; vice president, Rudolph Geiser; secretary, Mary A. Hanson; treasurer, Belle Rumery. Other meetings have been arranged for at Detroit and Lake Park during the year.

HORRIBLE ATROCITIES COMMITTED BY COSSACKS.

Kherson, Oct. 2—Ninety-seven peasants were tried here yesterday on the charge of having devastated the estate of M. Krivoshein, formerly minister of railroads. Sixty-three were sentenced to imprisonment, while thirty-four were acquitted.

The trial brought out horrible atrocities committed by the authorities upon the accused. The chief of the district, accompanied by a detachment of Cossacks, reached the estate soon after the devastation. All the peasants on the ground were at once gathered in. No investigation was made. The chief invited priests to administer the last sacrament to the prisoners, and then ordered the Cossacks to beat them all to death. The butchery lasted four hours. Twenty-three peasants were killed and 135 mutilated. The Cossacks, then thoroughly tired, compelled the peasants to continue flogging each other, and men had to beat their own brothers, sons and fathers. The victims of this slaughter were innocent, those really guilty having escaped by flight. In spite of these revelations, the court found sentences, as related above.

EXCELLENT HOME TREATMENT FOR CONSUMPTION AND THROAT TROUBLES.

The camps for tuberculous patients in the pine forest of Maine, established by Dr. A. N. Wallace of Philadelphia, have demonstarted a new and wonderfully successful phase in the treatment of pulmonary diseases. Dr. Wallace's treatment has gained almost universal recognition among the medical profession and he has been deluged with inquiries from afflicted people in all parts of the country.

In an interview recently by a New York newspaper representative, Dr. Wallace gave out some information that will prove of immense value to the public in general.

He said that the remarkable stimulating effect on the respiratory organs by the resinous atmosphere of the pine forest has been a matter of interest to the medical world and that doctors in general would have long since availed themselves of the great curative merits of the pine sap had they been able to obtain its active principles freed from the many deterious matters with which it is associated by natue. The extracting of the medicinal properties of pine has been one of Dr. Wallace's great achivements while at work in the forest camps and he has produced what is known to the medical fraternity as concentrated Oil of Pine. Dr. Wallace stated that if this preparation be used in connection with plenty of out door exercise and the habit of taking long deep breaths every few minutes, patients will have all the advantages of the pine forest camps right at their own homes and the most effective remedy obtainable for any case of lung trouble that is not too far advanced and a cure for any cough that is curable. The reporter also procured the formula that Dr. Wallace is now prescribing. It is the following: One half ounce concentrated Oil of Pine; two ounces of glycerine; eight ounces of good whiskey. It should be shaken thoroughly and taken in tablespoon doses every five hours.

The ingredients can be procured from any well stocked prescription druggist. Care should be taken to secure only the concentrated Oil of Pine which comes put up for medicinal use in half ounce vials and inclosed in small round wooden cases which protects it from heat and light. The ordinary cheap Oil of Pine is useless owing to the foreign matter that it contains and the quantity that would be necessary; it only produces nausea and fails in specific results.

The concentrated Oil of Pine has also proven a most efficacious remedy when taken raw for rheumatism and disorder of the urinary passages. For this purpose a few drops taken on sugar night and morning, will bring immediate relief, especially in cases of uric acid rheumatism and lumbago.

CHILD KILLED AND SCORE OF PEOPLE ARE INJURED.

New York, Oct. 2.—A child was killed and a score of men and women injured, five or six dangerously, last night, when a runaway car of the Yonkers street railway dashed down the steep incline of McLane hill, turned over burying the passengers in the wreckage. The accident was due to the breaking of a chain attached to the brake.

FIVE CASES OF YELLOW FEVER AT HAVANA NOW.

Havana, Oct. 2.—The sanitary situation is receiving very serious consideration at the hands of the provisional government. In addition to the five cases of yellow fever here, there are several suspected cases at Cienfuegos and elsewhere.

Transportation, hotel and other interests most affected by the American quarantine against Cuba are preparing to petition Governor Taft to maintain control of the sanitary affairs of the city.

SUICIDE IDENTIFIED.

Stockton, Cal., Oct. 2.—A man who shot and killed himself on the street here Friday night has been identified as J. G. Carmichael, Jr., son of a wealthy Jackson, Ga., man.

Nervous Troubles Overcome

A recent letter from Mrs. W. J. Schaurer, 220 Guthrie street, Louisville, Ky., tells a remarkable story of her experience with the new preparations with which L. T. Cooper has aroused the leading cities of this country, and which is now selling throughout the United States in enormous quantities.

Mrs. Schaurer states that she had suffered from a severe nervous trouble, superinduced by an affection of the stomach, and could find nothing that seemed to give her relief.

To relate the story in her own words, Mrs. Schaurer says: "My system was badly run down and my stomach and nerves in an awful shape. I could not digest my food, was always tired and would often feel faint and dizzy."

"I had heard so much of Mr. Cooper's wonderful medicines that I purchased a small quantity and began taking it. The result has both surprised and delighted me, for relief and strength and happiness were found in the first bottle, and the benefit I had received from it has been truly marvelous. I no longer have dizzy and faint spells. My appetite and digestion are good, and I can eat everything, and sleep well. It is a splendid medicine."

Cooper's New Discovery sells for $1 per bottle. It is Mr. Cooper's claim that he accomplishes such remarkable results with the preparation, simply because it puts the stomach in working order, and nature will then do the rest.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Several of the members of the local organization of the Women's Relief corps will leave tomorrow morning for Aitkin, where the annual convention will be held. Sessions will be held tomorrow afternoon and evening and the Duluth women in attendance will be Mesdames MacMullin, M. Thomas, Pierce, Keyser, Hamblin, J. W. Preston, Ross, Wolf, Barnum, May Preston, John Williams, B. F. Anderson, Butchart, Brenton, Meeds, McGindley, J. H. Sullivan and J. T. Armstead.

An inspection of the corps will be held Friday afternoon of this week at Rowley hall by the department president, Mrs. Ida K. Martin of Minneapolis. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Starkweather of Minneapolis, who is at the head of the Soldiers' Home board in that city. A camp fire is being planned by the local members, but the date has not yet been definitely decided.

MATINEE MUSICALE.

Seventh Season Begins With Most Favorable Outlook.

The opening reception of the seventh year of the Matinee Musicale in this city was held yesterday afternoon at Steinway hall and the room was filled with former members and their friends. A short opening address was given by the president, Mrs. Percy Gough, in which the satisfying growth of the club in all directions was mentioned and the primary object as named in the constitution, the promotion of the musical culture of Duluth, emphasized. A short musical program was presented, by Oliver Colbentson, Mrs. C. P. Craig and Mrs. Mark Baldwin. The two latter named musicians appeared in place of Mrs. James McAuliffe, who was ill, and Emily Ellis Woodward, who was unable to sing the group of songs announced for her, because of a severe cold. Miss Mae Wylie gave a reading, "The Birth of the Opal," a fanciful conceit by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, which has been furnished a musical setting by Stanley Hawley. The accompaniment was played by Miss Ethleen Fee.

Following the program, a reception was held and the sale of tickets took place. The year promises to be the most successful in the history of the club.

The next meeting, which will be the first regular meeting of the year, will be held at the First Methodist church when organ and oratorio music will be studied. The club members will have the assistance of Horace Reyner, organist of the church. The meeting will be an open one and the members have the privilege of inviting their friends.

Gymnasium Classes.

Yesterday the first classes in the physical work of the Young Women's Christian association were held in the gymnasium, with Miss M. Velna Yeaw director. Two matrons' classes, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, were organized, and a class in the evening for the young business women. The attendance was most gratifying, more being enrolled upon this first day than during the first day of any previous year. The work of organization will go rapidly forward during the week.

Personal Mention.

Miss Etta Barnes, who has recently returned from abroad, where she passed the summer, was the guest of her mother, Mrs. Julia M. Barnes, for a few days. She will resume her teaching at the Marquette normal school.

The Bishop's club will hold the first meeting of the year this evening, at the club rooms. The plan of study for the year will be presented to the club, and Bishop McGolrick will give a short talk. An informal social hour will follow.

The annual reception of the Central Business college will be held Friday evening of this week at the rooms, 30 East Superior street. The affair is in honor of the students and their friends, and the receiving hours will be from 8 to 10 o'clock.

What Retail Markets Offer

Damson plums, 15 cents a quart.
Beet greens, 30 cents a peck.
Rutabaggas, 5 cents a peck.
Beets, 30 cents a peck.
Beef hearts, 15 cents each.
Calves' brains, 10 cents a set.
Pork tenderloin, 25 cents a lb.
Pig hocks.

Pork tenderloin is one of the kinds of meat which are clear gain. No fat, no bone, no neck or end pieces to dispose of, and although it would undoubtedly have kicked up a family row in Jack Sprat's family—but no it wouldn't either, because they never would have any, as "his wife could eat no lean" and presumably she did the catering and marketing considering that she was an old fashioned woman and didn't belong to any bridge clubs or wasn't interested inthe psychological reason of why the lean was not agreeable to her and John just abominated the fat—and she of course personally saw to it that there was plenty of fat in the house.

There is a new way, at least new to some people, that the butcher, when he has time, fixes pork tenderloin. He takes a nice sized little chunk and wraps about it a piece of white, glistening, fat pork and fastens it there, and then you are supposed to roast them. The fatness drips and oozes all through the tenderloin and when they are served with a few other delights, there is a temporary surcease of sorrow—if you are not a vegetarian.

The EVENING STORY.

TOMMY'S CIGARS

By G. F. Millin.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Thomas Traddles—Tommy Traddles, as we all called him—was a piquant and interesting old bachelor. He was very popular in a wide circle of acquaintances, for added to his amiable personal qualities, he had plenty of money and was gloriously hospitable. At the same time he possessed parsimonious peculiarities that made him the subject of innumerable good stories, adding considerably to the amusement of all who knew him.

Still he was, indeed, the last man in the world we would have expected to be bowled out in an act not quite consistent with severest rectitude. So when Dickson came hurriedly into our hotel at Boulogne and told us that Tommy was proposing to do a little smuggling, we were all disposed to be incredulous.

We had picked up Traddles on our way home from an autumn holiday in Normandy. It was the morning of the day on which we had arrived to take the boat across from Boulogne that Dickson told us how he had chanced to spy the solemn, immaculate Tommy in the very act of making up a brown-paper parcel of dried botanical specimens, in the middle of which he was cunningly concealing some bundles of Petits Bouquets, evidently in the hope of smuggling them.

We were all highly diverted, and agreed that it was just like Tommy to grow parsimonious over a small importation of the best cigars.

We felt we had got Tommy on toast this time, and we owed him a long score for practical witticisms played upon us. Now we could pay him in his own coin, although we couldn't agree as to the best method of doing it. What we wanted was to expose Tommy's little enterprise without doing him any real harm, and that was just what we couldn't quite see our way to do.

Kingstone took no part in the discussion until we seemed to have reached the end of our inventive resources; then he quietly announced that he had a capital plan, and if we would follow his directions, Tommy should have a startling show-up. With the promptitude of a master mind in command of dolts, Kingstone first held a whispering aside with the simple-hearted Dickson, and then sent him away on some errand, and with many an irrepressible chuckle, he proceeded to initiate the others into the parts each would play in his plot.

According to instructions, we began by displaying an inquisitive interest in Traddles' parcel as soon as we got on board the boat. We offered to lend him a small portmanteau to which he might transfer his botanical specimens. It would be more convenient and would look better.

Then we got up a fervent interest in botany, and begged to be allowed to inspect his collection. This he flatly refused, which naturally suggested something mysterious about the contents of his parcel, and we chafed him a good deal, hinting at contraband goods.

As our voyage progressed, we agreed that Traddles was not happy. Apparently the parcel weighed on his mind, and quite unscrupulously we took every means of increasing his uneasiness. We enlarged on the folly of smuggling, and told tales of ignominious exposure and heavy fines.

"Fines!" echoed one of our party. "They don't fine nowadays. Since the last act the penalty for smuggling is imprisonment, without the option of a fine."

Poor Tommy's face was a study. His jaw dropped dismally, and he looked altogether moody and miserable.

As we drew near the end of the voyage Traddles looked as if he would give worlds for the opportunity to drop the wretched parcel overboard, if only he could get it out of our sight for a moment. We took good care, however, that there should be no backing out of the enterprise, and as Tommy marched down the gangway he looked, or we fancied he did, a little white about the mouth, but he held his virtuous head so upright, and dandled the parcel with such an air of innocent concern, that he might have passed through but for the astounding action of Dickson, who hurried forward and tipped a wink to the man in buttons as he passed.

"Anything to declare?" was the phlegmatic official inquiry, as Tommy passed.

"Nothing dutiable," declared the audacious Tommy, with an air of dignity that should have carried conviction. "Only botanical specimens and—and—one or two other things. Not dutiable, I assure you."

Tommy tried very hard to maintain an aspect of outraged dignity as the officer resolutely began to untie the parcel, but he couldn't help betraying the greatest agitation. He stood the very picture of a detected criminal. He protested, then he blustered and coaxed.

It was, of course, useless, and the official was deaf to entreaty. With heartless deliberation he first opened an outside paper, then an inner paper, and then began to rummage among the botanical specimens, in the center of which he found—a small, crusty loaf of bread!

It was, of course, the very familiar joke that Dickson had perpetrated under Kingstone's direction. He had contrived to take out the cigars and slip in the loaf, and then had set the customs official on the intending smuggler.

Thomas had the appearance of a man who could not believe the evidence of his own eyes, and, what was even funnier than his puzzled look, was the prompt reassumption of the outraged virtue air.

"Sir, I told you there was nothing to declare!" said Tommy, sternly, as the man deftly retied the parcel and pushed it from him.

We presently discovered him locked in a first-class carriage, quite by himself, apparently intending to cut us. That, of course, couldn't be permitted, so some one produced a key, and we trooped in, charitably bent on reconciliation.

Tommy sat in a corner, grim and unyielding.

"Only a bit of holiday fun, you know, Traddles. Don't take it too seriously, old man," pleaded Dickson.

"You admit, then, that you took them out of my parcel?" said Tommy, opening his mouth for the first time, and speaking with an offended air.

"I don't deny it," said Dickson, "but you know, Traddles, you might have—"

"And you were all parties to the theft?" he interrupted.

There was loud laughter at this unexpected view of the case.

"Hang it all, Traddles," urged Dickson, "you can't say we stole your cigars, when the worst we've done has been to get 'em through the customs for you."

"Well," replied Traddles, quite implacable, and speaking in his sternest manner, "I won't say anything further on the score of theft, but I'll show you what I'll do."

And to our amazement he dropped the window and shouted to a customs officer who stood on the other side of the platform. The man came promptly to his call, and Tommy addressed him.

"Officer," he said, "this man admits having brought these cigars ashore in his handbag without having officially declared them." Having said this, he dropped into his corner with the air of a man who had accomplished a painful duty.

We were all taken back. It was true that Dickson had without giving a thought to the cigars in his own bag, succeeded in smuggling them through, and, as had been explained, the mere payment of duty would probably be insufficient to get him out of the trouble.

For the first time in our knowledge of him, Tommy, the hospitable, sociable old joker, had done a really malicious thing.

The officer's manner was very quiet and very serious. Taking possession of the cigars he intimated that Dickson must accompany him to the supervisor, and with something like a groan, the culprit departed. We all trooped after him, and as we left the carriage every one of us, except Kingstone, hurled reproaches at the grim figure in the corner, who went on to town by the train, which started very soon after we left it.

We tried to make the supervisor understand what had happened; to show him that the real culprit was the informer himself. But although the officer looked sagacious enough he seemed extremely dense, and could see nothing but the fact that it was not the informer who was actually guilty of smuggling.

He hinted that from his own evidence, as well as from our story, it was clear we had all taken part in it. He could not undertake the responsibility of a decision in the matter, so the whole party would have to go before the magistrate.

Here, indeed, was a pretty wind-up to a pleasant holiday! Our luggage, it now occurred to us, must have gone on to London in the train with Traddles, and if the magistrate was only half as pig-headed as the supervisor, no one could tell when we should be able to follow it.

We had worked ourselves to a climax of exasperation, when a lad came in and handed the supervisor a note. He opened the note, and as he read we saw that it contained a surprise.

He hastily turned to Tommy's Petits Bouquets that lay on the table beside him, eagerly examining first one and then another, finally extracting a cigar; he broke it in two, then suddenly seizing both bundles he came out to us in a towering rage.

"Take your rubbish and go to the devil!" he said.

"What's up? What's the matter now?" we broke out, each in his own way.

"Clear out, I tell you," roared the furious official; "I've had enough of this foolery."

"What do you mean?" ejaculated Dickson, and as he spoke he drew out one of the Petits Bouquets and broke it as he had seen the supervisor do, and then we saw what Tommy had done. They were mere dummies of cigars, and, of course, were not dutiable at all.

"We shall just catch the 4:28," said Kingstone in his driest manner. "We shall find Tommy on the platform with the luggage. I believe he expects us to dine with him at the Criterion tonight. He wired us to arrange, I know."

Dickson was the only one who did not look like giving a ready acceptance, for he had been specially victimized all through.

"Look here, Kingstone," he said, as soon as we had got out of the supervisor's office, "did old Traddles let me see him making up that parel on purpose?"

"Of course, he did," replied Kingstone, taking him by the arm, and moving on. "He's been planning this little sell for weeks. Come on, or we shall lose the train."

TORTURED BY ITCHING SCALP

Eczema Broke Out Also on Hands and Limbs—Suffering Intense—Doctors Said Too Old to Be Cured—An Old Soldier of 80 Years Declares:

"CUTICURA TREATMENT IS A BLESSING"

"At all times and to all people I am willing to testify to the merits of Cuticura. It saved me from worse than the tortures of hades, about the year 1900, with itching on my scalp and temples, and afterwards it commenced to break out on my hands. Then it broke out on my limbs. I was advised to use salt and water, which I did, to no effect. I then went to a Surgeon, who commenced treating me with a wash of borax. This treatment did me no good, but rather aggravated the disease. I then told him I would go and see a physician in Erie. The reply was that I could go anywhere, but a case of eczema like mine could not be cured; that I was too old (80). I went to an eminent doctor in the city of Erie and treated with him for six months, with like results. I had read of the Cuticura Remedies often. I was strongly tempted to give them a trial, so I sent for the Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent and continued taking the Resolvent until I had taken six bottles, stopping it to take the Pills. I was now getting better. I took two baths a day, and at night I let the lather of the Soap dry on. I used the Ointment with great effect after washing in warm water, to stop the itching at once. I am now cured.

"The Cuticura treatment is a blessing and should be used by every one who has itching of the skin. I can't say any more, and thank God that He has given the world such a curative. You can use this letter as you please. A very much befriended man, Wm. H. Gray, 3303 Mt. Vernon St., Philadelphia, Pa., August 2, 1905."

FEAR OF ANOTHER STORM

to roofs, in order to avoid, as far as possible, a repetition of the damage by yesterday's rain.

Relief work for the stricken communities down the bay is now systematized and working admirably. Food, clothing and bedding is being furnished as rapidly as possible, and although there is still much suffering, it is not as acute as at first.

There is still need, however, for all the supplies that can be sent in from outside points.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 2.—Forty-four lighthouses either swept into the sea and lost or the structures so badly damaged that no lights can be shown, and four lighthouse keepers drowned during last week's hurricane is the summary of the report made by United States Lighthouse Inspector Sears of New Orleans. These lights were located on the coast and adjacent islands between the mouth of the Mississippi river and Mobile. Mr. Sears did not investigate the lighthouse losses between Mobile and Pensacola. He has not yet made public an estimate of the money loss involved.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The weather bureau today reports that the gulf disturbance is practically as it was Monday morning, except that the region of the low pressure has extended eastward to the South Atlantic coast. General rains are reported throughout the southeastern part of the country, and so far as the weather officials are able to gather from the data at hand there is no present indication of further storm violence.

Washington, Oct. 2.—From Maj. Gen. Wade, commanding the eastern division at New York comes further details of the damage wrought by the hurricane at Southern army posts. The estimated loss at Fort McRae is $40,000, at Barrancas $5,000, and at Pickens $12,000. There has been no definite news from Fort Morgan, Mobile, since the storm.

be awaiting the troops on their arrival at Newport News tomorrow or Thursday.

Havana, Oct. 2.—Ex-President Palma left the palace at 9 o'clock this morning. He bade farewell in his apartments to many friends, including Gen. Montalvo and Gen. Rodriguez then descended the grand staircase and, accompanied by his family, entered a closed carriage and was driven to the ferry to Regla, where he took a train for Matanzas. His departure was witnessed by a small gathering of loungers in front of the palace, but there was no demonstration of any sort.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The navy department has no confirmation of the rumor that the battleship Texas is disabled off the capes, and beleives that the vessel is now on her way to Cuba. As soon as the Texas and the Prairie arrive at Havana, the big battleships Kentucky and Indiana will be relieved and ordered north to complete their target practice. They are not needed as warships in Cuba, merely serving as boarding houses for the marines and sailors.

and tell his story, believing any twelve men would vindicate him and find justification in his act of shooting down Stanford White in cold blood on the roof of Madison Square Garden.

Clifford W. Hartridge, counsel for Harry K. Thaw, declined today to say whether or not an application would be made to the courts for the appointment of a lunacy commission to examine Thaw. He was asked: "Do you intend to make application for a board of lunacy in the Thaw case?"

Mr. Hartridge said no application for such a board has been made.

"Will you say that no such application will be made?"

"I will not say whether it will or will not. I am not divulging what my plans may be ahead of time."

"Will you say why it is that Mr. Thaw is submitting to almost daily visits from noted alienists if it is not to permit them to observe his mental deficiency, and to testify as to it before a lunacy board later?"

To this Mr. Hartridge would make no reply. "I have absolutely nothing to say," he replied, "except that I have never said that my defense would not be insanity."

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Martin Sasserson Shot Sweetheart and Then Killed Himself.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minnewaukin.—Martin Sasserson, agent for the Great Western Elevator company, shot Ella Gustafson, his sweetheart, and then killed himself yesterday afternoon in this place. The girl will likely recover. Her refusal to marry him was the motive.

Grand Forks.—The greatest interest in the present campaign in this section of the state seems to be over the position of associate justice of the supreme court, the fight being between John Knauf, Republican, and C. J. Fisk, Democrat. This interest is being exhibited largely by the lawyers of the state, many in almost every community having gone on record against a partisan bench by signing a declaration to vote for and support Judge Fisk. In this city there are two attorneys who have not signed the Fisk agreement, and one of these will support him although declining to make an active campaign in his behalf. The other, it is said, has had some assurances, that, in the event of the resignation of Judge Engerud, which is promised in case Kraeuf is elected, he will have some chance for the appointment at the hands of the governor. This plan is being carried to extremes, it is asserted, all over the state, and the one position which may be vacant on the bench after election has been promised to a score or more of attorneys whose influence is needed to stay the feeling in favor of a non-partisan bench.

Ingval Halverson, who was standing near a resort in East Grand Forks, after nightfall, was shot in the head, receiving a slight scalp wound. He says that the shooting was done by Patrolman Humble, who was at the time chasing some offender. Halverson has made a demand on Humble for $100 damages, and failing to secure that amount went to Crookston to make a formal complaint to County Attorney Maybury.

Fargo.—Probably the next doctored foodstuff to be placed under the ban in North Dakota will be bleached flour. Food Commissioner Ladd has started a campaign against flour that is paler than it should be. Wit han assistant, he is now engaged in making baking tests in which bread made from bleached flour and unbleached flour is employed. By a comparison of results he expects to learn just to what extent the bleaching process injures the flour for bread-making purposes. hen this has been discovered, it is probable that an order will be issued prohibiting the sale of bleached flour unless properly labeled.

Chiefs Dras-Wolf, Medicine Crow and Makes-the-Dust-Fly are on trial in the United States court on the charge of assault with intent to kill. Indian Policeman Hunts-a-Long of the Fort Berthold reservation is the victim. Acting under instructions from Maj. Thomas, agent at the reservation, Hunts-a-Long attended a dance given there Dec. 21 last, to prevent an exchange of presents between the Gros Ventres and the Sioux, the affair being given by the former in honor of the latter. About midnight Hunts-a-Long felt impelled to use his authority and this created a disturbance, which resulted in the policeman being beaten with a neck-yoke till it was thought he was dead. He was left in the snow for eight hours and finally revived after being unconscious for more than a week.

Frank Lake, who has for years conducted one of the most notorious joints in the city, has eloped with another woman, and his wife, recently adjudged insane, is left here. The two had considerable property, and since the insanity investigation a deed was filed transferring the property to Lake. The guardian of Mrs. Lake will ask to have this set aside. Lake is under bonds for two shooting scrapes, and if he returns to defend the civil action, will be arrested on the charge of endeavoring to jump bonds in the criminal suits.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Flandreau—Jim Leary, a prominent farmer living fifteen miles north of this city, was killed by his threshing machine Saturday. A spark from the engine set fire to the stacks, endangering the machine. In the excitement Mr. Leary fell under the separator wheels and was frightfully injured, dying instantly. He leaves a wife and large family.

Miller—In addition to the suit started here against W. R. Dulin, the saloonkeeper who is charged with having sold Willard Shaw the liquor that was the means of his being run over and killed by a train, suit may also be brought for damages in the case of the brother, Riley, who was in the accident and whose mind is still in a bad condition on account of the injuries he received in the head.

Deadwood—Vera Van Zunt was fatally burned by the flames from an alcohol lamp on which she was heating her curling irons, and died after twenty-four hours of intense suffering.

Huron—In circuit court here last week Judge Whiting granted a decree of divorce to Grace M. Bardwell from her husband, B. L. Bardwell, on grounds of non-support and drunkenness. The parties were formerly residents of Arlington, S. D., but later made Huron their home. Bardwell being organizer of Maccabee lodges.

BOY IN STATE OF COMA FOR PAST NINETY DAYS

New York, Oct. 2.—Malcolm Dingman, 8 years old, son of a physician has lain in a state of coma at his home in Spring Valley, N. Y., for ninety days. The boy is suffering from a tumor on the brain, and is doomed to certain death.

His record of unconsciousness is the longest known to the medical profession in any similar case. The unfortunate boy has received the benefit of the best medical and surgical advice that the country affords, but all efforts to save his life have been in vain. His condition has excited much interest in the profession.

MONEY TEMPTS WIDOWS

Man Who Makes Millions Gets Marriage Proposals.

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 2.—Bushels of letters from widows and spinsters in Eastern states eager to wed him, and from men and women in various parts of the country claiming relationship, are pouring in upon John Corrigan, the veteran prospector and pioneer in the Coeur d'Alene district, at the little postoffice at Wardner, Idaho, fifty miles east of here, who recently cleaned up $6,000,000 from a group of lead-silver claims he sold.

"It beats the band how quickly I began getting letters after the newspapers in Eastern and New England states published the story of my strike of pay dirt," said Corrigan.

"The widows are the most persistent. Most of them claim to have money and property, are healthy, comely and otherwise attractive, but lonely. All are excellent cooks, or so they say, and a few declare that they could make my shack a paradise on earth. But I am a follower of the elder Weller in his opinion of widows and intend to take his advice to his son and bevare of vidders."

SUICIDE AT LONG PRAIRIE

Former Wheat Buyer Puts Bullet in His Head.

Long Prairie, Minn., Oct. 2.—Al Wildman, formerly wheat buyer for the Cargill Elevator company at this point, committed suicide in his elevator yesterday morning by shooting himself through the temple. Mr. Wildman has resided here for years and was a good citizen. No cause can be given for his act. He leaves a wife.

Quinsy, Sprains and Swellings Cured.

"In November, 1901, I caught cold and had the quinsy. My throat was swollen so I could hardly breathe. I applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me relief in a short time. In two days I was all right," says Mrs. L. Cousins, Otterburn, Mich. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is a liniment and is specially valuable for sprains and swellings. For sale by all druggists.

GOES TO PENITENTIARY FOR VICIOUS ASSAULT

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 2.—William Granuis pleaded guilty to the charge of assault with intent to do great bodily harm upon Frank Paris, and was sentenced to a year and a half at Waupun by Judge Bridley. Granuis was an employe of the Burlington railway, residing at Lancaster. The victim of the assault was seriously cut in the throat with a knife.

SERVICE IS INADEQUATE

Aldermen Ask for More Cars on Park Point Line.

Board Replies to Council's Suggestion Regarding Firemen's Pay.

Better street car service for Park Point was asked by the council last evening, as a result of the motion by Alderman Burgess.

The resolution, which was carried without opposition, requested the company to establish a ten minute service between the hours of 7 and 8:30 a. m. and 5 and 7 p. m.

Mr. Burgess stated that a ten minute service had been in effect until about three weeks ago, when it was changed to a twenty minute service. This, the alderman claims, is entirely inadequate, and he asks that the old service be restored at least during the busy hours of the day.

In replying to the suggestion by the council that the firemen's pay be graded according to length of service instead of the location of the fire halls, and that the pipemen and linemen in West Duluth and Lakeside be paid the same as those in the other halls, the board last evening submitted a communication to the council, it which it was stated that the men in the two suburban halls attend fewer fires and are able to secure cheaper board and house rent than those in the central part of the city. The board stated that promotions to the uptown firehalls are not sought, and that the $5 a month additional salary does not compensate the men in the central halls for the harder work and more expensive living. The board stated that men frequently apply for transfers to the suburbs in spite of the lower wages.

Sidewalk construction for the year will have to be discontinued, as a result of the condition of the general fund, and except in those places where the walks are already torn up and the material on the ground, the work will be left in its present condition until next spring. Some few exceptions may be made to this order, and these will be taken up by the aldermen at the next meeting.

The report of the conference committee, fixing the city tax levy, did not come up for consideration last evening, being still in the hands of the council committee on finance, composed of Aldermen McEwen, Haven and Getchell. The committee met yesterday in the city clerk's office, and agreed on some minor alterations in the report of the conference committee. The light fund will be increased $3,325, and the health department and general funds decreased $1,000 and $2,325 respectively.

In order to make the crematory tenable during the winter months, the outside wall will have to be boarded up on the inner surface. At present the building is nothing but a shell, and during the winter the men would be unable to work there.

The council last evening authorized the work done.

The council passed the order for $10,000, in part payment of the new gas holder on Garfield avenue. The order is payable in bonds, which will be turned over to the Stacey Manufacturing company, in accordance with the contract made when the gas holder was purchased.

At the recommendation of the health department, thirty-four sewer connections were ordered. Most of these are on Lower Lake avenue.

Duluth has seen it. It came, not unheralded, shone with the brilliancy of the noonday sun for the brief period of one evening, breaking upon the startled vision of Duluth theatergoers with the vividness of a flash of lightning, and then departed, leaving darkness and thunder behind, as every self-respecting, just-as-advertised flash of lightning should. "Man and Superman" is referred too, of course.

The thunder in this instance consists of the criticism of those who are in violent opposition to the alleged philosophy given exposition in the play, and doubtless there are many such. These made the mistake of taking George Bernard Shaw and his "heartstone anarchist," John Tanner, too seriously. It is a profitless business quarrelling with a wit, and likewise foolish. Shaw isn't to be taken seriously. His flippant arguments will not admit it, and he doesn't even ask it. His so-called problem plays, in this instance at least, differ entirely from those of Suderman, Ibesn, and others approaching their class. The efforts of these dramatists may be and are meant to be taken seriously. Their subjects are handled in a manner which the word tremendous will describe as well as any other, if it is permissible to use it in such a sense.

Shaw isn't fashioned that way. His style is all his own. He has original and "advanced" ideas that he delights in setting before the public in a blaze of wit and intellectuality. The setting is there as bright as any one could desire. "Man and Superman" isn't a problem play or a philosophy; it is a farce, pure and simple, and must be looked upon and treated as such. The subject is handled with Shaw's usual flippancy, and in a way which will allow of no other construction. As a farce it is a most remarkable success, and affords an evening of diverting and unrivaled entertainment. Tanner, with his rotten code of morals, says things on the stage which would cause him to be thrown out of the ordinary drawing room, but this feature of the play has been so widely discussed and advertised that the people attending know just what they are going to see and hear, or at least they ought to, and therefore have no reason to raise their hands in holy horror and tear their hair because they attended a performance of the kind.

"Man and Superman" is a rushing mass of sparkling, crackling wit. Every scene fairly scintillates with it. The play displays a remarkable intellect and brilliancy on the part of its author, and is undeniably interesting, if one can forget to be embarassed. As a matter of fact, the average person becomes so intensely interested that this fact is easily accomplished. If it weren't, the mind in question would be worthy of a guardian. Robert Loraine makes the character of Tanner such a delightfully fresh and breezy one, sympathetically natural, that the audience cannot help liking him, and whenever the unherolike hero, in his satirical persiflage and nonsensical rantings, runs against a snag, the people on the other side of the footlights are apt to catch themselves wishing him better luck in his next attempt to thrust a perverted philosophy upon an unwilling, unreceptive and unappreciative

The whole theory of the play is that

The whole thoery of the play is that man is pursued by woman, and not woman by man. Turner claims it is her business to get married as soon as possible, and a man's to keep unmarried as long as he can. To Octavius Robinson, Ann's suitor, he says: "You think that you are Ann's suitor; that you are the pursuer and she the pursued; that it is your part to woo, to persuade, to prevail, to overcome. Fool, it is you who are the pursued, the marked down quarry, the destined prey."

The text of the story is hinged upon the character of Tanner, who has published a book called "The Anarchist's Handbook," in which some startling theories are advanced. In the opinion of his friends, these cause him to be classified as an anarchist or free-lover. One of Tanner's friends, Roebuck Ramsden, a representative of the English aristocracy, is horrified when informed that by a will left by an old friend, recently diseased, Tanner is named as his joint guardian of Ann Whitfield, a dangerously fascinating young woman. Ramsden refuses to serve with Tanner, principally because of the insane theories advanced in the book, but the young and attractive ward influences him to the contrary, and thus he finds himself linked by Catarrh. Nom to a man whom he abhors. It seems habitual with Ann to have her way.

Octavius Robinson, a poet, is in love with Ann, but Ann has determined that her husband is to be John Tanner. It was Ann who persuaded her father to name the revolutionist, anarchist, or whatever he may be called, as one of her guardians. Tanner finds out the real truth and, in order to get away from the girl, he goes by motor car from England to Spain. He is determined that he will not marry Ann, but she turns up in Spain, weaves her web tighter and tighter, and finally has the victim bound hard and fast. They get married, and each knows the weakness of the other so thoroughly that it is to be inferred they live pediumly happy ever after, in spite of their differences of opinion on certain subjects, or, perhaps, because of these differences.

Standing on the threshold of wedded life, Tanner characteristically declares that he is not a happy man. "Ann looks happy, but she is only triumphant, successful, victorious. That is not happiness, but the price for which the strong sell their happiness. What we have done this afternoon is to renounce happiness, renounce freedom, renounce tranquility, above all, renounce the romantic possibilities of an unknown future for the cares of a household and family." The wedding presents, he says, if they do not fit well into the furnishings of the house, which they propose to arrange to suit their own tastes, will be sold, and the proceeds devoted to circulating free copies of "Man and Superman."

The play is hardly what it appears to be, an argument against marriage. It is rather an argument against the wrong purposes of marriage, to use the expression of another critic. With all their witticisms, Shaw's arguments lack logic and sincerity. Tanner is made to champion every unconventional proposition into which he can drag the sex question, and glorifies women who have the "bravery" to become mothers without the formality of a marriage, but the arguments supporting his stand fall of their own weight, but not until they have furnished the desired entertainment.

The work of Robert Loraine in the leading role was nothing short of brilliant. He is an English actor, and English actors, or actors of any other nationality who are as good and efficient in their parts as Mr. Loraine, will always be enthusiastically received in America. His slightest position was expressive, whether back or face was turned toward the audience. Magnificent is a pretty strong term, but it can almost be applied to the splendid work of this Englishman. He is vigorous, forceful, full of life and energy, and possesses a magnetic personality. At all times he is in deadly earnest, and not for a moment is a false note allowed to creep into the reading of his lines. He clearly understands the delicate requirements of the part, and makes the most of this understanding.

Mr. Loraine, who, by the way, appeared in the original production, is given very fair support. Miss Sarah Truax was satisfactory as Ann, although one could imagine a person a little more so. At times she was clever. Louis Massen was excellent as Roebuck Ramsden. Tanner's associate guardian, giving the character distinctness and vitality. Nellie Thorne was very effective as Violet Robinson, the girl whose supposedly unpardonable conduct is the cause of the spirited scene in the first act in which Tanner gives his ideas on motherhood. Her work was especially good. Percival Almer as Octavius was sufficiently docile and stupid, giving one the impression of having been brought up under a glass case, with a lot of maiden aunts womankind did not have a chance to assist in the formation of any rational ideas concerning the opposite sex.

Miss Lois Frances Clark was clever as Mrs. Whitefield, Ann's mother, and Donald MacLaren did a creditable piece of acting as Hector Malone, Jr. J. D. Beveridge as Hector Malone, Sr., was convincing. Frank Craven was praticularly fine as Henry Straker, Tanner's chauffeur, who knew a thing or two. The cast was a good one, taken as a whole, and the stake settings were pleasing to the eye.

Mr. Loraine and his play were enthusiastically received by a fashionable audience which filled practically every seat in the theater. He was given a number of curtain calls, and was finally compelled to make a brief speech expressive of his thanks.

THE BURLESQUERS.

The popularity of the Dreamland Burlesquers, at the Metropolitan, is increasing with every performance. They are presenting a high class musical extravaganza, with words and music written especially for the production and given by a company that is away above the average. Many of the acts of the olio have been presented in the east on the first class vaudeville circuits. There will be a matinee for ladies Thursday. The company is here all the week.

"Roseland" is the title of the two act musical comedy which is given by the Dreamlanders in connection with their vaudeville acts. It is the work of Dave Marion, who has written many a popular song.

HEALTH AND GOOD CHEER.

Cheerfulness results from a healthy state of mind and body.

Did you ever know a person who occasionally takes a glass of good beer, who could not "crack" a joke, or indulge in a hearty laugh himself? Beer is for good health.

Healthy persons are naturally cheerful.

63 DOZEN OR 756 CHAIRS.

And there are all kinds, including dining-room, sitting-room, bedroom and office chairs. Every one is solid oak—not "solid hardwood," as some stores advertise their chairs.

This Large Arm Rocker—the price sells it—

$1.35

Smaller stores would ask you three dollars.

This Solid Oak Dining Room Chair—

60c

It is full back post with brace arm; its duplicate in smaller stores would cost you at least $1.00.

This Solid Oak Nurse Rocker—

85c

It is made to match the 60c Dining Chair.

This Cobbler Seat Dining Room Chair—

85c

It is made of solid oak and has neatly carved back.

This Solid Oak Large Arm Rocker—

This is a wonderful rocker for the money. You could not get it at above price in other stores, because they could not buy it at the above price from the factories.

PLEASE REMEMBER—Every one of these chairs is solid oak and exactly like picture, and while we have a good stock of them they can not last long at the prices we quote, so get your order in early. We especially solicit the inspection of these goods by people who think they can buy cheaper of Chicago catalogue houses, such as Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Montgomery, Ward & Co. LATE DOINGS IN UPPER MICHIGAN

"Marrying Justice" Adds Portrait to Trading Stamp Inducement.

Menominee—Judge Martin Van Den Berg, the famous "marrying justice" of Menominee, has inaugurated another unique system of advertising. For some time the judge has given trading stamps to all couples married by him in proportion to the size of the fee paid. Now he advertises that he will give a fine cabinet photo of himsif to each couple. Several have already applied.

Mrs. Leona M. Breed of Marinette, Wis., has just cleared $35,000 in a mining deal in Arizona.

Dr. R. H. Sturgeon of Iron River, a well-known physician of that region, is laid up in the hospital in a precarious condition as a result of being run over by a train.

The city taxes will be $15,000 higher this year than last. On every thousand dollars of valuation the city tax will be $2 more than it was in 1905. But owing to a proposed reduction in county and state taxation it is believed that the whole tax rate this year will be about the same. The budget for the coming year has been approved by the council at $99,350.

Ishpeming—The degree team of Zenith lodge, Knights of Pythias, has been invited to compete with the crack team of the Duluth lodge at one of the towns at the head of the lakes. Duluth or Superior has been suggested by the Duluth Knights, the Ishpeming team having its choice. The Duluth team has carried off honors in Minnesota, and its members have been anxious for some time to meet the team of this city. The Ishpeming Pythians have expressed a willingness to participate in the contest and it is likely that Thanksgiving will be decided on as the date.

Calumet—Albert Lahtl of Calumet, who has spent the past two years in northern Alaska, has returned to the copper country. He went to Alaska about two years ago when the government shipped several hundred reindeer to that country for the purpose of raising them to come into use as beasts of burden, much the same as they are used in Lapland. Mr. Lahtl was one of the many men who went to the land of the Eskimo to help care for the herds of deer.

Hancock—Rev. James Pascoe, the newly appointed presiding elder of the Houghton district of the Methodist Episcopal church, has decided to live in Hancock. His original determination was to make Houghton his headquarters, that place being officially so designated by the Detroit conference. But the house famine in Houghton compelled a change in his plans.

The Democratic county convention was held at Hancock Saturday afternoon. The following were nominated for the various county offices:

Sheriff—Thomas J. Donlan, Dollar Bay.

Clerk—Harry D. Haddock, Hancock.

Treasurer—Joseph Schneider, Hancock.

Register of deeds—John Foley, Calumet.

Prosecuting attorney—W. A. Burrit, Hancock.

Circuit court commissioners—P. H. O'Brien of Calumet and J. T. Finnegan of Hancock.

Surveyor—James P. Edwards, Houghton.

The legislative ticket is as follows: First district, James F. Wiggins, Calumet; second district, Fred Koeppler of Lake Linden; third district, Ernest J. Dube, Houghton.

Bessemer—The old Federal mine, now called the Winona, and idle since 1898, is to be started up again in full blast. It is now in the hands of Corrigan, McKinney & Co., and joins their Ironton to the east, where big ore deposits have been developed.

Manistique — Harry A. Van Auken, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, was found guilty and was given a sentence of not less than two years nor more than four, at the state reformatory at Ionia. He is the man who issued many worthless checks in Wisconsin and in Northern Michigan.

POLLS OPEN TOO SOON.

Akeley, Minn., Oct. 2.—A queer tangle has arisen in Hubbard county over the vote of Akeley which, although it has a population of 2,000 has never been incorporated. Under the election law the polls open at 6 o'clock in villages, but not until 9 o'clock in townships.

Before the recent primary election the chairman of the town board asked U. G. Wray, the county attorney, for an opinion as to the hour at which the polls should open. Under the law he advised them to open at 9 a. m. E. R. Dampier of Akeley, who was a candidate for county attorney, disagreed with this opinion, and on Dampier's advice the polls were opened at 6 o'clock and about ninety votes were cast before 9 o'clock.

The primary resulted in the defeat of Wray by Dampier by thirty-six votes. Wray has contested, and in his contest asks to have the vote of Akeley thrown out, on the ground that the polls were not opened in accordance with the election law.

If the vote of Akeley is thrown out the nomination for attorney is expected to go to Wray.

LIVED LONG AND DIED IN FIVE-MILE TERRITORY

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 2.—Ira Brown died Sunday, aged 85, at Limestone, where he had lived all of his life, never having gotten farther than five miles from his home. He only left his home and the river bank nearby to vote. He cast his first vote for president for Henry Clay. His last vote was cast for President Roosevelt. He had voted for all the rest.

For seventy years Brown fished every day in the Nolachucky river and from the sale of fish he derived his living. He was sick little and rarely missed a day from the river bank, even in the winter time, when it was necessary to cut holes in the ice.

FAMILY IS IN DIRE STRAITS

Mrs. Mattson of Tower Unable to Support Her Children.

Lying in bed at her home in Tower, still suffering from the effects of a beating inflicted upon her over a week ago by her husband, who is now in the county jail, Mrs. Charles Mattson has been compelled to apply to the county poor commissioner for aid in supporting herself and three children.

Mrs. Mattson's case is a very pitiful one as she is unable to help herself in her trouble and has to depend upon her neighbors for help. The latter have already been obliged to contribute money for her support. The letter which was received by County Poor Commissioner Cook this afternoon states that Mrs. Mattson is unable to support herself and the three children, all of whom are under 8 years of age and that the aid of the county is necessary.

The letter further states that Mattson is addicted to the use of liquor and had used up all the money which he or his wife had in satisfying his thirst. He had even sold a stack of hay which his wife had cut to feed to their cow in order to get more money for drink. After he had been placed in the county jail to serve a sixty-day sentence for beating Mrs. Mattson, the latter was compelled to depend entirely upon her friends for food and other necessities of life.

The family is in dire straits and Commissioner Cook will aid them immediately.

THEIR VOYAGE DELIGHTFUL

Winners of the Balloon Race Tell of Their Experiences.

London, Oct. 2.—Lieut. Frank P. Lahm of the Sixth cavalry, U. S. A., winner of the international balloon race, arrived in London this afternoon from Whitby, where he spent the night. The lieutenant and Maj. Hersey, his companion during the trip, described their voyage as having been most delightful, the weather favoring them from the start until shortly before the finish, when an easterly wind sprang up and took their balloon, the United States, dangerously close to the cliffs near Whitby.

At the start, Lieut. Lahm said, a westerly wind carried the balloon over Western France and then, veering northwestward, took her across the channel from just north of Caen to eastward of Chichester. They had a beautiful moonlight night for crossing the channel and greatly enjoyed the experience. The balloon was so low and maintained her equilibrium so well that the aeronauts were enabled to see persons on the decks of the channel steamers.

After crossing the channel the wind took the United States almost directly along the coast, and had the breeze continued favorable Lieut. Lahm said there would have been no trouble in reaching Scotland. As it was, an east wind sprang up and was carrying the balloon back seaward, so the aeronauts made a leisurely descent, the lieutenant climbing down the guy-ropes to enquire the way to the station. As the wind was favorable, the Americans continued their journey towards the railroad, descending not far from the station.

While the trip was entirely without incident, Lieut. Lahm gives much of the credit for the success of the United States to Maj. Hersey's meteorological knowledge, and the major says that the lieutenant's management of the balloon was perfect. Lieut. Lahm and Maj. Hersey will leave London for Paris tonight.

The Valparaiso Calamity.

From authetic reports it seems that in the recent earthquake in Valparaiso, Chili, the loss of life and property damaged was proportionately as great as in our San Francisco disaster. These two cities occupied relatively the same position in regard to commercial importance, both being gateways to and from the Pacific ocean. From authentic reports, extending over a period of 53 years, you are fully justified in believing that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a sure cure for all stomach, liver and bowel complaints such as headache, bloating, flatulency, dyspepsia, indigestion, costiveness, biliousness, sleeplessness, nausea, female ills, poor appetite, cramps or malaria, fever and ague. Every sick man or woman ought to commence taking it at once. Good health invariably results. Our Private stamp over neck of bottle.

Captures Young Partridge.

A boy named Charles Solen, who works in the shoe store in the St. Louis hotel block, captured a young partridge on the street car tracks on Superior street yesterday afternoon. The bird had invaded the business district of the city and had flown against some obstruction so that one of its wings had been injured. It is not a fatal injury to the bird, however, and the captor states that he is going to take the partridge to the outskirts of town and give it its freedom.

CONFERENCE DID NOT AGREE

On Insurance Laws and Will Meet Again in Chicago.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The committee of fifteen national conference state governors, attorney generals and insurance commissioners, which met here yesterday to draft uniform insurance laws in the several states, was unable to reach a conclusion and ardjourned today to meet again in Chicago, Nov. 15.

The committee of which Thomas D. O'Brien of Minnesota is chairman has prepared a number of bills governing life insurance with a view to their adoption by state legislatures for the better protection of policy-holders. The salient features of these measures already have been printed. Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota, the chairman of the Chicago conference was unable to be present, yesterday and James V. Barry, insurance commissioner of Michigan, was chosen to preside in his stead. It was stated that every national organization on the subject of life insurance was represented at the conference including the National Underwriters' Ass'n, Charles W. Scovel, president and Ralph W. Breckinridge of Omaha and other members of the American Bar Association.

ROMANCE SHATTERED.

Kono Tamasara, who mends porcelain ware and sells Osaka bronzes in his shop over Teihni's sausage store in East Houston street, near Second avenue, is awaiting the award of a tribunal of arbitration on the question of the proprietary rights in one Iamesan Hosoye, a Japanese maiden from the plum gardens of Omori, near Tokio, says the New York Sun. The other disputant in the suit is a Japanese window washer of Jersey City, Inumaru by name. The tribunal is a "very wise man" whose name is at present not revealed.

Mr. Tamasara's case, as told to an interested and sympathetic listener over the bronze incense burners in his shop, is one that requires all the delicacy and tact of the "very wise" umpire. The bronze dealer believes that Iame-san, the maid from Omori, is according to Japanese rite, his lawfully wedded wife. The plebeian window washer of Jersey City has a stronger hold on Miss Iame's affections, Tamasara admits, but he gained that advantage unfairly and without regard for the honor of fellow countryman.

One day last week Tamasara dressed himself in his best cutaway coat and bought a pink for his buttonhole. Then he went across to the Jersey City terminal of the Pennsylvania railroad to meet the young woman, who was to arrive direct from Japan on an evening train from the West. He had received a letter five yards in length, written from Seattle by his bride-to-be the day of her landing from the steamer, saying that she would travel East in the company of a Japanese gentleman and his wife and that she would expect to see her future husband at the end of the honorably long and arduous journey.

When the train drew up at the station platform Tamasara removed his hat in the excitement of anticipation. He caught a glimpse of a small young person in a pink shirt waist and sailor straw making her way through the cars to the steps. Thither he went in some haste and stood, hat in hand, to greet the young woman.

"I am honorably overwhelmed with joy to see your face again," spoke Tamasara.

"Many times has the cherry blossomed since I have had the humble honor of listening to your musical voice," demurely lisped Miss Iame.

"If you will deign to come to my humble house——" began Tamasara. Then came the intervention of the window washing gentleman. He had been standing awkwardly by, awaiting the chance to speak.

"Without daring to interrupt," said he of the swab and pail, "let me humbly beg to suggest that Iame-san will not go to the house of Tamasara. She has most graciously deigned to become my wife and will now depart with me after taking courteous leave of the honorable gentleman whom I am addressing."

Tamasara was floored for the instant.

"But has she not exchanged photographs with me and did I not provide poorly no doubt, for Miss Iame's passage from Omori to New York. Not on your honorable tintype (or words to that effect) will the lady go to your house as your wife."

Then with appropriate tears the maiden of the plum blossoms intervened. True, she had known the Honorable Tamasara in Omori when he used to own a rikisha stand near the temple gate. And true, she had seen him depart for America with tears. Had she not become his betrothed with joy and eagerly exchanged photographs with him? Ah, yes! but she had met the window washer on the train from Chicago and he spoke so wonderfully of his love. What was she but a miserable girl, whose heart was in the hand of Kwannon goddess of love, and not for her own disposing?

The window washer from Jersey City said he would gladly reimburse Mr. Tamasara for the passage money he had spent all unworthily on Miss Iame. The window washer said he would even set out a sake cup for Mr. Tamasara at the wedding feast.

But his was not for Tamasara. They should take the girl to the home of a very wise man whom he knew. They should ask this man of wisdom to decide where she should bestow her hand. He, Tamasara, would abide by the decision.

So after much parley on the platform of the Jersey City station it was decided that the very wise man should act as a court of arbitration.

Two very stern faced Japanese men and one toddling nesan, whose eyes glistened with tears, took the ferry to Cortlandt street and there set out for the home of the very wise man. There Iame-san still is awaiting the time when the high court of arbitration shall render his judgment.

"It is highly improper that a young woman should act thus," says Kono Tamasara as he dusts his Osaka bronzes in his shop on East Houston street. "But then, women have not been given the honorable sense that men have. They are little children."

JAP OFFICERS IN INDIA.

By arrangement recently concluded between the British and Japanese governments and arising out of the Anglo-Japanese treaty a number of Japanese military officers will soon arrive in India and be attached to the Indian army, in order to study the whole military organization of British India, and especially the problem or the defense of the Northwest frontier, says the Kansas City Journal. They will be distributed among the various commands and will remain in the country twelve months, or a longer time if agreed on by the two governments. A party of Anglo-Indian army will proceed at the officers of all arms belonging to the same time to Japan to study the Japanese military system. The arrangement is said not to be liked in the army in India.

QUOTATION FROM BACON.

When Andrew Jackson, the seventh president, was a young man, he practiced at the bar, says the Kansas City Journal. It was his habit to carry in his saddle-bags when he attended court a copy of "Bacon's Abridgement," and to make frequent appeals to it in his cases. This precious book was always done up in coarse brown paper, and the unwrapping of the volume was a very solemn function as performed by Jackson.

During a certain trial on one occasion, however, a fellow-lawyer procured a piece of bacon the size of the book, and while Jackson was addressing the court he slipped out the bacon from its wrapping and substituted it for the legal manual.

At length Jackson had occasion to appeal to Lord Bacon. While still talking he raised the bearskin flap of his saddlebags, drew out the brown paper package, carefully untied the string, unfolded the paper with decorous gravity, and then, without looking at what he held in his hand, exclaimed triumphantly:

"We will now see what Bacon says!"

HARRIS FACES GRAVE CHARGE

He is Held for Assault in the Second Degree.

George Harris, the man who is claimed to have pulled a 44-calibre revolver on Deputy Sheriff Michael Horgan yesterday afternoon, was arraigned on the charge of assault in the second degree. He pleaded not guilty and his examination was set for 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The action of Harris and his companion, John Willett, who is also under arrest for interfering with an officer, has given the police department the impression that they are bad men to be running at large and an effort is being made to learn something of their past. There is a strong suspicion that they may have been mixed up with transactions which might bring them under police surveillance.

Harris has been closely questioned by the officers, but not much was gained from him. He said that his occupation is that of a shingle weaver and that he recently came from the West. The revolver he claimed to have purchased in Duluth yesterday, with the intention of sending it to his brother in Minneapolis. Harris would not tell his brother's address. On his person were found a number of telegrams concerning the sending of money.

Harris claimed that he did not know anything about Willett. The latter mixed into the scuffle when Deputy Sheriffs Horgan and Gately put Harris under submission in the Lake avenue saloon yesterday. At that time Willett claimed to be a particular friend of Harris.

The discovery that the county authorities had the wrong man was made by Chief of Police Troyer, who telephoned Sheriff Meeson at St. Paul late yesterday afternoon and got a description of George Coombs, the man who was really wanted by the police there.

Coombs is now in custody awaiting the arrival of the St. Paul authorities.

WILL SETTLE DISPUTE.

Jury to Decide John Hegler's Claim to Eveleth Property.

The dispute between John Hegler and John Ulasich over a lot in the city of Eveleth will be decided this afternoon by Judge Dibell's jury in district court. Hegler brought suit against Ulasich for possession of lot 11, block 50, Central division of Eveleth, and the trial was begun this morning. Hegler claims that the defendant has held the property unlawfully since last April. He swears that he rented the place to the defendant, but that Ulasich has failed to pay the rent.

The case is an appeal from the municipal court of the city of Eveleth, where Judge Prince awarded judgment against the plaintiff a few months ago for the sum of $25. John Hegler and Mrs. Hegler testified this morning and stated that there had been an agreement that the land was not to be taken from them. Several witnesses testified for the defense to show that the land did not belong to Hegler.

The testimony was all in before the noon hour and the arguments of the attorneys had been delivered. Davis & Terry represent Hegler, while Albert Baldwin is defending Ulasich.

FINED BY CIVIL AUTHORITIES

J. J. McManus of the Navy Gets Himself Into Trouble.

Because he assumed the right to strike Joe Healey, a lumberjack, in the mouth, when he would not show his teeth, J. J. McManus, connected with the local naval recruiting office, had it demonstrated to him this morning that his stripes do not protect him from the civil authorities when he breaks the law.

Judge Cutting gave McManus his choice of paying a fine of $17 or of spending the next ten days in the county pail. At last accounts McManus was bound for the county bastile.

According to Healey's story he was promenading the bowery when he met McManus in a saloon and, knowing the latter was connected with the navy, asked him what the chances were for an enlistment. Healey claims that McManus asked him to show his teeth and that when he objected on the ground he was not a horse, the naval man struck him in the face.

A rough and tumble followed in which the lumberjack got the sailor down The officers arrived and arrested both of the men.

McManus, in telling his side of the case, claimed that it is customary to examine the teeth and eyes of all applicants and that was the reason he asked Healey to show his teeth. He claimed he did not strike Healey.

BOY TELLS OF ACCIDENT

Bertford Arseneau Describes Manner in Which He Was Crippled.

Claims Motorman Kicked Him From Step of Moving Car.

Little Bertford Arseneau was called to the stand to testify this morning in the trial of the suit which started by his mother in his behalf against the Duluth Street Railway company and told Judge Cant and the jury how he had been run over by the street car about a year ago when his leg had been so badly crushed that amputation was necessary, making him a cripple for life. Mrs. Arseneau is suing for $30,000 as compensation for the loss of her boy's right limb.

The little boy stated that he had been living in West Duluth only a short time before he lost his foot and that it was the first time he had ever tried to steal a ride on the cars. He had jumped on the front step of the car just as it was starting up after stopping at a street corner, and held on with both hands to the hand rail on each side of the door into the vestibule. He could see the motorman at his post inside the vestibule but stated that the latter said nothing to him at first but ordered him to get off after the car had gone on for about half a block. The car was running too swiftly then for him to get off he testified, but later the motorman kicked him so that he lost his balance and his feet slipped from under him. For a moment he hung on with one hand and then dropped to the ground, his legs under the rear wheel.

He remembered that after the accident his mother and sister had come for him and he had been carried to the home of Mrs. O'Brien first, and later to his own home by a Mr. Paape. Later when Dr. Graham was called he was taken to the hospital where he remained two weeks.

When cross examined by Mr. Wood for the street car company, Bertrund stated that the motorman had turned toward him before he kicked him and had scared him but that he did not dare to jump off then because the car was running too fast. He had intended to get off at the next corner.

W. H. Paape, who runs a store near where the boy was hurt, testified that he had seen the boy when he fell and had afterwards carried him to the home of Mrs. O'Brien and later to his home. He stated that he had not noticed the car at all before the little boy fell and did no know how fast it was moving. Officer Stewart of the police force had assisted in carrying the boy to his mother's home.

Irene Arseneau sworo that as the boy was lying on the ground after the accident he had said that the motorman had kicked him off the car. She stated that Bertford had said this before anyone spoke to him at all.

The railway company maintains that the boy was injured through his own carelessness and that the motorman did not kick him off the car. The company's attorneys have a map of the street where the boy was hurt with which to trace the movements of the car and the boy at the time of the accident.

OLD CIRCUS DAYS.

Veteran Showman Laments the Changes in the Sawdust Ring.

When it comes to ages in the circus business, the outsider had best be wary. It is such a long-lived profession, so many men and women in the eighties and nineties are to be found around in healthy retirement that it would be hard to say which was the oldest or the longest in the profession, says the New York Herald.

That is the reason why in introducing "Jack" Parks, one may only say that he is 84 years of age and looks as if he were in the sixties. It may only be remarked that he went into the business something like sixty years ago, and has watched the growth and evolution of a wonderful amusement business, has know all the great men intimately, and has been associated with many of them. If "Jack" Parks had been a lawyer or a merchant or a business man, he might be properly called now "Old Jack" Parks or the aged John D. Parks, but he isn't old in the circus business, and says that they will have to wait about sixteen years before he will permit them to so style him as such.

Mr. Parks, who is living in retirement at Bedford City, Pa., came through the city last week on his way to visit his daughter and grandchildren up in Connecticut. You may have seen along Broadway one of those afternoons a tall, broad-shouldered, straight man, with a gray pointed beard and blue eyes that peered undimmed under heavy gray lashes. You may have seen him down at the race track, where he went on Thursday, to return with an arm stiff from shaking hands with so many of his old friends, the old horse owners and trainers, the white-haired fellows you see sitting along the trainers' benches under the far end of the grand stand.

"Old?" said Mr. Parks to the reporter; "not a bit of it. A strong constitution to begin with and a life of more than half a century out in the open air, active all the time, that gave me the strength to live on now. Age has nothing to do with it. It's the strength and health and how the old machine lasts inside of you. Mine is all right.

"The circus? Yes, I've been to the circus, lived with it, growed up with it and loved it. I've known it when it was only a modest little wagon caravan, tolling from town to town. I've seen it the big three or four train loads with its glittering coaches, dashing from city to city on schedule time. I've been with it when it was mighty hard to keep something interesting going on in the one little bit of a ring all the performance and I've seen it with its three rings, its stages and its aerial acts at the same time, making everybody in the audience cross-eyed."

It may be inferred fom this that Mr. Parks does not care for the modern circus particularly. He does not, and says so.

"How did I get into the business?" he ruminates. "Let's see. I was born in Dublin in 1822, and came to this country a youngster with my uncles and aunts in the sailing bark Emigrant. We were seven weeks coming and many of the passengers died of ship's fever. I got it after I landed in Canada, but one day in a delirium I rushed out of the house and stuck my head in a brook, which broke the fever.

"When I was a young man I went to steamboating along the Mississippi, and 1850 or thereabouts found me at New Orleans. Spaulding & Rogers were fitting out a boat to take a circus up the river, and a friend of mine was in charge of the boat. He asked me to go along as his assistant, and I did. At the first stop, Baton Rouge, my friend was recognized as a man who had been sentenced to seven years' imprisonment for horse stealing, and he left suddenly. I took his place.

"We went up the river as far as Cincinnati, where the floating palace, as it was called, was fitted up, and with that we went to Pittsburg, returning down the river to New Orleans. Part of the way, we had 'Dan' Rice against us, and a great business rivalry sprang up, being settled afterward by Rice playing one side of the river and our folks the other.

When I got to New Orleans the circus fever was in me and I joined Lavater Lee, who was just going to start into Texas. Lee was an English contortionist and he had with him his family. His wife sang and everybody did something, and there were no other performers. I remember that expidition, for it was the second circus that ever struck Texas. Texas wasn't what it is now, then, we traveled every foot of it by wagon, showing in storehouses, barns, the tent and any place, but the admission was $1, and they paid it without a murmer.

"I joined Van Amburg in 1856. Van Amburg had only a menagerie and the only other one in the country was owned by Jerry Mayberry., of Wisconsin. Adam Forepaugh bought out Mayberry later and had 'Poggy' O'Brien as his partner. They joined the circus to the menagerie and hired 'Dan' Rice as clown for $25,000 a year. It seems to me that was the start of the circus and menagerie of today. I remember what a big advertisment 'Dan Rice's salary was. He was justly getting as much as the President of the United States and people thought that was wonderful.

"Adam Forepaugh before this time had been a horse trainer in Philadelphia and without circus experience, and O'Brien was not a circus man either.

"I stayed with Van Amburg a good many years, and while with him I met the late P. T. Barnum, who was a great circus man and about the best advertiser that ever lived. Van Amburg and Barnum joined together for a season at the Chinese Assembly Rooms, here in this town, and we were turned out. I got to know him pretty well that year. Bailey & Hutchinson and Coup & Cooper did not come in until later.

"When the Franco-Prussian War was on the Great London show was brought to this country by James E. Kelly, who was president of a bank in this city and an all-around speculator. It was turned over to an old circus man, and I got the privileges of it; that is, I had the side show and the others things. The show went South and we didn't make much money. Kelly got pressed for cash and attachments were about to be served by Dog' Reilly, a printer, when an arrangement was made by which Davis, Dockrell and myself took it over for Reilly. We had it for two years and made money.

"It has been said that James A. Bailey was taken into partnership by P. T. Barnum because of a fight they had over a route. The fight referred to was one put up by the London Show against the big man. It was in the East, and our bill posters were having a merry war of it. It got so bad that Barnum got in the ring at Worcester, Mass., and told the people not to go to our show, as we we were all thieves. I got after him for that and was going to bring suit for $100,000 damages, when he wrote me a letter taking back his words and apologizing.

"I met the late James A. Bailey first in Zanesville, Ohio, where he was ahead of Mrs. Lake's show. Mrs. Lake was the wife of 'Billy' Lake, a clown, and Bailey did her advance work. Later he went into partnership with Cooper, and they went to Australia. They made $100,000 the first year and dropped it the second, and were mighty close to the ground when they got back. There was some talk between Bailey and myself about going into partnership buying Reilly out and joining the shows, but before that was done Bailey got a partner in Pennsylvania, bought out Reilly himslf and joined the two shows, and was never headed after that.

"Have circuses changed much?" Mr. Parks laughs, grimly. "Why, the circus today is as different from the circus of the old days as a balloon is different from a bale of hay. A circus today is a cold-blooded business institution. It is a traveling city. There are so many people not one-half knows the other half. They start out, travel by night, see nothing of the country, and make a town every day. They travel from Portland to Portland in a season, and go as far as the gulf between times.

"Take it the old days. We traveled by wagon or boat. It wasn't a big organization and more like a happy family. In those days the 'acts' were all English speaking, although they did use the foreign names and they made a picnic out of it. There wasn't the fierce rush and bustle of today, but we drove slowly along the country roads from town to town showing this day and traveling the next two or maybe three. We were more like Gypsies. Some shows worked their way back to their regular winter quarters as the season was closing, but some stopped where the cold weather caught them. They didn't travel over more than four or five states, anyhow, and they knew everybody.

"Those were the days," continues the veteran circus man. "That was when 'Hey, Rube,' meant something. I have often wondered who started the call, but whoever did got up a good battle cry. I have heard it cried many times. Once Bailey & Hutchinson and Coup & Cooper did not come in until later.

"When the Franco-Prussian War was on the Great London show was brought to this country by James E. Kelly, who was president of a bank in this city and an all-around speculator. It was turned over to an old circus man, and I got the privileges of it; that is, I had the side show and the others things. The show went South and we didn't make much money. A HORSE! A HORSE!

Stranded Ones Find Many Advantages Over an Auto.

"A horse! A horse! See him!"

"Where?"

"There—In the rain. See him!"

They looked across the pasture in the direction pointed by the Owner's Wife, and sure enough, ambling through the downpour, waggling his tail and gazing at them inquiringly, was a great, magnificent white horse, says the New York Sun.

"Catch him,' exclaimed the Chauffeur, "or else we'll be here in the rain all night. The old engine is all twisted up."

"Don't scare him away," cautioned the Owner's Wife, as the Owner started through the mud for the pasture. "Haven't you got a lump of sugar in the hamper?"

"A lump of sugar—just the trick, if it doesn't smell of gasoline."

They found a quantity of sugar in their luncheon soaked with nothing more repellant than water. In a blinding rain three dripping motorists flanked the horse and triumphantly turned his rear.

Approached from three strategic directions with offerings of dissolved sugar, the big horse sniffed and stood perfectly still. He placidly munched their sugar while they rendered him captive and led him through a break in the fence to the road.

"He ought to feel honored," growled the Chauffeur. "He is about to confer upon the highest priced automobile of its season a very distinguished disgrace."

They hitched him to the machine and their tedious journey began again. Finding themselves steadily in motion for the first time that day the spirits of the party rose perceptibly. They passed the crest of the hill singing blithely in the deluge.

"I thought," remarked the Owner sarcastically to the Guest, "that there wasn't a roof for miles around. What do you call that?"

He pointed to a little blacksmith shop partly hidden among the mist engulfed trees.

"Evidently the horse belongs there," said the Chauffeur. "I see an empty road wagon."

A man came running toward them with an extravagant greeting.

"Have you found the horse?" he yelled.

"He found us," answered the Chauffeur, who was driving. "Can you repair an automobile?"

"I am only a blacksmith," said the man, "but I will tell you what I can do. I can sell you the horse."

"We'll take him!" cried the Owner. "He seems to have only one speed—but he doesn't skid."

"Nor refuse to spark," remarked the Guest vaguely.

"Nor feed improperly," added the Owner's Wife. "He consumes a great deal, but he is not encumbered with a defective carburetor. Always preferred a horse, anyway, and I'll never ride with anything but a sweetly going sugar motor after this."

"Neither will we!" they echoed.

It still rained furiously.

"We will keep on," said the Owner after parting with some wet money. "Maybe we will enjoy the ride now that wouldn't mind taking another season of it—wagon show for preference—just for old time's sake."

"We will keep on," said the Owner after parting with some wet money. "Maybe we will enjoy the ride now that we have a horse."

"By all means," observed the Guest with enthusiasm. "An automobile is famous sport when you know how to make it go."

"G'lang, horse!" grumbled the Chauffeur. "What's his name?"

"Call him Storm King,' said the Owner's Wife. "My, how it rains!"

They plodded on in the deluge.

THE SMALLEST MIDGET.

Vernon Pierce of Dunkirk, N. Y., is a healthy man of 42 years, 3 feet 6 inches tall, and weighing just forty-five pounds, says the Kansas City Journal. His widowed mother runs a little store and Vernon helps. Pierce's father weighs 200 pounds, his mother 175 and two sisters are large, fully developed women. There is no trace of dwarf stature on either side of the family so far as known. Pierce was born at Fort Henry, N. Y. He has never been exhibited, except for a short time, in a museum. Count Rosebud, the Italian midget, said to Pierce: "I am going back to tell my people that America has the smallest man in the world." Tom Thumb saw Pierce, and said: "You take my place and I will go to unloading cattle boats."

CANDLE BIGGER THAN MAN.

New York World: Rassalle Dellacroce, a native of Sciacco, Sicily, was taken ill with rheumiatism in his home in this city a year ago. His wife, Carmelo, prayed daily to her patron saint, St. Calogeri, and at last vowed to offer the largest candle ever manufactured should her husband recover. He moved to Tampa, Fla., and there regained his health. By Mrs. Dellacroce's order the candle was shipped yesterday from the store of Ajello Bros., at No. 2133 First avenue, to Tampa.

Mrs. Dellacroce had vowed that the candle should weigh as much as her husband, and the one she ordered weighs 182½ pounds. It is fifteen feet high, eighteen inches in diameter at the base and twelve inches at the top. Upon it is painted a picture of the Madonna of the Chair.

The candle cost $250, and, according to the manufacturers, it will be lighted in a Tampa church next Saturday at the celebration of the feast of St. Calogeri.

COAL AS JEWELRY.

Coal as an ornament in jewelry is being used in Japan. Only the hardest and most perfect mines are in the habit of collecting coal of such quality for the jewelers, says the Kansas City Journal. Often not more than three bits are found in a day. Of course this coal jewelry is inexpensive, but it is novel and pretty.

FISHING RIGHTS IN NORWAY.

Philadelphia Bulletin: "It is fashionable," said a rich man, "to spend the summer in Norway. The Norwegian climate is superb, the scenery is grand and the living is cheap—a dollar a day at the hotels, and carriages at half a dollr a day.

"One fine thing about Norway is that in the summer the night only lasts a couple of hours, and if you go as far as the North Cape there is no night at all, but the sun circles round and round the horizon, and never sinks below.

"The Norwegian rivers abound in fish, and any one is free to angle for trout in them. The salmon rivers, though, are strictly preserved. Some of the salmon rivers are very fine, and rent for as much as $2,000 a year. I know a man who has a river only two miles long that he pays $1,800 for. He often gets fish of sixty or seventy pounds. The day I called on him last year his wife came in with a 40-pounder, a 22-pounder and a 51-pounder that she had caught herself within three hours."

There may be "some money for you" hidden away among today's Herald want ads. Try to locate it—be a "prospector."

WHEAT HAS WEAK TONE

Bearish Influences Felt in All of the American Markets.

Flax is Fairly Active and Stronger in Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 2.—The American wheat markets had a distinct bearish tone throughout the sessions today, and the closing prices were considerably lower than yesterday's. Receipts in the Northwest were heavier, the weather more favorable and the foreign markets down. Liverpool closed ¾d to ½d lower.

The December option closed ⅞c lower in Duluth, Minneapolis and New York, 1c in Chicago, ⅝-¾c in St. Louis, ¾-⅞c in Kansas City and ⅝c in Winnipeg. The October option closed ½c lower in Winnipeg. The May option closed 1c lower in Duluth and Minneapolis, 1-1⅛c in Chicago, ⅞-1c in New York, 1⅜c in St. Louis and ¾-⅞c in Kansas City.

Corn was weaker in Chicago, the December option closing ⅝c lower. It closed unchanged in Liverpool. December oats closed ⅛c lower in Chicago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,296,000 bus, last year 1,756,000 bus. Shipments 997,000 bus, last year 503,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 726,000 bus.

Bradstreet's reports an increase of 9,949,000 bus in the world's visible supply of wheat. East of the Rockies there was an increase of 5,249,000 bus, and in Europe and afloat an increase of 4,700,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 721,000 bus, last year 580,000 bus. Shipments 513,000 bus, last year 579,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 25,000 bus. The world's visible supply of corn increased 814,000 bus.

Wheat was fairly active in the Duluth market. December wheat opened ¼c lower at 75¼c, declined to 75¼c by 9:45, rallied to 75½c by 10, declined to 74⅞c by 10:06 and closed at that price, a loss of ⅞c from yesterday. May wheat opened ⅝c lower at 79⅛c bid, advanced to 79½c and declined by the close to 78½c, a loss of 1c from yesterday. Durum wheat was ¼c lower.

Flax trading was light but fairly steady during the day. The cables were higher. October flax opened ½c higher at $1.11¼, advanced to $1.11¾ and declined by the close to $1.11½, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday. November flax opened ¼c higher at $1.11, advanced to $1.11¼, declined to $1.11⅛, rallied to $1.11⅜ and closed at that price, a gain of ¾c over yesterday. December flax opened ¼c higher at $1.09¼, advanced to $1.09¾, declined to $1.09½, rallied to $1.10 and closed at $1.09¾, a gain of ½c over yesterday. May flax opened unchanged at $1.13, advanced to $1.13½ and closed at that price, a gain of ½c over yesterday.

October oats and oats to arrive closed ⅛c lower and the other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Weak Owing to Lower Cables and Increased Receipts.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—Sentiment in the wheat pit here today was inclined to bearishness, but active support by a leading bull checked the declining tendency. The weakening influences were lower cables, increased receipts in the Northwest, and excellent weather conditions for the movement. Trading was active, with local longs the principal sellers. December opened ¼c to ⅜c lower at 76c to 76¼c, declined to 75⅝@76c and then steadied around 76c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 1,181 cars against 1,279 cars last week and 1,354 cars a year ago.

For December the highest point of the day was reached at 76¼c. Toward noon the market reacted sharply on selling brought out by a statement made by Bradstreets which showed an increase of about 10,000,000 bushels for the week in the world's visible supply. The December delivery declined to 75¼c. The market closed weak with December off an even cent at 75⅜c.

The corn market was bearishly affected by the easier tone in wheat, but prices showed only a slight decline. Commission houses were the chief sellers. December opened unchanged at 43½c and sold off to 43⅜c. Local receipts were 370 cars, with 215 cars of contract grade.

The break in wheat was the cause of considerable weakness in corn during the last half of the session. The December option sold off to 42⅞c. The market closed weak with December down ⅝c at 42⅞c.

Oats showed some weakness, in sympathy with wheat and corn, but trading was light. December opened unchanged to a shade lower at 34⅜@½c to 34½c and sold at 34⅜c. Local receipts were 208 cars.

Trading in provisions was quiet and the tone of the market was steady. A local packer was a moderate bidder for the January products. January pork was unchanged at $13.42½. Lard was a shade higher at $7.87½@7.90. Ribs were unchanged to a shade lower at $7.15@7.17½ to $7.17½.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, Oct. 2.—Flour market unchanged. Shipments continue liberal with the mills all busy. Buyers are taking a little more moderately and a good part of old orders have been cleaned up. The easier tone to premium will help the demand as millers will be in a better position to make prices. Shipments, 62,125 barrels. First patents, $4.20@4.30; second patents, $4.05@4.15; first clears, $3.25@3.35; second clears, $2.40@2.60.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Prices at the close were about 1c under last prices yesterday. While the general situation has not changed, several things came to the surface today which acted against prices. The Argentine news makes light of the damage by locusts and is more favorable. The surprise of the day was the Bradstreet's report, giving an increase in this country east of the Rockies of 5,249,000 bus.

There are about twenty-five points taken into account by Bradstreet's not in the visible supply list. It seems impossible that these points should show an accumulation of 4,000,000 bus for the week. Many are inclined to regard this big increase as the accumulation for the month rather than for the week.

The forecast is for less favorable weather in the Northwest. Even those friendly to wheat feel that a reaction of the kind experienced today was due, and there is a confident feeling at the lower price at the close.

Corn—Perfect weather over the entire corn belt, the knowledge that the crop is absolutely safe, and that such frosts as have been experienced are beneficial in preparing the corn for the market, coupled with the break in wheat, gave an easier market for the day. Selling pressure was met only by resting orders at the decline. Some further concession in prices may be necessary to start fresh investment buying.

Oats—Shipments from day to day are from 60 to 75 per cent of the receipts. We think this market will be the first to respond to any good buying.

THE PRODUCE MARKET.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

"HELD UP" THE KING.

"M. A. P." tells this story of the survivals of other days in the rural parts of England: "King Edward was motoring on one occasion with the present Lord Montagu Lymington, which is close to the Montagu seat, and when the car—driven by Lord Montagu, then heir to the barony—reached the gate it was suddenly closed, with the observation from the keeper: 'No you don't! Two of your sort have rushed the gate already today, and I'm not goin' to be had again.' His majesty smiled at the old man's garrulity, and the fee, which amounted to sixpence, was paid; but the keeper never believed to the time of his death, which occurred only a few days ago, that he once 'held up' the king."

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

At the Close, Following An Early Display of Strength.

Rebound in Hill Stocks Caused Some Recovery Elsewhere.

New York, Oct. 2.—Gains were in a large majority in the changes resulting from an active opening in the stock market today, but a number of issues showed the effect of realizing. Reading was a feature with running sales of 19,000 snares at 154 and 154¼, compared with 153¼ last night, and a subsequent advance of an additional fraction. Wisconsin Central preferred advanced 5 points, the common and St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred 1½, Brooklyn Transit 1¼ and Atchison, Northern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Rock Island, Amalgamated Copper and Smelting about a point. Distillers' Securities receded a point and Canadian Pacific and Wheeling & Lake Erie large fractions.

Confident absorp of various leading stocks soon induced a uniform movement Reading, Atchinson and Union Pacific which drove them down a point from the highest had its effect after a time and the market receded. Shortly after 11 o'clock aggressive buying of United States Steel commenced but it did not infuse any strength into the other leaders. At the to levels Lackawanna showed a rise of 6 points, Atlantic Coast Line 2½, Reading and Smelting 40⅞ and Chalmers preferred 1¾. Union Pacific 1⅝, General Electric, Colorado ⅞ Southern second preferred and the Iowa Central stock 1¼ to 1½, and Rock Island preferred, Colorado⅝ Southern, Pressed Steel Car and Interborough Metropolitan preferred 1 to 1¼. Among the declines were Keokuk ⅞ DesMoines preferred 6, Bethlehem Steel preferred 5, Distillers Securities 1¾ and Great Northern preferred, Canadian Pacific, Cleveland, C. C., ⅞ St. Louis, 1 to 1¼.

Prices receded after the United States Steel stocks had risen ¾ over last night. Chicago ⅞ Alton gained 3. Wisconsin Central 2, Rock Island preferred 1¾, the common and Texas & Pacific 1½ and some others a point. The reaction lost only a fraction of the gains in Reading and Union Pacific and carried many stocks below last night's level. American Ice dipped 4¼, and then recovered all but a fraction. Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson and Knickerbocker Ice showed losses of 1½ to 1¾ and Illinois Central leased lines 3½. Prices were rising again at noon. Bonds were irregular.

The noon rally in the important stocks was not extended, liberal offerings of Reading, Union Pacific and Atchinson coming on the market and driving prices down again. Some activity developed in the low priced Gould stocks at higher prices. Evansville & Terra Haute preferred gave away at 5, Great Northern preferred, 3¾, and Sugar and United States Rubber 1. Corn Products preferred was a point better and Locomotive preferred 1¼.

During the afternoon the market showed almost as much weakness as it had strength in the forenoon. The collapse in the earlier strong features and the extensive realizing in them encouraged free selling of the general market. St. Paul, Reading, Atchison and Hocking Valley preferred sold 1 to 1¼ below yesterday's closing and United States Rubber 2. A rally was on progress at 2 o'clock.

The market closed weak at the lowest. A rebound in the Hill stocks during the final hour caused some recovery elsewhere in sympathy. Great Northern preferred recovered 3½ of a 3¾ loss and Northern Pacific rose 2½ over last night. Tennessee Coal lost 4 and Pacific Coast 1½. The recovery halted at about last night's level. Missouri Pacific, however, gained a point.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Decided strength with periods of actual buoyancy, ruled today. Renewed talk of the possibility of the ore deal being put through in the near future helped to strengthen the market. The strength and activity in Rock Island stocks was the feature. In fact all of the standard issues were active and held up well. Toward noon there was a natural lull, but free buying added new strength and the list is closing firm. We are inclined to believe that the better class of stocks will do to purchase on any reaction for a turn at least.

Treasury Balances.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $219,863,405; gold, $125,644,856; gold certificates, $41,074,470.

Copper Gossip.

Sturgis to Gay & Sturgis. There is no longer the slightest doubt but that a good sized copper share speculation is in full swing and with numerous vicissitudes stocks will ultimately sell materially higher. The papers are all referring every day to the copper situation and copper shares and every one is talking them. The profit taking from time to time will overcome the new buying and cause reactions such as occurred to a slight extent at the close today, after the early bulge. Money is so close anything approaching a runaway market is not likely, so that frequent profit taking, permitting one to take advantage of setbacks, seems inadvisable. The feature today was our old favorite, North Butte, which we have consistently bulled from 40. It sold at 107 and will probably reach 120 by Jan. 1. The market on Greene looked better today, but still seems a lot for sale.

London, Oct. 2.—Bullon amounting to £100,000 sterling was withdrawn from the Bank of England today for shipment to Egypt.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 2.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 4@12 points. The trading was very active and there was heavy buying for Southern account, which was supposed to be based on firmer spot markets and continued favorable weather, too much rain being reported in the Eastern and central belts, while there was still apprehension as to the course of the second gulf storm. There was heavy selling at the advance, and recent bulls seemed to be trying to check the upward movement. Offerings were well absorbed, however, and fluctuations were very irregular, with prices in the middle of the morning at practically the opening figures. Bearish predictions as to the showing of the October bureau were offset by the storm since the date of the government's report.

Trading continued very active. Prices at midday were about 25 to 33 points higher or nearly 1½ cents a pound above the week's low level.

Cotton spot closed 30 points advance. Middling uplands, 10.55; middling gulf, 10.80. Sales, none. Cotton futures closed strong. Closing bids: October, 10.40; November, 10.50; December, 10.54; January, 10.57; February, 10.67; March, 10.37; April, 10.75; May, 10.82; June, 10.83; July, 10.88.

FARMERS PUT SPIKES IN THEIR SUGAR BEETS.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 2.—Angry and resentful farmers near Maxwell, Neb., loaded a car with spiked beets and forwarded the consignment to the factory of the Standard Sugar Beet company at North Platte. The machinery was saved from heavy damage by the discovery of the spikes in the beets by a factory employe. The company then refused to buy any more beets from Maxwell. Farmers charge that the alleged trust refused to pay them for last year's crop, while the company asserts that the farmers have tried to wreck the plant. It is said that the uproar will seriously injure the beet industry in Western Nebraska.

COL. ROSCOE F. HERSEY IS CALLED BY DEATH

Stillwater, Oct. 2.—Col. Roscoe F. Hersey, for many years prominent in Stillwater as a lumberman, connected with the old firm of Hersey, Bean & Brown, died yesterday at Bangor, Me., where he had spent the summer. He was well-known throughout the Northwest, through his connection with the lumbering industry.

His wife and two daughters survive him. The daughters are Mrs. Sherman Finch and Mrs. Archie Mudge, both of St. Paul.

DRAFTS ARE FOUND FLOATING IN LAKE.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 2.—Harry Kelley of Dodgeville, found a pocketbook floating in Lake Monona Sunday morning. It contained a $1,000 certificate of deposit on the American Exchange Bank of Superior, which was dated Sept. 19, 1905; also a draft by the Washington Trust company of Seattle on the Knickerbocker Trust company of New York for $350, dated Sept. 20, 1905.

It is believed the pocketbook was lost by a fisherman or that it will reveal drowning or foul play.

LABOR UNIONS ENJOINED AS OUTCOME OF STRIKES.

Kansas City, Oct. 2.—Judge Pollock of the federal court, Kansas district, granted two injunctions against labor unions at the session of the court in Kansas City, Kan., yesterday. The Kansas City Packing Box company was granted a permanent injunction against the Boxmakers' union. The Riverside Iron works was granted a temporary injunction against the Iron Molders' union. Both cases are the outcome of strikes.

FINDS HER CHILD AFTER LONG SEARCH.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 2.—Mrs. Mary Guthrie, a dressmaker of Norfolk, Neb., after a nine months' search, has found her kidnaped daughter in Erie, Pa. The child was stolen by the woman's divorced husband in Chicago last Christmas. The mother has sold nearly everything she possessed in order to get funds with which to continue the search, and she has traveled thousands of miles. She had vowed she would never return to her Norfolk home until the child was found. The man has married again.

BOY WAS DROWNED.

Pittsburg, Oct. 2.—Late last evening Patrick Coyn threw his 3-year-old son over a bridge into the Monongahela river and followed after him. The son was drowned, but the father was rescued by rivermen and taken to the hospital in an unconscious condition. Upon regaining his senses last night, the only thing he would say concerning the murder of his son was that he was drunk and remembered nothing of the occurrence.

NEGRO LET GO.

No Incriminating Evidence Against Man Arrested in Oneota.

The negro who is claimed to have been terrorizing the residents of the Oneota threatening girls and young children, begging for food from house to house, and generally making himself obnoxious was arrested by the police yesterday.

When arrested the man said that his name was Henry Brown, and two dangerous looking knives and a purse containing $45 were found on him. He said that he had come from St. Paul two days ago, but there are a number of residents of Oneota who believe that he has been in the neighborhood for a longer period of time, and the West Duluth police have been in pursuit of a man much resembling Brown for the past two weeks. They say they were first notified of his presence in Smithville, where he was begging for food, and have been watching for him ever since. Yesterday they received a telephone call saying that he was seen at Thirty-ninth avenue walking west, and starting out at once they met him at Forty-sixth avenue and took him up town.

On account of lack of any incriminating evidence he was allowed to go this morning.

West Duluth Briefs.

The Ladies Aid of the West Duluth Baptist church will meet tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Meldrum of 507 Seventy-second avenue west. Tea will be served, and all the members are urged to be present, as important business is to be discussed.

Sam Tomson, a sailor, was picked up by the police yesterday afternoon at 4:30 in a drunken stupor. Tomson took a header into the ditch, and was unable to rise. His boat which was loading at the ore docks, left port yesterday, but Tomson was retained for trial this morning.

Tom Miller, of the West Duluth fire department has laid off account of illness.

A girl was born last evening to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer McKay of 20 North Fifty-fourth avenue west.

The Zenith Furnace company is installing a new switch board at its plant, and will soon have a private telephone system in connection with the Duluth Telephone company. The system will include about twenty-five phones.

Miss Ada Burnside left for Minneapolis where she will attend the Minneapolis school of fine arts. This is Miss Burnside's second year at the institution, and her success in this line has been notable.

Mr. McCaig and family of Aurora, have moved to West Duluth and will reside at 224 North Sixty-first avenue.

John Quinn has taken a position with the O'Brien lumber company and ho left yesterday for Brimson, the headquarters camp of the company, where he will take charge of the books.

F. H. Wade left last evening for a short trip to Grand Rapids. He is expected back tomorrow.

FAMILY WENT BY TWO NAMES

Condition Caused Some Confusion in Health Office.

Because a portion of a Polish family, living on East Sixth street, used their Polish name, and another portion of the family used an English name, considerable confusion was caused at the office of the city health commissioner, this week, in regard to a diphtheria case claimed to be unreported until after the death of the child. The matter was not straightened up until an inspector from the health department made an investigation and found out the facts.

A family by the name of Rybak, in the Polish way of speaking, applied to an East Fourth street druggist for anti-toxin. The druggist, as required under a city ordinance, immediately notified the health commissioner of the sale, and an inspector was sent to quarantine the house.

About the same time a local physician turned in a report to the health department of a diphtheria case at the same address as the Rybak family, only he used the name of Fisher. The druggist was taken to task for not reporting the Fisher case of diphtheria, and he claimed he did not have an application from anybody by that name. The inspector found that the parents go by the name of Rybak, but that the children, when they reached the age that they began going to school, took the name of Fisher, which is said to be the English for Rybak.

The child that died of diphtheria was a little 2-year-old girl.

The department's quarantine record now covers both names used by the family.

Similar trouble is said to have been experienced on previous occasions where families of foreigners attempted to use two names.

MARKER TO BE PLACED

Where William Lloyd Garrison Published Journal of the Times.

Bennington, Vt., Oct. 2.—A movement is on foot here to place a marker on the spot at Bennington Center where for nine months, from Oct. 3, 1828 to July 8, 1829, William Lloyd Garrison published the Journal of the Times. Those who have the project in hand have communicated with some of Garrison's relatives to obtain a consensus of opinion relative to the form the memorial should take, and from letters received a plan has been outlined for a rough faced granite boulder with one smooth surface for the inscription.

As the spot where the Journal of the Times office stood is private property, permission has been obtained from the village trustees to place the marker on the common, only a few feet away from the site of the office.

The Journal of the Times was a four page paper set in solid condensed type with but little advertising. Under the heading was the motto: "Reason shall prevail with us more than popular opinion."

THE DANISH TARIFF.

Copenhagen, Oct. 2.—Minister of Finance Larsen introduced in the lower house of parliament today a bill embodying changes in the customs tariffs. The duties on raw materials and some protective duties are lowered while luxuries will be more heavily taxed. The sugar duties are adjusted so as to enable Denmark to join the Brussels Sugar convention.

ASKED TO REMAIN.

Paris, Oct. 2.—Dr. Ferrer, the Cuban representative here, who yesterday placed his resignation at the disposal of the provisional government of Cuba, today received a cablegram from Senor Diago, acting chief of the state department at Havana, requesting him in the name of Governor Taft, to remain at his post and also to communicate the fact of the request to the foreign office here.

ARTICLES PREPARED

For Use Form Steadily Increasing Share of Our Exports.

Share of Imports in the Natural State is Increasing.

Washington, Oct. 2—(Special to the Herald.)—Manufactures and foodstuffs prepared for use now form 60 per cent of our exports, against but 55 per cent a decade ago, while articles in a natural state form but 40 per cent of the exports, against 45 per cent a decade ago. In the the imports manufactures and foodstuffs prepared for use now form but 54 per cent, against 57 per cent a decade ago, and articles in a natural state form 46 per cent, against 43 per cent of the total imports a decade ago.

This statement is a summarization of the analysis of the exports and imports of the United States under the new grouping recently adopted by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor, and applied to the records of our foreign commerce in each year from 1896 to 1906.

The new grouping divides the imports and exports, respectively, into six great groups: "Foodstuffs in crude condition and food animals;" "Foodstuffs partly or wholly prepared." "Crude materials for further use in manufacturing;" "Manufactures for further use in manufacturing;" "Manufactures ready for consumption," and a final group entitled "Miscellaneous." A combination of the three groups, "Foodstuffs in crude condition," "Crude materials for use in manufacturing," and "Miscellaneous," gives the total of articles imported or exported in the natural state, while a combination of the three other groups, "Manufactures ready for consumption," "Manufactures for use in manufacturing," and "Foodstuffs partly or wholly prepared," gives the total imported or exported in form partly or wholly prepared for use.

This combination of the groups year by year shows, as above indicated, that articles prepared for use form a steadily increasing share of the total exports, and the articles in a crude state a continually decreasing share, while in imports the share prepared for use shows a decrease and the share imported in the natural state an increase in the period from 1896 to 1906.

This new analysis of the foreign commerce which will be published in full in the monthly summary, shows that the export group "Foodstuff in a crude condition, and food animals," which includes chiefly grains, live animals, and fruits in the natural state, increased from $125,-000,000 to $175,000,000 in the decade, but formed in 1906 but 10 per cent of the total exports of domestic products against 15 per cent in 1896, this reduction in percentage being due to a more rapid growth in certain other classes, especially manufactures. The group "Foodstuffs partly or wholly prepared," composed chiefly of meats and dairy products, flour, oil, cake, cotton-seed oil, and dried and preserved fruits, grew from $219,000,-000 in 1896 to $346,000,000 in 1906, but formed only 20 per cent of the exports in 1906 against 25 per cent in 1896. The group, "Crude materials for use in manufacturing," composed chiefly of cotton, coal, tobacco, and crude mineral oil, grew from $255,000,000 in 1896 to $500,000,000 in 1906, forming 29 per cent of the exports in 1906 and a like percentage in 1896.

The group "Manufactures for further use in manufacturing," composed chiefly of copper in pigs, bars, and ingots, iron steel in a partly manufactured state, leather, lumber and naval stores, grew from $75,000,000 to $223,000,000, forming 13 per cent of the total exports in 1906, against 9 per cent in 1896. The group "Manufactures ready for consumption," of which the exports are chiefly iron and steel manufactures in finished form, refined mineral oils, cotton manufactures, agricultural implements, cars and carriages, boots and shoes, and manufactures of wood, grew from $183,000,000 in 1896, forming 27 per cent of the exports in 1906, against 21 per cent in 1896.

In the imports of the group "Foodstuffs in a crude condition," which is composed chiefly of coffee, tea, cocoa, fruits and nuts and spices, grew from $130,000,000 in 1896 to $135,000,000 in 1906, but the share which it formed of the total was in 1906 but 11 per cent against 17 per cent in 1896. The group "Foodstuffs, partly or wholly prepared," composed chiefly of sugar, wines and liquors, dried and canned fruits and fish, grew from $119,000,000 to $141,000,000, but the share which it formed of the total was in 1906 but 12 per cent against 15 per cent in 1896. The group, "Crude materials for use in manufacturing," which includes in the imports chiefly hides and skins, india rubber, silk, wood, fibers, cotton, tobacco, uncut diamonds, gums, and chemicals, grew from $198,000,000 in 1896 to $414,000,000 in 1906 and formed 34 per cent of the total imports of 1906 against 28 per cent in 1896.

The group, "Manufactures for further use in manufacturing," chiefly composed on the import side of tin in bars, copper pigs and bars, diamond cut but not set, iron bars and billets, tin plates, wire rods and pig iron, grew from $101,000,000 in 1896 to $221,000,000 in 1906, forming 18 per cent of the imports in 1906, against 13 per cent in 1896. The group, "Manufactures ready for consumption," which includes on the import side, chiefly manufactures of cotton, wool silk fibers, and miscellaneous articles, grew from $227,-000,000 in 1896 to $304,000,000 in 1906, forming 25 per cent of the imports in 1906, against 29 per cent in 1896.

FRANCHISE FOR TROLLEY LINE

Discussed by the Business Men's Association of Eveleth.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the regular monthly meeting of the Eveleth Business Men's association, held Monday evening, the question of granting a franchise to the Mesaba Traction company, was discussed. The interests of the company were represented by Y. C. Poole, who said. "It is the intention of the Mesaba Traction company to build an electric road from Aurora to Hibbing, connecting the intermediate towns, and in return for a reasonable franchise we are willing to put up a guarantee bond that the road will be built. The road will be built and equipped in an up-to-date manner, and it is estimated that it will cost at least $1,000,000 when completed. That this may be done, the company asks for a franchise allowing them to enter the city of Eveleth." Upon being questioned, Mr. Poole stated that the officers of the company were range men, but that the capital was to be furnished by outside parties.

The sentiment of the association, seemed to be almost unanimous in favor of granting the franchise, but there was a great difference of opinion expressed concerning what the franchise should include. The large majority, however, thought the city should encourage the company in ever way possible as the road would unquestionably be of great benefit to the city.

The street railway problem is a live one here, as the citizens and members of the city council seem anxious for the franchise to be granted, but Mayor Jesmore, who is the proprietor of a livery stable, flatly refuses to sign it. It is not certain with whom the power of granting such a franchise rests as there is a clause in the city's charter which denies the council the right to grant a franchise for an amount of more than $100, without first advertising for sealed bids on the same.

After considerable discussion the association voted to adjourn to meet at the call of the secretary, at some time when Mr. Myers, of Biwabik, the promoter of the company, could be present and state definitely what the company desires to be incorporated in the franchise.

Sudden Change of Plans Causes Surprise in Zion City.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—A few hours before the time of his intended departure for Mexico, John Alexander Dowie today decided to remain in Zion City indefinitely. The sudden change of plans caused surprise in Zion City, where it has been commonly reported that Dowie was going away to make a final effort to regain his health.

John A. Lewis, one of Dowie's closest friends, who was to have accompanied him on the Mexican journey, announced for Dowie that the "first apostle's" health had taken a sudden change and that Dowie was much better physically than he has been in several weeks.

WANT ANOTHER ROUTE.

East Enders Ask Park Board for Extension to Boulevard.

A petition signed by F. A. Patrick and several other East end residents, was presented to the park board yesterday afternoon, requesting an additional route to the boulevard. The present route is on Fifteenth avenue east and the East enders ask that the board shall also open a route on Nineteenth avenue east, which they claim will be more favorable as the heavy grade will be avoided. The petitioners, it is said, are willing to bear the cost of the improvement.

The park board decided to visit the East end Monday and look the situation over. If the board finds that an additional route would be an improvement the work is likely to be ordered by the board.

The present approach to the drive will be left unchanged.

STEAMERS TIED UP.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 2.—Four steamers which should have sailed last evening were still tied up at their wharves today because of a strike of masters and mates of certain steamboat lines for higher wages.

GRAND TRUNK WEEK.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—In a dense fog today the Limited passenger train on the Grand Trunk railroad, due to arrive here at 7:35 a. m. ficrashed into a suburban train at Elston near here, demolishing three coaches and injuring two persons. One of the injured, Charles R. Fifesman of this city, is not expected to live.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

NORTHERN MINNESOTA IS SHOWN TO POSSESS LAND OF GREATEST FERTILITY

Trip of the Duluth and Twin City Business Men.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Drainage, agricultural possibilities and the general development of the lands of Northern Minnesota received a mighty "boost" yesterday, through the visit to points along the line of the Minnesota & International railway north of Bemidji of members of the commercial bodies of Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis, several ex-members and present members of the state legislature, two congressmen and a United States senator and several members of the State Drainage board. A special train carried the party from St. Paul through to Big Falls, arriving there at an early hour in the morning. The train was met by a delegation of citizens, headed by a band, and escorted to a hotel, where breakfast was served. A stop of an hour and a half was made at Big Falls and the visitors were shown a splendid exhibit of farm products, raised near Big Falls, and also samples of the soil there. Congressman J. Adam Bede spoke of the wonderful resources of this part of the state and the stability of its residents who are determined to develop the country. The train then started on the return trip.

Another stop was made at Northome, where the citizens had prepared an exhibit of grains and grasses and vegetables, showing the productiveness of the soil. United States Senator Clapp addressed the gathering at Northome, as did several local speakers, and after an examination of the exhibits the trip was resumed southward, the next stop being made at Blackduck. Here was shown the exhibit of corn, wheat, oats, barley and all kinds of vegetables that was saved from the county fair of last month. Prof. Andrew Boss, of the state school of agriculture spoke, and also State Engineer George A. Ralph and J. M. Hannaford, land commissioner of the Northern Pacific railway. The journey was resumed at 3 o'clock. The special was stopped at the "Y," and under the direction of General Manager Richards of the Crookston Lumber

JAMAICA NEGRO FOR CANAL WORK

Washington, Oct. 3.—Former Governor Charles E. Magoon of the Panama canal zone, who has spent a great deal of time on the isthmus, has considerable confidence in the Jamaica negro as a laborer on the canal. He has organized a police force of these men, and says they are very efficient. Much of the complaint that has been made about them as laborers, he thinks, is because they do not thoroughly understand American terms and the names of articles in common use. He says that upon the whole they are int ligent, and can read and write, and are prolific letter writers, as he can testify by the many communications received from them. They all begin their letters in the same way: "Your excellency: I have the honor to inform you that I am a British subject," etc. Judge Magoon says that they are all proud of being subjects of Great Britain.

He believes that the method to be ultimately adopted in handling labor on the canal will be similar to that adopted by Kitchener when he advanced upon Khartoum. The British general utilized African labor, but had it organized on a military basis. Judge Magoon says he does not mean that laborers on the canal should be under military discipline, but they should be organized in companies, under the charge of competent officers, with men of their own race and kind in positions similar to non-commissioned officers in the army. He believes that a satisfactory system will result from this method.

HE TAUGHT ANARCHY

And Was Privy to Plot to Assassinate King Alfonso.

Madrid, Oct. 3—The attorney general in presenting in court today the case of Senor Ferrer, director of the Modern School of Barcelona, who is charged with being connected with the attempt upon the life of King Alfonso, May 31 last, submitted evidence to prove that the prisoner, under the name of the "Modern School," conducted an establishment for teaching anarchy to youths, was privy to Manuel Morales' plot to assassinate King Alfonso, aided Morales with money, and assisted in concealing and disguising the would-be assassin's accomplice after the bomb explosion of May 31.

SENSATION IS CAUSED

In Prussia by Murder of Daughter of English Officer.

Crime Committed in a Public Park Almost in Daylight.

Essen, Prussia, Oct. 3.—A great sensation has been caused here by the murder of Miss Madelaine Lake, daughter of an English army officer, whose mutilated body was found at twilight Monday evening, in the city park. Up to the present the police have been unable to throw any light on the mystery surrounding the young woman's death. Both her temples were beaten in, her throat was lacerated by the hands of her murderer, who evidently strangled her in addition to beating her about the head, and her arms and body were severely bruised.

The excitement caused by this crime in a public park almost in daylight, apparently, has been increased by the fact that the inquiries of the authorities have resulted in seemingly establishing the fact that Miss Lake was related, distantly, to the British royal family, the brother of her grandmother, it is stated, having married a daughter of Caroline Amelia Elizabeth of Brunswick, the divorced wife of George IV of England.

FOUR MEN KILLED AND EIGHT HURT

By a Sudden Rush of Flaming Gas and Coke.

Baltimore, Oct. 3.—Four men were killed and eight others injured, two perhaps fatally, in an accident at the works of the Maryland Steel company at Sparrow's Point today. Three of the dead are negroes. The victims were overwhelmed by a rush of flaming gas and coke from a hole in one of the blast furnaces, caused by the forcing out of its socket of a casting which holds the compressed air pipe. The men had just put in a new air pipe and the blast had been turned on about ten minutes when the accident occurred. There was no explosion and the furnace was not damaged.

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND SOON

Is Prediction Made by T. P. O'Connor to Irish League.

Philadelphia, Oct. 3.—In anticipation of hearing a speech by T. P. O'Connor, M.P., the Irish leader, the hall in which the national convention of the United Irish league of America is being held, was crowded early today by delegates and Irish sympathizers.

Mr. O'Connor spoke for more than an hour. He reviewed the work being done in the British parliament in the cause of Irish home rule, and predicted that Ireland will soon emerge from British rule and have its own home government.

Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia presided at today's session.

Col. John F. Finerty of Chicago, president of the league, has announced that he will not accept a renomination, but it is said, however, that he probably will be re-elected without opposition.

POSTERS PLACARDED

Summoning New Recruits to Desert From the French Army.

Rouen, Oct. 3.—A large number of posters were placarded on the walls here during the night, signed by the anti-military association, summoning the new recruits to desert from the army, if they believed they were "unable to endure the insults, punishments and vexation of barrack life," and concluding with an invitation to the women of Rouen to form an "international society of mothers to resist the despots of the government, which is still thirsting for human blood." The police tore down the proclamations shortly after daylight.

SUMMONED TO WASHINGTON.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 3.—M. W. Cardwell, chief clerk at the army headquarters here, has been summoned to Washington for duty in the office of the commanding general of the forces in Cuba.

FRIENDS OF SENATOR NELSON UNEASY OVER OVATION TO JACOBSON

NOT GUILTY IS HIS PLEA

Sussman Refused to Plead Guilty to Murder of Wife.

First Wanted Assurance That Sentence Would Not be Hanging.

Minneapolis, Oct. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Henry Sussman, charged with the murder of his wife, when arraigned on that charge yesterday afternoon, entered a plea of not guilty. His case was fixed for Oct. 17.

The prisoner's attorney expressed a willingness to allow a plea of guilty provided they could be assured that the sentence would be life imprisonment instead of hanging. This question would rest entirely with the court, and it is said that Judge Holt would neither make any promise, or give any indication of what his judgment might be.

Under these circumstances the prosecuting attorney could not enter into any agreement other than to say what recommendation he would make to the court, and, although the court probably would be influenced by a recommendation from the county attorney, such a prospect appeared rather uncertain for a man with his life at stake.

Sussman was remanded to the Hennepin county jail, and is now in one of the cells reserved for prisoners upon whom a special watch must be kept.

FRENCH GIRL ARRESTED

On Charge of Throwing Bomb at a Russian Governor.

Toulon, France, Oct. 3.—A girl was arrested here on the charge of throwing a bomb at the governor of Ekaterinslav, and who claimed to be a Russian, turns out to be French. Her name is Jeanne Tilly. As a result of association with Russian students in the Latin quarter of Paris, she joined the terrorists and undertook the task of killing a prominent Russian official.

VESSEL GOING TO PIECES.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 3.—The vessel which came ashore last night near Little Kinnakeet life saving station on this coast proved today to be the schooner Twilight, which capsized at sea during the September coast storm. She is still bottom upwards and is rapidly which is sweeping the Virginia and North Carolina coast today.

Received at Owatonna With Greater Applause Than Cole.

Demands From All Parts of State for Johnson Meetings.

Governor is Now Booked Right Up to Election Day.

St. Paul, Oct. 3.—Special to The Herald.)—The ovation given Jacobson at Owatonna, Monday night, is making the friends of Senator Nelson uneasy. The Lac qui Parle man was received with greater applause than Cole, and one who did not know the state ticket would think that Jacobson was running. There may be little in the speculation, but the talk that Jacobson will be in the race for senator is very strong.

Another factor to be reckoned with is Joel Heatwole, who is anti-Nelson. George S. Loftus, commissioner of the Minnesota Shippers and Receivers' association, has been very active in the fight against the railroads for lower rates. Through his initiative largely the merchandise rates were lowered, and now he and James Man-

BOARDINGHOUSE WAS ATTACKED

By Strikers at Fort William and Several Were Wounded.

Fort William, Ont., Oct. 3.—A number of armed striking freight handlers, Greeks and Italians, yesterday surrounded the Canadian Pacific Railway company's boarding house, in which were fifty strike-breakers, brought here from Winnipeg. The boarding house was defended by twenty of the company's police. A large number of shots were fired, and the constable was wounded and several of the strikers were shot in the legs.

After the trouble a deputation of strikers interviewed the mayor. Later the strike was called off unconditionally, so far as the Greeks and Italians were concerned.

AN ATTACK ON CASHIER

Of Custom House at St. Petersburg Made by Revolutionists.

Several of the Attacking Party Captured by the Police.

Fierce Fusillade Occurred During Which One Man Was Killed.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 3, 5:15 p. m.—A bold attack made by a number of revolutionists this afternoon on the cashier of the branch custom house here was frustrated by the quick action of the police, who captured several of the attacking party after a fusillade, during which one man is reported to have been killed. The firing occurred at the bourse end of the Palace bridge, one of the most frequented thoroughfares in the city, situated hardly a hundred yards from the winter palace and the admiralty. The affair caused great excitement among the operators on the bourse and the general public.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 3.—Following the sentences imposed on M. Onipko, one of the leaders of the peasant party in the outlawed parliament, and the mutineers tried at Cronstadt, which have been confirmed by Gen. Alderberg, commandant of the fortress, the court martial at Cronstadt today being at the trial of three ringleaders of the mutiny on board the torpedo gunboat Kazanotz Aug. 2. Next week the court will begin trying 295 members of the crew of the battleship Alexander II, who refused to obey Capt. Petroff's orders to enter the ship's boats and assist in suppressing the mutiny at Cronstadt.

A court martial at Libau has found twenty-three sailors of the transport Riga guilty of mutiny and has sentenced them to various terms of imprisonment at hard labor. The seriousness of the August mutiny was revealed at the courts martial since held at Cronstadt, Helsingfors, Reval, Riga, Libau and practically every Baltic port, showing that the whole fleet was honeycombed with rebellion.

An unreported mutiny of the Twenty-first East Siberian regiment, which distinguished itself in several battles in Manchuria, has been disclosed by the verdict of a court martial held at Blagoveshchensk, Asiatic Russia which has sentenced six of the ring leaders to death, three others to hard labor and nineteen to serve various terms in disciplinary battalions.

Yesterday's record of executions as the results of the sentences of drumhead court martials include four anarchists put to death at Kiev, and seven bandits executed at Bakhmut. The latter were shot owing to inability of the authorities to procure a hangman.

MINERS MAY STRIKE.

Springhill, N. H., Oct. 3.—A strike of the 1,500 employes of the Springfield coal mines is probable by next Monday. The unions demand an advance in wages, and notice has been given that unless the demand is granted work will cease next week. The mine owners have offered an advance of 5 per cent, but the unions decline to accept.

WARM WELCOME GIVEN TO GOVERNOR JOHNSON IN EVERY RANGE TOWN

EXCITEMENT STILL HIGH

At Mobile Over Attack on Jail and Hoyle's Death.

Negro Assailant of Girl Placed in Jail at Birmingham.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 3.—Excitement continues high over the attack upon the jail last night, and the death of Roy Hoyle, at an early hour this morning. Three companies of militia, ordered here from Fort Deposit, Evergreen and Brewer, arrived early in the day, and are now stationed about the city.

The negro, Dick Robinson, has not been located by the crowd as yet, and the probability now is that he has been placed beyond the clutches o the people of Mobile.

While there is a general feeling of condemnation for the mob last night, which, without excuse or reason, opened fire on the jail, there is a strong feeling that something must be done, and done soon, to stamp out such crimes as Robinson's. They have been frequent here of late, and the indignation and wrath of the white people is so intense that any trivial episode may at any minute cause a serious outbreak.

Governor Jelks said today that, while he did not apprehend any more trouble right now, he considered it wise to hold the troops here for some days to guard against contingencies.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 3.—Two deputy sheriffs from Mobile reached Birmingham today, having in charge Cornelius Robinson, the negro youth who is alleged to have assaulted Ruth Sossman, a 12-year-old white girl, near that city, yesterday afternoon, and because of which crime a mob attempted to storm the Mobile jail last night. Robinson was placed in the Jefferson county jail for safe keeping. He denies his guilt.

ELEVEN WIVES OF STRIKERS

Attacked Non-Union Linemen With Clubs and Stones.

Wichita, Kan., Oct. 3.—Eleven women, wives of striking union linemen, of the Missouri & Kansas Telephone company attacked non-union linemen with clubs and stones yesterday. The linemen and the officials of the company fled. L. F. Dugan, district manager, was struck several times by the women. One workman was knocked down.

The women climbed a stockade in pursuit of the men and gave up the chase only when the workmen were all behind closed doors in the telephone company's office.

THE DESTITUTE WELL CARED FOR

At Mobile and Relief Work Now in Good Shape.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 3.—Heavy rains along the lower part of the bay caused some interference today with relief work, but all things considered the situation is well in hand, and all of the destitute are being well cared for. Contributions are pouring in steadily from the citizens of Mobile, and from outside points. Shelter for those whose homes were wrecked is the thing most generally needed, and it is becoming evident that many of those who lost everything in the storm must have aid in rebuilding their homes.

Governor Jelks arrived in Mobile yesterday, and today made a trip to Coden and other places in that vicinity to satisfy himself of the conditions there, and to institute further measures of relief.

Several bodies have been found floating in the lower bay, but they are believed to be those whose deaths have been already reported.

TO BE FIRST FRENCH AMBASSADOR TO JAPAN.

Paris, Oct. 3—Although no final decision will be taken until the next meeting of the cabinet, it is considered almost certain that M. Gerard, at present minister of France at Brussels, will be first French ambassador to Japan. M. Gerard is intimately acquainted with the Far East. He negotiated the Pekin-Hankow railroad concession.

Crowds Are Eager to See, Meet and Hear Him.

Increase in His Vote in St. Louis County is Predicted.

Tower, Minn., Oct. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson was in Tower when the sun rose this morning and was out bright and early. Judge Pendergast remained in Hibbing last night and will meet the governor at Grand Rapids Thursday. In the early morning Governor Johnson visited the Tower Lumber company's plant, meeting the men. At 9 o'clock he addressed an assemblage of voters at Everett hall, making a half hour's speech, in which he sketched in a pithy and comprehensive manner the achievements of his administration. A hundred or more were present and gave the governor a hearty welcome, and many personal assurances of support and of the interest of the community in his candidacy.

Early in the day a delegation of young women from the high school called on the governor and asked him to visit there. They were assured that he would, and after the political meeting he visited the school and gave a fine talk to the pupils on the advantages of education, and the means which the state provided that its children may acquire knowledge. He urged every pupil to complete his course and take advantage of the full opportunities afforded him and not be tempted to get an early start in business life by the little money he may make. At the close, Principal D. A. Mooney thanked Governor Johnson for the honor of his visit and the pupils expressed their appreciation by hearty applause. Wherever Governor Johnson has met the children he has shown a great interest in them, and no voter gets a heartier or more kindly greeting than does the boy or girl who presses forward to meet him.

Hibbing, Minn., Oct. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—If the ranges of St. Louis county are really the "enemy's country" for Democratic candidates, yesterday's reception of Governor Johnson failed to indicate it. Throughout the trip, from the beginning to the end, his reception was most cordial, and a spirit of friendliness and interest, that was p ainly sincere, was manifest on every side. At every point crowds pressed forward to shake his hand. There were the young and old, voters, women and school children, all eager to see Minnesota's governor and grasp his hand. On every hand there was evident a desire to see, meet and hear Governor Johnson, and one and all

NEW YORK MEN FIGHT FIERCELY

Over Woman and One Shot Three Times in Body.

New York, Oct. 3.—Herbert Partridge was shot three times early today in the apartments of his sister, with whom he made his home, and probably will die. The shooting was done by Charles Johns, a stenographer, whose attentions to Mrs. Jennie Smith, Partridge's widowed sister, were objected to by Partridge. Coming home early today, Partridge found Johns in the apartments and in a rage seized a carving knife, with which he attacked Johns. In the struggle the knife blade was broken, but Partridge continued the attack. Then, according to Mrs. Smith's story, Johns drew a revolver and fired three times, each bullet striking Partridge in the body. Johns disappeared after the shooting, and Partridge was taken to a hospital, where his case was said to be critical.

When Mrs. Smith was questioned in police court, she told the magistrate that Partridge is not her brother, although she had introduced him as such in the house in which they lived. "He is a friend of the family who used to live with us when my husband was with me," she told the court.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

Kelly Says He Did Not Assault Boston Police Affair.

Boston, Oct. 3.—Shaun Kelley of Fitchburg, the room-mate of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., at Harvard, appeared in the municipal court today and pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault upon a police officer. At the request of his counsel the case was continued until Oct. 1. The charge against Kelley is based upon an incident which occurred on Boston common last Thursday night, when Patrolman Freyer was knocked down by young men said to be Harvard students. Roosevelt and another student, Meredith Blagden, have been summoned to appear as witnesses in connection with the same case, which will be investigater tomorrow by the Suffolk county grand jury.

BY REASON OF REBATES

Peavey Elevator Company Has Advantage Over Other Traders.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—E. O. Moffatt, of the Moffatt Commission company, of Kansis City, Mo., was the first witness at today's session of the interstate commerce commission, which is investigating alleged rebates on grain. Mr. Moffatt testified that owing to an allowance of 1¼ cents per hundred weight, which he declared is given by the Union Pacific railroad to the Peavey Elevator company, which has a number of elevators in Nebraska, the elevator company is enabled to bid a higher price on the Kansas City board of trade for grain shipping points on the Union Pacific line than are other traders. In this way, says Mr. Moffatt, other traders are placed at a great disadvantage.

ACTION IS APPROVED

Taxpayers Believe That Wisconsin Central Road Should Acquiesce.

The action of the Duluth Real Estate Exchange, yesterday, in passing resolutions urging certain concessions on the part of the Wisconsin Central Railway company before the council gives the company a franchise to tunnel under Michigan avenue, or vacates any streets and alleys for the use of the new road, has truck a popular chord, judging from the expressions heard from various citizens and taxpayers.

The real estate men comprising the exchange urge that before the council gives up to the railroad company all the rights and privileges that it is in the power of the city to give, that the company be required to make a pledge that it will shoulder its share of the expense of maintaining the several miles of paved street abutting or which may be required in the future along its property, and also to bear the expense of such sidewalks as may be needed along its property from time to time.

It is claimed that the proper time to get the railway company to agree to something along the line of sharing part of the expense of that improvement is now, and thaa fair exchange of privileges and concessions ought not to be regarded unfavorably by either the taxpayers in the city nor by the railway company.

The real estate men claim that the railway company will, by the acquisition of its right of way from a point in West Duluth clear through to the heart of the business section of the city, take from the city tax rolls assessable property estimated to be worth, for taxable purposes, $1,000,000. In other words when the Wisconsin Central Railway company secures the title to its right of way it will take $1,000,000 worth of taxable property off the assessment roll and the remainder of the taxable property in the city will have to make up the loss when the next assessment is made. Not only is there a loss of valuable property on the assessment roll, but when any improvement is contemplated along the property that will be owned by the Wisconsin Central road, the company cannot, under the existing laws, be compelled to stand any of the expense of the improvement. Because of these conditions the taxpayers are anxious that some agreement be made in advance, whereby the company, for the valuable concessions and privileges it expects to get, shall meet the city half way in the matter.

It seems to be generally conceded that the railway company, if it tunnels under Michigan street, from Twelfth avenue west to Eighth avenue west, will be expected to keep the street above the subway in good repair, but unless some definite understanding is had, there will be miles and miles of streets where the railway company will not be liable for assessment for improvement, under the present laws.

The possibility that the Wisconsin Central Railway company might go ahead and secure, through condemnation proceedings, that which the city council might refuse to give under franchise, is recognized, but the sentiment generally is that the company would not attempt such a step unless the demands of the council were unreasonable. It is urged that the attempt on the part of the council to get the company to make an agreement to bear its share of expense of street and sidewalk improvement, in exchange for its franchise, could not be looked on by the railroad interests as unreasonable, and many of the taxpayers feel assured that the company will, if the matter is put to it in the right spirit, be willing to agree to the terms which the council is asked to impose.

There is at the present time exempt from taxation in this city railroad property of the assessable value of $1,468,404. The exemption of another $1,000,000 worth of property for railroad purposes will, it is readily seen, hit the taxpaying interests pretty hard, and it is claimed to be only natural that they should urge some protective steps on the part of the council.

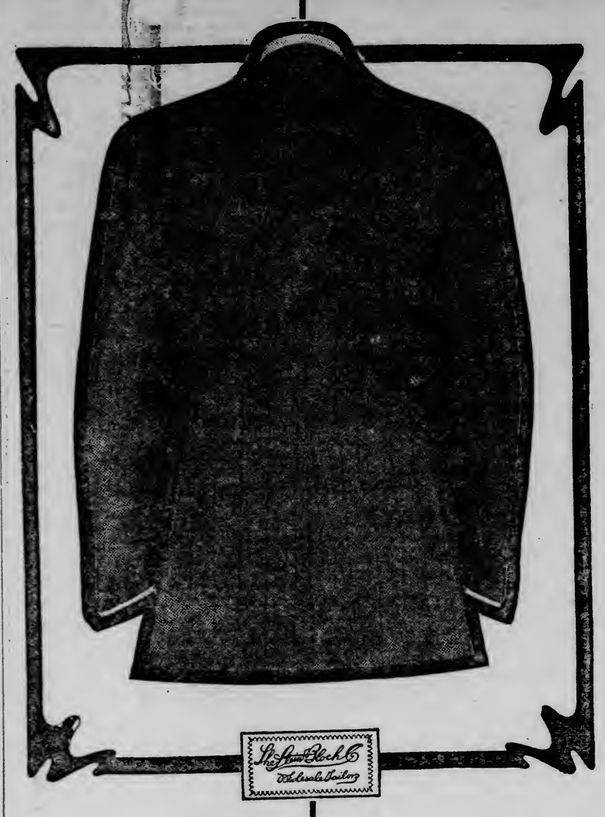

Even if the railroad company should be forced to condemnation proceedings, in case it refused to make any agreement as to future street improvements, a question has been raised as to the possibility of the city's making a claim of damages for the amount of taxes it would loose by reason of the property being taken off the tax rolls. Those in a position to know something about the city's claims in the matter say that this view of the case would certainly not be neglected if the railway company were to seek its franchise privileges through condemnation proceedings.

GOVERNOR TAFT MISREPRESENTED

Did Not Say Cuban Elections of 1905 Were Rotten.

Havana, Oct. 2.—In an interview today Governor Taft said that a recent dispatch of the Associated Press in which he was represented as criticising the Havana government severely and characterizing the situation as disgustind and the election of 1905 as rotten, does great injustice and unless corrected will cause embarrassment, since he scrupulously avoided giving interviews respecting his view of persons and issues in the Cuban situation. He did not use the expressions attributed to him. The error arose through the faulty transmission of news over the telephone by which the inferences of a correspondent were mistakenly attributed to Mr. Taft.

MOTORMEN ON WITNESS STAND

Testify for Traction Company In Big Damage Suit.

Four street railway motormen who had operated cars on the West Third street line at about the time little Bertford Arseneau was injured, testified for the company this morning in the trial of Mrs. Margaret Arseneau's suit against the Duluth Street Railway company for $30,000 for the loss of her son's limb.

James A. Cardiff, Walter Capling, Gust Wicklund, and Gus Larson, were the four motormen and each in turn stated at what time he had run by the scene of the accident, but each swore that he had seen no one jump on the car and swore that he had not started toward the door in a threatening manner or kicked any boy off the car. Only one of the four had heard of the accident the next morning.

Cardiff stated on cross-examination that the boys had often been troublesome in that vicinity, and were frequently jumping on and off the cars. He could recall no definite incident but knew that the boys had often jumped on his car. The motormen had been instructed to keep the boys off the cars as much as possible. Capling explained the position of a motormen as he operates his car and stated that in his opinion it would have been practically impossible to kick the boy without moving toward the door of the vestibule.

Mrs. Olive O'Brien told of the scene at her home after the injured boy had been taken there before he was carried to his own home. She stated that there were a number of people gathered at her house after the accident, but that she did not know who they were.

The testimony for both parties in the case has been nearly concluded and the case may reach the jury this afternoon unless the arguments of the attorneys consume too much of the session.

LA FOLLETTE ON VITAL ISSUES

Of the Nation Takes a Rap at Minnesota's Senators.

Hutchinson, Minn., Oct. 3.—Senator Robert La Follette of Wisconsin, delivered a stirring address here Monday evening. He spoke to a large audience for three hours and twenty minutes, and his hearers were so wrapped up in his address that not one left the room. All sat spellbound, while the senator discussed the vital issues of the nation, calling upon the voters to oust grafters from office and put honest men into control of affairs.

Senator La Follette's address was given under the auspices of the library association, and was a biting arraignment of national evils, particularly those arising from railroad greed. He spoke at length on the new rate bill, receiving its provision and saying that the bill was a victory more in the principle established by its passage than by the provisions it contained.

The senator replied:

"I hate to say, because the leading newspapers of your state call it a mean attack to give the record of senators. Down in Indiana they even accused me of betraying my friends; but I didn't. I only read the rollcall, and I wish not to be misunderstood, because I have no personal animosity against any of my fellow senators. I only state facts, and a senator should be proud of his record. And it should confer a favor on him to have it read. The vote on my measure stood forty against it and twenty-seven in favor of it, and twenty-two didn't vote. Nelson voted against it and Clapp did not vote. I then offered my ninth amendment, the one withholding judges interested in railroads or holding passes from passing judgment. I thought that this was so self-evident that it needed no support."

Again cries came from the audience, "How did they vote?"

"The machine is pretty good down there," continued the senator. "Forty-two against, twenty-seven in favor—two did not vote. This time Clapp voted against the measure and Nelson did not vote."

The senator said that he was meeting opposition on every hand among his colleagues, and that social ostracism was threatened, but he would continue to fight for the rights of the people while he had an ounce of strength left.

ERIE MAY GET THE CENTRAL

And Have Short Line Between New York and Duluth.

Milwaukee, Oct. 3.—In connection with the rumor regarding the probable sale of the Wisconsin Central, the question is asked, by railway interests whether it is the Erie, the Milwaukee, the Illinois Central, the Canadian Pacific, or the Harriman interests that is to control.

In this connection, it is learned on good authority, that while in Milwaukee upon two occasions during the past three weeks, Fred D. Underwood, president of the Erie system, held two long conferences with President Whitcomb of the Central. While these visits may have been of a social nature, many believe they related to the probable sale to the Erie interests of the Central road. At the time of Mr. Underwood's visit it was said that his road would probably absorb the Pere Marquette system at an early days. If there is anything in this story, railway men state, it would be of the greatest advantage to the Erie to secure the Wisconsin Central, also, thus controlling a direct short line, via Lake Michigan, between New York and Minneapolis and Duluth. The new line of the Central, from Owen and Ladysmith, Wis., to Superior and Duluth, will give the Central, or its future owner, one of the best direct lines from the northwest to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Chicago and the Atlantic seaboard via the lake, that can be secured. It is also pointed out that the Illinois Central could use the road to advantage in its great north system, from the lakes to the gulf. That the Milwaukee road wants the Central or that Harriman cares for it, is not believed by well posted men, unless the Milwaukee is forced into taking it in order to keep out some antagonistic trunk interest. Two years ago President Tom Shaughnessy of the Canadian Pacific, declared he did not want it.

The Central at present has a total working mileage of 1042.45, divided as follows: Mileage in Illinois, 72.72; in Wisconsin, 906.70; in Minnesota, 41.97, and in Michigan, 21.06, arranged in two divisions, the southern, with two districts; the northern, with two divisions.

The annual meeting of the Wisconsin Central will be held in Milwaukee on Tuesday next.

USE ALL MONEY THAT IS NEEDED

To Put Cuba in Good Sanitary Condition, Says Taft.

Havana, Oct. 3.—Dr. Barnet, chief executive officer of the Cuban health department, said today:

"Governor Taft has told us to use any amount of money needed for putting Cuba into a first class sanitary condition and for stamping out yellow fever. Consequently we are today installing sanitary brigades at Pinar del Rio, Guanajay, Matanzas, Cardenas, Colon, Union De Reyes, Sagua La Grande, Santa Clara, Cienfuegos, Sancti Spiritus, Camaguay, Guantanamo, Santiago, Manzanillo, Remidios and Bibara. All these towns will have ample oiling and disinfecting brigades. We have not submitted to Mr. Taft any estimate of the expense. He considers that the work must be done, and it will be done. In Havana now there are three cases of yellow fever, one of which came from Guanabacoa. There are no cases elsewhere in the island, and there is no special epidemic threatened, but precautions are urgently necessary. The disinfecting force in Havana already has been increased from seventy to 125 men and the oiling brigade in Havana is being increased to 200 men. There are 200 men now at work at Camp Columbia engaged in a quick but thorough job of disinfection and mosquito extermination in preparation for its occupancy by the American troops."

There is some incendiary talk of resistance to the laying down of arms in various parts of the island, but Governor Taft and the commissioners charged with the supervision of the disarmament of the insurgents regard the situation as being well in hand. Gen. Rodriguez, commander of the rural guards, reported today that the situation around Havana is quiet. Maj. Ladd of the disarmament commission, and the insurgent commanders are working in the rain, accomplishing the sending home and dispersal of the insurgents.

Mr. Taft's force is engaged in moving his office effects from the American legation to the palace, the government departments are engaged in their usual work, and no resignations of government officers have been tendered.

Is good for you. It is the national beverage where vigor and health are the rule, and nervousness the rare exception.

Malt is a food, half digested. Hops are a tonic. A little alcohol—there is but a trifle in beer—is an aid to digestion.

THE STAGE

"THE COLLEGE WIDOW."

George Ade's Vivacious Comedy Shows No Signs of Deteriorating.

Time has not affected "The College Widow." It's just the same whole-souled, delightful comedy that it was when it visited Duluth last year, and many of those who laughed at Ade's clever lines then, found much to enjoy in last evening's production.

Those who have not seen the production have a rare treat in store for them and they are to be envied the experience to come.

The company seen last evening is a new one, and contains but one familiar face, that of Otis Turner, who plays the part of the town constable. The others are all new, and those who witnessed the performance for the second time had difficulty in deciding whether the changes were for the better or for the worse. As a whole there is little to choose between the two companies.

Miss Louise Rutter, who follows Dorothy Tennant as "The College Widow" is one of the prettiest young women seen on the stage in Duluth in many a day. She has learned the lesson that grease paint is not a necessary adjunct of a stage makeup, and she admirably fills the part of the fresh, vivacious, young college girl.

Robert Kelley, as Billy Bolton, the half back, has a pair of shoulders and a physique that ought to make him catch the eye of any football coach, and he was entirely satisfactory in his role.

Donald Meek belies his name as "Stub," the busy undergraduate, and he is a pocket edition of the rah-rah boy with ingrown collegitis, possessing, nevertheless, qualities which make a hit with old Hiram Bolton, the railroad president, who, by the way, is most admirably portrayed by George S. Trimble.

Patty Allison, as Flora Wiggins, the prominent waitress with the aggressive pompadour and the instincts of a "lady," is just as mirth provoking as ever, and the part of Bessie Tanner, the athletic girl, is in the very capable hands of Miss Bessie Toner.

The football game in the third act is just as exciting as ever, and, in fact, the production shows no signs of deteriorating into the raggedness and roadworn mediocrity of a fourth season.

"The College Widow" will be repeated this afternoon and this evening.

GOOD BILL AT BIJOU.

The Bijou is offering an excellent vaudeville bill this week. Joe Whitehead has an excellent singing and talking act and the Grierson Sisters, who have shone in musical comedy at different times, contribute a song and dance turn that is away above the average.

The bill is rich in singing and talking acts, in fact. J. Gaffney Brown, who used to travel with the burlesque shows and who is now billed as "one man in a thousand" obliges with a couple of numbers and so does Eva Thatcher, "the Irish lady."

Sanford and Darlington present a sketch which they call "Twenty Minutes in Vaudeville." Teed and Lazelle call their merry mixup, "A Scandulous Affair." It is hardly that but interesting nevertheless. Jack O'Toole sings and the moving pictures exploit some very interesting subjects, including the coronation of King Haakon of Norway.

CLEVER SKIT AT MET.

Dave Marlon's skit, "East Side Life," is a broad satire but parts of the sketch, which is making a hit at the Metropolitan this week, ring true. "East Side Life" is given during the olio which separates the two acts of Mr. Marlon's musical play, "Roseland." It is an elaborately staged affair, introducing all of the company and two of Marlon's songs, "Walk, Walk, Walk" and "East Side Life." As the boy with the hairlip, Marlon is very funny.

He has accomplished some good musical numbers in "Roseland," too. The finale of the first act, "Good Bye, Dear Old Broadway," is as pretentious and pretty a number as has ever been seen on the stage of the "Met." The scenery is excellent, showing Times Square, New York, and the sentiments of the song are applauded at every performance.

Tomorrow is ladies' day at the Metropolitan and the ban will be placed on smoking for the day. The bill this week is calculated to appeal to the fair sex.

"IN THE BISHOP'S CARRIAGE."

"What made you a thief?"

"Circumstances—same thing that made you a gentleman."

Nance Olden, the latest and in many respects the most fascinating of stage thieves, the heroine of "In the Bishop's Carriage," which appears at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday, thus delivers herself, when asked the question as to what makes her a thief.

Miss Jessie Busley is the heroine of this latest study in criminology and Liebler & Co. have given the play an elaborate scenic environment, and a capable company of actors.

"MAN KILLER" SHOWED HIS BOAST WAS TRUE.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Michael Shoemaker, an Austrialian laborer, 35 years old, boasted that he was a "man killer" at Gary, Ill. Four of his countrymen, fellow laborers in a stone quarry, questioned his prowess and Shoemaker proceeded to stab one of them to death, slashed another so severely that he will die and put the other two to flight. He gave chase to one of the fugitives, who ran for a mile and a half with the enraged man only a few steps behind him. Then Shoemaker fell from exhaustion, while the man pursued ran on to Summit, Ill., and gave the alarm. The tragedy occurred Saturday night, but the story of the murder was told yesterday for the first time when Shoemaker was brought to Chicago and put in the county jail.

ASSASSINATION IN COURTROOM

Judge Advocate in Russian Military Court is Killed.

Askabad, Russia, Oct. 3.—During the trial Monday of the second section of the troops who mutinied here in June, an unknown man entered the court room and killed the judge advocate, Gen. Rinkevich, and attempted to shoot the president of the court, Gen. Ushakoffsky. The assassin was shot down by an officer.

Yekaterinoslav, Oct. 3.—While the police were examining houses here yesterday were attacked by a number of young revolutionists armed with revolvers. Several volleys were exchanged before the revolutionists were put to flight, leaving behind them one man dead and another wounded.

Kharkov, Oct. 3.—The police have discovered a bomb factory in the outskirts of the city. They took possession of two filled and sixty unfilled bombs and a quantity of explosives and secured information leading to the discovery of other laboratories, where four more bombs were seized. The arrests were made. One of the prisoners is a Sebastopol sailor who escaped from prison, where he was being held on the charges of participation in the recent mutiny.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 3.—Several newspapers have published editorial articles on the events at Atlanta, Ga., comparing them with the anti-Jewish massacres in Russia. The Novoe Vremya expresses the hope that the United States now will cease to attribute the Russian excesses to official provocation, instead of admitting that they are the result of natural racial animosity.

DRUNKENNESS CURED.

It will be gratifying to all lovers of temperance and a happy home to know that a simple and scientific cure for the whiskey and beer habit has been discovered. Orrine never fails to cure drunkeness if it is used in accordance with the simple directions in the package, and the discoverer has so much confidence in the treatment that we are authorized to sell it with an absolute guarantee, to effect a cure or the money will be refunded.

It is in two forms: No. 1, to be given secretly, and No. 2 for those who wish to be cured, $1.00 each. Mothers and sisters have told us of husbands and brothers who since they were given Orrine, in many cases without their knowledge, have lost all desire for drink, and we are glad to recommend the remedy. Mail orders filled. The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., or F. W. Kugler, 108 W. Superior street.

THE SUCCESS OF THE AMERICAN

Attributed to Maj. Hersey's Knowledge of Meteorological Conditions.

Paris, Oct. 3.—Lieut. Frank P. Lahm, Sixth calvary, U. S. A., winner of the international balloon contest, and Maj. Hersey, his companion, arrived here from England this morning. Much of the American's success is attributed to Maj. Hersey's knowledge of meteorological conditions, obtained as the result of long service in the weather bureau at Washington. Before the departure of the United States, the winning balloon, Maj. Hersey closely examined the latest weather reports and knew instantly that the heavier and faster outer currents would be at the lower surface and that the wind revolving about the center, from left to right, would inevitably change their direction and carry the balloon northward toward England. Consequently while the rivals of the Americans were vainly testing the upper strata the latter remained close to the earth, their guide rope touching much of the time. Their judgment was vindicated by the fact that, although the United States was the twelfth balloon to start, it was the first to reach the English coast.

INSURANCE MATTERS

Discussed by the Commissioners in Session at Washington.

Washington, Oct. 3.—At a session of the national association of insurance commissioners today reports mostly of a technical character were submitted and discussed. The reports adopted were on "blanks" including the various forms on which returns were made to the state commissioners "authorized insurance" and fraternal society.

The question of laws and legislation has been discussed by the Chicago conference and was allowed to go over.

A recess was taken in order that the delegates might attend a reception especially arranged for them by President Roosevelt.

WEST DULUTH

WEDDING IS QUIET ONE

Miss Grace Keeler and W. H. Wright United in Marriage.

Ceremony Comes as a Surprise to Their Friends.

Today at noon, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dix, at 5810 Elinor street, Miss Grace Keeler and W. H. Wright, were united in marriage by Rev. S. G. Briggs of the Merritt Memorial M. E. church. The affair was a very quiet one, only the intimate friends being invited, and in fact the details of the affair had been kept very secret until today.

A wedding breakfast was served immediately after the ceremony, and the bride and groom left for Minneapolis on the two o'clock train this afternoon. Mr. Wright's home is in St. Paul and after a short stop there they will go to Chicago and other Eastern ports. They will be at home after Nov. 1, at 5812 Elinor street.

Miss Keeler was one of the most popular young ladies of West Duluth society, and is widely known here. Mr. Wright is superintendent of the coke ovens of the Zenith furnace company, and is very highly esteemed by all who know him. Rumors of the affair have excited no little interest for some time, but except for a select few, no one knew just when or where it was to take place.

BREAKS HIS ARM.

First Football Accident of the Season in West Duluth.

West Duluth boasts the first football accident of the season in the city. Yesterday afternoon, Israel Fieldman, while practicing with the team known as the Irving Tigers, on which he plays quarter, was tackled and in falling his right arm snapped just above the wrist.

He was attended by Dr. Graham, and while there is every indication of the member's setting quickly, he will have no more opportunity to test the gentleness of Rugby under the new rules this season at least.

Furnacemen Leave.

The employees of the Zenith Furnace Company are regretting the loss of two of their most popular fellow workmen. Lopis Glaser, who has been officiating as night timekeeper at the furnace, left yesterday for St. Paul where he was called by the illness of his wife and child. Mr. Glaser was very popular about West Duluth as well as among the furnacemen, and his departure will be keenly regretted by many.

Erwin J. Bigert, yard foreman at the furnace plant is the second man to go. He will leave town tonight for Chicago. He will be succeeded by Harold Lawrence of Cleveland.

Hagarty-Pokorney.

Miss Nellie Hagarty and Frank Pokorney were married this morning at 8 o'clock by Rev. D. W. Lynch, the ceremony taking place at St. James church. Charles J. Kauppi acted as best man, and Miss Myrtle Hagarty officiated as maid of honor. The church was decorated with carnations, roses, and ferns. A reception will be held this evening in honor of the young couple at the home of the bride.

Mr. Pokorney is employed by the Union Match Company, and Miss Hagarty resided in the western end of the city.

West Duluth Briefs.

Stewart MacDonald is acting as superintendent of the ovens of the Zenith furnace company, during the temporary absence of W. H. Wright.

Invitations are out for a dance to be given by the members of the Royal League at Wade's hall next Wednesday evening.

CASE GOES UP TO THE GRAND JURY

George Harris Must Answer to a Charge of Assault.

George Harris, who was arrested for pulling a gun on Deputy Sheriff Michael Horgan Monday afternoon, was examined in the municipal court yesterday afternoon and bound over to the next grand jury on the charge of assault in the second degree. The maximum punishment for this offense is imprisonment for a term of five years.

Investigations made by the police department have convinced the officers that Harris has a police record and that his real name or alias is Frank Wilson. In the rogues' gallery at the police station is a picture that is said to be a perfect likeness of Harris. The picture purports to be that of Frank Harris, a shoplifter who was arrested in St. Paul for working a tailor shop and who served ninety days from Jan. 30 last.

The fact that the Bertillon measurements of Wilson correspond to those of Harris make the police certain they have Wilson.

It is thought by the police that Harris or Wilson may have been connected with some recent crime for the reason that when he was first taken into custody he said to Deputy Sheriff Horgan, "I am wise to you fellows, you have been shadowing me quite a while." This expression together with his quick action in pulling a gun inclines the officers to the belief that Harris had just completed some job and was attempting to keep out of the way of the officers. His description has been sent to the police officials throughout the West in the hope that some information may be had of any localities where he may have been working.

James Willett, who claimed to be a friend of Harris and who was arrested for interfering with the officers when they took Harris into custody, was subjected to the Bertillon system of measurement but so far the police have been unable to find that he has any previous bad record. If nothing more serious is found against him he will be tried for interference with an officer in his duty.

George Coombs, for whom Deputy Sheriff Horgan was looking when he ran across Harris, will be taken back to St. Paul this evening. He is wanted on a statutory charge.

ELEVEN PASSENGERS INJURED IN COLLISION.

Muryhysboro, Ill., Oct. 3.—A head end collision occurred near here yesterday afternoon between two passenger trains on the St. Louis-Cairo line of the Illinois Central road and eleven passengers were injured, none being reported fatally hurt. The injured: E. R. Waters, St. Louis, cut in back of head; W. R. Hill, of Chicago, nose broken; Mrs. Charles Gebig, Badstown, Ill., left leg bruised; Cora Moore, Paducah, Ky., head cut; Julius Tick, Paducah, Ky.; J. W. Davie, Grand Tower; Miss Neta Burnett, Kalamazoo, Mich.; Mrs. Rex Louden, Murphysboro; G. L. Hamilton, Marissa; R. L. Mannie, Carbondale; Lee Peck, East St. Louis.

The cause of the collision is not stated.

A PERFECT GODSEND

Mrs. Bessie Spencer, completely used up, tried doctors and medicine without good result. She states that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey helped her from the start and restored her to the best of health in a short time.

MRS. BESSIE SPENCER.

Mrs. Spencer, filled with gratitude, writes:

I have been using Duffy's Pure Malt for four months, and I am so glad, as it has done me more good than all the doctors' medicines I have taken. I know that I worked very hard and was failing fast every day, until I began to take this wonderful Pure Malt Whiskey, and I surely can praise it anywhere in the wide world, and am not ashamed to praise it amidst thousands of people. I know that it brought me out of hard suffering. I had to go upstairs one foot at a time, and when I got up in the morning I could not stand on my feet for some time, my limbs would tremble so under me, and when Duffy's was recommended to me I sent and got it as soon as I could, and before I had taken one bottle of Duffy's Malt I could walk and go upstairs very well. This medicine was a perfect godsend to me, and I expect to praise it as long as I live, and I do hope that you may sell more of it all over the land and that it may reach many a sufferer, as it would prolong their lifs for many years. (Signed) MRS. BESSIE SPENCER, Easton, Talbot Co., Goldsborough street, Md. Ap'l 11, 06.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic, builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles, and richness to the blood. It brings into action all the vital forces, it makes digestion perfect, and enables you to get from the food you eat all the nourishment it contains. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children. It strengthens and sustains the system, is a promoter of good health and longevity, makes the old young and keeps the young strong. Duffy's is the only whisky that has been recognized as a medicine and is guaranteed absolutely free from fusel oil. Seven thousand doctors prescribe and 2,000 hospitals use Duffy's Malt Whiskey exclusively.

BLAME OWNERS OF BUILDING

Cement Company Would Recover for Goods Ruined by Water.

The trial of the suit of the Standard Salt & Cement company against Edward C. Liedel, administrator of the estate of Edward A. Liedel, deceased, and Henry A. Liedel and Marion Douglas, for the recovery of $1,835, the loss on certain building material, claimed to be due to the negligence of the defendants, was begun before Judge Ensign, in district court, this morning.

The salt and cement company claims that the defendants rented a building for the use of the company, several years ago, and promised to repair and improve it so that it would be a proper place for the storage of cement and other building materials. It is claimed that the defendants improved the property to some extent, but that the building materials stored in the building by the Standard company were greatly damaged by water coming through. The company maintains this loss was due to the negligence of the defendants in not properly improving the property.

Marion Douglas, Edward C. Liedel and S. E. Matter were the only witnesses examined this morning. They testified regarding the agreement which had been entered into by the two parties at the time the Standard company had leased the property.

YELLOW SUGAR ONLY TO BE PUT ON MARKET.

New York, Oct. 3.—Unless the United States pure food commission changes its mind, the people of the United States will soon be using granulated and other sugars that have a distinctly yellowish tinge. The commission has declared that no mineral blueing substance be used in bleaching sugars. Sugar chemists say they use four pounds of a mineral blueing substance to every 1,000,000 pounds of sugar for bleaching purposes.

This, the sugar chemists say, is not adulteration; that it is merely purification by a thoroughly healthful process. The pure food commission cannot see it in that light, and insists that the whitening process be abandoned.

HORSE THIEF IS YOUTHFUL

Seven-Year-Old Boy Has Penchant for Taking Horses.

Bruno Korpi, aged 7 years, who is claimed to be an adept in the art of horse stealing, was brought to Duluth from Hibbing today and will be taken before the juvenile court next Saturday.

One of the youngster's favorite pastimes is said to be to break into barns at Hibbing, take a horse and carriage and drive until he gets tired, when he will leave the rig at some convenient place.

Recently the mail carrier from Buhl drove to Hibbing. During his absence Bruno took his rig and drove away with it. The mail carrier had to get another rig to drive home. Another time the boy took a rig from the barn of Mr. Day at Hibbing and abandoned it after he got tired of riding. Monday he repeated the trick and was taken before Judge Brady of the municipal court at Hibbing and severely lectured. The talking seemed to do him no good and he will have to be dealt with by the juvenile court.

JAMES IS CAREFUL.

James Connelly, an industrious workman 28 years of age, who emigrated to America from Ireland about fifteen years ago, advertised for a wife and yesterday he received an answer.

James, however, believes in being cautious and took his answer, which purported to come from an 18-year-old would-be bride, to a policeman and asked whether it came from a good neighborhood. He was assured that the neighborhood was perfectly respectable. Connelly will call on the young lady this evening and then, if both parties are satisfied, the happy event may soon be expected.

A SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

Maquoketa, Iowa, Oct. 3.—The Upper Iowa Methodist conference convened today in a semi-centennial celebration. The conference was organized at Maquoketa fifty years ago. Eight members of the original conference are living. Most of them will attend the conference, of which Bishop Cranston presides.

MISS WHEELER WEDDED.

Decatur, Ala., Oct. 2.—The marriage of Miss Carle Peyton Wheeler, youngest daughter of the late Gen. Joseph E. Wheeler, to Gordon Montgomery Buck of New York took place Tuesday at the old Wheeler homestead near here. The wedding was a quiet one with only a few friends of the family present.

INCREASE IN PERMITS

More Building Permits Issued Last Month Than in 1905.

Aggregate Value of Improvements, However, Shows a Decrease.

The September report of Building Inspector Kielly which will be presented to the council next Monday evening, shows a total of eighty-seven permits issued last month with an estimated aggregate valuation of $103,135.

The report shows that while more permits were issued last month, the aggregate valuation fell below that for the corresponding month in 1905 when the number of permits issued was seventy-five and the valuation of the improvements were estimated at $198,395.

The discrepancy in valuation, however, does not show the activity that has been going on along building lines so well as does the number of permits granted.

The reason that the valuation of new buildings last month did not equal or exceed the valuation for the corresponding month last year is due to the fact that that while there were a great many improvements under way few of them were of great value. In fact the building improvement with the highest valuation for which a permit was taken out last month, was the Horgan apartment house on Jefferson street near Eighteenth avenue east. The estimated value of this improvement is $9,000. All the other valuations fell far below that figure. Had there been a permit for one or two houses like J. B. Cotton's taken out last month, which might easily have happened as Mr. Cotton was practically ready then to get his permit, the aggregate valuation figure could easily have been boosted to a much higher figure. As it is the October building report will undoubtedly show the large increase over the corresponding month of last year, instead of September.

Quite a number of large improvements are being planned for which the permits are likely to be taken out before many days.

HEARING APPEAL.

Heirs of Charles Gasper Think Administrator Overcharged Them.

Evidence was taken today by Judge Dibell and a jury in the district court in the trial of the appeal from Judge Middlecoff's order in probate court, allowing Charles Peterson, special administrator, and his attorney, W. S. McClear, $150 each for their services in administering the estate of Charles Gasper, the general merchant of Fond du Lac, who died last January. The appeal was made in behalf of Peter Maus and other German heirs, who are represented by W. G. Joerns.

Yesterday afternoon Charles Peterson, special administrator, was questioned concerning his duties, to enable the jury to decide whether or not he had earned his fee. Attorney McLearn testified concerning the legal proceedings of the estate.

At this morning's esssion of court several well-known lawyers and experts in administering estate testified that in their opinion the fee of $150 allowed the special administrator was not too high. Those who testified this morning were: C. H. Harrison, L. C. Harris, S. G. Hunt and E. A. Goldener.

The case will probably be concluded this afternoon.

BALLOTING BEGUN

For Officers of the Woman's Catholic Order of Foresters.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 3.—In the session of the Woman's Catholic Order of Foresters today, after the minutes of the previous day had been approved, several dozen nominees were led upon the platform in answer to their names, in order that all delegates might know them. No speeches were permitted.

Seven hundred delegates to the convention are looking forward to an all night session tonight. Balloting for high court officers began today under the Australian system, and it was thought that not all could be cast and counted until the small hours of Thursday morning.

Friends of Mrs. Elizabeth Rodgers, high chief ranger, are confident of her re-election.

TO SUSTAIN COLLECTOR

Who Refused to Give Applications for Liquor Licenses.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Commissioner Yerkes, of the internal revenue bureau said today relative to the action of the superior court of Raleigh, N. C., of committing Internal Revenue Collector E. C. Duncan for conspiracy in refusing to answer questions relative to applications for United States government liquor licenses that Mr. Duncan will be sustained by the government in his position, and, if he is imprisoned, the United States attorney in Raleigh will immediately take steps to secure his release on habeas corpus. Mr. Yerkes added that every decision of the supreme court of the United States and all federal courts uniformly have sustained internal revenue officers in refusing to answer questions of this kind in regard to the business of their offices.

KITCHI GAMMI CLUB

Holds Its Annual Meeting and Election of Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Kitchi Gammi club, held last evening, T. F. Cole was unanimously re-elected president. This will be the third term of office for him. The directors chosen yesterday were A. W. Hartman, G. G. Hartley and Ward Ames, Sr.

The club is in excellent financial condition, having a resident membership of 218 and an outside membership of 134.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Grief Causes Girl to Commit Suicide on Brother's Farm.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—Grieving over the loss of her mother and her betrothed within a year and being unable to gratify a desire to revisit her home in the East, Lizzie Erickson, aged 25 years, living on a claim three miles north of Stanley with her brother, committed suicide by shooting herself in the head with a shotgun. The brother, with whom she lived, had gone to the barn. He heard a shot, rushed into the shack and found the girl lying by the bed with the side of her head blown off. The girl's mother died a year ago and her betrothed within a month. Friends refused to allow her to visit her old home on account of her disposition to brood over her sorrows.

Lidgerwood—As the thrashing outfit of Charles Kimball was coming up the hill out of the Wild Rice river, ten miles north of here, the eccentric bolt fell out, causing the engine to reverse. Harry Lawrence Cook of Xenia, Ohio, a young man of about 20 years, tried to jump from the tender, but was thrown too close to it and killed instantly. The coroner was called and at the autopsy here today it was found that several ribs were broken and a blood vessel burst.

Enderlin—Lawrence Dollan, formerly a conductor on the Canadian Pacific railway, died on Soo train No. 106, which arrived here Sunday morning. His body was taken from the cars at this place, prepared for burial and shipped to his old home in Vancouver, B. C. Leaving home last thursday accompanied by his wife and a friend of the family, Mr. Dollan was able to walk to the train, intending to go to Chicago for treatment of the disease known as locomotor ataxia, but complications which set in while en route caused a sudden and unexpected death.

Fargo—Two terms of the United States court are in prgress here. Judge Amidon of Fargo is presiding over the Fort Berthold reservtion Indian assault case in the district court and Judge Page Morris of Duluth is here hearing a case for the Fargo jurist in the circuit court, in which A. E. Logie of Illinois sues the Fargo board of education for $2,400. Logie was engaged by the old school board to teach last year. The action was rescinded by the new board and another man selected. Logie reported for duty at the time, and afterwards started the suit for his salary. It is the general opinion that he will get a judgment, but it is expected the amount will be for much less than the full salary.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre—A locomotive went off the track about noon yesterday three miles west of Teton. John Pinkert, the engineer, was caught between the cab and the engine and scalded to death. He was a new man on the run and leaves a family in Huron. John Heiny, the fireman, was thrown from the engine at the time of the accident and badly crushed, and is in the hospital in this city. This is the first fatal train accident on the new line.

Milbank—At a meeting of the council it was ordered that at a special meeting Wednesday night the saloonkeepers should appear to hear the law read regarding closing hours. If the law is not obeyed to the letter, licenses will be revoked. All poker joints are to be wiped out. The lid must come down, say the people.

Salem—Mrs. H. T. Cheadle died here Sunday forenoon from the effects of burns received Saturday afternoon about 4 o'clock in the explosion of a gasolene stove. Mrs. Cheadle is the wife of H. T. Cheadle, and together they run a restaurant and confectionery establishment.

Sioux Falls—A former convict of the Sioux Falls penitentiary has been arrested on suspicion of having caused the death of Mrs. Collins, a Turner county farmer's wife, by chloroform.

NEW WORKMEN.

Class of 100 New Members for Fidelity Lodge.

A class of 100 new members for Fidelity lodge No. 105, A. O. U. W., has been secured during the month of September, and more than half of these will be initiated and become members of this lodge tomorrow evening.

O. C. Born, a deputy sent here by the grand lodge, was busy writing up these applications during the greater part of last month, and left for his home in Minneapolis last Saturday. He expressed himself as well satisfied with the results obtained here. G. M. W., M. C. Fift of Long Prairie will confer the degrees on this class, and will be assisted by W. J. Stephens of Duluth, another grand lodge officer. The exercises will take place in Maccabee hall on West First street. This lodge holds the record of being, not only the largest and strongest, but also of having the youngest membership of any Workman lodge in the city. The average age of the class going in is 27 years.

RIGHT HOME.

Doctor Recommends Postum From Personal Test.

No one is better able to realize the injurious action of caffeine—the drug in coffee—on the heart, than the doctor.

When the doctor himself has been relieved by simply leaving off coffee and using Postum, he can refer with full conviction to his own case.

A Mo. physician prescribes Postum for many of his patients, because he was benefited by it. He says:

"I wish to add my testimony in regard to that excellent preparation—Postum. I have had functional or nervous heart trouble for over fifteen years, and part of the time was unable to attend to my business.

"I was a moderate user of coffee, and did not think drinking it hurt me. But on stopping it and using Postum instead, my heart has got all right, and I ascribe it to the change from coffee to Postum.

"I am prescribing it now in cases of sickness, especially when coffee does not agree, or affects the heart, nerves or stomach.

"When made right it has a much better flavor than coffee, and is a vital sustainer of the system. I shall continue to recommend it to our people, and I have my own case to refer to." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

DEMOCRATS OF RHODE ISLAND

Hold Convention to Name Candidates for the State Offices.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 3.—The Democratic state convention for the nomination of candidates for the various elective state offices was held here today.

The platform denounces "the boss system" which, it declaresn dominates national and state affairs. "The government of the state,5 it asserts, "has passed to the boss because Rhode Island has a constitution which gives representation in its law making body to its territory rather than to its menhood," has "robbed Rhode Island of millions of dollars worth of franchises and privileges and bestowed them on men who have contributed out of their ill-gotten wealth to the support of the system, not only of gratitude but because that system exempted from taxation that wealth so corruptly given them. Under this system the people of the state have been deprived of a revenue from taxation of millions of dollars and a portion of this money so unjustly withheld from the state has been used to corrupt a controlling element in communities where the forces of civic honesty could be overcome by the forces of organized corruption."

The establishment of the eight hour day for all state and municipal work is demanded, as are the calling of a constitutional convention with representation based on population and the enactment of a corrupt practices law applicable to elections and primaries.

The platform also favors the selection of United States senators by direct vote.

James H. Higgins, mayor of Pawtucket, who was nominated for governor by acclamation. In a speech declared that in Rhode Island "the name and rights of the people have been bargained away for individual profit and the good name of the state dragged in the mire" and that "a brutal boss with a warped conception of public morality, and hideous disregard of even the outer forms of political decency, has sold our laws and offices from an auction block in the state house."

CANADIAN SEALERS

Protest Against Use of Firearms by the Japanese Vessels.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 3.—In consequence of the interference with their business in Bering sea by Japanese vessels, a large fleet of which were in the sea this season hunting within the prescribed limits and using firearms, the British Columbia sealers are to present a protest to the imperial government. The British Columbia sealers are bound by the terms of the modus vivendi to remain outside a sixty-mile zone and use spears only to take seals. The sealers claim the use of firearms by the Japanese makes the seals so restless that it is only with great difficulty that they can be taken with spears. Some of the Japanese schooners were ordered, when leaving their home ports, to bring their catches to Victoria for shipment to London, according to letters received from Yokohama, but will probably change their plan as a result of the raids of July last at St. Paul island.

WANTS CHEAPER RATES.

Mayor Linley Will Investigate Price of Gas in West Superior.

Mayor Victor Linley of Superior has not let up on his fight for cheaper gas for the consumers in that city. At the council meeting last evening he secured the appointment of a committee of five aldermen, who with the mayor and the city attorney, will investigate the rates to be charged for gas.

Mayor Linley claims that the present rate of $1.40 for illuminating gas is unreasonable. The lighting plant resolution came in for a considerable amount of discussion and the mayor and the ordinance committee were authorized to draft an ordinance providing for the establishment of a street and commercial lighting plant.

RAILROADS

TWO TRAINS AGREED ON

New Road Will Have Good Passenger Service to Chicago.

Great Northern Road Names Everett as Its Ocean Port.

It is now understood to be a settled fact that the Wisconsin Central will, when the Lake Superior & Southeastern is completed, run two passenger trains each way daily between Duluth and Chicago. There has been talk all along to the effect that the Omaha would do the same thing, and if the new line takes a step in this direction it is expected the old one will follow its lead, in order to keep its share of the business.

The Milwaukee papers are continually reporting the sale of the Wisconsin Central road. Now they have it that the Central nas been purchased by the Harriman interests. This last report follows a positive denial that the Canadian Pacific has assumed control of the road.

Reports have had the Central sold to the Grand Trunk-Pacific, the Canadian Northern, the Great Northern and several other lines.

EVERETT OCEAN PORT.

Great Northern Building Big Dock in the Washington Town.

Everett, Washington, has been decided upon as the ocean port of the Great Northern. The big steamers now land and load at Smith's Cove. Louis Hill, vice president of the road, says the Great Northern is building an ocean dock at Everett, of the size of the Seattle dock, to handle the company's grain, salmon, and Oriental business. A minimum depth of thirty-five feet of water will be made and a deep harbor can be obtained there with little dredging.

TRANSCONTINENTAL LINE.

Another Through Line to Coast Said to be Projected.

Another transcontinental line is said to be projected. It will be brought about through arrangement between the Soo line, the Canadian Pacific and the Spokane & International, resulting in a shorter route to Spokane, bringing Duluth and the Twin Cities sixty miles nearer the Washington city. A Minneapolis paper says of the plan:

"Much speculation was aroused today in Minneapolis among holders of Soo stock as to what the real plan for the Soo's transcontinental will be. 'No doubt the Canadian Pacific would like to have the Soo line extended through to Seattle,' said a closely interested capitalist today. 'I don't know of any line that is in better condition to build the transcontinental than the C. P. R. However, I don't think the extension will be built to spite the Great Northern, but because the line promises to make a due return. The Soo now, you see, is the only transcontinental which does not have to climb the mountains or cross the desert to get to the coast. It uses the Canadian Pacific rails. If the new line did not promise to pay it would not be constructed at all.

"'Decision by the Soo line to have its own rails from Minneapolis to the coast, thus adding another Twin City-Pacific coast route, is expected to create dismay in the Hill camp, it is said by railroad men. Already the Soo has given the Great Northern a body blow in bisecting all of the feeders which the Hill road had stretched northward in North Dakota like a lot of tentacles to scoop in the wheat and other products for haul over its lines to the Minneapolis and St. Paul market. The Soo line between the Great Northern and Canada, clear from Thief River Falls to Kenmare, N. D., with a line planned to Duluth and an extension farther westward.'

"The Soo crosses no less than eleven of these feeders in its new route across North Dakota. Its Garrison line, farther south, cuts off four of these feeders by making the same stations or by crossing the lines."

Dyspepsia

Is an indication that the stomach and other digestive organs are weak, tired or debilitated. It causes no end of aches and pains and is most common where people bolt their meals and hurry and worry as they do in this country.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

cures dyspepsia—it has "a magic touch" in this disease.

SOO'S DULUTH LINE

Surveys West of Here Giving Rise to Much Speculation.

Perham, Minn., Oct. 3.—Soo surveyors are now at work in the town of Butler, in this county, and by the end of the week will have passed into Becker county. At present they are working on a line running through Red Eye valley to Corliss, thence through Gorman, one and a half miles north of South Pine lake, crossing the Red river and the Northern Pacific west of Luce, through Hobart, then west to Vegas on the Glenwood extension of the Soo, then starting west, keeping south of Cormorant lake and all of the towns on the Northern Pacific into Fargo, and thence paralleling the Northern Pacific to Valley City, N. D. To the eastward of here the survey is said to be practically complete, which, if followed, will give the Soo almost an air line from Duluth and the Head of the Lakes to Fargo.

It is said upon what appears to be good authority that great inducements are being held out to the Soo to construct such a line. The D. S. B. Johnston Land company is reported to have offered the road $1,000 per mile for every mile of the road built through Becker county. Frazee also wants the line and the Nichols-Chisholm Lumber company of that town is reported to have assured the Soo $150,000 worth of freight business annually for ten years if the line is built to Frazee.

ANNUAL MEETING

Of Minneapolis & St. Louis Road Held and Directors Re-Elected.

Minneapolis, Oct. 3.—Stockholders of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad company held their annual meeting yesterday, in the office of Vice President and General Manager L. F. Day, Metropolitan Life building, and elected three directors. The directors will at some future time meet for the election of officers. The directors re-elected were: John E. Searles of New York, F. H. Davis of New York, who is treasurer of the company, and L. F. Day of Minneapolis, who is general manager.

At the directors' meeting the question of dividend will be acted upon, when it is expected that the regular semi-annual dividend of 2½ per cent on the preferred stock will be declared. No dividends have been paid on the common for some time. Owing to the thoroughness of the 1906 work, it is not probable that a large appropriation will be ordered for 1907.

ROCK ISLAND INTERESTS

Still in Control of the Chicago & Alton Road.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—The Rock Island interests were left in control of the Chicago & Alton railroad by the re-election at the annual meeting yesterday of th edirectors whose terms of office had expired. At the conclusion of the meeting it was announced that there would be no change in officers or methods of operation during the ensuing year. The annual report showed a decrease in total receipts from passenger traffic of $775,118.34, and an increase in tonnage revenue of $542,153.79. The decrease in passenger traffic is accounted for by comparison with the previous year when the Louisiana Purchase Exposition was held in St. Louis.

Railroad Notes.

W. H. Palmer has been appointed chief clerk in the local office of the Wisconsin Central railway, succeeding I. N. Powers. The appointemnt took effect yesterday.

Beginning next Saturday, the railroad city freight offices will be open Saturday afternoon. They have been closed this half day during the summer season.

WARM WELCOME GIVEN TO GOVERNOR JOHNSON

met that kindly, sincere and courteous greeting that is characteristic of the man.

Every meeting was an excellent one, and the governor was warmly welcomed. To hold successful political meetings in the busy hours of the day in these times, when business is so brisk on the ranges, is not an easy matter, and the splendid gatherings of yesterday show a strong interest in the Democratic candidate for governor. On the streets of the towns this interest was strongly apparent. Everywhere predictions are made that Governor Johnson will find a great increase in his vote in St. Louis county this year. A feature of the meetings that has been strongly commented upon is the enthusiasm with which the remarks of the governor were greeted. This is said to be strongly in contrast with the situation of two years ago, when the audiences were inclined to be cold and devoid of any manifestations of enthusiasm.

In all instances the governor's remarks were very happy, and made with excellent effect. He naturally followed the line of his keynote speech, and discussed the matters of timber trespass, railroad rates, state development and equable taxation chiefly, devoting some brief time occasionally to insurance and school matters.

Judge Pendergast also spoke at all places, and was well received. He appealed particularly that the remainder of the ticket below the office of governor be not forgotten, and that Governor Johnson be given a force of officials in sympathy with his own principles and reform measures.

The opening meeting was at Proctor and there began the surprises of the day. The working force of the shops and yards was gathered on the platform of the depot to welcome the governor and Superintendent Kreitter met and escorted him to the new paint shop, a spacious structure, and there he addressed the men briefly. Work was suspended for the time being and the governor shook hands with most of the men.

At Biwabik H. H. Salmon and J. H. Silbar had gathered a large number of the people of the village and two hundred or thereabouts of the school children under Superintendent Gray marched to the depot and everyone of the delighted little ones—for most of them were little—shook hands with the state's chief executive. Biwabik is building a $40,000 school house and has twelve school teachers, and the governor's remarks as to what his administration is doing to safeguard the school funds of the state and to recover moneys illegally retained from them, were keenly appreciated.

Eveleth, the next stop, found the Miner's Union band awaiting the party at the depot and hacks to take them to Vail's hall where about 400 people were assembled. Coming as it did shortly before the noon hour the large gathering was most gratifying and unexpected. Charles Jessmore presided and the speeches were freely applauded.

At Virginia a splendid meeting was floor and gallery were filled. The main floor an dgallery were filled, extra chairs were brought in and a great number were standing. A. N. Thompson presided and the remarks of the speakers were greeted with great enthusiasm. The governor spoke at more length here than in the previous instances and aroused his hearers to a high pitch of enthusiasm, making one of the best of his speeches during the day.

At Chisholm the train was met by a band and a large body of citizens. C. A. Munro, the county committeeman, was on the train during the day and after general introductions the party headed by a band marched to the Fujer hall and it was quickly filled. M. F. Marion presided. Governor Johnson made a strong presentation of the accomplishments of his administration in a speech of about half an hour. One point struck the people of the village forcibly. In speaking of the efforts his administration is making to secure for the school fund of the state the moneys it is entitled to and that have been kept from it he reminded the people of Chisholm that they were before the state asking for $60,000 for the building of a schoolhouse and that they ought to appreciate the necessity for securing for the fund everything that is coming to it and the safeguarding of every dollar of the fund that the children of the state may be well educated and at the smallest expense possible to the taxpayers.

Hibbing was reached at 6 o'clock and a large number met the train at the depot and greeted the governor and his party. In the evening at the Powers opera house a great meeting was held, the greatest of the day. The theater was packed to the roof, fully 1,500 people being present. Governor Johnson made a particularly forcible and exhaustive speech, presenting the account of his stewardship in his most forceful and convincing manner. Martin Hughes presided and introduced Governor Johnson in a brief but eloquent talk.

When the governor arose he was given an ovation that continued for a long time. The incident pleased him greatly, and he remarked to his audience in opening upon the contrast between this reception and that of two years ago at Hibbing. He then stood on a barrel near the depot and addressed about forty people who, if they had any enthusiasm, carefully concealed it from him.

With the preface, Governor Johnson plunged into the best speech he made during his stay in St. Louis county. His points were made with clearness and force and he brought into greater play than in any of his other speeches his natural wit and humor. Frequent laughter and applause punctuated his remarks, and he held his audience with him completely to the finish. It was a great meeting, the greatest Hibbing has ever turned out, and to no one did it give greater pride and pleasure than to Martin Hughes, who presided, and J. B. Connors, both of whom had it in charge.

Judge Pendergast spoke on state development, making a convincing argument for the exploitation of the boundless resources of the state.

A Friend in Need—Always with You.

WHEN you have Heartburn, Colic, Coated Tongue, Suspected Breath, Acid-rising-in throat, Gas-belching, or an Incipient Cold, take a Cascaret.

Remember, all these are not merely Discomforts, but indications of a serious Cause.

They act like Exercise on the Bowel-Muscles that propel Food, and that squeeze the natural Digestive Juices of the body into Food.

Constipation	Bad Breath
Biliousness	Headache
Indigestion	Diarrhœa
Dyspepsia	Flatulence
Torpid Liver	Jaundice
Appendicitis	Nausea
Colic	Vertigo
Worms	Pimples
Piles	Blotches

In such cases a little Cascaret in time is worth fifty dollars worth of Treatment later on, to say nothing of the suffering, discomfort, loss of Business Energy, and loss of Social Sunshine it saves.

Headaches, Heartburn, Gas-belching, Acid-risings in the throat, and Colicky feeling are sure signs of bowel trouble from food poisons, and should be dealt with promptly.

One Cascaret will stop the coming trouble, and move on the Bowel load, if taken at the first signs.

Don't fail to carry the Vest Pocket Box of Cascarets with you constantly.

Remnant Sale of DRESS GOODS

We Told You in Last Sunday's Paper That There Would Be Great Doings at PANTON & WHITE CO.'S BIG STORE THIS WEEK.

Remnant Sale of SILKS

You have probably attended our Great Drug Sale and participated in the many good bargains we gave. The Drug Sale was simply a forerunner for bigger and better things that was in store for you in this house. Not in years has our Silk and Dress Goods Departments done the business they have done during the months of August and September. This was due to the fact that we bought our foreign goods in July and our domestic goods early in August, giving the ladies an opportunity to make their Fall selections early. The Enormous Volume of Business done by these departments was no surprise to us. Everybody told us we had the most extensive, as well as the most exquisite, assortment of Dress Goods and Silks in the city, besides this they could save from 15c to 50c per yard on many lines when bought here.

A THOUSAND REMNANTS ON SALE TOMORROW

And the sale continues until every piece is sold. They come in lengths of from 1 to 8 yards and are nearly all this season's newest, choicest weaves, makes and colorings. Our profit has already been made, what we get out of the Remnants are all profit. We sell all at a Quarter, a Half and Three-quarters their original prices. This is the way we keep our stock clean and up to date. Enough said.

A PERTINENT SUGGESTION.

The suggestion coming from the Duluth Real Estate exchange that the city council should see that the Wisconsin Central, before it is given a tunnel franchise, agrees to pay its proper share of the expenses of maintaining the streets adjoining its property, is timely and good. The council should by all means take heed of it, and see that whatever contract it makes with the new railroad shall include this provision.

Duluth is glad to welcome the new line of railroad, but it is not so glad that it is willing to give it everything it has, as the custom used to be in less mature cities when a new public utility presented itself.

The resolutions adopted by the exchange show that the Wisconsin Central is acquiring frontage on thirty-seven blocks upon paved thoroughfares, including some of the principal streets of the city. If the city council does not take this precaution, under the gross earnings tax law the railroad will pay a tax to the state in lieu of all other taxes and assessments, and when any of the property adjoining the railroad is improved the expense will have to come out of the general fund, and the taxpayers of the city generally must stand it.

The railroad is evidently anxious enough to come in to be willing to make this arrangement. It is true that no other railroad has made it, and that in other parts of the city, where paved streets abut upon railroad property, the expenses of improvement have to be borne by the general fund because the railroad property is exempt from assessment. But that is because nobody was farsighted enough to secure from the railroads such agreements as the one proposed in the resolutions of the Duluth Real Estate exchange.

The resolutions also covered another important matter, that of requiring the railroad to admit other new railroads upon payment of a proper proportion of the cost of the tunnel and approaches to the city.

The city council has the opportunity, apparently, to prevent a great wrong being done to the taxpayers of the city by compelling the railroad to stand its proper proportion of the expenses of maintaining the streets along one side of which its right of way runs. The gain from having a new railroad is great, but the loss to the taxpayers in the withdrawal of a large amount of taxable property from the tax roll is also great. The Wisconsin Central has acquired a very wide right of way through valuable city property, not a single lot of which will hereafter pay a cent toward the expenses of local, county or state government except through the iniquitous gross earnings tax, which the state takes for itself, causing an added burden to fall on other classes of local property.

The least that the railroad could do, under these circumstances, is to agree to stand its share of paving expenses just as privately-owned property upon the opposite side of the street will have to do.

The council should not let these matters rest until it has made a contract that will cover the points raised by the real estate exchange.

A. L. COLE'S RECORD.

In the campaign that is being made in behalf of Cole's candidacy for the governorship, much has been said about his "record."

This refers mostly to his legislative record, since his political record has been so varied and complex that his Republican champions didn't think it worth while going into it.

And in his legislative record that upon which most stress is laid is his activity in behalf of legislation affecting the development of Northern Minnesota. Down in Southern Minnesota they call it "state development" to indicate that his work covered the entire state instead of only the northern half of it.

Mr. Cole did good work in the legislature in behalf of developing Northern Minnesota. He was most active in matters touching upon drainage, good roads and immigration. Full credit should be given him for his industry in behalf of these important movements, without overlooking the fact that there were many other members of the legislature who worked with him and who are entitled to a share of the credit.

But it is worth while noting a peculiar coincidence about this work for developing Northren Minnesota. None of it was done in the 1903 legislature, of which Mr. Cole was a member.

All of it was done in the 1905 legislature. In 1903, apparently, Mr. Cole had not begun to dream of state development, and his sole claim to fame in that session was a bill designed to compel the taxation of logs in the counties in which they were cut. This was because many logs are cut in Cass county, in which Mr. Cole lives.

What awakened Mr. Cole to the need of state development and the opportunities there were in it for a member of the legislature to make a record?

It is very evident that it was Governor Johnson's inaugural message to the legislature, in which every one of the matters in which Mr. Cole became interestd was touchd upon and pointed recommendations made concerning them, as The Herald showed yesterday.

Up to the reading of Governor Johnson's message, wherein he urged action toward the drainage of state swamp lands, the construction of good roads and the attracting of immigration to the vacant lands of the state, Candidate Cole had never turned a finger to help along any of these things. Immediately thereafter, while he was still under the spell of the governor's stirring recommendations, which appealed to every loyal son of Northern Minnesota, he became active in their behalf.

He did good work, and it is unfortunate that he is not to be back in the legislature again next winter to do more of it. But his inspiration in this good work was the man whom he now seeks to unseat. His friends, forgetting the source of his ideas, are claiming for him the full parentage of state development, and are intimating that it can be brought about only under his direction.

As a matter of fact every item of legislation for the benefit of Northern Minnesota adopted in the 1905 legislature was in response to suggestions made by Governor Johnson, and was taken from his message by Representative Cole and the many other members of the legislature who were instrumental in passing laws affecting drainage, good roads and immigration.

LOOKS BETTER NOW.

Now that the mayor has been able to make it appear that the report that the lake shore park plan had fallen through was a false alarm, everybody feels better and more amiable about it.

But it also appears, from the mayor's talk about it in The Herald the other evening, that the fund to be raised by subscription in the East end is not yet completed, and that about one-quarter of it is still to be pledged. Doubtless some of that has already been received, and doubtless, too, the rest of it will come in good time.

But as The Herald understands it, the time is limited, the mayor having secured an option on the property from the Northern Pacific that has not very much longer to run, and it is essential that the money be raised before the option expires.

It is certainly to be hoped that the alarms felt about the success of the plan last week will not yet prove well founded. It is not expected that they will, but the generous and public-spirited citizens of the East end will have to contribute the lacking dollars before everybody concerned will feel quite easy.

This is such a tremendously hopeful scheme, this one of having a lake shore park, that people may be forgiven for being anxious about it until it is a certain success. Such chances come but seldom, and it wouldn't have looked at all well for Duluth if this one had been allowed to get away.

ANTI-PASS COMPLICATIONS.

The anti-pass movement has been having a tremendous sweep over the country, and the result is that in a year or two passes, particularly those of public officials, have pretty nearly passed out.

The rate regulation bill passed by congress last winter has practically eliminated the pass on interstate business, and there is no possible way under it by which public officials can legally get free transportation. The ruling of the interstate commerce commission that nothing can be accepted for transportation by the railroads except money certainly bars out the acceptance of political services for transportation, and that is what it meant when a member of the legislature accepted a pass.

But the passing of the pass will not be accomplished without some inconvenience and distress, particularly in connection with the legislatures. In Minnesota, for instance, the free distribution of passes by the railroads has tended in a measure to increase the compensation of the members. It has enabled them to make frequent trips home to attend to their private affairs, and when the pass giving is over it is pretty clear that something should be done to take its place.

A member of the legislature in Minnesota gets $5 a day during the session, and round trip mileage at 10 cents a mile. His mileage will pay his fare both ways for about three trips. After that, if he makes other trips the expense will have to come out of his pay. His living expenses, however, consume most of that, and no member who keeps up a decent front in St. Paul will be able to make expense and income meet if he attends to his affairs at home with any regularity and pays his own fare.

This is not an argument for retaining the passes. They should go, and they will go. Nothing can stop the adoption of an anti-pass bill applying to this state at the coming session of the legislature. But it is only fair that the state should assume the expense that has been borne in the past by the railroads. Either the pay of members of the legislature should be increased, or arrangements should be made to pay for the transportation of the members out of the state treasury.

The Republican platform adopted in New Hampshire recently contained a plank urging that the next legislature, as soon as it is organized, authorize the state treasurer to contract with the railroads for the transportation of its members from their homes to the capital and return each week on certain specified days, the cost to be paid from the state treasury as mileage of members.

The New Hampshire legislature has 414 members against Minnesota's 182, and Minnesota is better able to afford this expense than the Granite state. It certainly cannot afford to let the railroads stand it, because they expect returns for it, and they have had them. Busy business and professional men can hardly afford to attend the legislature unless they can make weekly trips home to keep in touch with their own affairs without cutting into their private incomes. Minnesota should certainly make some arrangement that will enable good men to go to the legislature without suffering financially.

THE PASSING SHOW.

The burglar uses a jimmy, but the instruments of the great robbers are the Dingley tariff and the railroad tariffs.

The word comes out from the devastated region of the Southland that Mobile is hungry. That appeal has never yet gone unanswered in generous and freehanded America.

The Middle River Pioneer says: "We may differ as to who should be elected president or governor, but on drainage and state development the newspapers of Northern Minnesota are a unit." So they are; and so are the political platforms and the candidates for governor. With such unanimity you couldn't stop state development if you tried.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"This idea of the government that successful bidders for Indian reservation pine should leave a few trees standing, so as to promote the growth of others, is not a very good one," said L. W. Chisholm of Bemidji, Minn., at the St. Louis. "If the trees would only remain standing the scene would not be bad, but being unprotected from the wind storms they are broken off in almost every instance before logging operations have been finished more than a year or two.

"The loggers of eight or ten years ago carried out much the same idea, although for no such charitable purpose. They left the small trees standing because they had plenty of others, and it was too much trouble to handle the little ones. These same loggers wouldn't think the same way now, with lumber and logs selling at their present price. Every stick of any size at all is utilized these days, and a good profit is to be found in the handling.

"Not many of the trees thus left standing a few years ago are still in an upright position. If the wind did not destroy them the forest fires did. The chance for forest fires on government lands now isn't so great as under the old style, for then all the branches and tops were left scattered promiscuously about the ground, where now the government makes it compulsory that they be piled up and burned. This is a good plan, for usually the worst fires start in old pine slashings. Once the left-over tops and branches become thoroughly dry they turn with great readiness, and it takes only a spark to set them going."

"I wish I had taken the advice of a Duluth friend when North Butte stock was first put on the market, and bought a few shares," said O. H. Duncan of Chicago at the Spalding. "He was in a position to get me at least fifty shares, and almost guaranteed that it would not be a losing proposition, but I always had such little faith in any kind of mining investments that I rejected his offer and turned down his advise. To make matters worse he laughs at me whenever we meet, and says he told me so.

"To make the thing still worse, another friend down in Chicago put me wise to a sure thing eight or ten months ago. Said I couldn't possibly lose. I thought of the Duluth man and his neglected advice, and on the strength of the previous unfortunate experience I invested $200 in the new venture. I lost every cent of it, and there isn't a chance in the world of getting it back. N ow I don't know whether to work the next sure tip I get in Duluth to secure the return of the money I lost in Chicago, or whether to drop out of the game altogether. I guess the latter would be the wiser course. When a man begins trying to win back money he has lost, it is a pretty sure sign that he is going to lose some more."

"I had a brother in the Mobile storm, and was greatly worried until I received a telegram yesterday saying he was all right," said H. T. Gray of St. Paul at the McKay. "You can imagine my relief. The telegram had been following me along the road, so there was a delay in getting it.

"It is such storms as these that make a person better appreciate the advantages of living in this Northern region. We are out of the big storm belt, and should be duly thankful. I would be afraid to risk the investment of any money in building property down there in the South or Southwtst. One can never tell when it is going to be wiped out of existence.

"Taken as a whole, Northern Minnesota is as good a place to live in as any one could find. Of course, there are its disadvantages, but all in all these are not so great as those of most other parts of the country. I know it gets pretty cold in winter sometimes, but we are prepared for it, and a week of below zero weather doesn't bother us as much as two or three days of freezing would the people of the places farther to the South. No one will dispute the fact that we are ahead of them so far as summer climate goes."

Pointed Paragraphs.

Sometimes a man's warmest friend is his cold cash.

Virtue becomes a vice as soon as you begin to boast of it.

Women seldom have much faith in a doctor unless he has whiskers.

A woman doesn't necessarily see the point of a joke because she laughs at it.

Every time a girl announces her engagement all the other girls say, "Poor fellow!"

Go to a woman, thou man; consider her ways as a bargain hunter, and save your money.

Many a man who has a reputation for talking too much doesn't talk enough at the right time.

The prodigal son gets the fatted veal, but the prodigal daughter is lucky to get a plate of cold hash.

Well Described.

New York Times: It had been a strenuous afternoon for the devoted teacher who took six of her pupils through the museum of natural history, but her charges had enjoyed every minute of the time.

"Where have you been, boys?" asked the father of two of the party that night, and the answer came back with joyous promptness:

"We've been to a dead circus."

THE WEATHER.

These are mighty pleasant days, even if they have brought an epidemic of coughs and colds that mar some people enjoyment of them. There are smiling skies, a genial sun and a bracing air, a combination strong enough to create a succession of climatic pleasures. Yesterday's high temperature was 68 degs. and last night's lowest was 50 degs. The weather man expects it to be fair tonight, but there will probably be showers tomorrow.

A year ago today the weather was fair.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The southern disturbance has moved its center to Tennessee, causing continued showery weather Tuesday or last night in the Ohio and Lower Mississippi valleys, and Atlantic and gulf states. Other low pressure areas overlie Arizona and the region north of Montana; the latter disturbance being attended by rain in the extreme northwest and warmer weather in Saskatchewan and Alberta. A high pressure area has appeared off the North Pacific coast, accompanied by cooler weather there. These conditions favor fair weather tonight, followed by showers during Thursday."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

"Fingy" Conners.

New York World: William James Conners, millionaire ex-longshoreman, the boss Hearst boomer of Buffalo, is nursing a grievance over the wrong spelling of the sobriquet that has clung to him for so many years. He would have all the world know that he should not be called Finky Conners.

It is "Fingy" Conners. The sobriquet, it appears, was earned in this way: When Conners was a boy on the docks one of his companions came along one day with a rusty pistol and remarked that he would like a target to shoot at. Conners promptly held up his hand and said: "Shoot my thumb off."

His friend's aim was good, and Conners, minus a thumb, was afterward known as "Fingy" Conners. When he became a foreman his friends called him "Bill." When he became rich he was "W. J.," but now that he is booming Hearst he follows the example of his leader and writes out his name in full, William James Conners.

Is This Thy Prayer?

Send me no shadows, Lord, I pray;
lead thou
My life forward upon the sunny hills,
Nor let my foot slip from the pleasant ways;
And when the night steals forth, stay close to me,
Stay close, O Lord, for I shall be afraid.
Stretch forth thine hand and turn away all pain
And sorrow from my path; but let me find
Full joy and rapture while this earth I tread,
Then let me fall asleep some fair, bright even,
And waken to my heritage in heaven.

Robbery.

In childhood days ere yet she knew
The birth of gifts she'd freely take
The presents—sweetmeats, toys, and such—
He offered her, for friendship's sake.

In later years, when older grown,
Quite different things she took like this:
His arm at parties; hat and stick
Whene'er he called; perhaps a kiss.

In turn she took his purse, his time,
His love, this thievish dame.
Not then, it seems, was she content,
For last of all, she took—his name.

The Dreamer's Girl.

I've lov'd her more than twenty years,
I've written countless rhymes about her
And as my thirtieth birthday nears
I know I could not live without her.

She's gentle, womanly, refined,
Her eyes along life's pathway light me
Tho' I'm not of angel kind
She whispers to me all I might be.

I love her more than fame or pelf
I love her more than life itself
I loved her when a boy—I love her yet
The girl that I have never met.

Value of Education.

The Reader: Gen. J. Franklin Bell, while at the head of the artillery and infantry school at Fort Leavenworth, was invited to a dinner given in the cause of education. The educators were called upon and glorified education. Then Gen. Bell said:

"I have been interested in what the speakers preceding me have said about education, and still I think that out our way, in the West, not so much store is set by it as here in the East. I am reminded of the story of the two boys in Omaha who, I regret to say, were playing poker in a doorway, using kernels of corn for chips. During the game one pushed in a bunch of kernels, and said: 'I'll bet you a hundred.' 'I'll raise it a hundred,' said the other. 'I'll raise that a thousand.' 'I'll see the thousand and raise it a million.' 'I'll raise that million a billion.' 'I'll see the billion and raise you a trillion.' The other boy was stumped. He thought a long time, but he couldn't remember what came next, so he said bitterly: 'Take it, you educated son of a gun!'"

Cause for Complaint.

Philadelphia Ledger: "I want to complain of the flour you sent me the other day," said Mrs. Newlywed, severely.

"What was the matter with it, ma'am?" asked the grocer.

"It was tough. My husband simply wouldn't eat the biscuits I made with it."

ROYAL Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Healthful cream of tartar, derived solely from grapes, refined to absolute purity, is the active principle of every pound of Royal Baking Powder.

Hence it is that Royal Baking Powder renders the food remarkable both for its fine flavor and healthfulness.

No alum, no phosphate—which are the principal elements of the so-called cheap baking powders—and which are derived from bones, rock and sulphuric acid.

Henri Boland of Paris, the editor of the Revue Internationale, is in the city for the purpose of studying the condition of the French people in America. Last year he went to Canada with a delegation of French journalists and before leaving for home, visited the Canadian cities and New England. This summer he came again to visit the French-Canadian centers of the West.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Ely Miner: Now everybody boost for N. F. Hugo for the speakership. Mr. Hugo is the most logical man for that place and his fitness was demonstrated at the last session of the legislature when he acted as speaker pro tem. The northern part of the state is figuring on him and the southern end is rapidly falling into line.

Grand Rapids Independent: The people of northern Minnesota are beginning to look up to the little weekly Duluth Tribunal as the reliable Republican paper of Duluth, and some day not far off there will be a field for another daily in Duluth and the Tribunal will take its place along side of the Evening Herald.

Eveleth Mining News: Although there seems to be general opinion in the older settled portion of the state that Northeast Minnesota is a stronghold of the trusts, on account of the steel corporations holdings, a comparison of feeling here and there on the tariff suggests that we are the freer people. The second district is the home of "Standpat" McCleary, the little schoolmaster whose theories coincide with the interests of the general run of corporations. We have no McClearys up here.

Grand Rapids Independent: These frosty nights will make the lumberjacks who are in Dakota wonder if the pine saw logs aren't getting almost ripe.

International Falls Border Budget: The press of the state shows symptoms of mourning over the re-nomination of Congressman McCleary. He seems to be about as popular as his standpat policy.

Fergus Falls Journal: We trust that Mr. Manahan will never be so impolite as to ask any representative of the railroads whether his road has ever contributed anything for political purposes in Minnesota, and especially hope he will not be so rude as to ask if any donations were ever made to elect our railroad commissioners.

Le Sueur News: One of the Democratic state central committee members resigned. Some of the Republican members should do likewise.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Congressman McCleary has invited W. S. Hammond, his Democratic opponent, to meet him in joint debate and Mr. Hammond says he will be delighted to discuss the proposition that the tariff should be revised at once—McCleary to stand pat while Hammond take the affirmative. After McCleary's recent narrow escape we hardly think he will care to be hitched up to that single issue. We do not think there will be any joint gabfest down in the Second, despite the professed eagerness of both candidates.

Preston Times: The harvest has come to an end and the political grafter large and small can no more fleece the luckless candidate, except in close counties where the agonies of the past six weeks must be repeated for the coming six. This being a candidate is not what it is cracked up to be, not by a considerable.

Mankato Free Press: A new story, which does not need a diagram, relates that a boy said that he knew the name of the beau sister had in the parlor last night. It was George Don't. He had heard her call him George Don't a dozen times or more.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A man thinks he is mighty good to his wife to let her think he is.

When a man talks about "accepting" a job it is a sign the salary is small.

A man has to holler pretty loud to get any one to take stock in his virtues.

The only men who don't waste a good deal of their money are those who haven't it to waste.

There is hardly anything that can shock a sentimental girl more than to find the way a poet can like steak and fried potatoes.

LAUGHING LINES.

Kansas City Times: "Papa, I want to become a stage comedian and make people laugh."

"All right, I'll tell you how. When someone else says a few long words look funny and reply, 'I'll take the same with a cherry in it.'"

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Now the doctors are describing the 'shopper's face.'"

"Are they? Well, my wife's face after she got through the awful jam of the last bargain sale was simply indescribable."

Washington Star: "There is a whole lot to be said on both sides of the trust question."

"Yes," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "That's the beauty of it. By the time it all gets said we'll have enough dividends laid by not to worry over the decision."

Chicago Tribune: Miss Backbay—What I like about Henry James is the clarity of his style, his reserve forces, and his absolute mastery in the field of epigram and antithesis.

Mr. Cahokia—Y-yes, but when it comes to the eel ball, you know, I think Walsh has got him skinned to death.

Philadelphia Press: "I suppose," said Mrs. Newliwed, who was just going to housekeeping, "when you're engaging a servant girl the first question you ask is who employed her before."

"Well, I don't," replied Mrs. Marryat. "I've been keeping house so long that the first question I ask is, 'Have you ever been employed by me before? If so, when and for how long?'"

Philadelphia Inquirer: Teacher—What are the three personal pronouns.

Pupil—He, she and it.

Teacher—Give an example of their use.

Pupil—Husband, wife and baby.

Philadelphia Catholic Times: "Well," said he, anxious to patch up their quarrel of yesterday, "aren't you curious to know what's in the package?"

"Not very," replied the still belligerent wife, indifferently.

"Well, it's something for the one I love best in the world."

"Ah! I suppose it's those suspenders you said you needed."

Splendid Scheme.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The home for old and indigent newspaper men in Colorado will plant 400 acres in fruit. How about a home for broken-down politicians with 1,000,000 acres of plums as an annex?

A PERTINENT SUGGESTION.

The suggestion coming from the Duluth Real Estate exchange that the city council should see that the Wisconsin Central, before it is given a tunnel franchise, agrees to pay its proper share of the expenses of maintaining the streets adjoining its property, is timely and good. The council should by all means take heed of it, and see that whatever contract it makes with the new railroad shall include this provision.

Duluth is glad to welcome the new line of railroad, but it is not so glad that it is willing to give it everything it has, as the custom used to be in less mature cities when a new public utility presented itself.

The resolutions adopted by the exchange show that the Wisconsin Central is acquiring frontage on thirty-seven blocks upon paved thoroughfares, including some of the principal streets of the city. If the city council does not take this precaution, under the gross earnings tax law the railroad will pay a tax to the state in lieu of all other taxes and assessments, and when any of the property adjoining the railroad is improved the expense will have to come out of the general fund, and the taxpayers of the city generally must stand it.

The railroad is evidently anxious enough to come in to be willing to make this arrangement. It is true that no other railroad has made it, and that in other parts of the city, where paved streets abut upon railroad property, the expenses of improvement have to be borne by the general fund because the railroad property is exempt from assessment. But that is because nobody was farsighted enough to secure from the railroads such agreements as the one proposed in the resolutions of the Duluth Real Estate exchange.

The resolutions also covered another important matter, that of requiring the railroad to admit other new railroads upon payment of a proper proportion of the cost of the tunnel and approaches to the city.

The city council has the opportunity, apparently, to prevent a great wrong being done to the taxpayers of the city by compelling the railroad to stand its proper proportion of the expenses of maintaining the streets along one side of which its right of way runs. The gain from having a new railroad is great, but the loss to the taxpayers in the withdrawal of a large amount of taxable property from the tax roll is also great. The Wisconsin Central has acquired a very wide right of way through valuable city property, not a single lot of which will hereafter pay a cent toward the expenses of local, county or state government except through the iniquitous gross earnings tax, which the state takes for itself, causing an added burden to fall on other classes of local property.

The least that the railroad could do, under these circumstances, is to agree to stand its share of paving expenses just as privately-owned property upon the opposite side of the street will have to do.

The council should not let these matters rest until it has made a contract that will cover the points raised by the real estate exchange.

A. L. COLE'S RECORD.

In the campaign that is being made in behalf of Cole's candidacy for the governorship, much has been said about his "record."

This refers mostly to his legislative record, since his political record has been so varied and complex that his Republican champions didn't think it worth while going into it.

And in his legislative record that upon which most stress is laid is his activity in behalf of legislation affecting the development of Northern Minnesota. Down in Southern Minnesota they call it "state development" to indicate that his work covered the entire state instead of only the northern half of it.

Mr. Cole did good work in the legislature in behalf of developing Northern Minnesota. He was most active in matters touching upon drainage, good roads and immigration. Full credit should be given him for his industry in behalf of these important movements, without overlooking the fact that there were many other members of the legislature who worked with him and who are entitled to a share of the credit.

But it is worth while noting a peculiar coincidence about this work for developing Northren Minnesota. None of it was done in the 1903 legislature, of which Mr. Cole was a member.

All of it was done in the 1905 legislature. In 1903, apparently, Mr. Cole had not begun to dream of state development, and his sole claim to fame in that session was a bill designed to compel the taxation of logs in the counties in which they were cut. This was because many logs are cut in Cass county, in which Mr. Cole lives.

What awakened Mr. Cole to the need of state development and the opportunities there were in it for a member of the legislature to make a record?

It is very evident that it was Governor Johnson's inaugural message to the legislature, in which every one of the matters in which Mr. Cole became interestd was touchd upon and pointed recommendations made concerning them, as The Herald showed yesterday.

Up to the reading of Governor Johnson's message, wherein he urged action toward the drainage of state swamp lands, the construction of good roads and the attracting of immigration to the vacant lands of the state, Candidate Cole had never turned a finger to help along any of these things. Immediately thereafter, while he was still under the spell of the governor's stirring recommendations, which appealed to every loyal son of Northern Minnesota, he became active in their behalf.

He did good work, and it is unfortunate that he is not to be back in the legislature again next winter to do more of it. But his inspiration in this good work was the man whom he now seeks to unseat. His friends, forgetting the source of his ideas, are claiming for him the full parentage of state development, and are intimating that it can be brought about only under his direction.

As a matter of fact every item of legislation for the benefit of Northern Minnesota adopted in the 1905 legislature was in response to suggestions made by Governor Johnson, and was taken from his message by Representative Cole and the many other members of the legislature who were instrumental in passing laws affecting drainage, good roads and immigration.

LOOKS BETTER NOW.

Now that the mayor has been able to make it appear that the report that the lake shore park plan had fallen through was a false alarm, everybody feels better and more amiable about it.

But it also appears, from the mayor's talk about it in The Herald the other evening, that the fund to be raised by subscription in the East end is not yet completed, and that about one-quarter of it is still to be pledged. Doubtless some of that has already been received, and doubtless, too, the rest of it will come in good time.

But as The Herald understands it, the time is limited, the mayor having secured an option on the property from the Northern Pacific that has not very much longer to run, and it is essential that the money be raised before the option expires.

It is certainly to be hoped that the alarms felt about the success of the plan last week will not yet prove well founded. It is not expected that they will, but the generous and public-spirited citizens of the East end will have to contribute the lacking dollars before everybody concerned will feel quite easy.

This is such a tremendously hopeful scheme, this one of having a lake shore park, that people may be forgiven for being anxious about it until it is a certain success. Such chances come but seldom, and it wouldn't have looked at all well for Duluth if this one had been allowed to get away.

ANTI-PASS COMPLICATIONS.

The anti-pass movement has been having a tremendous sweep over the country, and the result is that in a year or two passes, particularly those of public officials, have pretty nearly passed out.

The rate regulation bill passed by congress last winter has practically eliminated the pass on interstate business, and there is no possible way under it by which public officials can legally get free transportation. The ruling of the interstate commerce commission that nothing can be accepted for transportation by the railroads except money certainly bars out the acceptance of political services for transportation, and that is what it meant when a member of the legislature accepted a pass.

But the passing of the pass will not be accomplished without some inconvenience and distress, particularly in connection with the legislatures. In Minnesota, for instance, the free distribution of passes by the railroads has tended in a measure to increase the compensation of the members. It has enabled them to make frequent trips home to attend to their private affairs, and when the pass giving is over it is pretty clear that something should be done to take its place.

A member of the legislature in Minnesota gets $5 a day during the session, and round trip mileage at 10 cents a mile. His mileage will pay his fare both ways for about three trips. After that, if he makes other trips the expense will have to come out of his pay. His living expenses, however, consume most of that, and no member who keeps up a decent front in St. Paul will be able to make expense and income meet if he attends to his affairs at home with any regularity and pays his own fare.

This is not an argument for retaining the passes. They should go, and they will go. Nothing can stop the adoption of an anti-pass bill applying to this state at the coming session of the legislature. But it is only fair that the state should assume the expense that has been borne in the past by the railroads. Either the pay of members of the legislature should be increased, or arrangements should be made to pay for the transportation of the members out of the state treasury.

The Republican platform adopted in New Hampshire recently contained a plank urging that the next legislature, as soon as it is organized, authorize the state treasurer to contract with the railroads for the transportation of its members from their homes to the capital and return each week on certain specified days, the cost to be paid from the state treasury as mileage of members.

The New Hampshire legislature has 414 members against Minnesota's 182, and Minnesota is better able to afford this expense than the Granite state. It certainly cannot afford to let the railroads stand it, because they expect returns for it, and they have had them. Busy business and professional men can hardly afford to attend the legislature unless they can make weekly trips home to keep in touch with their own affairs without cutting into their private incomes. Minnesota should certainly make some arrangement that will enable good men to go to the legislature without suffering financially.

THE PASSING SHOW.

The burglar uses a jimmy, but the instruments of the great robbers are the Dingley tariff and the railroad tariffs.

The Middle River Pioneer says: "We may differ as to who should be elected president or governor, but on drainage and state development the newspapers of Northern Minnesota are a unit." So they are; and so are the political platforms and the candidates for governor. With such unanimity you couldn't stop state development if you tried.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"This idea of the government that successful bidders for Indian reservation pine should leave a few trees standing, so as to promote the growth of others, is not a very good one," said L. W. Chisholm of Bemidji, Minn., at the St. Louis. "If the trees would only remain standing the scheme would not be bad, but being unprotected from the wind storms they are broken off in almost every instance before logging operations have been finished more than a year or two.

"The loggers of eight or ten years ago carried out much the same idea, although for no such charitable purpose. They left the small trees standing because they had plenty of others, and it was too much trouble to handle the little ones. These same loggers wouldn't think the same way now, with lumber and logs selling at their present price. Every stick of any size at all is utilized these days, and a good profit is to be found in the handling.

"Not many of the trees thus left standing a few years ago are still in an upright position. If the wind did not destroy them the forest fires did. The chance for forest fires on government lands now isn't so great as under the old style, for then all the branches and tops were left scattered promiscuously about the ground, where now the government makes it compulsory that they be piled up and burned. This is a good plan, for usually the worst fires start in old pine slashings. Once the left-over tops and branches become thoroughly dry they turn with great readiness, and it takes only a spark to set them going."

"I wish I had taken the advice of a Duluth friend when North Butte stock was first put on the market, and bought a few shares," said O. H. Duncan of Chicago at the Spalding. "He was in a position to get me at least fifty shares, and almost guaranteed that it would not be a losing proposition, but I always had such little faith in any kind of mining investments that I rejected his offer and turned down his advise. To make matters worse he laughs at me whenever we meet, and says he told me so.

"To make the thing still worse, another friend down in Chicago put me wise to a sure thing eight or ten months ago. Said I couldn't possibly lose. I thought of the Duluth man and his neglected advice, and on the strength of the previous unfortunate experience I invested $200 in the new venture. I lost every cent of it, and there isn't a chance in the world of getting it back. Now I don't know whether to work the next sure tip I get in Duluth to secure the return of the money I lost in Chicago, or whether to drop out of the game altogether. I guess the latter would be the wiser course. When a man begins trying to win back money he has lost, it is a pretty sure sign that he is going to lose some more."

"I had a brother in the Mobile storm, and was greatly worried until I received a telegram yesterday saying he was all right," said H. T. Gray of St. Paul at the McKay. "You can imagine my relief. The telegram had been following me along the road, so there was a delay in getting it.

"It is such storms as these that make a person better appreciate the advantages of living in this Northern region. We are out of the big storm belt, and should be duly thankful. I would be afraid to risk the investment of any money in building property down there in the South or Southwtst. One can never tell when it is going to be wiped out of existence.

"Taken as a whole, Northern Minnesota is as good a place to live in as any one could find. Of course, there are its disadvantages, but all in all these are not so great as those of most other parts of the country. I know it gets pretty cold in winter sometimes, but we are prepared for it, and a week of below zero weather doesn't bother us as much as two or three days of freezing would the people of the places farther to the South. No one will dispute the fact that we are ahead of them so far as summer climate goes."

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago Daily News: Chiropodists are satisfied to remain at the foot.

Sometimes a man's warmest friend is his cold cash.

Virtue becomes a vice as soon as you begin to boast of it.

In the silent watches of the night, babies act as alarm clocks.

Women seldom have much faith in a doctor unless he has whiskers.

A woman doesn't necessarily see the point of a joke because she laughs at it.

Every time a girl announces her engagement all the other girls say, "Poor fellow!"

Go to a woman, thou man; consider her ways as a bargain hunter, and save your money.

Many a man who has a reputation for talking too much doesn't talk enough at the right time.

The prodigal son gets the fatted veal, but the prodigal daughter is lucky to get a plate of cold hash.

Well Described.

New York Times: It had been a strenuous afternoon for the devoted teacher who took six of her pupils through the museum of natural history, but her charges had enjoyed every minute of the time.

"Where have you been, boys?" asked the father of two of the party that night, and the answer came back with joyous promptness:

"We've been to a dead circus."

THE WEATHER.

These are mighty pleasant days, even if they have brought an epidemic of coughs and colds that mar some people enjoyment of them. There are smiling skies, a genial sun and a bracing air, a combination strong enough to create a succession of climatic pleasures. Yesterday's high temperature was 58 degs. and last night's lowest was 50 degs. The weather man expects it to be fair tonight, but there will probably be showers tomorrow.

A year ago today the weather was fair.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The southern disturbance has moved its center to Tennessee, causing continued showery weather Tuesday or last night in the Ohio and Lower Mississippi valleys, and Atlantic and gulf states. Other low pressure areas overlie Arizona and the region north of Montana; the latter disturbance being attended by rain in the extreme northwest and warmer weather in Saskatchewan and Alberta. A high pressure area has appeared off the North Pacific coast, accompanied by cooler weather there. These conditions favor fair weather tonight, followed by showers during Thursday."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

"Finzy" Conners.

New York World: William James Conners, millionaire ex-longshoreman, the boss Hearst boomer of Buffalo, is nursing a grievance over the wrong spelling of the sobriquet that has clung to him for so many years. He would have all the world know that he should not be called Finky Conners.

It is "Finzy" Conners. The sobriquet, it appears, was earned in this way: When Conners was a boy on the docks one of his companions came along one day with a rusty pistol and remarked that he would like a target to shoot at. Conners promptly held up his hand and said: "Shoot my thumb off."

His friend's aim was good, and Conners, minus a thumb, was afterward known as "Finzy" Conners. When he became a foreman his friends called him "Bill." When he became rich he was "W. J.," but now that he is booming Hearst he follows the example of his leader and writes out his name in full, William James Conners.

Is This Thy Prayer?

Send me no shadows, Lord, I pray;
lead thou
My life forward upon the sunny hills,
Nor let my foot slip from the pleasant ways;
And when the night steals forth, stay close to me,
Stay close, O Lord, for I shall be afraid.
Stretch forth thine hand and turn away all pain
And sorrow from my path; but let me find
Full joy and rapture while this earth I tread.
Then let me fall asleep some fair, bright even,
And waken to my heritage in heaven.
—Lippincott's.

Robbery.

In childhood days ere yet she knew
The birth of gifts she'd freely take
The presents—sweetmeats, toys, and such—
He offered her, for friendship's sake.

In later years, when older grown,
Quite different things she took like this:
His arm at parties; hat and stick
Whene'er he called; perhaps a kiss.

In turn she took his purse, his time,
His love, this thievish dame.
Not then, it seems, was she content,
For last of all, she took—his name.
—Edward L. Underwood in the Bohemian.

The Dreamer's Girl.

I've lov'd her more than twenty years,
I've written countless rhymes about her
And as my thirtieth birthday nears
I know I could not live without her.

She's gentle, womanly, refined,
Her eyes along life's pathway light
Tho' I'm not of angel kind
She whispers to me all I might be.

I love her more than fame or pelf
I love her more than life itself
I loved her when a boy—I love her yet
The girl that I have never met.
—F. CLIFFORD HARRIS.

Value of Education.

The Reader: Gen. J. Franklin Bell, while at the head of the artillery and infantry school at Fort Leavenworth, was invited to a dinner given in the cause of education. The educators were called upon and glorified education. Then Gen. Bell said:

"I have been interested in what the speakers preceding me have said about education, and still I think that out our way, in the West, not so much store is set by it as here in the East. I am reminded of the story of the two boys in Omaha who, I regret to say, were playing poker in a doorway, using kernels of corn for chips. During the game one pushed in a bunch of kernels, and said: 'I'll bet you a hundred.' 'I'll raise it a hundred,' said the other. 'I'll raise that a thousand.' 'I'll see the thousand and raise it a million.' 'I'll raise that million a billion.' 'I'll see the billion and raise you a trillion.' The other boy was stumped. He thought a long time, but he couldn't remember what came next, so he said bitterly: 'Take it, you educated son of a gun!'"

Cause for Complaint.

Philadelphia Ledger: "I want to complain of the flour you sent me the other day," said Mrs. Newliwed, severely.

"What was the matter with it, ma'am?" asked the grocer.

"It was tough. My husband simply wouldn't eat the biscuits I made with it."

ROYAL Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Healthful cream of tartar, derived solely from grapes, refined to absolute purity, is the active principle of every pound of Royal Baking Powder.

Hence it is that Royal Baking Powder renders the food remarkable both for its fine flavor and healthfulness.

No alum, no phosphate—which are the principal elements of the so-called cheap baking powders—and which are derived from bones, rock and sulphuric acid.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Ely Miner: Now everybody boost for N. F. Hugo for the speakership. Mr. Hugo is the most logical man for that place and his fitness was demonstrated at the last session of the legislature when he acted as speaker pro tem. The northern part of the state is figuring on him and the southern end is rapidly falling into line.

Grand Rapids Independent: The people of northern Minnesota are beginning to look up to the little weekly Duluth Tribunal as the reliable Republican paper of Duluth, and some day not far off there will be a field for another daily in Duluth and the Tribunal will take its place along side of the Evening Herald.

Eveleth Mining News: Although there seems to be general opinion in the older settled portion of the state that Northeast Minnesota is a stronghold of the trusts, on account of the steel corporations holdings, a comparison of feeling here and there on the tariff suggests that we are the freer people. The second district is the home of "Standpat" McCleary, the little schoolmaster whose theories coincide with the interests of the general run of corporations. We have no McClearys up here.

Grand Rapids Independent: These frosty nights will make the lumberjacks who are in Dakota wonder if the pine saw logs aren't getting almost ripe.

International Falls Border Budget: The press of the state shows symptoms of mourning over the re-nomination of Congressman McCleary. He seems to be about as popular as his standpat policy.

Fergus Falls Journal: We trust that Mr. Manahan will never be so impolite as to ask any representative of the railroads whether his road has ever contributed anything for political purposes in Minnesota, and especially hope he will not be so rude as to ask if any donations were ever made to elect our railroad commissioners.

Le Sueur News: One of the Democratic state central committee members resigned. Some of the Republican members should do likewise.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Congressman McCleary has invited W. S. Hammond, his Democratic opponent, to meet him in joint debate and Mr. Hammond says he will be delighted to discuss the proposition that the tariff should be revised at once—McCleary to stand pat while Hammond take the affirmative. After McCleary's recent narrow escape we hardly think he will care to be hitched up to that single issue. We do not think there will be any joint gabfest down in the Second, despite the professed eagerness of both candidates.

Preston Times: The harvest has come to an end and the political grafter large and small can no more fleece the luckless candidate, except in close counties where the agonies of the past six weeks must be repeated for the coming six. This being a candidate is not what it is cracked up to be, not by a considerable.

Mankato Free Press: A new story, which does not need a diagram, relates which does not need a diagram, relates that a boy said that he knew the name of the beau sister had in the parlor last night. It was George Don't. He had heard her call him George Don't a dozen times or more.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A man thinks he is mighty good to his wife to let her think he is.

When a man talks about "accepting" a job it is a sign the salary is small.

A man has to holler pretty loud to get any one to take stock in his virtues.

The only men who don't waste a good deal of their money are those who haven't it to waste.

There is hardly anything that can shock a sentimental girl more than to find the way a poet can like steak and fried potatoes.

LAUGHING LINES.

Kansas City Times: "Papa, I want to become a stage comedian and make people laugh."

"All right, I'll tell you how. When someone else says a few long words look funny and reply, 'I'll take the same with a cherry in it.'"

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Now the doctors are describing the shopper's face."

"Are they? Well, my wife's face after she got through the awful jam of the last bargain sale was simply indescribable."

Washington Star: "There is a whole lot to be said on both sides of the trust question."

"Yes," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "That's the beauty of it. By the time it all gets said we'll have enough dividends laid by not to worry over the decision."

Chicago Tribune: Miss Backbay—What I like about Henry James is the clarity of his style, his reserve forces, and his absolute mastery in the field of epigram and antithesis.

Mr. Cahokia—Y-yes, but when it comes to the eel ball, you know, I think Walsh has got him skinned to death.

Philadelphia Press: "I suppose," said Mrs. Newlywed, who was just going to housekeeping, "when you're engaging a servant girl the first question you ask is who employed her before."

"Well, I don't," replied Mrs. Marryat. "I've been keeping house so long that the first question I ask is, 'Have you ever been employed by me before? If so, when and for how long?'"

Philadelphia Inquirer: Teacher—What are the three personal pronouns.

Pupil—He, she and it.

Teacher—Give an example of their use.

Pupil—Husband, wife and baby.

Philadelphia Catholic Times: "Well," said he, anxious to patch up their quarrel of yesterday, "aren't you curious to know what's in the package?"

"Not very," replied the still belligerent wife, indifferently.

"Well, it's something for the one I love best in the world."

"Ah! I suppose it's those suspenders you said you needed."

Splendid Scheme.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The home for old and indigent newspaper men in Colorado will plant 400 acres in fruit. How about a home for broken-down politicians with 1,000,000 acres of plums as an annex?

THE ELY PEOPLE HEAR GOVERNOR

With Pleasure and Greet His Speech With Much Applause.

Ely, Minn., Oct. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—To hold a political meeting in business hours in a busy mining town is not calculated to bring success, but a fine audience greeted Governor Johnson at Ely at 11:30 a. m. today, and welcomed him with hearty applause as he arose to speak. He was introduced by George Wescott. In his speech he discussed timber trespass, railroad rates, insurance, state development and other matters, reviewing the splendid record of his administration.

About 200 people were present and nearly all pressed forward to greet the governor at the close of the address. An invitation was given the governor to speak at the high school and he accepted, and at 1 o'clock addressed the pupils there. As at Tower, his talk was a splendid and sensible one, and was received with much pleasure and enthusiasm.

At 2 o'clock the party left for Two Harbors, and Governor Johnson will speak there tonight, leaving immediately afterward for Duluth, reaching there at 11 o'clock.

BIWABIK AND CHISHOLM

Granted Loans of $15,000 Each for School Purposes.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Because of lack of money the state investment board today approved of only about $52,000 of a bunch of requests for loans of state money, amounting to $400,000. The others were not denied, but were simply laid over until the loaning funds were replenished.

Biwabik and Chisholm in St. Louis county were granted $15,000 each for school purposes and twenty-three other districts were given loans running from $500 to $2,000. The total amount loaned was $53,050. The board could have loaned $500,000 if it had the money.

State Auditor Iverson admitted the fund for loaning purposes at present is low, but he says that sufficient money will soon be coming in and that the board will be able to meet all demands.

Barbed Wire Fence Between Houses Causes Big Feud.

Matter Given Airing in Assault Case in Municipal Court.

A barbed wire fence built between the residences of the Marsh and Page families on West Third street, to keep the Page children from appropriating the Marsh lawn for a playground, is claimed to be the primary cause of a feud between the two families that wound up in a row last Saturday, and which is now being lared in the municipal court.

On the complaint of Mrs. Mary A. Page, of 1117 West Second street, Mrs. Esther Marsh, her neighbor, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging her with assault.

The trial was begun this morning before Judge Cutting, with a courtroom filled with members of the warring families, their friends, neighbors, and witnesses. This afternoon the trial was still in progress, both sides having plenty of witnesses to back up the truth of ther assertions.

Mrs. Page claims that without any action on her part to provoke the alleged assault, Mrs. Marsh began to call her names, last Saturday afternoon, and rushed up to the barbed wire fence dividing line between the two properties and hurled two large rocks and a club at her head. She claimed that the alleged assault was accompanied with a string of invectives that would be out of place in good society. Mrs. Page claimed that she barely dodged the rocks and that one of them struck the side of the house with such force as to make a big dent in the board. She produced her son and other witnesses in support of her claims about the alleged assault.

Mrs. Marsh had a very much different version. She claimed that Mrs. Page started the rumpus by calling her some vile names and comparing her with women who are without the pale of decent society, even going so far as to say that Mrs. Marsh was worse than the class mentioned. She further claims, that David Page, the small son of Mrs. Page in company with some other small boys just home from school, began to jeer at her, call her bad names, and finally began heaving rocks at her. Mrs. Marsh claims that she simply picked up the stones and threw them back, but did not call Mrs. Page names, or attempt in any way to hit her with the missiles. She also alleges that Mrs. Page instead of being as peaceable as the latter claimed, stood next to the wire fence pounding on it with the broom handle, and punctuating her blows with terms that would not look well in print.

Both families seemed to have their partisans present and the courtroom air was fairly charged with belligerency.

Assistant Attorney T. J. McKeon is prosecuting the case in behalf of the state, and G. S. Richards is representing the interests of Mrs. Marsh.

True and tried friends of the family—De Witt's Little Early Risers. Best for results and best to take. Sold by all druggists.

SENIORS ELECT THEIR OFFICERS

Class of 1907 at High School Holds Annual Meeting.

This afternoon the first Senior class meeting of the year was held. This is the most important year in the school course, and there is by far more class spirit than in any other year. This fact is shown in the class meetings, as a greater interest is taken in the elections and other business than in any of the other years.

The first business after the calling of the meeting was the election of officers for the coming year, and the following were chosen: President, Elmer McDevitt vice president, Dale Montgomery secretary, Harriet Stryker treasurer, Kenneth Cant; editor in chief, Ralph Ely; mascot, Richard Hodgeson.

The treasurer, Ralph Ely, reported that the class was just out of debt, and is starting out with an even balance this year.

ROADS ACCEPT CUT IN RATES

On Merchandise Ordered by the Minnesota Railroad Commission.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The railroads of the state have decided to accept the cut in merchandise rates ordered by the state railroad and warehouse commission some weeks ago. There will be no appeal with its vexatious delays.

A meeting looking toward an acceptance of the new schedule was held by all the railroads concerned last Saturday, and it was followed the same day by a statement made to the commission that the new rate would be accepted and that there would be no protest. All the railroads asked for was time in which to make their interstate rates conform.

This concession was readily given and, according to Commissioner Staples, who makes the fact of the acceptance of the rate public today, they should be in force not later than Nov. 15. The date, he says, may even be earlier.

PROTEST MADE.

New York, Oct. 3.—A protest against any increase in the postal rates affecting publications issued by the several Sunday school societies was made by the Sunday School Editorial association today before the congressional postal commission, on the revision of second-class mail matter, now in session in this city.

MEET AFTER FIFTY YEARS

Brothers Get Together After Separation of Half Century.

Younger Left Home When Only Thirteen Years of Age.

James Gardner of New York arrived in the city yesterday for a visit with a younger brother whom he had not seen for a period of fifty years. The younger brother is Thomas Gardner of 2021 West Superior street, and when the two met for the first time yesterday they did not recognize each other, the long period of separation having made great changes in both.

Thomas, who is now 63 years of age, left the home of his parents in New York when he was 13 years old and made the trip west to make his fortune. He eventually settled in Duluth, but never found it convenient to return to his native home, and had never run across his brother in his travels.

James Gardner is the oldest member in a family of eight children, but although he has reached the age of 79 years, he is still hale and hearty and was able to make the trip from New York to this city alone. Thomas is the youngest of the eight children.

James is the uncle and Thomas Gardner the father of Mrs. D. M. Philbin, 1414 East First street, and Mrs. Charles Baxter, 2647 West Fourth street.

A LONG SERIES OF SENSATIONS

Ends in Mrs. Thomas Collier Platt Starting Divorce Suit.

New York, Oct. 3.—That the papers in Mrs. Thomas Collier Platt's suit for divorce were served last week upon the senator is positively stated by those in a position to know the truth.

It was soon after the abrupt departure of Mrs. Platt from the Hotel Gotham, where she had gone to visit her husband. She left the hotel and had her baggage sent to Highland Mills. Senator Platt remained alone at the Gotham.

It is vouched for that the final break between Mr. Platt and his wife came about nine days ago.

The story of Senator Platt's marriage was told by a close friend of the family, who stands ready at the proper time to repeat the statement under oath.

"Mrs. Platt in my presence has made her open boast of the story I now tell you," said the relator.

"She had persuaded the old senator into an announcement of their wedding for October 16, 1903, and was at her home in Washington celebrating her triumph with a few intimates.

"But suddenly the house was closed, and the Widow Janeway hurried to New York City. Taking rooms at the Holland house, she summoned the surprised senator to her presence.

"Mrs Janeway had been 'tipped' by a watchful friend that a plan was afoot to defeat her matrimonial scheme on the threshold of its fulfillment.

"The scheme of his sons was to spirit the prospective bridegroom out of the way for a few days, while, with his avowed consent, they would bring pressure upon the Widow Janeway to force financial compromise. It was news of this scheme that brought Mrs. Janeway in hot haste to New York.

"But the old senator, pledged to the scheme of the sons, was astonished and completely unnerved by her sudden advent and before he left Mrs. Janeway's room in the Holland house that afternoon the service had been hastily performed that made them man and wife.

"'It took me only a moment to convince the old reprobate' said Mrs. Platt, 'that there was no escape for him, and that he would be forced to marry me without another hour of delay.'

"Her manner in telling this indicated clearly that certain facts or documents in her possession rendered the aged senator powerless in her hands.

"The ceremony over, she said:

" 'Get into your overcoat, senator, and take me down to the conference.'

Senator Platt fairly staggered under the shock. It was the first intimation that the determined woman knew of a conference of her enemies called for the afternoon at the senator's office.

"So together they drove to his office at 49 Broadway, where the lawyer and one of his sons were in waiting. On the table lay the agreement, ready for signatures.

" 'I have come for a glance at the famous agreement, gentlemen,' said the dashing visitor, in a voice of honeyed sweetness. It satisfied them that all was well. Raising her veil, she swept the typewritten lines with eyes that sparkled with triumph.

"Suddenly she ceased reading, smiled in the lawyer's face, and in innocent tones asked:

" 'But what have I got to do with all this? The only woman named here is a Mrs. Janeway. How could you make such a mistake? I am Mrs. Thomas Collier Platt.'

"For a moment, as Mrs. Platt told her story, you could have heard a pin drop in the silence of that office. Then as the truth dawned on the lawyer, he tore the copy of the agreement into shreds and strode to the door, exclaiming:

" 'Madam, why didn't you say so at first?' "

PASSED OUT TO SEA.

A meeting looking toward an acceptance of the new schedule was held by all the railroads concerned last Saturday, and it was followed the same day by a statement made to the commission that the new rate would be accepted and that there would be no protest. All the railroads asked for was time in which to make their interstate rates conform.

This concession was readily given and, according to Commissioner Staples, who makes the fact of the acceptance of the rate public today, they should be in force not later than Nov. 15. The date, he says, may even be earlier.

PROTEST MADE.

New York, Oct. 3.—A protest against any increase in the postal rates affecting publications issued by the several Sunday school societies was made by the Sunday School Editorial association today before the congressional postal commission, on the revision of second-class mail matter, now in session in this city.

MEET AFTER FIFTY YEARS

Younger Left Home When Only Thirteen Years of Age.

James Gardner of New York arrived in the city yesterday for a visit with a younger brother whom he had not seen for a period of fifty years. The younger brother is Thomas Gardner of 2021 West Superior street, and when the two met for the first time yesterday they did not recognize each other, the long period of separation having made great changes in both.

Thomas, who is now 63 years of age, left the home of his parents in New York when he was 13 years old and made the trip west to make his fortune. He eventually settled in Duluth, but never found it convenient to return to his native home, and had never run across his brother in his travels.

James Gardner is the oldest member in a family of eight children, but although he has reached the age of 79 years, he is still hale and hearty and was able to make the trip from New York to this city alone. Thomas is the youngest of the eight children.

James is the uncle and Thomas Gardner the father of Mrs. D. M. Philbin, 1414 East First street, and Mrs. Charles Baxter, 2647 West Fourth street.

A LONG SERIES OF SENSATIONS

New York, Oct. 3.—That the papers in Mrs. Thomas Collier Platt's suit for divorce were served last week upon the senator is positively stated by those in a position to know the truth.

It was soon after the abrupt departure of Mrs. Platt from the Hotel Gotham, where she had gone to visit her husband. She left the hotel and had her baggage sent to Highland Mills. Senator Platt remained alone at the Gotham.

It is vouched for that the final break between Mr. Platt and his wife came about nine days ago.

The story of Senator Platt's marriage was told by a close friend of the family, who stands ready at the proper time to repeat the statement under oath.

"Mrs. Platt in my presence has made her open boast of the story I now tell you," said the relator.

"She had persuaded the old senator into an announcement of their wedding for October 16, 1903, and was at her home in Washington celebrating her triumph with a few intimates.

"But suddenly the house was closed, and the Widow Janeway hurried to New York City. Taking rooms at the Holland house, she summoned the surprised senator to her presence.

"Mrs Janeway had been 'tipped' by a watchful friend that a plan was afoot to defeat her matrimonial scheme on the threshold of its fulfillment.

"The scheme of his sons was to spirit the prospective bridegroom out of the way for a few days, while, with his avowed consent, they would bring pressure upon the Widow Janeway to force financial compromise. It was news of this scheme that brought Mrs. Janeway in hot haste to New York.

"But the old senator, pledged to the scheme of the sons, was astonished and completely unnerved by her sudden advent and before he left Mrs. Janeway's room in the Holland house that afternoon the service had been hastily performed that made them man and wife.

"'I took me only a moment to convince the old reprobate' said Mrs. Platt, 'that there was no escape for him, and that he would be forced to marry me without another hour of delay.'

"Her manner in telling this indicated clearly that certain facts or documents in her possession rendered the aged senator powerless in her hands.

"The ceremony over, she said:

"'Get into your overcoat, senator, and take me down to the conference.'

"Senator Platt fairly staggered under the shock. It was the first intimation that the determined woman knew of a conference of her enemies called for the afternoon at the senator's office.

"So together they drove to his office at 49 Broadway, where the lawyer and one of his sons were in waiting. On the table lay the agreement, ready for signatures.

"'I have come for a glance at the famous agreement, gentlemen,' said the dashing visitor, in a voice of honeyed sweetness. It satisfied them that all was well. Raising her veil, she swept the typewritten lines with eyes that sparkled with triumph.

"Suddenly she ceased reading, smiled in the lawyer's face, and in innocent tones asked:

"'But what have I got to do with all this? The only woman named here is a Mrs. Janeway. How could you make such a mistake? I am Mrs. Thomas Collier Platt.'

"For a moment, as Mrs. Platt told her story, you could have heard a pin drop in the silence of that office. Then as the truth dawned on the lawyer, he tore the copy of the agreement into shreds and strode to the door, exclaiming:

"'Madam, why didn't you say so at first?'"

THE WORLD OF SPORTS

WILL PLAY SATURDAY

First Football Game of the Season With Grand Rapids.

Visitors Are in Shape to Give Duluth Good Game.

The high school football team is to hold forth on its own grounds for the first time next Saturday. The strong Grand Rapids aggregation will be brought here for that date, and a hard game is expected by the local eleven.

Grand Rapids defeated Virginia high by a score of 37 to 0 last Saturday, and their team is nearly, if not quite as heavy as the Duluth team, so the local boys are looking for no kind of a snap when they run up against the Grand Rapids contingent.

Findlay has been out in uniform playing with the scrubs this week and some of the hardest practice of the year has been indulged in. Duluth has never put up the quality of interference which the first eleven is putting up against the scrubs every afternoon this week, and in the opinion of those who have watched the boys work, they are already playing a faster game in every department than at any time last season. Ryan is running the team in fine shape and gets his plays started with the snap and vim which means success, and Findlay is teaching the boys the perfect intereference under which Phil King's boys got away around Minnesota's ends and tackles for the long runs last fall. It is working finely, and though the scrubs put up a first-class variety of defense, the first team bears holes in them at will.

Findlay is also giving the boys some hard defensive work, he himself playing right half on the second eleven, and their work in smashing up the scrub's interference, and spoiling plays for big losses, is remarkably good.

McKinley is still being played at full, with McDevitt and Cummings in the halfback positions, and this will probably be the program for the Grand Rapids game at least. Clausen is holding down Cummings' end in fine style, and is a nervy, fast player. Capt. McDevitt's knee is in good shape now, and he does not think he will be troubled with it during the season.

CHANCES GOOD FOR PENNANT

Chicago White Sox Have Firm Hold on First Place.

It now looks like clear sailing for the Chicago White Sox, and nothing but a sudden and decided reversal in form can give either New York or Cleveland a chance for the pennant.

The White Sox now have a lead of four full games on the Highlanders, and four games and a half on the Naps. Yesterday New York lost to Philadelphia and Chicago won from St. Louis again, shutting out the latter team for the second time in succession. Today the Sox are playing a double header with St. Louis, and they will then return home for a series with Cleveland. They have not yet a cinch on the flag, but they have by long odds the best chance of landing it, and an even break on the remaining games of the season will easily land them in first place, no matter what the other teams may do.

This means a post season series between the Sox and the Chicago Cubs, and this should prove to be one of the greatest in the history of the game.

Boston Team Sold.

Boston, Oct. 3.—At the conclusion of yesterday's game with Cincinnati, Manager Fred Tenney announced officially that the Boston National League Baseball club had been sold. President A. H. Soden confirmed this. No details were given out, but it is learned that Tenney will be part owner of the club.

Flynn Knocked Out.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 3.—Tommy Burns, claimant of the heavyweight championship, scored a decisive victory over Jim Flynn of Pueblo last night before the Pacific Athletic club, knocking Flynn out for ten minutes in the fifteenth round.

BLIND MINER ASKS FOR AID

Peter Zaja Will be Treated by Specialists at Hospital.

Suffering from almost total blindness, Peter Zaja, an Austrian miner, entered the office of A. P. Cook, superintendent of the county poor department, yesterday, and applied for aid. He said that his money had all been spent for doctor's bills, and that he feared that he would lose his sight entirely. Zaja is 51 years of age and after working many years in the mines near Hibbing, he is bent by toil and his hands are calloused from plying the shovel and pick from early morning until late at night. He stated that two specialists had treated him but that he had found no relief.

The aged foreigner presented a pitiable picture as he asked to be given admission to the poor farm where he could get medical help and was overjoyed when told that he could go to the hospital where his eyes would be treated free of charge.

TWO SPANISH MINISTERS HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Lagranja, Spain, Oct. 3.—Navarro Reverter, the minister of finance, and Senor Alvarado, the minister of marine, were injured in an automobile accident while on their way to have an audience with King Alfonso. The motor car containing the party was completely overturned at a point about two miles from the palace. The aide de camp and the chauffeur were thrown violently to the roadway, but not seriously hurt. Senor Alvarado was cut about the head and Navarro Reverter sustained severe bruises all over his body.

S.S.S. HEALS OLD SORES

Every old sore exists because of a polluted condition of the blood. This vital fluid is infected with some germ or old taint, or perhaps has been left in an unhealthy condition from a long spell of sickness, or the trouble may be inherited. The poisonous germs and matter with which the blood is saturated force an outlet on the face, arms, legs or other part of the body and form a sore or ulcer. This being continually fed by a polluted blood supply, grows red and angry, festers and eats into the surrounding flesh until it becomes what is very aptly termed an "old sore." The relief produced by external treatment is only temporary. The only treatment that can do any real good is a blood purifier that goes to the very root of the trouble and removes the cause, and for this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. It drives out from the circulation all morbid matter and germs, even reaching down to hereditary taints, and by cleansing the blood heals old sores permanently. S. S. S. not only removes all taints and poisons from the blood but builds it up by supplying it with the rich, health-sustaining properties it needs to keep the system in health. S. S. S. makes pure blood and a sore must heal if the blood is pure and healthy. Book on Sores and Ulcers and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

DEMOCRATIC TEXT BOOK

Voluminous Campaign Book Issued by Congressional Committee.

Says All Panics Have Occurred Under High Protective Tariffs.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Bearing the motto "equal rights to all; special privileges to none," on its title page, the Democratic campaign book for use in the approaching congressional campaign was issued yesterday by the Democratic congressional committee. It is one of the most voluminous of any similar publication heretofore gotten out, being composed of 243 pages, and contains a vast amount of matter designed to combat the claims and policies of the Republican party, while at the same time it upholds all the principles for which Democracy contends.

After quoting in full the platform adopted by the national Democratic convention at St. Louis in July, 1904, the book enters into an exhaustive history of the protective tariff system, goink back to the first act of 1789. It is declared that the Republicans refer to this act with unremitting joy, because of the preamble that is "is necessary for the support of the government, for the discharge of the debts of the United States and the encouragement and protection of manufacturers, that duty be paid on goods, wares and merchandise imported."

Tariff history, it is maintained, disproves the Republican platform convention that a "Democratic tariff has always been followed by business adversity, a Republican tariff by business prosperity," and with respect thereto the book has this to say: "That hoary Republican mis-statement has been reiterated in every campaign since the war, but it remained for Senator Lodge to embalm it in a Republican platform, and to have it approved by a president of the United States."

It is asserted that all the palcs in this country have occurred under Republican auspices and with the highest protective tariff, and that in France the same conditions prevailed, while in free trade England there has been only one panic since 1873. Numerous instances of Republican tariff campaigns are quoted, from which the deduction is made that in forty-five years the Republicans have changed or revised the tariff law forty-eight times.

"But at last," the book states, "the Republicans and their allied friends and providers of fat campaign barrels, the protected monopolists, secured a measure that has so fostered and fattened the corporations that they are quite willing to stand pat, especially as they have succeeded in defeating the reciprocity treaties, to provide for which the tariff schedules were purposely increased 20 per cent beyond the rates that the protected monopolists named as sufficient to protect them from competition.

"Hence the people are now burdened with this extra rate plus a revenue and protective rate—three, all told."

The evidence is overwhelming, it is asserted, that the present tariff has fostered trusts, and a demand is made for a revision of the tariff toward a reduction of the duties.

Reference is then made to the speech of Speaker Cannon at Danville, Ill., Aug. 16 last, when he furnished statistics of wages and incomes for the fifteen years between 1890 and 1905, in which the speaker is quoted as acknowledging that in that time, average yearly wages increased slightly less than 9.4 per cent. It is asserted that during the same period the value of manufactured products increased 53.7 per cent, and the inquiry is made, "does Mr. Cannon and the other stand-pat congressmen call that a fair deal—an increase of 58.7 per cent for the trusts and only an increase of 9.4 per cent for the wage earners?" It is insisted, therefore, that "Speaker Cannon, in his fight with labor, should avoid statistics, for they are a two-edged sword in the hands of anyone that does not understand their significance."

The subject of railroad rate legislation is discussed in extenso, the book maintaining that the Democrats from the first had striven for such a measure, and with regard to the recent law enacted, says: "The present congress enacted a railroad law amending the act of 1887. It would have been law, had the Republicans been so disposed, years ago.

"So controlled by the railroad were many of the Republican senators that this bill could not have passed this (Fifty-ninth) congress without the unanimous action of the Democrats and the president's "big stick." At a very acute stage the president found it necessary to request a conference with leading Democratic senators. They conferred with him, and the papers made great note of this unusual act. His position at that time was that which for years the Democrats had occupied, but he was forced by his own party to move ground, and to break faith with his Democratic conferees by consenting to the 'broad court review.'

"If the Republican senate had done half its duty there would have been a railroad bill passed into law long before 1887."

Attention next is called to the "extravagant appropriations of the Fifty-ninth congress," and reference is made to the creation of deficiencies in violation of law.

Under the head of "departmental scandals," Secretary Shaw is charged with "neglecting the duties of his office, making speeches for the stand-patters and carrying on a campaign for the presidential nomination in 1908, but still drawing his salary."

To those who are skeptical and have been humbugged by fake concerns, I will make this offer, as we want you to investigate and be satisfied.

If after a trip to the oil fields you find that they are not better than represented, I will pay all expenses of the trip and $5.00 a day for your time. We need your money to help us refine our product and get in shape to supply the trade of Western Canada, and believe you have never been offered such a chance to make money. Will be pleased to give you all particulars if you will call.

WANT DAMAGES FROM RAILROAD

Many Suits Are Pending Against D. M. & N. Railway Company.

Thomas Hanson, a minor, yesterday applied in district court to have a friend, John A. Varoe appointed as his guardian in order that he might qualify for a suit which he will soon begin against the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad for damages sustained at the ore docks of the company in the West end last spring.

Hanson's is one of several suits which are pending in district court against the Duluth, Missabe & Northern company, all of which were caused by an accident at the ore docks on the night of April 19 last, when a board walk collapsed and a number of laborers were thrown a considerable distance to the ground.

The company had advertised for workmen and the men were on their way to the office to make applications. Under the strain of their combined weight the walk gave way. Broken limbs, sprains and bruises were the result and the men are now trying to get some compensation for the alleged carelessness of the company.

WILL RETIRE FROM CABINET

Attorney General Moody and Secretary Shaw to Leave.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Two retirements from the president's cabinet are slated for the coming winter. They are those of Attorney General Moody, whose resignation will be come effective about the first of December, and that of Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, who, according to present intentions, will retire in February. For one of the vacancies to be created, the president will nominate George V. L. Meyer, American ambassador to Russia, but for the other he is not yet ready to announce a successor.

Mr. Roosevelt has sought to prevail on Attorney General Moody to remain in the cabinet, but the latter, because of business arrangments he has made, has found it impossible to do so. He also would like to have Secretary Bonaparte take Mr. Moody's place when the latter retires, but the former prefers the position at the head of the navy department with whose workings he has become thoroughly familiar. Some suggestion has been made that Secretary Metcalf of the department of commerce and labor will take one of the positions to be made vacant in the proposed shifting of cabinet officers, but he also has expressed a preference to remain where he is.

ABOUT CIGARS.

S. F. Boyce Tells What Duluth Smokers Most Enjoy.

"You would be surprised," said Mr. Boyce of Boyers Drug Store, "to see the different selections of cigars made in our store in the course of a day, and hear each man's reason for his preference." Continuing, he said that the majority of his smokers now prefer a Wadsworth Bros.' Chico.

It is a finely flavored clear Havana filled cigar made from tobacco thoroughly ripened under the rays of the southern sun. The tobacco used in the Chicos is fully matured and seasoned and burns finely and perfectly, with a fine flavor and fragrance. Mr. Boyce recommends a cigar with a dark wrapper, as this shows that the tobacco has been fully matured, but whichever color, ligt or dark, is selected in the Wadsworth Bros.' Chico, he says, you will get a good, perfect, satisfying smoke at 5 cents, a cigar equal to the ordinary ten and fifteen cent values.

ASSAULT ON A POLICE OFFICER

Charged Against Young Roosevelt and Other Harvard Students.

Boston, Oct. 3.—Further investigation by the Boston police and action yesterday by the grand jury in connection with an assault on a policeman on Boston common last Thursday evening, in which Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., was involved, resulted last night in the arrest in Cambridge of Shaun Kelly of Fitchburg, a companion of young Roosevelt, and president of the sophomore class of Harvard. Kelly was arrested on a warrant issued by the municipal court of this city charging an unknown person with an assault upon a police officer. He was taken to the Cambridge police station, where he furnished bail and today will appear in the muicipal court of this city for a hearing.

Kelly was arrested while two officers of the Boston police force were serving summonses on young Roosevelt and Meredith Blagden, another Harvard student, to appear as witnesses in a grand jury investigation of the case next Thursday. Young Kelly, realizing that his two friends would be compelled to tell all they knew of the affair to the grand jury, approached the Boston officers and accepted the arrest on the warrant granted for an unknown person.

Although Kelly's case may be settled in court, young Roosevelt and Blagden will still be compelled to attend the grand jury investigation on Thursday.

MAGOON IS TO SUCCEED TAFT

As Governor of Cuba, According to Present Program.

Washington, Oct. 3.—President Roosevelt discussed freely yesterday with his cabinet and with individual callers, among whom were Senators Knox and Foraker, the present situation in Cuba and its temporary occupation by the American forces. The matter was talked over at the cabinet meeting but no definite announcement of the result of the deliberation was given out. The president stated to the cabinet and to the other callers with whom he talked, that the action taken by the American government was destined solely for the benefit of the people of the island with a view to the complete restoration of order there and the protection of all interests. He declared he had no such motive in view as the possible annexation of the government of the island by the United States. What he wanted now was that the Cubans should be given another chance at self government.

Unless extraordinary conditions arise, no extra session of congress will be called to deal with the Cuban situation, as the president considers he has ample authority to proceed in the matter.

It seems to be well settled that former Governor Charles E. Magoon of the Panama canal zone, who has just returned from Panama, will be appointed governor of the provisional government of Cuba, in succession to Secretary Taft. Both the president and Secretary Taft had in view the designation of Governor Beckman Winthrop of Porto Rico for this office. The president, however, has expressed the belief that he can better spare Governor Magoon from his duties in the Philippine islands and where he has been appointed a member of the Philippine commission and vice governor general of the islands, than he can the services of Governor Winthrop for the several months during which he expects the provisional governorship to Cuba will continue.

REBELS BEING DISARMED

In Cuba and Are Anxious to Return to Their Homes.

Santa Clara, Cuba, Oct. 3.—The first day's work of the disarmament commission sent into this province has resulted satisfactorily. The members of the commission have visited the rebel force under Machado, numbering 2,500 men, encamped near Santa Clara City and at Placetas. The actual work of disarmament will begin today. The revolutionists are anxious to return to their homes.

Gen. Machado said to the Associated Press: "I am convinced that American intervention will be the most efficient means of establishing peace, and that an agreement with the Moderates would have had no real force and probably would have resulted only in further trouble."

The commission will visit the Cienfuegos district today. Commissioner Montegudo addressed the rebels and urged them to lay down their arms. He said among other things that in President Roosevelt the Cubans have a true friend. This remark was greeted with enthusiastic applause.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The Woman's Catholic Order of Foresters has selected Detroit, Mich., as the next meeting place on the last Tuesday of September, 1908.

J. B. Dodson, an attorney, was indicted in the federal court at Springfield, Mo., yesterday on the charge of making a false affidavit in making a cash entry of 160 acres of government land.

Satisfying a long-cherished ambition, Dr. Fred A. Cook of Brooklyn has reached the summit of Mount McKinley, which towers 20,464 feet above the Pacific ocean. Mr. Cook's feat is notable as his is the first ascent of the mountain on record and followed repeated failures

Senor Quesada, the Cuban minister, who tendered his resignation to the provisional government of Cuba, has received a cablegram in reply, asking him to withdraw his resignation and remain at Washington.

Irreparable damage is being done the crops of Tennessee by the incessant rains which have fallen during the past two weeks. The rains have prevented the planting of wheat altogether, and should there be no more rains for a month, it would be an utter impossibility for the farmers to sow the average wheat crop.

All the big Chicago packers have become members of the newly organized American Meat Packers' association.

The Swedish government has banished a number of Finnish students as vagrants and persons dangerous to society. Their return to Sweden is absolutely prohibited.

The navy department has been advised that the preliminary trial of the battleship Minnesota, built by the Newport News Shipbuilding company, will take place in New England waters, Oct. 24.

The president will not make any appointment to fill the vacancy on the bench of the supreme court of the United States until the reassembling of congress in December. Secretary Taft has been offered the position and has had the question of accepting or declining it under consideration for some time.

President Roosevelt announced to some of his callers yesterday that he would not "take the stump" on behalf of the candidacy of Charles E. Hughes for governor of New York.

General and division superintendents of all roads in the Central Traffic association met at Cleveland yesterday to solve the question of exchanging cars at junction points and place the responsibility for resultant damages.

President Amador of Panama, accompanied by his wife, will make an extended visit to the United States next summer.

Secretary Root will not make any public statement concerning his recent extended South American trip until next month, when he will deliver an address in St. Louis before an organization interested in commercial affairs.

Rev. Dr. Andrew Williamson, who for many years occupied the chair of philosophy at the Swedish Lutheran college and Seminary, Rock Island, Ill., died at Portland, Or., Monday night, aged 70 years. Deceased served with honor in the Civil war. He was unmarried. A large number of relatives live in Illinois and Minnesota, his native state.

Cheap Rates to Pacific Coast.

BRITISH LABOR UNIONS

Divided Over the Adhesion to the Liberals or the Socialists.

London, Oct. 3.—The labor movement in Great Britain is at present passing through an interesting phase, which is tending to decide the future dominance of one or two sections of the labor party in the house of commons, the Liberal section, led by John Burns, of the Socialist section led by James Keir Hardie.

The federation of miners, at a meeting held this week at Swansea, took a ballot which, although official figures are not yet available, is understood to have decided against joining the Hardie section. On the other hand, a conference of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, sitting simultaneously at Cardiff, passed a resolution, after a long and bitter debate, in favor of adhesion to the Hardie section in spite of the fact that their leader, Richard B. Bell, M. P., was strongly opposed to the railway men submitting themselves to socialist dictation.

"My child was burned terribly about the face, neck and chest. I applied Dr. Thomas Eclectric Oil. The pain ceased and the child sank into a restful sleep."—Mrs. Nancy M. Hanson,, Hamburg, N. Y.

PHOTO ENGRAVERS.

Minneapolis, Oct. 3.—The International Photo Engravers' union, which is meeting at the West hotel this week, did not get down to real work until yesterday afternoon. The following officers were nominated: President, Mathew Wold, Chicago; vice president, L. A. Schwarz, Philadelphia; second vice president, A. J. Gallagher, San Francisco; third vice president, E. J. Schumaker, Pittsburg; secretary-treasurer, H. E. Gudberandson, Minneapolis; delegate to American Federation of Labor, A. J. Gallagher, San Francisco.

INCREASED ATTENDANCE

Later Closing Hour at Public Library is Proving Popular.

List of New Books Added to the Collection.

As a result of the later closing hour at the public library, there has been a great increase in the attendance at the reading rooms in the evening. This is especially true of men, although there has been a slight increase in the number of women in the evening. In spite of this increase in the reading room attendance during the first month of the later closing, the circulation has not been augmented, and practically no books are issued after 9 o'clock.

The statistics for the library for the month of September show that there has been a total circulation of 8,392, while the average daily circulation has been 250. The greatest daily circulation was 611 and the least daily was 205, while the total number of books in circulation amounted to 3,019. There were 125 cards issued during the month and 191 books added to the library. Of the juvenile circulation there was a total of 2,654, and of West Duluth a total of 888. The total number of books repaired amounted to 359, number of cards filed in the catalogue 787, and the number of books issued to teachers 466. The average juvenile circulation was 86; the greatest daily, 175; least daily, 46; number of books in circulation, 1,550; books repaired, 60. The average West Duluth circulation amounted to 40; the attendance, 1,561; average daily attendance, 70.

Following is the list of books added to the library during the last two weeks:

PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION.

Mochler—"Symbolism; or, Exposition of the Doctrinal Differences Between Catholics and Protestants as Evidenced by Their Symbolic Writings."
Montgomery—"Christus Redemptor."

Peterman's Roachfood.

A BOON TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

As the roaches go to the food, enticed by it at night from their breeding places, it eliminates them, large or small.

It has been sent for 20 years to large institutions throughout the U. S. and abroad, with bills not payable unless it did the work to their entire satisfaction.

PETERMAN'S RATMOUSE FOOD. Ready for Use.

Rats and mice made wild by this noxious food alarm others; they will leave the building and not return.

Peterman's Ant Food, a strong food to kill and drive away ants. Large black beetles may also be destroyed by it in one night.

BED BUGS—"Peterman's Discovery" (quicksilver cream) will kill bedbugs that go over where it is painted on lightly; is also a preventative. It will not rust or harm furniture or bedding.

"Peterman's Liquid Discovery," in flexible can, with spout; pressing sides of can will force it in cracks and kill bedbugs and eggs instantly.

Take no other, as time may be even more important than money.

Originated in 1873. Perfected in 1905 by Wm. Peterman, Mfg. Chemist, 54, 56, 58 West 13th St., New York City.

Sold by the drug trade generally, and at wholesale by the Leithhead Drug Co., general distributors for the Northwest.

MURDEROUS CRIMINALS

Who Are Let Alone by the Police of Paris.

Most Dangerous Band of Cut-Throats in the World.

Paris, Oct. 3.—Do you know the Apaches? Doubtless most Americans would answer yes, and yet would be surprised to hear of an emigration of Apaches from Paris to the United States. Yet there was to have been such an emigration presently, the funds providing for it being the proceeds of murder.

The emigration was prevented by the arrest the other day of the murderers—only three of the many murderous Apaches of Paris. In the United States the Apache Indians as trouble makers have been only a name for a good many years now, but in Paris the Apaches—not Indians, but men worse than the worst of the Indians, and taking their name from them—are a very real trouble and a constant menace to the city.

Scarcely a day goes by and rarely a week passes without some crime of this outlaw element coming to notice in the newspapers. And many of their crimes never come to public knowledge at all.

It is said that there are about 4,000 of these ruffians who have found that they can live without working in this capital, and they proceed to do so, killing men and women without hesitation in the pursuit of their ends. They commit murders in the streets and in buildings indiscriminately, business places or domiciles, merely to get possession of money. The police know all about them and let them alone till after the crime is committed.

The name Apaches, which is universally applied to them, may be an outgrowth of the time when the violent deeds of the American Apaches were of frequent mention in the news of the day, or it may have had some other origin. The French do not use the term as meaning merely "Indians," in the sense that "Indian" is now sometimes used in New York slang, but specifically to describe these assassins who do not work, who prowl in small bands mainly at night, and who shoot or stab a person apparently as an agreeable pastime in the course of a robbery, even when they do not murder.

An American who has but lately passed out of this world was planning before he died to write a protest against the employment of this Indian name to designate the Paris thugs. He regarded it as an outrage against the American Indians and wanted to clear them of the imputation of being so contemptible as these Apaches of Paris.

On Saturday, September 8, a feeble old woman, who had considerable means, was murdered in her home here by a young fellow who called there, saying he was sent by her married daughter to get the latter's parasol. The fellow was a brother of a little boy, who, up to a couple of days before, had been employed by the woman's son-in-law, and therefore he was admitted.

The woman was alone and he immediately murdered her and took her money, jewelry and laces away with him in a parcel wrapped in an illustrated newspaper. The parasol for which he had asked was found beside her body.

In a haunt of the Apaches, of whom he was one, the murderer was arrested on the following Sunday evening. The police do catch criminals after the act here. He is 16 years old. With him was his mistress, age 26, wearing some of the property of the murdered woman.

The crime had been planned by the murderer's 12-year-old brother, the little boy, who had been employed by the old woman's son-in-law and whom she herself had many times befriended. The term employed is used advisedly. The boy would not do any real work, but he was tolerated and paid because he was amusing, with a sort of gamin impudence, and his mother was a worthy serving woman known to his employer.

Both brothers and the woman, who was the elder's companion, are in custody. Of such are the Apaches of Paris.

This 16-year-old criminal at first told the commissary of police that he was innocent and had spent Saturday afternoon in a concert hall, which he named, with comrades whom he could designate. This form of alibi is usual with the Apaches. He was a young workman, he said, who after he should have done his military service for the country had only one wish, to be a policeman, as he detested criminals.

When the evidence showed him that he was found out he changed his attitude abruptly but calmly, acknowledged the crime and said that with 20,000 francs—proceeds of the murder and robbery—he and two companions were to have sailed soon for America. One of his companions was an electrician and the other a mechanic and they had planned, he said, to open an automobile repair shop in America.

From time to time the newspapers of Paris took up the question of the Apaches, and sporadically they denounce the policy of the police which permits the Apaches' murderous activity in the streets and the boulevards; but the subject is soon dropped, and nothing is done toward the repression of the criminals. It used to be said that only on the outer boulevards were the Apaches dangerous, but only last week Le Matin called attention in a conspicuous article to the fact that they had become emboldened enough to frequent even the central opera section, the very heart of the city.

RAILWAY CLERKS MEET.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Delegates representing the United States Railway Mail Service Mutual Benefit association and the Railway Mail association met in joint convention here yesterday. Eleven thousand members of the two organizations, all of whom are railway clerks, whose chapters are situated throughout the country were represented at the meeting.

IT IS GOOD SIDE LINE

There Is Steady Demand for Statesmen in Chautauqua Field.

Rural Communities Are Eager to Hear the Congressmen.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Senators and representatives in congress complain more bitterly every day of the poor pay and heavy expense of representing a constituency in Washington. Many of them are turning for relief to the lecture platform and to the Chautauqua field.

The Chautauqua is very much on the order of th ecounty fair. It is becoming essentially a rural institution in these days of prosperous crops and good prices. But there is an intellectual flavor about the Chautauqua which distinguishes it from the county fair.

The Chautauqua bespeaks mental culture. In these latter days of the fat cornerib and the overflowing wheat bins the farmer aspires to metropoitan airs. He wants to be like the city folk.

His son rides in an automobile, his daughter goes to a finishing school, and he shows a fondness for the luxuries of life. The Chautauquas must afford entertainment and in addition to the musical numbers the moving pictures and other delectable exhibits the orator of the day is a necessary feature.

Of course there is a vast horde of professional lecturers, some of them men of ability who live by their work on the platform. But the most profitable employment in this line has fallen to political celebrities.

The farmer wants to see and hear Bryan talk about free silver and he is willing to pay the price. He doesn't object to the gate money he has to pay to get a look at Senator La Follette's pompadour.

He brings the whole family to town and buys a ticket for each of them to hear "Pitchfork" Tillman tell of the lynching of negroes in the South, and thus he gets a thrill that is worth twice the gate money. Now and then he sees a knockout political sketch in which Representative Charlie Grosvenor of Ohio is pitted against Champ Clark or De Armond of Missouri. It is a rare treat.

Some of these debates recall the days of Lincoln and Douglas. Such sights are presented in the political campaign but rarely, for the day of joint debates has gone by in political campaigns.

Occasionally the debate is punctuated by an incident that adds to the interest of the show, as was the case at a Chautauqua at New Albany two years ago when Representative Champ Clark drew a knife from his pocket and threatened to cut the throat of a persistent interrupter from ear to ear. In the main these debates pass away without incident, the members of each political party cheering their favorites.

The most interesting phase of the lecture or Chautauqua evolution is the pecuniary one. It has served to augment the income of a great many public servants who are underpaid.

Some men have made snug fortunes from their work in the Chautauqua field. More public men are going into the work every year. Most of them admit they like it.

The Chautauqua season is rapidly drawing to a close, and it has been the most prosperous of any yet held. Senator Tillman has been the great drawing card of the year.

He has made more money out of it than any other Chautauqau attraction. He had a fairly good reputation before the season began, but the railroad rate bill in congress last winter brought him into such notoriety that every farmer in the land wanted to get a look at him. Many of them wanted to hear him and all of them were willing to pay the admission fee.

Tillman saw the humor in the whole thing but at the same time he did not overlook the money. He told a South Carolina political audience that he made the Yankees pay him for the privilege of hearing him call them a lot of hypocrites on the negro question.

Mr. Tillman could not begin to fill the engagements offered to him this season. Three lecture bureaus competed for his time and his price was $250 a lecture.

For a few special engagements he received a higher price. At one place in Iowa he received $500. At another in Illinois he received $300. His season was probably worth $25,000 to him.

Next to Mr. Tillman, Senator La Follette discussed the railroads and defended his course in the senate on rate legislation. For all of this the farmers gladly paid.

Another popular attraction was Senator Dolliver of Iowa. His price is $200 a lecture. He is a popular entertainer. Representative Clark of Missouri had one lecture which dealt with incidents of public life culled from his experience as a member of congress that he delivered 150 times and received $100 a night for it.

Governor Hanly, of Indiana, evolved a lecture at the beginning of the season on "The Patriotism of Peace." He told a friend recently that he took sufficient time from his gubernatorial duties in the past season to make $8,000 from delivering the lecture. That is almost equal to a year's salary of the governor of Indiana.

Representative Charles B. Landis, of the same state, has purchased a fine farm from the proceeds of his work on the lecture platform, Senator Elmer J. Burkett, of Nebraska, and Representative Charles A. Towne, of New York, were among the recruits in the lecture field this season. Burkett liked it and will continue, but Towne declares it involves too much inconvenience and he will make no further engagements.

The ruling price for a lecture by a senator is $200. Representatives command $100 and upward.

Walter Wellman, who is now trying to discover the North pole, essayed a lecture flight last season. He received $125 a lecture and tried to tell his audiences some of the things he had observed in Washington as a newspaper correspondent. His first engagement was in Posey county, Ind., at New Harmony.

Mr. Wellman read his lecture and he said afterward that he thought he had discovered the North pole before he concluded. The average lecture patron expects to be tickled or thrilled. He must have a smile or a sigh in return for his ticket.

Richmond Pearson Hobson has made a great success of his lecture experience.

When ex-Governor Bob Taylor, of Tennessee, went out of the governor's office at the end of his last term he found himself burdened with debts. He turned to the lecture managers, but they were not willing to give him what he demanded, so he organized a lecture bureau of his own and put his private secretary in charge of it.

Mr. Taylor was the star attraction of this bureau. As it grew in importance he added other features. It now supplies most of the talent for the Southern circuit and is said to yield $50,000 a year to its promoters.

Mr. Taylor paid off all his debts and is fairly well-to-do and he made it all from the lecture field. He furnishes a humorous entertainment and is much in demand.

Mr. Bryan's success in the lecture field will probably eclipse that of any other public man who has undertaken the work. He has received as high as $500 an engagement.

Whether the Chautauqua business will dwindle in time is uncertain, but the demands for lecturers and entertainers seems to be increasing every year, judging from the invitations that come to public men. In the winter the little cities and towns have their lyceum lecture courses, which call for one lecture a month. Every county seat town in the country now aspires to have a lyceum lecture course. In the summer the Chautauquas take the talent.

Then lodges, societies and churches arrange for entertainments and many public libraries have special courses. It looks now as if the field might be widened rather than diminished, and if it widens it may not be necessary to increase the salaries of senators and congressmen.

Danger From the Plague.

There's grave danger from the plague of Coughs and Colds that are so prevalent, unless you take Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Mrs. Geo. Walls, of Forest City, Me., writes: "It's a godsend to people living in climates where coughs and colds prevail. I find it quickly ends them." It prevents Pneumonia, cures La Grippe, gives wonderful relief in Asthma and Hay Fever, and makes weak lungs strong enough to ward off Consumption, Coughs and Colds. 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed by all drug stores. Trial bottle free.

The Tariff and Socialism.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Under the caption, "The Fault is Ours," the Herald says: "'The robber tariff,' is the means which makes the opportunity to plunder the people of $150,000,000 worth on steel alone." Will The Herald explain why two or more importers can not combine and charge all the traffic will bear, just as easily as two or more manufacturers can? If you were an importer and got your steel for nothing, but was was as you claim, just as hoggish as the steel trust, would you sell it any cheaper than all it would bring? Now be honest, would you?

Again, if the railroads were shipping all the goods free of charge, what is there to prevent the commercial combine to charge the consumer all his paying ability can stand?

The New Tribune says that if the big corporations don't give more concession to the working class, the working class will go for Socialism. J. Adam Bede said in West Duluth that if the Republicans don't do something the Socialists will. Shall we understand this to mean that in order to get concessions from the corporations and good work from the Republicans we must vote for Socialism?

THOMAS G. GEE,
West Duluth, Oct. 2, 1906.

Officeholders in Politics.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Replying to your issue of Wednesday, Sept. 26, wherein you state that Otto Gafvert, the "village blacksmith" from West Duluth and the man who carries the Swedish vote in the "hollow of his hand," had been appointed chairman of St. Louis County Republican committee. Mr. Gafvert, I understand, is now holding down a job as deputy collector of inland revenue under the United States government. Mr. Editor, isn't this contrary to the instructions of President Roosevelt? How can Mr. Gafvert perform his duties properly for the people who pay him his salary if he accepts the chairmanship of the said committee? It is certain he cannot attend to both positions! He must neglect one or the other. The same logic applies to A. P. Cook, St. Louis county's superintendent of the poor. Mr. Cook has accepted the position of Republican committeeman from the Fifth ward. Mr. Cook draws his salary from the taxpayers of St. Louis county, and he ought to attend to what he is paid for doing, or resign. If he has lots of time on his hands and nothing to do, let him play the "wooden harp" and saw some wood for the poor farm. The people don't pay him for racing up and down the Fifth ward.

Respectfully yours,
BENJAMIN C. DUTTON,
West Duluth, Oct. 2, 1906.

LABORERS STILL IN BIG DEMAND

Employment Agents Unable to Find Men for Positions.

Although the harvest days in western Minnesota and the Dakotas are nearly over there has been very little let-up in the demand for labor in this city where so many laborers for the western fields have been secured. The railroads are crying for more men to do construction work and the employment bureaus are hard pressed to supply the demand.

Although help of all kinds was at a premium all through the month, there were 575 persons furnished employment during September by the Duluth free labor bureau which is just 100 more than the number at the Superior bureau. Of these 265 gave their residence as Duluth; 171 inside the limits of Minnesota; and 139 came from outside of the state. A number of those furnished employment were women but the majority were men who were wanted by the railroads for construction work or for contract work here in the city.

There has never been such a demand for workmen right here in Duluth as exists at the present time and there are about three agents looking for every man out of a job. This is partly due to the fact that the fall rush in the wholesale trade in pust beginning and many men are needed to assist in handling the immense stocks of goods which are being received. One big wholesale firm had to apply to the free labor bureau for the first time in its history for assistance in securing men. Heretofore they had always had plenty of workmen in reserve for the rush season. There is also a great demand for laborers on contract work in this city.

There is the usual scarcity in domestic help and according to the orders at the local bureau, several good cooks and girls for private families can secure good places for the asking.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the City Clerk of the City of Eveleth, St. Louis County, Minnesota, up to Tuesday, October 16, 1906, at 8 o'clock P. M., for the erection and completion of two frame residences, to be built at the pumping plant at St. Mary's lake, according to plans and specifications on file at the office of the City Clerk, Eveleth, Minn., Duluth Builders' Exchange or at the office of the architects, Bray & Nystrom, Duluth, Minnesota.

All bids must be accompanied by a certified check for $250.00, payable to W. J. Davey, City Treasurer, said check to be forfeited by the successful bidder in case he fails to enter into the contract and furnish a satisfactory surety bond in an amount equal to the contract price agreed upon, within five days after the award.

The city council of the said City of Eveleth reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

The sealed proposals must be marked "Bid for erection of residences at pumping plant," and addressed to the undersigned at Eveleth, Minn.

By order of the City Council of the City of Eveleth Minn.

C. & A. HAS GOOD BULGE

Sells as High as $128 in Copper Stock Market.

North Butte, Cananea and Superior & Pittsburg Continue Advances.

Those copper stocks which have shown such steady advances all this week went higher in the market today. Calumet & Arizona was a feature, selling as high as $128.

North Butte, Cananea Central and Superior & Pittsburg also sold at higher prices.

Calumet & Arizona opened at $122 bid, and advanced almost steadily to $128, closing at $128 bid and $130 asked. A rumor to the effect that the next dividend would be $4.50 and even $5, caused much buying of the stock. The September product of Calumet & Arizona was 1,911 tons of blister copper.

North Butte reached $108.50 during the day and closed strong. The opening price was $105.50, and was the low price of the day. North Butte closed at $108.25 bid and $108.50 asked.

Superior & Pittsburg sold during the early part of the day at $22.50 and advanced to $24.50, closing at about $24 bid and $24.25 asked. A dispatch from Calumet was to the effect that good ore had been found in three drifts. The Hoatson shaft, at the 1,000 level, and the Briggs' shaft, at the 1,000 level, have struck what appears to be the top of an ore body, for a distance of twelve feet. It averages about 11 per cent.

Cananea Central was $21.75 bid at the opening of the day's business and sold as high as $22.25. The closing price was about $23 bid.

Except for Cananea Central and Superior & Pittsburg, whose advance have been a most important feature of the market this week, the unlisted shares were quiet. Warren sold at $14.50 and closed at $14.50 bid and $15 asked; Globe sold at $6.87½ and $7 and closed at $7 asked, and Copper Queen of Idaho sold at $2 and $1.75, closing weaker at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked.

Denn-Arizona was inactive and closed at $20 asked, Keweenaw at $11.25 bid, Hancock Consolidated at $8 bid, Cliff at $4.50 bid and $5 asked, and Calumet & Montana at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked. Black Mountain sold at $9.25 and closed at $9 bid and $9.25 asked.

CITY BRIEFS

Wants Possession of Office.

Joseph J. Cox of Hibbing appealed to the district court yesterday from the decision of Judge Brady of the municipal court of Hibbing, in his suit against Frank Stevens and others to get possession of an office in the Cox block in Hibbing. Judgment was given the defendant in the former trial for the costs of the action. Cox claims that the defendants have occupied the office for two years, but that they are $83 behind on the rent.

Gets Verdict of $392.

A verdict was obtained in district court yesterday by Henry Hughes & Co. for $392 on an account against Charles Pankonin and others. The case was tried before Judge Dibell yesterday afternoon.

Soldiers at the Fair.

During the fair at Hibbing, two soldiers in the regular army, Privates W. C. Nelson and J. J. McManus, will be in that raneg town in the interests of the local recruiting office. After the fair, they will make their headquarters at Virginia for the purpose of getting men to enlist.

New Law in Force.

Capt. T. H. Pressnell, clerk of the district court yesterday issued first citizenship papers to the first applicant under the new law which went into effect last Friday. The program necessary to become a citizen of the country is now considerably more stringent than heretofore, and the oath taken by the applicant includes, besides a careful description of himself, the place of his birth, his present residence, his last foreign residence, and his assurance that he is not a believer in polygamy. George Williamson was the first man to take out papers in the local office under the new law.

Roller Skating Party.

The members of St. Luke's church and their friends wil enjoy a roller skating carnival at the Lincoln Park roller rink this evening.

Harvest Home Supper.

A harvest home supper will be given at the Pilgrim Congregation church Friday evening.

Three Cases Dismissed.

The three separate personal injury suits of Victor Carlson, Nils Magnusson and Andrew Hill against the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway company were dismissed in district court this morning, the lawyers in each cases having agreed upon a settlement.

Adjudged Insane.

Elizabeth Hilman of Sparta was taken into custody yesterday afternoon upon the order of the probate court and was last evening examined and found to be insane. She was born in Finland and came to St. Louis county in 1901. It is claimed she became insane over the question of religion and dancing. She was committed to the hospital for the insane at Fergus Falls.

Settled Out of Court.

The personal injury suit of Charles Maki against the Oliver Mining company has been settled out of court for the consideration of $900 in favor of the plaintiff. The case was dismissed. Pursuant to a stipulation in open court a judgement of $900 was ordered entered in favor of Oscar Kaupplla in his suit against the same company and the case was striken from the calendar.

Gets Stiff Sentence.

Because L. Clark, a young man about 20 years age, persisted in an indecent exposure of his person to persons in his neighborhood after being warned that he must desist, Judge Cutting imposed a severe sentence on him in the municipal court this morning. He sentenced Clark to pay a fine of $75 and costs with the alternative of sixty days in the county jail. It is understood that Clark will have to serve out the jail term.

Gets Building Permit

The permit for J. B. Cotton's new residence at the northeast corner of First street and Twenty-third avenue east, was issued this morning by Building Inspector Kielley. The house will cost $30,000 and will occupy a site described as lots 11, 12 and 13, block 4, Longview addition. The plans fo the structure were made by a Mineapolis firm of architects.

Revival Services.

"Is the Gospel Foolishness or Power?" will be the subject of the sermon by Rev. W. E. Woodruff at the revival services at the Central Baptist church this evening. The service last evening was well attended.

ROBBED IN A BOGUS RAID

Scotchman, in a Poker Game, is Deprived of $10,000.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 3.—By means of a bogus police raid on a poker game, Alexander and William McWhirter, two recent arrivals from Scotland, claim to have been robbed of $10,000 in this city on Sept. 18. En route to Los Angeles, the brothers stopped here and were inveigled into a card game by affable strangers. A raid was made by two pretended policemen, one of whom took, it is alleged, $8,000 of the $10,000 McWhirter had when he sat in the game. The other "officer" attempted to escape from the McWhirters, but they forced him to take them to the police station. The stranger conferred with the chief of police, George Sheets, and came back with $1,000, which was restored to the Scots. The latter proceeded to Los Angeles, where they secured counsel and returned to Salt Lake to prosecute a search for their money.

Chief Sheets says that the man who brought the McWhirters to the station was not an officer, and that he did not look into the case at the time because he thought that the trouble was merely a difference over some business transaction.

VERY RARE AND VALUABLE BOOK

In Possession of Fergus Falls Man—A Burmese Bible.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Oct. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—E. J. Oxley of this city has recently discovered that he is the possessor of a very rare and valuable book. It is nothing less than a Burmese bible, made many centuries ago. The book was given to Mr. Oxley by Sergeant Fred Stokes who was with the English army during the English-Burmese war of twenty-five years ago, and who took the book from a Burmese temple which was afteward burned.

The book is about 18 inches long, and the leaves 2½ inches wide, made of sections of palm leaves, the characters being cut into the leaf.

Neither Mr. Oxley nor Mr. Stokes had any idea that the book was a curiosity, until he showed it to a Burmese lecturer recently. The lecturer expressed the greatest surprise that the book was in existence in America, and informed Mr. Oxley that in Burmah these books were held sacred, and were handled only by the higher orders of the priesthood. He also stated that the book is undoubtedly at least 6,000 years old. He offered Mr. Oxley $400 for the book, but stated to others that if it was offered to the right parties it would readily bring a much larger sum.

PRISONERS ESCAPE.

Newark, Ohio, Oct. 3.—Eight prisoners broke out of the Licking county jail today after making a vicious assault upon the turnkey, Christopher Galvin, and locking him in a cell.

RICH FIND OF GOLD FOR BAY CITY MAN.

Fort Francis, Ont., Oct. 3.—E. F. Beattie of Bay City, Mich., is now the part owner of one of the richest mines in the Rainy River district. Mr. Beattie says that one of the veins in the mine is 100 feet wide, and shows for 110 feet along the surface, carrying high values in gold, silver and copper. Samples were sent to Assayer James Ogden, Denver, Colo., who assayed them at $325 and $376 in gold to the ton, which shows the great value of the mine, considering the samples were not picked but were fair specimens from the vein. The iron in the vein assays $7.50 to the ton, and the silver also runs high. Mr. Beattie is now securing the necessary capital to develop the vein, and expects to be fabulously rich before the end of the coming year.

The secret of this mine was kept for over twenty years by Ben Almos, an old half-breed trapper, who heard of it from his Indian relatives. For years he has sought a man whom he considered sufficiently honest to share his secret.

One day he went to Mr. Beattie, who was working the Argentine mine, and said:

"You honest man. You pay your men every week. I show you something, but you give me half what you make."

Almos then led the way down the Steele river and showed the vein, which no one had chanced to discover in all the years that prospectors have roamed the country.

Mr. Beattie at once saw that the vein was an exceptionally rich one, and took the necessary steps to secure the property, and in a few days the find will be opened up and developed.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

One of the most helpful features of the educational classes of the Young Women's Christian association is the classes in English for the young foreign women in the city who desire a better knowledge of the language. The quickness with which the young foreign girls achieve a working knowledge of the language is often a matter of surprise, and their further progress is retarded in many cases for the need of a little help. For the assistance of these girls the English classes have been organized in past years, and have always met with a demand. In this section of the country where many of the foreigners settle, the opportunity for work along this line is especially fine.

The first meeting for this year was held last evening at the association rooms, and six girls were present to continue study begun last year. Classes will be formed in accordance with the demand, and this practical help for the puzzled young foreigners is a work in which the association workers have a special interest.

CLUB LECTURE.

W. G. Crosby Will Speak on French Drama.

The first regular meeting of the Twentieth Century club will be held tomorrow morning at the club room of the library, when the Shakespeare class will meet to listen to a lecture and reading by Wilson G. Crosby on Beaumarchais' "The Barber of Seville." This class has decided to open the year with the discussion and study of a play of one of the great French dramatists, and the members are especially delighted at having Mr. Crosby present the play chosen for this year.

A very general invitation is extended to the members of the club and their friends to be present at the meeting, and any strangers in the city interested in the work of the class or the club are invited to attend. The lecture will be given at 10:30 o'clock.

ANNUAL MEETING

Of Home Society Will be Held This Week.

The annual meeting of the Children's Home society will be held Friday morning of this week at the Home on Fifteenth avenue east. At this time the annual reports of the officers and chairman of committee will be presented and the election of officers will follow. All associate members are urged to be present. Every body contributing a dollar a year to the support of the institution is an associate member of the Home society and it is hoped that interest will be shown at the annual meeting Friday.

Miss Esther Tufte and Ansta Swendson left yesterday for Bethel Academy where they will study during the year.

What Retail Markets Offer

Pie pumpkin, 10 cents each.
Crab apples, 50 cents a peck.
Celery root, 8 cents a bunch.
Spanish onions, 10 cents a lb.
Calves' tongues, 15 cents each.
Beef kidneys, 8 cents each.
Pickled herring, 25 cents a lb.

Pumpkin pies and baked apples! Totally different things and yet this is the time of year to luxuriate in the joys of both these delicacies in combination or separately. Lovely, smooth, spicy, luscious, rich brown, fragrant, pumpkin pie! And delicate, tasteful, ambrosial, divinely excellent baked apples! People who can have both pumpkin pie and baked apples and still long for the flesh pots or copper stocks of a richer existence belong to that hopelessly discontented lot of continual want. Pumpkins are only 10 cents each and 35 and 40 cents buys a peck of apples.

Celery root and Spanish onions are the features of the market which are likely to be neglected. And if you can sufficiently forget the unladylikeness of it, bread and butter and Spanish onions at 10:30 in the evening is fine business. No, of course it isn't lobsters and bubbles, but then it's good. It is too.

Gowns a College Girl Requires for First Term

By A. T. ASHMORE.

The majority of girls now starting off for boarding school or college must have their entire winter outfit ready before commencing the first term, although, of course, the girl living near town, or who goes to school in a large city, can procure many of the necessary costumes after she is settled for the winter. Even for these girls, however, it is well to have prepared to take away at first as complete a wardrobe as possible, for shopping or constant tailor and dressmaking appointments are scarcely consistent with hard study, delightful as the girl will find anything to break the first tedious monotony.

The important part of the school girl's outfit is her everyday dress that is to be worn in the class room and on the regular walks—that is, if the school is in a city. The best suit for this purpose is a heavy, dark cloth, made with a short circular or plaited skirt and a simple, well fitting jacket, and then there should be at least two waists for this dress—one of cloth the same as the skirt, for cold weather, and a lighter bodice of silk or washable flannel to wear when a lined waist would be uncomfortably warm. All the waists should have long sleeves and be trimmed with as little white lace or embroidery as possible. The silk bodice is prettiest finished simply with embroidered linen or lingerie collar and cuffs that are only buttoned or basted in, so that they can be always fresh and neat. The cloth waist should also be made quite simply, with just a little lace or embroidery at the throat and wrists, and this also put in in such a way that it can easily be replaced. One or two wash flannel waists and perhaps just a few heavy linen bodices, to be worn for the first month or six weeks, will be all that is necessary for the autumn and winter.

A pretty plaid dress of coloring that harmonizes with the shade of the cloth suit will be found attractive for the school room, and a relief instead of wearing the one suit day in and day out. Even for the college girl this dress should be made short, with full plaited skirt, and the waist must have long sleeves.

For afternoon and for Sundays a smart suit of corduroy, velveteen or light cloth is necessary. If the girl has graduated to long skirts this afternoon costume may be long or walking length as desired, although a train to a skirt always makes the gown dressier. This, too, should be a three-piece gown, with an elaborate white waist to be worn when preferred to the lined bodice.

For the evening two or three pretty frocks of silk, voile and crepe de Chine are necessary. The pretty red dress will be found useful, as the pale shades soil so distressingly soon. One nice white gown should always be included for there is no other gown which looks well on such a variety of occasions, and then white is apt to clean better and more often than any decided or perishable shade. These evening gowns should not be very elaborate and decollete bodices are rarely permitted at school, even for the older girls. The pretty and becoming Dutch neck is still fashionable and is an attractive finish for a young girl's evening dress.

Besides the gowns here mentioned, there are always the extra waists and coats to be thought of and each suit must have its hat and furs. Still, simplicity should rule.

The Evening Story.

THE PRICE OF A KISS

By Frances Rivers.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Knowles.)

The moment that old David Johns cast his eyes upon the Rev. Paul Bolitho coming toward him over the brow of the hill, he determined not to give him a chance to escape.

The young man was a vision fair in the extreme to eyes drilled to view but the retrospect of more than eighty years. Old Davy Johns greeted him very cordially.

The midday air was still to drowsiness, so that the regular beat of lazy waves was audible, although the sea was half a mile away. There was the hum of bees in the air, and a thrush sang in a cage outside the cottage.

The young man noted the increased furrows over the old man's strongly bridged nose; the deeper chiselings at the corners of the resigned mouth, now telling of war between will and weakening muscles.

A feeling of half-harmonious concession to his own early affection for his companion, mixed with a sense of his newly attained position of importance as pastor, was betrayed in Paul's "I want you to come and hear me preach."

"Preach! Yes! for sure. We all like to do a bit of preachin', and 'tis not wonderful when one thinks how well duty runs hand in hand with liking; but sometimes the best words of a preacher are those he doesn't say. Harps and golden crowns and such-like things—what's the use of such to me?"

"You have no religion, Davy."

"There's a lot of religion in good temper."

Paul Bolitho got up from the bench and walked up and down the path, the impetuosity of his youth apparent in every step. Stopping in front of his old friend, his head shot aloft by the involuntary straightening of the spine. "I want to make men honest, women virtuous," he said.

"Mebbe they would be if they wern't interfered with." The smile that played round the old man's mouth, spoke of intimate knowledge of the world.

"May what rules you can for you fellowmen, but make none for women—they're exceptions," he advised. "Tho' mebbe you don't know yet that you counts 'em o' any vally. Ah!" he chuckled, "you're terrible young if you haven't thought o' woman to be reck'nd with; for sartain sure they'll come even into your life. Women with their crinky hair, their dancin' eyes an' feet, their smiles an' their mischief, their altogether 'stonishing ways, that, bad or good, sort o' paralyze a man."

"But—"

"They be wonderful tryin', too, an' 'zasperatin'; for they'll bear no contrel."

Davy's voice faltered, the periods of his talk became detached, stopped altogether. Changing the pipe over from one side to the other of his mouth, he smoked in silence for some minutes, whilst he dived into the recesses of his mind.

Paul allowed to him the time. He knew that, ultimately, the sought-for subject would be forthcoming, and any attempt to quicken the search would but add to its delay.

As memory freshened, Davy began his story slowly, but proceeding, he carried it forward with the ease of one long familiar with his burden.

"You don't remember my Mary—no, I s'pose not—but you can see her ev'ry time you look at my gran'—no, my great-gran'daughter, Sally. I wouldn't let none o' 'em have my Mary's name—the sound of it gives me now, after all these years, a funny feelin' in my heart."

"I've heard my grandfather speak of your wife."

"She was—well, she was just Mary. The close knittin' of man and woman, as comes about when, day in and day out, they're together, is wonderful. There was only one thing for which we ever fell out. She was always lookin' at girls—specially pretty girls—to see if one took notice o' me. The very name of a girl drew her to 'zasperation. You couldn't remember Lizbeth Richards, neither?"

Before Paul had time to reply, he answered for him: "No, to be sure not.

"Well, she was a girl always up to some devilment, a mischievous, blue-eyed girl. I didn't know then, though. I knew afterwards, that people had been talking of her an' me—but women always will gossip; their lungs is as big as bellows, and tho better the women are, the worse they talk. But if Lizbeth sinned, 'twere in so pretty a way that all men held her sins less black that the tellin' o' 'em, and thought 'em best left hidden than talked into sight. Even Mary was hard on her, but 'twasn't no use tryin' to alter her. A woman can't be nobody but herself.

"Well, Lizbeth, she come in one day: 'So yer off, Davy?' says she. I was startin' with the boats to the North. An' because she looked at me with a tear in her eye, or just because I was young, an' a fool, an' flattered, or because I couldn't help it, or because she wished it, or for some reason or the want of any, I put my arm around her waist and gave her a kiss. There was no harm in it, Mister Paul. I declare to the Almighty there was no harm in it."

And as the young man saw that Davy wanted comforting, he, at the risk of perjuring himself, filled the pause with: "I quite understand."

"An' just then, Mary, who I thought was in the next room, she came in. She was all a-trembly an' was skeart as I had never seen her before. She seemed not to know what she was doing—a sob, a cruel, deep sob—it sounded like a cry, strangled in the throat—came from her lips. But it seemed to me Mary was makin' a strange fuss over so small a matter, though the most violent feelin' in the world is one woman's hatred o' another."

"And Lizbeth?"

"Oh, Lizbeth, she went, 'Mary, Mary,' I said softly, as though I wanted her to know 'twas nothing. But she wouldn't understand. She dashed herself against her own temper as though she was just mad."

"I don't wonder."

"And a hard look came into Mary's eyes. I watched the color thread her cheeks with red and tremble down to the white o' her neck. It most seemed as if power to forgive had gone from her.

"I started to embrace her.

"'Don't you touch me, and your arm just from Lizbeth's waist!'

"She went back a few steps. Seemed to me my heart was bein' tore ont o' my breast and the pain o' it was unbearable.

"'What made you do it? Why did you act so cruel to me?' she asked.

"'I didn't mean no harm; 'twas no more than—than—' I stared at her dumb, findin' no words small enough to tell her in. At last: 'I've knowed Lizbeth ever since she was a slip o' a child,' I says.

"'Do you know all the things folks say about her?' she said. 'Do you reckon that if it had been me that had been actin' that way, you wouldn't be so hasty to forgive? 'Twould be a narrow heart that couldn't find room for anger.'

"'Sure you can't be afraid of Lizbeth?'

"'What for should I be afraid? It's not Lizbeth that my heart is hard ag'in; I reckon it's all one to me what Lizbeth does. 'Tisn't of Lizbeth I think—'tis of you.'

"'She won't never come between us ag'in.'

"'Between us—no, that she shan't,' and Mary laughed.

"I stood an' looked at her, a-feelin' bitter in my heart. 'Tis the way o' man to be shy o' ownin' himself in the wrong.

"'I never cared for any other woman same as I do for you, so what do you want to punish me for?'

"'I don't want to punish.'

"'Most women would forgive.'

"'I'm no judge o' others,' she says, with that obstinate way o' woman as drives men wild.

"'I'm goin', Mary. Do you mean to send me away in anger? Be sure what you are about. Kiss me just afore I go,' I said.

"'And take the taste o' Lizbeth from your lips?' she answered.

"'Don't you see'—David turned in vehemence to his listener—'that I had to pluck up a spirit after that, so I took her face between my hands—her eyes didn't flinch, she was so hard—as hard—as only a soft woman can be. I caught her to me, an' tho' she struggled, I kissed her.'"

Davy took off his hat in act of reverence. "I thank the Almighty."

"'The boats will be off unless I go now, but I'll come back to you, Mary, an' things'll be the same as ever?' I asked.

"She sort o' coiled herself together, but said nothin', tho' she followed me to the door. She had a shawl over her head, and her dark hair, blowed loose by the wind, was tangled about her head and face—she looked like nothing but a child, holding another child—mine—in her arms.

"The boys was callin' me, so I hurried down the path and away to the shore. I listened, listened, and didn't quite know for what. From up along came a cry that sounded like 'Davy! Davy!' 'Twas as though some one were terr'ble put out. I was most at the shore then, and the others was tellin' me to come, an' I was always slow to see what I should do—slow in the uptake, as Mary used to say.

"If was May when we went north, and June we was there, and July we was there, too.

"How I longed to come back!" Davy dropped for a moment his narrative to question his companion. "Have you ever felt bo'sn's'ck? It's like—like—like nothin' else but a sort o' mother feelin', I guess, somethin' stretches out its arms an' calls to you. I was fair crazy with joy o' life the mornin' we got back; I can't explain; but you, you're young, an' maybe you'll understand.

"I came up that hill"—he stretched an indicating hand. "It was early when we got in, so I made my way up here without seein' any o' the boys. The air—I took a fill o' it as I stood at that gate—was crisp yet soft; it tasted cold upon my lips, like a draught of water from our well.

"A curious, holy feeling seemed to rest about the place; the sun thread the mist with strings o' gold, and great gray gulls played over the creepin' waves. I'd brought home all my share of the fish, and was countin' what I could buy for Mary an' the little ones. Ostrich feathers! Women love ostrich feathers—meringues, and zinc kettles for the bread. I'd thought o' 'em all. But when I got to the door I was afraid—sudden-like a feeling o' fear gripped me. I was most terr'ble afraid. My hand grew cold an' clammy, my breath come short, I seemed not to see the way, an' disremember how I got in."

Davy paused.

"And then?" Paul suggested.

"Well, then I learnt what misery was, and that what I don't know of it 'tain't much wuth knowing. Ah!" he added, with a sigh, "one may live to be very old, but never too old to laugh at memory."

Paul, stirred to interest, had given, from time to time, by attentive eyes and inclinations of the head, that human punctuation which arrests, and without which a recital becomes but a stringing together of meaningless words. He now asked, anxiously:

"Mary—what of Mary?"

Davy rapped the ashes of his long empty pipe, then looked at him whilst the easy tears of cherished grief trickled down his cheeks.

"I was too late even to see her; but it won't be long now afore I do."

WOULD NOT ACCEPT.

New York, Oct. 3.—The Evening Post yesterday published a cablegram from Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university, saying he could not leave Princeton to take a seat in the United States senate.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLOTHES!

When we speak of these styles for dressy young women we don't mean merely clothes in young ladies' sizes!

Our "Young Ladies' Specials" are intended to be worn by women of any age who are young enough to be interested in "Smartness" in apparel!

Our Young Ladies' Specials are cut in shorter waist lines and the sizes run from 30 to 36, bust measure.

"A WOMAN IS AS OLD AS SHE FEELS!"

She can be sixty years old, and look like forty if she feels like forty and she may be forty years old and look like sixty if she feels like sixty!

The clothes she wears have a great deal to do with it!

Moral: Wear Clothes that are youthful looking—not bedecked with a lot of "Ginger bread" trimmings, but that are "smart"—and full of "character"—our clothes are that kind—they have the style—individuality—in fact that "something" that makes them look "different"!

And yet, our prices are very moderate!—you can get splendidly Tailored Suits at $19.50—made with that same care that characterizes all of our productions—in plain shades or novelty effects—full $25.00 value by every standard known!

TWIN CITIES ASKED TO HELP

Mayor Cullum Writes City Councils About Reduced Fares.

Following the campaign that has been started in Duluth for reduced fare for the school children and laborers on the street railway, during certain hours of the day, Mayor Cullum has written to the common council at St. Paul and Minneapolis suggesting that a board of commissioners be appointed, comprised of representatives from the three cities, to confer with the street railway officials in regard to the matter. Mayor Cullum believes that it will have better effect to have the three cities urge the reduced fare matter simultaneously.

The city council recently passed a resolution for the appointment of a council committee to confer with the street railway company officials to see if a reduction could be had. The committee has had one or two meetings and is at present gathering some information on the subject from other cities where the street railway lines give the people certain concessions in the way of reduced fares during certain hours of the day. The committee reports good progress in its work, but claims that it has nothing definite to report just at the present time.

OUTLOOK ENCOURAGING.

N. F. Hugo Candidate for Speakership, Returns From Trip Through State.

Representative N. F. Hugo, who has just returned from a trip through Southern Minnesota and to the Twin Cities, is very much encouraged over the outlook for his landing the speakership of the house next winter. He is confident of victory. L. H. Johnson of Hennepin county and R. J. Wells of Wilkin county are candidates for the place, and Nolan of Mower county and A. J. Rockne of Goodhue county are mentioned in the same connection. Mr. Hugo expects 50 per cent of the old members and nearly 50 per cent of the new ones, this number having practically pledged their support already. The Duluth man claims to be of the opinion that A. L. Cole will be the next governor.

VIOLATION OF GAME LAW IS THE CHARGE.

St. Paul, Oct. 3.—Two men in charge of a Shevlin-Carpenter lumber camp near Grand Rapids and one teamster at the camp were arrested this week by Game Warden James Beaty for shooting or having in possession deer out of season. In his report which he sent to S. F. Fullerton he stated that he found a part of a deer in the camp and also two deer on the company's wagon. He brought the teamster with him to Big Fork, but the other two men would not submit to arrest, and at the time of writing he was about to start for the camp with a deputy sheriff to get the men.

FRIENDS OF SENATOR NELSON UNEASY OVER OVATION OF JACOBSON

Loftus is a sincere admirer of La Follette—not only an admirer, but a friend. Loftus' friends are not with Nelson, and if it really comes to a showdown they might cast their lot to secure the election of Jacobson. These are only speculations going the rounds, and like footprints in the sand they may lead somewhere if followed up.

A glance at the program of the Republican speakers' bureau shows that Nelson is to be as big a factor in the campaign—as far as speeches go—as Jacobson. It is rather unusual to see a United States senator so active, but it is urged that Senator Nelson's friends are afraid that Jacobson will get too much of a start to stop him.

The following program has been arranged by the Republican state central committee:

Wednesday—Nelson at Fertile, Cole and A. O. Eberhart at Fairmont, Jacobson at Wells.

Thursday—Nelson at Thief River Falls, Cole and Eberhart at Heron Lake, Jacobson at Mankato.

Friday—Nelson at Lake Park, Cole and Jacobson at Windom; Senator Moses E. Clapp at Winona.

Saturday—Nelson at Hawley, Cole and Jacobson at St. James, Clapp at Rochester.

The Democratic committee has appointed Prof. E. P. Freeman of Minneapolis as chairman of the speakers' bureau. It is announced that the entire state ticket, with the exception of A. E. Aarness, the candidate for auditor, will take the stump. Later they expect to have John Lind, Senator Baldwin of Duluth, T. T. Hudson and J. R. Bennett of St. Cloud, H. L. Buck and L. L. Brown of Winona, Elmar Hodale of New Ulm, D. W. Lawler, Pierce Butler, Corporation Attorney J. C. Michael and County Attorney T. R. Kane of St. Paul, on the stump.

Cole's managers, realizing that their candidate is no speaker, have had quite a time to bolster him up with real campaigners. At the Auditorium in Minneapolis, last Saturday evening, Cole's reception was half-hearted in comparison to that which the other speakers received. He made a short address, which was very negative in character. It is true there were a few cheers, but the house was packed with friends. There were few of the rabble there, and many of the choice seats were filled by ladies, whose enthusiasm did not get get farther than the Chautauqua salute.

Johnson's reception at Northfield was one of the most hearty since the campaign opened. While the district is so strongly Republican that only two Democrats are running, he was given an ovation and a rousing farewell at the station. Everyone wanted to meet him, and it took two hands to greet all the people who lined the streets as he passed down to the depot.

• • •

There are demands from every quarter of the state for a Johnson meeting. The speaker's bureau realizes that it is almost impossible for the governor to make all the towns, and a wall of disappointment goes up when notice is given that Johnson cannot be everywhere at once. From now on Governor Johnson will be the busiest man in thes tate. He is booked right up to election day with very few breathing spells in between.

• • •

Special orders No. 2 have just emerged from J. T. McCleary's headquarters. Another letter has just been addressed to W. S. Hammond, his opponent, in which McCleary desires to meet him in open debate. While the letters are written with one eye on Hammond, the other is on the people. The letters are written in duplicate, and one is well on its way to the press before the other has ben dispatched to Hammond. McCleary is a clever campaigner.

• • •

"It takes a snowdrift to make a government," declared Congressman J. Adam Bede in St. Paul the other day. There are many who will agree with the congressman that it takes a slight frost to make a hot campaign.

The hearing on commodity rates will be resumed Thursday, Oct. 6. J. J. Hill is expected to appear on the stand during the hearings, and those in charge of the hearing for the shippers declare that some startling evidence will be presented. The intimations are that it will be shown that the railroads have a "yellow dog" fund, which they have been doggedly employing for several years in Minnesota, on behalf of the "interests." Some interesting lists of the beneficiaries have been drawn up and names may pop out. At all events the shippers want to lift the lid and show that if the railroads were able to pay immense sums to prevent unfavorable legislation in this state, they can stand a cut in their revenues.

Few people appreciate the importance of the rate hearings before the commission. At first the hearings appeared very prosaic, but within the last few weeks they have opened up avenues of investigation which has quite overcome the commission. One who is behind the investigation, and who is formulating much of the evidence, declares that before the hearings have been completed it will be the largest case ever heard before any commission in any of the states, and more money will be involved in the outcome than in any case heard by the interstate commerce commission. Every railroad in Minnnesota, he declares, is on trial.

At one of the recent hearings a smile went the rounds when Chairman Mills stated that he had drawn the subpoena for J. J. Hill for election day. This little mistake nullified the instrument, and J. J. Hill left for New York with impunity. His lawyer answered, in reply to the subpoena, that it "was not legal." The commission regretted the mistake, and offered to get Mr. Hill as a witness as soon as possible. Rough weather ahead for the commission.

NORTHERN MINNESOTA SHOWN TO POSSESS LAND OF GREATEST FERTILITY

company the party was shown through the sawmill, which was being run to its fullest capacity. A supper was served at the Hotel Markham, after which a "smoker" was tendered at the Masonic lodge rooms.

P. J. Russell presided at the "smoker" and in a neat speech welcomed the visitors to the city, after which he called on Prof. Boss, of the agricultural college. Prof. Boss stated that he had been more than surprised at what he had seen on the trip and that he had been shown exhibits of corn and other cerials that had been a great surprise to him. He had visited other portions of the north half of the state, about ten years ago, and had been impressed that, owing to the stony condition of the soil, it would hardly ever be fit for agricultural purposes. He had greatly changed his views by the present trip. He had examined some of the soil and was greatly impressed with the possibilities contained therein. He believed that the soil was capable of producing, if properly handled, as good if not better crops than any other portion of the state.

Senator Clapp was presented. He had seen the exhibit of corn, grain and vegetables shown in the lower room of the building and desired to congratulate the people of the city on the showing made. He believed that the future of any community depended upon its agricultural resources. There had for many years been a natural prejudice against the north half of the state relative to agricultural possibilities on account of being pine lands. He had been greatly pleased at the progress made along this line of late years. He thought drainage of the lands the overshadowing question. He told of the measure adopted in congress last winter to appropriate money for a topographical survey of the Indian lands of the state. The people should be satisfied to adopt agriculture as a business. He stated that arrangements had already been made to place the exhibits shown the party in cold storage and ship them to St. Paul, where they would be preserved until next winter, when they would be used in the legislature as an exemplification of the fact that agricultural products of the very best kind could be raised on the so-called pine lands. There was a wrong impression that the grant of swamp lands made to the state was for the purpose of internal improvements. The people had adopted a constitutional amendment whereby the benefits went to the state school fund and certain public institutions, for the reason that there was a popular belief that too much had been granted to railroads of the state. He urged co-operation with the people of the southern part of the state, and suggested that private drainage be taken up as an evidence that private interests would be benefited as well as the whole state, thus doing away with the antagonism of the past as to sectional benefits being the aim of drainage. Institute development coupled with state drainage, and hearty support would result. A plan should be worked out in the legislature and all interests unified, then there would no longer exist antagonism. The men on this trip were all representative of the interests that desire development and they would carry back with them intensified knowledge and are anxious to cooperate on the basis of the common good.

A moonlight on the lake in a large launch terminatedd the proceedings of the night.

The members of the party are as follows:

Duluth Commercial Club—A. H. Comstock, W. A. McGonagle, H. V. Eva.

Minneapolis Commercial Club—B. F. Nelson, W. H. Heffelfinger, W. G. Nye, George Partridge, Fred R. Salisbury, H. R. Yerxa.

St. Paul Jobbers' Association—George M. Tibbs, P. W. Herzog, C. W. Gordon, J. H. Beek, George Sommers.

Senator Moses E. Clapp, Congressman J. Adam Bede, Congressman Fred C. Stevens, Andrew Boss, E. W. Randall; John Abercrombie and G. A. Ralph, state drainage engineers; Frank Clague, speaker of the Minnesota house; Representatives Ole Peterson and John F. Landeen; Peter E. Hanson, secretary of state; Senator A. M. Hayes.

J. M. Hannaford and Thomas Cooper of the Northern Pacific, M. J. Costello of the Great Northern, W. H. Gemmel and W. H. Strachan of the Minnesota & International.

CASS LAKE MAN GETS NOMINATION

For County Auditor of Cass County on a Recount.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 3.—The canvassing board of Cass county, which has been making a recount at Walker of the returns of the recent primary election, finished its labors Monday night, and a telephone message from there states that in the contest between L. P. Byhre of Cass Lake and C. E. Griffith of Walker for the Republican nomination for county auditor, Byhre was nominated by a majority of nine votes.

When the board adjourned from its regular duties, it was announced that Griffith had been nominated for auditor, by a comfortable majority. Byhre was not content with the returns as made by the canvassing board and instituted proceedings before Judge McClenahan, in Bemidji, with the result that the judge issued an order for the board to reconvene immediately and recount the votes, the showing made by Mr. Byhre being of such a nature that he could not do otherwise.

In his affidavit to the court Mr. Byhre alleged that the returns from several precincts were not counted, although properly returned, and that he was thus deprived of the nomination which he rightfully won. He alleged that on the face of the returns as made by the canvasing board Mr. Griffith was given a majority of three, whereas if the properly returned vote had been canvassed he would have been declared the nominee by a majority of sixty-seven votes. The affidavit also alleges that the affiant was informed that there were no returns filed with the board from the precinct of Leech Lake Dam, but that the board proceeded to canvess a pretended vote, claiming that there were eighteen votes cast, seventeen of which were for Griffith and one for Byhre; also that several precincts did not send returns, although a vote was cast.

Messengers were sent out for the missing returns, and the result of the recount of the vote is to give Byhre the nomination, which is equivalent to an election, as the Republican nominees in Cass county have no Democratic opposition.

GIRL FALLS INTO WELL

At East Grand Forks and Almost Drowns Before Rescued.

East Grand Forks, Minn., Oct. 3.—Millie Anstitt, 10-year-old daughter of Philip Anstitt, had a narrow escape from being drowned in a well. The water in the well was so deep that the little girl was barely able to keep her nose above it by standing on her tiptoes.

Neighbors heard her cries for help, and, with members of the family, tried to rescue the girl with a rope. They pulled her partly up three times, but each time the girl became exhausted and was obliged to loosen her hold. The third time she fell back she was so exhausted that it was seen that she could no longer keep above the water. A young man named Constans, who happened along, slid down the rope and managed to fasten it beneath the child's arms, and she was raised to the surface just in time to save her life. The rope again was lowered and Constans was raised to the surface.

AN OFFICER IS KILLED

And Alderman Wounded in Hand by Mob at Mobile.

Crowd Was in Search of Negro Who Assaulted Girl.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 3.—Roy Hoyle, a special officer of the Mobile & Ohio railroad, and one of the most widely known and best liked men in this vicinity, was fatally shot, dying at 1:30 this morning, and Alderman Sidney Lyons, chairman of the city council of Mobile, was slightly wounded in the hand last night during a fight at the county jail between deputy sheriffs and a crowd of men, determined to capture Dick Robinson, a young negro.

The negro, who is only 17 years old, yesterday attacked Ruth, the 12-year old daughter of Blorent Sossman. The girl was passing a secluded spot not far from her home, when she was attacked. Later she was found lying unconscious by the roadside and was taken to her home. Detectives were placed on the track of the negro and within three hours he was captured. He was taken before th egirl, who at once identified him. Deputy Sheriff Fach, knowing that the negro's life would be taken by a mob brought him into this city, caused him to be conveyed to a station several miles up the Mobile & Ohio road. He was not taken to the jail at all, and was at least eight miles from the city when the mob which determined to have him approached the building. There have been several assaults upon white women within the last few weeks and the news of this latest outrage caused intense excitement.

Early in the evening crowds gathered in the downtown streets. The crowd was harangued by several speakers, who urged them to take the life of the negro if he could be found, and in a short time the entire crowd was on the march for the jail. Sheriff Powers met the leaders of the mob and informed them that the man they were seeking was not in the jail and never had been brought there. He offered to let anybody whom he personally knew to pass through the pail to satisfy the crowd of the truth of the statement. About forty men walked through the corridors, some of them returning and assuring the members of the mob that the man was not there.

While several men, including Hoyle and Lyons, were still in the jail, a portion of the crowd seized a telephone pole which had been blown down in the recent storm and dashed it against the closed part of a double door, one half of which was open. The door fell with a crash and almost instantly a shot came from a revolver in the hands of a man standing in the gate.

At once the members of the mob commenced a fusillade. Not more than a dozen men took part in the firing, and as the shots rang out there was a stampede on the part of the crowd for shelter. The mob was widely scattered, and in a few seconds Alderman Lyons, who had been on the inside of the jail, came out and holding up his hands, from which the blood was streaming, announced that he had been shot, and that Hoyle had received a bullet through the left lung. The fact that Hoyle had been shot, while looking through the jail in order to ascertain if the negro was there, took all the fight out of the mob, and for the most part it dispersed quietly.

The crowd later received information that Robinson had been taken from the city to Eight Mile Point, on the Mobile & Ohio railroad, where he was placed on the train and carried still further. As soon as this was known, fully 300 men boarded the Mobile & Ohio passenger train, leaving here at 8:25 p. m., with the expressed intention of lynching the negro if they could get him. Governor Jenks, who was in the city last night, at once took active steps to prevent any further disorder, and ordered that three militia companies be rushed to the city. He called upon the Louisville & Nashville railroad for a special train to carry the troops.

Shortly after 10 o'clock last night a second mob went to the jail, convince Robinson was there, and intending to have him at any cost. Sheriff Powers declared that Robinson was not there. The mob demanded the right to search, and this was granted. Eight men entered the jail, and after an inspection, came out and announced their failure to find the negro. The crowd was incredulous, and was becoming unruly, when Capt. Frank Lumsden made a speech which caused the angry citizens to disperse.

The crowd which went on the train in search of the negro returned at 2 a. m. without finding him.

A Reasonable Plea For The Stomach

If Your Stomach is Lacking in Digestive Power, Why Not Help the Stomach Do Its Work—Especially When It Costs Nothing to Try ?

Not with drugs, but with a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach? Scientific analysis shows that digestion requires pepsin, nitrogenous ferments, and the secretion of hydrochloric acid. When your food fails to digest, it is proof positive that some of these agents are lacking in your digestive apparatus.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain nothing but these natural elements necessary to digestion and when placed at work in the weak stomach and small intestines, supply what these organs need. They stimulate the gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been subjected to critical chemical tests at home and abroad and are found to contain nothing but natural digestives.

London, 9th Aug., 1905.

I have analyzed most carefully a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets (which I bought myself at a city chemist's shop for the purpose), manufactured by the F. A. Stuart Co., Temple Chambers London, E. C., and have to report that I cannot find any trace of vegetable or mineral poisons. Knowing the ingredients of the tablets, I am of opinion that they are admirably adaptable for the purpose for which they are intended.

(Signed) John R. Brooke, F. I. C., F. C. S.

There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Their composition is commonly known among physicians, as is shown by the recommendations of 40,000 licensed physicians in the United States and Canada. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, water brash, insomnia, loss of appetite, melancholia, constipation, dysentery and kindred diseases originating from improper dissolution and assimilation of foods, because they are thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are at once a safe and a powerful remedy, one grain of these tablets being strong enough (by test) to digest 3,000 grains of steak, eggs and other foods. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

Ask your druggist for a fifty cent package or send to us direct for a free trial sample package and you will be surprised at the result. F. A. Stuart, Co., 64 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

TWO MINERS MEET DEATH

One at the Adams and the Other at the Hartley.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 3.—Alex Maki, a miner, 34 years of age and married, met death in the end of a drift from No. 5 shaft at the Adams mine last evening. He was buried under tons of dirt and broken timbers as a result of a cave-in that occurred so suddenly that he had no time to escape. Maki leaves a widow and three children, who reside on the Fayal location.

Solomon Hakkanen, a trammer, had a narrow escape. He was with Maki a minute before the accident, but walked down the drift to get some water.

The body of Maki was quickly recovered. Death must have resulted instantly, for the skull was fractured and the body crushed by the immense weight to which it had been subjected. Maki was a Finlander who had resided in this country six and one-half years.

Chisholm, Minn., Oct. 3.—Samuel Easola, a Finn, 23 years of age, was accidentally killed at the Hartley mine, near Chisholm, yesterday. Easola was attempting to repair a steam shovel beam, and while stooping under the chains of the crane, one of his fellow-employes accidentally touched the crane throttle and young Easola was caught between the chains. His life was crushed out in an instant before the machinery could be stopped. The head was badly cut and he had numerous bruises on his body. The body was taken to Dowling's undertaking rooms.

The funeral will be arranged later by the Finnish society, of which he was a member.

THREE LIVES LOST

By Burning of Theater at Odessa Where Jewish Company Played.

Odessa, Oct. 3.—The local theater, where the Jewish company played, has been entirely destroyed by fire. A professor and two students perished in the flames.

Police patrols and convoys are now supplied with rifles, in addition to revolvers and sabres. Governor General Kaulbars has ordered the guards on duty at public buildings to have their rifles always loaded.

On an estate in the Karbora district, a band of peasants have burned a large quantity of wheat belonging to Princessa Vlazemsky.

At an estate on the Pentchero district of Kherson province, peasants, at the point of revolvers, extorted $1,500 from the landlord, and shared the money among the famishing villagers of the neighborhood.

JUDGE PARKER MAKES A REPLY

To a Wanton Attack on Courts by William R. Hearst.

New York, Oct. 3.—Judge Alton B. Parker last night gave out a statement in reply to an attack made upon him by William R. Hearst in a recent campaign speech. In his address Mr. Hearst said that Judge Parker had appeared in an election case on the side of election criminals in the court he formerly graced and there argued against and secured a reversal of an opinion he had formerly rendered.

Judge Parker's statement follows:

"For something more than two years now I have submitted without reply to the wanton assaults of William R. Hearst. I should probably pay no more attention to his insulting and maliciously false speech of last evening than I have to his other attacks, were it not that the necessity and intended inference of his speech constituted an attack upon a great court, a court with a membership that is not surpassed in this or any other country. While that court is so well grounded in the confidence and the affections of the people as to need no defense from any such attack, the opportunity is afforded to warn the people that a man having such conceptions of the judiciary as will permit him to make such an attack ought never to be permitted to name men for the bench, as it is said Hearst contemplates doing under the Murphy-Hearst deal.

"I will refer also to one other statement made by Hearst. After stating the fact that I had appeared in the McClellan-Hearst election contest and made arguments therein, he said as the reason that prompted me to do it, that 'he did this because the corporations that employed him as their corporation attorney wanted him to do it and paid him to do it.'

"This statement about me, like many others of Hearst's that have been brought to my attention, is wholly false. Neither I nor any member of my firm was employed by any corporation or paid by any corporation, directly or indirectly, one dollar for the services we rendered in that contest. We were retined by Mayor McClellan, but declined to receive from him or from any one else any compensation whatever for our services. We rendered these services because we believed it to be a nigh public duty to prevent Hearst from depriving the majority of the people of the services of their duly elected candidate, George B. McClellan."

KOREAN COURT INTRIGUE

Shown Up at Trial of Young Korean for Murder.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 3.—Interesting light has been thrown on the Korean court intrigues at the trial of Kim Chen Chang, the young Korean who attempted to murder the Korean exminister of finance, Yi Chi Yong, at the Hotel De France here, Jan. 13 last, by stabbing him eleven times with a knife. Kim Chen Chang claims he followed Yi Chi Chang from Korea to Russia in order to rid his fatherland of its worst enemy. He accuses Yi Chi Yong of wholesale embezzlement.

The hearing has been postponed owing to the absence of Foreign Minister Lamsdorff, M. Hartwig, now Russian minister to Persia, and other Russian diplomats by whom Kin Cheng Chang hopes to prove that Yi Chi Yong came to Russia in an attempt to sell out the Korean emperor and that he was implicated in the Yalu river concessions and other land scandals.

REPORTS DENIED.

Paris, Oct. 3.—It is authoritatively stated that the reports that exchanges of views have taken place between the powers, looking to the further postponement of the second peace conference at The Hague beyond next spring are untrue. The French government also takes the occasion to deny that it has protested against the presence of a representative of the Vatican at the conference.

WHEAT HAS AN ADVANCE

Prices Are Higher at Close Despite All Bearish Influence.

Flax is Fairly Active and Closes Higher in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 3.—Despite good weather, fairly heavy receipts and lower cables, wheat advanced during the day in the American markets and closed stronger. During the early part of the morning it was weak, but a good demand developed toward the close. Chicago and the Southwestern markets closed strongest. Liverpool closed 5/8d to 3/4d lower, Paris 1/4c lower and Antwerp unchanged.

The December option closed 1/8c higher in Duluth and New York, 1/4-3/8c in Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City, 1/4c in Minneapolis and unchanged in Winnipeg. The October option closed 1/8c higher in Winnipeg. The May option closed 1/4c higher in Duluth and Kansas City, 1/4-3/8c in Chicago, 1/8c in Minneapolis and New York and 3/4c in St. Louis.

Corn had a slightly stronger tone, the December option in Chicago closing 1/8c higher. It closed 1/4d to 1/2d lower in Liverpool. December oats closed 1/8c higher.

Car receipts at Duluth were 388 against 208 last year, and at Minneapolis 409 against 681 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 797 against 889 last year. Chicago received 34 against 26 last year. Winnipeg received 283 against 416 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,161,000 bus, last year, 1,457,000 bus. Shipments 618,000 bus, last year 593,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 833,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 601,000 bus, last year, 658,000 bus. Shipments 325,000 bus, last year 548,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 209,000 bus.

Wheat was rather quiet at the opening of the Duluth market, but trading became steadier toward the close. December wheat opened 1/8c lower at 74 3/4c, declined to 74 3/8c by 10:10, rallied to 74 3/4c by 10:55, declined to 74 5/8c by 11:16 and rallied to 75c by 11:10, closing at that price, a gain of 1/8c over yesterday. May wheat opened 1/8c lower at 78 3/8c, advanced to 78 4/c, declined to 78 1/4c, rallied to 78 3/8c fell off again to 78 3/8c, rallied to 78 3/4c and closed at that price, a gain of 1/8c over yesterday. Durum wheat closed 1/4c lower and cash spring wheat was selling on a basis of 1/2c over the December price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was fairly active and had a stronger tone throughout the session. The cables were higher, London closing 1/8c higher and Antwerp 1/2@3/4c up. October flax opened 1/8c higher at $1.12, advanced to $1.12 3/8, declined to $1.12, rallied to $1.12 3/8 and declined to $1.12 1/2, closing at that price, a gain of 1c over yesterday. November flax opened 1/2c higher at $1.12, advanced to $1.12 3/8, declined to $1.11 3/4, rallied to $1.12, fell off to $1.11 3/4, rallied to $1.12 1/4, and closed at that price, a gain of 3/4c over yesterday. December flax opened 3/4c higher at $1.10 1/2, advanced to $1.11, declined to $1.10 1/4, rallied to $1.10 3/4 and closed at that price, a gain of 3/4c over yesterday. May flax opened 1/2c higher at $1.14, advanced to $1.14 3/8, fell off to $1.14 1/2 and closed at that price, a gain of 1c over yesterday.

October oats and oats to arrive closed 1/2c higher, rye 1c higher and barley unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Weaker on Profit-Taking by the Longs.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Renewed profit taking by local longs caused moderate weakness today in the wheat market here. News of the day was favorable to the bears, cables being lower and receipts in the Northwest fairly liberal. Excellent weather for the movement in the Northwest also tended to weaken the market. December opened 1/8c lower at 75 1/4c and after selling at 75 3/8c the price declined to 75c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 831 cars against 548 cars last week and 936 cars a year ago.

During the last hour the market became strong on active buying by pit traders who were actuated by reports of liberal sales for export account at the seaboard and at gulf points. The December delivery advanced to 75 5/8@3/4c. The market closed strong with prices at the top, final quotations on December being up 1/4@3/8c at 75 5/8@3/4c.

The corn market was slightly easier on selling by commission houses. Clear weather and larger receipts than expected were the main depressing influences. December opened a shade to 1/8c lower at 42 3/8c to 43 3/4c, and sold at 42 7/8c. Local receipts were 169 cars with 95 of contract grade.

The late strength of wheat was a help to corn and caused a firmer feeling in that market. Closing quotations were at the highest point of the day, December being up 1/8c at 43c.

Cash houses were quite free sellers of oats. As a result the market was easy. December opened unchanged at 34 1/2c and sold off to 33 7/8@34c. Local receipts were 177 cars.

Provisions were steady because of a 5c advance in the price of live hogs. Trading was quiet. January pork was a shade lower at $13.35. Lard was up a shade at $7.87 1/2. Ribs were unchanged at $7.15.

Close—Wheat: Dec., 75 5/8@3/4c; May, 79 1/8@3/4c. Corn—Dec., 43c; May, 43 3/8@1/2c. Pork—Jan., $13.42 1/2. Lard—Oct., $8.92 1/2; Jan., $7.90@7.92 1/2. Ribs—Oct., $8.25; Jan., $7.17 1/2. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Until the Northwest reaches a point where stock at Minneapolis stop decreasing in October, there is nothing that we can see on which to sell wheat short, especially on the breaks. A certain element in the trade tried short selling on the break this morning and paid dear for it, taking most of the short wheat back on quite a good advance before the close. Any little nervousness there was over the possibilities of yesterday's purchases by a leader coming on the market on a further decline soon passed away and that wheat is regarded now as firmly held by strong people. Large houses had good resting orders to take the wheat on the dip. Would not get long on the bulges but take the wheat on the oversold spots and be ready to sell on the swells.

Corn: Bears found some encouragement in the 1/4@3/8c decline in Liverpool and fine weather all over the states where the crop is being matured. There was some reports from the west about more liberal offerings. Some long corn came on the market through brokers in the first hour. This was offset by very good buying orders in the hands of commission people. Until corn raisers show more of a disposition to sell than at present there is not likely to be any decided down turn in prices.

Oats: Much the same thing occurred in oats as in corn, where the resting orders were more than sufficient to take the offerings. The Northwest where the largest yields of the year are recorded, is not pressing oats for sale. Think investors will be quick to buy the May at any concession in price.

New York: Prominent Duluth export house writes: "We sold New York red winter wheat today to continent at 7 marks advance from last sale. They need a lot of wheat to replace the rye shortage alone in Germany and they are going to take the cheapest wheats which are the winter and durum for that trade."

Treasury Balances.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $250,133,051; gold, $122,660,608; gold certificates, $46,609,500.

THE PRODUCE MARKET.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

MOROSOFF IDENTIFIED

As the Man Who Shot and Killed Gen. Rinkevich.

Askhabod, Russia, Oct. 3.—The man who shot and instantly killed Gen. Rinkevich at the trial Monday of the second section of the troops who mutinied here in June, has been identified as an engineer named Morosoff. He is a leader of the revolutionists' organization which was in almost complete control of this region during last winter and to which Count Witte was compelled to yield and cancel the sentence of M. Sokoloff, an engineer, who was condemned to death during the railroad strike at Samara last winter. The ultimatum of the railway union in that matter was signed by Morosoff.

"Don't take a musket to kill a fly." A very small ad. is for a very small service.

DECLINES IN STOCKS

Late Breaks in Reading Made Close of Market Weak.

General Drift Downward to Lowest Point of the Day.

New York, Oct. 3.—Fractional gains were general at the opening of the stock market and exceeded a half in St. Paul, Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, United States Steel preferred and Lead. Atchinson was a feature with opening sales of 6,000 shares at 108 3/8 and 108 compared with 107 1/2 last night. Colorado Fuel advanced 1 1/4.

The market wavered for some time after the opening owing to the realizing in Atchison and some of the other grain carriers. Atchison eventually sold under yesterdays closing, but the general market gathered strength and rose strongly. Speculation was wide, a number of low priced railroad stocks figuring in the dealings. Great Northern preferred improved 2 3/4, Colorado Fuel 2 1/8, Rock Island preferred, Kansas City Southern preferred and Colorado Southern and the second preferred 1/2 to 1 3/4, and Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Rock Island, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred, Lackawanna, Cleveland C. S. St. Louis, Brooklyn Transit, Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Distillers' Securities 1 to 1 1/4.

Atchison was marked up to 108, but the announcement of a 2 1/2 per cent half-yearly dividend brought out a flood of stock from holders who had hoped for 3 per cent. The price ran off abruptly to 104 3/4, carrying the general list with it to a fraction under last night. Northern Pacific lost 2 3/8, United States Rubber 1 3/4, American Ice 1 3/8 and Atlantic Coast Line and Sugar a point. Before the reaction Colortdo & Southern had risen 2 3/8 and the first preferred, Iowa Central preferred and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie 1 1/8 to 1 1/2. Determined support rallied the market, but Atchison continued to move feverishly. Bonds were firm.

Reading was marked up to 154 1/2 as an offset to the liquidation in Atchison. Canadian Pacific jumped 3 3/8 on the declaration of an extra dividend of 1 per cent. The rest of the list did not rally with energy in the face of the weakness in Atchison, which had sold down to 103 7/8 by 1 o'clock.

After noon operations in the stock market were in the main interesting. The general list continued to ignore the special movements that were designed to stimulate trading. The Harriman stocks were bid up strongly, Southern Pacific touching 95 and Atchison rallied a large fraction. Meantime Reading was driven back to about where it ended yesterday, and Canadian Pacific lost about 1/2 of its rise. National Railroad of Mexico preferred fell 1 1/4.

The late break in Reading helped to make the closing market weak. A few minor stocks made 1 point gains during the final hour, but the general drift was downward to the lowest of the day. Losses established were: United States Rubber 3 3/4; Reading, Delaware & Hudson, American Ice and United States Pipe preferred 2 to 2 1/4; Pacific Coast 1 1/2 and Louisville & Nashville, Great Northern preferred, Southern Railway preferred and Smelting 1 to 1 1/4. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie rose 4 1/2.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The feature was the 5 per cent dividend on Atchison, which was a disappointment. This caused general selling and the tone was decidedly weak at the close. There is considerable talk of the United States Steel corporation taking over the ore lands, but this had little effect on the market. We still continue to think standard stocks should be bought on any sharp breaks.

* * *

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened steady and inclined to be strong. London was buying Steel and a few other stocks and the tone was good. After the announcement of the Atchison dividend, the stock sold off sharply and this affected the whole market. There was a lack of support and traders caught a number of stop orders. We look for a trading market for the rest of the week.

St. Paul Live Stock.

St. Paul, Oct. 3.—Receipts cattle, 2,800; steady to stronger; grain fed steers $4.50@5.50; cows and heifers, $3.50@4.50; grass fed steers, $3.25@5.00; cows and heifers, $2.50@3.75; calves, $2.50@4.50; stockers, $2.00@3.50; feeders, $2.90@4.25. Hogs—Receipts, 2,500; range, $6.00@6.55; bulk, $6.25@6.35. Sheep—Receipts, 800; steady, unchanged.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 3.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 15@25 points, the steady tone being imparted by the big southern buying movement which immediately after the call raised prices a point or two from the opening figures. A little later, however, the market eased off under very heavy realizing by recent buyers and selling for short account by local professionals who were encouraged by the reports of increased offerings against actual business in Liverpool and the idea that a reaction was due after the recent excited advance. Prices eased off to a net decline of about 30 points under this pressure. The market was active and unsettled during the middle of the morning.

Spot closed quiet and steady; middling uplands, 10.55; middling gulf, 10.80. Sales, 512 bales. Futures closed steady. Closing bids: October, 10.09; November, 10.06; December, 10.06; January, 10.12; February, 10.21; March, 10.26; April, 10.28; May, 10.35; June, 10.38; July, 10.43.

Copper Gossip.

Foster to Paine, Webber & Co.: North Butte is still the card to play. The buying is excellent and the stock closed at the top. Butte Coalition was well bought. Three different houses bought 1,000 each at $41. The Atchison dividend was a disappointment and caused a reaction anywhere from the whole New York list. Amalgamated is being held down and made to look weak. It should be bought on any further reactions. Calumet & Arizona is very scarce and is bound higher. Keep buying lifted it eight points today. Keep your eye on Old Dominion, Utah, Range, North Butte, Butte Coalition and Calumet & Arizona.

* * *

Sturgis to Gay & Sturgis: The copper share market today made further progress upward, in case of Calumet & Arizona, North Butte, Coanition and Greene was slightly firmer. The Lake shares, however, were rectionary except Range, which held steady. The money rates were inclined to harden and a consequent check to buying occurred. Sensational prices were bid for copper for nearby delivery. The market looks well and will work higher as the money market permits.

MARINE.

Grain Rates.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Grain rates went back to 1¾ cents on corn to Buffalo, at which rate three charters were made. It is the fifth time in two months that rates have veered from 1½ to 1¾ cents. Reported charters were the Maryland and Parks Foster for corn to Buffalo.

Lumber Rates Raised.

Detroit, Oct. 3.—The executive board of the Lumber Carriers' association met here yesterday and declared a raise of 50 cents a thousand in the rates for fall business. It was intimated that if unloading unions at Chicago, Toledo and Buffalo did not desist from demanding higher than the contract wages, the result would be that consignees would unload the boats themselves.

Strike Ended.

Fort William, Ont., Oct. 3.—The strike of freight handlers, which has practically paralyzed the marine business at Port Arthur and Fort William for a week past, was declared off yesterday. The men returned to work at the old scale of 20 cents an hour, with 22½ cents for night work.

Lumber Charters.

Cleveland, Oct. 3.—Carrying charges on lumber were marked up again yesterday. The steamer Mary Boyce was chartered to load at the Head of the Lakes at $2.87½ and $2.50 was offered for the Soo and Georgian bay. Wild ore cargoes are offered freely. The coal movement will be slow this week on account of the shortage of cars.

The Edenborn's Condition.

Cleveland, Oct. 3.—The wrecked steamer Edenborn is in much better shape than was expected, and officials of the Pittsburg Steamship company say it will be placed in commission again this year. Repairs will be completed in about four weeks.

To Go to the Pacific.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Oct. 3.—The George Hall Coal company's steamer John C. Howard has been sold to A. M. Dollar of San Francisco, and will leave the latter part of this month for the Pacific coast. The terms of the sale are private.

The Fayette Released.

Lorain, Oct. 3.—An inspection of the steamer Fayette Brown in dry dock shows that a number of the bottom plates have been bent, the wheel is gone and the rudder bent. Repairs will take probably ten days.

Schooner Beached.

Sandusky, Oct. 3.—The schooner C. J. McGill, upward bound from Cleveland, sprung a leak in Lake Erie and was beached beside the sunken steamer H. B. Tuttle.

The Castalia Released.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Castalia, which stranded yesterday at the dyke, was released last night apparently uninjured.

LATE DOINGS IN UPPER MICHIGAN

Disastrous Fire is Still Raging in the Tamarack Mine.

Hancock.—One of the most disastrous mine fires in the history of the Lake Superior region is that which still rages at the property of the Tamarack Copper Mining company. It is now nearly nine months since the flames first attacked the timbering in the No. 2 shaft and ever since that time that opening and the No. 1 shaft have been out of commission. At times the fumes almost die out, and then again come to the surface in great volume. It appears as though the flames were getting more fuel by finding their way to levels above and feeding on the dry timbers placed there years ago. There is no telling when the shafts, which are connected will be in operation again, and in the meantime there is not only loss of production but much of the timbering destroyed will have to be replaced.

There is no change at the Osceola Consolidated company's North Kearsarge mine, where fire broke out about ten days ago. Both the No. 1 shaft, the seat of the blaze, and the adjoining No. 3 shaft remain sealed, and the fire will be permitted to burn itself out, which it is expected to do when it no longer has air to feed upon. It might be that the fire will cease its costly work within a few days, and it may be weeks before the flames have run their course. Meanwhile the output of the company is seriously affected for the reason that the North Kearsarge branch is the richest portion of the company's possessions and was producing a trifle more than one-third of the copper turned out. It has not been determined as yet just how the fire started. A popular theory is that one of the wooden rollers, over which runs the hoisting rope, became clogged and ceased to revolve. Hence as the skip was raised and lowered friction was created by the steel cable, and a blaze broke out and communicated to the timbering of the shaft. Both the Osceola and Tamarack are members of the so-called Bigelow group of mines, and are under the same general management.

Iron Mountain.—A second company has been organized by the farmers of that district, many of them former miners, to explore for copper in Homestead township, which lies just across the Menominee river, in Wisconsin. The concern will be known as the Rising Sun Mining company. An option has been secured on forty acres of land adjoining the property of the Homestead Copper Mining company, which already has shown up a considerable deposit of high grade ore.

Ontonagon—A novel procession marked the return to Greenland, this county, of Dr. F. J. Larned and his bride. The groom had arranged to have his carriage meet him at the station. It was an unusually dark evening, and the newly wedded couple were escorted to the rear of the depot into the conveyance in waiting. Once the doctor and his wife were seated in the vehicle, the reins were handed the groom and at the same moment the lights were turned on. The sight presented was certainly surprising to the returning couple. Instead of the horse, which had been detached from the buggy, a cow occupied the position between the shafts, and it was decked out in the regulation harness. By persuasion and exertion on the part of those in charge of the affair, the bridal carriage was finally got into motion and accompanied by a large delegation of townspeople wended its way slowly down the streets to the scene of the reception tendered the happy couple.

Marquette—During the fiscal year ended September 30, twenty-two accidents that resulted fatally occurred in the mines of Marquette county. This is the official figure of Mine Inspector John T. Quinn, and means that for approximately every thousand men employed four men met death, in the neighborhood of 5,000 employees having been on the pay rolls of the various companies during the twelvemonth. By nationalities, the victims were apportioned as follows: Finnish, twelve; Italian, English, Swedish and French, two each; Irish and Polish, one each. The total number of producing mines in the county is twenty-five, while there are six non-producers and one exploration.

Ishpeming—From a five-acre tract, John Anderson, a farmer living in the outskirts of the city, has harvested this fall 314 bushels of oats. This is an average of upwards of sixty bushels an acre, and is considered a remarkably good yield when it is taken into account that in the best of the agricultural districts forty or fifty bushels is not thought bad.

Down in Chippewa county, James M. Clark of Whitefish Point claims the state record for the production of strawberries, having shipped 4,064 quarts from less than half an acre of ground. Mr. Clark also has had excellent success with the cultivation of cranberries, and annually ships thousands of quarts.

Ladies, when next you bake biscuits or cake, just remember you get the surest leavening strength from Hunt's Perfect Baking Powder. It never disappoints.

DISCOVERS THE CAUSE OF "SLEEPING SICKNESS."

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 3.—After taree months' work Prof. Frederick G. Nory of the University of Michigan has discovered the cause of "sleeping fever," a disease which annually carries off thousands in India and South America.

Drowsiness with a high intermittent fever seizes the victims and they go into a sleep from which they never awaken. There have been only two known cases in the United States, one in San Francisco and one this summer at Governor's island. Prof. Nory heard about the New York case and went to Governor's island to investigate.

He brought back with him some of the blood of the patient with a view of finding the bacteria. Tests were at once made to find some medium upon which the bacteria would propagate. Over 200 different mediums were tried before anything could be found upon which it would thrive. It was finally discovered that it would grow in a mixture of blood, agar and glucose. Now he has found the cause, but not the cure.

He will immediately begin work in an attempt to find an antitoxin that will destroy the poison which is thrown off by the bacteria, and an anti-bacteria serum that will kill the bacteria itself.

FOR CONTROL OF WIRELESS

Conference of the Leading Nations is Opened in Berlin.

Berlin, Oct. 3.—The delegates to the International Wireless Telegraph conference assembled in an apartment of the parliament here today. Many of them were old acquaintances, as the principal powers reappointed the delegates who attended the first wireless conference in 1903. Of the American delegates John I. Waterbury of New York and Commander F. M. Barber, United States navy, were here before.

Postmaster General Kraetke welcomed the delegates in the name of Emperor William. He alluded to the progress made by wireless telegraphy since the previous conference and said he hoped the delegates would be successful in their labors.

M. Delarge, director of the Belgian Telegraphs, the oldest delegate present, proposed three cheers for the German emperor, which were heartily given.

Assistant Minister of Posts Sydow was elected president of the conference and Rear Admiral H. N. Manney, United States navy, retired, Mr. Smith of Great Britain and Herr Von Szalay of Hungary were chosen vice presidents.

A committee was appointed to draw up a program for the conference. The language used in the discussions will be French.

The conference then adjourned to meet at the call of the president. Several days probably will be required by the committee to prepare the order of business. The discussions of the conference will not be public.

JURY SPLITS AWARD.

La Crosse Jury Gives Suing Contractor Only Part of Amount Asked.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 3.—The jury in the United States court returned a special verdict in the case of Shea and O'Shea of Hammond, Ind., vs. the city of La Crosse, brought to recover $8,942.12 on a sewer contract. The verdict gives the plaintiffs $3,675 and allows the city $1,050 as a penalty against the contractors, who were seven days behind time in completing the contract. The action was brought to recover for the relaying of a portion of a sewer, which had been damaged.

LIVELY FUNERAL IS MILWAUKEE IDEA.

Milwaukee, Oct. 3.—Giles M. Spear of this city, a prominent citizen, says he does not believe in the customary funeral accompaniments, and has started a reform by ordering red, white and blue on his door when he dies, with the words, "American born, American bred, American dead." He wants veterans to fire a salute over his grave and march home to "Yankee Doodle," and to hold a feast.

WINTHROP FOR CUBA

He Will Succeed Secretary Taft As Provincial Governor.

Magoon Will Go to the Philippines, as Originally Planned.

Washington, Oct. 3.—After a talk at the White House with Governor Magoon, today, the president reconsidered the plan he had formed last evening of sending the judge to Cuba as civil governor, and decided that, in view of the fact that Secretary Taft had already taken up the subject with Beekman Winthrop, the present governor of Porto Rico, he would not interfere with the program. Consequently, Mr. Winthrop will be provisional governor of Cuba, and Judge Magoon, after a short vacation to this country, will, as originally planned, go to the Philippines as vice governor and member of the Philippine commission.

Secretary Root has sent to the Cuban minister here, Senor Quesada, a copy of a cablegram which he received from Secretary Taft at Havana, in which he says that he "hopes that Quesada will not think of resigning, that his services will be of the greatest value to Cuba in the present crisis." Secretary Root adds for himself, "With hopeful courage and determination on the part of Cuba's real friends, all of this wretched business will soon be over." The minister is preparing a letter in reply, undertaking to remain at least temporarily.

Paris, Oct. 3.—Dr. Ferrer, the Cuban representative here, who on Monday placed his resignation at the disposal of the provisional government of Cuba, and who yesterday received a cable dispatch from Senor Diago, acting chief of the state department at Havana, requesting him, in the name of Governor Taft, to remain at his post, has replied to Senor Diago, accepting the invitation of the provisional government. In his cable message, Dr. Ferrer stated that he accepted, because he had confidence in the rectitude of President Roosevelt's motives and the sincerity of Governor Taft's declarations.

Havana, Oct. 3.—The disarming of the rebel forces in the immediate vicinity of Havana began today, without opposition. Many of them were allowed to keep arms, which they claimed were their personal property. Special trains during the day will convey the disbanded troops homeward. No trouble is reported to have occurred in any part of the island.

Preparations were made at the palace for the reception of Governor Taft who was to establish his office there this afternoon.

ATTACKED WIFE WITH A KNIFE

Farmer Then Cut His Own Throat, and Both Are Dying.

Litchfield, Ill., Oct. 3.—Lying side by side in the same ward at St. Francis hospital this city, are Alonzo Curtis, a farmer, and his wife, waiting the result of the former's attempt at murder and suicide. Both are expected to die. Circumstances indicate that Curtis, a prosperous farmer, living three miles east of this city, returned home from Hillsboro last night in a drunken rage and attacked his wife with a butcher knife while she was still in bed. Two young daughters ran to neighbors.

Curtis, however, resisted all attempts to aid his wife, standing the neighbors off with a shotgun. The people who first arrived left to obtain reinforcements. Upon returning fifteen minutes later Curtis was found lying out in the yard with his throat cut.

The dying husband and wife were placed aboard an interurban car and brought to the Litchfield hospital. He is 45 years old. The wife is 56.

HUMAN BILLBOARD SLAVE OF SOPHOMORES.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 3.—Caught by sophomores as he was returning from a visit in Detroit yesterday, John Brooke, freshman, son of Judge Flavius L. Brooke of the Wayne circuit court, was stripped to the buff, shampooed with paste, turned into a human billboard and then compelled to carry pails of "goo" and bales of posters for his captors, who were engaged in decorating the town with their proclamations against the class of 1910.

COURT SENTENCES BOY TO SPANKING BY "PA."

Fond du Lac., Wis., Oct. 3.—A spanking, administered by his father in court, was the sentence pronounced by Justice Blewett on Guy Higgins, 15 years old, who stoned a street car. His mother approved the sentence, and if his father is favorable the spanking will take place Saturday afternoon.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY

Goes further than the table. There are a dozen other places where waste comes in to dissipate your bank account.

Perhaps you have discarded the old coal range for a gas range and have the old one stored away in the cellar or attic. It's worth some price to someone.

You might better have the cash for which it will sell than have it rusting to absolute worthlessness and always in your way.

It's the same with a dozen other discarded articles lying about the house.

Turn them into money. Save the waste.

A Herald Want Ad will find the purchaser. It has for many other people. Why not for you? The price is one cent a word.

If you do not have time to come to The Herald office, Tell your want over the 'phone, 324—either line.

HOMESTEADER MISTAKEN FOR A DEER BY VIOLATOR OF STATE'S GAME LAWS

Frank Miller, Terribly Wounded, is Brought Here From Hibbing.

Shot Down by Man Who Left Him to His Fate.

Some Pot Hunter Believed to be Guilty—Man May Die.

Mistaken for a deer by some unknown pot-hunter, Frank Miller, a homesteader, whose place is about eight miles from Hibbing, lies in St. Mary's hospital with a gaping wound in the abdomen, which may prove fatal.

It is the first serious hunting accident of the present season, and it is evidently the work of some hunter who was violating the game laws.

The accident occurred late yesterday afternoon. Mr. Miller, who is a single man, was at work on the little clearing about his homestead, when suddenly a shot was heard and he felt the bullet strike him just below the pit of the stomach. He dropped to the ground bleeding profusely.

The details of the affair can not be secured, as Mr. Miller is unable to tell his story. He was brought to Hibbing last evening about 8 o'clock by some neighbors, and to Duluth on the Missabe train this morning.

As nearly as can be learned the man who fired the shot made his escape after he saw the result of his act, and before Mr. Miller caught sight of him.

Reports from the hospital this morning are to the effect that Mr. Miller's condition is very critical. The bullet entered from in front and tore a wound through the intestines, lodging some place in the back. It has not yet been removed.

Mr. Miller is a man of about 45 years of age.

This is the first hunting accident of the season. Every year the list of fatalities and serious accidents caused by ignorant or careless hunters in Northern Minnesota, is a long one, and this year they are beginning much earlier than usual. It is still a month before the opening of the deer season, but from all that can be learned, the victim of yesterday's accident was mistaken for a deer by some unknown hunter who was engaged in breaking the game laws.

DEATH DEALING MATERIALS FOUND

Bombs and Dynamite in Engineering Students' Laboratory.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 4.—Police yesterday searched the students' laboratory of the engineering institute, which is attached to the department of ways and communications. Forty bombs and seventy pounds of dynamite left in the library by a student named Finck were discovered. Finck's living rooms were also searched and more explosives found.

The police also unearthed a store of arms in the room of the son of the janitor of the institute. Finck and several others were arrested.

The examination showed that the laboratory was completely fitted out for the preparation of bombs.

It is reported that the minister of war has been informed that the troops at Cronstadt intimate that they will not shoot the nineteen sailors sentenced to death in connection with the August mutiny.

POSTMASTERS IN SESSION

Transportation of Mails Discussed at Second Day's Meeting.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 4.—The second day's session of the ninth annual convention of the National Association of Postmasters, began with a talk on "Transportation of Mails" by Alexander Grant, assistant superintendent of railway mail service.

The topic of "clerks, salaries and stations" was introduced by Guy T. Gould, assistant superintendent of salaries and allowances, and was discussed by H. E. Palmer, Omaha, and others.

Postmaster A. W. Wills, of Nashville, Tenn., president of the association, submitted a letter from Assisant Postmaster General De Graw, explaining the methods used and some of the difficulties encountered in the furnishing of supplies to postoffices and the handling of undeliverable mail matter by the postoffice department.

Disarming Commission Gets Ovation in Santa Clara.

Havana, Oct. 4.—Brig. Gen. Funston received telegrams this morning from all the members of the disarmament commission, from various parts of the island, reporting that all is quiet, and that the laying down of arms is progressing rapidly. The commissioners in Santa Clara reported the recovery of a quantity of dynamite and electrical apparatus stolen from the Daiquiri iron company, an American concern.

During the afternoon Gen. Funston will visit Gen. Azbet, the insurgent commander in Havana province, in the vicinity of Guines and arrange for the disarmament of his forces.

The disarming commission, which was sent to Santa Clara province, entered the Cienfuegos district yesterday afternoon. A dispatch from Crices reports that the commission received an ovation on the way from Santa Clara. The revolutionists at various points along the line were willing to disband, believing thoroughly in the honorable intentions of President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft.

The speech delivered by Governor Taft before the University of Havana has been received with great satisfaction by both the revolutionists and the government party in Santa Clara province.

Since the cessation of hostilities, marauding bands have stolen or destroyed more or less property in Santa Clara province. This week a band attacked the San Nicolas plantation, owned by a captain of the

MANY MINERS ARE ENTOMBED

In Mines in West Virginia and Rescuers at Work.

Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 4.—As the result of an explosion yesterday afternoon at the West Fork mines of the Pocahontas Collieries company, where the explosion of 1902 occurred, in which Superintendent O'Malley and sixteen others lost their lives, seventy-five men are supposed to be entombed. Two rescue parties have entered the mines and two men named Delbert and Codash have been rescued and revived. The mine is reported to be on fire and the work of rescue is retarded. The cause of the explosion is not determined. Great excitment prevails in the neighborhood of the mines. Crowds of men, women and children remained around the drift mouth anxiously awaiting news of relatives and friends.

The explosion took place in what is known as the St. Paul entry of the mine. Reports of the number of entombed men vary from sixty to one hundred. The lack of brattice cloth helps to retard the rescue work and a carload of it is being hurried on a special train from here.

The force of the explosion was hardly noticeable at the mine's mouth, as the entry in which it occurred is two and a half miles in the mountain. A number of men in the south mine were almost suffocated before they were rescued.

KILLED AT A CHARIVARI

Young Physician Shot While Trying to Quiet Disturbance.

Marinette, Wis., Oct. 4.—Dr. Henry Frank Conover of Crivitz, a young physician, was fatally shot last night at Crivitz. The shot was fired from a gun in the hands of Richard Hamilton, saloonkeeper at a charivari. Hamilton claims that the gun was discharged accidentally, but he has been arrested pending the result of the coroner's inquest. The tragic affair occurred at the home of a newly wedded couple. Dr. Conover heard the noise and went over the house to quiet the crowd. He was entering the door when the shot was fired. He was carried into the house and died in a short time in the arms of the man who shot him, before physicians could reach him.

STREET CAR IS WRECKED

Twenty Sustain Injuries and Three Will Not Recover.

Motorman Loses Control on Curve and Disaster Results.

Cleveland, Oct. 4.—Three were fatally and seventeen more or less seriously injured late last night, when a street car bound for Euclid Beach jumped the track at a sharp curve at the foot of the Nickel Plate railroad trestle north of Windermere. The car was going at high speed and after thumping the ties for twenty feet plunged into the bank and half overturned. About eighty passengers were aboard and panic reigned, the uninjured struggling with the groaning injured to extricate themselves. It is said the accident was caused by the motorman losing control of the car and the brakes refusing to work. Ambulances and carriages conveyed the injured to hospitals and their homes, and a number were cared for at nearby houses.

The seriously injured are: Mrs. Van Schrieber, Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Grasser, Norwalk, Ohio; Mrs. Watson, Boston, Mass.

Young Maxwell was standing on the platform talking to Miss Hazel Hudson, his fiancee, daughter of Dr. Hudson of Nottingham, a suburb of Cleveland, when the accident occurred. They were to have been married Monday.

ST. LOUIS HAS HOLIDAY.

Carnival Week in Progress and Handsome Statue Unveiled.

St. Louis, Oct. 4.—Today was observed as a municipal holiday as a feature of the festivities of carnival week. A parade of industrial floats participated in by 5,000 men was the forenoon attraction, and in the afternoon the equestrian statute of "St. Louis" was unveiled in Forest Park by Miss Jane Wells, the 14-year-old daughter of Mayor Wells. The statute is of bronze, in heroic style of sculpture, made in fourteen pieces and required fourteen cars to transport it from Chicago, where it was made. David R. Francis, made the presentation speech.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 4.—The Plain-dealer prints an interview with J. D. Rockefeller, in which the latter comments upon the demand for government regulation of so called private industries and makes a strong plea for national development. Mr. Rockefeller is quoted, in part, as follows:

"If we limit opportunity we will have put the brakes on our national development. Will the individual strive for success if he knows his hard won prize is to be snatched from his fingers at the last by his government? We are still too young a nation to begin tearing down. We must build up, build up, build up, for years to come. The very children in the schools should be taught the need of our development.

Speaking of his recent visit to France, Mr. Rockefeller said:

"The French people hate us, and they will crush us if they can. They want our money. They want patronage of our tourists. But they hate us. They never let slip an opportunity to take quick advantage of our mistakes. This is a struggle for supremacy. We must win, or they will, and there will be no

Property of Immense Value Endangered in New York Fire.

Ninety Families Driven From Homes—Three Firemen Hurt.

New York, Oct. 4.—Ninety families were driven from their homes, three firemen were injured, property valued at $50,000 was destroyed and surrounding property valued at millions was seriously threatened by a fire which started early today in the heart of the leather district. This spot, bounded by Frankfort, William, Gold and Spruce streets, is regarded as the center of one of the most dangerous fire zones in the city. The flames were controlled and extinguished only after three hours of the hardest kind of work. One of the buildings which was threatened by the fire was St. Gregory's hospital, and for a time the officials of the institution had their hands full in caring for the excited patients under their charge.

The fire started in a four-story building in Frankfort street occupied by De Zolge Bros., paper merchants, and immediately spread to three four-story tenement houses adjoining. Ninety families who were sleeping in the tenement houses were aroused by policemen and firemen, and most of the occupants had no trouble in reaching the street. An aged woman named Mrs. De Mold, who was confined to her bed by rheumatism, was carried through the smoke filled halls by two policemen.

While the firemen were fighting the flames from four sides, a nozzle which had been carried to the top of a ladder broke from the grasp of six men who were holding it. The hook which is used to support the hose on the ladder caught one of the men, cut a nasty gash on his arm, and threw him to the ground. Another fireman was also knocked from the ladder and severely hurt. Before the water could be turned off, the writhing hose struck another fireman and the hook tore a great hole in his side. The three men were taken to St. Gabriel's hospital. They will recover.

PLATFORM ADOPTED

Massachusetts Democrats Declare Enthusiastically for W. J. Bryan.

Congratulate New York Democracy on Nomination of Hearst.

Boston, Oct. 4.—The Massachusetts Democratic state convention was held here today. The report of the committee on resolutions submitted a platform, which was adopted, containing the following paragraphs:

"The Democracy of Massachusetts is proud to swell the note of praise for the distinguished Nebraskan Democrat, America's great commoner, whose moral leadership has been of world-wide influence and whose voice has been raised for the uplifting of humanity in every land, whose nomination by our party for the highest office in the nation's gift was proof of our party's wisdom and whose defeats only endeared him the more to the Democracy which admired him for all that it cost him to be right. While William Jennings Bryan lives we shall not want for an exemplary of all that is best and truest in Democracy.

"The Democracy of the Empire State of New York has nominated for governor a man whose tremendous and effective efforts for the advancement of Democratic presidents has been the wonder of our modern political history. All that great wealth, all great authority, ability, faith and courage could do in expounding sound political principles and exposing to the people's gaze the enemies of the republic, William R. Hearst, the Democratic candidate for governor of New York is now growing. We congratulate the Democracy of New York upon its wise selection of a leader and send Massachusetts' hearty wishes for Mr. Hearst's election."

The platform declares that in order to restore honesty and morals of the republic and state there are necessary:

"A governor free from alliance with corporations and trusts, uncontrolled by politicians.

"Direct popular control of the law-makking power in the granting of franchises and privileges.

"The public ownership and operation of public utilities in nation, state and city.

"Eight hours for labor, protection of women and children against overtime work; trial of facts by jury in equity cases involving labor injunction.

"Equal taxation.

"Drastic law against private monopoly with imprisonment penalties only.

"Reciprocity and tariff revision and free hides, free coal, free lumber, free iron and free wood pulp.

"Stringent laws as to the raising of the price of necessities by conspiracy or other unlawful methods, with imprisonment penalties only.

"Laws providing imprisonment penalties for wilful negligence by public officials.

"The nomination of all candidates for elective offices by direct vote."

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 4—Two Italian workmen were killed today in a cave-in at the Goodale Park intercepting sewer. Three others were seriously injured, but they will recover. Sixteen men were working in the sewer, which is twelve feet deep, when the retaining walls caved in and buried all of them.

WILL NOT ABANDON THE SHIP SHERIDAN.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Capt. Humphrey, the quartermaster in charge of the transport Sheridan, which was beached near Pearl harbor, Hawaii, recently to avoid sinking, has cabled the quartermaster general that he has no thought of abandoning the ship, but intends to list her to starboard, so as to raise the leaks above water, and keep her in that position by chaining her to a barge laden with pig iron, and tow her to Honolulu for repairs.

Says President Roosevelt in an Address at Harrisburg, Pa.

This Work Can Only be Accomplished by the Nation.

Dedication of the New State Capitol of Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 4.—In the presence of the largest crowd that has ever gathered in Harrisburg, the magnificent new capitol of Pennsylvania was dedicated today, with brief ceremonies, in which President Roosevelt took an active part.

Crowds began to gather about the immense grand stand at the West State street entrance to the capitol grounds, at daybreak, and when the exercises began the place was one mass of humanity. Before the exercises were started rain began falling, and continued throughout the ceremonies. Thousands stood in the drenching downpour, facing the president's stand, which was filled, notwithstanding the rain. Most of the ticket holders were men, few women turning out on account of the bad weather.

President Roosevelt arrived at the Pennsylvania railroad station at 11:02 a. m., was met by the capitol dedication committee and was escorted to the capitol by the governor's troops. Crowds lined the route from the station to the capitol and the president was given a cordial greeting. At the capitol the president was met by Governor Pennypacker, and after the formal greetings the governor and Mayor Gross of Harrisburg presented the president with gold medals as gifts of the state and city respectively.

President Roosevelt was given an enthusiastic reception when he appeared on the grand stand at 11:45 o'clock. All branches of the state government were represented in the crowd on the platform, and considerable space was given to specially invited guests.

Following the reading of a portion of the scriptures from a historic Bible by John H. Dillingham, a member of the Society of Friends in Philadelphia, Former Governor William A. Stone, president of the capitol building commission, in a brief address turned the

AN ULTIMATUM FROM BULGARIA

Which May Cause the Turkish Commissioners to Hasten.

Constantinople, Oct. 4.—The delay on the part of the Turkish commissioners to sign the report resulting from the inquiry into the frontier dispute regarding the delimitation of a portion of the Vilayett of Adrianope, which led to a sharp fight recently between the soldiers guarding the Bulgarian post at Sujuk and the guard on duty at the Turkish post of Dervish Mogila, has brought out practically an ultimatum from Bulgaria, in which the country declares that unless the report is signed by Oct. 14, the Bulgarian troops will be ordered to immediately reoccupy Sujek. The inquiry was concluded three weeks ago, and it is claimed that, while the report is in favor of the principality, the Bulgarian commissioners have been unable to induce their Turkish colleagues to append their signatures.

During the afternoon Gen. Funston will visit Gen. Azbet, the insurgent commander in Havana province, in the vicinity of Guines and arrange for the disarmament of his forces.

The disarming commission, which was sent to Santa Clara province, entered the Cienfuegos district yesterday afternoon. A dispatch from Crices reports that the commission received an ovation on the way from Santa Clara. The revolutionists at various points along the line were willing to disband, believing thoroughly in the honorable intentions of President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft.

The speech delivered by Governor Taft before the University of Havana has been received with great satisfaction by both the revolutionists and the government party in Santa Clara province.

Since the cessation of hostilities, marauding bands have stolen or destroyed more or less property in Santa Clara province. This week a band attacked the San Nicolas plantation, owned by a captain of the

MANY MINERS ARE ENTOMBED

In Mines in West Virginia and Rescuers at Work.

Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 4.—As the result of an explosion yesterday afternoon at the West Fork mines of the Pocahontas Collieries company, where the explosion of 1902 occurred, in which Superintendent O'Malley and sixteen others lost their lives, seventy-five men are supposed to be entombed. Two rescue parties have entered the mines and two men named Dolbert and Codash have been rescued and revived. The mine is reported to be on fire and the work of rescue is retarded. The cause of the explosion is not determined. Great excitment prevails in the neighborhood of the mines. Crowds of men, women and children remained around the drift mouth anxiously awaiting news of relatives and friends.

The explosion took place in what is known as the St. Paul entry of the mine. Reports of the number of entombed men vary from sixty to one hundred. The lack of brattice cloth helps to retard the rescue work and a carload of it is being hurried on a special train from here

The force of the explosion was hardly noticeable at the mine's mouth, as the entry in which it occurred is two and a half miles in the mountain. A number of men in the south mine were almost suffocated before they were rescued.

KILLED AT A CHARIVARI

Young Physician Shot While Trying to Quiet Disturbance.

Marinette, Wis., Oct. 4.—Dr. Henry Frank Conover of Crivitz, a young physician, was fatally shot last night at Crivitz. The shot was fired from a gun in the hands of Richard Hamilton, saloonkeeper at a charivari. Hamilton claims that the gun was discharged accidentally, but he has been arrested pending the result of the coroner's inquest. The tragic affair occurred at the home of a newly wedded couple. Dr. Conover heard the noise and went over the house to quiet the crowd. He was entering the door when the shot was fired. He was carried into the house and died in a short time in the arms of the man who shot him, before physicians could reach him.

STREET CAR IS WRECKED

Twenty Sustain Injuries and Three Will Not Recover.

Motorman Loses Control on Curve and Disaster Results.

Cleveland, Oct. 4.—Three were fatally and seventeen more or less seriously injured late last night, when a street car bound for Euclid Beach jumped the track at a sharp curve at the foot of the Nickel Plate railroad trestle north of Windermere. The car was going at high speed and after thumping the ties for twenty feet plunged into the bank and half overturned. About eighty passengers were aboard and panic reigned, the uninjured struggling with the groaning injured to extricate themselves. It is said the accident was caused by the motorman losing control of the car and the brakes refusing to work. Ambulances and carriages conveyed the injured to hospitals and their homes, and a number were cared for at nearby houses.

The seriously injured are: Mrs. Van Schrieber, Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Grasser, Norwalk, Ohio; Mrs. Watson, Boston, Mass.

Young Maxwell was standing on the platform talking to Miss Hazel Hudson, his fiancee, daughter of Dr. Hudson of Nottingham, a suburb of Cleveland, when the accident occurred. They were to have been married Monday.

ST. LOUIS HAS HOLIDAY.

Carnival Week in Progress and Handsome Statue Unveiled.

St. Louis, Oct. 4.—Today was observed as a municipal holiday as a feature of the festivities of carnival week. A parade of industrial floats participated in by 5,000 men was the forenoon attraction, and in the afternoon the equestrian statute of "St. Louis" was unveiled in Forest Park by Miss Jane Wells, the 14-year-old daughter of Mayor Wells. The statute is of bronze, in heroic style of sculpture, made in fourteen pieces and required fourteen cars to transport it from Chicago, where it was made. David R. Francis, made the presentation speech.

John D. Rockefeller Against Interference With Production.

Thinks Men in the Packing Business Were Terribly Maligned.

Says Subpoena Servers Are Looking for Notoriety, Not Information.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 4.—The Plain-dealer prints an interview with J. D. Rockefeller, in which the latter comments upon the demand for government regulation of so called private industries and makes a strong plea for national development. Mr. Rockefeller is quoted, in part, as follows:

"If we limit opportunity we will have put the brakes on our national development. Will the individual strive for success if he knows his hard won prize is to be snatched from his fingers at the last by his government? We are still too young a nation to begin tearing down. We must build up, build up, build up, for years to come. The very children in the schools should be taught the need of our development.

Speaking of his recent visit to France, Mr. Rockefeller said:

"The French people hate us, and they will crush us if they can. They want our money. They want patronage of our tourists. But they hate us. They never let slip an opportunity to take quick advantage of our mistakes. This is a struggle for supremacy. We must win, or they will, and there will be no

SIXTY EMIGRANTS ARE DROWNED

By Foundering of Steamer Between Hoihow and Hongkong.

Hongkong, Oc. 4.—The emigrant steamer Charterhouse, voyaging between Hoihow and Hongkong, foundered off Hainan head on Sept. 30. Capt. Clifton and sixty passengers were lost. The North German Lloyd steamer Kohsichang has picked up a raft belonging to the Charterhouse on which were Chief Engineer Dowse, twenty-three of the crew and two women, after they had been drifting for forty-three hours.

LACK OF EFFECTIVE SUPERVISION OF CORPORATIONS FRAUGHT WITH GREAT DANGER TO GOVERNMENT

Says President Roosevelt in an Address at Harrisburg, Pa.

This Work Can Only be Accomplished by the Nation.

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 4.—In the presence of the largest crowd that has ever gathered in Harrisburg, the magnificent new capitol of Pennsylvania was dedicated today, with brief ceremonies, in which President Roosevelt took an active part.

Crowds began to gather about the immense grand stand at the West State street entrance to the capitol grounds, at daybreak, and when the exercises began the place was one mass of humanity. Before the exercises were started rain began falling, and continued throughout the ceremonies. Thousands stood in the drenching downpour, facing the president's stand, which was filled, notwithstanding the rain. Most of the ticket holders were men, few women turning out on account of the bad weather.

President Roosevelt arrived at the Pennsylvania railroad station at 11:02 a. m., was met by the capitol dedication committee and was escorted to the capitol by the governor's troops. Crowds lined the route from the station to the capitol and the president was given a cordial greeting. At the capitol the president was met by Governor Pennypacker, and after the formal greetings the governor and Mayor Gross of Harrisburg presented the president with gold medals as gifts of the state and city respectively.

President Roosevelt was given an enthusiastic reception when he appeared on the grand stand at 11:45 o'clock. All branches of the state government were represented in the crowd on the platform, and considerable space was given to specially invited guests.

Following the reading of a portion of the scriptures from a historic Bible by John H. Dillingham, a member of the Society of Friends in Philadelphia, Former Governor William A. Stone, president of the capitol building commission, in a brief address turned the

THREATENS MILLIONS

Property of Immense Value Endangered in New York Fire.

Ninety Families Driven From Homes—Three Firemen Hurt.

New York, Oct. 4.—Ninety families were driven from their homes, three firemen were injured, property valued at $50,000 was destroyed and surrounding property valued at millions was seriously threatened by a fire which started early today in the heart of the leather district. This spot, bounded by Frankfort, William, Gold and Spruce streets, is regarded as the center of one of the most dangerous fire zones in the city. The flames were controlled and extinguished only after three hours of the hardest kind of work. One of the buildings which was threatened by the fire was St. Gregory's hospital, and for a time the officials of the institution had their hands full in caring for the excited patients under their charge.

The fire started in a four-story building in Frankfort street occupied by De Zolge Bros., paper merchants, and immediately spread to three four-story tenement houses adjoining. Ninety families who were sleeping in the tenement houses were aroused by policemen and firemen, and most of the occupants had no trouble in reaching the street. An aged woman named Mrs. De Mold, who was confined to her bed by rheumatism, was carried through the smoke filled halls by two policemen.

While the firemen were fighting the flames from four sides, a nozzle which had been carried to the top of a ladder broke from the grasp of six men who were holding it. The hook which is used to support the hose on the ladder caught one of the men, cut a nasty gash on his arm, and threw him to the ground. Another fireman was also knocked from the ladder and severely hurt. Before the water could be turned off, the writhing hose struck another fireman and the hook tore a great hole in his side. The three men were taken to St. Gabriel's hospital. They will recover.

PLATFORM ADOPTED

Massachusetts Democrats Declare Enthusiastically for W. J. Bryan.

Congratulate New York Democracy on Nomination of Hearst.

Boston, Oct. 4.—The Massachusetts Democratic state convention was held here today. The report of the committee on resolutions submitted a platform, which was adopted, containing the following paragraphs:

"The Democracy of Massachusetts is proud to swell the note of praise for the distinguished Nebraskan Democrat, America's great commoner, whose moral leadership has been of world-wide influence and whose voice has been raised for the uplifting of humanity in every land, whose nomination by our party for the highest office in the nation's gift was proof of our party's wisdom and whose defeats only endeared him the more to the Democracy which admired him for all that it cost him to be right. While William Jennings Bryan lives we shall not want for an exemplary of all that is best and truest in Democracy.

"The Democracy of the Empire State of New York has nominated for governor a man whose tremendous and effective efforts for the advancement of Democratic presidents has been the wonder of our modern political history. All that great wealth, all great authority, ability, faith and courage could do in expounding sound political principles and exposing to the people's gaze the enemies of the republic, William R. Hearst, the Democratic candidate for governor of New York is now growing. We congratulate the Democracy of New York upon its wise selection of a leader and send Massachusetts' hearty wishes for Mr. Hearst's election."

The platform declares that in order to restore honesty and morals of the republic and state there are necessary:

"A governor free from alliance with corporations and trusts, uncontrolled by politicians.

"Direct popular control of the law-making power in the granting of franchises and privileges.

"The public ownership and operation of public utilities in nation, state and city.

"Eight hours for labor, protection of women and children against overtime work; trial of facts by jury in equity cases involving labor injunction.

"Equal taxation.

"Drastic law against private monopoly with imprisonment penalties only.

"Reciprocity and tariff revision and free hides, free coal, free lumber, free iron and free wood pulp.

"Stringent laws as to the raising of the price of necessities by conspiracy or other unlawful methods, with imprisonment penalties only.

"Laws providing imprisonment penalties for wilful negligence by public officials.

"The nomination of all candidates for elective offices by direct vote."

DEAD BODY IS FOUND IN FIELD

Iowa Wife Finds Murdered Husband--Tramps Are Suspected.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Oct. 4.—Charles Neal, a farmer near Bayyard, Guthrie county, Iowa, was found dead today in a cornfield, apparently murdered by tramps, who shot him for some trivial reason, or under the influence of liquor. Neal's body was discovered by his wife, after a search. Bloodhounds have been placed on the trail.

TWO WORKMEN LOSE LIVES

Buried in Sewer Cave-in in Columbus—Others Injured.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 4—Two Italian workmen were killed today in a cave-in at the Goodale Park intercepting sewer. Three others were seriously injured, but they will recover. Sixteen men were working in the sewer, which is twelve feet deep, when the retaining walls caved in and buried all of them.

WILL NOT ABANDON THE SHIP SHERIDAN.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Capt. Humphrey, the quartermaster in charge of the transport Sheridan, which was beached near Pearl harbor, Hawaii, recently to avoid sinking, has cabled the quartermaster general that he has no thought of abandoning the ship, but intends to list her to starboard, so as to raise the leaks above water, and keep her in that position by chaining her to a barge laden with pig iron, and tow her to Honolulu for repairs.

AN ULTIMATUM FROM BULGARIA

Which May Cause the Turkish Commissioners to Hasten.

Constantinople, Oct. 4.—The delay on the part of the Turkish commissioners to sign the report resulting from the inquiry into the frontier dispute regarding the delimitation of a portion of the Vilayett of Adrianope, which led to a sharp fight recently between the soldiers guarding the Bulgarian post at Sujuk and the guard on duty at the Turkish post of Dervish Mogila, has brought out practically an ultimatum from Bulgaria, in which the country declares that unless the report is signed by Oct. 14, the Bulgarian troops will be ordered to immediately reoccupy Sujek. The inquiry was concluded three weeks ago, and it is claimed that, while the report is in favor of the principality, the Bulgarian commissioners have been unable to induce their Turkish colleagues to append their signatures.

BIG WORKS INSPECTED

Eastern Bankers Visit Development Work of Power Company.

Gratification Expressed Over Progress Made in Last Year.

A visit of inspection was made to the Great Northern Power company's plant, from the power house above Fond du Lac, through to the Thomson reservoir yesterday, by a party of bankers who assisted in financing the project, and a number of the officers of the company. In the party that visited the works were President C. A. Duncan, Thomas F. Cole, Alexander McDougall and A. M. Marshall, who comprise the board of directors of the company; C. D. Barney and J. Horace Harding, of C. D. Barney & Co.; S. Reed Anthong and Philip Saltonstall, of Tucker, Anthony & Co., representing the bondholders; C. C. Cokefair, and Thomas Pettigrew of the National Railway Construction company.

The party was accompanied by Dr. E. P. Oberholtzer, of Philadelphia, who is engaged in writing the life of Jay Cooke for publication in Scribner's magazine.

The power house above Fond du Lac was first inspected and then the members of the party walked the entire length of the works to the dam and reservoir at Thomson.

It was found that work had so far progressed on the system that it will require only a few more days time before the water can be turned into the canal.

The visitors had lunch at one of the engineers' camps and returned to Duluth late in the afternoon.

A meeting of the directors of the National Railway Construction company was held and Messrs. Barney, Harding and Oberholtzer left last evening for their homes in the East.

Before leaving Mr. Barney expressed astonishment at the magnitude of the construction work that has been completed. He was greatly impressed by the vast amount of energy spent on the plant when he viewed the length and breadth of the works, the great dams of concrete, the reservoir, pipe lines and the power house. He remarked that the work had practically all been accomplished since his visit here a year ago and that he and his associates are very much gratified at the carrying out of the plans so quickly.

Mr. Barney believes that the accomplishment of the undertaking will be of the greatest benefit to Duluth and that there is bound to be a great industrial development here.

Other members of the party were no less enthusiastic. Dr. Oberholtzer thought that the people of Duluth have not yet come to a full realization of the importance of the power development. He said that there is not nearly as much noise being made over the undertaking as he would expect to find. He characterized the St. Louis river water power as second only to Niagara water power and declared it would be a tremendous thing for Duluth.

MAGOON WILL BE GOVERNOR

Of Cuba When Taft Returns, According to Latest Plan.

Washington, Oct. 4.—It was announced at the White House yesterday afternoon that upon further consideration of the subject, the president had decided to adhere to his plan fomed Tuesday and send Charles E. Magoon to Cuba to relieve Secretary Taft as provisional governor, allowing Governor Winthrop to remain in Porto Rico, where his services are needed.

It was stated late yesterday that the president had reached his intention not to send Governor Magoon to Cuba as announced earlier in the day because of advices then in hand from Secretary Taft indicating that the arrangements made for Governor Winthrop assuming the duties of provisional governor had gone too far to be changed conveniently. A later dispatch from the secretary, however, put the matter in a different light and indicated that the secretary was willing that the governor should remain in Porto Rico.

President Roosevelt, who has all along been anxious to have Mr. Magoon go to Cuba, acted promptly on the secretary's dispatch and immediately announced the appointment of Mr. Magoon. This decision, he feels, leaves Governor Winthrop to finish important work which he has in hand in Porto Rico and will delay for but a few months Judge Magoon's departure for the Philippines.

RUMMAGE SALE!

CONTRACTS FOR PANAMA CANAL

Now Being Considered by Those in Charge of Construction.

Washington, Oct. 4.—A tentative decision has been reached by Chairman Shonts of the isthmian canal commission that the Panama canal be built by a contract. An announcement of the final determination of the canal officials respecting the method of construction is expected in a few days. Chairman Shonts had a long conference with President Roosevelt, at which many matters relating to the canal were considered. The president is anxious that a conclusion be reached on all questions of canal construction as soon as possible so that the actual work of construction may be pressed vigorously. Chairman Shonts and Chief Engineer Stevens have been working for many weeks on the subject of constructing the great waterway by contract. They have prepared specifications for the work which are being considered before the issuance of invitations for proposals.

In this connection it is understood that the president has not abandoned his contemplated trip to Panama and will not, unless the Cuban situation or some other question should become so acute as to require his presence in Washington; Chairman Shonts expects to be in Panama at the time of the president's visit, but it is likely that instead of accompanying the president, he will go to Panama in advance to supervise arrangements for his reception.

PROBABLY A CANARD.

Cincinnati, Oct. 4.—A story was published here yesterday that Ed Cannon, an amateur pugilist, on a wager, had jumped from the suspension bridge to his death, but his brother, F. J. Cannon, yesterday afternoon said he had been unable to find a person who would admit having seen the fatal leap. The police of Cincinnati and Covington were notified of the story, but their efforts to establish beyond a doubt the correctness of the report have not succeeded.

IRISH LEAGUE PLEDGES $100,000

For the Cause of Home Rule Within Two Years.

Philadelphia, Oct. 4.—Patriotism of a substantial kind was manifested yesterday when the convention of the United Irish League of America, amidst great enthusiasm, pledged the organization to raise $100,000 for the cause of home rule within two years. A pledge of a $50,000 subscription which was incorporated in the report of the committee on ways and means, had been unanimously endorsed by the delegates and within twenty minutes $70,000 had been subscribed. Later this amount was increased to $78,000. A cablegram, which had been ordered forwarded to John E. Redmond announcing the $50,000 pledge was withdrawn, and the league increased the amount to $100,000. Daniel Hannahan of Chicago pledged $5,000. and Darcy Scott of Ottawa pledged $5,000. Philadelphia subscribed $10,000; Baltimore, $3,500, and St. Louis, $3,000. Individual checks were fairly showered on the presiding officer and this with pledges from many cities soon brought the subscription to $78,000.

During the afternoon a number of resolutions were adopted, among which was one reaffirming the well known principles of the league toward home rule in Ireland and pledging its members to continue to strive as they have in the past to bring about better conditions in that country. The following officers were elected: President, Michael J. Ryan, Philadelphia; secretary, John O'Callaghan, Boston; treasurer, T. B. Fitzpatrick, Boston. The national executive committee was re-elected.

ROAD TO BE PROSECUTED

For Its Failure to Put Fenders on the Cars.

San Francisco, Oct. 4.—The United Railroads company is to be prosecuted for its failure to put fenders on the cars. Under the law the company is guilty of misdemeanor for every car operated without the fender. The fine is $500.

Last night the assistant district attorney filed a complaint against the company, specifying a car of the Sutter street line as one of the cars not being run according to law. A summons will be served on the officials of the United Railroads company today and they will have to meet complaint in the police court charging them with having violated the law by running cars not provided with the proper safety devices.

CHIEF OF POLICE AT SALT LAKE ARRESTED.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 4.—Chief of Police George Sheets was arrested last night on a complaint by William McWhirter, charging him with compounding a felony. McWhirter is the Scotchman who had $10,000 taken from him by bogus officers during a raid on a fraudulent poker game. McWhirter forced one of the alleged officers to accompany him to the police station, where he was given back $1,000, the amount being paid through the chief.

INJUNCTION DISSOLVED.

Helena, Mont., Oct. 4.—In the United States court yesterday Judge W. S. Hunt dissolved the injunction issued out of the court several years ago at the instance of the Montana Mining company to prevent the St. Louis Mining company from working mining ground at Marysville, which was in litigation. The action of the court follows a recent decision of the United States circuit court of appeals in favor of the St. Louis company.

WENT TO ATLANTIC CITY.

Philadelphia, Oct. 4.—Having completed the business for which they had assembled, the delegates to the convention of the United Irish League of America went to Atlantic City today on a special train and will hold a mass meeting on one of the piers this afternoon. The delegates will return to this city tonight and disband.

SPLENDID RECEPTION THROUGHOUT THE TRIP

Governor Johnson Got Warm Greeting From the People.

Two Harbors Turns Out En Masse to Welcome Him.

"I am more than pleased with my visit to St. Louis county. It has been a surprise and a revelation to me from the moment of beginning to the very end. I have so often heard that this is the enemy's country, that perhaps I had come to believe that I was going into a hostile camp, but if this is the enemy's country, the people have concealed the fact from me very effectively. My reception at every place we have visited could not have been more cordial or more satisfying, and I shall always remember with great pleasure the trip through St. Louis and Lake counties."

Governor Johnson commented thus on his trip to St. Louis and Lake counties last evening, at its conclusion. Throughout, the greatest of interest was shown in him, and in making his stay on the ranges pleasant. The hospitality of the people was everywhere manifest, and there seemed to be a general desire to do honor to Minnesota's governor.

At every point his speeches met with enthusiastic commendation. He discussed the business of the state and the record of his administration, and appealed to the sound common sense and business judgment of the people to keep in office an administration which has placed and is managing the affairs of the state upon a business basis.

At every place Governor Johnson showed a deep interest in the children and the schools, and he examined the several school buildings he visited with a keen interest, making many inquiries as to their equipment, prosperity, etc. He spoke at two of the schools, and gave the pupils earnest advice, and appeals to make the most of the educational advantages offered them, and to devote every energy to getting as much education as they can. He dwelt with especial force upon the fact that the race of a life is a swift one, and that it is the finely trained man or woman who wins the greatest measure of success, the person equipped to make use of his brains always outstripping the man who can use only his hands, and that the better the brain is developed, the greater the possibilities for success.

He accorded to every man the right to think and act as he pleases, but reminded them that the governor of the state of Minnesota has nothing to do with the management of the affairs of the nation, and the thing for the people of Minnesota to consider is in what manner the affairs of the state are being administered.

The issue of state development which the Republicans have attempted to raise he effectually punctured, showing that the claims that the state is going backward are absurd. He placed himself emphatically on record as favoring good roads and the drainage of state lands, but asserted with equally great emphasis that so long as he is chairman of the drainage board, the money of the state will never be used to drain the lands of private speculators or railroad companies.

The governor's trip closed with a great meeting at Two Harbors last evening. Norden hall could not begin to accommodate those who wanted to hear the governor and by actual count fully 400 people were turned away. The hall was packed almost to the point of suffocation and not a man left during the speech. Prominent Republicans of Two Harbors freely declared after the meeting that it was the clearest, cleanest, and most sensible political speech they had ever heard. One of the most prominent Republicans asserted that he would have been willing to hear him for two hours longer.

The Two Harbors visit was an ovation from the moment the party arrived until the train pulled out. When the train stopped at the depot at 5 o'clock the platform was jammed with men, women and children. The high school boys were there and their class yell was primed to a point of enthusiasm and noise befitting the occasion. The governor shook handss with everybody and then went to the Commercial hotel where for an hour a reception was held. At 6 o'clock the governor and his party and a number of the citizens of the city sat down to dinner.

In the evening before the meeting the governor was driven to the high school and inspected it with great interest under the guidance of Supt. W. J. Marquis. Its fine equipment was commented upon, but especially surprising to the governor was the school library with more than 4,000 volumes of all classes of literature, all in sectional book cases. The handsome new courthouse of Lake county was next visited and the governor was delighted with it.

At the meeting John Dwan presided. He expressed the regret of the people of Two Harbors that they had not an opportunity to welcome the distinguished veteran of the civil war who is a candidate for lieutenant governor, Judge Pendergast, and then introduced Governor Johnson.

The governor spoke for about an hour, and applause was frequent and enthusiastic, but especially marked was the close and careful attention with which his address was followed.

At the close of the speech John Dwan read a telegram to himself from Frank A. Day asking him to take the nomination for attorney general on the state ticket. He did not indicate what his answer would be, but spoke his appreciation of the compliment extended both to him and Lake county.

The visit to Ely was one of the most pleasant of the trip. The weather was ideal, and in spite of the hour which made it difficult to get a crowd to a political meeting more than 200 were present.

After Governor Johnson had taken dinner, Capt. Charles Trezona came down with his carriage to take him to the Ely school. Capt. Trezona is a member of the school board and had much to do with the designing and construction of this handsome building and takes a deep pride in it. Governor Johnson saw nothing on his entire trip that delighted him more, and he declared that in his opinion no school in Minnesota equals it in excellence of design, perfection of lighting and general finish. It cost Ely $80,000, is situated in the center of a handsome block of ground and presents a most substantial appearance, a credit to the town and the men who built it.

In the assembly hall, a splendid room with accoustic properties whose perfection occasions special remark, were gathered the pupils of the high school with Supt. C. L. Newberry in charge, and Governor Johnson addressed them much on the same line as he did at Tower, counseling them to make the most of opportunities afforded them to get an education and not to be in a rush to get into business life by the allurement which the earning of money offers.

The Pioneer mine was also visited for a few moments, and the busy scene there observed. Capt. Trezona was most courteous in his attentions to the state's chief executive, and the warm thanks of those in charge of the trip were extended to him.

At Ely the party was joined by members of the Lake county committee, John Dwan, George Spurbeck, Lawrence Claffey and F. W. Walker, and a finer bunch of willing workers it would be hard to find. Mr. Claffey is a locomotive engineer on the Iron Range railroad, and has been for more than eleven years on that line. To him was given charge of the party from Ely to Two Harbors, and the manner in which he carried out his charge was good to see. Governor Johnson was especially pleased, and pronounced Mr. Claffey the "livest" man he had run across in a long time. "Come down to St. Paul," he said when the party left at night, "and I'll set you the same kind of a pace you have me today."

At every station along the line from Ely to Two Harbors, Mr. Claffey had lined up the school children, section men, railroad agents and everybody in the neighborhood. Stops were made at Tower Junction, at Embarrass, where all the school children were lined up, and everyone got a shake of the hand; at Mesaba, where the flag was flying and the school children were also assembled; at Bassett, at Cloquet river, Allen Junction and all the way down the line. Governor Johnson did not attempt to speak, but got off the train at each place and shook the hand of every man, woman and child.

At Waldo, Governor Johnson got into the engine with Engineer Smith and rode down the steep grade in the cab, the splendid view of the lake and Two Harbors, with its great ore docks, gradually unfolding before his eyes, to his great pleasure and delight.

With the party when it came into Duluth, in addition to those who went out, were Mayor Charles Jessmore of Eveleth, who joined it at that city and continued to Duluth, John Owens, who came on at Tower and was a host every minute thereafter, Fred White who came down from Two Harbors, John Dwan, and Harris Bennett, who came on at Eveleth. William Coss and N. J. Benson of Tower went from Tower to Ely and back again, leaving at Tower on the return trip. John D. Brady left Duluth with the party, but stopped at Hibbing, as did also Judge Pendergast, who was somewhat indisposed and weary from his exertions of the first day.

In the party that made the entire trip, beside Governor Johnson, were Charles d'Autremont, T. T. Hudson, William McEwen, and reporters for The Herald and News Tribune.

Governor Johnson remained at the St. Louis hotel over night and left this morning for Grand Rapids, where he will speak tonight. He will then go to Bemidji, Brainerd, Wadena and Long Prairie.

VIBORG MANIFESTO

Likely to be Renounced by the Constitutional Democrats.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 4.—The renunciation of the Viborg manifesto with its appeals for the non-payment of taxes and the refusal to perform military service, as a campaign document in the coming elections, and the adoption of a more constitutional line of campaign appears to be the program for Sunday's congress of Constitutional Democrats at Helsingford. A majority of the central committee is convinced that it would be inexpedient to enter the battle under a revolutionary standard. The proposed platform, a plank of which it is understood has been drafted by Professor Milukoff, will declare that while the Viborg manifesto was a correct measure at the time of its adoption, it would now be inopportune to press its recommendations. The belligerents, and among them is Prince Dolgoroukoff, are inclined to fight for a flat reaffirmation of the manifesto, but the conservatives are confident of carrying the day.

The convention will be held behind closed door and the press will be excluded in deference to the Finns, who do not desire that the convention be given great prominence on account of their friendly relation with the government.

"The Greatest Family Medicine Ever Discovered Is Pe-ru-na"

SO SAYS The Hon. Wm. G. Hunter, Ex-Member of the North Carolina Legislature.

WM. G. HUNTER.

"The greatest family medicine ever discovered, in my opinion, which comes from experience as well as observation, is Peruna. The most common affliction to humankind is a bad cold. Peruna drives it out of doors, wards off catarrh, invigorates and gives fresh strength to mind and body.

"I give Peruna my unqualified endorsement."—Wm. G. Hunter, Census Office Bldg., Washington, D. C.

October the Beautiful.

In spite of the chilly evenings and cold nights of October, this month is the most healthful month of the whole season.

There is one liability, however, which constantly hangs over the month of October—the liability to catch cold at night.

Clothing Too Thin.

People have been accustomed to warm nights during the summer. They go out for the evening without proper clothing. Before their return they find themselves chilled to the bone.

Sometimes people go to sleep without proper covering, only to waken in the morning and find they have caught cold.

Catching Cold in October.

It is very unfortunate indeed to get a cold during the month of October.

Any cold more or less undermines the system, and a great many colds lay the foundation for chronic catarrh, pneumonia, and other diseases of the winter season.

The watchword of October is to guard against cold, so as to make the most of this beautiful and healthful month.

Pe-ru-na, a Convenient Remedy.

Peruna kept in the house is a convenient remedy against colds. At the appearance of the first symptoms of cold, a few doses of Peruna will often mitigate the attack entirely.

Peruna is the recognized family medicine in over a million homes, and its value cannot be overestimated when it is properly used.

FRISCO BANK IS ROBBED OF $5,000

And Manager Beaten to Death by the Robbers.

San Francisco, Oct. 4.—Two robbers entered the Kimmon Kinko, a Japanese bank, also known as the Golden Gate bank, at 158 O'Farrell street yesterday at noon and, after fatally beating S. Urakata, the manager of the bank, and seriously injuring A. Sasskaki, a clerk, with a piece of gas pipe, escaped with $5,000 in gold. Manager Urakata died two hours later from his injuries. Urakata was actingteller.

After striking down their victims, the robbers dragged them to a poorly lighted room in the rear of the bank. The unconscious men were found lying in a pool of blood and nearby was a piece of gas pipe a foot in length.

Chief of Police Dinana detailed on the case every available detective and policeman. He advanced the theory that the robbers are the same men who recently killed Pfitsner and Friede, merchants, in their stores.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCK.

Bellingham, Wash., Oct. 4.—A special to the Herald from Vancouver, B. C., says that Nanaimo, on Vancouver island, experienced a slight earthquake shock at 12:35 yesterday morning. The tremor lasted two seconds and was distinctly felt. Reports from Northfield say the shock was heavier there. No damage was done.

RECRUITING FOR THE NAVY

All Three Branches of Service Now Have Stations Here.

All three branches of the United States service are now represented in Duluth by recruiting stations.

B. W. Blenkhorn, master at arms and gun captain, has arrived in the city and opened a recruiting station in the Federal building for the United States navy. The army and marine corps are already represented here.

"The chances for promotion in the navy were never better than they are now," said the recruiting officer. "I started in in April 1903, as a landsman at $16 a month, and since that time was promoted to seaman at $19 a month; to seaman at $24 a month; to gun captain at $29 a month; to master at arms, third degree, at $35 a month; and to master at arms, second degree, at $40 a month.

"During that time I have had a cruise to South America and the West Indies on the training ship Buffalo."

GIRL ARRESTED FOR PASSING FORGED CHECK.

Burlington, Iowa, Oct. 4.—Miss Hyrmal Jacobs was arrested at Galesburg yesterday under the name of Mary Burns and charged with passing a forged check there for $1,000.

The girl was a student for several years at Iowa Wesleyan university, Mount Pleasant, Ia. She went to Monmouth, Ill., Saturday and in the guise of a college student, it is said, attempted to pass a check for $5,000 but failed.

building over to the governor, at the same time handing him a gold key.

Governor Pennypacker accepted the building on behalf of the people in a brief address.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS.

When he concluded the governor introduced President Roosevelt who delivered the principal address of the day. The president spoke as follows:

It is a very real pleasure for me to attend these ceremonies at the capital of your great state. In every crisis of our government the attitude of Pennsylvania has been of crucial importance, as the affectionate nickname of "Keystone State" signifies. Pennsylvania has always looked warily before she leaped and it was well that she should do so. But having finally made up her mind, in each great crisis of our national history, her weight has been cast unhesitatingly upon the right side, and has been found irresistible. This was true alike at the time of the Declaration of Independence, at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, and during the terrible years when the issuo was the preservation of the Union.

Pennsylvania soil is historic. It was within Pennsylvania's borders that the contest opened which was to decide whether the valiant soldiers of France would be able to bar this continent against the domination of the people of the English-speaking colonies. It was on Pennsylvania's soil that the Declaration of Independence was signed, and the Constitutional convention held. It was in Pennsylvania that Washington wintered at Valley Forge, and by keeping his army togther during that winter definitely turned the scales in our favor in the contest for independence. It was again on Pennsylvania's soil, at Gettysburg, that the tide turned in the civil war.

> In the composition of her people, moreover, Pennsylvania has epitomized the composition of our Union; for here many Old World races have mingled their blood to make that new type, the American.

Finally, in all branches of the public service, in peace and in war, the native or adopted citizens of Pennsylvania have attained the highest eminence.

I do not, however, come here today to speak only of the past, and still less to appeal merely to state pride. We can show that the past is with us a living force only by the way in which we handle ourselves in the present, and each of us can best show his devotion to his own state by making evident his paramount devotion to that Union which includes all the states. The study of the great deeds of the past is of chief avail in so far as it incites us to grapple resolutely and effectively with the problems of the present. We are not now menaced by foreign war. Our Union is firmly established. But each generation has its special and serious difficulties; and we of this generation have to struggle with evils springing from the very material success of which we are so proud, from the very growth and prosperity of which, with justice, we boast. The extraordinary industrial changes of the last half century have produced a totally new set of conditions, under which new evils flourish; and for these new evils new remedies must be devised.

Some of these evils we are grappled with by private effort only; for we never can afford to forget that in the last analysis the chief factor in personal success, and indeed in national greatness must be the sturdy, self-reliant character of the individual citizen. But many of these evils are of such a nature that no private effort can avail against them. These evils, therefore, must be grappled with by governmental action. In some cases this governmental action must be exercised by the several states individually.

> In yet others it has become increasingly evident that no efficient state action is possible, and that we need through executive action, through legislation, and through judicial interpretation and construction of law, to increase the power of the federal government.

If we fail thus to increase it, we show our impotence and leave ourselves at the mercy of those ingenious advisers of the holders of vast corporate wealth, who, in the performance of what they regard as their duty, and to serve the ends of their clients, invoke the law at one time for the confounding of their rivals, and at another time strive for the nullification of the law, in order that they themselves may be left free to work their unbridled will on these same rivals, or on those who labor for them, or on the general public. In the exercise of their profession and in the service of their clients these astute lawyers strive to prevent the passage of efficient laws and strive to secure judicial determinations of those that pass which shall emasculate them. They do not invoke the constitution in order to compel the due observance of law alike by rich and poor, by great and small; on the contrary, they are ceaselessly on the watch to cry out that the constitution is violated whenever any effort is made to invoke the aid of the national government, whether for the efficient regulation of railroads, for the efficient supervision of great corporations, or for efficiently securing obedience to such a law as the national eight-hour law and similar so-called "labor statutes."

The doctrine they preach would make the constitution merely the shield of incompetence and the excuse for governmental paralysis; they treat it as a justification for refusing to attempt the remedy of evil, instead of as the source of vital power necessary for the existence of a mighty and ever-growing nation.

Strong nationalist though I am, and firm though my belief is that there must be a wide extension of the power of the national government to deal with questions of this kind, I freely admit that as regards many matters of first rate importance we must rely purely upon the states for the betterment of present conditions.

> The several states must do their duty or our citizenship can never be put on a proper plane.

Therefore I most heartily congratulate the people of the state of Pennsylvania on what its legislature, upon what its government, has accomplished during this present year. It is a remarkable record of achievement.

Through your legislature you have abolished passes; you have placed the offices of the secretary of the commonwealth and the insurance commissioner upon an honorable and honest basis of salary by abolishing the fee system; you have passed a law compelling the officers and employes of great cities to attend to the duties for which they are paid by all the taxpayers, and to refrain from using the power conferred by their offices to influence political campaigns; you have prohibited the solicitation or receiving of political assessments by city employes; you have by law protected the state treasury from depredation and conserved the public moneys for use only in the public interest; you have by a law for the protection of the elective franchise made tampering with the ballot boxes and the casting of illegal votes so difficult as in all probability to be unprofitable; you have provided a primary election law which guarantees to the voters free expression in the selection of candidates for office; you have by law regulated and improved the civil service systems of your greatest cities; and, finally, you have passed a law containing a provision which I most earnestly hope will in substance be embodied likewise in a law by the congress at the coming session—a provision prohibiting the officers of any corporation from making a contribution of the money of that corporation to any candidate or any political committee for the payment of any election expenses whatever.

It is surely not too much to say that this body of substantive legislation marks an epoch in the history of the practical betterment of political conditions, not merely for your state, but for all our states. I do not recall any other state legislature, which, in a similar length of time, has to its credit such a body of admirable legislation. Let me, however, most earnestly urge that your legislature continue this record of public service by enacting one or two additional laws.

> One subject which every good citizen should have at heart above almost all others is the matter of child labor.

Everywhere the great growth of modern industrialism has been accompanied by abuses in connection with the employment of labor which have necessitated a complete change in the attitude of the state toward labor.

This is above all true in connection with the employment of child labor. In Pennsylvania you have made a beginning, but only a beginning, in proper legislation and administration on this subject; the law must if necessary be strengthened, and it must be rigorously enforced. The national government can do but little in the matter of child labor, though I earnestly hope that that little will be permitted to be done by congress. The great bulk of the work, however, must be left to the state legislatures; and if our state legislatures would act as drastically and yet as wisely on this subject of child labor as Pennsylvania has acted within the present year as regards the subjects I have enumerated above, the gain would be literally incalculable; and one of the most vital needs of modern American life would at last be adequately met.

So much for the state. Not for the nation; and here I cannot do better than base my theory of governmental action upon the words and deeds of one of Pennsylvania's greatest sons, Justice James Wilson. Wilson's career has been singularly overlooked for many years, but I believe that more and more it is now being adequately appreciated; and I congratulate your state upon the fact that Wilson's body is to be taken away from where it now rests and brought back to lie, as it should, in Pennsylvania soil. He was a signer of the declaration of independence. He was one of the men who saw that the Revolution, in which he had served as a soldier, would be utterly fruitless unless it was followed by a close and permanent union of the states; and in the constitutional convention, and in securing the adoption of the constitution and expounding what it meant, he rendered services even greater than he rendered as a member of the continental congress, which declared our independence; for it was the success of the makers and preservers of the Union which justified our independence.

He believed in the people with the faith of Abraham Lincoln; and coupled with his faith in the people he had what most of the men who in his generation believed in the people did not have; that is, the courage to recognize the fact that faith in the people amounted to nothing unless the representatives of the people assembled together in the national government were given full and complete power to work on behalf of the people.

> He developed even before Marshall the doctrine (absolutely essential not merely to the efficiency but to the existence of this nation) that an inherent power rested in the nation, outside of the enumerated powers conferred upon it by the constitution, in all cases where the object involved was beyond the power of the several states and was a power ordinarily exercised by sovereign nations.

In a remarkable letter in which he advocated setting forth in early and clear fashion the powers of the national government, he laid down the proposition that it should be made clear that there were neither vacancies nor interferences between the limits of state and national jurisdiction, and that both jurisdictions together composed only one uniform and comprehensive system of government and laws; that is, whenever the states can not act, because the need to be met is not one of merely a single locality, then the national government, representing all the people, should have complete power to act. It was in the spirit of Wilson that Washington, and Washington's lieutenant, Hamilton, acted; and it was in the same spirit that Marshall construed the law.

It is only by acting in this spirit that the national judges, legislators and executives can give a satisfactory solution of the great question of the present day—the question of providing on behalf of the sovereign people the means which will enable the people in effective form to assert their sovereignty over the immense corporations of the day. Certain judicial decisions have done just what Wilson feared; they have, as a matter of fact, left vacancies, left blanks between the limits of possible state jurisdiction and the limits of actual national jurisdiction over the control of the great business corporations. It is the narrow construction of the powers of the national government which in our democracy has proved the chief means of limiting the national power to cut out abuses, and which is now the chief bulwark of those great moneyed interests which oppose and dread any attempt to place them under efficient governmental control.

Many legislative actions and many judicial decisions which I am confident time will show to have been erroneous and a damage to the country would have been avoided if our legislators and jurists had approached the matter of enacting and construing the laws of the land in the spirit of your great Pennsylvanian, Justice Wilson—in the spirit of Marshall and of Washington. Such decisions put us at a great disadvantage in the battle for industrial order as against the present industrial chaos. If we interpret the constitution in narrow instead of broad fashion, if we forsake the principles of Washington, Marshall, Wilson and Hamilton, we as a people will render ourselves impotent to deal with any abuses which may be committed by the men who have accumulated the enormous fortunes of today, and who use these forces in still vaster corporate form in business.

The legislative or judicial actions and decisions of which I complain, be it remembered, do not really leave to the states power to deal with corporate wealth in business. Actual experience has shown that the states are wholly powerless to deal with this subject; and any action or decision that deprives the nation of the power to deal with it simply results in leaving the corporations absolutely free to work without any effective supervision whatever; and such a course is fraught with untold danger to the future of our whole system of government, and, indeed, to our whole civilization.

> All honest men must abhor and reprobate any effort to excite hostility to men of wealth as such.

We should do all we can to encourage thrift and business energy, to put a premium upon the conduct of the man who honestly earns his livelihood and more than his livelihood, and who honestly uses the money he has earned. But it is our clear duty to see, in the interest of the people, that there is adequate supervision and control over the business use of the swollen fortunes of today, and also wisely to determine the conditions upon which these fortunes are to be transmitted and the percentage that they shall pay to the government whose protecting arm alone enables them to exist. Only the nation can do this work. To relegate it to the states is a farce, and is simply another way of saying that it shall not be done at all.

Under a wise and farseeing interpretation of the interstate commerce clause of the constitution, I maintain that the national government should have complete power to deal with all of this wealth which in any way goes into the commerce between the states—and practically all of it that is employed in the great corporations does thus go in. The national legislators should most scrupulously avoid any demagogic legislation about the business use of this wealth, and should realize that it would be better to have no legislation at all than legislation couched either in a vindictive spirit of hatred toward men of wealth or else drawn with the recklessness of impracticable visionaries. But, on the other hand, it shall and must ultimately be understood that the United States government, on behalf of the people of the United States, has and is to exercise the power of supervision and control over the business use of this wealth—in the first place, over all the work of the common carriers of the nation, and in the next place over the work of all the great corporations which directly or indirectly do any interstate business whatever—and this includes almost all of the great corporations.

During the last few years the national government has taken very long strides in the direction of exercising and securing this adequate control over the great corporations, and it was under the leadership of one of the most honored public men in our country, one of Pennsylvania's most eminent sons—the present senator, and then attorney general, Knox—that the new departure was begun. Events have moved fast during the last five years and it is curious to look back at the extreme bitterness which not merely the spokesmen and representatives of organized wealth, but many most excellent conservative people then felt as to the action of Mr. Knox and of the administration.

> Many of the greatest financiers of this country were certain that Mr. Knox's Northern Securities suit, if won, would plunge us into the worst panic we had ever seen.

They denounced as incitement to anarchy, as an apology for socialism, the advocacy of policies that either have now become law or are in a fair way of becoming law; and yet these same policies, so far from representing either anarchy or socialism, were in reality the antidotes to anarchy, the antidotes to socialism. To exercise a constantly increasing and constantly more efficient supervision and control over the great common carriers of the country prevents all necessity for seriously considering such a project as the government ownership of railroads—a policy which would be evil in its results from every standpoint.

A similar extension of the national power to oversee and secure correct behavior in the management of all great corporations engaged in interstate business will in similar fashion render far more stable the present system by doing away with those grave abuses which are not only evil in themselves but are also evil because they furnish an excuse for agitators to inflame well-meaning people against all forms of property, and to commit the country to schemes of wild, would-be remedy which would work infinitely more harm than the disease itself. The government ought not to conduct the business of the country; but it ought to regulate it so that it shall be conducted in the interest of the public.

Perhaps the best justification of the course which in the national government we have been pursuing in the past few years, and which we intend steadily and progressively to pursue in the future is that it is condemned with almost equal rancor alike by the reactionaries—the Bourbons—on one side, and by the wild apostles of unrest on the other. The reactionary is bitterly angry because we have deprived him of that portion of his power which he misuses to the public hurt; the agitator is angered for various reasons, including among others the fact that by remedying the abuses we have deprived him of the fulcrum of real grievance, which alone renders the lever of irrational agitation formidable.

We have actually accomplished much. But we have not accomplished all nor anything like all, that we feel must be acomplished. We shall not halt; we shall steadily follow the path we have marked out, executing the laws we have succeeded in putting upon the statute books with absolute impartiality as between man and man, and unresting in our endeavor to strengthen and supplement these by further laws which shall enable us in more efficient and more summary fashion to achieve the ends we have in view.

During the last few years congress has had to deal with such vitally important questions as providing for the building of the Panama canal, inaugurating the vast system of national irrigation in the states of the great plains and the Rocky mountains, providing for a Pacific cable, and so forth. Yet in addition to these tasks, some of which are of stupendous importance, congress has taken giant strides along the path of governmental regulation and control of corporations; the interstate commerce law has been made effective in a radical and far-reaching fashion, rebates have been stopped, a pure food law has been passed, proper supervision of the meat packing business provided, and the bureau of corporations established—a bureau which has already done great good, and which can and should be given a constantly increasing functional power.

The work of legislation has been no more important than the work done by the department of justice in executing the laws, not only against corporations and individuals who have broken the anti-trust or inter-state commerce law, but against those who have been engaged in land frauds. Scores of suits, civil and criminal, have been successfully undertaken against offenders of all kinds—many of them against the most formidable and wealthy combinations in the land; in some the combinations have been dissolved, in some heavy fines have been imposed, in several cases the chief offenders have been imprisoned.

It behooves us Americans to look ahead and plan out the right kind of civilization, as that which we intend to develop from these wonderful new conditions of vast industrial growth.

> It must not be, it shall not be, the civilazation of a mere plutocracy, a banking house, Wall-street-syndicate civilization; nor yet can there be submission to class hatred, to rancor, brutality, and mob violence, for that would means the end of all civilization.

Increased powers are susceptible of abuse as well as use; never before have the opportunities for selfishness been so great, nor the results of selfishness so appalling; for in communities where everything is organized on a merely selfish commercial basis, such selfishness, if unchecked, may transform the great forces of the new epoch into powers of destruction hitherto unequaled.

We need to check the forces of greed, to insure just treatment alike of capital and of labor, and of the general public, to prevent any man, rich or poor, from doing or receiving wrong, whether this wrong be one of cunning or of violence. Much can be done by wise legislation and by resolute enforcement of the law. But still more must be done by steady training of the individual citizen, in conscience and character, until he grows to abhor corruption and greed and tyranny and brutality and to prize justice and fair dealing.

The men who are to do the work of the new epoch must be trained so as to have a sturdy self-respect, a power of sturdy insistence on their own rights, and with it a proud and generous recognition of their duties, a sense of honorable obligation to their fellows, which will bind them, as by bands of steel, to refrain in their daily work at home or in their business from doing aught to any man which can not be blazoned under the noonday sun.

The president wore a raincoat and spoke bareheaded in the rain.

The crowd surged dangerously about one of the street corners, several thousand persons being in the struggling masses. Matters assumed such a stage that Col. Joseph B. Hutchinson, commander of the Eighth regiment, N. G. P., and chief of Harrisburg's police, rode into the crowd with the aid of a squad of guardsmen and quieted the people and complete order was restored.

After the cheering that greeted the president at the conclusion of his address had died away, Bishop Darlington of Harrisburg invoked the divine benediction, bringing the exercises to a close.

The moment the ceremonies were over a parade, which included one brigade of the Pennsylvania National Guard, cadets from the Carlisle Indian school and soldiers orphans' schools, passed in review before the president.

After the parade, the president and his party were afforded an opportunity to inspect the capitol. This was followed by a luncheon at the executive mansion in honor of the president, at which forty guests were present.

The new capitol of Pennsylvania is one of the most beautiful and imposing buildings in the United States, not only in its architecture, but also in its interior decorations and furnishings. Thus far the building and its furnishings represent an expenditure of about $13,000,000. Except for the hanging of the mural paintings by Edwin A. Abbey and Violet Oakley and the settings of the statues of George Gray Barnard, the sculptor, the capitol is practically complete. The building is Roman-Corinthian in its general design and is faced with Barre granite. It covers a trifle more than two acres of ground, and stands on the site of the capitol destroyed by fire in February, 1897.

The capitol consists of a main building and two wings, the total length being 525 feet and the breadth 254 feet. The whole is surmounted with a dome rising 262 feet above the first floor. The most striking feature of the exterior ornamentation is the employment of thirty-two great granite monoliths, each weighing thirty-five tons. The interior of the dome is decorated in gold, cream and blue, and at the top there is a patch of sky studded with glittering stars.

A striking feature of the interior of the dome, because it catches the eye of the visitor as he gazes upward at every point, is the inscription encircling it in massive letters:

"There may be room there for such a holy experiment, for the nations wait a precedent, and my God will make it the seed of a nation that an example may be set up to the nations, that we may do the thing that is truly wise and just."

They are the words of William Penn, and were selected by Governor Pennypacker.

A Certain Cure for Croup—Used for Ten Years Without a Failure.

Mr. W. C. Bott, a Star City, Ind., hardware merchant, is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. His children have all been subject to croup and he has used this remedy for the past ten years, and though they much feared the croup, his wife and he always felt safe upon retiring when a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was in the house. His oldest child was subject to severe attacks of croup, but this remedy never failed to effect a speedy cure. He has recommended it to friends and neighbors and all who have used it say that it is unequaled for croup and whooping cough. For sale by all druggists.

HOUSEHOLDERS, ATTENTION!

Reduction In Electric Lighting Rates.

On September 1st a reduction in Electric Lighting Rates was put into effect, which makes the maximum rate for lighting 8 cents net per 1,000 Watt hours—this is less than one-half a cent per hour for a 16-candle-power lamp. One 16-candle-power lamp consumes 60 Watts per hour, which at 8 cents per 1,000 Watts would amount to 48-100 cents per hour, or less than one-half cent.

Example: If you burn one 16-candle-power lamp ten hours at the old rate of 13½ cents it would amount to 8 1-10 cents. At the new rate, 8 cents, it would amount to 4 8-10 cents, which means a reduction of over 40 per cent.

This reduction in rates makes possible the use of Electricity, for lighting, in every home in Duluth. From the view point of sanitation, economy, convenience, beauty and safety, it is truly the ideal and, consequently, the most desirable light.

CONCERNING WOMEN

The opening of the ninth season of the Twentieth Century club of this city, took place this morning when the first meeting of the Shakespeare class was held at the club room of the library. This class opens the season with a discussion and reading of one of the plays of the great French dramatists and for the remainder of the season the plays of the great Englishman will be studied.

This morning Wilson G. Crosby, a student of the French drama, spoke to the club members and their friends on the Beaumarchais comedy, "The Barber of Seville" and devoted a most interesting hour to the discussion and reading of the character of Figaro and the noted author's introduction to the play. A large number of club women were present and a most happy and successful year is anticipated.

The plays of Shakespeare which will be studied are "Henry VIII" and "Romeo and Juliet."

The next meeting of the club will be held Monday afternoon of next week when the president's reception will be held, Miss Statham being honored and also Mrs. J. L. Washburn, president of the Minnesota state federation of women's clubs.

"CHILDREN OF CITY."

Subject of Talk by Miss Eleanor Thomson.

The first meeting of the year of the Forward Guild of the First Presbyterian church will be held Saturday afternoon of this week at 3 o'clock with the president, Mrs. J. A. Stephenson of 1931 East First street. The plan of work for the year will be decided upon and the speaker Saturday will be Miss Eleanor Thomson who will speak of the work among the children of the city. The Guild is an organization of the younger women of the church and a large attendance is urged for Saturday afternoon.

DANCING PARTY.

Brilliant Affair Given by Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Cole.

One of the brilliant fall functions of society was the dancing party given last evening at the Spalding, at which Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Cole were hosts in honor of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Powell of Arizona. The dancing hall of the Spalding was most attractively decorated with flowers and ferns, exquisite American beauty roses and the autumn flowers, asters in pink and white also adding to the beauty of the decoration. The orchestra was stationed behind a screen of palms and ferns, studded at intervals with flowers and Flaaten's orchestra played a delightful program of dancing music. The guests were:

Messrs. and Mesdames—
F. W. Hargraves, T. W. Hoopes, S. T. Harrison, W. H. Salter, J. A. Stephenson, T. H. Hawkes, Jr., O. W. C. Brown, Herbert Warren, John Panton, M. B. Culium, J. Uno Sebenius, W. M. Prindle, R. M. Masters—
Joe Kluge, Walter Thomason, Sydney Carter, Earl Hendricks, Morris Belsey, Nels Belsey, Mike Blackel, Edward Blackel.

Bridge Party.

Miss Belle Simonds entertained at bridge yesterday afternoon at her home at 323 West Second street, in honor of Miss Anna Dickenson. The game was played at four tables and the favors were won by Mrs. Rowland Starr and Mrs. H. F. Williamson. The guest prize went to Miss Dickenson.

Cards.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Ham entertained pleasantly at cards last evening at their home, 407 East Sixth street. The card favors were won by Mrs. George Hartness and J. Dorsey and in a guessing contest of the evening the prize was won by George Hartness. There were ten guests.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. A. C. Pearson and son, Galen, of 1213 East Fourth street have returned from a several weeks' visit at Buffalo, N. Y.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Achenbach, who have been abroad this summer, sailed today from Liverpool and are expected home within ten days.

• • •

Mrs. Anton Christopherson of Virginia was the guest of Mrs. O. C. Nelson of this city the first of the week.

• • •

Mrs. Kenneth McLennan and daughter left last evening for a visit at Mrs. McLennan's home, at Quincy, Mich.

• • •

To Speak Sunday.

The speaker at the Sunday afternoon devotional service at the Young Women's Christian association will be Rev. W. E. Woodruff, state evangelist for the Baptist church. Rev. Woodruff is holding a series of meetings this week at the Central Baptist church of this city, and many who have been unable to hear him during the week will be glad of the opportunity Sunday afternoon. His subject for address before the members of the association will be "The Primacy of Womanhood."

Surprise Party.

Miss Nellie Hendricks was pleasantly surprised last evening at her home at 124 North Fifty-third avenue west, in honor of her eleventh birth anniversary. A delightful evening was passed by the following little people:

Misses—
Ethel Lane, Maggie Lane, Florence Duby, Sarah Higgins, Lillian Hendricks, Agnes Belsey, Elizabeth Carter, Marie Caya, Nettie Forget, Mollie Hendricks.

Masters—
Joe Kluge, Walter Thomason, Sydney Carter, Earl Hendricks, Morris Belsey, Nels Belsey, Mike Blackel, Edward Blackel.

What Retail Markets Offer

Rockford melons, 18 cents each.

Especially fine celery, 5 cents a bunch.

Citrons, 15 cents each.

Egg plant, 15 cents each.

Colorado peaches, 25 cents a basket.

And

A few cantaloupes have traversed the distance from Colorado to the Duluth market, and they are delightful little round melons, of the Rockford variety. When thinking about it there doesn't seem to be anything which would be quite so nice as Rockford melons, chilled and even surrounded with ice, for breakfast every morning. The trouble is that the person who does the ordering is usually so thriftily cautious, and would much rather have peaches this morning, and so be able to afford baked apples tomorrow morning, rather than in one spasm of lavish and delightful extravagance have melons today and do without fruit tomorrow. For those of you who have the doubtful pleasure of gratifying all your desires, get melons.

The other luxury, exclusive and rare, is bear meat. Somebody has been killing those dear, clumsy, awkward, and ever young things, and in one of the shops you may find chops and steaks and roasts cut from this lover of the free and open, in just the same manner as if he were a silly cow.

Comparison Tells the Tale!

Said a woman yesterday: "I've shopped in about every store worth while in town and have come to the conclusion that I've wasted a lot of time.

"You really do show more nice garments — it seems to me—than all of the other Duluth stores—I shouldn't think you would have any competition with such stocks and qualities that you carry—and the values you offer!

"I really feel pleased to know that we have such a splendid store in Duluth—but I presume that it takes others about as long as it did me to find it out!

"Now that I have shopped around I am satisfied, and if this garment gives me satisfaction I feel that I will not only make you a good customer, but send many of my friends here."

The lady will be satisfied of that, you may be sure—we have built up this business by satisfying our trade, and will continue doing so, though we are not infallible—if anything is wrong at any time, if you are displeased—in any way—tell us—we're here to make any Wrongs Right!

HUGHES ON THE ISSUE

Declares There is Only One, That of Decent Government.

Should the Unholy Alliance Capture State of New York?

New York, Oct. 4.—With the declaration that the issue in the forthcoming campaign in this state is not to be one of Republican principles or of Democratic principles, or a partisan issue at all, but the vital issue of decent government, Charles E. Hughes of this city, last night formally accepted the nomination for governor, which was brought to him by a committee from the Republican state convention recently held at Saratoga.

The ceremonies of the notification were held at the Republican club in West Fortieth street and followed a dinner at which Mr. Hughes met the members of the new Republican state central committee, who had been in session here yesterday. At the dinner were Former Governor Odell and Former Governor Frank S. Black. They were among the first to congratulate Mr. Hughes upon the conclusion of his brief speech.

When the candidate mentioned President Roosevelt his auditors broke into cheering, which continued for some time. When Mr. Hughes characterized the opposition as "a masquerade, an Independence league whose independence has been betrayed, and a so-called but spurious Democratic party which has violated every principle of Democratic government," his supporters gave themselves over to an outburst which caused Mr. Hughes' usually serious face to break into smiles.

The speech of notification was made by State Senator W. M. Armstrong, chairman of the committee appointed by the Saratoga convention. All of the candidates were present.

"Since your nomination," said Senator Armstrong, "there have come from many sources such signs of popular approval that your election is fore-ordained."

Mr. Hughes then responded as follows:

"Highly appreciating the honor you have conferred, and realizing keenly the responsibility to be assumed, I accept the nomination. As a life-long Republican, as one loyal to the principles and best traditions of the party, I respond to the unanimous call of the convention. I recognize the exigency which has made us the trustees of the conscience and sober sentiment of the people of the state and has charged us with the duty of leadership in a contest for decent government.

"We enter upon the campaign inspired by the example and fortified by the achievements of our great leader, Theodore Roosevelt. The national administration, with its record of established reforms, has strengthened its hold upon the confidence of the people. Governmental powers for investigation and prosecution have been freely used to end the abuses and discriminations which have afflicted interstate commerce, to break up unlawful combinations and to enforce the provisions of the anti-trust act. The activities of congress in the interest of all the people have been attested by the passage of the railroad rate act, the meat inspection act, the pure food act and the employers' liability act.

"In referring to the record of the federal administration I should not be understood to imply that this is a campaign of national issues. The paramount issues in this campaign are state issues. But in the matters which I have mentioned we find a notable record of achievement which present a striking contrast to the noisy pretensions of the hour.

"Our state administration has also accomplished many genuine reforms."

Here Mr. Hughes enumerated the reforms, with special reference to life insurance companies.

"What do we find in opposition to us?" he asked. "A masquerade, an Independence league whose independence has been betrayed, and a so-called Democratic party which has violated every principle of Democratic government.

"If you would know the sort of administration you should have in the event of their success, look at the Buffalo convention; for there you will find their motives and their methods mirrored; their motive, selfishness, and their method, intrigue.

"We test the sincerity of their independence by their efforts to procure the Democratic nomination; of their denunciation of bosses, by their deals with bosses; of their appeals to American ideals, by their despotic proceedings; of their attacks upon money in politics, by their use of money in politics; of their devotion to the interests of the people, by their efforts to foment disorders and exploit ignorance in the interests of selfish ambition.

"The supreme issue of this campaign is the vital issue of decent government.

"The question is whether the unholy alliance that succeeded at Buffalo shall capture the state of New York.

"In my message to the convention I stated that if elected it would be my ambition to give the state a sane, efficient and honorable administration, free from any taint of bossism or of servitude to any private interest. This is my position in a nutshell.

"Every practical measure for the real benefit of labor will have my cordial support.

"I shall spare no effort to make effective the reforms in the business of life insurance, so essential to the interests of policyholders.

"I promise the enforcement of the law with equal severity and in equal justice to all, rich and poor, corporations and individuals.

"We make our appeal to the common sense of the American people, which has never failed to express itself decisively in a great crisis. We are pledged to achieve reforms in the American manner, in accord with the genus of our institutions and with love of truth and even-handed justice.

"It is in this spirit and with these pledges alone that I accept the nomination."

OIL KING ASSERTS THAT AMERICA IS ENGAGED IN TEARING DOWN BUSINESS

quarter for us if they win. We can not foretell what her competition will be, we do not know the resources of the new territory which she controls, we can not guess the commercial and industrial possibilities of the Japanese.

"At this critical stage we are giving the enemy ammunition to fire at us. He is quick to seize this advantage. Take the attack we made upon our own packing business, for instance. I know none of the men in the beef trade. I never dealt with them, nor was I ever associated even with their business or themselves. But it is safe to assume from the proportions of their industry that they are sound business men. And it is safe to assume, too, that no business could have been built to such proportions on such false principles, or by such unsound methods as they were charged with.

"I was in Europe when the attack was made at home upon these men and their industry and I could watch the effect of it there at close range. Those fellows abroad snatched at our own charges against our own business with the greatest glee. They used them promptly as ammunition with which to attack America and everything American, especially manufactured products and trade. I do not believe there was a line of American goods sold abroad that was not injured, or an American agent doing business abroad whose work was not hampered by this.

"We are too young a nation for this tearing down. Our position is by no means secure. It is like repeating a, b, c, to say that we cannot consume our total production. We must sell abroad or do less business. Reducing the volume of our production means less work, less wages, less business transacted, at the very least. It is checking our development instead of furthering it. Is it common sense, then, to handicap our export trade at home, to attack the good name of our business for the benefit of our foreign rivals?

"Is it common sense to tell our young men, on whom the future must depend, that they can hope for no other reward for carrying our commercial flag forward than frenzied attacks at home, and all the handicaps their own government can pile upon their business to satisfy the violent prejudice excited against them?"

Referring to a subpoena recently issued, requiring him to appear in court in an action against the Standard Oil company, Mr. Rockefeller said:

"While I was in active business I used to always respond. But now I am not in a position to give these inquiring people the information they want. They know that as well as I do. If they really wanted information it is other men they would summon, the men who have the information they want. They know that also. So I am reluctantly compelled to conclude that it is notoriety they want rather than information. I yield to no man in respect for law, but I am unable to see where the little notoriety an inquisitor might get from putting me on the stand would serve the ends of justice. So I avoid the ordeal, with its exhaustion, when I can, and preserve my strength and quiet."

GIVING UP THEIR ARMS.

rural guards, and butchered 200 head of cattle. The motive for this destruction is said to have been personal spite.

In addition to the American marines at Cienfuegos there are detachments in other Santa Clara towns as follows: Cruces, 50; Esperanza, 25; Santo Domingo, 25; Sagua La Grande, 50; Palmyra, 35; and the Horminguero plantation, 12.

Other detachments are guarding American properties in the Manicaragua district. The disarming commission proceeded for Cienfuegos yesterday afternoon, accompanied by the former rebel leader, Gen. Guzeman.

Officials of the Cuban central railroad estimate that the insurgents damaged the road to the extent of $190,000.

Governor Taft has received a dispatch that the threatened disturbances in Cienfuegos have been obviated by the withdrawal of the insurgents from that city.

Governor Taft now occupies the office in which the affairs of Cuba have been administered successively by the Spanish governors of the islands, Gen. Leonard Wood and President Palma. He established himself in these quarters yesterday afternoon. He will take up his residence in the palace in a few days. The staff of the American commands will continue practically without change. Mr. Rockwood, stenographer to Mr. Taft, will act as secretary to the governor.

Col. E. H. Crowder, judge advocate, said that the continuance of the status of the Cuban republic without change obviates practically every legal difficulty which might otherwise have been caused by the establishment of a provisional government.

Maj. Melville reports that 1,000 arms have been quietly turned over to the commission.

A correspondent of the Associated Press, who traversed the region westward of Havana, in which the rebels have been encamped, says their numbers are rapidly decreasing, and that traffic on the main roads is being fully resumed. In some places, the correspondent adds, the odor of slaughtered cattle and pigs and of dead horses is very offensive.

Gen. Del Castillo made many promotions of officers before his force was disbanded. He characterized the work of the revolutionary junta in New York as a failure, saying that it had sent no money or arms or anything else to Cuba. It is a fact that the insurgents had scarcely any ammunition left.

After the departure of the brigade of rebels from Guanajay, Gen. Castillo said there were still 2,990 men of his forces, and 2,000 belonging to Gen. Guerra to be discharged. Maj. Ladd ordered an abundance of supplies to feed the remaining insurgents. There was some grumbling, last evening, by men who declared that the United States was buying them off with a little food, but the general tone was of good nature and obedience to their leaders.

MISS FEALY'S CLOSE CALL

MISS MAUDE FEALY.

Miss Maude Fealy, who is this season starring in Martha Morton's delightful new comedy, "The Illusion of Beatrice," tells a charming little story reminiscent of the late Sir Henry Irving, during her experience as leading lady for Sir Henry at the famous Drury Lane theater, London, England.

The story is perhaps best told in Miss Fealy's own words: "The first week passed most beautifully. I played all my roles, but the second week I had an accident which came near being serious. I thought the list of plays each week would be played in rotation, as they were the first, and, as I did not appear in one of the plays, the one which was played the corresponding day of the week previous, I sat slowly finishing my dinner and asking my mother where we would spend the evening, when the call boy rushed into my room, saying: 'Miss Fealy, the prologue of 'Becket' is over and the overture of your act is on.' To this day I don't recall my sensations. I believe I was deaf, dumb, and blind. Finally, the words, 'it is raining' caught my ears, and I said, 'get a cab' and rushed upstairs for my hat. I never got the hat, but came down clutching my two hat pins, and when we arrived, the hat pins were still in my possession. Fortunately, I lived near the theater, so in a few minutes we arrived. I fell out of the cab, across the stage, stumbled and ran into Sir Henry. No one had told him of my non-appearance, and the call boy, who was my friend, wished me to avoid meeting Sir Henry, but fate or time decreed it otherwise. So, after picking myself up, I fell upstairs, and Sir Henry's words reached me: 'Never mind! America was never left yet.'

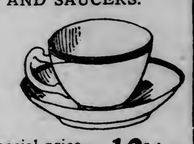

"And thank goodness, she wasn't in that case. With the assistance of two maids, I was ready before the overture had ceased. How it was managed, I will never know."

THE FIRST WIFE BECOMES FIFTH

Wisconsin Woman Remarried to Husband of Her Youth.

Portage, Wis., Oct. 4.—A romance of more than ordinary interest was concealed in a marriage recorded here last week. Joseph Waldo of Missouri and Mrs. Martha Kennedy of Endeavor were the contracting parties, and this was their second appearance at the altar together.

When they were younger they met, loved, married and reared a family. Mr. Waldo did not prosper, and after several years of married life Mrs. Waldo concluded that she could do better alone. There was no quarrel and no differences, other than the financial one, between the couple and when the separation took place Mrs. Waldo accompanied her husband to the station and kissed him good-bye. Then she obtained a divorce.

After a trial of single blessedness Mrs. Waldo concluded that condition of life was not as satisfactory as she had anticipated, and married again. Being left a widow, she married a third time and a fourth time, the present marriage to her first husband being her fifth matrimonial venture.

Mr. Waldo in the years that have elapsed since his separation seems to have found no other woman who could take the place in his affections occupied by the first Mrs. Waldo, and having accumulated in the meantime a snug little fortune, he sought out his first love, again wooed her and led her to the altar for the second time.

THE STAGE

NO ORDINARY ROMANCE.

"The Bishop's Carriage," Channing Pollock's dramatization of Miriam Michelson's widely read story, which will be presented at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday, is in no sense an ordinary romance. The heroine is not what the average man would call a beautiful character, or one whom he would select to preside over his house and home. In fact, she was a thief, and a very clever and unrepentent one at that. For nearly four acts she is lawless and headstrong—but fascinating in a remarkable degree. It was this fascination that won the love of a wealthy and socially prominent young man, who braved the verdict of his friends and the public by taking so deep an interest in her that finally she saw the error of her ways and turned to a new life. The very difficult role of Nance Olden, the thief, is played by Jessie Busley.

STORY OF DAVE MARION.

Dave Marion, the author-composer-comedian of "Roseland," which the Dreamland Burlesquers are giving at the Metropolitan this week, was a great card-player when he was younger, and it is said that he occasionally takes a hand on the train now. But he was much more addicted to cards years ago. So much so that his mother would remonstrate with him. One day she said:

"A great deal of time is wasted, is there not, dear, in playing cards?"

"Yes, mother," said Dave, "there is—in shuffling and dealing."

This is ladies' day at the Metropolitan, both afternoon and evening performances being for women as well as men. The show is very clean throughout. There will be another matinee Saturday and the Dreamlanders will close their engagement with a performance Saturday evening.

RED NOSES

A Simple Treatments That Effects a Cure In a Short Time.

A red nose causes unfavorable comment. Women suffer as much as men from this annoying skin trouble, but close attention to a few simple rules will soon restore the nose to its natural color. Tight clothing and ill-fitting shoes must be at once discarded. So much for the external causes. The blood and stomach are the next things to look after, as poor surface circulation and faulty digestion are responsible for most red noses.

Avoid rich food and take Beecham's Pills after meals and on retiring, and the nose will soon lose its red and angry look. This is because Beecham's Pills strengthen the stomach, carry off all impurities and quickly improve the circulation of the blood. These pills cure red noses by removing the conditions that are responsible for these unsightly facial blemishes.

"CHILDREN OF CITY."

Subject of Talk by Miss Eleanor Thomson.

The first meeting of the year of the Forward Guild of the First Presbyterian church will be held Saturday afternoon of this week at 3 o'clock with the president, Mrs. J. A. Stephenson of 1931 East First street. The plan of work for the year will be decided upon and the speaker Saturday will be Miss Eleanor Thomson who will speak of the work among the children of the city. The Guild is an organization of the younger women of the church and a large attendance is urged for Saturday afternoon.

DANCING PARTY.

Brilliant Affair Given by Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Cole.

One of the brilliant fall functions of society was the dancing party given last evening at the Spalding, at which Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Cole were hosts in honor of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Powell of Arizona. The dancing hall of the Spalding was most attractively decorated with flowers and ferns, exquisite American beauty roses and the autumn flowers, asters in pink and white also adding to the beauty of the decoration. The orchestra was stationed behind a screen of palms and ferns, studded at intervals with flowers and Flaaten's orchestra played a delightful program of dancing music. The guests were:

Bridge Party.

Miss Belle Simonds entertained at bridge yesterday afternoon at her home at 323 West Second street, in honor of Miss Anna Dickenson. The game was played at four tables and the favors were won by Mrs. Rowland Starr and Mrs. H. F. Williamson. The guest prize went to Miss Dickenson.

Cards.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Ham entertained pleasantly at cards last evening at their home, 407 East Sixth street. The card favors were won by Mrs. George Hartness and J. Dorsey and in a guessing contest of the evening the prize was won by George Hartness. There were ten guests.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. A. C. Pearson and son, Galen, of 1213 East Fourth street have returned from a several weeks' visit at Buffalo, N. Y.

Miss Putnam of Grand Rapids, Mich., is the guest of Miss Simonds.

To Speak Sunday.

The speaker at the Sunday afternoon devotional service at the Young Women's Christian association will be Rev. W. E. Woodruff, state evangelist for the Baptist church. Rev. Woodruff is holding a series of meetings this week at the Central Baptist church of this city, and many who have been unable to hear him during the week will be glad of the opportunity Sunday afternoon. His subject for address before the members of the association will be "The Primacy of Womanhood."

What Retail Markets Offer

Rockford melons, 18 cents each.

Especially fine celery, 5 cents a bunch.

Citrons, 15 cents each.

Egg plant, 15 cents each.

Colorado peaches, 25 cents a basket.

And

A few cantaloupes have traversed the distance from Colorado to the Duluth market, and they are delightful little round melons, of the Rockford variety. When thinking about it there doesn't seem to be anything which would be quite so nice as Rockford melons, chilled and even surrounded with ice, for breakfast every morning. The trouble is that the person who does the ordering is usually so thriftily cautious, and would much rather have peaches this morning, and so be able to afford baked apples tomorrow morning, rather than in one spasm of lavish and delightful extravagance have melons today and do without fruit tomorrow. For those of you who have the doubtful pleasure of gratifying all your desires, get melons.

The other luxury, exclusive and rare, is bear meat. Somebody has been killing those dear, clumsy, awkward, and ever young things, and in one of the shops you may find chops and steaks and roasts cut from this lover of the free and open, in just the same manner as if he were a silly cow.

Comparison Tells the Tale!

Said a woman yesterday: "I've shopped in about every store worth while in town and have come to the conclusion that I've wasted a lot of time.

"You really do show more nice garments — it seems to me—than all of the other Duluth stores—I shouldn't think you would have any competition with such stocks and qualities that you carry—and the values you offer!

"I really feel pleased to know that we have such a splendid store in Duluth—but I presume that it takes others about as long as it did me to find it out!

"Now that I have shopped around I am satisfied, and if this garment gives me satisfaction I feel that I will not only make you a good customer, but send many of my friends here."

The lady will be satisfied of that, you may be sure—we have built up this business by satisfying our trade, and will continue doing so, though we are not infallible—if anything is wrong at any time, if you are displeased—in any way—tell us—we're here to make any Wrongs Right!

HUGHES ON THE ISSUE

Declares There is Only One, That of Decent Government.

Should the Unholy Alliance Capture State of New York?

New York, Oct. 4.—With the declaration that the issue in the forthcoming campaign in this state is not to be one of Republican principles or of Democratic principles, or a partisan issue at all, but the vital issue of decent government, Charles E. Hughes of this city, last night formally accepted the nomination for governor, which was brought to him by a committee from the Republican state convention recently held at Saratoga.

The ceremonies of the notification were held at the Republican club in West Fortieth street and followed a dinner at which Mr. Hughes met the members of the new Republican state central committee, who had been in session here yesterday. At the dinner were Former Governor Odell and Former Governor Frank S. Black. They were among the first to congratulate Mr. Hughes upon the conclusion of his brief speech.

When the candidate mentioned President Roosevelt his auditors broke into cheering, which continued for some time. When Mr. Hughes characterized the opposition as "a masquerade, an Independence league whose independence has been betrayed, and a so-called but spurious Democratic party which has violated every principle of Democratic government," his supporters gave themselves over to an outburst which caused Mr. Hughes' usually serious face to break into smiles.

The speech of notification was made by State Senator W. M. Armstrong, chairman of the committee appointed by the Saratoga convention. All of the candidates were present.

"Since your nomination," said Senator Armstrong, "there have come from many sources such signs of popular approval that your election is fore-ordained."

Mr. Hughes then responded as follows:

"Highly appreciating the honor you have conferred, and realizing keenly the responsibility to be assumed, I accept the nomination. As a life-long Republican, as one loyal to the principles and best traditions of the party, I respond to the unanimous call of the convention. I recognize the exigency which has made us the trustees of the conscience and sober sentiment of the people of the state and has charged us with the duty of leadership in a contest for decent government.

"We enter upon the campaign inspired by the example and fortified by the achievements of our great leader, Theodore Roosevelt. The national administration, with its record of established reforms, has strengthened its hold upon the confidence of the people. Governmental powers for investigation and prosecution have been freely used to end the abuses and discriminations which have afflicted interstate commerce, to break up unlawful combinations and to enforce the provisions of the anti-trust act. The activities of congress in the interest of all the people have been attested by the passage of the railroad rate act, the meat inspection act, the pure food act and the employers' liability act.

"In referring to the record of the federal administration I should not be understood to imply that this is a campaign of national issues. The paramount issues in this campaign are state issues. But in the matters which I have mentioned we find a notable record of achievement which present a striking contrast to the noisy pretensions of the hour.

"Our state administration has also accomplished many genuine reforms."

Here Mr. Hughes enumerated the reforms, with special reference to life insurance companies.

"What do we find in opposition to us?" he asked. "A masquerade, an Independence league whose independence has been betrayed, and a so-called Democratic party which has violated every principle of Democratic government.

"If you would know the sort of administration you should have in the event of their success, look at the Buffalo convention; for there you will find their motives and their methods mirrored; their motive, selfishness, and their method, intrigue.

"We test the sincerity of their independence by their efforts to procure the Democratic nomination; of their denunciation of bosses, by their deals with bosses; of their appeals to American ideals, by their despotic proceedings; of their attacks upon money in politics, by their use of money in politics; of their devotion to the interests of the people, by their efforts to foment disorders and exploit ignorance in the interests of selfish ambition.

"The supreme issue of this campaign is the vital issue of decent government.

"The question is whether the unholy alliance that succeeded at Buffalo shall capture the state of New York.

"In my message to the convention I stated that if elected it would be my ambition to give the state a sane, efficient and honorable administration, free from any taint of bossism or of servitude to any private interest. This is my position in a nutshell.

"Every practical measure for the real benefit of labor will have my cordial support.

"I shall spare no effort to make effective the reforms in the business of life insurance, so essential to the interests of policyholders.

"I promise the enforcement of the law with equal severity and in equal justice to all, rich and poor, corporations and individuals.

"We make our appeal to the common sense of the American people, which has never failed to express itself decisively in a great crisis. We are pledged to achieve reforms in the American manner, in accord with the genius of our institutions and with love of truth and even-handed justice.

"It is in this spirit and with these pledges alone that I accept the nomination."

quarter for us if they win. We can not foretell what her competition will be, we do not know the resources of the new territory which she controls, we can not guess the commercial and industrial possibilities of the Japanese.

"At this critical stage we are giving the enemy ammunition to fire at us. He is quick to seize this advantage. Take the attack we made upon our own packing business, for instance. I know none of the men in the beef trade. I never dealt with them, nor was I ever associated even with their business or themselves. But it is safe to assume from the proportions of their industry that they are sound business men. And it is safe to assume, too, that no business could have been built to such proportions on such false principles, or by such unsound methods as they were charged with.

"I was in Europe when the attack was made at home upon these men and their industry and I could watch the effect of it there at close range. Those fellows abroad snatched at our own charges against our own business with the greatest glee. They used them promptly as ammunition with which to attack America and everything American, especially manufactured products and trade. I do not believe there was a line of American goods sold abroad that was not injured, or an American agent doing business abroad whose work was not hampered by this.

"We are too young a nation for this tearing down. Our position is by no means secure. It is like repeating a, b, c, to say that we cannot consume our total production. We must sell abroad or do less business. Reducing the volume of our production means less work, less wages, less business transacted, at the very least. It is checking our development instead of furthering it. Is it common sense, then, to handicap our export trade at home, to attack the good name of our business for the benefit of our foreign rivals?

"Is it common sense to tell our young men, on whom the future must depend, that they can hope for no other reward for carrying our commercial flag forward than frenzied attacks at home, and all the handicaps their own government can pile upon their business to satisfy the violent prejudice excited against them?"

Referring to a subpoena recently issued, requiring him to appear in court in an action against the Standard Oil company, Mr. Rockefeller said:

"While I was in active business I used to always respond. But now I am not in a position to give these inquiring people the information they want. They know that as well as I do. If they really wanted information it is other men they would summon, the men who have the information they want. They know that also. So I am reluctantly compelled to conclude that it is notoriety they want rather than information. I yield to no man in respect for law, but I am unable to see where the little notoriety an inquisitor might get from putting me on the stand would serve the ends of justice. So I avoid the ordeal, with its exhaustion, when I can, and preserve my strength and quiet."

MISS FEALY'S CLOSE CALL

MISS MAUDE FEALY.

Miss Maude Fealy, who is this season starring in Martha Morton's delightful new comedy, "The Illusion of Beatrice," tells a charming little story reminiscent of the late Sir Henry Irving, during her experience as leading lady for Sir Henry at the famous Drury Lane theater, London, England.

The story is perhaps best told in Miss Fealy's own words: 'The first week passed most beautifully. I played all my roles, but the second week I had an accident which came near being serious. I thought the list of plays each week would be played in rotation, as they were the first, and, as I did not appear in one of the plays, the one which was played the corresponding day of the week previous, I sat slowly finishing my dinner and asking my mother where we would spend the evening, when the call boy rushed into my room, saying: 'Miss Fealy, the prologue of 'Becket' is over and the overture of your act is on.' To this day I don't recall my sensations. I believe I was deaf, dumb, and blind. Finally, the words, 'it is raining' caught my ears, and I said, 'get a cab' and rushed upstairs for my hat. I never got the hat, but came down clutching my two hat pins, and when we arrived, the hat pins were still in my possession. Fortunately, I lived near the theater, so in a few minutes we arrived. I fell out of the cab, across the stage, stumbled and ran into Sir Henry. No one had told him of my non-appearance, and the call boy, who was my friend, wished me to avoid meeting Sir Henry, but fate or time decreed it otherwise. So, after picking myself up, I fell upstairs, and Sir Henry's words reached me: 'Never mind! America was never left yet.'

"And thank goodness, she wasn't in that case. With the assistance of two maids, I was ready before the overture had ceased. How it was managed, I will never know."

GIVING UP THEIR ARMS.

rural guards, and butchered 200 head of cattle. The motive for this destruction is said to have been personal spite.

In addition to the American marines at Cienfuegos there are detachments in other Santa Clara towns as follows: Cruces, 50; Esperanza, 25; Santo Domingo, 25; Sagua La Grande, 50; Palmyra, 35; and the Horminguero plantation, 12.

Other detachments are guarding American properties in the Manicaragua district. The disarming commission proceeded for Cienfuegos yesterday afternoon, accompanied by the former rebel leader, Gen. Guzeman.

Officials of the Cuban central railroad estimate that the insurgents damaged the road to the extent of $190,000.

Governor Taft has received a dispatch that the threatened disturbances in Cienfuegos have been obviated by the withdrawal of the insurgents from that city.

Governor Taft now occupies the office in which the affairs of Cuba have been administered successively by the Spanish governors of the islands, Gen. Leonard Wood and President Palma. He established himself in these quarters yesterday afternoon. He will take up his residence in the palace in a few days. The staff of the American commands will continue practically without change. Mr. Rockwood, stenographer to Mr. Taft, will act as secretary to the governor.

Col. E. H. Crowder, judge advocate, said that the continuance of the status of the Cuban republic without change obviates practically every legal difficulty which might otherwise have been caused by the establishment of a provisional government.

Maj. Melville reports that 1,000 arms have been quietly turned over to the commission.

A correspondent of the Associated Press, who traversed the region westward of Havana, in which the rebels have been encamped, says their numbers are rapidly decreasing, and that traffic on the main roads is being fully resumed. In some places, the correspondent adds, the odor of slaughtered cattle and pigs and of dead horses is very offensive.

Gen. Del Castillo made many promotions of officers before his force was disbanded. He characterized the work of the revolutionary junta in New York as a failure, saying that it had sent no money or arms or anything else to Cuba. It is a fact that the insurgents had scarcely any ammunition left.

After the departure of the brigade of rebels from Guanajay, Gen. Castillo said there were still 2,000 men of his forces, and 2,000 belonging to Gen. Guerra to be discharged. Maj. Ladd ordered an abundance of supplies to feed the remaining insurgents. There was some grumbling, last evening, by men who declared that the United States was buying them off with a little food, but the general tone was of good nature and obedience to their leaders.

NO ORDINARY ROMANCE.

"The Bishop's Carriage," Channing Pollock's dramatization of Miriam Michelson's widely read story, which will be presented at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday, is in no sense an ordinary romance. The heroine is not what the average man would call a beautiful character, or one whom he would select to preside over his house and home. In fact, she was a thief, and a very clever and unrepentent one at that. For nearly four acts she is lawless and headstrong—but fascinating in a remarkable degree. It was this fascination that won the love of a wealthy and socially prominent young man, who braved the verdict of his friends and the public by taking so deep an interest in her that finally she saw the error of her ways and turned to a new life. The very difficult role of Nance Olden, the thief, is played by Jessie Busley.

STORY OF DAVE MARION.

Dave Marion, the author-composer-comedian of "Roseland," which the Dreamland Burlesquers are giving at the Metropolitan this week, was a great card-player when he was younger, and it is said that he occasionally takes a hand on the train now. But he was much more addicted to cards years ago. So much so that his mother would remonstrate with him. One day she said:

"A great deal of time is wasted, is there not, dear, in playing cards?"

"Yes, mother," said Dave, "there is—in shuffling and dealing."

This is ladies' day at the Metropolitan, both afternoon and evening performances being for women as well as men. The show is very clean throughout. There will be another matinee Saturday and the Dreamlanders will close their engagement with a performance Saturday evening.

THE FIRST WIFE BECOMES FIFTH

Wisconsin Woman Remarried to Husband of Her Youth.

Portage, Wis., Oct. 4.—A romance of more than ordinary interest was concealed in a marriage recorded here last week. Joseph Waldo of Missouri and Mrs. Martha Kennedy of Endeavor were the contracting parties, and this was their second appearance at the altar together.

When they were younger they met, loved, married and reared a family. Mr. Waldo did not prosper, and after several years of married life Mrs. Waldo concluded that she could do better alone. There was no quarrel and no differences, other than the financial one, between the couple and when the separation took place Mrs. Waldo accompanied her husband to the station and kissed him good-bye. Then she obtained a divorce.

After a trial of single blessedness Mrs. Waldo concluded that condition of life was not as satisfactory as she had anticipated, and married again. Being left a widow, she married a third time and a fourth time, the present marriage to be her first husband being her fifth matrimonial venture.

Mr. Waldo in the years that have elapsed since his separation seems to have found no other woman who could take the place in his affections occupied by the first Mrs. Waldo, and having accumulated in the meantime a snug little fortune, he sought out his first love, again wooed her and led her to the altar for the second time.

RED NOSES

A Simple Treatments That Effects a Cure In a Short Time.

A red nose causes unfavorable comment. Women suffer as much as men from this annoying skin trouble, but close attention to a few simple rules will soon restore the nose to its natural color. Tight clothing and ill-fitting shoes must be at once discarded. So much for the external causes. The blood and stomach are the next things to look after, as poor surface circulation and faulty digestion are responsible for most red noses.

Avoid rich food and take Beecham's Pills after meals and on retiring, and the nose will soon lose its red and angry look. This is because Beecham's Pills strengthen the stomach, carry off all impurities and quickly improve the circulation of the blood. These pills cure red noses by removing the conditions that are responsible for these unsightly facial blemishes.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

TWOHY MADE QUITE A HIT

Insisted on Conducting His Own Defense in Police Court.

Cross-Examines Policemen on Their Knowledge of Drunkenness.

Con Twohy had scarecly recovered from the effects of his last evening's jag, when he was arraigned in the municipal court before Judge Cutting this morning. He insisted on standing trial and showed his contempt of the legal fraternity by deciding to conduct his own defense.

Twohy and John Jurtzig attempted to play a duet with beer glasses last evening with the result that when the policemen took them in tow Jurtzig had planted about $40 of his money for safekeeping somewhere and he did not know to whom he gave it. His intimations that Twohy might have some of it aroused the latter's ire and his denials that he had touched his companion's money were more emphatic than polite.

Con pleaded not guilty to the charge of drunkenness after Jurtzig had acknowledged his condition.

Sergeant Fritz, who assisted in taking Twohy to the station was the first witness called. He was examined in the usual way by the assistant city attorney as to the prisoner's condition and then Twohy was given the opportunity of cross examining the officer, a chance that he did not let go by.

Leveling his finger accusingly at Sergeant Fritz and with a strong Celtic accent to his voice, Twohy began:

"How do you know I was drunk?"

"Because you were intoxicated," answered the sergeant.

"How do you know I was intoxicated?"

"Because you were acting drunk," was the answer.

This disgusted Con so he commenced again.

"Now look at me. Am I drunk now?"

"Well, no," answered the sergeant rather doubtfully.

"You are wrong, I am drunk, Your Honor," and Con raised his right hand, "I want to swear that I am drunk now."

Twohy wanted the sergeant to get off the stand and demonstrate how a man would act when drunk, but he refused.

Officer Roberg was the next witness called. He was put through a similar line of questioning, but when Con asked if he were drunk then, Officer Roberg rather surprised him by an emphatic affirmative.

"You're wrong," declared the doughty Celt. "Your Honor I want to swear that I am not drunk."

That was as far as Twohy got in his defense, the court deciding that he would accept Con's first oath as a truthful statement of his condition.

Twohy and Jurtzig were each fined $1 and costs. The court asked Con if he would pay Jurtzig's costs, suggesting that it seemed no more than fair, considering the fact the latter had lost all his money.

"No sir," was the indignant response, "It's meself that will keep out of such company in the future."

Twohy's look of disgust deepened, when he heard the court suspend the costs in Jurtzig's case.

WAITING LIST HAS NO NAMES

Examination May be Held for Firemen in Near Future.

The Duluth fire department is again seriously threatened with a shortage in firemen and it is understood that the board of fire commissioners will hold a meeting soon with a view of making a request on the civil service commission for another examination of applicants in the very near future.

With no applicants for positions on the waiting list, and with the possibility that there will very shortly be some vacancies to fill on the department, the situation is one that causes the fire commissioners a little anxiety.

Duluth firemen, it is claimed, are, on the average, as well paid as the firemen in any other city of the same size and even better than in some larger cities, yet there does not seem to be a surplus of young men seeking places on the department. To be eligible to a position on the department the applicant must be between the ages of 21 and 33 years, must pass a light mental examination, and a physical examination.

FELL INTO A TEST PIT

Peter Akin Sues Mining and Stripping Companies For $20,000.

Claims Pit Was Concealed By Long Grass and Bushes.

While walking to his boarding house through the darkness of night, after having been at work in the Pillsbury mine of the Oliver Mining company, near Hibbing, a year ago last Aug. 27, Peter F. Akin claims to have stepped into a test pit, which had been left open, and to have fallen to the bottom, a clear drop of about sixty feet. After remaining for nearly two hours, alone and in agony from his injuries in the bottom of the pit, some miners rescued Akin with a rope and dragged his bruised body to the surface.

How it is that Akin is still alive to tell of his terrible experience, no one can explain. There were no bones broken or fractured in his body, but he was so badly bruised and injured otherwise that he will probably be an invalid and a cripple for life. His limbs, even after a year has passed, pain him continually, he claims, and his back is bent like an old man's.

For these injuries Akin is now suing the Oliver Mining company and the Roberts-Kingston company, mine strippers, for $20,000 as compensation. The action has been brought by his father, as the principal in the case is a minor. It is alleged in the complaint that the accident was wholly due to the negligence and carelessness of the companies, because they had not warned their workmen of the danger of the open test pits, which had been left entirely uncovered. In some cases, the complaint states, grass and bushes had been allowed to grow up about the pits, so that their presence would be entirely unknown, unless a person was familiar with the surroundings. This, it is claimed, was the case in regard to the pit into which Akin fell.

The two mining companies deny all responsibility for the accident, and claim the miners were aware of the danger, and should have kept away from the vicinity of the test pits.

Harry Roberts, president of the Roberts-Kingston company, was examined this morning, and stated that he had visited the mine several times just prior to the accident. After the accident he had examined the test pit hole, and admitted that it was about on a line with the boarding house.

Attorney Samuel A. Anderson is conducting the case for Akin, while the two mining companies are being defended by C. S. Wilson and C. O. Baldwin.

CAN WRITE NAMES ON THE BALLOT

Judge Fowler Makes Decision on Wisconsin Primary Law.

Ashland, Wis., Oct. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first interpretation of the new Wisconsin primary election law by a court was mado at Ashland today by Judge Fowler of Portage, involving the rights of voters, irrespective of parties. The case involves the right of voters to nominate candidates for office by writing in their names. Attorney General Sturdevant has ruled that the law protects the integrity of political parties, and that no names shall be counted on the primary ballots excepting those of persons who have complied with party usage and the letter of the law, by circulating petitions, thus entitling their names to be printed on the official primary ballots.

Judge Fowler decides that the trend of legislation as well as the spirit of the primary election law is to give individual voters their full right to vote for whom they please, whether the persons voted for have complied with the law or not by circulating papers. His decision places on the Democratic ticket of Ashland county three persons whose names were not printed on the official ballot. It is in direct opposition to the attorney general's opinion. By agreement it will be taken up before the supreme court next Tuesday and hundreds of similar cases throughout the state will be affected by the decision.

A contested election case from Rusk county is being heard at Ashland today. Frank J. Putnam received 448 votes for the Republican nomination for sheriff and Joseph H. Reed received 451 votes. Judge Parish has appointed a canvassing board to recount the votes, Putnam claiming that a recount will give him a majority. Bayfield county has a similar mixup, which will be heard, there being only one vote difference between the two Republican candidates for sheriff.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Fargo Must Pay Salary of Official Who Was Bounced.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Judge Morris, of Duluth, sitting here in the United States court for Judge Amidon, directed a verdict for A. E. Logie against the city of Fargo for $1,596. Logie sued for $2,400. He was re-engaged as superintendent of schools by the retiring board of education and bounced by a new board, which secured another man. As Judge Amidon had been interested in securing the position for Logie, he called in Judge Morris to hear the case. The question of jurisdiction was raised during the trial as the amount is less than $2,000, and the defense contended that the action should have been brought in the state court.

Drags Wolf, Medicine Crow and Makes-the-Dust-Fly, three Indians from the Fort Berthold reservation, were convicted in the United States court of a brutal assault on Indian Policeman Huntsalong. The trial has been in progress several days. Huntsalong was directed to maintain order at a dance on the reservation and became involved in trouble with the three men and one other. He killed the latter and was himself so badly beaten that he lay unconscious in the snow for hours, thought to be dead.

Fargo continues to lead other northwestern cities of the same class in postal receipts, as shown by the annual report of the auditor of the post-office department, just received. Fargo's gross receipts were in excess of $67,000. Sioux Falls' receipts were $57,000; Grand Forks, $41,000, and Crookston's, $21,000. For clerk hire Fargo used only 14 per cent of the gross receipts, while Sioux Falls used 22, Grand Forks 18 and Crookston 23. For free delivery Sioux Falls spent 18 per cent of the gross receipts, Crookston 17, Grand Forks 13, and Fargo only 11. The local office made the most money for the department, netting about $50,000, to $34,000 for Sioux Falls, $28,000 for Grand Forks and $12,000 for Crookston.

The board of the Lutheran Hospital association has decided to name the new institution to be erected here St. Luke's. Another solicitor has been placed in the field and bids ordered advertised for the foundations to be put in this fall.

Minot—Harry Hamilton, charged with holding up Sheriff John J. Lee, was held to the district court on $600 bonds. Hamilton admitted that he intended to hold Lee up while the latter was touring in an automobile, but stated that he did so because of a prejudice against automobiles and not to get his money.

Grafton—John A. Dunn, mayor of this city, and for many years manager of the Grafton roller mills, has purchased the Park River roller mills, owned by Honey Bros. Mr. Dunn will move to Park River and have personal supervision over the mill.

Fessenden—Burglars gained an entrance to the residence of T. F. Beiseker, a banker of this place. Their presence was detected by Mrs. Beiseker, who managed to notify the officers, and City Marshal Kane and Sheriff Groupman went to the rescue. The officers found the burglars in the house and shots were exchanged, but the men gained their exit and fled. The valuables which they had gathered were left behind. None of the officers was injured.

St. Thomas—Mice chewed matches left in a hayloft by threshermen who had been sleeping there and started a fire which resulted in the loss of the entire season's work for Cornelius Callihan, a farmer eight miles northeast of here. The total loss is estimated at $5,000.

Manfred—Sparks from a locomotive started a prairie fire near here which almost wiped out the homestead of Rudolph Ffebusch. The flames were driven by a high wind and the neighbors and townspeople turned out to fight them.

Valley City—Fire in Scadia township on the Reidman farm destroyed 5,000 bushels of grain, nine work horese, two colts and the barn, causing a loss estimated at $4,500, partly insured.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Elk Point—Miss Florence Ericson, youngest daughter of E. C. Ericson, and Miss Gona Shook of Council Bluffs, Iowa, were riding horseback when the horse shied at a passing automobile and threw them both to the ground. Miss Shook was not seriously injured, but Miss Florence had the ligaments of her left elbow severly torn and was otherwise badly bruised.

Parker—The county commissioners offer $1,000 reward and the citizens of Parker and vicinity will raise the same amount for the conviction of the murderer of Mrs. Harry E. Collins. There is no clear clew yet. Dectectives have been employed.

Belle Fourche—Stanley Bullock, son of Capt. Seth Bullock, was married at this place to Miss Agnes Lee, formerly of Omaha. Young Mr. Bullock has made his home in Belle Fourche for a number of years, and is engaged in real estate and insurance business. Mr. and Mrs. Bullock will continue to make their home in this city.

Miller—The fullblood Indians that visit this section from Crow Creek, are beginning to wear button photos of their babies. The photographer here is taking pictures of the Indian babies for the first time. The little tots are rigged out in white dresses and lace by their fond parents and made to look as pretty as their little white neighbors do in photographs.

RED LAKE INDIAN GASHES THROAT

Of Another Redskin With a Knife and is Arrested.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Big Bird," a Red Lake Indian, was taken to Walker yesterday and was given a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Daniel DeLury on a charge of strenuous "doings" with a knife on the person of a fellow countryman at Red Lake.

On Sept. 22 Big Bird, while under the influence of the cup that both cheers and inebriates, became possessed of an uncontrollable desire to sever the jugular vein of Aysh-quay-qah-bows, another Indian, who had been partaking of the contents of a bottle and other receptacles containing liquor with him. Big Bird drew a murderous-looking knife from among his clothes and rolling up his sleeves proceeded to do the guillotine act in the most approved aboriginal manner, gashing the throat and nearly terminating the earthly career of Aysh-quay-qah-bows on the spot.

A building belonging to Jens Hanson, in Nymore, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Charles Dremond, who has been conducting a soft-drink establishment in the building, had finished scrubbing the floor at 12 o'clock Tuesday night and took the men who had been helping him to a nearby saloon, where they played cards for about an hour, when one of the party stepped out of the saloon and noticed flames bursting through the roof of the Hanson building. The fire had gained such headway that nothing could be done to save the structure.

MISERY AND STARVATION IN THE VOLGA DISTRICT.

Berlin, Oct. 4.—The Kattowitz Zeitung says that as the result of an investigation made in the Volga district the fact has been established that fearful misery and starvation exist there. Several millions of persons, the paper says, are in a state of semi-starvation and have no means for procuring food. Diseases, such as typus fever are widespread and peasant disorders have occured in many districts.

FOOTBALL FATAL.

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 4.—Cameron Paulin, 21 years old, died early today at the General hospital from injuries received on the university lawn yesterday afternoon while at practice for the scrimmage of the Toronto University team. His skull was fractured.

GUILTY OF EMBEZZLEMENT.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Oct. 4.—J. Henry Fischer was found guilty of embezzling $71,000 of the money of the defunct Homestead Building association. He was accused of embezzlement jointly with Robert Alexander, who died four months ago.

TIME FOR ACTION.

By the way, what has become of the suit that was to be instituted to test the legality of the action of the state in taking all of the gross earnings taxes received from the railroads, and failing to apportion a share to the local subdivisions of the state?

Many months ago the Duluth Real Estate exchange held a meeting at which the matter was discussed, and it received general approval, most of the members of the exchange agreeing that a great injustice is being done, and that it should be righted if possible. Also, many of them fancied that there were good grounds to believe that a suit of this sort could be started and prosecuted successfully.

Since then nothing has been heard from the matter. A committee was appointed at that meeting to investigate it, and so far as the public has learned it has never reported.

This is highly important to the taxpayers of Duluth, and it is made more so by the coming of a new railroad that has taken a large amount of city property for its own use, thereby removing it from the lists of property that is sharing the expenses of local government. The sooner a start is made the quicker some result will be reached. It should be taken up and a suit instituted without further delay.

The situation is like this:

Many years ago railroads were taxed just like other property, valued by the local assessors and taxed by the counties for the benefit of the state, county, city, village, township and school district. This was unsatisfactory, because values varied in different localities, and because the railroad had to be payng taxes in so many places. So it was arranged that instead of being taxed in this manner, the railroads should be taxed a certain percentage upon their gross earnings. At first this was 2 per cent, then 3 per cent and now it is 4 per cent.

The money naturally had to be paid into the state treasury, but by some oversight no provision was made in the law for apportioning the taxes back to the subdivisions in which the railroad property stood. So the state began turning the money into its own general fund, leaving the other classes of property to bear the entire expense of local government.

It was an embezzlement, pure and simple, but though that was thirty years ago or more, the state is still keeping that money. Railroads make as much expense for the local governments as any property and more than some others, but they do not contribute a cent toward paying the cost. They do not even pay their share when street paving is done, but their portion is borne by the general taxpayers, so that a resident of Lakeside, for instance, helps pay the part of the cost of paving Michigan street that the Northern Pacific railroad ought to pay.

This is all so clearly wrong that it seems certain that if it is tested by the courts the practice must be abolished, and the state made to restore its ill-gotten gains to the communities to which they belong.

It will not cost much to bring a suit, and it should not be delayed any longer.

A NON-PARTISAN FIGHT.

In his Red Wing speech Governor Johnson made this acknowledgment of the aid he has received from Republican voters who place the welfare of their state above their partisanship:

> It would scarcely add to my reputation for intelligence if I claimed my election two years ago as a partisan victory. I recognized then and still recognize the vote of confidence given me by so many thousands of Republicans, who voted as they did solely because they believed that in so doing they were acting for the best interests of the state. Nor have they claimed any reward from me or made any demands upon me except that I give to the people of the state the best service of which I am capable. The realization of this fact has been a constant source of inspiration to me in the performance of public duty.

Governor Johnson's victory in 1904 was a victory of good government over blind partisanship. It showed that the voters of Minnesota had thrown off the shackles of bossism, and that the party name meant less to them than sterling manhood.

Those Republicans who voted that way have had no reason to be ashamed of themselves. Indeed, they have had many reasons to congratulate themselves on the good sense they showed in voting as they did.

And it is absurd to think that these voters have willingly submitted themselves again to the influence of mere partisanship, and that they will let that impulse rule their choice this year. For nothing else but pure partisanship could result in the election of Candidate Cole over Governor Johnson. If the latter seemed pleasing to the voters of the state two years ago, when he was untried, what must he seem to them now, after he has given an administration second to none in the history of the state?

The candidate that opposes him brings certain reasons in behalf of his own candidacy. They are that he worked diligently in the legislature in behalf of developing Northern Minnesota, and that he will favor strong legislation against the railroads. The Herald has already shown that Candidate Cole is entitled to no credit for originality in these endeavors, as he was inspired in his efforts in every case by Governor Johnson. That he has had some success in carrying out the governor's ideas is no evidence that he would be successful in a position where he would have to originate his own ideas, and leave the work of carrying them out to somebody else.

Partisanship, therefore, is no more an issue in this campaign than it was in that of two years ago. The issue now, as it was then, is good government. Governor Johnson has carried on an active campaign through the legislature and through the railroad and warehouse commission, for a square deal between the railroads and their patrons, and he has expressed himself vigorously in favor of state development.

There is not a single issue urged as a reason for Cole's election that cannot be still more strongly urged in favor of Johnson's re-election.

CLEARING A MYSTERY.

This man Stickney, Stickney of the Chicago Great Western railroad, continues to make himself objectionable to his competitors in the railroad business.

He must be very annoying, indeed.

For years the railroads have made profound attempts to surround their freight rates with an atmosphere of mystery. Their schedules are skillfully complicated in a manner that makes the average man glad to drop his efforts to fathom their meaning, fearing that further pursuit of his baffling research may land him in the insane asylum. The object, of course, is to make it appear that nobody but a real expert can understand the freight business, and that therefore public officials and the public generally ought to take for granted all the experts tell them, instead of trying to figure it out for themselves.

The Herald is in receipt of an advance proof of a complete Minnesota schedule of all class and commodity freight rates between stations in the state of Minnesota on the Chicago Great Western. It is all included within seven pages, and from it, as Mr. Stickney says, "any man of ordinary understanding can determine for himself the rates." That is putting it mildly. With this schedule in hand, any child that is able to read could figure how much it would cost to send any commodity from any station on the Chicago Great Western in Minnesota to any other station on the same line in the same state. He would not have to go to the local freight office and have an "expert" figure it out for him. He could figure it himself in two minutes.

Mr. Stickney says further that when any rate is changed hereafter, he proposes to have the entire booklet republished so that at all times all the rates shall be found in one booklet. The meat of the story is in this sentence from Mr. Stickney's explanatory note: "This schedule, when filed with the railroad commission, will take the place of over 130 separate schedules and amendments now on file with said commission, published in such a way that only an expert can determine the actual rate."

That is the meat of it. This is the moral of it: "This is a concrete example of the possibility of simplifying the schedules of railway rates which I advocate. If you approve of this plan of publishing rates, please make it known in such a way as to cause public opinion to compel other railways to adopt the same plan."

Nobody can look over this simple little booklet, and realize how completely and sufficiently it serves its purpose, without approving of it. And when the public understands that most of the mystery that has been thrown about rate schedules is pure humbug, and that they are no more bewildering than any other simple business transaction, public opinion will certainly compel the other railroads to do likewise.

HOW LONG?

Of course everything appears to be charmingly smooth and lovely down in Cuba. But how long will it last after Mr. Taft, our expert lid-weight, turns the reins of government over to a new Cuban president, gathers his marines and soldiers about him and goes back to Washington?

Whatever else may be said of it, the recent insurrection was successful. It overthrew the Cuban government, and a new one will take its place. And that was the object of the revolt. It is true that the United States had to step in and bring it quickly to a head, but the discontented politicians of Cuba have found out how to make a change when they disapprove of the existing government, and it is not at all probable that they will frequently avail themselves of this splendid opening for the change which is the perennial desire of uneasy politicians, particularly Latin-American ones.

And if it happens often we are going to get very tired of it. And in that event talk of annexation will be stronger than ever. And the danger is that some time we may get so impatient that we shall try forcible annexation, which will mean blood to be spilt and martyrs to be made of the Cubans who will fight for the independence that they have shown no great capacity to properly handle.

Our right to intervene in such cases is unquestioned. Article 3 of the Platt amendment says: "That the government of Cuba consents that the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property and individual liberty, and for discharging the obligations with reference to Cuba imposed by the treaty of Paris on the United States, now to be assumed and undertaken by the government of Cuba."

Under this we not only have the right to intervene, but we are pretty nearly bound to step in when things get to going wrong. It is not altogether an alluring outlook. A country where political disputes are commonly referred to the arbitrament of battle, and where the losers in a political fight are pretty likely to take up the sword, is certain to be kept in hot water a good deal of the time. Perhaps, after a clear and fair election under the auspices of the American government has produced a new government, it will rule in peace. And again, perhaps it will not.

Altogether, the chances appear to be that our fledgling republic of Cuba is likely to be more or less of a nuisance.

THE PASSING SHOW.

Perhaps the Buffalo platform has given Mr. Bryan a new idea of what the "yellow peril" is.

* * *

The public had already heard enough of Platt, without being nauseated by his family scandals.

* * *

"Courtship Ends in Marriage," says a newspaper headline. That's the trouble with some marriages; the parties let marriage end the courtship.

* * *

The Cuban government has come off its high horse and will treat with the rebels. That may avert the dreaded necessity of American intervention.

* * *

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, standpat Republican, says the present Republican majority in congress is unwieldly. Never mind. Relief is coming in November.

* * *

The Mankato Free Press says that "a few Democratic newspapers charged that Cole urged the defeat of the reciprocal demurrage bill in the senate." Mistake. It was a Republican state senator that made the charge, and it has never been denied by Mr. Cole.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Let me give you a tip on shirts," said A. T. Wade of Milwaukee, Wis., at the Spalding. "Too many men make the mistake of buying white soft-bosomed shirts for everyday wear. They look nice, but are a losing proposition. If you want to wear a soft-bosomed shirt, or stiff either, for that matter, without caring particularly for white in the latter, get some colored material. You get more for your money that way.

"The actual goods themselves are no better in the colored patterns, but the laundries give them better treatment. Often a person blames the manufacturer for the rapid manner in which his clothes wear out, when in reality the blame should rest on the laundry. Some of these institutions handle one's clothes in a villainous manner. The colored goods last longer because the dirt is washed out instead of bleached. I don't say that all laundries do it, but a lot of them use a bleaching stuff on white shirts to make them more attractive to the eye with less washing on the part of the laundry, and the results are disastrous to the garment. The material becomes weakened and rotten, and soon you haven't any shirt, unless you buy a new one to replace each old one about every four washings.

"There ought to be some way of putting a stop to the practice. I am pretty sure, from the experience I have had, that at least one laundry in Duluth follows the custom of putting things on one's clothes that have no right to be put there. Your local laundrymen make enough profit, without destroying a man's wearing apparel to make more. Prices are higher here than in most places."

"The towns of the East are booming as well as those of the West," said D. L. Saunders of Cleveland, Ohio, at the Lenox. "The growth back there is not so rapid in some instances, because the cities are such old ones as compared to those of the West, but still their population is being increased right along, and new residence and business blocks are being erected.

"People coming from the European countries add greatly to the growth of many cities of the East, and people coming in from the rural districts to get a taste of city life add some more. The trend of people from the country towns to the city seems to be becoming greater right along. I don't know what is going to happen to the country population if the movement keeps up. Perhaps it is only in certain parts of the country that this is occurring, however. I hope this is the case. It isn't anything to worry over, anyway. The world has been pretty fairly balanced up to the present time, and I guess it will go on being so balanced without interference on my part. The people are going to live where they can make the most money, and just as soon as farm products become scarce because of a lack of country population, the price of those products is going to be greatly increased, and then there will be a scurrying to the farm again."

"Minnesota is now in a position to startle the country with a frontier story that will eclipse any that has appeared so far this year," said A. M. Lara of St. Cloud at the St. Louis. "I have just come from St. Joseph, a small town in Stearns county, where the story is being told as an actual fact. It concerns a lost child who was found in a wolf's den, playing with the cubs.

"It was only a 4-year-old child named Margaret, daughter of Nick Schweitzer, a farmer in Brookway township. While the older members of the family were attending church last Sunday, the girl was out in the woods with two other children, but strayed away from them. The others soon missed Margaret and instituted a vigilant search for her, but were unsuccessful, and finally had to return to their parents with the story.

"A searching party of twenty farmers was organized at once, and they hunted all night for the lost one. Tuesday afternoon one of the searchers came upon a sunbonnet lying beside a trail leading into a dense thicket. Getting down on all fours, the man followed the trail and soon came upon a wolf's lair. Margaret was seated in the mouth of the den, and she was much put out over the man's approach, because he had scared away the cubs she had been playing with. She thought them puppies. She didn't seem any the worse for wear, and said she had enjoyed her visit in the den."

White Man's Burden.

Philadelphia Record: Heavy, indeed, is the white man's burden. The Dutch troops in East India have been obliged to round up a lot of the aborigines and shoot 400 of them. The English are flogging Chinese laborers in South Africa and using the lash and the rifle on every negro who ventures to talk about Ethiopia for Ethiopians. We are pegging away at the Moros. It is a burdensome task, this serving as a trustee for civilization.

Had the Shakes.

Tolu Cor. Marion, Ky., Record: W. Hugh Watson chilled some last week.

Did Harry Walk Home?

White Hall, Ill., Republican: Harry Page, the well-known theatrical manager, is at home this week with sore feet.

THE WEATHER.

One day is very much like another these times, and each is a high type of climatic splendor. It makes people think of the brown woods and the stubble, where the prarie chickens rest and the partridges roost. This morning it was clear, brilliant, charming. The weather man says it will be cloudy and cooler tonight and tomorrw, with possibly occasional light showers. Yesterday's highest temperatur was 76 deg., and last night's lowest was 54 deg.

A year ago today it was warm and delightful.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Barometric disturbances overlie Manitoba and New Mexico with high pressure areas over New England states and Oregon. Warmer weather prevails in the Lake region and central valleys attending a decrease in pressure. Showers fell over the Northwest and Eastern states. Temperatures are falling in the Far West in connection with rising pressure there. Freezing weather prevailed this morning at Yellowstone and Winnemucca. Mostly cloudy weather is indicated for this locality tonight and Friday and there may be occasional light showers."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures, as recorded by the weather bureau:

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago Daily news: Trains of thought should always be on time.

A woman may be a votary even if she hasn't a vote.

Political machines are often used to harvest graft.

Lazy men work overtime when it comes to dispensing advice.

Men who were never disappointed in love may live to regret it.

An honest man may have a clear conscience, but he's apt to get lonesome.

The man who thinks he serves only himself is a bond servant of his satanic majesty.

How can a man hope to understand a woman when she is unable to understand herself?

The average married woman's happiness may be due to the fact that she doesn't marry her ideal.

Could you call the turn were it possible to give a woman her choice between being pretty or good?

A man who has been married five times says he has reasons to believe that Solomon's wisdom was acquired by association with his numerous mothers-in-law.

A Jingle of Good Cheer.

Life's a funny sort of shufflle,
It's no place to weep or snuffle,
You must get into the scuffle
With a grin;
You must go into it laughing,
You must go into it chaffing
At each goblet you are quaffing,
If you'd win.

Clouds must never set you whining,
Set you growling or repining,
Each one has a silver lining,
Don't you doubt;
So whate'er your grief don't yearn, it
Doesn't help it, not be stern, it
Makes you sorry; grab and turn it
Inside out.

Turn it inside out a-smiling,
With a song your task beguiling,
All your loads of woe unpiling
With a slump;
And don't weep 'em, you can spare 'em;
If you grin you'll soon outwear 'em,
If you choose to keep and bear 'em
You're a chump.

If you meet the world a-frowning
You conspire at your downing,
At your dearest hope's uncrowning,
Yes, you do;
Get a laughing, loving honey
Just to help you save your money,
To make life seem glad and sunny
Just for you.

Thus you'll find no use for croaking,
Days will just be filled with joking,
Resting after work, and smoking
A cigar;
With a babe or two beside you
Thus no ill-luck may betide you,
Sorrow come near, nor deride you
Where you are.
—J. M. LEWIS in Houston Post.

Sand.

I watched a locomotive strong climb up a hill one day—
It was shrieking, charging, panting along the rugged way;
It was scheduled for the summit—majestic seemed and grand,
And yet it could not make its base without the use of sand.

It seems that locomotives cannot always get a grip
On the burnished, polished runners—their wheels are apt to slip;
And when they strike an upward grade, the freight they'd never land
Unless upon the track is spilt a box or two of sand.

* * * * *

It's about the same with travel on life's uneven track—
If your load is rather heavy you're always slipping back;
But if the moral of these lines you rightly understand,
You'll fix yourself beforehand with a full supply of sand.

If the road is steep and orn'ry, and you strike a heavy grade,
And you find that time and trouble your path have slippery made,
You'll never reach the level of the upper tableland,
Unless you "lubricate" the track with more or less of sand.
—DAVID EVANS in Baltimore Sun.

The Back Number.

Philadelphia Record: Horace Greeley used to say "to neglect to advertise is like resolving never to travel by steam or communicate by telegraph." It is a physical impossibility for the twentieth century retailer to compete successfully with his up-to-date rivals while adhering to eighteenth century methods in the most important department of his business—the sales department. Greeley was right.

The merchant who isolates himself from the public by failing to take advantage of the unlimited opportunities for growth which advertising affords thereby stamps himself as a back number of whom buyers will naturally fight shy.

A. De Lacy Wood, who is well known in Duluth, has announced himself as an independent candidate for the state legislature. He is now editing a paper at Sauk Rapids and promises to conduct a vigorous canvass.

The Prohibition club of Minneapolis, takes issue with the Congregational club of Minnesota, because the latter has endorsed the temperance plank of the Republican platform. The Prohibitionists desire to meet their Congregational friends and debate the question.

Edwin F. Barrett has sold the Aitkin Age to Freeman E. Krech. Mr. Barrett is postmaster at Aitkin and his official duties require all of his attention.

Frank Mead has been indicted by the grand jury at St. Paul for the murder of Farnsworth.

E. J. Ball of Minneapolis, is visiting John Allen at Rice's Point.

John McFersen of London, Ont., is in the city to take part in the athletic contests this week. He is the champion weight thrower of the world. Other athletes here are John L. Taylor of Montreal, heavy weight thrower; Henry Allen of Des Moines, Iowa, the champion 100-yard runner west of the Mississippi; William Johnson and Angus McDonald of Port Arthur, all around athletes and oarsmen.

Capt. Lloyd has plans almost completed for a new boat to be built this winter. She will be an excursion and ferry boat and the machinery of the lost Martini will be put into her.

Rev. Frank Talmadge delivered an interesting sermon at the Y. M. C. A. hall last evening.

Manager Barnes of the St. Pauls has offered Baldwin, the Duluth pitcher, $150 per month for next season, but Baldwin has not been released by Duluth.

A. J. Whiteman will probably be the Democratic nominee for state senator instead of for the house.

Miss Annie Peyton of Ypsilanti, Mich., who has been visiting her uncle, H. M. Peyton, left this morning for her home.

T. Benoit, formerly of this city, has concluded to return to Duluth and establish a French paper.

Attorney W. B. Phelps returned yesterday from a business trip to Portland, Mayville, and other Dakota towns.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Grand Rapids Independent: If you want to win, get the Duluth News Tribune to knock you.

Red Wing Republican: We get out of this world just about what each of us puts into it.

Stillwater Gazette: There is no doubt of it—the steady-going, dependable man is always valuable. These brilliant fellows are pleasing and pleasant, but they are not to be depended upon any more than a sky-rocket.

Melrose Beacon: It is lucky that the Cubans want the United States to arbitrate their quarrel, as the United States was going to do it anyway.

Red Wing Republican: Every boy cannot be president. Every boy cannot be pre-eminent as a great leader in any direction; but every boy can become his best self and develop into an industrious, sensible, high-minded citizen—and that is the kind of men America most needs.

Mankato Free Press: Secretary Taft took possession of Cuba with as much grace and ease as some men rake in a jack-pot.

Worthington Herald: W. S. Hammond is said to be a whirlwind of a campaigner, and the Second district is due to see something breezy and a trifle more than lukewarm.

Crookston Journal: The time has come when the voters are going to assert their independence. They will refuse to be herded by any gang or ring, however well organized.

Crookston Times: J. Adam Bede announces that he will make but few foreign speeches this fall, but that he will spend most of his time in the highways and byways of his district. Jadam seems to have learned something.

Ortonville Herald-Star: The primary election law is damned for some things it does, and blessed for others.

Crokston Times: There may be no real happiness in riches, but there is real unhappiness in poverty.

Red Lake Falls Courier: McCleary will be asking if his standpatism is on straight long before W. S. Hammond gets through with him.

Pine City Pioneer: A Detroit physician has discovered that he can revive the dead. A lot of delinquent subscribers to newspapers and anti-advertisers are in need of his treatment.

Red Lake Falls Gazette: On account of the scarcity of prairie chickens in all parts of Minnesota, it is understood that an effort will be made to induce the next legislature to put the shooting of prairie chickens under the ban for three years. Dr. L. P. Leonard of St. Cloud, who is one of the initiators of the movement for the closing of the season on chickens until 1910, estimates that there are only 20 per cent as many prairie chickens in Minnesota this year as there were two years ago.

She's the "It."

London Globe: The Lancashire clergyman who recently left the word "obey" out of the marriage service gives as his reason that he does not wish women to start married life at a disadvantage. But it really matters little in practice. It has long been understood that though a man and his wife are one, the wife is that one.

Facial Horticulture.

Harper's Weekly: "A new milkman left our milk today," announced Dorothy.

"Did he have whiskers?" asked her mother, thinking perhaps it was the proprietor.

"No," said the 4-year-old; "he didn't have whiskers, but he had the roots."

Stretching the Currency.

Washington Post: The addition of a small quantity of rubber, according to a paper manufacturer, gives greater durability to our bank notes. But think of the distress that would be caused by people who are in the habit of burning their money.

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Chicago Tribune: "Why do you turn in your toes when you walk?" asked the hen.

"Do you suppose I want to be mistaken for one of your chicks?" disdainfully responded the pigeon.

Philadelphia Record: Blobbs—Queer fellow, that Bjones.

Slobbs—How so?

Blobbs—Well, you called him a sad dog and he seemed tickled to death, and I called him a miserable cur and he wanted to lick me.

Washington Star: "A man in public office should not be indifferent to this world's goods."

"No," answered Senator Sorghum, "but it is not always wise to let himself be caught with them."

Baltimore American: "Bald-headed men should never be put at the head of a kingdom as the ruling power."

"Why not?"

"Because in the natural order of things they can have no hair apparent."

Philadelphia Press: "You look so nice in your new fall suit," said Mrs. Drowse, "don't you think you'd better come to church with me this morning?"

"Not on your life," replied Mr. Drowse; "it doesn't do a new suit any good to go to sleep in it."

Philadelphia Ledger: "See here," complained Mr. Crabbe, "your shopping is too extravagant. You should never take anything just because it looks cheap."

"Indeed!" exclaimed his wife. "If I had followed that advice when you proposed to me I wouldn't be Mrs. Crabbe now."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: There's not much fun in kissing a girl if she wants you to.

Either a girl wants to be made love to or read about it in a novel.

Some women know how to dress so well they could succeed on the stage.

The way to be popular with your wife if she is fat is to call her your nice little girl.

A girl can always have a good time at the matinee watching to see if the leading man really kisses the heroine or just pretends.

Open Season for Sauerkraut.

Lebanon, Pa., Courier: The first sauerkraut supper and sociable was given in Sons of America hall on Saturday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Mite society of the First United Evangelical church. The various tables and booths were attractively arranged, and beside sauerkraut, pork and mashed potatoes, delicious confections, cakes, and ice cream were also sold.

Duluth Men Enthusiastic Over Possibilities of Northern Minnesota.

Surprised at What They Saw on Their Recent Junket.

A. H. Comstock, H. V. Eva and W. A. McGonagle, who represented Duluth Tuesday in the visit to points along the Minnesota & International railway north of Brainerd and Bemidji, made by members of the commercial bodies of the Twin Cities and Duluth, members of the state drainage board and legislators, returned to Duluth this morning, enthusiastic over what they had seen in the way of the possibilities for the future development of this part of the state.

"The trip was a remarkable success from every standpoint," said Mr. Comstock today. "John Abercrombie and G. A. Ralph, state drainage engineers, were along to tell us of the practical side of the drainage project as we passed through the district which it is proposed to drain, and superintendents of the state experimental farms were on hand to dwell upon the agricultural possibilities. There is not a man of the party who is not now an enthusiastic advocate of the drainage of state lands. With us were Senator Clapp, Congressman Bede, and two or three other congressmen.

"We are all convinced that drainage will be both cheap and practicable. It is simply a business proposition, and all money spent in this direction by the state is sure to be a good investment, bringing in big returns. The engineers said the swamps could be almost as easily drained as lakes on a hill top, for they all are on high lands. The expense will be about $1 an acre, we were told.

"Wonderful exhibits of grains, grasses and vegetables were shown at all the stops along the line, particularly at Blackduck, where ripened corn of fine quality, and Kentucky blue grass, nearly six feet in height were displayed. Finer root and grain crops could not be produced anywhere in the state. We were convinced that the region visited is particularly adapted to dairying. The superintendent of the experimental farm said it was better for this purpose than any lands farther to the south.

"The people were found to be progressive and prosperous, with fine growing little towns. I never saw a crowd so enthusiastic over the prospects of any section as were all the members of our party over the future of Northern Minnesota. Reforestration is all right on lands not better fitted for agriculture, but it should not be allowed where the soil can be put to a better use. Drainage will be of direct benefit to the whole state, and I believe Tuesday's junket will do much to convince the people of that fact."

The Valparaiso Calamity.

From authetic reports it seems that in the recent earthquake in Valparaiso, Chili, the loss of life and property damaged was proportionately as great as in our San Francisco disaster. These two cities occupied relatively the same position in regard to commercial importance, both being gateways to and from the Pacific ocean. From authentic reports, extending over a period of 53 years, you are fully justified in believing that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a sure cure for all stomach, liver and bowel complaints such as headache, bloating, flatulency, dyspepsia, indigestion, costiveness, billousness, sleeplessness, nausea, female ills, poor appetite, cramps or malaria, fever and ague. Every sick man or woman ought to commence taking it at once. Good health invariably results. Our Private stamp over neck of bottle.

NORTH BUTTE IS UP AGAIN

Sells as High as $115 During Session of Market.

Cananea Central and Superior & Pittsburg Continue Their Advances.

Today saw another frenzied copper stock market and North Butte, Cananea Central, Superior & Pittsburg and Calumet & Arizona made good advances.

The brokers' wires East were so overcrowded with business that it was next to impossible to execute all orders and the receipt of quotations was delayed.

North Butte sold as high as $115. It was rumored about town that it sold on the Boston exchange at $118, but the brokers affirmed that $115 was the high price of the day.

Cananea Central and Superior & Pittsburg made new high records. Superior & Pittsburg sold as high at $25.37½ during the day and Cananea Central was traded in at $26 during the morning. Prices fell off somewhat at the close.

North Butte opened at $109, declined to $108.50, the low price of the day, and then rallied to $115. It fell off to $114 just before the close, which was $113.50 bid and $114 asked.

Early in the day Cananea Central sold at $23, advanced to $26, fell off to $24.25 and closed at about $24 bid and $24.25 asked. Superior & Pittsburg sold at the opening at $24, advanced to $25.37½, declined to $24.87½ and closed at $24.50 bid and $24.87½ asked.

Calumet & Arizona opened at $130, advanced to $133.75 and closed at $132.50 asked. Butte Coalition was strong, but fell off slightly at the close. It opened at $41.12½, sold as high as $42, declined to $40.12½ and closed at $41.25 bid and $41.50 asked.

Amalgamated and Anaconda were quiet. Amalgamated opened at $112, advanced to $113.12½ and closed at $113.12½ bid. Anaconda opened at $283.50, declined to $283, rallied to $284.50, and closed at $284.50 bid.

Warren was strong, selling as nigh as $15.50, declining to $15, and closing at $15.50 bid. Denn-Arizona sold at $20.50 and $20, and closed at $19.75 bid and $20.25 asked; Globe Consolidated at $6.87½ and $7, and closed at $6.75 bid and $7 asked; Copper Queen of Idaho at $1.75 and closed at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked, and Calumet & Montana at $1.75 and closed at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked.

Cliff was inactive and closed at $4.75 bid and $5 asked; Keweenaw at $7.37½ bid and $7.87½ asked, and Keweenaw at $11 bid and $11.50 asked. Black Mountain sold at $9.25 and closed at $9 bid and $9.25 asked.

A dispatch from Boston to Gay & Sturgis says. President William C. Greene, of the Greene Consolidated company, and a director of the Cananea Central says that no portion of the 200,000 shares of Cananea Central stock owned by the Greene Consolidated company will be sold, as the extraordinary development upon the Cananea Central grounds lead to the belief that before two years the stock of the company will be worth $100 per share.

CITY BRIEFS

Dogs Are Poisoned.

Valuable dogs are meeting their death by foul means, in the West end these days and the residents of that section of the city are planning to do things to the rascal who is poisoning the animals, provided he can be captured. Several valuable dogs have been poisoned this week.

Married by Rev. Read.

The marriage ceremony of Miss Len McCormick and Will Koener both of Duluth, was performed by Rev. M. Read at St. Paul's rectory yesterday afternoon.

Agree on Settlement.

Upon an agreement reached by the attorneys of both parties, the case of Andrew Korhonen against George Sands and others, was dismissed in district court this morning.

To Recover on Note.

Judge Dibell this morning listened to the statement of facts and the arguments in the case of Tibbs, Hutchings & Co., against F. A. Clarkson for the recovery of $239 part payment on a note executed by Hans Peterson in 1904 to the Tibbs, Hutchings company. A month later Peterson delivered to F. A. Clarkson a trust deed and the latte accepted the same and became a party to it. The Tibbs, Hutchings company have only obtained part payment on the note from Clarkson and demand judgment for the remainder, $239. The court took the case under consideration.

Tugmen See Floater.

Tugmen who were working in the Lake avenue slip this morning reported a floater in the bay near Booth's dock. Durkan & Crawford were notified by the police department to take charge of the body, but when they reached the dock the body had disappeared. It is thought that the wash wave may have carried it under the dock and search was still in progress this afternoon.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Powell will leave Duluth this afternoon, for Bisbee, Arizona, after a stay of ten days at the Head of the Lakes.

W. F. Fitch, president of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, is in the city today from Marquette, Mich.

F. O. Pearce of Grand Forks, N. D., who has been visiting friends in the city, returned home today.

B. N. Jenkins left for St. Paul today.

T. C. Glenn left for Denver, Colo., today.

DASSEL MAN WINS

First Place in the October Scoring in Butter Contest.

St. Paul, Oct. 4.—P. J. Olson of Dassel wins the October scoring in the educational contest conducted by the state dairy and food department. James T. Pomeroy of Lake Benton is second and Mike Gallagher of Money Creek is third. The winning score is 97, which is rather low. In fact all the scores are low, but butter dealers say that this is the case all over the country and that they are unable to get fancy butter at any price. There were 150 entries and the butter was scored by J. C. Joslin, H. T. Sondergard and H. A. Goetsch. There will be one more scoring in the contest.

In the cheese contest Fred Miller of Concord won first with 98, and W. L. Parken of Manterville second with 97½. W. R. Atchison of St. Aoton and G. Andrist of West Concord scored 97 and A. Imberg of Cannon Falls 96. There were about twenty entries.

MORAN FOR GOVERNOR.

Massachusetts Democrats Nominate District Attorney at Boston.

Boston, Oct. 4.—At the Democratic convention this afternoon, George Fred Williams made a speech nominating John Brown Moran for governor. Mr. Moran is the present district attorney of Suffolk county. The nomination was made by acclamation.

E. Gerry Brown of Brockton was nominated by acclamation for lieutenant governor.

TAFT MAY COME.

Secretary May Make Trip to Minnesota This Month.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Secretary of War Taft will administer affairs in Cuba but a short time. He may make his Western trip this month, after all, and come to Minnesota.

Everybody who has conferred with the president and secretary are emphatic in their statements that there will only be a short period between now and the Cuban elections. Jan. 1 is considered as a most remote date. The army contingent will, of course, remain some time after the elections to see that things get to running smoothly.

FAIL TO GET MEN.

Bluefields, W. Va., Oct. 4.—The last account received here indicates that the rescuers have been unable to reach the entombed miners in the West Forks mines of the Pocahontas collieries. It is supposed that twenty or thirty men are entombed.

THEY WANT JACOBSON

Delegation to Ask Him to Oppose Senator Nelson.

Not Believed That He Will Consent to Enter Race.

St. Paul, Oct. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—A committee will wait on J. F. Jacobson this evening to induce him to be a candidate for the United States senate against Senator Knute Nelson. Among the members of this committee are prominent shippers and citizens of the state interested in the rate hearing before the railroad and warehouse commission. It is not thought that Jacobson will consent to make the run.

Hunt's Perfect Baking Powder has stood the test of public favor for years; not an experiment, more used today than ever.

AGAIN CHOOSEN HEAD OF ORDER

Women Catholic Foresters Elect Mrs. Elizabeth Rodgers of Chicago.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 4.—Mrs. Elizabeth Rodgers of Chicago, who has been at the head of the Woman's Catholic Order of Foresters for fifteen years, was found to have been re-elected high chief ranger at a session of the convention at Plymouth Congregational church which lasted all of last night. Counting of the ballots began at 7 o'clock Wednesday night and was not finished until today. Other officers were elected as follows:

High vice chief ranger, Mrs. Rose Rittman, Minneapolis; high secretary, Mrs. Julia McDonnell, Chicago; high treasurer, Miss Katherine Birmingham, Chicago; high auditors, Mrs. Mary Duffy, Mrs. Jennie Johnson and Mrs. Catherine Phillips of Chicago; high medical examiner, Dr. Anna Dwyer, Chicago; high attorney, Adolph Eastor, Chicago; trustees, Mrs. Katherine Jacoby, Mrs. Margaret Filip, Mrs. Anna Klarkowski, Mrs. Marlet Cyr and Miss Kate Rochford, all of Chicago; Mrs. Mary Quirk, Milwaukee, and Mrs. Katherine Murphy, Sioux City.

At the conclusion of the count the convention adjourned until tomorrow morning, when requiem mass will be celebrated for Mrs. Anna Synon of Chicago, a deceased high court member.

CLARK IS NOT COMMUNICATIVE

St. Paul, Oct. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state railroad and warehouse commission today resumed its commodity rate hearings which were begun at the instance of the Minnesota Shipper's association, and J. T. Clark, vice president of the Omaha road, was on the witness stand during the entire morning.

Attorney Manahan for the shippers sought vainly to get from Mr. Clark a statement as to the amount of money the Omaha railroad had expended in the two political campaigns in Wisconsin in which Senator La Follette's candidacy was an issue. At a previous hearing, General Manager Trenholm had testified that employes of the Omaha road had worked in the Wisconsin campaigns. The only admission obtained from Mr. Clark was that he knew Attorney Perrin of Superior; that he had been in the legal department of the Omaha and that the witness had talked to Perrin about the Wisconsin campaign. But as to any expenditures of the Omaha's money not one word but "I don't know."

Mr. Clark was asked if it was not true that he himself had spent time trying to defeat La Follette. He replied that it was not true, but admitted that he might have spent five minutes talking on the situation at different times.

Mr. Clark said he would not dispute the fact that the vouchers testified to by Mr. Trenholm were paid by the Omaha company and issued by Mr. Trenholm.

The hearing was enlivened by the tilts between Attorney Manahan and Judge Wilson for the Omaha.

DRINKING BOUT.

Police Arrest Waitresses In Rear of Superior Street Saloon.

Two young women, who gave their names as Mary and Angnes Wilson, were arrested last evening while in the company of two men on a drinking bout in the rear of Blackwood's saloon, just east of the Hunter block. They were held on the charge of vagrancy at the police station, but were released on cash bail of $10 each, furnished by the men with whom they visited the saloon. The ball was forfeited when their cases were called in the municipal court this morning. The police are convinced that the young women gave fictitious names Both of them are employed as waitresses in downtown restaurants.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY AT EAGLE LAKE

Young Man Killed and Aged Woman Dies of Shock.

Mankato, Minn., Oct. 4.—A double tragedy has filled the village of Eagle Lake, seven miles from Mankato, with gloom and sorrow. At 5:30 Tuesday evening, Arthur Harrein, 19 years old, son of Charles Harrein, attempted to jump across the track in front of a rapidly approaching freight train, on the Chicago & Northwestern track in a spirit of fun and was struck and instantly killed.

His head was split open, one arm and leg was broken, a foot was crushed, and other injuries were sustained. Coroner Kennedy was summoned, but found no blame attachable to the railroad company, the train crew being exonerated by several witnesses.

Coroner Kennedy had just started for home when he was summoned back to investigate the death of Mrs. Lucinda J. Keeder, 80 years old, and for forty years a resident of Eagle Lake. She had been enjoying perfect health, but when told of the death of young Harrein, the shock caused heart failure, and she survived but five minutes, passing away before a physician could arrive. Mrs. Reeder was born Kentucky originally, and was a widow, but leaves ten children.

NARROWLY ESCAPES ASSASSINATION.

Simbirsk, Province of Simbirsk, Russia, Oct. 4.—Gen. Starynkewitsch, governor of Simbirsk, had a narrow escape from assassination this afternoon. A bomb was thrown at the governor wounding him in the hand and leg. His injuries are not fatal.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

Washington, Oct. 4.—A report on the operations of the rural free delivery service up to October 1 submitted by Fourth Assistant General DeGraw shows the petitions received since the establishment of the service number 54,120, upon 15,056 of which adverse reports were made. The numer of routes in operation October 1 was 36,586 and petitions pending 2,424. The balance of appropriation available for new service during the current year it $1,479,865.

JURY HOLDS LONG SESSION

No Verdict Yet Reached in Big Personal Injury Suit.

The damage suit of Mrs. Margaret Arseneau against the Duluth Street Railway company is still undecided, although the jury has been out nearly twenty-four hours. Mrs. Arseneau is suing the company for $30,000 for the loss of her son's limb. The boy was run over by a car in West Duluth a year ago and his right leg was so crushed that amputation was necessary.

The little boy swore that the motorman on the car had first threatened him and then kicked him off the car, while it was moving rapidly, and in failing the boy's right leg went under the rear wheel of the truck. Upon the allegation that the boy was kicked off by the motorman rests Mrs. Arseneau's claim for damages.

The trial closed yesterday afternoon and after hearing arguments of Attorneys John Jenswold, Jr., for Mrs. Arseneau, and Thomas Wood for the railway company, the jury retired to decide the liability of the company, if any.

LATE DOINGS IN UPPER MICHIGAN

Drunken Man Is Hurled From a Buggy and Killed.

Menominee—Swan Eckerson of Peshtigo was killed yesterday morning by being hurled from a buggy while drunk. Concussion of the brain caused death. He was 25 years old and unmarried. The accident occurred near Marinette.

Mary Hufsbeck, the 11-year-old daughter of Joseph Hufsbeck, a paper maker, was assaulted by a young man here yesterday. The victim was sitting alone under a tree eating dinner when the ruffian appeared. The girl fought until her clothing was torn and her face cut and bleeding. The man tried to choke her, but the girl finally escaped, and the assailant fled to Wisconsin, with an enraged posse in pursuit. One arrest was made last night. There is talk of lynching.

Ishpeming—According to Joseph M. Hooper, a member of the state board of examiners, there are now upwards of 4,000 licensed barbers in Michigan. Mr. Hooper has been succeeded as secretary of the commission by Emery Busby of Hastings, newly appointed, and now becomes the treasurer of that body. R. M. Filmore retires.

Houghton—C. S. Johnston, Detroit, assistant general superintendent of the Michigan State Telephone company, committed suicide in the Douglas house here yesterday by drinking three ounces of carbolic acid. His body was found lying fully dressed on the bed about 12:30, when his failure to appear caused alarm to be given. Monday night Johnston threatened to shoot himself, but was prevented. No cause is ascribed for the rash act. Johnston came here from Detroit two weeks ago to take temporary charge of the Copper country district until a new manager was appointed. While here he drank heavily. His family lives in Detroit.

John D. Ryan, managing director of the Amalgamated Copper company and prominently connected with many other successful mining corporations, arrived here Tuesday in his car, the "Washoe," of the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific railroad, of which he is a director. Mr. Ryan joins Mrs. Ryan, who has been in Houghton for several weeks visiting her mother, Mrs. Shelden.

At a meeting of the county board of the Ancient Order of Hibbernians held in this city Sunday, Calumet was selected as the place for holding the annual celebration of the order on March 17 next year. Twenty-five delegates were present at the meeting, the divisions represented being those of Hancock, Calumet, Lauruim, Dollar Bay and Lake Linden. The meeting held by the county board in this city Sunday was the annual one and officers were elected for the ensuing two years as follows: President, T. J. Donlan, Dollar Bay; vice president, Peter Sullivan, Calumet; secretary and treasurer, T. J. Murphy, Dollar Bay.

Torch Lake—Mrs. Johanna Nolan of Lake Linden died at the home of her mother, Mrs. Johanna Pope, Sunday, after a short illness. The deceased was born at the old Cliff mine, in Keweenaw county, in 1864, and removed to Lake Linden with her parents in 1883. Four years later she was married, her husband, David Nolan, being killed at the smelts thirteen years ago. She is survived by one son, Harold, who is sixteen years of age.

Mrs. John Hochstein of Tamarack City died Monday at the age of 80 years. The cause of death was a paralytic stroke. Mrs. Hochstein was born in Germany, coming to the United States when she was thirty-five years of age. She is survived by her husband, a son and two married daughters—Joseph of Lake Linden, Mrs. August Mayworm of Tamarack City and Mrs. David Vivian of Gay.

CURRENCY COMMISSION.

Would Have Notes Issuing Privilege of National Banks Enlarged.

New York, Oct. 4.—Either a central bank of issue to be established and controlled by the government, or a simple measure enlarging the present note issue privilege of national banks in such a manner that their rigat of issue shall not vary with the ownership of United States bonds, are the methods favored by the special currency commission appointed by the New York chamber of commerce last March to inquire into the condition of the currency and suggest desirable changes. The report was submitted at a meeting of the chamber of commerce today.

ROOSEVELT CALLED BEFORE GRAND JURY.

Boston, Oct. 4.—For about twenty minutes today Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Merideth Blagden, both Harvard students, who are charged with knowing something about the alleged assault recently committed upon Patrolman Fraher, of the Boston police on Boston common, were before the Suffolk county grand jury today. They had been summoned by District Attorney Moran to give the jury information concerning the assault.

Austrian Art Glass At Half Price

Large importation just received, should have arrived early in the summer, but owing to a rush on this class of glass, which is very popular in the East, it was impossible to ship early. While this glass is very artistic and a beautiful variety of colors, it is especially adapted to the summer season—in order to close out the line at once, we have bunched it in three lots—

The line consists of Handled Baskets, Fruit Bowls, Nut Bowls, Fern Bowls, Rose Bowls, Card Receivers, Footed Bowls, Vases of all shapes, and a great variety of odd pieces. See them in our avenue window.

CLAIM PILES WERE ROTTEN

Cement Company Wants Damages for Failure to Repair Building.

The hearing of evidence in the trial of the Standard Salt & Cement company's suit for $1,835 against Edward C. Liedel and others, was continued in district court this morning before Judge Ensign.

It is claimed by the company that a quantity of cement was spoiled when the floor of the warehouse, which they had leased from the Leidels gave away and allowed the cement to fall into the water. The company alleges that the warehouse was rented two years ago upon the promise that it would be properly repaired and strengthened. This was only partly done, and the piles under the warehouse were allowed to stand after having become decayed.

J. A. Warworth, who is an expert and makes it a business to inspect buildings of the kind under consideration, testified as to the condition in which he had found the warehouse at the time of the accident. The piles were badly decayed he said, and the flooring was found to have been weak. J. A. Johnson, a carpenter, testified to repairing the building and stated that he had been ordered to use old material. Samples of the piles were exhibited in court this morning.

COLUMBIA HUNTING CLOTHES

The sportsman's golden season is here. The leaves are turning and the law says: Shoot the partridge. To be equipped with proper sporting togs, is almost as necessary for a thorough enjoyment of a trip into the woods as to have a good gun.

UP-THE-GROVE SUITS. It is generally acknowledged among those who are well posted, that Up-the-Grove Hunting Jackets are best. It's our chief line. Their best feature is the gusset under the arms, constructed so that you can raise your gun with ease, even if the fowling pockets of the coat are heavily laden with the spoils of a day's successful hunting. The sleeves of these garments can be raised to any height without pulling up the body of the coat. Up-the-Grove Hunting Suits come in Khaki, Waterproof Pantasote and in English Corduroy; $2.50 to $8.00 for the coats, and $1.50 to $5.00 for the trousers.

RAIN-PROOF JACKETS We have made for us other hunting coats embodying the ideas of local huntsmen, which are inexpensive. Among them is a Khaki coat with waterproof interlining, which is of a dead grass color and costs only $3.50.

SHIRTS AND CAPS. For those who perfer them, we have a fine showing of Sweaters and Knit Jackets, and for all we have good Flannel Shirts, Socks, Gloves, and all the other minor necessities for the hunter's comfort. Corduroy Caps at 50c. $1.00 and $2.00, and the popular stitched Cloth Hats at $1.50.

HUNTING BOOTS. Six different kinds of first-class Hunting Boots are to be found in the Columbia Shoe Department. They are all waterproof, as well as leather, can be viscolized, and range in height from 7 to 18 inches. Tan or black, and heavy as well as light boots. The prices are $4.00, $5.00, $5.50, $6.00, $6.50 and $8.00. The better ones of these boots are hand-made throughout, and all have good bellows tongues.

Leather Top Rubbers are in favor with some hunters.

NORTHERN MINNESOTA METHODIST CONFERENCE

In Annual Session at Hennepin Avenue Church, Minneapolis.

Report of Presiding Elder Clemans of Duluth District.

Minneapolis, Oct. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Northern Minnesota Methodist Episcopal conference convened in Hennepin Avenue church yesterday, Bishop Luther Wilson presiding. A. H. McKee of Detroit, preached the conference sermon. The bishop, assisted by the presiding elders, administered the sacrament of the Lord's supper. The roll was called and C. F. Sharpe was appointed secretary. His assistants are: Robert J. Taylor, G. C. Satterlee, T. J. Chappell, C. R. Oaten and James A. Geer; statistical secretary, E. A. Cooke; assistants, L. A. Willsey, C. H. Blake, T. J. Chappell, B. F. Koch. The treasurer is Henry Nebbs; assistants, R. A. Saunderson, J. T. B. Smith, Thomas Grise and C. T. Beers.

Dr. Lafayette Dodds was passed in character and read the report of the Crookston district. Dr. Clemans read the report of the Duluth district. Dr. Nicholson read the report of the Litchfield district and Dr. Long of the Minneapolis district. These four presiding elders were loudly applauded when they finished their reports.

Bishop Neely addressed the conference on South America. Bishop Oldham spoke of India. Dr. Savage represented the Children's home, Minneapolis.

The conference was addressed this morning by editor S. P. Herben of the Epworth Herald; Dr. Thompson, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate and Dr. H. C. Jennings, agent of the Methodist Book concern. Mrs. S. H. Knight spoke about the Asbury hospital, Dr. H. B. Swartz of Japan and Dr. Boswell of the board of church extension spoke. Dr. Lathrop of the Minnesota conference invited the conference for a joint sermon at St. Paul which was accepted by a rising vote.

Dr. Long moved that this conference co-operate with the Minneapolis Commercial club in an invitation to secure the general conference for Minneapolis in 1908. W. L. Singer was granted permission to withdraw and his parchment returned properly endorsed.

H. W. Knowles of Brainerd asked for a supernumerary relation. Dr. Spitz was transferred to the Dakota conference. Parchments properly endorsed were returned to Dr. P. A. Cool on motion of Dr. Long. Robert Burnip, B. E. Sherwin and C. S. Kathan were continued as supernumeraries. R. K. Collaway was continued and will be located next year. G. W. Proctor is to be located next year. The superannuated preachers continued are L. D. Brown, R. M. Carter, Davis, Faber, Hitchcock, Hall, Higgins, Kephart, Lathrop and Molyneux.

Bishop Oldham gave an able address last evening. Dr. Thompson presided.

DR. CLEMANS' REPORT.

Presiding Elder of the Duluth District Makes Good Showing.

Minneapolis, Oct. 4.—(Special to the Herald)—Dr. E. C. Clemans, presiding elder of the Duluth district read the following report, which will be read with interest by the people in his vast territory:

The pastors and people on the Duluth district have closed a very successful year. An unusual business prosperity has prevailed over the district and subscriptions and collections have benefitted thereby. There has been great activity in spiritual things and many have been added to the Church, "such as are being saved" for which we are profoundly thankful to God.

PASTORAL CHANGES.

Soudan and Winton, left to be supplied at Conference, were divided into two circuits as before and Winton placed in charge of C. H. Blake of Ely. W. E. Barber was appointed to Soudan, and Ashawa, left to be supplied, was placed in his care. W. L. Playfair, appointed to Forreston circuit, left his work in April with my consent and R. B. Culbertson was appointed "supply" in his place. He also gave up this field and J. W. Lucas took the work, to give it up in September to D. P. Locast. Notwithstanding these many changes, Forreston is awaiting another pastor. J. A. Lewis, pastor at Royalton, was appointed financial agent of Mallilieu university, Kinsey, Ala., and W. G. Boyle filled out the year at that point. Brother Boyle was appointed to Vineland, but on account of ill health was permitted to give up the charge and G. W. Hunt was appointed "supply" at that point. In September, F. H. Gillette took up the work at Bovey, a growing town on the iron range. Cass Lake added to the district at Conference, with the consent of the presiding bishop and of the presiding elders, was changed back to the Crookston district and Randall and Parkertown, formerly of the Duluth district, were returned. Miss Saima Riekko, Finnish deaconess, whose work was among her own people in Duluth, supported by the Conference Womans' Home Missionary Society, gave up her work in July.

MATERIAL IMPROVEMENTS.

The parsonage of Grace church, Duluth, has been made into a convenient, modern residence at an expense of $500, all paid for, J. W. Robinson, pastor.

At Virginia, Henry Logon, pastor, the church has been raised on its foundation, a splendid basement put in, suitable for Sunday school and social purposes, the building enlarged, and when completed will be remodelled, with new pews, stained glass and other improvements, making it one of the handsomest and complete churches on the Range. The cost of the improvements will be about $3,500, all provided for.

At Hibbing, Rupert Swinnerton, pastor, the church building has been enlarged, beautiful windows replacing the old, the walls decorated, new pews, carpet and pulpit furniture; the parsonage which was part of the building has been made into a lecture room with rooms for Sunday schools and other purposes, also a new furnace, the cost being $2,000, every cent of which is provided for. But this is not all. A new parsonage has been built, convenient, modern, costing $1,500, the money being borrowed on easy terms, the payment being provided for in three years. While this work was going on, another denomination was building a church, collecting money from the same sources that the pastor was collecting it from. Because of these improvements, Hibbing has now one of the most desirable charges on the district, the credit of which is due Brother Swinnerton, because of his persistent and unwearied labors.

Improvements in the way of painting, papering, the purchase of bells, new carpets, repairing, new means of lighting, new furnaces, on the payment of small and burdensome debts have been made at Aitkin, C. W. Lawson, pastor; Biwabik, C. F. Adams, pastor; Cloquet, I. N. Goodell, pastor; Deerwood, Justus Parish, pastor; Grand Rapids, H. R. Scott, pastor; Mora, A. B. Calder, pastor; Ogilvie, W. A. Parkinson, pastor; and Pine City J. J. Parish, pastor.

CHURCH DEBTS.

The church extension debt at Ely, of $500 with a number of years of unpaid interest, has been paid. The board of church extension, generously waived the interest, and Charles Trezona, general superintendent of the Oliver Mining company at Ely, president of the board of trustees, secured the money that paid the debt in full. The payment of this debt lifted a great burden and so inspired the people that, under the leadership of pastor C. H. Blake, the church property has been improved at an expense of $300. The entire remodelling and reseating of the building is contemplated.

At Carlton, the pastor, G. O. Parish, has raised the church extension debt of $250. Dr. Robert Forbes generously offered to raise half of the debt himself, provided the people at once raised the other half. Stimulated by this proposition, the pastor proceeded to raise the half, and the payment of this old standing burden is the result. This removes the last church extension debt in the Duluth district. We are not sorry. The pastor has done efficient work at Carlton, making it a good charge in a promising county seat.

The pastor at Asbury, Thomas Grice, has raised $400 during the year, paying off the last cent of debt owed by the church.

The debt of $2,000 on the church property at Two Harbors, W. R. J. Gratz, pastor, has been paid. For the first time in its history, Two Harbors owes no debts. It has become one of the best charges in the district.

DEDICATIONS.

Two churches have been dedicated this year. At Randall, J. H. Keppell, pastor, the church was dedicated March 18, 1906. The building cost $1,000 and was dedicated entirely free of debt. It was commenced when C. C. Underhill was pastor, but the greater part of the work has been done under the persistent and energetic leadership of the present pastor, who, taking the pioneer conditions prevailing at Randall, has done a great work.

The church at Morrison on the Sitkin circuit was dedicated Sunday, Aug. 26, 1906, C. C. Sutton, pastor. The building is a neat and tasteful structure, costing about $1,200, and is practically free of debt. This is the second church built on this circuit within two years by this successful pastor. He tells me that a drill has been placed on the church land at Equagimo and we are expecting before another conference to have an iron mine belonging to the Methodist Episcopal church.

NEW CHURCHES.

A church building to cost $1,000 is in process of construction at Glendorado on the Rooney circuit, James Carter, pastor. At Hinckley, the people are busily rearing a church building that when furnished will cost $2,000. No finer building to be found along the line of the Duluth Short line. J. D. Manley, pastor. Under Brother J. D. Manley's efficient leadership, another church is being built on his work at Sandstone to cost when completed $2,000. This is built of concrete stone and when finished gives us the mastery of the religious situation at Sandstone. C. F. Adams has led in the building of a fine church in Aurora on the iron range. The building will cost when completed $1,900. It will be the only Protestant church in this thriving mining town.

At Buhl, J. A. Geer, pastor, has a beautiful church which is to be dedicated in November at a cost of $2,500. Again we have the only Protestant church building in this mining town.

At Deer River the pastor, C. H. Hawn, has led his people in the building of a new church to cost when completed $3,500. This takes the place of the little building, erected some years ago. The building will be completed by December and is the only church building in a town that promises to become one of the great towns of Itasca county. At Brookpark, J. A. Hayes, pastor, the services are now held in a building belonging to the Baptist association. The pastor has been earnestly at work raising money and in the near future this building will be purchased, and with some slight improvements will give us a good building at this growing point.

J. A. Kahl at Braham on the Cambridge circuit has been negotiating with the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church at that point for the purchase of their building. The Swedish Methodists no longer hold services and when the building becomes ours, which it will in a short time, we will have a structure that would cost us $1,500 to structure that would cost us $1,500 to structure at present prices. This will make, with the Finnish church at Nashwauk, ten new churches in the Duluth district. These churches will be ready for occupancy by Dec. 1 and their building was made possible by generous donations from the board of church extension.

The church at Pine River, only an unenclosed, unroofed building at the beginning of the year, is rapidly nearing completion. R. W. Bell, pastor.

Endion church, Duluth, J. W. Powell, pastor, is laying broad plans for the future of Methodism in the best resident section of Duluth. Two splendid lots costing $6,000 have been purchased in a very desirable location, and the building of a $50,000 church has been authorized by the trustees, nearly half of this money being now raised. Endion church will become, under the leadership of Brother Powell, one of the great churches of the Northwest.

NEW PARSONAGES.

First church, Duluth, is building a splendid parsonage to cost, when completed, $12,000. The lots were donated for this purpose by H. M. Bradley, whose generosity to Methodism is manifest in so many ways.

The parsonage will make a fine home for the pastor, M. S. Rice.

C. W. Ramshaw, pastor at Proctor, has led his people in the purchase of a house that makes a neat home for himself and his wife and pastors who in years to come will be sent to Proctor. The cost is $1,000. J. A. Geer and the people of Chisholm have built as nice a parsonage as is to be found on the iron range. It is modern, convenient and cost $1,600. The building of this parsonage, together with the building of the church at Buhl, on the same circuit, gives Brother Geer a record to be proud of.

At Deer River, the old church has been removed on to two lots adjoining the church recently purchased and will be made over into a convenient parsonage, making Deer River a desirable charge. Brother Horne also leads in building both a church and parsonage. Through the kindness of Dr. Robert Forbes, a special gift was given to the people of Barnum for the parsonage. The doctor secured $150 in the same way for Proctor. The Barnum parsonage will be enlarged and is now occupied by the pastor. The parsonage will be mentioned under the head of the Indian work. With the sum spent for material improvements, the ten new churches, the five new parsonages, purchased lots, $49,616, have been added to the property of the Duluth district this year.

NEW WORK ON THE DISTRICT.

At Bovey, Itasca county, work has been started this year. F. H. Gillfee is the first pastor. A half mile from Bovey the Steel corporation is building a model town and we are securing lots on which to build a church that will be commensurate with the prospect of the city which promises to be one of the best arranged and best governed on the iron range.

Through the untiring efforts of H. W. Knowles, pastor at Brainerd, a society has been organized at Fort Ripley and a circuit will be formed at this conference.

The departure of John Callahan to take the superintendency of the great Wesleyan mission in New York city, left the Star of Hope Mission, in Duluth, which he started and so successfully worked, without a head and without any denominational affiliation. This work could not be lost and acting with the consent of the Methodist union of Duluth, I assumed the work as part of the district work. Trustees were appointed and Thomas L. Dunn, licensed by the district conference as a local preacher, was placed in charge of the mission. The mission had no resources of any kind and we had to face an annual expense of superintendent and mission of $1,500. God has blessed the work and raised up friends for the mission. Every dollar of expense has been met and there is money in the treasury. Scores have been converted to God in the meetings, which are held every night in the year. The mission is a training school for the young people of Duluth, and the various Epworth leagues in the city have regularly taken charge of certain evenings in the week. Brother Dunn has proven himself the right man for the place and a worthy successor of Brother Callahan.

At Holyoke, thirty miles south of Duluth, on the Great Northern railroad, a new work has been established. It was placed in charge of G. O. Parrish of Carlton and promises to be a prosperous work.

There are fifty-six Ladies' Aid societies on the Duluth district and they have raised for the expense of the church $9,751. Without the efforts of these faithful women a great deal of our work on the district could not have been done and I give them this recognition, and pause long enough to express the gratitude of the preachers and myself for the self-sacrificing labor of these brave, burden-bearing women.

INDIAN WORK.

The Indian work is prospering. A great deal has been done among the Chippewas on the district. There are fully 3,000 Indians on this district and a visit has been made to every part of the Indian field. The past year convinces me that we have pagans here at home as ignorant and superstitious as are to be found in "darkest Africa." Antoni Couture, who has done faithful work among his people, was forced to give up the work on account of severe sickness and at this writing it looks as though he would never work again. Frank Pequette,a Chippewa, was appointed to take his place and is doing good work. He will move his family to Wak-em-up Bay after this conference.

At Sawyer, J. W. Martin was appointed pastor in March. He has held regular meetings and from a recent visit I am convinced of the thoroughness of his work. A parsonage is needed at Sawyer as the Indians need the example of a Christian family and Brother Martin has raised from his own people at Odanah, Wis., over $400 to build a house costing about $500. Both Indian missionaries are at conference and you ca nlearn from them what the grace of God can do for the Chippewa Indians.

FINNISH WORK.

The Finnish work has progressed and at Nashwauk a building costing $2,500 is in course of erection. The Finnish missionary, Matti Lehtenen has organized a large society and the outlook is favorable. A society of thirty members has been organized at Sparta. In Duluth, rooms have been secured and services regularly held. There is a Sunday school, Epworth league and Ladies' Aid society.

At Split Rock, D. D. Fetters has been holding services. I am arranging with Bishop Burt for the transfer of another missionary from Finland.

THE CONFERENCE FUND.

The conference fund has made marked progress. We have welcomed the visits of Dr. J. B. Hingley, corresponding secretary. The district is proud that owing to the generosity of H. M. Bradley, a member of First Church, Duluth, a kind friends of the Methodist preacher, in a personal gift of $25,000, the original sum to be raised for endowment, has been raised from $50,000 to $100,000. Other laity have responded loyally. The great work of Dr. Higgley is appreciated.

The pastors and people are rallying to the support of Hamline university and we rejoice with the president, Dr. G. H. Bridgeman, in the largely increased attendance and especially in the securing of a library building. The Duluth district is represented by twenty-five students.

The spiritual work has been pushed and gracious revivals have occurred, the reports will show an increase of 500 members.

This year the baord of church extension donated to the churches $1,350 and $750 will be needed by Dec. 1.

W. E. Loomis died at Birchwood, May 2, 1906. He was a good mand and a faithful worker.

H. M. Michaelson the pioneer Finnish missionary in Minnesota, died July 28, 1906. His one aim was to bring Christ to his people and build up His kingdom.

H. W. Knowles, pastor at Brainerd, will sever his connection with the active rank of the conference on account of ill health. On Sunday, Sept. 30, he closed thirty-eight years in the active work. It is with deep regret that we let him go, but we rejoice in the work he has done. May God bless him. He will ask for a supernumerary relation.

I am very grateful to the preachers and their wives for their many kindnesses to me, and hope I have appreciated your faithful work.

"Be strong;
We are not here to play, to dream, to drift,
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift
Shun not the struggle, face it, 'tis God's gift.

"Be strong;
It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day is long,
Faint not, fight on. Tomorrow comes the song."

LAY CONFERENCE.

Watson S. Moore of Duluth Speaks at St. Paul Meeting.

St. Paul, Oct. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The annual meeting of the Minnesota lay conference of the Methodist church began today at the First Methodist church, Dayton avenue and Third street.

A large number of prominent laymen from various portions of the state were present to participate in the discussion. At the morning session the program included an address by President H. E. Wood, a paper on "Christian Citizens," by R. Taylor Kasson, and the reports of committees and appointments of new committees. This afternoon W. McVeigh, Merriam Park, read a paper on "Tithing," and A. M. Locker, Windom, spoke on the duty of the church to the Sunday school. Papers were also read by W. S. Moore, Duluth, on "What Is a Layman Good For?" and on "How Can the Preaching Ability of the Layman Be Enlisted?" by Prof. C. R. Boostrom of Austin. There were also greetings from the Anoka conference and miscellaneous business.

On Saturday, A. C. Hickman, of Minneapolis, is scheduled for an address on "Christian Loyalty" and F. Lewis of Owatonna will speak on "Church Music." Miss H. Robbins of Austin will speak on "Reverence for God's House" and the convention will close with reports of committees and the election of officers.

MUNICIPAL LIGHT VERY EXPENSIVE

Columbus Plant Eats Up Big Sum and More Demanded.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 4.—Once more the managers of the Columbus municipal electric plant have come to the front with a demand for more money. This time $140,000 is asked for, but the council has not acted upon the matter. Within a few years the investment in the Columbus municipal plant has grown from $63,000 to nearly $500,000 and still the promoters of the deal have not money enough to give the service they promised. The present plant, which was supposed to be a model one, is wholly inadequate.

MANILA IN SERVICE.

Now on Way to Two Harbors for Cargo of Ore.

The barge Manila of the Pittsburg Steamship company's fleet, which was wrecked last November and but recently towed down the lakes from here to be repaired, is now on her way to Two Harbors to receive a cargo of ore.

This is her first trip since she left dry dock. The Manila is still a barge, the plans for converting her into a steamer having been abandoned for the present at least.

PRINTERS SATISFIED

Well Pleased With Outcome of the Strike in Duluth.

Lasted a Year and Typographical Union Claims Victory Here.

A year ago tomorrow, October 5, the members of the Duluth Typographical union demanded the eight-hour day in all the job printing shops in the city and this not being granted went out on strike. Since that time the strike has been kept up continually, not only in Duluth, but throughout the country, and although both sides have claimed the victory as their own, neither has been willing to give up. In Duluth and a majority of cities in the country the strike is practically ended, although a few of the non-union shops still hold out.

There were twenty-seven printers who went out in this city a year ago, after the contract which had been made between the Typogrpahical union and the Typothetae had expired, and sixteen job printing plants were affected. A few of the smaller shops signed the new scale immediately, but for several weeks the work in the majority of shops was tied up. Then slowly, one by one, the smaller shops came into line and signed the new scale of the printers until now there are practically no union printers who are not working and some of the union employers have been obliged to import union printers from the Twin Cities.

Since the strike began there has been a total of ten employing printers who have signed the new scale and agreed to the eight-hour day, while there are four of the bigger shops which still refuse to sign the scale. These may hold out for several months longer, but they are greatly handicapped from lack of men and can not handle half of the amount of work which they formerly turned out, according to the members of the union. The strike has effectually smashed the Typothetae in Duluth.

Most of the printers are still working the full nine hours, however, but for all time after the eight hours they are paid on the overtime basis, or for time and one half. Some of the shops are only working eight hours except in cases of emergency.

Although four big shops are still employing non-union printers, the union men claim they are doing very little work. As a result of this several of the shops which were formerly run with two or three printers are now doing more work than the beig concerns. There has been a great demand for the union label by those having printing done since the strike began and this has helped the unionists as much as anything else in their fight.

The cost to the local union of the strike in this city has not amounted to more than a few thousand dollars, but the Duluth union has also contributed generously to the strike fund of the International association. Nearly $2,000,000 has been expended by the International in assisting unions in cities where the strike has been less successful than in Duluth. The strike effected practically every city in the country and of these 500 have signed the new agreement and granted the eight-hour day.

VERY HIGH PRICE ERA

For Metal and Many Other Articles Has But Started.

Copper Breaks Record for the Last Twenty-Five Years.

New York, Oct. 4.—Copper last Saturday was clearly established at the 20 cent per pound mark.

This is the high record for the last twenty-five years, and it comes, too, at the time when the production of copper in the world is at the greatest ever known. The consumption has kept full pace with the increased production, and the situation has enabled the powerful interests which control 75 per cent of the production to market their metal at this extraordinary price. There is no indication of any lessening in the demand for actual absorption by consumption. There is plenty of evidence of vastly increased production in the immediate future, but just as strong proof that the consumption is sure to increase. It is a race between production and consumption, with the appearance of a neck-and-neck contest for the next three or four years. Production, if given free rein, will finally win, but the facts of the strong financial interests being now in control of three-quarters of the entire production, and eager to purchase every important mine that is opened up, gives promise of an era of very high prices for a long term of years. There can be no speedy check to this community of interests which on iron, steel, copper and many other articles enables the producers to fix the prices at their own valuations.

Open and free competition in production with no legislative advantages would do it, provided—and here is a factor that must not be overlooked—that financial strength was equal.

Large amounts of capital on hand or available can swing deals and produce profits in business enterprises, where limited capital managed with the greatest skill will fall of any results. Given equal advantages of location, supplies and economical production, free both from legislative protection or subsidy, yet the concern with full and ample money capital will ever have the advantage of brains and limited money. The past years have given thousands of examples of just this very situation. The writer has known personally many of the brightest, shrewdest, keenest iron and steel manufacturers, coal operators and oil well owners who failed to realize the fortunes from the iron, the steel, the coal, the oil they produced because others had more knowledge of the methods of uniting money, collecting and combining capital, and with this increased power, easily surpassed them in every business affair. The combination of brains and capital—knowledge and money—is irresistible in business affairs. Brains and knowledge, with the finest attributes, without sufficient capital, can accomplish but little under our present system of financial and commercial affairs.

Andrew Carnegie's fortune was made when Thomas L. Scott, with the influence, money and patronage of the Pennsylvania railroad, backed his enterprises. The older and at that time greater iron establisments were reduced at once to second rank, not by Carnegie's greater knowledge of the steel business, but by the combination of capital ready to support him. The money and the orders, the financial aid and commercial support of the Pennsylvania railroad enabled him to distance all competitors and to accumulate individual capital so quickly and so hugely that in three decades he was able to build a competing railroad to his former ally and through new alliances defy the new management which had succeeded to the men he had formerly dealt with so successfully. It was this combination of capital and knowledge that laid forty years ago the basis of the present United States Steel corporation. The growth of amount of ready money available in the United States renders it far easier today to form great combinations than at any prior time in our history. Steel is regulated in production and price by the United States Steel company.

Oil by the Standard Oil company.

Coal by well-known corporations amply able to pay large salaries to the ablest managers, the most successful attorneys, and to form solid attachments, bonds and liens with the great and small railways they need to do their work.

Copper every month is becoming easier to handle by the combination, for within six months many negotiations have tended to eliminate independent companies and concentrate the control in the hands of fewer people, strong people financially, and, if judged by results, abler people, for they are now in position to dictate prices of copper to the world.

Many persons believe that change of tariff or customs duties would prevent these combinations, but it would not in many cases; certainly not in that of oil or copper, where the world is our customer and eager to buy.

Others propose penalties for illegal combinations, but a combination of money with knowledge, a union of capital with skill, energy and organizing ability can be made legally and yet be powerful and masterful to an extreme degree. There is no disguising the fact that concentration and combination are today the moving, active features of the financial, commercial and political currents of the world's thought and the world's action.

We see it in every business affair; we behold it in every telegraphic column of the daily newspaper.

It seems to govern the action of individuals, communities and nations as if it were a law of gravitation or the result of a centrifugal force operating on the minds of men. If individualism was the great force of the six centuries since the Magna Charta gave it form and being, collectivism, the massing, the concentrating, the uniting of worldly forms, systems and efforts, seems to be the prevailing and compelling force of the present century.

With all the drawbacks of this prevailing force, its obvious inequalities and injustices, it goes without saying that the financial conditions of the masses of the people in all quarters of the world are improving, and that hundreds of millions are enjoying a comparive prosperity they never dreamed of twenty or thirty years ago. The embroidery and lace manufacturers of France and Switzerland report an unprecedented demand for their output, and they rightly attribute to it the better times prevailing in all parts of the world. I have in prior articles excepted Russia from business prosperity, believing that the political and social troubles of that unhappy country would certainly lessen trade and commerce there. The official reports of the imports and exports of Russia from the latest data obtainable show, however, just the opposite. The figures give large increases in the totals of both imports and exports. When this great country, in throes of evolution and revolution, is increasing business on every hand the fact attests in the strongest possible manner to the immense force and influence of the increased purchasing power of the people in every part of the earth. Iron and steel are sold up to the furnace mouth, and the orders for bridge and structural steel, for rails and for sheets are never ceasing, coming by every mail and by wire every hour. The recent decision of the United States Steel company to create immense cement plants, capable of turning out millions of tons of cement each year, is a wise one. The cement age is here, and with that cement will go structural steel in all buildings, great and small. The United States Steel company will be able to furnish both to the consumer and may possibly furnish the broken stone for the concrete if it can buy a few quarries near the great cities of the land. If the great corporations are gathernig in large sums of profits the millions of individuals are piling up the dimes and the dollars too.

How to Cure a Cold.

The question of how to cure a cold without unnecessary loss of time is one in which we are all more or less interested, for the quicker a cold is gotten rid of the less the danger of pneumonia and other serious diseases. Mr. B. W. L. Hall of Waverly, Va., has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for years and says:

"I firmly believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be absolutely the best preparation on the market for colds. I have recommended it to my friends and they all agree with me." For sale by all druggists.

PENSIONS ASKED

For Railway Mail Clerks Who Have Served Twenty Years.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—Pensioning of railway clerks, who have served twenty years, granting of full pay for an indefinite period to disabled clerks and an allowance of full pay of all clerks on duty away from home, were the problems discussed at yesterday's session of the Railway Mail convention. At the conclusion of the discussion of the "age limit," resolutions were adopted asking congress to enact a bill providing for the deduction of $2 a month from each postal clerk's salary with which to create a fund, which shall be added to all deductions secured by the government from fines and other penalties which the clerks may be subjected to. A resolution was also adopted asking congress to enact a bill providing pay for an indefinite period to all clerks who are injured or disabled while on active duty.

HIDDEN DANGERS.

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Duluth Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

Danger Signal No 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

Danger Signal No. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Duluth proof:

Moses Leckey, flagman on the Northern Pacific railroad, living at Seventy-first avenue west, West Duluth, Minn., says: "A friend did me a great kindness when he recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to me. He had used them with marked benefit, and on his recommendation I got a box and began treating a bad case of backache and kidney disorder, which had troubled me severely all last winter. There was acute pain in my back and loins, and the irregularity of the kidney secretions was most annoying. It prevented sleep at night. The first box almost rid me of the trouble, but I continued using them, until I had taken two boxes; then not a trace or a symptom of the trouble remained. I used Doan's Ointment for itching hemorrhoids with equally fine results, and it is needless to say that I am an earnest endorser of both remedies."

LANPHER COATS

MEN'S FUR-LINED

THERE are more fur-lined coats made in St. Paul than in any other city in America—probably more than all else put together. What does that mean? The highest priced fur designers and furriers—the top-notchers in their art—are at St. Paul. A man may be a good custom tailor but he may not be able to build a fur-lined coat that will have the right hang and keep it.

Our coats are designed and made from start to finish in our own 5-story fur factory—the largest in St. Paul—largest in America—they simply must be right in every part.

The shell—as we call the cloth part—is made by our own tailors in our factory. They are made of the finest selected Kerseys, Doeskins and Broadcloths, thoroughly shrunk. The fur lining is made by our most experienced furriers and the trimmings are all the very best. The coats fit properly and hang properly and wear until they become a part of yourself.

Here is a practical coat for the business man. It looks rich, hangs well, is light weight and will wear years.

DIPPED MUSKRAT LINED Kersey Coat with unplucked Otter collar and facings..... $85.00

We make fur-lined coats costing as little as $30 and all the way up to $400 each. Over 100 different varieties in fur, cloth and facings.

We have in stock Men's Fur Coats at $16 up to $600 each. Every one a good coat; every coat appropriate for some uses; well made without a single exception. If it's a LANPHER FUR it is made as well as if we made it for our own use; none are made better.

LANPHER FURS are sold by the leading dealer in every community. Write to us for the book "Judging Furs," and we will also send you the address of our nearest dealer.

LANPHER, SKINNER & CO., St. Paul.

HEATING! ATTENTION!

We mean it for your own good. Don't leave it to the last minute to repair or clean your Furnace or Water Heater or Stove, by doing so you will save yourself worry, and a lot of fuel. Call either 'phone. We have time now to attend to it properly.

RELIANCE OF HEARST

On Labor and Polls Said to Show Liberal Indorsement.

View Has Changed Since 1896 When Bryan Was Overwhelmed.

New York, Oct. 4.—Why will not Hughes's majority over Hearst in this state equal that of McKinley over Bryan here in 1896, when a similar transformation of parties took place? That would mean a Republican lead of a quarter of a million and such wreckage of the Democratic organization and machinery that New York's electoral vote in 1908 would inevitably fall to any man possessed of the Republican label. There would be no more talk of needing Roosevelt "to save the Republican party." But why will this not be another 1896 in New York?

The labor vote accounts for the difference. Then factory operatives were pretty well convinced that Bryan's election threatened business, and joining their employers, they vote en masse to start up the mills rather than the mints. Today, the same men apparently may not be frightened into support of the Republican ticket. They profess to see the largest personal advantage to themselves in Hearst's election as governor, and the whole outlook at this time depends on the extent of the concentration of labor unionists and their natural allies in support of the Hearst ticket. The bolt among conservative Democrats is fully as great as that against Bryan; but those who are fearful of the result, compelled to believe that the Hearst threat is a real one, tell astonishing stories of the labor attitude everywhere. For example, sober-minded Dobbs Ferry recently observed the greatest political outpouring in the history of the town. It proved to be a "Hearst picnic" or an open-air gathering in the interest of the Independence Leagues. Investigation proved that it drew no subsidy from Mr. Hearst; expenses were met by a small admission fee and the sale of beer privileges. The people did the rest. Factories have been polled, in various towns, in which 90 per cent of the employes promptly declared for Hearst. So it is said, conservative New Yorkers may be divided into two classes: those who think Hearst already beaten by from 100,000 to 300,000 majority, and those who, while hoping for that result, fear such an uprising of the unsatisfied elements of the community as will carry Hearst into the governor's chair.

The hold that the Hearst editorials have gained on a certain class of people is hard to exaggerate. All employes of public service corporations think they would get better wages if municipal ownership prevailed, and this is doubtless true. The government pays letter carriers better than an express or a railroad corporation, obeying the laws of demand and supply, pays men who do similar work. The everyday taxpayer makes up the difference, but few Americans, unless they pay a direct tax which they can see, think they are paying any tax at all. Therefore all the street railway employes and electric and gas light men, and similar working classes favor the Hearst program. Their supposed interest is rather easy to understand, and upon this has been built up a mass of utterly fictitious claims in Hearst's favor. When the gas collectors went around last November to collect the month's gas bill they found many people in the lower parts of the city who refused to pay, saying that Mr. Hearst would be elected mayor and then gas would be free. The absurd things that the ignorant people expect Mr. Hearst to accomplish know little limit. Some conservatives say it would be a good thing to have him elected to demonstrate what he could not do.

The Hearst forces are further recruited to some extent from the ranks of the more intelligent classes by reason of his advocacy of certain reforms. Doctors who have led the warfare against tuberculosis in the tenements, it is pointed out incidentally, feel that he has helped them mightily through his papers, and while his motives may have been to increase circulation, they deduct nothing on that account, praising the man for what they think he has done. The young college graduates, bitten with the Socialistic bug, are for Hearst; a certain type of philanthropist takes him seriously. These are merely examples, at random, of sources of support which Bryan lacked in 1896, as differentiating the two campaigns. Persons who estimate these new Hearst allies by the tens of thousands view the campaign with apprehension. All others regard its result as clearly settled now.

Few people realize what a powerful organization the yellow editor has built up. Evening schools in elocution have been maintained all winter to teach promising young men among the mechanics and artisans how to speak, so that a corps of exhorters, much like those whom the Mormons send out into all the world, are now ready to go out over the state, and particularly to arouse the street crowds of New York, for Mr. Hearst's cause. His managers claim that the rural counties were never so well organized against the Republican party as now, and the way Hearst delegates were gathered in from the cross-roads lends some support to this view. Mr. Hearst apparently attends to few things himself, certainly at first-hand. One lieutenant runs his newspaper properties, with a "lesser light" in charge of each one. Another lieutenant has Hearst's legal department in charge; another his campaigns, and so on. He picks out capable men and then trusts them with large responsibilities. And the Hearst crowd, it is generally conceded, is "mighty clever;" as a brain syndicate, devoted to securing results along the line of the great chief's ambition, it makes few mistakes of tactics, considering the scope of its appeal. Its great trouble will come if it ever has to "make good" its promises to the public.

Mr. Hearst himself will stump the state from now till election day, with all the energy at his command. His managers believe this is a good play; they say that he has "greatly improved" as a speaker, and when anyone raises the question as to Hearst's intellectual equipment for a task requiring the alert-mindedness of a Roosevelt or a Jerome, they reply that the questioner does not know Hearst. Thus far, he has never much impressed those who have heard him; his attack on Sullivan on the floor of the national house exhibited no ease of manner or grace of utterance. Sullivan's reply was a literary gem, which put Hearst's speech badly in the shade. But Hearst never took his Washington work seriously; there was no way of farming it out to a subordinate, and in consequence the house has had no more indifferent or uninterested member.

It must be very hard for Hearst's literary workers to think of causes and issues at a time when he is running against Hughes—a man whom they have enthusiastically praised—and with Murphy, a man whom they have declared ought to be in jail. Reversing this engine on both grades requires exceptional skill. Thus far in the campaign they are devoting most of their energies to the "labor record" of the Roosevelt administration, notably the open shop in the government printing office, when Hearst thinks it ought to be closed, and the employment of Chinese at Panama, when Hearst evidently thinks American white men should be induced to go down there to take the places at wages which would doubtless make the canal cost $400,000,000.

This type of attack usually runs out in a short time. People get sick of it. Even the most insane advocates of wastefulness and extravagence have occasional lucid intervals. The joke of it all is to call Hearst a Democrat. The old distinction between the parties came in the amount of government which they respectively wanted. The Republican theory is essentially paternalistic, but Hearst's theory twentyfold more so. Senator Aldrich, as a Republican leader, secured the passage of a provision overriding Taft's plan to buy supplies for the canal in the cheapest markets, or to get "outside prices" on American-made articles. An old-line Democrat would have resisted this as paternalistic and inconsiderate of the taxpayer. Hearst wants to go a great deal further, and have at the expense of the same taxpaying public American inside rates of wages for the multitudes who must dig in ditches, a vastly more serious proposal. Hearst is not an anti-imperialist.

He has advocated the extension of West Point and Annapolis into great national universities for the free education of almost everybody. In short, his theory is to find out what the populace want and then feed it out to them in unlimited quantities, or at least the promise of it. If he should ever become President territorial expansion would go on with a rush, because his syndicate of students of popular impulses would see how much there was in it in patronage and control and in the distribution of favors. Who would pay for all these Hearst ideas of city, state and nation? Nobody every answers that question. Few take the trouble to ask it. He will recommend you better paid than now, and them he wants a great many more of them.

Many people here argue that Hearst would have been better off without the Buffalo nomination and its humiliating compromises. A regular Democratic nomination would have sluiced off thousands of old-line Democratic voters who will now go direct to Hughes. Defense of Murphy would have been unnecessary. The Independence league could then have paraded itself as "anti-boss." It would have attracted more Republican supporters than can now be expected.

But the regular nomination has its uses.

Five hundred country newspapers are compelled by county advertising and the mandate of tradition to support Democratic candidates, and Hearst's nomination at Buffalo gives him a place at their masthead for whatever this is worth. The battle lines are evenly drawn, and the contest is on.

Jury Sustains Probate Judge in Gasper Estate Case.

Judge Dibell's jury, in the district court yesterday, sustained the order of Judge Middlecoff of the probate court in allowing the final account of Charles Peterson, special administrator of the estate of Charles Gasper, general merchant of Fond du Lac, who died last January, leaving several thousand dollars' worth of property to Peter Maus and other heirs in Germany. The appeal from the order of the probate court was taken by W. G. Joerns in behalf of the German heirs, who thought the account was exorbitant.

Evidence was introduced during the trial, which lasted two days, to show for the appellant that the special administrator and his counsel did not earn their fees, while the defendants introduced testimony to show that they did not overcharge the Gasper estate. The trial was conducted by W. G. Joerns and J. H. Brigham, while Peterson was represented by H. J. McLearn.

NOTICE OF SALES

Of Delinquent Property Sent Out by the State Auditor.

St. Paul, Oct. 4.—Notices of the annual sale of real property forfeited to the state for non-payment of taxes were sent out by the state auditor, S. G. Iverson, yesterday. The sales this year will be held under the provisions of the new code. Sales will be held at each county seat, beginning at 10 a. m. on Nov. 12.

This year only one sale will be held in each county. Last year two sales were held, one under the old and one under the new law. The new law provides that there shall be nothing except public sales by the state auditor, who may delegate the county auditor to hold the sale for him. Last year the sales held throughout the state aggregated $250,000, of which about 10 per cent went to the state. The sale in Hennepin brought $25,000, in Ramsey $22,000, and in St. Louis $8,000.

POLICE HAD BUSY MONTH

Department Broke All Records for Arrests in September.

But Few Serious Offenses Were Reported During That Time.

September was the busiest month for the Duluth police for many years.

During that period the police made 425 arrests, responded to 348 alarms, found nineteen lost children, reported nine dead animals to the health department, ordered fifteen suspicious persons out of the city, stopped one runaway horse, killed six mad or crippled animals, and performed a large number of other minor acts falling within the line of their duty.

As a result of the arrests made by the department a total of $1,775.26 was paid over to the city in municipal court fines, and $677 in bail was forfeited by the non-appearance of persons released under bond. Besides the amount of money paid over there was $308 in fines, for which payment was suspended under order of the court. The report also shows that the total number of days' work done on the street by prisoners sent to the county jail were 1,547.

The arrests were made on the following charges: Abusive language, 1; allowing females in saloons, 3; assault in the second degree, 1; assault in the third degree, 10; bigamy, 1; carrying concealed weapons, 2; begging on the streets, 6; contempt of court, 1; disorderly conduct, 64; drunks, 335; drunk and disorderly, 15; forgery, 4; fighting on the streets, 2; fugitives from justice, 5; indecent exposure, 4; insane, 2; keeping disorderly houses, 16; grand larceny, 3; petit larceny, 10; non-support of family, 1; runaways from home, 5; selling liquor on Sunday, 1; selling liquor after hours, 1; no complaint, 2; on suspicion, 7; trespass, 3; vagrancy, 16; violating the hitching ordinance, 3; violating parole, 1; total, 425.

Disposition was made of the cases as follows: Bound over to the grand jury, 4; bound over to keep the peace, 1; committed to the probate court, 2; committed to the county jail, 125; dismissed, 2; discharged, 7; turned over to the juvenile court, 8; paid fines in court, 124; remanded to authorities abroad, 5; sent out of the city, 2; released, 12; sentence suspended on condition of leaving the city, 12; sent to the hospital, 1; sentence suspended, 53; turned over to parents, 5; continued, 4.

For the nine months ending Sept. 30 the Duluth police department had made 700 more arrests than it made during the whole of the year 1905. This increase in the work of the department is pretty well distributed over the whole nine months, and is a good indication of the increased duties that fall on the police as the city grows in population.

CONSOLIDATION

Of Two Branches of the W. C. T. U. in Iowa Effected.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 4.—By mutual agreement of separate conventions held in this city yesterday, two branches of the W. C. T. U., one known as the W. C. T. U. of Iowa and the other as the W. C. T. U. of the state of Iowa, were consolidated into one body. They were divided sixteen years ago by a dispute over the question of affiliation or non-affiliation with the Prohibition party. An article of the constitution, in which union is reached, provides that the organization shall in the future give its endorsement only to men and measures, and not to parties. The convention in its pledge of total abstainence cites beer as an intoxicating beverage. Resolutions commending the conviction of child murderers was enthusiastically endorsed.

Piles Cured Quickly at Home

Without Pain, Cutting or Surgery. Instant Relief.

We Prove It. Sample Package Free.

Seven people out of ten are said to have Piles. Not one man in a million need have them and we are proving it every day at our own expense. We send a sample package of the wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure to any person absolutely free.

We don't do this as a matter of ausement or philanthropy, but because it is to our interest to do so. We know that the sufferer from piles, tormented and driven almost crazy by this wretched trouble, will find such immediate relief that he will go at once to his druggist and buy a box and get well.

We know that we have got the greatest remedy in the world for piles, and we are ready and willing to stand or fall by the verdict of those who make the trial. We have been doing this for some years now and we never yet have had occasion to regret it.

And the remedy at the drug store is exactly the same as the sample we send out. As, for instance, here is a man who got such immediate relief from the sample that he at once bought a box. Was it just the same? Undoubtedly, since it cured him after all sorts and kinds of things had failed.

Here is a sample of the kind of letters we get every day and we don't have to ask for them:

Received your sample of Pile Cure and have given it a fair trial and it has proven the best I ever tried and effected a complete cure. I can recommend you highly in this vicinity. Have used your sample and one box and it has been a complete cure. It has been worth $100 to me.

Thanking you for the sample and the cure, I will recommend you to everybody. Yours Respectfully, Julius Mayer, Dealer in Feathers, Ginseng and Hides, Bedford, Ind."

Pyramid Pile Cure is for sale at every druggist's at 50 cents a box or, if you would like to try a sample first, you will receive one by return mail by sending your name and address to The Pyramid Drug Company, 59 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

A WEDDING FOLLOWED

Meeting of Lovers Who Had Mourned Each Other as Dead.

Were Separated by the San Francisco Earthquake and Fire.

North Platte, Neb., Oct. 4.—After having mourned each other as dead for nearly five months, each believing that the other had been killed in the San Francisco earthquake of last May, James Turner and Miss Mabel Porter, his sweetheart, met face to face on a train near here a few days ago. They were married soon afterward.

They were living and working in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake, and had been lover and sweetheart for several years. The marriage had been set for a day in June. The evening before the earthquake the couple had spent at a theater, and when about midnight he kissed her good-by not a cloud appeared upon the horizon of their lives.

Turner's lodgings were in a frame building in the business district of the city, while Miss Porter lived at the home of a friend and schoolmate, three miles away. Turner was awakened from a sound sleep soon after he retired by an earthquake shock, and gripped by the fear of he knew not what, and with the confused sense that the world was coming to an end, he sprang from his bed and went to a window to look out. The building from which he looked out was trembling violently, and a big seven-story building of brick and steel, directly across the street, was writhing and twisting. Dressing hastily, the young man went down stairs and out into the street, where he found excited men, women and children, many of them in their night clothes.

The young man's thoughts turned to the sweetheart from whom he had parted only a few hours before. Hundreds of people had been caught and crushed to death in their homes. Could she be among those who had met this cruel fate? His heart well-nigh stopped beating at the thought.

Fires were breaking out in many parts of the business district of the city when he set out afoot for Miss Porter's home. Crowds of women and children filled the streets, and the fire companies were fighting desperately to extinguish the flames.

It was after noon when he reached his destination, and the cottage in which the woman he loved had lived lay in a heap of ruins, while its occupants, as he firmly believed, lay buried in the wreck. Crazed with grief, he at once began to dig into the heap of ruins in an effort to recover the body of his sweetheart. He labored desperately and unceasingly for several hours without making any appreciable progress. The neighborhood was well-nigh deserted. A boy came along and told him that all of the occupants of the wrecked house had been killed by the earthquake, and that their dead bodies had been removed from the ruins and taken to the morgue.

Making his way in a half-dazed mental condition back to the ruins of the building in which had been his lodgings, Turner was pressed into service as a fireman and for days fought the flames that were destroying the best part of the city. The flames destroyed the ruins of the house in which Miss Porter lived.

When the fire was finally brought under control Turned decided to leave the scene of his suffering and grief. He went to Oakland, intending to take a train for the East, but on the day he was to leave there he was stricken of a fever and taken to a temporary hospital, where for weeks he hovered between life and death. When he was strong enough to leave the hospital he was penniless and the railroad companies had long since ceased to transport earthquake sufferers without payment of fares.

The mercantile firm by which he had been employed before the earthquake and fire had suffered a total loss of its business and had nothing to offer him. He obtained work as a hod carrier at last and worked all summer. A few weeks ago, with his summer's earnings in his pocket, he left San Francisco and went to Dakota to visit an uncle on his ranch. He had made up his mind when he left San Francisco never to return to the city, but a few days ago, tired of the country and longing for the life he had been accustomed to, he started to return.

On the train which was carrying him to San Francisco he met the sweetheart who for five months he had mourned as dead. The family with whom she had made her home were all killed in the earthquake, but she had escaped. For days she had searched the city for her lover, but she was told that he had lost his life, as had so many others in the building in which he had lodged. Her heart was well-nigh broken with grief and she went to Oakland and took a refuge train for the East.

She, too, had made up her mind when she left San Francisco that she would never return, but like Turner, she had changed her mind and was on her way there when she met him.

They continued their journey together to San Francisco with the understanding that they were to be married immediately on their arrival there.

Miss Porter's parents at one time lived on a ranch in the northwestern part of Nebraska, where they died a number of years ago. Soon after their death the daughter, an only child, went West, where she has since made her home. Turner's parents also are dead and he has lived in the West for many years. Neither of them, however, has lived long in San Francisco.

Quinsy, Sprains and Swellings Cured.

"In November, 1901, I caught cold and had the quinsy. My throat was swollen so I could hardly breathe. I applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me relief in a short time. In two days I was all right," says Mrs. L. Cousins, Otterburn, Mich. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is a liniment and is specially valuable for sprains and swellings. For sale by all druggists.

CAPTURE OF THE CZAR PLANNED

By the Russian Liberty League, But Not to Kill Him.

New York, Oct. 4.—Ivan Ivanovitch Noroday—as he now calls himself is here to preach the propoganda of revolution and to obtain 1,000,000 signatures to a petition to the czar, praying for justice, amnesty and liberty.

Noroday, six weeks ago was dodging bullets behind barricades in Kronstadt and blowing up railroad bridges with dynamite. Today he is chief executive commissioner of the Russian Liberty organization.

Twenty years ago Noroday consecrated his life to the assassination of the czar, and devoted ten years to efforts at carrying out his project.

Noroday now sees that Russia cannot be freed by disorganized and ill-armed bands of rioters, made up of students and laborers. He now believes that it will be necessary first to educate the peasantry, and then equip a complete military organization.

"I no longer applaud the Terrorists," he said. "We are arrayed against the Terrorist equally as against the military despot. The new revolution is being organized upon an entirely new basis. It is headed by Father Petroff, representing the spiritual power, and by the executive, representing the temporal.

"Father Petroff purposes that the person of the czar shall be sacred. We intend to raise an army which will capture him. Then we will conduct him and his royal family across the border and liberate them.

"We are now organizing a complete army schedule. Our officers reside outside of Russia. We shall secretly drill our men and make them familiar with military tactics. When the hour comes the czar's soldiers will come over to us in thousands. We rely on that. It was so in the Kronstadt insurrection.

"Until Christmas time, I shall work here to get my 1,000,000 names to the petition which America will send to the czar. Then I shall go back and work for the revolution."

At the Sign of the Star

Something over three centuries ago in Munich, Germany, there stood a little dingy tavern, with a bush or broom over the door, the sign of the only place in Germany where the Royal Brew of Munich could be had. Men of high and low degree, of all ages and all nations, have stood in line waiting their turn to taste that famous brew.

The Royal Brew of the 20th Century is marked by the sign of the star—the official trademark of

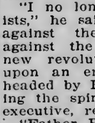

FITGER'S BEER

IN THE WORLD OF SPORTS

LOOKS BAD FOR HOCKEY

Professional Teams in Canada Will Draft Best Players.

The Game Will Undoubtedly Deteriorate in Copper Country.

Houghton, Oct. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—It would seem that the magnates and team leaders of the international, which will probably be known in the future as the American Hockey league, have great reason to fear the introduction of professional hockey into the Dominion of Canada. From the present outlook a professional league will be organized in Eastern Canada in the very near future. This league will be composed of teams from Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Quebec and one or two other of the big cities of Canada, and will take many of the players of the old teams of the International league.

The Canadian Amateur Athletic union stands in the way of such a league being formed and, consequently, is not to be recognized by the other associations of the Dominion. The Canadian Amatuer Hockey league, the Federal league, the Lacrosse league, and several such other organizations are putting the ban on the C. A. A. U., and have announced that their players can play with professionals. This can have but one meaning, and that is that in the very near future all sports will be professionalized in Canada as well as in the United States.

All of the hockey players, and it must be admitted that all of the good ones are Canadians, would sooner stay on their own side of the border to play the great game than come to the American side, especially if by doing so they could receive as good or better salaries than they could on the American side. This is exactly how things stand now, and for this reason the American managers will find it hard to fill out their teams with good players from now on. What would the International league be with all teams made up of cast-offs? The game would certainly deteriorate on this side of the border.

Already a large number of the American players have gone to the new professional teams on the Canadian side. The latest advices say that McMillan, Laviolette and Pitre of the American Soo team go to the Montreal Nationals, a professional team of the league being formed in the East, to play during the coming season. The Nationals are after Nicholson, but Nicholson, who played with Calumet several years, is going to the professionalized Wanderers, also of Montreal. Last year the Wanderers were the champions of Canada and the Stanley cup winners. This year, with the line-up they are getting into shape now, they and the Nationals will be the two strongest hockey organizations in the world.

Minard, the Wanderers' old goal keeper who was chosen last year for the all-star team of the world, will go to the Nationals in the event of Nicholson going to the Wanderers. Lorne Campbell, Pittsburg's star center for the past couple of seasons, is in Montreal and will probably stay there. He and Bruce Stuart, the Portage Lake whirlwind center, were chosen for the all-star team last year, some picking one and some the other. It is probable that he will go to the Nationals. Strike and Gardner will also probably stay in Montreal. Harold Armstrong of the Smith's Falls, champion of the Federal Canadian league last year, goes to a professional Ottawa team.

Harry Smith, the Ottawa cup holders' crack left wing man, goes to Portage la Prairie, as he refuses to play the professional game. Billy Keene of the Winnipeg Vics goes to the old Rat Portage team at Kenora, and will probably go East with that team when it goes after the Wanderers for the Stanley cup. Billy Baird, who has been spoken of as a manager for the Canadian Soo team in the International league, is in Ottawa at the present time, and the latest advices from that place say that he will stay there, playing on one of the new professional organizations.

"Chaucer" Elliott, an all-round athlete who acted as one of the official referees in the International league last season, is slated to referee in the new Canadian professional league. The other referees have not been named yet. Fears are entertained at Houghton that Riley Hern, the old Portage Lake goal man, will play with one of the Canadian teams this season, instead of coming back to the Copper country and that "Grindy" Forrester, who covered the point position last year at Houghton, and who is now laid up with a smashed knee received in a football game recently, will stay in Canada after he gets able to get into the game again. In fact the situation looks rather bad for all of the American teams at the present time.

It is probable that at the close of the coming hockey season a series of post season championship games will be played between the American and Canadian champion teams.

CHICAGO WINS BOTH PENNANTS

Great Race for American League Comes to an End.

The great race in the American league is now over, and both pennants will float over the Windy City.

Thanks to the showing made by the Detroit team against New York and Cleveland, both of these competitors were put out of the race, and the White Sox have the Tigers to thank for the pennant. As the real thing in champion busters, the Tigers seem to take the candy.

The White Sox have only four games left to be played, and even if they lose all four they cannot be overtaken.

The interest now centers in the race for second place, between Cleveland and New York, which is becoming very warm.

Great preparations are being made for the post season series between the two Chicago teams, and the capacity of the stands is being added to in expectation of the largest crowds over turned out in the Windy City.

SILIKO WINNER OF THE FUTURITY

At Lexington After His Driver Was Seriously Injured.

Lexington, Ky., Oct 4.—Silliko, the bay son of Moko and Silicon, won the $14,000 Kentucky Futurity yesterday afternoon at the Kentucky Horse Breeders' association track. In winning the blue ribbon event of the season for 3-year-winner of the Clark Horse Review Futurity, the Abbe, winner of the Kentucky ty, the Abbe, winner of the Kentucky Stock Farm purse, and Ed Custer. The race was marred by an accident that resulted in serious injury to W. H. (Knapsack) McCarthy, who drove Silliko. In the third heat Ben White, who drove the Abbe, made an attempt to get the rail near the quarter pole and the Abbe stepped into Silliko's wheel. Silliko tripped throwing McCarthy on the track beneath the hoofs of Abbe and in front of nine other horses. McCarthy rose, apparently uninjured, and staggered back to the stand to claim a foul against Abbe. It was discovered that the Abbe had stepped on his head, inflicting a painful and serious injury. The Abbe was distanced for fouling Silliko and the heat went to Lightsome in a driving finish with Ed Custer.

The judges allowed Silliko to start in the next heat which he won, with Myron McHenry in the sulky, from Ed Custer by a neck and was awarded the race. He is owned by J. E. Madden, the winer of the three Futurities, two Sheep-shead Futurities with Ballyhoo Bey and Yankee, and the trotting Futurity yesterday afternoon with Silliko.

The Tenesee stake for the 2:06 pacers was won by Ecstatic in two straight heats. The mare was a favorite at all times.

The 2:08 pace went to Lady May without a struggle.

GIRDIRON GAMES.

No Scores Made on Harvard, Princeton or Pennsylvania.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 4.—In a well played game of football, Harvard defeated Bowdoin on Soldiers' field, yesterday afternoon, 10 to 0. The first score was on a goal from the field by Burr, from a place kick on the 37-yard line. The second was made down the field to a touchdown, Apollonio carrying the ball over, and Burr kicking the goal.

WALTER CAMP ON NEW RULES

He Explains Some Disputed Points in Revised Game.

New York, Oct. 4.—Walter Camp's paper on the football rules, making suggestions for their interpretation was issued last night. Following are extracts:

"The referee is absolute in all points not covered by the umpires; but the umpires are absolute regarding fouls, and the referee must allow precedence to their decision in case of a foul.

"The referee has the power to shorten the time of halves arbitrarily in case the game is not started early enough so that two full halves may be played before darkness. In any other case the time of the game can only be shortened by mutal consent of the captains.

"Any man who desires to make a fair catch must raise his hands clearly above his head to signify that intention.

"Officials should not that tripping is specifically forbidden and defined as obstructing a player below the knees with a similar portion of the tripper's anatomy. It is permissible for an end to drive in, in breaking up the interference, but he must not trip the opposing player now may he tackle below the knees. The only men who may tackle below the knees are the line men from tackle to tackle in the scrimmage. These same men namely, those from tackle to tackle in the scrimmage on the offence, can not be dropped back unless the man dropped back goes at least five yards back and another takes his place in the line.

"The rules committee has been asked to make a further interpretation of the rule regarding a line man dropping back.

"The linesman has a particular duty in seeing that the ends are on side when the ball is put in play and that they are not tripped when going down the feild under a kick. And finally, he should watch especially to see that the man who has kicked the ball behind the line of scrimmage is not bumped into or roughed by the opponents after he has made his kick."

FASTEST HARNESS MARE

In Minnesota Has Been Purchased by a Bemidji Horseman.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—To a Bemidji horseman is now given the distinction of owning what is pronounced by experts to be the fastest harness horse in the state of Minnesota, "Isinetta," formerly the property of S. J. Phillips, of Litchfield.

J. W. Irwin, president of the Beltrami County Agricultural sicitey, and an enthusiastic horseman, made overtures to Phillips for the purchase of the mare, but met with little success until this week, when he was successful in purchasing her, and in doing so, trades Dan F, and a considerable cash balance.

Isinetta has covered the last quarter of a fast mile on the track at Hamline in 28¾ seconds, which is almost equal to the best Dan Patch ever did. She has never been entered in a race, and as she is credited with being able to pace a mile in very close to two minutes, there is a brilliant future for her if put on the track.

Mr. Irwin states that he will not start Isinetta in any races this season, but will probably make the circuit of the larger cities next year.

BRUNO AGAIN IN CUSTODY

Seven-Year-Old Bandit Captured After Few Hours' Freedom.

Tired and hungry, Bruno Korpi, the youthful bandit from Hibbing, who escaped from the home of Mrs. D. S. Forgy, the assistant humane officer, yesterday noon, walked into the West Duluth plant of the Carpenter-Glass Lumber company to rest and to get something to eat. He reached the office about 6 o'clock and was taken in charge shortly afterward by Patrolman Johnson, Chief Troyer having notified all the officers to be on the look-out for the boy.

The men at the lumber company's office fed Bruno and were about to make arrangements to send him back to Hibbing when the officer arrived.

Bruno seemed to be quite pleased over the idea of being a fugitive from justice and attempted to coax the patrolman into buying him some candy, stating that chocolates were his preference. He inspected the West Duluth station and decided that he would like to be locked up in the office as it has a window through which he could easily reach the street.

Last evening the boy was brought to the central station and turned over to Humane Officer Withrow.

Bruno, who is only 7 years old, will be taken before the juvenile court Saturday. He claims that it is love for horses and desire to ride that causes him to take a rig whenever he gets the opportunity. While attempting to harness up a horse at Hibbing, recently, he was severely kicked in the arm, the marks of the blow being still visible. This, however, did not daunt him, for Bruno says he hitched the horse up and had his ride in spite of the injury. Where horses are concerned he is said to show absolute fearlessness.

BOTH FOOD AND MEDICINE.

We like best to call Scott's Emulsion a food-medicine. It is a term that aptly describes the character and action of our Emulsion. More than a medicine—more than a food, yet combining the vital principles of both. It is for this reason that Scott's Emulsion has a distinct and special value in all wasting diseases. There is nothing better to remedy the troubles of imperfect growth and delicate health in children. The action of Scott's Emulsion is just as effective in treating weakness and wasting in adults.

MAY SECURE A FORTUNE

Millions for J. M. Longyear in Deal With Steel Company.

Eccentric Michigander May Get Big Sum for Holdings.

Part of the deal involving the taking over the iron ore lands of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railways by the United States Steel corporation which has not hither to come to light is brought out by the announcement that J. M. Longyear, formerly of Marquette, Mich., and a man unknown to Wall street, would be made $24,000,000 richer by such a transaction.

According to the latest authenic reports, the directors of the United States Steel corporation are now deliberating upon the matter of accepting Mr. Longyear's proposition and the general opinion seems to be that the lands will be taken over.

Longyear is the possessor of about 30,000,000 tons of ore and made arrangements to offer it to the steel trust with James J. Hill's immense holdings. The deal was made through the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. The steel trust seemed willing to lease the Longyear lands, assuring him a fortune of something like $24,000,000, and only the official sanction of the board of directors of the United States Steel corporation remains to be had.

Longyear made a fortune in Lake Superior ore lands long before the present deal. Several times he has had opportunities to dispose of his immense holdings at good prices but he preferred to bide his time. He could afford to wait as he was already rich.

Yet when he felt that he was taxed too highly in Marquette, he ordered his handsome stone mansion dismantled and had it set up again, every stone in the right place, at Brookline, Mass.

Wall street is much interested in Longyear, of whom it had never heard before.

The following table shows the relative positions of the various companies owning or controlling ore lands:

Company.	Tons.
United States Steel corporation	1,250,000,000
Great Northern and Northern Pacific	500,000,000
Cambria Steel Co.	52,000,000
Shenango, W. P. Snyder's holdings	22,000,000
J. M. Longyear, personal holdings	30,000,000
Corrigan, McKinney & Co.	25,000,000
Cleveland Cliffs (Marquette range)	35,000,000
Jones & Laughlin	21,000,000
Pickands, Mather & Co.	20,000,000
International Harvester Co.	11,000,000
Lackawanna Steel Co.	8,500,000
Rogers, Brown & Co.	10,000,000
Republic Iron and Steel	8,000,000
La Belle Iron and Steel	7,000,000
Cherry Valley Co.	6,000,000

BEVERIDGE IN FAVOR OF TARIFF REVISION.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 4.—United States Senator Beveridge opened the Republican campaign in Des Moines last night before a large audience. Senator Beveridge entered into a general defense of Republican administrations and congresses but he also discussed the Cuban situation. Regarding tariff revision Mr. Beveridge declared that there must be some changes in schedules but not a general revision. "Some schedules should be revised," he said, "and those should be done in the high tide of our prosperity when business can easily adjust itself to the change."

FARM LANDS

NEAR DULUTH.

Now is the time to buy. We are selling good lands around Duluth that will grow the best crops in the state, and with Duluth, Superior and the Iron Ranges for a market for all farm produce, at $5 to $10 per acre, on easy terms. Your money in these lands is as safe as it would be in government bonds, and it will secure you a better profit than any other investment you can make.

We have some lands on which the timber is worth all that is asked for the land. Also have lands on rivers and lakes, suitable for summer camps or homes at $2 to $5 per acre. Lands in St. Louis county, on which timber is reserved, at $2 per acre, no taxes.

BIG INCOME OF SULTAN

Drawn From His Exploitation Company Operating in Mesopotamia.

Peasants Are "Frozen Out," But Otherwise Are Treated Fairly.

Constantinople, Oct. 4.—Mismanagement has become so proverbial in the Ottoman empire that the very word "Turkinsh" connotes a muddle, so that in the rare instances in which they succeed the Turks receive but scanty credit. The world either ignores the anomaly, or with an incredulous smile watches humorously, waiting for the usual collapse. Yet at the present moment the unexpected, and indeed the hitherto unknown, has occurred. The Turks have created for the development of Mesopotamia a society or company bearing the name, and modelled upon the lines, of the Daira-es-Sanieh of Egyptian fame. The plan upon which Yildiz, rather than the Sublime Porte—that is, the sultan rather than the council of ministers—is now framing its action in Mesopotamia is almost identically the same as its prototype which converted one-fifth of the land Egypt into the personal property of Ismail. In both countries the conditions are very similar, but in Mesopotamia the facilities for this land-grabbing are even greater.

The Khedive Ismail conceived the idea of annexing his subjects' land by tampering with the system of irrigation. In both countries irrigation is the life-blood of the population, and in El Gezira, the Mesopotamian delta, where the rain of heaven falls so rarely, he who controls the water controls the very soul of the people. The present system of canalization in Mesopotamia is having the same result as it once effected in Egypt, and is gradually throwing the agricultural and territorial power into the hands of two classes, the great Pachas and the sultan's Daira-es-Sanieh. To enable this process to be understood, some explanation is necessary. Let it be supposed that a canal passes through the land of A and again of B, before it reaches that of C, and it follows that, unless A and B keep their portion in proper order and open, C must be the victim of a water famine. So important is it that these channels should not be silted up, that every man is bound not only to labor on his own water property, but also to assist in keeping that of his neighbor in good repair. When, however, these neighbors are either the sultan's Daira or one of the larger land holders, he has no legal or other resource to compel them to carry out their part of the contract. Thus the modus procendi becomes simple in the extreme. In this arid rainless land the fertility of the peasant's soil depends entirely upon the water supply which it receives from the river, and he has consequently to make the best terms he can with the man who can at will cut him off from all irrigation. He sells his land for a song, and trusts to the clemency of the Daira to reinstate him, if only as a serf, at any rate in a position that will enable him to gain his livelihood again.

The cardinal iniquity of the system once condoned, there is little fault to be found with the general policy of the Daira. It does not grind the soul of the people, and, however incredible it may appear, treats them, if not generously, still with a modicum of fairness. The peasant remains upon the land which was once his and cultivates it upon fairly easy terms. The sultan's Daira is the one Turkish company, consisting of Turks, which ardently and increasingly pays the empire, or rather the private pocket of the sultan. Its methods of administration, far from being characterized by exorbitant usury, are inclined to be enlightened and even sympathetic. The towns of its own creation, as is practically the case with Amarah, are infinitely the best built and most attractive in the country, whilst it has established progressive schools in Basra, Bagdad, Amarah and various other places. The Daira seems imbued with the wisdom of the Turkish proverb, which runs, "He who strives for much accomplishes little"—in other and more vulgar language, it only bites off as much as it can chew. Tracts of land which were formerly dumb, unresponsive wastes, tyrannized by the sand and the sun, now produce the richest harvests, and the company has so much on its hands that for the moment it can hardly do more than develop the territory now in its possession.

The sultan's Daira-es-Sanieh different, anomalous, and news as it is to Turkish traditions, shows its wisdom in the fact that, as the company increases and expands, other territories in due rotation fall to it by a method simple as it is effective. The bigger officials are enriching themselves at the expense of the fellaheen by the same means as those employed by the Daira-es-Sanieh, but in the end, when they one by one fall under the displeasure of the palace and suffer the penalty of confiscation for the benefit of the sultan. Thus the Daira not only does its own work well and inexorably, but is able to turn to its advantage outside and unallied forces. Its growth has not affected its organization, which is excellent. The officials of the sultan's Daira are carefully picked men, and in some cases have even studied in Europe. It has no absolute jurisdiction on its own lands, and the power to override ordinary law, besides being untaxed and conferring on its employes a more than Roman freedom, since none of its administrators has ever been called to account.

Amongst other privileges, Abdul Hamid's company has the advantage of great superiority of position. It can sell at a handsome profit to the merchants on the spot, and can pass its produce duty free. When, as in recent times has constantly occurred, a famine has taken place in Persia, it has been cheaper to transport corn from India, which was only subject to a 1 per cent transit duty, than to export it from Turkish Mesopotamia across the Persian frontier under the intolerable burden of a 12 per cent tariff (which has, however, I believe, been reduced since then to 8 per cent). Even under present conditions it is difficult to exaggerate the preferential alvantages which the more favored wheat of the Diara enjoys. A system of emphatic protection aids and abets an almost defiant monopoly. But, important as are the local consequences for the future of Mesopotamia, controlled by a truly autocratic trust, the political importance of the Daira is infinitely more far-reaching. The otherwise inexplicable callousness of the sultan where the increasing financial distress of his empire is concerned is sufficiently explained by the existence of such resources as this Daira-es-Sanieh affords him. As long as his own private pocket is munificently filled, he can, as he does, afford to treat with apathy the increasing poverty of Turkey as a whole. Though the theory may appear far-sighted, it is not only reconcilable with facts, but is essential to the explanation of the Turkish ledger.

The sultan has his own vast sources of income, and, when he is obliged to go through the ordeal of fire, by proxy, in the Yemen or in Macedonia, he can depend upon his soldiers' fighting for the Khalif and religion, with or without pay, as in the Middle Ages the papacy knew that the average crusader, with or without pay, would die for the cross and the pope. Statistics in Europe have been described as one degree worse than a lie; official statistics are several degrees worse. So, without going into details, it is sufficient to say that the sultan obtains a most generous income from his private resources in Mesopotamia. Personally he is lavishly generous, and the present misery and penury of his dominions is due to neither heartlessness nor stupidity, but rather to a royal contempt for sordid details and for the niggling mathematics of philanthropy.

Seen in the light of Abdul Hamid's affection for his Daira, much that is dark becomes light, and the exceptional hostility evinced to Great Britain in Mesopotamia is explained. Every trick which obstruction could suggest has been employed to hamper our trade. In a host of minor ways the sultan's Daira has shown itself supremely clever. Up and down the river the Mullahs receive baksheesh and instructions to preach a boycott of all but Moslem boats, and the heretic Sunni boats of the Turks are preferred to the infidel Lynch vessels. In its choice of servants the company has shown the most acute discrimination, and it is served as no institution has ever been in Turkey. With the exception of the old Lynch concession (and the Ottoman boats are already making a hot competition against Messrs. Lynch) it breaks no rival. Even the most rudimentary instruction in agriculture under a benevolent government might work wonders in that land of sun and generous soil, but the Daira keeps its citizens who had grown to look with affection on Mr. Burgess as the "youngest old man" that they knew.

The funeral will be held at the home of William Burgess, 2019 East Second street, Friday afternoon, Rev M. S. Rice of the First Methodist church officiating.

It has not yet been decided whether the interment will take place in Duluth or at Palo, Mich., the decedent's former home.

AGED CITIZEN PASSES AWAY

George Burgess Dies After Operation Performed Week Ago.

Unable because of his advanced age to recuperate from the shock of an operation for an internal malady, George Burgess, aged 86 years, father of William and George V. Burgess, died at St. Luke's hospital yesterday afternoon.

Up to the time of his last illness Mr. Burgess was a remarkably well preserved man for his age, active and vigorous in his movements as many men a score of years younger.

For a great many years he was engaged in the wagon and carriage business at Palo, Mich., coming to Duluth about nine years ago to make his home with his sons during the declining years of his life. During his residence here Mr. Burgess took a lively interest in the business of his sons who comprise the Burgess Electrical company, and every day was at the plant, one of the busiest men there.

He was a man of great sociable nature and had probably, the widest acquaintance of a man of his years in Duluth. Everywhere are heard expressions of regret over his demise by citizens who had grown to look with affection on Mr. Burgess as the "youngest old man" that they knew.

ASSISTANT POSTMASTERS

Need Not Record Time of Arrival and Departure.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Acting Postmaster General Hitchcock has ordered the exemption of over 1,700 assistant postmasters in first and second-class postoffices from the requirement of recording the time of their arrival at and departure from their offices. Mr. Hitchcock said yesterday that the department recognizes assistant postmasters as executive managers of postoffices.

Rheumatism Cured in 24 Hours.

T. J. Blackmore, of Haller & Blackmore, Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "A short time since I procured a bottle of Mystic Cure. It got me out of the house in 24 hours. I took to my bed with Rheumatism nine months ago and the Mystic Cure is the only medicine that did me any good. I had five of the best physicians in the city, but I received very little relief from them. I know the Mystic Cure to be what it is represented and take pleasure in recommending it to other poor sufferers." Sold by all druggists.

MEAT INSPECTION

Regulations Are Amended by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Washington, Oct. 4.—The secretary of the agricultural department has further amended the meat inspection regulations with regard to the exportation of meats, his action being influenced by a decision reached at a conference between Deputy Collector of Customs Barrett of New York, Solicitor McCabe of the department of agriculture and Commissioner of Navigation Chamberlain. The amendment is designed to do away with the necessity for the certificate of inspection being at the port in the hands of the master of the vessel at the time the meat is put on board.

A further amendment allows the interstate shipment of meats, which, prior to Oct. 1, 1906, have been externally treated with small quantities of preservatives, the regulation being intended to extend the same latitude to meats as was given in the pure food law to codfish.

STRENGTH OF IRON TRADE

Manufacturers Confident Prosperity Will Rule for Many Months.

Cleveland, Oct. 4.—The Iron Trade Review says: The market throughout shows greater strength, and there is more positive evidence of the confidence of manufacturers that prosperity will continue for many months. The newly announced policy of the United States Steel corporation to discontinue making long term contracts for billets and to abrogate present contracts as soon as possible, indicates a belief that it will need in its own mills all of the crude steel that it can produce.

Although in New York, Cleveland and other centers, sales of pig iron were more numerous than during the preceding week, not may large sales have been made. The scarcity of all grades for this year's delivery has been emphasized, and it is significant that some of the largest millers have been compelled to come into the market and pay high prices for spot iron.

The United States Steel corporation plans building three or four new blast furnaces in the Pittsburg district. The place is not decided upon, but Duquesne and Donora are favorably considered. The corporation also expects to build from twenty-four to thirty additional open hearth furnaces in the Pittsburg and Cleveland districts, for which plans are not complete. At Gary it is pushing work on four blast furnaces and twenty-eight open hearth furnaces, also on building the town.

Great activity continues in the mills. Actual specifications of the Illinois Steel company aggregated 430,000 tons, while unfilled contracts provide for heavier tonnage than ever before found at this time of the year on books of the company. The demand for plates continues strong, orders in some cases for cars extending up to October, 1908.

A Mild Laxative

Ask your doctor to name some of the results of constipation. His long list will begin with sick-headache, biliousness, dyspepsia, thin blood, bad skin. Then ask him if he would recommend your using Ayer's Pills for constipation. Just one pill at bedtime, a few times, that's all.

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Larger Movement of Crop Causes Lower Prices in America.

Flax is Fairly Active and Lower in Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 4.—Larger receipts in the Northwest had a depressing effect on wheat in the American markets today and the closing prices were lower. During the early part of the day, prices advanced slightly but fell off toward the close. Liverpool closed unchanged to ½d lower, Berlin unchanged and Budapest 1c higher.

The December option closed ⅜c lower in Duluth, ⅝c in Chicago, ¼@⅜c in Minneapolis, ½c in New York and Kansas City and ⅛c lower in Winnipeg. There was no session of the market in St. Louis, it being a holiday there. The October option closed ⅛c higher in Winnipeg. The May option closed ⅜c lower in Duluth and Minneapolis, ⅜@½c in Chicago, unchanged in New York and ½c lower in Kansas City.

December corn was unchanged in Chicago. It closed unchanged to ½d lower in Liverpool. December oats closed ¼c higher in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 301 against 229 last year, and at Minneapolis 401 against 721 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 705 against 949 last year. Chicago received 27 against 78 last year, Winnipeg received 270 against 462 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,046,000 bus., last year 1,421,000 bus. Shipments 618,000 bus., last year 415,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 501,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 329,000 bus., last year 555,000 bus. Shipments 251,000 bus., last year 325,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 42,892 bus.

Wheat trading was steady during most of the session of the Duluth market. December wheat opened⅛@¼c lower at 74⅝@⅞c, advanced to 75¼c by 10:40, declined to 74⅝c by 12:05, rallied to 74¾@⅞c by 12:35 and closed at 74⅝, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday. May wheat opened ⅝c lower at 78⅝c, advanced to 79⅛c and declined by the close to 78⅜c, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday. Durum wheat closed ½c lower and cash spring wheat was selling on a basis of 1¼c over December for No. 1 northern, a loss of ½c in the premium.

Flax was traded in quite steadily during the day. The foreign flax markets closed quiet. October flax opened ¼c higher at $1.12½, declined to $1.11¾, rallied to $1.12¼, fell off by the close to $1.11⅞, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday. November flax opened ¼c higher at $1.12½, declined to $1.11¾, advanced to $1.12, fell off to $1.11¾ again and closed at that price, a loss of ½c from yesterday. December flax opened unchanged at $1.10½, advanced to $1.10⅝, declined to $1.10, rallied to $1.10¼, declined to $1.10, rallied to $1.10½, fell off to $1.10 and closed at $1.10⅛, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday. May flax opened unchanged at $1.14½, declined to $1.13¾, rallied to $1.14 and closed at $1.13⅞, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday.

Rye was ½c higher and the other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Increased Northwestern Movement Has Weakening Effect on Wheat.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—An increased movement in the Northwest had a weakening effect today on the local wheat market. Receipts at Northwestern markets showed an increase over those of the corresponding day last week, but they were still considerably less than for the corresponding day a year ago. Cash houses were moderate buyers of the December delivery. The volume of trading, however, was small. December opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 70½@⅝c to 75⅝@¾c and then reacted to 70½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 732 cars against 615 cars last week and 1,035 cars a year ago.

The market became weak during the last half of the day on selling by several leading commission houses. The Ohio report estimating a crop of nearly 43,000,000 bushels compared with 32,000,000 bushels last year was a weakening influence. After selling at 75⅝c the December option declined to 75c. The close was weak with December off ⅝c at 75@¾c.

Corn was steady on a small demand by pit traders. Smaller receipts than expected had a steadying effect. December opened a shade lower at 42⅞@43c and sold at 42¾@43½c. Local receipts were 98 cars with 98 cars of contract grade.

The market held steady all day. The highest point of the day for December was reached at 43½c. The close was steady with December unchanged at 43c.

Oats were firm on scattered demand by cash houses. Offerings were light. December opened unchanged at 34¼c and sold up to 34⅝@34½c. Local receipts were 238 cars.

Provisions were quiet and steady. January pork was unchanged to 5c lower at $13.37½ to $13.42½. Lard was a shade higher at $7.92½. Ribs were a shade higher at $7.17½@7.20.

Close: Wheat—December, 75@¾c; May, 79¼c. Corn—December, 43c; May, 43⅝@½c. Oats—December, 34½c; May, 35½@⅝c. Pork—January, $13.40. Lard—October, $8.12½; January, $7.92½. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—At the close it is the judgment of pit leaders that the wheat recently bought by the leader has not been offered on the market at all. Dispatches from Kansas points report milling wheat rather scarce. If there is a continuation of important shortage in the Western movement, and export clearances continue three or four times as large as those of last year, prices will be forced to respond to such conditions, no matter who is long or short.

Corn—Speculative market is so narrow that there is little on which to base an opinion. One thing is evident, that the country is not making any great effort to sell either old or new corn at these prices.

Oats—A number of cash houses switched to the buying side this morning. The close was a little gain for the day. This market can be bulled easily we think.

• • •

Chicago Inter-Ocean: Traders who have been in New York and are well informed as to what Wall street men are doing in the grain markets, say that Schwab, the Steel man, is back of the Shearson-Hammill line of wheat, which is estimated as high at 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 bushels. A good part of the orders that come from the Steel crowd are handled by Mac Sweeney, a popular New York broker. He distributes them among the different commission houses and so far has been able to cover his tracks. Recently he gave an order to 5,000,000 bushels corn, but was below the market. Shearson sold downs on 1,000,000 bushels of December wheat al this week, but have been trading in and out of the privilege market on a large scale. They have accumulated a large line of wheat by selling down, and lost some of it recently through "ups."

CONVICTED OF LAND FRAUD

Missouri Man Found Guilty of Making a False Affidavit.

Springfield, Mo., Oct. 4.—James B. Dodson, an attorney of this city, was found guilty by a jury in the federal court yesterday of having made false affidavits in a land entry before the United States land office here.

Dodson's offense consisted of having made affidavit that forty acres of land in Christian county was untenanted and subject to entry, while a man was living on it. The owner of the tract had paid $2,000 for it, and Dodson it was proved, had offered to relinquish the claim he had upon it, by reason of the false entry, for $800. Dodson is prominent in politics and recently announced that he would make the race for the Republican nomination for governor two years hence.

DENOUNCES REBATE.

Washington, Oct. 4.—The National Association of Insurance Commissioners today adopted a strong decision against the practice of granting rebates as a great injustice to the public. An address by Charles S. Hardy of Chicago foreshadowed an increase in the rates of fraternal insurance.

PERSIAN SHAH IS ILL.

Teheran, Persia, Oct. 4.—The shah of Persia, Muzaffar-Ed-Din, is reported to be seriously ill.

REACTION IN STOCKS

Took Place in Afternoon on Very Small Offerings.

Price Movements Sluggish and the Close Was Irregular.

New York, Oct. 4.—Opening prices of stocks generally were a fraction higher than last night, but there were wide declines in a few cases. Canadian Pacific fell 2⅜, United States Rubber 2⅝, Northwestern 1¼ and Norfolk & Western ¾, Colorado Fuel advanced 1⅛, Southern Pacific, Colorado & Southern and the second preferred and Mexican Central about a point and Reading, Missouri and Distillers' Securities ⅝.

The early strength of the market was impaired by the selling of Atchison, Reading and Union Pacific, all of which sold fractionally below yesterday's closing. Despite the heaviness of the leading stocks there was a quiet absorption of many low priced railroads. Buying orders for large amounts of Reading turned the trend of the general market upward afterwards. Reading rallied over a point to 151¾.

Prices hardened slowly for a time, Amalgamated Copper gaining 1. Demand died out and prices sagged in an almost stagnant market. United States Rubber dropped 5, the first preferred 1½ and American Pneumatic 2. Bonds were firm.

The general market derived no benefit from the rise in Reading to 152¼, and subsequently became quite heavy, with prices at the lowest.

The afternoon reaction was a leisurely one and accomplished on very small offerings. Western stocks showed the least support, but Reading, although it fluctuated feverishly, seldom got much below yesterday's closing. Great Northern preferred ran off 3, Northern Pacific 1⅜ and Union Pacific 1. Chicago & Alton gained 3¾.

The market closed irregular. No action of any importance was indicated by the sluggish price movements. St. Louis & San Francisco first preferred sold at an advance of 4 and Chicago & Alton preferred 1½. St. Paul preferred and Iowa Central preferred declined 1. Amalgamated Copper and Southern Pacific led a late hardening movement which did not hold well.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened higher on good buying of standard issues. Rumored speech of the president not to be delivered at Harrisburg, wherein trusts would be given a searching, caused some selling and the list sagged. United States Rubber declined 4 points on rumor that no action will be taken on dividend at next meeting. Outlook for favorable bank statement Saturday. The trade seems to be on the short side. With a good bank statement we look for arecovery in stocks.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 4.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 6@12 points in response to higher cables than expected, but almost immediately broke to a net loss of about 4@6 points on the active months under local selling, which was encouraged by improving weather conditions and heavier receipts. The market in the middle of the morning was steady and 2 or 3 points up from the lowest point.

The market became very active and firm late in the morning, with prices about 20@22c net higher on Chicago shorts and reports of a better demand from spinners. Spot cotton, Middling uplands, 10.55; middling gulf, 10.80.

Futures closed barely steady. Closing bids: October, 10.48; November, 10.43; December, 10.46; January, 10.46; February, 10.56; March, 10.60; April, 10.63; May, 10.65; January, 10.67; July, 10.74. Spot closed steady and quiet, 10 points advance. Middling uplands, 10.05; middling gulf, 10.80; sales, 9,000 bales.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—Cattle—Estimated receipts today, 6,000; market strong to 10c higher; beeves, $3.90@7.00; cows and heifers, $1.60@5.20; stockers and feeders, $2.50@4.40; Texans, $3.70@4.40; westerners, $3.50@5.50; calves, $6.25@8.50. Sheep—Estimated receipts, 22,000; weak to 10c lower; sheep, $3.50@5.30; lambs, $4.60@7.35.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, Oct. 4.—Barrett & Zimmerman's Report: While the call is more liberal than for some days past the sales are not very heavy. There is a large supply of heavy horses on hand and the absence of the usual corps of outside buyers leaves a quiet market. The prospects are that numerous farmers will go into the horseraising business in the future. There have been numerous inquiries by farmers for mares for breeding purposes. All grades are moving at the following prices:

Drafters, extra	$220 to 250
Drafters, choice	190 to 220
Drafters, common to good	170 to 190
Farm mares, extra	125 to 150
Farm mares, choice	110 to 125
Farm mares, common to good	85 to 110
Delivery, choice	160 to 190
Delivery, common to good	130 to 250
Drivers	130 to 250
Mules, according to size	140 to 225

Copper Gossip.

Gay & Sturgis: Announcement that the London exploration company and the Rothschilds had purchased a large lot of Butte Coalition stock is said to account for the recent strength in these shares. All interests which participate to an important extent in the underwriting of the company are said to have contributed to the amount of stock which has passed into foreign hands. The Greene Consolidated Copper company is earning at the rate of $250,000 a month above the $100,000 to $125,000 per month of expenditure for development work. Earnings are running at the rate of $600,000 a year above the amount required for dividends.

Gay & Sturgis: The local market boiled today under the lead of North Butte. Speculation is still confined to stocks of value so that until indiscriminate buying of worthless shares occurs the market has not reached the limit. Violent reactions are likely to occur, however, from time to time. The general market has stayed in one place, however, for two weeks, notwithstanding a lot of bull talk. This spells distribution of stocks. We feel conservative as regards the general list.

Treasury Balances.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $221,653,635; gold, $117,173,584; gold certificates, $47,379,960.

St. Paul Live Stock.

St. Paul, Oct. 4.—Cattle—Receipts, 875; steady to stronger; grain fed steers, $4.90@6.25, cows and heifers, $3.50@4.50; grass fed steers, $3.25@5.00; cows and heifers, $2.50@3.75; calves, $2.50@5.50; stockers $2.00@3.50; feeders, $2.90@4.25. Hogs—Receipts, 890; market, 5c higher; range, $6.00@6.60; bulk of sales, $6.30@6.40. Sheep—Receipts, 3,500; indifferent tone; sheep, $2.75@6.00; lambs, $2.50@7.00.

PURITY FEDERATION PROGRAM IS ISSUED.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 4.—The program for the annual conference of the National Purity Federation, which was founded in this city a year ago, has been issued. This year's conference will be held in Chicago, Oct. 9, 10 and 11. The object of the federation is to unite in national co-operation all those forces in the United States that are striving to promote purity in the life of the individual, social relations and in family life by preventive, rescue, educational, reformatory, law enforcement and legislative lines of effort.

At this year's meeting two great reform movements will be started. One is to establish a system of purity instruction in institutions of learning and the other is against the white slave trade. B. B. Steadwell of this city is president of the federation. Among those who will deliver addresses at the conference are Mrs. Elizabeth B. Brannis, New York city; Dr. Hattie A. Schwendener, St. Joseph, Mich.; Dr. David Paulson, Hilldale, Ill.; Dr. Emma F. A. Drake, Denver, Colo.; Dr. Denslow Lewis, Chicago; Dr. Evelyn Hoehne, Milwaukee; Rev. Charles Mitchell, Guthrie, Okla.; Rev. Sidney C. Kendall, Long Beach, Cal.; Miss M. E. Hughes, St. Louis, and others.

NORWEGIAN KING AND QUEEN AT COPENHAGEN.

Copenhagen, Oct. 4.—King Haakon, Queen Maude and Crown Prince Olaf of Norway arrived here today. This was their first official visit abroad since the king's coronation and he was accorded a magnificent reception by the inhabitants. A crowd of 60,000 persons, including many Norwegian-Americans lined the streets from the railroad station to the palace.

READY TO DIE FOR RELIGION

Paris, Oct. 4.—The Catholics of Brittany have addressed an open letter to Interior Minister Clemenceau denouncing the statements which he made in his speech of Sunday last and adding:

"The Chouans are not dead. If you attempt to unite the Jacobins of '93; if you attempt to close the churches, prescribe our priests or prevent the celebration of our sainted religion we will rise against the infamous tyranny and die with enthusiasm for God and the king of our fathers."

PASSING THROUGH A GREAT CRISIS

Paris, Oct. 4.—Count and Countess Witte arrived here yesterday from Germany. The count, who has considerably improved in health, attended a theater last night, his presence attracting much attention. He said he had absolutely no connection with the direction of affairs in Russia, but was following the developments with the keenest interest.

"The empire," he said, "is passing through a great crisis, but although I am a pessimist at present, I have not abandoned hope of seeing eventually evolved a parliamentary and monarchical regime suited to the needs of the country."

Count Witte added that he did not desire to reply to the attacks or criticisms of the enemies of Russia, "especially when they come from men of the stamp of M. Schwanebach," the controller of the empire.

DISCLAIMS ANY PARTICIPATION

Madrid, Oct. 4.—The papal nuncio, Monsignor Rinaldi, called on Minister of Justice Romanones today to explain that the vatican authorities were not participating in the carapaign of protestation by the Spanish prelates against the acts of the government. The vatican, the nuncio said, was not exercising any pressure in the domain of politics.

In official circles the opinion is unanimous that criminal action must be begun against the Bishop of Luy, whose second pastoral letter attacking the government's actions, is alleged to incite religious war.

WILL PLAY NEXT TUESDAY.

First Game Between Chicago Baseball Clubs is Arranged.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—The first game of the series between the Chicago National League Baseball club and the Chicago American League Baseball club for the championship of the world will be played Tuesday, Oct. 9, on the grounds of the National League club in this city. The date was decided today at a conference between Presidents Charles W. Murphy, Charles Comiskey and Harry Pulliam.

RAILROADS

A BENEFIT TO DULUTH

Business Men Hoping Canadian Northern Will Build Extension.

Latest Report Gives Hill Control of Wisconsin Central.

With all the railroad talk that is now going around there continues to be a good deal said locally regarding the probable plans of the Canadian Northern in building an extension to Duluth. At different times in the past reports concerning the proposed line have gone abroad, and each time a little different route was given as the one which probobly would be chosen.

At present the choice seems to lie between building a road direct to Duluth from the southern end of the Port Arthur, Duluth & Western, through Cook and Lake counties, and building one to the range, connecting Ely and the Iron Range road with the extension of the Canadian Northern which reaches farthest into Minnesota. Gunflint is the end of this extension, and is located forty miles from Ely.

Whatever route it follows, it is regarded as a certainty that the Canadian Northern will build into this city within the next year or two. Opportunities for running new lines of railroad into Duluth over the hills are not very good, the most available routes all having been taken up, but it is believed the Canadian Northern would be able to decide upon a survey which would bring its tracks into the city proper. Possibly it would make some arrangement with one of the range roads whereby the proper connections could be made.

Duluth business men would greet the advent of the new road with a considerable degree of satisfaction. Northeast of Duluth there is a long stretch of fertile country that has thus far remained very sparsely settled because of the lack of railroad facilities. Even the wagon roads reaching back from the lake shore have been very poor, and in many instances there have been no roads at all. The only means of communication with this Northern country, beyond the end of the logging road extending east from Two Harbors, has been by water. The boat service is of direct benefit only to the towns along the lake.

Local men who are acquainted with the region are confident that as soon as a railroad is built that will connect Duluth with Port Arthur, and leading through the heart of this unsettled country, the vacant lands will rapidly be settled up, and productive farms will take the place of the present forests. This country to the northeast is a pretty extensive one, and will be almost entirely dependent upon Duluth for its supplies, offering a rich field for the local wholesalers and jobbers to work in, once the region is settled up.

WISCONSIN CENTRAL

Said to be in Combination With Some of Hill's Roads.

Milwaukee, Oct. 4.—Concerning the Wisconsin Central railway, the Journal says:

"Following the resignation of Chairman Bull of the Wisconsin Central board and the succession of George M. Cumming together with the passing of control to a new syndicate, composed of Messrs. Bradford, Cumming, Fernald and Chadbourne, interest centered today in possible further changes of control.

"Rumor has the Wisconsin Central in a combination with the Milwaukee Southern and the Chicago-Indiana road of John R. Walsh, which was recently sold to James J. Hill and eventually the three roads will be turned over to Mr. Hill.

"The Milwaukee Southern taps every trunk line entering Chicago, north and south. The Walsh road does the same for every road running east and west. Kleybolte & Co. of Cincinnati sold the Walsh road to J. J. Hill and the firm is credited with having secured control of the Wisconsin Central. Kleybolte & Co. are said to have intimated changes amongst the Central's officials and it is reported that President Whitcomb has anticipated events and tendered his resignation. His successor is spoken of as W. A. Bradford, Jr."

When asked concerning the resignation of Mr. Bull and possible changes in officers today, none of the officials would discuss the matter and stated they knew nothing of the changes.

BIG CUT IN RATES.

Southern Pacific Makes 25 Per Cent Reduction on Perishable Goods.

San Francisco, Oct. 4.—Begining Oct. 10, the Southern Pacific will make a 25 per cent reduction in its tariff on commodities shipped under refrigerators.

At present the charge of shipping perishable commodities is 25 per cent above the cost of the shipments. This cost is to be annulled and perishable goods will be transported at the same rates as other goods, which do not need the protection of a refrigerator. As a result of this change of policy California fruits can be bought at a much cheaper price in Eastern states. Larger shipments of fruits and other perishable commodities will also be encouraged. The reduction is wholly voluntary on the part of the railroad.

Wabash Bond Issue.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—A special meeting of the stockholders of the Wabash railway will be held in Chicago, Oct. 22, at which it is proposed to authorize a bond issue of $200,000,000. About $70,000,000 of this sum will be used to retire bonds now in existence. The rest will be expended for improvements. One of the chief improvements planned is the completion of the double tracking between Chicago and St. Louis.

BEMIDJI PREPARING

To Give Governor Johnson Warm Welcome on Friday Evening.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 4.—(Special to The Herald.—Extensive preparations are being made for the appearance here Friday night of Governor John A. Johnson and L. G. Pendergast, Bemidji's Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor. P. J. Russell has charge of the arangements and has secured the city hall, where speeches will be delivered by the governor and Mr. Pendergast. The meeting has been extensively advertised and there will undoubtedly be a large attendance, both from this city and outside towns. The Bemidji band will enliven the occasion, and a parade will possibly be given. It is expected that the governor and Mr. Pendergast will arrive from Grand Rapids.

MISS BUSLEY IS VIVACIOUS

Says New York is Provincial and Likes the West.

"And I've got the dandiest clothes. Mrs. Osborne designed them. The peachiest coat of red with a panne velvet collar and buttons down the front" and two slender forefingers poked in rapid succession in the places where the buttons were placed and oh, the loveliest yellow gown!"

Who wouldn't be interested in a person who knows how to start right at the root of the essentials of brilliant conservation that way. And that was the way, almost, that Miss Jessie Busley, who part of the time masquerades as Nance Olden of the Episcopal prelate's carriage fame, began conversation this morning and, as a recently seen stage character this week remarked, she was just full of conversation today. Miss Busley admits herself, that there is just one thing that she really knows and thinks these days and that is Nance Olden of the "Bishop's Carriage." She talks Nance Olden with such rapidity that one can almost see, not only the words tumbling out, but a whole mouthful behind. Such eagerness, such enthusiasm, such thrilling anxiety so blissfully and unendingly uttered, is a joy. Miss Busley just dotes on Nance Olden and everything that concerns her and she wants the West's opinion for she thinks they know. "New York," said Miss Jessie with vigor, and the vigor of a sprightly Puck or some such elfin creature, seems to be quite a characteristic of this young person, "is the biggest yap town in America." Now then. You should hear the flatness and broadness of that "yap."

"Goodness," gasped her auditor, and then after an interval of conversation when there happened to be room, "Gracious."

"Yes, ma'am," said Miss Busley, "I've always said it. The worst thing on earth, nearly, will succeed in New York for the most provincial person in the whole country is your little New Yorker. We're going to New York, however, after the first of the year, but the thing I'm working for is the approval of the West." Which was really quite brave of Miss Busley when you come to consider that she has played for years only in New York as leading woman for Frohman.

"But the play has been rewritten in part for this year," continued Miss Busley," and has been made much stronger. The weakness of the acting version of it last year has been removed, so say the persons who have seen both, and the joy of the whole thing is that they have given character development to my darling Nance. She is the most interesting person, all comedy and sprightliness the first act and part of the second, and then the force of a new thought which questioned the things in her life which she never had questioned, comes to her and begins that change in her character and then—"

But the word-tumbling stunt began again and it would take a court stenographer to keep up with the points, and ideas, and gowns, and habits, and manners, and methods, and hopes, and quavering joys which Miss Jessie Busley feels in Nance Olden.

WEST DULUTH

DIES SUDDENLY.

West Duluth Grand Army Man Stricken With Pneumonia.

Milton D. Buell, 80 years old, a member of the Willis A. Gorman post, G. A. R., and a well-known West Duluthian, died suddenly at his home, 601 North Forty-ninth avenue, yesterday afternoon, of acute pneumonia.

He leaves a wife, two daughters and two sons. Oliver S. Buell is a Duluth postman, and Frank Buell, his other son, is located in Eau Claire, Wis., while his two daughters, Bertha and Sarah, are living at home here.

Mr. Buell was born at Oneida, N. Y., Oct. 5, 1826, so was within one day of being 80 years old at the time of his death. He was enlisted in the Twenty-eighth Wisconsin during the war, serving from March to December, 1865. Since that time he has lived in Hayward and Superior, Wis., and came to West Duluth in 1898.

He has been an invalid for some time, but was thought to be gradually recovering, and his sudden death comes as a great shock to his many friends. The funeral services will be held next Sunday afternoon, at the West Duluth Baptist church, Rev. Arthur J. Hoag preaching the sermon.

SHOT HIMSELF.

Nestor Juldner Has Painful Experience While Cleaning Revolver.

"The gun that wasn't loaded" came into prominence in West Duluth yesterday, when Nestor Juldner of 116 North Central avenue shot himself through the leg with a revolver which he was examining.

Juldner had pulled the trigger on several chambers, when he came to one that evidently had a shell in it, and the bullet penetrated the fleshy part of the leg, inflicting a painful but not very dangerous wound. It was dressed by a physician, and as the bullet did not touch the bone, he will be about again in a few days.

West Duluth Briefs.

The Young Ladies' Guild of the Holy Apostles Episcopal church will meet tomorrow with Miss Harris, at Mr. Schell's old residence.

The drill team of Uniform Rank 1555, M. W. A. is beginning practice for the big initiation ceremonies to be held in St. Paul this fall. The team has won conspicuous honors in the past, taking the junior prize at the national meet at Indianapolis a couple of years ago.

A letter was received in West Duluth this morning from Charles Nold, an ex-member of the Dynamite club. Mr. Nold is now located, and expects to go into business in Baden-Baden, Germany, where his family has been living for some time. Mr. Nold expressed his regard for all the Dynamiters.

Miss Charlotte Howard, who was run down by an automobile Monday evening, is recovering rapidly, and will be out again in a few days.

H. S. Lord, formerly of Duluth, but now a prominent attorney of Barnum, was in West Duluth today on business.

John Dormedy emphatically denies the statement made in this column last evening in regard to his engagement to Miss Teresa Baldwin.

F. P. Holmberg returned yesterday from a three weeks' hunting trip through North and South Dakota. He says he has never seen game so plentiful as it is in that region this fall, and he made a big killing of ducks and chickens.

WATCH REPAIRING—HURST, 301 CENTRAL.

A most pleasant farewell was tendered Mrs. C. Stewart by the Ladies' Aid of the Asbury M. E. church at the home of Mrs. E. D. Abbot at 5609 Grand avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart and family will leave early next week for Los Angeles, Cal., where they will spend the winter. They will move to Iowa next year.

Charles Fancett and Emil Zauft returned yesterday from a hunting trip in the vicinity of Cloquet.

Miss Clara Wangen returned last night from a week's visit with friends in the southern part of the state.

J. A. Scott left yesterday on a short business trip to the Twin Cities.

Rev. C. O. Christianson, pastor of the Second Norwegian Methodist church in West Duluth, will preach his farewell sermon here next Sunday. He has been assigned to a pastorate at Fergus Falls, Minn. Rev. A. P. Lund will be his successor.

LIBERTY AND PROSPERITY

Are of Special Importance in Campaign, Says Hearst.

New York, Oct. 4.—The Independence league, which named William R. Hearst for governor, yesterday received his letter accepting the nomination. In it he says:

"Two things are of special importance as issues in this campaign, liberty and prosperity. The object of the Independence league is to resist the attacks upon the human liberty, upon government of the people menaced by corporation rule, and to resist the attacks upon general prosperity by those same corporations and by dishonest financial agencies.

"I accept with gratitude and with a deep feeling of responsibility the nomination of the Independence league.

"The great problem of the hour, the problem that the people must solve with their ballots and in legislation, is to do away with corporation control of the government. That control is now practically absolute. It rests mainly upon our system of partisan politics, directed by boss rule and subject to trust ownership.

"I accept your nomination with the full knowledge that the Independence league and its candidate for governor are pledged in honor to exterminate bossism by putting into operation throughout our state direct nominations and open primaries.

"You see a corporation lawyer put forward as the standard bearer of the Republican party in this campaign. You see corporation lawyers and violent partisans of monopolies held up to you as the only men fit to select your judges.

"The people know that their enemies are the originators and managers of oppressive trusts. They know that these trusts are in control of the Republican machine in this state. They see Mr. Sheldon chosen as the treasurer to raise and spend the money for Mr. Hughes, the corporation attorney. And when they realize that Mr. Sheldon, director in twenty-one corporations, notoriously connected with the collapsed shipbuilding trust, is the financial reliance of the ticket which Mr. Hughes heads, they can not look on that ticket as promising much for the prosperity of the people.

"I propose, if elected, to exercise fearlessly, with due regard for the people of home rule, the power of removal given by the people to the governor. I propose to end control by the corporations, not only in these state departments, but in the county offices charged with the responsibility of enforcing the original laws of the state.

"I advocate making the public official's term of office so short that he will not have time or inclination to forget who it is that elected him, and that ought to control him. In particular I favor undoing the mistake that lengthened the term of office of the mayor of New York from two to four years, and I advocate a material shortening of the terms of office for all judges.

"An honest election law, an efficient corrupt practices act, and especially a measure that will make it possible to have a judicial review of an election upon proof of fraud or mistake, must be enacted as part of that campaign against corporation domination upon which the people have entered.

"I shall continue to work for the enactment of a statute empowering cities to acquire and operate all public utilities at their option.

"Railroad rates must be reduced and New York must be placed in line with other progressive states that are enforcing a maximum rate of two cents a mile.

"I accept the nomination and pledge myself to strive in the future to retain for the people the rights they still have, and to restore those which they have lost.

"WILLIAM R. HEARST."

FORECLOSURE WAS NOT LEGAL

Fred Brown Would Have Court Set Aside Mortgage Sale.

The trial of the suit of Fred A. Brown against the Leinin Kugel Brewing company, for the recovery of a certain tract of land in St. Louis county, claimed by the defendant through a mortgage foreclosure sale, was begun in district court this morning, before Judge Dibell.

The complaint states that a mortgage to the land was delivered by John H. Murphy, through several intermediate parties, until it reached the hands of the Leinin Kugel company. The mortgage became due and was foreclosed, the defendant realizing $7,783 from the sale of the property.

Brown claims that the price for the property was entirely inadequate, and that the foreclosure sale was not a legal one. He asks for a judgment setting aside the sale and prohibiting the Leinin Kugel company from claiming any interest in the property.

Only one witness, Fred A. Brown, was examined this morning, and the case was continued until this afternoon session. Thomas A. Gall represents Mr. Brown in the case, and H. J. McClearn is defnding the company.

CONTRACTORS MAY FAIL TO GET CHINESE COOLIES FOR PANAMA CANAL WORK

Sentiment in Southern China is Against Sending Them.

Experience With French Twenty Years Ago Was Disastrous.

Officers of Commission Are Now Examining the Proposals.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The officers of the isthmian canal commission are busily engaged in examining the proposals recently submitted by contracting firms for furnishing Chinese labor for work on the canal at Panama. Because of the peculiar conditions, surrounding the importation and employment of aliens in this work, complicated in part by the adjustment of some international feature which probably will arise, several weeks must be necessarily elapse before any conclusions are reached and the contract awarded.

Some doubt is expressed whether contractors will be able to carry out any contract which may be awarded for supplying coolie labor. Preferably because of climatic conditions the isthmian commission desires that any laborers sent to the isthmus shall come from the southern province of China. Reports received at the Chinese legation show that in that section not a single Chinese newspaper favors the emigration of Chinese to Panama, as the experiences of those who went there for the French canal company are still fresh in the minds of the people. The Chinese were unable to withstand the conditions then existing, and it is said that about 75 per cent of those who went there died. This mortality was due largely to the unhealthy sanitary surroundings then prevailing on the isthmus, which, however, have been greatly improved under the American administration of affairs.

Petitions from Chinese residents in Peru, San Francisco and at Panama have been sent to the government at Pekin asking that it refuse its sanction to any proposition to permit contract laborers to go from China to Panama. Thus far, however, the Chinese authorities have remained entirely passive in the matter and have not made any representations to the United States. Several years ago the Chinese were sounded by the state department as to their attitude with respect to sending coolie labor to Panama to which a polite but unfavorable reply was received. Since the present situation has arisen, however, no representations have been made by the state department to the Chinese government in any form.

The suggestion has been made that if the Chinese government interposes an objection to permit the departure of coolies for labor on the isthmus, the contractors as an alternative may resort to the Philippine islands or to the Strait Settlements, over which the Chinese government has no jurisdiction for laborers.

Any contracts for furnishing coolie labor which may be drawn by the isthmian canal commission will, before being executed, be submitted to the state department for inspection, with a view to avoiding any possibility of international complications.

MUST GO AFTER FIENDISH KING

France May Have to Discipline Monarch of Annam.

Paris, Oct. 5.—Thanh Thai, king of Annam, according to stories reaching Paris from Indo-China, has again been guilty of such atrocities that the French government may become compelled to adopt rigorous disciplinary measures as it did several years ago. At that time, on account of the scandal caused by the barbarous torture of the king's personal attendants, the French resident, who is at the head of the gendarmery, entered the palace to save the lives of the attendants and restore order.

The mails now report that in August the king was seized with a homicidal mania, ordered seven of his wives to be executed and looked on with delight while they were slowly tortured to death. A few days later the king shot down a prince, who was 70 years old, a member of the council of the royal family, highly esteemed and the last surviving son of King Minh Mang. When the French resident called to remonstrate with Thanh Thai the latter declined to permit him to enter the palace. The king wanted to come to Paris, as the king of Cambodia did, but the French press declares that such a fiend shall never be allowed to visit France.

SEIZE A NEWSPAPER.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 5.—The Narod, an ultra-Socialist newspaper, has been seized and the editor taken into custody. The persons arrested yesterday, following the attack by revolutionists on the cashier of the branch customs house here, have been interned in the Schluesselberg fortress. They are liable to trial by the newly created field courtmartial. The press reports extensive agrarian rioting in the province of Novgorod.

TO FIGHT THE TRUST

Warden Wolfer Would Go After the Twine Octopus.

Magnificent Showing is Made by Plant During Two Years.

Stillwater, Minn., Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Changes in the law that will affect all grades of the criminal class and another pertaining to the manufacture of binder twine that will benefit all the farmers, are suggestions embodied in the biennial report of Warden Henry Wolfer, of the state prison, just out. The report shows wonderful prosperity of the prison, and indicates the need of larger quarters for housing the prisoners and for manufacturing purposes.

The warden forshadows the coming of a time when all classes of criminals except the murderers, shall receive indeterminate sentences, as he believes it conductive to reform. He is in favor of a law that will permit the prison management to buck the binder twine trust.

His report shows that the binder twine plant of the state prison for the past two years, has netted the state, above expenses, $409,452.87, and has benefited the farmers to the extent of $734, 973.45, making a total saving in only two years of $1,144,426.32. It shows that the prison has yielded a profit over expenses, outside of the twine factory, making the total net profits in two years of $371,080.64 for the state.

The highest population of the prison was 792. At the rate of increase the past ten years, 4.7 per cent, it is estimated that the population of the prison will be 1,014 in the next ten years. The accommodations are not now sufficient for the present number. Since the parole law was adopted twelve years ago, there have been 778 paroled, and there are now forty-three out on parole. No women were ever paroled. It was stated that experience has shown that the grading and parole system is one of the most substantial modern movements in prison reform. Doubt is expressed by the warden as to the parole system reaching the maximum of efficiency until all violators of law, murderers excepted, are committed on the same principal that insane people are sent to an asylum, there to remain until cured or until they give reasonable evidence that they have reformed and are fit to go at large.

In his report the warden speaks of the night school, the chautauqua, the chapel entertainments, the prison band and orchestra and the flowers that are grown in green houses in the prison yard have contributed largely in the aid of discipline.

COMMERCE WITH CUBA IS LARGE

Runs More Than Two Hundred Millions a Year.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor today issued a bulletin on the foreign commerce of Cuba, showing that it aggregates over $200,000,000 per annum, the actual figures being given as follows:

Imports, $95,000,000, and exports, $120,000,000. Of the imports, 45 per cent were in 1905, drawn from the United States, and of the exports 86 per cent were sent to the United States. It is stated that there has been a steady gain in the share of the imports drawn from this country, while the share of exports sent to the United States in 1905 was 86 per cent.

Of the exports sugar alone amounted to $63,000,000; tobacco, crude and manufactured, $27,000,000, and fruits about $37,000,000. Of the imports, cotton manufactures were in round terms $9,000,000; breadstuffs, including rice, $9,000,000; cattle, horses and mules, $7,000,000; meats, $7,000,000; machinery, $6,000,000; manufactures of iron and steel, not classed as machinery, about $4,000,000, and other commodities, from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000.

Of the exports, nearly all sugar and a large proportion of the fruits are sent to the United States, and the exports of tobacco are divided between the United States and Europe, and as a result 86 per cent of the total exports go to the United States.

HEARING IS RESUMED.

St. Louis, Oct. 5.—The hearing of testimony in the suit of the government and Terminal Railroad association, postponed from Wednesday because of carnival week festivites yesterday, was resumed today. Julius S. Walsh, chairman of the board of directors of the Terminal association, who was on the stand when adjournment was taken Wednesday, continued his testimony today.

TORNADO RAGES IN NEW ORLEANS RESIDENCE DISTRICT BUT HURTS FEW

FAMILIAR WITH LAWS

That Prompted Magoon's Appointment as Governor of Cuba.

He Must Bring Judiciary of Island to Better Plane.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The determining factor in the selection of Governor Charles E. Magoon as the provisional governor of Cuba was the fact of his familiarity with all the laws of Cuba, and the steps that were taken during the last American occupation to organize a stable government. It has already been determined that there must be an election, and the machinery for a fair election must be constructed by the provisional government.

Another feature of the work that will devolve upon Governor Magoon will be in securing an improvement in the laws of Cuba with regard to the independence of the judiciary. The subserviency of the judicial to the political power is one of the causes of the present trouble. The persons aggrieved over the methods of the government had no redress through the judiciary because the judiciary was not granted sufficient independence of the political authorities. It is the intention of this government, according to officials here, to have such an improvement of the present laws in the next Cuban government as will materially decrease the reasons for revolution and another intervention by the United States.

It is expected that the largest ships of the American fleet, if not all of them will be withdrawn from Cuban waters as soon as there is a sufficient army force landed to afford security to the provisional government and the protection of property interests. The ships themselves, it is stated at the department, do not afford any protection to Cuban interests, save as being quick transports and barracks for the blue jackets and marines which have been landed on the island. There is no suggestion that the big guns of the ships or even the smaller batteries would be used against the towns and cities whose harbors are large enough to accommodate naval vessels. Therefore, it is stated at the department, the ships will be ordered to resume the cruises which were interrupted when the rush orders to proceed to Cuba were issued.

Governor Taft has the direction of the vessels in Cuban waters. The sailings and arrivals are reported to the navy department here as the regulations require, but the orders to the naval officers are given by the war secretary. The withdrawal of the ships will no doubt depend upon the wishes of Secretary Taft after the army has landed.

Sweeps Across City, Doing Great Damage to Buildings.

Property Loss Large, But Number Injured is Small.

Four Persons Killed at Hammond, Fifty Miles Away.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 5.—A tornado passing through five miles of the residence and factory section of New Orleans today injured at least a score of persons and did fully $500,000 damage. Half an hour after the tornado had left the city traveling in a northerly direction, a telegram from Hammond, La., fifty miles north of here, said that four persons had been killed in a tornado at Pontchatoula, a nearby town. Great property damage at Pontchatoula was also reported.

A report was brought in from the neighborhood of Lake Pontchartrain, outside the city limits, that lives had been lost, but the report lacked confirmation. Although several deaths were reported in New Orleans immediately after the storm, investigation showed that probably not a life was lost here. Many of the injuries to persons occurred near Roberts street and the Southern Pacific Says They Are Rushing to California.

San Francisco, Oct. 5.—California is being sought out more than ever by immigrants. The Southern Pacific announces that over their lines from all points of the East 600 persons come daily to settle here. The Santa Fe tells a similar story of the great influx of population into this state.

Business has increased sufficiently to warrant the Southern Pacific in resuming the running of the Golden State Limited, which was stopped during the days immediately succeeding the fire in April. This train will be resumed on Nov. 11.

CANADIAN YACHT CLUB DECLARES FOR 33-FOOTERS.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 5.—Members of the Royal Canadian Yacht club, Toronto, challengers for the Canada's cup, which must be defended next summer by the Rochester Yacht club, have declared themselves in favor of 33-footers. The local club favors the 27-foot craft, and the challenged has the right to dictate to the Canadians. The Rochester Yacht club, however, prefers to come to an agreement.

WORKMEN ARE BURIED IN PHILADELPHIA SUBWAY

SCORES AT THE RAPIDS

Unable to Get Within Hearing Distance of Governor Johnson.

Large Meeting and Governor's Speech Created Great Enthusiasm.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor John A. Johnson and L. G. Pendergast, candidate for lieutenant governor, arrived in Grand Rapids over the Great Northern at 1:25 yesterday afternoon. They were accompanied on the trip from Duluth by A. B. Clair of Grand Rapids, member of the Democratic state central committee, and the party was met at the depot here by a special reception committee, the brass band and several hundred citizens. Governor Johnson and Mr. Pendergast, accompanied by several of the local party leaders, drove over to Bovey and Coleraine in the afternoon.

The courtroom was filled to overflowing to hear Governor Johnson last night. All the available standing room was occupied and the halls were jammed full and scores of people were unable to get within hearing distance.

Mr. Pendergast was the first speaker, introduced by the chairman of the meeting, A. B. Clair. He spoke for about thirty minutes, devoting his remarks largely to the subject of state development and drainage, and Governor Johnson spoke for nearly two hours and held the close attention of his audience. He discussed state timber lands as handled by his administration, railway rate regulation, the reduction of passenger rates to 2 cents per mile, insurance, state drainage, and state development, and not since the days of Charles A. Towne has a Grand Rapids audience been so enthusiastic.

INCREASES ARE MADE

Public Service Corporations Get Raises in Valuations.

Duluth Edison Electric Company is Boosted 40 Per Cent.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—An increase of 14 per cent, or approximately $1,500,000 was ordered in the assessment of the Twin City Rapid Transit company by the state board of equalization late yesterday.

The St. Paul Gas company received a raise of 20 per cent, the Minneapolis General Electric company, 50 per cent; the Duluth Edison Electric company, 40 per cent; and Swift & Co. of South St. Paul, 50 per cent. The last named company will now pay taxes on an assessment of over $500,000. The return as made to the board was about $328,000.

The Duluth Street Railway company was not touched, nor the St. Paul Union Stock Yards company. Both made a fair showing, and it was agreed that their returns were high enough.

The returns by all the corporations considered were in the majority of instances greater than that made by the companies last year, and, in fact, greater than that fixed by the board in 1905, but this fact did not prevent the board adding to them. Some of the members were for making the increase much larger, but conservatism generally prevailed, and they were voted down.

HEARST IS NOT PARTICULAR

Does Not Care What McCarren Thinks of Brooklyn Situation.

Chatham, N. Y., Oct. 5.—William R. Hearst had his attention directed today to a published statement by P. H. McCarren, Democratic organization leader of Brooklyn, that if Mr. Hearst persists in having Independence League candidates nominated in Kings county there will be a plurality of 75,000 against him in Brooklyn.

"The question of whether Brooklyn goes 75,000 one way or the other is for the citizens of Brooklyn to decide and not for Mr McCarren to decide," said Mr. Hearst. "I have the utmost consideration for the wishes of the citizens of Brooklyn, and none whatever for the wishes of Mr. McCarren. In placing an independence ticket in the field in Brooklyn we are doing what we believe to be for the best interests of the citizens of Brooklyn. Mr. McCarren by calling himself a Democrat does not make himself a Democrat. If he should call himself an honest man, it would not make him an honest man. If he should call his ticket a good ticket it would not make it a good ticket. As a matter of actual fact the McCarren ticket is notoriously unfit, and should not command the respect of honest Democrats or honest Independents.

"I am a Democrat, but a Jefferson Democrat, not a corporation Democrat, and I can not allow a hired agent of the corporations, like McCarren to define my Democracy or dictate unworthy candidates for me to support."

STEAMER RUNS INTO MUD IN NEW YORK.

New York, Oct. 5.—The big new steamer Bermudian of the Quebec Steamship company, running between New York and Bermuda, ran aground on the mud flats off South Brooklyn while coming up the harbor on the way to her dock in the North river today. She had 160 passengers on board. Tugs failed to pull her off the mud, as the ship had grounded when the tide was high.

SENATOR CLARK ONLY SUSTAINED BROKEN RIB.

Paris, Oct. 5.—In reply to an inquiry concerning his health, Senator W. A. Clark of Montana, who was reported to have been seriously injured in an automobile accident last month, sent the following answer to the Associated Press:

"Salsomaggerore, Italy, Oct. 5.—A tire of my machine burst near Marseilles on Sept. 9. The chaffeur lost control and the car was ditched. I had a rib broken and suffered serious contusions on the back. I am now almost well. My wife was not hurt."

FAVORS PENNY POSTAGE.

Milan, Italy, Oct. 5.—The international congress of the chambers of commerce, in session here today, voted nearly unanimously in favor of universal penny postage, after an address by John Henniker Heaton, M.P., who carried the imperial penny postage scheme through the British house of commons in 1898.

SIX LIVES ARE LOST

Illuminating Gas Escapes Into a Rapid Transit Subway.

Explodes When Workmen Enter, Burying Them in Wreckage.

Flames Shoot From Many Pipes—Dozen Are Injured.

Philadelphia, Oct. 5.—A terrific explosion of illuminating gas in the subway of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, under construction at Sixth and Market streets, today, resulted in the death of six men, the injuring of about a dozen others and caused property damage that will run into thousands of dollars. Besides the six men that are known to be dead, it is said that at least three others are buried under tons of earth in the wrecked subway. Extraordinary efforts are being made to clear the excavation but it will be late in the day before this can be accomplished.

The explosion occurred shortly before 7 o'clock and in consequence of the early hour but few workmen had gathered. The explosion was caused by a leak in a city gas main that had been improperly repaired last night. The escaping gas formed in a pocket in the subway and it is believed that a workman carrying a lamp into the great hole ignited the gas. The corner of Sixth and Market streets is one of the busy sections of the city, but there was fortunately little traffic there when the explosions occurred. About a dozen workmen were gathered near a large derrick and five men are believed to have been in the subway.

The force of the explosion wrecked the subway for half a block and all the heavy timbering and other structural work including tons of earth fell into the excavation. A heavy rain during the night had slightly weakened the walls of the excavation and added to the damage.

Just as the gas blew up, a double team dirt cart was being driven directly across the covered subway by a driver of the Millard Construction company, which is building the subway. The vehicle, horses and man were blown high in the air and the horses and cart fell into the hole. The driver landed in the street and was only slightly hurt. Several of the workmen who were standing near the derrick were blown across the street, and either killed or injured, and a number of pedestrians were hurt by falling glass and signs from the tall business houses on both sides of Market and Sixth streets.

Those portions of the subway that were not covered with dirt burst into flames and for a time no person dared venture near the place for fear of further explosions. Firemen were quickly on the spot but water was of little use, owing to the fact that the flames were shooting from dozens of gas pipes and a large gas main. Dirt was then resorted to, and in the course of a couple of hours all the flames had been extinguished except those from the large main. This was not put out until nearly 10 o'clock, and only after a hole had been dug in the street near the subway and the main plugged up. As soon as the fire had been extinguished and all danger of a further explosion had passed, hundreds of men were put to work clearing out the wrecked subway.

While the damage done to the subway, to the city's gas and water mains, and the electric light and telephone conduits is considerable, it will not compare with the destruction wrought to surrounding property. From Fifth street to Seventh street on Market street, and for half a square on Sixth street, both north and south of Market street, not a whole pane of glass is left. All the large plate glass windows were broken and thousands of dollars worth of goods in the show windows were damaged. Dozens of signs were torn from the roofs and walls of buildings, and it is considered remarkable that more persons were not killed. The vicinity of the explosion is roped off and business within the affected area was temporarily suspended.

WILL COMPLETE IT QUICKLY

Gen. Funston Says Insurgents Will be Disarmed Soon.

Havana, Oct. 5.—Brig. Gen. Funston said this morning that the process of disarming the insurgents throughout the island will be completed in two or three days. The disarmament is finished in Puerto Pincipe, and is almost completed in Santiago. There is some delay in Havana province, because Gen. Asbert's followers are largely scattered. It is expected that they will be concentrated today near Guines. A detachment of twenty-five marines has been sent to Guines to keep order pending the disarming of Asbert's men.

DISARMING ADVANCES

Governor Taft Will Complete Work by October 15.

Annexation Talk is Growing Among the Cuban People.

Havana, Oct. 5.—"The disarmament of the Cuban insurgents is progressing as rapidly as can be reasonably expected," said Governor Taft today. He added that the militia and volunteers were being rapidly mustered out, the only delay being due to inability of the American authorities to obtain correct lists of the enrollments, and therefore the work might last until Oct. 15, on which date the pay of the troops terminates.

A disturbance which at one time threatened to become a riot occurred last evening as the result of the conspicuous riding through the streets of this city of former insurgents.

The chief of police had just telephoned an order to all the police stations to take the small arms from all insurgents throughout the city, when Damasco Castillo, an ex-insurgent, was seized by the police while riding past a precinct station. Castillo resisted, and in the melee which followed, his arm was cut with his own machet. As soon as he was overpowered he was taken to the Vivac jail followed by a crowd of several hunderd persons, including a number of mounted ex-rebels.

This crowd surrounded the jail and the excitement was growing when Alfred Zayas, the Liberal leader, arrived. After a long parley he procured the release of Castillo after the man had surrendered his revolver to the police. Senor Zayas is of the opinion that the taking of the weapons of ex-rebels, when they are at the disposal of the disarming commission is unjust persecution.

Thoughtful portions of the public of all nationalities are now animatedly discussing the possibilities of Cuba's future form of government. The desire for annexation which has been carefully concealed for the past four years is now voiced openly, and the wish that the United States retain some measure of actual control in Cuban affairs is heard more insistenly than ever.

Representatives of the leading elements, both Cuban and foreign, have been asked to attend a meeting next Sunday to discuss the feasibility of holding some sort of plebiscite by which all classes of the population would be enabled to express their ideas on what the future form of government should be. One plan suggested is the formation into groups of the various foreign elements, each of which will formulate its own project of government.

The idea of holding the next elections in January has been entirely abandoned, the general preference among Cubans appearing to favor holding elections in June. The question of the status of congress, and whether senators and representatives are to receive their salaries after the establishment of the provisional government will be decided in Washington.

Reports of the disarmament operations show considerable delay and confusion but no real opposition. On the whole, the work is proceeding smoothly, and the only complication encountered was met and disposed of yesterday by Gen. Funston, assisted by Gen. Agramonte, of the disarmament commission. It appears that Gen. Asberts agreement to disarm and disband was conditional on the surrender and disarmament also of all the policemen in the town of Guines. Generals Funston and Agramonte went in an automobile to Guines to straighten out the matter.

Upon their arrival the mayor of Guines, Senor Ayala, absolutely refused to discharge the police. Gen. Funston declared that unless the mayor agreed to the conditions an armed force would be sent to disarm Asbert's army, which numbers 110 men, and that this would possibly result in bloodshed. Argument had no effect on the mayor until he was told that he could retain the police pay roll and reinstate his men after quiet had been restored.

Gen. Funston further suggested the sending of marines to police the town temporarily, and this plan was accepted. Generals Funston and Agramonte then visited Gen. Asbert at the village of Cottero, and found him agreeable to the compromise. Accordingly twenty-five marines will be sent to Guines to police the town, and to receive under the supervision of Gen. Agramonte the arms of Asbert's forces.

Gen. Asbert, like other rebel commanders, is particularly anxious that every man of his command lay down his arms. The reason is that these commanders aspire to and expect to be prominent factors in political control after the next election, and they do not desire the presence of large bodies of men who might rise against them should they be permitted to retain their arms. Asbert's men were moving in toward Guines today, and the actual surrender of arms probably will take place on Sunday.

While on their way from Havana to Guines, Generals Funston and Agramonte were halted by insurgent sentinels, who threatened to fire upon them in the belief that they belonged to the rural guard. The sentinels were profuse in their apologies when they learned who was in the automobile. The news that Gen. Funston was passing through spread throughout the section, and on the return trip to Havana, women along the route pelted Funston's automobile with flowers.

The rebels of Santiago province have joined the general disarming movement. The latest dispatch received by Governor Taft from Santiago, says that 700 rebels at Santiago, Guatanamo, and Baracoa, have laid down their arms.

Government officers mustered out yesterday afternoon, 400 of Pino Guerra's men who had been sent into Pinar Del Rio from Santiago De Las Vegas. This operation passed without incident.

Coincident with the occupation of the palace by Governor Taft the garrison of rural guardsmen which has been maintained there since the beginning o fthe trouble wase sent eleswhere. The palace now is guarded by only half a dozen policemen. The previous atmosphere of formality at the palace disappeared with the departure of President Palma.

The first claims for damages resulting from acts committed by the insurgents was presented to the provisional government by the French charge. Governor Taft told the charge to file his claims. The governor is considering the appointment of a bureau to adjust such matters.

CORRECTION BY ROCKEFELLER

Did Not Mean to Speak So Strongly of France.

New York, Oct. 5.—The attention of John D. Rockefeller was called to the following passage from the interview in the Cleveland Plain Dealer:

"The French people hate us, and they will crush us if they can. They want our money. They want the patronage of our tourists. But they hate us. They never let slip an opportunity to take quick advantage of our mistakes. This is a struggle for supremacy. We must win or they will, and there will be no quarter for us if they win."

After reading it over, he said:

"There is certainly a mistake with reference to the above statement attributed to me. I have no recollection of it. I cannot, of course, recall the exact words of a running conversation during a game of golf, but if the word 'hate' was used, it was rather in the sense of natural jealousy, not on the part of France alone, but of any European competitors of the United States, on account of our great industrial success in recent years. I cherish none but the most kindly feelings towards France, and have occasion to do so, especially for all the courteous attentions shown me by the French people during my recent visit there from the time of my arrival until my departure, and my expressions to them were only of the most friendly character on the part of the United States toward France for the kindness shown us in the past, and especially in our early history."

TO FIGHT FOR HIGHER WAGES

Eastern Masters and Mates Taking Steps to Force It.

Baltimore, Oct. 5.—Capt. Luther B. Dow, general counsel of the American Association of Masters and Pilots, and a member of the executive committee, announced yesterday that the fight for higher wages begun by the masters and mates of the Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic, and the Maryland, Virginia & Delaware railroads, would be pushed to a finish. Capt. Dow has mailed a protest to Collector of Customs Stone of this port against steamers plying the inland water of Chesapeake bay carrying but two mates, who with the captain are licensed as pilots. He pointed out that in event of fire or collision the law requlred that these men should be in the pilot house, which left no licensed masters to look after the passengers.

UNION MAKES CHANGE TO FAVOR WOOD LATHERS.

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 5.—The Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International union last night changed their rules to enable wood lathers to accept a lower wage in learning metal lathing. The union will require all members of New York unions not affiliated with the international to pay full initiation fees when they join local unions outside of that city. This is expected to force the independent bodies of New York to affiliate with the general organization.

PHOTOGRAPH LEADS TO A UNIQUE ROMANCE.

Berlin, Oct. 5.—A wealthy and handsome young man recently had his photograph taken, and as it proved to be a particularly artistic production the photographer obtained permission to exhibit it in his showcase.

Hearing soon afterward that his photograph was hanging next to that of a very pretty girl the young man had the curiosity to pass the studio and saw himself placed side by side with the young lady.

Struck with the beauty of his partner in the showcase he asked her name, and her father proved to be a wealthy lawyer. Means were found to bring the young couple together, and a day or two ago their engagement was announced.

COLLECTS INSURANCE.

Mercantile Company Recovers on an Assignment of Claim.

The Wright-Clarkson company yesterday obtained a judgement in district court for $163 in its suit against the Springfield Fire & Marine Insurance company. The case was heard by Judge Dibell and the company's case was presented by Attorney W. J. Stevenson.

The mercantile company obtained judgement under an assignment of an insurance claim against the defendant from J. W. Clark, a merchant of McGregor.

Clark gave a note of $225 to Harvey Wing, who sold it to the mercantile company. Clark had only paid $100 of the principal when his store was destroyed by fire. This involved a loss of $1,500, fully covered by insurance. He then assigned a part of the claim for insurance to the Wright-Clarkson company for the remainder of the note.

The insurance company settled with Clark but failed to pay the mercantile company its share.

EVELETH CASE IS DISMISSED

Long Litigation Over Waterworks System is Finally Ended.

A. M. Peterson failed to appear yesterday when his suit to restrain the city of Eveleth from paying to Dowling Bros., contractors, about $9,000 for the waterworks system of that city, was called and Judge Dibell dismissed the case. This ends the last chapter of the long litigation between the dissatisfied property owners and the city of Eeveleth over the waterworks construction.

A temporary injunction to restrain the city from paying the contractors last June was denied Peterson and from his failure to appear yesterday it is believed that he thought it would be of no avail to try to secure a permanent measure for the same purpose. Peterson was represented by Attorney N. B. Arnold of Eveleth.

It was claimed by Peterson that the contractors were not doing the work in the proper manner, that they had left long stretches of pipe uncovered and that the city had furnished more material than was needed.

Attorneys J. C. McGilver of Eveleth and H. B. Fryberger of this city represented the officials of Eveleth and maintained that the work had been properly conducted.

Site for Structure Not Chosen Yet—West End Gossip.

Members of the First Swedish Baptist church are making satisfactory progress in their canvass for funds for a new church.

At a fall festival held some time ago it was decided to go ahead with the preliminary arrangements for the erection of the new house of worship, and the work of collecting the necessary funds has begun.

It is probable that the young people and the Ladies Aid society will undertake some affairs in the near future, which are calculated to add something to the fund for the new structure.

It has not been decided yet whether to erect the new building on the site of the present one or on another lot which is the property of the congregation, and which is perhaps more centrally located in the West end.

Typhoid at Port Arthur.

Mrs. James Weldon of 1928 West Second street leaves today for Port Arthur to attend the funeral of her brother, Robert Stewart, who died there Wednesday.

Mr. Stewart's death was due to typhoid fever, and Mrs. Weldon learned that there were seventy-two cases of the disease there.

Plan to Erect Parsonage.

Members of Bethany Lutheran church are planning to erect a $5,000 home for their pastor at 2007 West Third street, which property is owned by the church. A meeting will be held Oct. 22, when this matter will be taken up and discussed.

C. L. Dimonson of Minneapolis is registered at the Esmond.

A temporary injunction to restrain the city from paying the contractors last June was denied Peterson and from his failure to appear yesterday it is believed that he thought it would be of no avail to try to secure a permanent measure for the same purpose. Peterson was represented by Attorney N. B. Arnold of Eveleth.

It was claimed by Peterson that the contractors were not doing the work in the proper manner, that they had left long stretches of pipe uncovered and that the city had furnished more material than was needed.

Attorneys J. C. McGilver of Eveleth and H. B. Fryberger of this city represented the officials of Eveleth and maintained that the work had been properly conducted.

COLLAR BONE BROKEN.

Capt. Nels Laen of the Tory Mine Is Assaulted.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 5.—Charged with assaulting Capt. Nels Lean of the Troy mine and breaking his collar bone with a three foot iron rod a half inch thick, Mike Viola admits the accusation, but claims as a defense that Laen has been in the habit of taking undue liberties with his wife and that on the night preceding the assault he pulled a chair out from under her and allowed her to fall on the floor. All the parties concerned live and work at the Troy mine.

Capt. Laen admitted at the hearing in municipal court that there had been a certain amount of familiarity between him and the woman. He denied that he pulled the chair from under her and said he knocked it out by accident. The affair occurred Monady night while Viola was underground. Next morning Viola waited in the blacksmith shop for the captain and as he approached the place rushed out and struck him with the iron rod.

CIGARS UNITED

¶ The UNITED Shield is a sign of the times—good times.

¶ Watch our window posters—they tell a little story every day.

ALL along the line we are selling cigars from a third to a half better than it is possible for you to obtain at the same prices in any other way—and these cigars are more uniform in quality and more dependable in character because produced under a system of most rigid inspection by manufacturers growing their own Havana tobacco on their own plantations.

There is but one rehandling between you and where the tobacco grows.

An excellent example of this superior quality—

The PALMA de CUBA CIGAR

(BOUQUET SIZE)

5 Cents Each. Box of 50, $2.50

It is an Havana filled and Havana wrapped Cigar, hand-rolled, made from good quality Cuban-grown tobacco—every sprig of it matured and mellowed by age. This cigar is the kind you have in mind when you want the best three-for-a-quarter cigar. Only 5 cents each by the United System.

TIMBER ON STATE LAND

Claimed to Have Been Cut by Big Lumber Companies.

Attorney General Young Begins Two Snits in District Court.

Attorney General Young filed complaints against two big lumber companies in district court this morning, in which it is alleged that certain state school lands in St. Louis county were entered upon during 1900 and 1901, and a quantity of timber taken away unlawfully.

One of the companies is the Rat Portage Lumber company of Canada, which is claimed to have wilfully trespassed upon state lands in St. Louis county in 1900 and 1901, and to have removed timber valued at $5,604, for which the state demands judgment to the full amount. The other defendant is the Lesure Lumber company of this city which is charged with having wilfully cut and removed timber valued at $5,649, for which sum the state demands judgment.

The cases will both be tried at the November term of the district court. R. R. Briggs will defend the Rat Portage company and W. H. Stanford the Lesure company.

TESTIFY FOR DEFENSE.

Witnesses Give Evidence in Standard Salt & Cement Company's Case.

In the trial of the Standard Salt & Cement company's suit against Edward C. Liedel and others for $1,835, W. A. Hunt, Carl Sandberg and Clarence Coleman testified this morning on behalf of the defendants. Mr. Coleman is a civil engineer in the employ of the United States government and it is a part of his business to inspect the piling of docks and warehouses. He stated that in his opinion the inspection of the warehouse in question a year ago should have disclosed any weakness.

The Standard company lost a quantity of cement some time ago because the floor of the warehouse which it had rented from the defendants had given way and evidence is now being taken to determine whether the owners of the warehouse are liable for the loss. The trial will probably be concluded today.

TO DIVIDE PROPERTY.

Suit is Brought to Settle Differences of Owners.

Judge Dibell, this morning, heard the evidence presented by both parties in the trial of the suit of Carl Ricci and others against Kate Toomey and others ,for the separation of certain property which the two hold in common. W. J. Stevenson is conducting the trial for the plaintiffs, while John Brown represents the defendants.

The property in question consists of one half of lots 8 and 10, on West Superior street, First division of Duluth, in which the two plaintiffs hold an interest by inheritance, as does likewise Mrs. Toomey, while the other defendants make their claim upon the property through a mortgage upon Mrs. Toomey's interest. It is alleged the property is worth $11,000, and the plaintiffs are seeking to have a division made. The following witnesses were examined this morning: L. Ayres, Whitney Wall, A. C. Volke and E. L. Toomey for the plaintiff, and Mrs. M. Hoar and R. H. Doran for the defendants.

HEAVY FROST IS EXPECTED

Weather Man Says It Will Come If Weather Clears.

If it should clear up tonight Forecaster Richardson says that Duluth may look for a severe frost, the heaviest so far this year, which is likely to do considerable damage to gardens unless protected by their owners.

This will be the first severe frost of the year, although there have been a number of light ones which have done some damage in low places. This is about the usual time for the first killing frost, as it is due during the first week in October.

FRANK PUTNAM IS NOMINEE

Recount at Ashland Makes Him Choice for Sheriff.

Ashland, Wis., Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—On a recount ordered by the court, Frank Putnam becomes the Republican nominee for sheriff of Rusk county, Wis. The first count gave Joseph H. Reed 451 votes to 448 for Putnam, and the latter asked for a recount. This recount lowered Putnam's vote 2 and Reed's 15, giving the former the nomination. It was discovered that votes on the National Republican and Social Democratic tickets had been wrongfully cast for Reed.

Look for It!

We have promist you something unusual in fancy ribbons for next week and you have never yet been disappointed in S. & B. promises. It's entirely original, too, and will rivet your attention on this store. It's not a mere sale, not a "demonstration," but "different" in every sense from anything you have ever seen before.

It's a genuine S. & B. Co. surprize. Sunday's paper will tell of it.

LOOK FOR IT!

Silberstein & Bondy Company.

If You Have a Daughter

And want her well drest, there's a big reason why you should bring her here tomorrow.

We are displaying beautiful new styles in S. & B. Co. Coats, which lead the Fashion world. There's none of that make-shift designing which marks the usual juvenile style—no skimping cut, no bag-like fit, no slighted workmanship.

No! Each coat carries the S. & B. Co. label and lives up to it.

We can offer you nothing better, and protect each purchase with a guarantee that covers everything.

We want you to see "what a difference" an S. & B. Coat makes—not in appearance merely, but in the wear that persists till the garment's outgrown.

CABINET WILL HOLD MEETING

Leaders of Boys' Department Will Organize for Year.

The boys who are to have charge of the activities in connection with the boy's department Y. M. C. A. will hold an organization meeting Saturday evening at 7:30.

The cabinet which is composed of the various chairmen and secretaries of the various committees, at their meeting a week ago, appointed the boys who were to assist them for this season. The meeting Saturday is for the purpose of getting acquainted and to talk over plans of work for the year. William Burris, chairman of the cabinet, will preside at the meeting, and refreshments will be served. The athletic committee will be in charge of Charles Bradley and Laurence Jaques; the Sunday club, William Burris and David Duncan; Bible study, Sargent McGonagle and Lyman Taylor; outing and clubs, Robert McGonagle and Harvard Rockwell; membership, Phil. Heinbach and Walter Newcomb; social and entertainment, Max Pulford, Arthur Dunning and Fred Cole.

The older boys' meeting this Sunday will combine with the men's meeting at the First Methodist church to hear Miss Ben O'Liel of Jerusalem. A special section will be reserved for the older boys. Boys under fifteen are not admitted.

The Knights of Sir Galahad will meet Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the gymnasium of the boys' department. M. W. Bates will speak.

INVESTIGATING THE ELEVATORS

Relations Between Them and Railroads Are Under Inquiry.

St. Paul, Oct. 5.—In accordance with a resolution passed by the United States senate through the efforts of Robert M. La Follette, directing the interstate commerce commission to make a thorough investigation of the relations the line elevator companies bear to the railroads, W. H. Taylor, a special representative, is now in the Twin Cities. Evidence was submitted to Senator La Follette by George S. Lottus to the effect that some of the railroad officials held positions as officers of the elevator companies, and by this means were able to secure better rates for the elevator company.

Mr. Tayler has been at work secretly in the Twin Cities for some days, and has accumulated a mass of evidence, and he may go to Duluth and Superior. The mission is a secret one, and no information as to the extent of the investigation contemplated by the commission is given. It is expected that the information gathered by the special agent of the commission will start an investigation as to the relations between railroad men and line elevator companies, similar to the investigation conducted by the commission in Pennsylvania, some months ago, when it was found that certain railroad officials were drawing large salaries as officers of coal companies, and that these companies were getting certain concessions from the railroads. Mr. Taylor was at one time secretary to Senator C. K. Davis.

FOOTBALL AT CASS LAKE.

High School Team to Meet Bemidji on Saturday.

Cass Lake, Minn., Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Cass Lake high school football team will play their first game Saturday when the husky gridiron warriors from the Bemidji high school will come here. The local boys have been practicing hard for the game and are determined to make the victory a glorious one. Although the Bemidji aggregation is composed of players of well known ability, nevertheless the Cass Lakers are confident of victory. Prof. Mielke, who has been coaching the boys, thinks he has a team that will make a mark on the gridiron during the coming fall. The following is the probable lineup for Saturday's game: R. E., Cummings; L. E., Thew; R. T., Goss; L. T., Boutang; R. G., Cain; L. G., Boutang; Center, Gilbert; R. H., Barton; L. H., Todd; F. B., Tompkins.

CONTROL HAS BEEN CHANGED

Certain That Wisconsin Central Has Passed Into New Hands.

Milwaukee, Oct. 5.—The following official announcement sent out by the executive committee of the Wisconsin Central road not only settled all controversy and rumor that the Central is to change hands, but it also points out clearly that this change has been sudden, and was decidedly unexpected. The notice issued by them, says the Evening Wisconsin, reads:

"'At the closing of the transfer books there was sent you for signature a form of proxy for use at the annual meeting, on Oct. 9. The holders of what it is believed would be a controlling interest in the preferred and common stock of the company have now requested a change in the management of the company, and your attorneys have, therefore, tendered their resignations as directors. In view of this, they deem it proper to return herewith the proxy signed by you.'

"This significant official notice, signed by the officials and directors mentioned, followed a request sent to the stockholders of the company, under the impression that there would be no change in the policy, directory or management of the road, at this time. Since sending out the request for proxies the change has come.

"The foregoing notices, of course, make it plain that President Whitcomb, Vice President Howard Morris and all other present elective officials of the road will retire at the annual meeting in this city next week."

TURPENTINE MEN ORGANIZE.

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 5.—The turpentine operators of Georgia met yesterday and formed an association. A wage scale was adopted. A penalty of $250 for violation of the wage scale will be imposed. W. G. Warnell of Hagan was elected president of the association, which will be allied with a similar organization of Florida operators.

Policemen Hold Shoot.

Officer Holstrom was the only member of the police force engaged in the weekly target practice, yesterday, that made a perfect score of fifty points. The averages, however, were very good. Patrolman Barber held second place at the practice with a score of forty-eight and Patrolman Gillon was third with a score of forty-six. Eight of the twenty-one men engaged in the shooting made scores better than forty and five scored better than thirty points.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Draper Student Charged With Perjury in Proving Up Claim.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Loring W. Jordan is being tried in the United States court on a perjury charge arising from making final proof on a homestead in the northern part of Williams county. Jordan, who is a graduate of Draper university of Des Moines, Iowa, and who formerly resided at Pleasantville, Iowa, came to North Dakota to grow up with the country and secured a claim in Williams county and a position with the Soo at Portal on the international boundary line. It is said he swore falsely regarding improvements and residence on his claim. He was one of the numerous persons indicted at the last session of the United States grand jury.

The position of deputy grand exalted ruler of the Elks of North Dakota has been given to Sheriff W. E. Hunt of Fargo. Mr. Hunt has been one of the leading officers of the local lodge and enthusiastic in his work for the organization in this state.

Grand Forks—At the Presbyterian church at 5 o'clock Wednesday evening, Thomas D. Campbell and Miss Bess McBride Bull, accomplished daughter of Mrs. Webster Merrifield, were married. Rev. Frank H. Hays of Chicago performed the ceremony. The church was filled with friends and relatives of the young people. A reception followed at the home of President and Mrs. Merrifield at the university. Mr. Campbell and his bride are both graduates of the university and have a wide circle of friends throughout the state. Mr. Campbell is manager of the Pembina Portland Cement company, operating mines in the Pembina mountains.

Frank Nelson and Mike Washington, who held up Richard Hawke and Gus Johnson in a Great Northern coach while at the passenger station here, were given a preliminary examination before Police Magistrate Church and held over to the district court on two counts. Bonds for the Hawke robbery were fixed at $1,000 each, and for the Johnson robbery at $500 each.

The board of aldermen of this city has been increased from twelve to fourteen members, by the creation of the seventh ward out of the second precinct of the second ward. At a special election E. J. Davidson and L. H. Stanness were elected members from the second ward and George H. Wilder and O. T. Ellestad from the seventh ward.

George Tomasek, who gives Chicago as his home, was arrested in East Grand Forks on a charge of maiming. In a free for all fight in Tabor township Tomasek almost chewed the ear off Arthur Arnold, who lives in Tabor. The men were both employed on a threshing rig there. Tomasek was given a preliminary hearing before Municipal Judge Sullivan and was held to the grand jury. In default of $500 bond he was taken to jail at Crookston.

Anton Rood was arrested at Manvel, this county, on a charge of selling liquor illegally and conducting a blind pig. He waived examination and furnished a bond of $500.

Bismarck.—Fire Wednesday night destroyed the Soo roundhouse and machine shops here, entailing a loss estimated by Superintendent Derrick at $100,000. The fire is supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion. The night crew was at work but so rapid was the spread of the flames that the men only had time to escape with their lives. One boilermaker was inside of an engine boiler and narrowly escaped being roasted to death. Three locomotives and a number of box cars also were burned.

Lidgerwood.—Martin Peterson, aged about 45 years, was instantly killed while going home with a load of wood. The front wheel struck a rut, throwing him to the ground and crushing his skull. He was a prosperous farmer, living about fifteen miles south of here. He leaves a wife and large family of children.

Grafton.—Sheriff Con Hankey, as he was driving his automobile into the town of Forest River at about 8:30 Wednesday evening, met with a serious accident. He ran into an open bridge and was thrown out, but escaped with only a few bruises. Henry Thomas, who was with him, sustained a bad fracture of the leg and may have received internal injuries.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls.—Sheriff John R. Pickett of Lyman county has just returned from Spokane, Wash., having in custody W. N. McFadden, a fugitive from Lyman county, apprehended at Spokane. A draft for $250 was sent from Chicago to a W. E. McFadden, who at the time was a resident of Presho, one of the important towns on the Chamberlain-Black Hills extension of the Milwaukee railroad. By mistake the letter was delivered to W. N. McFadden. Instead of returning the letter so the draft would reach the McFadden to whom it was intended W. N. McFadden went to Kennebec, another of the new towns on the railroad extension, and had the draft cashed.

Floyd Burves of Geddes while deeply interested in watching a game of baseball on the Sioux Falls grounds was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Hirsch on the charge of forgery. Burves was arrested on telegraphic instructions from the sheriff of Charles Mix county.

Yankton.—There are ardent believers in the Rooseveltian doctrine against race suicide in the neighborhood of Volin, a little town not far from here. Within ten miles of each other to the north and east of the town fourteen pairs of twins have arrived within the past six months. Three pairs came to bless various members of the Burke family, while others who have been similarly favored by the stork are the families of Messrs. Dixon, Wright, Dahl, Hillery, Hoxeng, A. Peterson, Ole Peterson, Snow, Sweely, Sloan, Lien and Hedner. All the twins are lusty and thriving youngsters and their parents are as proud as it is possible for parents to be. The citizens of Volin have set afoot a movement to have a group picture of the twenty-eight youngsters taken and forwarded to President Roosevelt as an evidence of the way in which South Dakotans respond to his wishes.

Chamberlain.—Clyde Whiting and Oliver Schroeder, employed by a railroad contractor about twenty-five miles west of Murdo, were blown to pieces by an explosion of dynamite which occurred while they were preparing breakfast. The men, who were employed on the dynamite gang, had taken several sticks of the explosive home to experiment with. One of them put a stick of the stuff in the kitchen stove to see if it would burn. It did not, but it blew the stove to fragments and incidentally scattered remnants of the experimenters in various directions.

Yankton.—Mrs. Mike Gallagher, wife of a farmer living south of here, is suffering from a bullet wound in the shoulder, and is reported to be in a critical condition. The wound was received in a controversy with a party of house movers, who wanted to camp on her farm and permit their horses to feed in her cornfield.

AGAINST REBATE EVIL.

Insurance Commissioners Adopt Strong Resolutions Against it.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The National Association of Insurance Commissioners yesterday adopted a resolution against the so-called rebate evil, from which it was stated the public had suffered even at the hands of some of the biggest companies. It was explained that many insurance companies run regular get-rich-quick schemes under the guise of offering enormous dividends that are wholly impossible of realization. It was shown that frequently some wealthy and influential man in a community is offered a secret or special contract, reducing the cost of the insurance to him on the promise that he will work for the ends of the company in his locality. It was reported that many people who take the chance of getting large dividends are induced to insure beyond their capacity to pay, but that these dividends which is was stated are really secret rebates, go to the richer members of the community who, it was alleged, do not need them.

An address of general interest was made by Carlos S. Hardy of Chicago, on "the future of fraternal insurance." Mr. Hardy is secretary of the supreme lodge of the endownment rank, K. of P. He says that unquestionably there was a necessity for raising the rates on fraternal insurance to meet the increasing charges upon it, and that this advance was the only way to assure the future of the fraternal benefit associations.

LATE DOINGS IN UPPER MICHIGAN

Indian Boy Killed by Picking Up Gun by Muzzle.

Sault Ste. Marie—Sammy Greensky, an Indian employed in Chase S. Osborn's camp as helper during the summer months, was accidentally shot and killed while hunting ducks. He is supposed to have drawn the gun toward him by takhold of the muzzle. His faithful dog led friends to the body, but details of the death will never be learned. Greensky was known to many of the wealthy people who spend their summers in St. Mary's valley.

Houghton—F. C. Toelle, who came to Houghton early in the year for the purpose of organizing a new brewing company, and who was instrumental in putting on its feet the Park Brewing company, which is building a plant in West Hancock, has gone to Duluth to take up a like plan in that city.

It is probable that the street cars will be running over the new East Houghton extension of the Houghton County Electric Street Railway company lines in the near future. Nearly all of the ties and track have been laid and the road has been ballasted. About all that is lacking now is the trolley wire.

An exploring party descended No. 3 shaft at the North Kearsarge mine yesterday and discovered the seat of the fire which began on Sept. 25. Operations of No. 3 will be resumed next Monday, as the volume of gas is light. The fire is extinguished in No. 1, but it is not known when it will be safe to enter the shaft.

Norway—The United States Steel corporation, which annually cuts many millions of feet of lumber for use in the underground workings of its various properties in Northern Michigan, has awarded a contract to Gustaf Freden, a logging jobber of Norway, calling for the cutting of 3,500,000 feet of timber and its delivery to the railroad right-of-way. The scene of this operation will be adjacent to the line of the Chicago & Northwestern, about seven miles west of Watersmeet. The timber is wanted for the Gogebic range mines of the company. It will be shipped to Ironwood. Four miles from Wakefield a second camp will be operated for the Steel corporttion.

Negaunee—Mrs. Harry Hulst went to Milwaukee early in the week to attend the marriage of her friend, Miss Katherine Combie, who is very well known here, to Lee W. Buckner, the ceremony having been performed Wednesday in Milwaukee. The bride visited Mrs. Hulst in this city a number of times during the past few years. Mrs. Hulst will be home Saturday.

Hancock—A mammoth electrical plant designed to furnish motive power for the operation of its mines and stamp mills on the South range, is planned by the Copper Range Consolidated Mining company. It will be located on the shores of Portage lake, and will represent an expenditure of something like half a million dollars. Engineers are now at work on the plans and it is expected that construction will be undertaken at an early date. The mines which is it proposed to run by the new plant are the Baltic, Trimountain, Champion and Globe and t he same changes will be made at the stamp mills at Freda, Beacon Hill and Redridge.

Iron Mountain—Guiseppe Deprosio, who is alleged to have fired a number of shots at Joseph Francis during an argument on Stephenson avenue, at Iron Mountain, a few Sundays ago, had an examination before Justice Woodward, the other day and was bound over to the circuit court. Deprosio alleged that Francis attacked him with a knife and he fired in self defense.

Miss Katherine Reardon, principal of the Washington school at Iron Mountain, who was called to her home in Oshkosh, on account of the sudden death of a sister, has suffered a still greater affliction, her father having died after an illness of a few hours. Both deaths were caused by heart disease and were shockingly sudden. The mother is also ill.

The annual appropriation ordinance enacted at a meeting of the Iron Mountain council provides for a total expenditure of $95,335. Of this total $33,775 is for schools and the balance, $61,560, for general city purposes. Of the later total it is estimated that $23,000 will be received from liquor license, leaving a balance of $38,560 to be raised by taxation.

CASSATT NOT VERY ILL.

Pennsylvania President's Condition Not Such as to Cause Alarm.

Philadelphia, Oct. 5.—Officials of the Pennsylvania railroad said today that there is absolutely no ground for the rumor that President Cassatt is seriously ill. He has been ailing since his return from Bar Harbor, first with whooping cough, which he contracted from a grandchild, and later with a severe cold, and has remained at his country home. On Wednesday he was out driving, and will go again today if the weather permits. He is expected to return to his desk in the Pennsylvania Railroad building, this city, within a few days.

A FORTUNE IS CACHED

Along the Railroad Between Cripple Creek and Florence, Col.

Train Robbers Planned to Divide It Years After Holdup.

Cripple Creek, Colo., Oct. 5.—Somewhere along the 100 miles of railroad which connects Cripple Creek and Florence, Colo., is cached a fortune of golden eagles. Among the rocks and bowlders lies hidden $59,000 in gold and it is very probable that it will never be found unless some lucky hunter by chance discovers the cache where is hidden the fortune.

In the summer of 1893 the money was taken from the safe of an express car by six masked train robbers. All of the robbers are now dead and there is nothing to mark the hiding place of their ill gotten wealth. The last of the robbers was a man by the name of Marks. On the day which he set forth to unearth the treasure, he died at his office in Cripple Creek from pneumonia. Marks and one other robber were the only men who knew the hiding place of the money.

They carried it in a canvess bay into the hills along the railroad tracks near the scene of the hold-up and buried it under the rocks while their four confederates held the trainmen and express messengers at bay with their rifles.

The robbers planned to allow the money to remain hidden for several years so that there could be no chance for their being discovered in passing it. After the hold-up the six men separated, going to different parts of the country. Marks and the man who had assisted him in burying the gold remained in Cripple Creek together. Each feared the other and they watched each other like hawks to guard against any attempt to obtain the money. After two years had elapsed Marks had become a real estate man and a lawyer. The other man had died a year after the hold-up.

The story of the hidden treasure is told by Mayor F. L. Baldwin of Youngstown, Ohio, who obtained it from a half breed Indian named Clark, while he was in Cripple Creek in 1897. No living person knew what had become of the stolen $59,000 at the time Mayor Baldwin obtained the story but Clark.

The robbers had selected the year of 1897 to unearth the money and divide it. They were all to meet in Cripple Creek on May 25, when Marks and the other man who knew the hiding place were to get the gold and there was to be a division. None of the robbers arrived at the meeting point on the day selected. Days passed into weeks and weeks into months and the train robbers did not arrive.

Marks was the only living man who knew the hiding place, and he knew that none of the other men had obtained the money.

He felt that he was being watched by the other four men constantly and he lived in constant terror for months. He believed that the other men must be dead and in October he decided that he would go and get the fortune himself. He needed someone to help him carry the gold and he told his story to Clark, who was a prospector at that time, reserving the important details and simply giving a general idea of the location of the hidden wealth.

A day was appointed. The men were to meet at the cabin of Marks, who lived alone, early one morning. When the morning came, with it came a light fall of snow. Marks feared that they would be followed and could be tracked in the snow. He would not consent to take the chance. His limbs quaked with terror when he seemed so near to obtaining the fortune which had been buried for four years. Clark described his terror as most abject. He thought that every man who looked at him and was a stranger was one of his robber confederates in the hold-up.

Another day was set when Marks and Clark were to go to the cache and obtain money. It was destined that the robber was not to reap the reward of his four years' vigil over the treasure, for the night before the day appointed when the money was to be unearthed Marks was found in his office dead.

Shortly after Marks' death Clark told the story to Mayor Baldwin, who at that time in Cripple Creek established as an attorney and enjoying the excitement of the early mining camp.

With the death of Marks also passed away the secret of the hiding place of the money, for he left no chart, no papers of any kind by which the fortune could be located, and the gold stolen from the express safe thirteen years ago still lies buried among the hills along the Florence & Cripple Creek railway.

MUNICIPAL CORSETS.

School for Stay-Making Founded by City of Paris.

Paris, Oct. 5.—Paris municipal councilors are looking for something new to municipalize. They are tired of gas, electricity, street cars, water, bread, milk, foods, wines and beer and corsets. Perhaps they will go in for dressmaking. Anyhow the councilors are very proud of their success in municipalizing corsets.

The corset is essentially an article de Paris. Last spring the city council decided to establish a school of corsets. Not much was made known about the concern, for it was largely an experiment. An establisnment was secured on the Rue Foudary and a municipal committee headed by M. Adolphe Cherloux was charged to superintend the operations of the school.

A professor was engaged and the school began business. It has been eminently successful, and a money-making venture. Puolicity is now given the affair because the professor is leaving and the city council must appoint another. There has been a great rush of applicants. The council has now decided to let a jury choose the professor. Applicants of both sexes will send in their qualifications with their model.

Five experts will judge the competition and appoint the best man or woman "professor de corset de la Ville."

EXODUS OF BOERS TO PLAINS OF ARGENTINA.

Johannesburg, Oct. 5.—For the last two years the Boer leaders have been vainly endeavoring to stem the tide of emigration to Argentina, especially on account of well-to-do farmers joining the movement.

According to private letters from Boer settlers, the Boer settlements are doing well, and are receiving every encouragement from the Argentine government. Churches and schools have been established, and the settlers are exempt from military service.

One account has it that the Boers were asked why they did not emigrate into the interior of Africa. The answer was that they feared an extension of British dominions to all parts of Africa, but that on account of the Monroe doctrine of the United States they felt safe in South America.

BECOMING NUISANCE

Small Boys With Slingshots and Guns Cause Much Trouble.

Authorities Asked to Take a Hand in the Matter.

An epidemic of sling-shots, pea shooters, air guns and 22-calibre rifles among the small boys of the city is causing the humane authorities and police department an endless amount of trouble. The humane authorities, especially, are overwhelmed with complaints about small boys who are using the weapons mentioned to kill small birds, and Humane Agent Withrow has been urged time and again to do what he can to put a stop to the practice.

Besides the unlawful practice of killing small birds the boys have been greatly endangering life and property by their careless handling of the slingshots and the rifles. An example of the danger from the rifles was demonstrated just a few days ago when a 12-year old boy residing in the hill district accidentally shot another boy about nine years of age, in the side. Numerous other narrow escapes from bullets from rifles in the hands of boys are said to have been reported to the authorities and the police have been urged to confiscate every rifle and air gun that they find in the hands of young and inexperienced boys.

Complaints have come from every part of the city of windows broken with stones and shots from the sling shots in the hands of boys. As a rule, it has been difficult to fix the blame as the boys run away and hide as soon as the damage is done. A number of irate property owners have threatened to make it exceedingly hot for the young miscreants that have broken their windows if they are able to find them, and trouble is being promised for the parents who permit their boys to use the weapons so promiscuously.

The crews on many of the street cars have been driven almost to desperation by youngsters who persist in making marks on the car windows, the motormen, the conductors, as the cars pass a corner where the boys have congregated for the purpose of harrassing the street railway men.

Humane Agent Withrow has been very energetic in his search among the boys, wherever he finds them, for sling shots and other throwing weapons and at the present time he has a collection of several bushels of sling shots at his home.

"The parents of many of these boys should be severely censured," says Mr. Withrow, "because they permit their sons to put life and property in jeopardy the way they are doing. Think of a mother who will purchase a rifle for a boy of 11 or 12 years to play with, simply to keep him at home and away from other influences which she says may be bad. I fail to see where she is doing the boy any benefit, especially when he uses the rifle and accidentally shoots a playmate. It is high time that the parents in Duluth take a hand in this matter and see to it that their boys are not permitted to have slingshots and rifles. Any parent who does so permits his boy to endanger the lives and property of others, and ought to be held responsible and should come in for some sort of punishment under the law."

Following is a letter which Humane Agent Withrow received from a lady at Tamarack, Minn., which aptly illustrates the situation as regards the boys shooting small birds:

"As an officer of the Humane society, perhaps you will render me a little assistance. I fear that the small boys in our neighborhood are wantonly killing all kinds of birds. What they cannot kill with guns—and nearly all of them have guns—they stone.

"Their parents do not sanction their destruction, but you know what boys will do with a gun when they are out of sight of home. The temptation is strong.

"Unless somebody takes this matter up they will never do differently. I think it is a shame, and that something ought to be done.

"When I say anything to the boys, they all deny it. They must be put on their honor. They must be interested in some way. Have you any literature on the subject, some bird buttons or something that we could use in the forming of a society? I can get the children together after school and talk to them. I think with a little something to do with, we can subdue the evil, as the boys are not really bad at heart, only thoughtless."

It has been suggested that the plan the lady from Tamarack proposes might be followed with some degree of success among the teachers in the local schools, now that they are in session, and the boys could become interested in the preservation of birds rather than in their destruction.

GHOST DIRECTS MINERS TO GOLD

Rich Find Said to be Due to Spirit Guidance.

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 4.—W. E. Bartlett and M. C. Black, well-known Seattle business men, have reached here after a perilous trip in the Cascade mountains, bringing with them a bottle filled with almost pure gold, which they say was taken from a lode hidden in the mountain fastnesses.

Bartlett is the grandson of D. E. Ingels, a miner who came to these parts in the early 50s and was murdered by his partner. The Bartlett family are spiritualists and Bartlett declares that his dead and murdered grandfather, through a Portland medium, sent him word bidding him find the mine. Bartlett declares positively that he received specific directions from the spirit of the grandfather how to proceed to discover the mine. He was commanded to select Black to accompany him on the expedition. The men will not tell the location of their find, but say that it cannot be reached save by making a dangerous trip and one filled with many hardships, especially at this time of year when winter already has set his icy grip upon the mountains. They say that in the spring they intend to return and develop their find.

In a rough and mountainous section, the men say they found a gray quartz ledge literally filled with the gold. Small pieces were broken off, pounded up in a frying pan and the gold picked out with the fingers and placed in the bottle. The gold brought here by the men was assayed and proved to be almost pure. If the ledge proves as rich as the samples a man with a small mortar and gold pan could clean up enough in a week's time to make him wealthy.

OCTOPUS LAUNCHED.

Watch Your Thirty Feet of Bowels!

YOU have thirty feet of Intestines! What makes food travel through them?

A set of Muscles that line the walls of these Intestines or Bowels.

When a piece of Food rubs the walls of the Intestines these Muscles tighten behind it, and thus it starts a Muscle-wave which drives it through the whole length of the Bowels.

It should take about 12 hours to do this properly, so that nutritious parts of the food may have time to be digested and absorbed.

* * *

But,—If it takes twice or three times that period the food spoils in passing, and becomes as poisonous as if it had decayed before being eaten.

Now, the cause of delay (Constipation) is simply Weakness, or Laziness of the Bowel-Muscles.

Want of Exercise, Indoor Employment, weakens these Bowel-Muscles, just as it weakens Arm and Leg Muscles.

"Physic" like Salts, Calomel, Jalap, Phosphate of Soda, Mineral Waters, simply flush-out the Bowels for the one occasion only.

They do not remove the Cause of Constipation.

But this is different with Cascarets.

Cascarets act on the Muscles of the Bowels and Intestines. They act just as Cold Water, or Exercise act on a Lazy man.

They act like exercise.

A Cascaret produces the same sort of Natural result that a Six Mile walk in the country would produce.

WILL NOT BE MADE PUBLIC.

Cassie Chadwick's Deposition Not For Public's Ear Just Yet.

Pittsburg, Oct. 4.—The deposition of Mrs. Cassie Chadwick, taken in the equity suit of Mrs. W. C. Jutte against James W. Friend and F. E. Hoffstot to restrain them from disposing of certain securities alleged to belong to the estate of Mr. Jutte, will not be made public at the present time.

Judge John D. Shafer, who has been trying the case, handed down an opinion today, ordering the prothonotary to seal up the deposition so that the statements made by Mrs. Chadwick in the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio, and said to affect the defendants, cannot be exposed to the public.

THIRTEEN SOON AVAILABLE.

That Number of Vessels Can Be Sent to Cuba Shortly.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Quartermaster General Humphrey of the army is exerting all his efforts to assemble as early as possible the fleet of transports at Newport News, Va., from which place the greater portion of the troops destined for Cuba are to sail. Thirteen vessels will be available for this purpose in a few days. It is expected, however, that within a week practically all the soldiers destined for Cuba and who are going by way of Newport News will have reached their rendezvous.

JAPAN ASKED BIG SUM.

Wanted Twelve Millions More Than Expected for Russian Prisoners.

Paris, Oct. 5.—The Temps yesterday printed a confidential report made by Minister of Finance Kokovsoff to Premier Stolypin, exposing the direst straights of the Russian treasury, the impossibility of concluding another exterior loan and the pressing necessity of cutting down expenses in the government departments and for resisting increases from all quarters, especially from the ministry of war which has just asked for an additional credit of $8,000,000. The report reveals the fact that Japan asked for $12,500,000 more for the maintenance of Russian prisoners than had originally been expected.

MAY NEVER LOCATE HIM

Person Who Shot Frank Miller May Never be Arrested.

Authorities Claim There is No Clue to Work On.

The chances of bringing to justice the pot hunter who shot Frank Miller, the homesteader now dying at St. Mary's hospital in this city, are considered very slim. Sheriff Bates says that so far as he can learn there is absolutely no clue on which to work; that Miller's condition is such he can give no account of the shooting; and it is not likely that the person who did the shooting and then fled like a coward from the spot, leaving the injured man bleeding on the ground, will ever come forward and declare himself.

Miller's homestead is some distance out of Hibbing and as a great many persons in that neighborhood carry guns and might have been out hunting, the fixing of the blame for the accident on any particular person would be impossible, it is claimed. In any event, unless Miller is able to state, before he dies, whom he saw in the neighborhood, if he saw anybody, the probabilities are that the person who fired the fatal shot will never be known.

Sheriff Bates said this morning that he would visit Miller at the hospital to see if there was any possible chance of his recovering consciousness enough to give any information. The sheriff expected to leave on the afternoon train for Hibbing, from which place he will drive out to Miller's homestead and make such investigation as he can.

At the hospital this morning it was stated that Miller might possibly live another twenty-four hour to thirty-six hours but that there was no hope for his recovery. The bullet struck him in the front of the body, pierced the intestines and came out close to the spinal column.

EMPEROR LIVES IN FEAR OF LIFE

Extraordinary Measures to Keep Assassins Out of Peterhof.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 5.—The emperor and the members of the imperial family, who have been cruising in Finnish waters on board the yacht Standard, returned to Peterhof last evening. The emperor will move almost immediately to his winter residence at Tsarskoe Selo.

Warned by the immunity in which Zenaide Konoplianikovo resided at Peterhof for months prior to her assassination of Gen. Min, on Aug. 26, the police are verifying the passports of all doubtful persons in the vicinity of Tsarskoe Selo, and a most strict supervision of all strangers arriving there has been instituted.

The capture of bombs here yesterday is regarded as of the utmost importance, as it revealed, and apparently frustrated, the designs of the revolutionists to convert St. Petersburg into a second Warsaw. Enough explosives to annihilate an entire regiment were seized. A band of Polish experts came here recently for the purpose of instructing the local terrorists how to use this material.

The throwing of a bomb yesterday at Gen. Starynkewisch, governor of Simbirsk, is described here as the act of irresponsible local revolutionists, anxious to strike a blow at authority in general, and not the result of a decree of the terrorist organization.

EVIDENCE NOT ENOUGH.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 5.—Laura Adams and Harry Morgan, colored, who were arrested here on complaint of the Portland and Chicago police, on a charge of robbing Anton Fritz, an Eastern tourist, of $9,000, and of conspiracy to murder him in Chicago, were discharged in the district court, yesterday, on the ground of insufficient evidence against them.

CAN'T STOP TALKING.

Farmer Talks Grape-Nuts to All His Friends.

The average farmer is nobody's fool. It takes a pretty level head to run a farm, and the more carefully he thinks the more successful he is. A Mo. farmer writes:

"I want to say something about Grape-Nuts as a food, but as I am just a common old farmer, I can't put it as strong as I would like to.

"But I would love for all the world to know (that don't already know) about the merit of Grape-Nuts food. It has done me and my family more good in the way of bringing about good health, adjusting our systems, purifying our blood and keeping our stomachs in good order than all the medicines we have ever taken.

"My little boy was pale and slim, did not have much appetite until we began the use of Grape-Nuts about a year ago. Now he is robust and hearty, eats Grape-Nuts every day and enjoys perfect health.

"I have prevailed upon my neighbors to try Grape-Nnuts and it is astonishing, the results. I would not be without it if I had to pay $1.00 a package.

"A year ago I read about it and had my grocer order some. I bought most of it and soon saw the benefits from it and then began to talk Grape-Nuts to every one. Now I don't know how many packages the grocer sells each week, but he keeps nearly everybody around here supplied.

"Now you can publish this if you want to or do as you please, but you can't keep me from talking about Grape-Nuts, for there is no equal to it anywhere." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

INCREASES IN HORROR

Fifty Lives May be Lost in Pocahontas Mine Disaster.

Members of Rescuing Party Overcome by Deadly Gases.

Pocahontas, W. Va., Oct. 5.—Nineteen known dead and from thirty to forty more men entombed and doubtless all dead was the situation up to a late hour last night at the West Fork mines of the Pocahontas Collieries company, where the explosion occurred late Wednesday afternoon. The dead: John Oldham and Ed Brown of rescuing party, B. Cook, Hall Richards, W. C. Kelly, Henry Green, George Radford, J. Ad Dancy, John Davis, John Cumbee, Paul Valsko, Joe Elash, Bertie Estony. Negroes: Henry Ward, Dick Moonan, Lightburn Woody, Ben Peery, John Green.

The bodies of these men were recovered from the mines as the result of the heroic work of a band of thirty-five men constituting a rescue party that worked incessantly through the hours of the night and day. It was not until 7:30 o'clock last evening that rescuers reached a point nearest Paul entry, where the explosion occurred. The work of rescue was very slow as the conditions confronting the party were difficult to surmount. Toward the middle of the evening the hope was expressed that all the bodies would be recovered by midnight.

The authorities anticipated the fearful extent of the casualties yesterday by ordering a carload of coffins and burial supplies, which are now on the way. The order is being rushed at Bluefield and the burial supplies, which include sixty coffins, are expected to reach Pocahontas quickly.

Superintendent W. Leckie of the mine, who entered as one of the rescuing party, had a narrow escape. He was overcome by the fumes and had to be carried out. Edward Jones, the inside mine foreman, led the first rescue party and when that party failed to return in a reasonable time a second rescue party under Superintendent Leckie followed. John Oldham and Ed Brown were overcome by gas and died and Leckie barely escaped with his life. Then the third party was formed and continued the work.

Meantime the first party had reached another entrance to the mine in safety and sent word over the mountain announcing that fact. All this time the work of rescue was being effectively carried on. Some confusion was caused in determining the exact number of men entombed, by the fact that when the explosion occurred an exchange of shifts was in progress, added to which was the fact that a number of the men escaped through the Tug Fork entrance. The scenes around the mine are pitiful. Relatives and friends gathered in groups at the entrances and elsewhere awaiting tidings of the victims and gave vent to their grief as the bodies one by one were brought out.

S. B. Cook, one of the victims, whose body was found within 300 feet of the outside of the mine, was the only survivor of the big explosion in the Pocahontas mines in 1884. Yesterday's explosion piled up timbers and dirt to the height of six feet.

Parties coming to work from the Tug River on the West Virginia side of the mines, did not know there had been any trouble in the mines until they ran into some bodies on the tracks, and some mules dead with a man pinned between them.

While the force of the explosion was terrific, the foremen who were at the mine offices did not know there had been any trouble until the men and mules failed to come out at the time for quitting work. No report of the explosion was heard on the outside of the mines.

At 6:15 o'clock last evening a member of the party headed by Superintendent Leckie came out of the mine and state that they had reached the St. Paul entry and had found eighteen bodies, some of them being horribly mutilated by the force of the explosion. Will Davis' body was found near the drum. While his body was being brought out a crowd of several thousand people were congregated near the drift mouth. The men who escaped from the Tug river side of the mine failed to come to the office and report, adding to the difficulties of the company in determing how many were in the mine at the time of the explosion.

S. B. Cook, the first miner to be taken out, crawled over 100 yards from the point where his bucket was found, and had almost escaped.

The old Pocahontas wholesale grocery company warehouse has been converted into a temporary morgue, where the bodies are being taken.

John Odham, one of the men who lost his life while attempting the rescue of the Ed Jones party which they thought was in the mine, is a brother of the Odham who lost his life in 1901, when the party of inspectors, headed by Walter O'Malley was caught in the Baby mine and overcome by after damp.

The West mine has over 700 acres "worked out," or abandoned workings. This fact alone made it difficult for the men to get to the part of the mine where the explosion occurred. All the practices in these old workings had been blown out. The scene of the disaster is over two miles from the drift mouth.

In the operation of the telephone system of the mine, a number of boys are employed and the greater part of these are said to have met death by the explosion or were caught by the after damp. It is said that shortly after the explosion one of the boys called to the office outside, but was overcome before he gave his message. The boy probably died at the telephone.

Quite a number of women were gathered around the drift mouth yesterday. Some had children in their arms. It is said at the mines that such disasters as this usually occur in damp weather like that of the past few days. A peculiarity of this explosion is the mystery surrounding its cause. The mine is not on fire.

The first rescue party was composed of Ed Jones, inside mine foreman, Tom Neff, mine foreman, K. W. C. Warbertin, mine foreman, and Walter Poe, driving boss. These men went entirely through the mines and came out on the Tug river side. All these men came back over the hill, not attempting to return through the corridors of the mine. About three hours after they went in those on the outside became uneasy as to the result of their efforts and the second party, composed of William Leckie, superintendent, W. L. Talbot, master mechanic, John Oldham, engineer, and James Brown, a miner, started in search of the missing party. It was when the second party reached the Rhode Island entry that the two laborers, Oldham and Brown, were overcome and Talbott was seriously affected. Talbott started back and got as far as what is known as the Norton telephone and called for help, but when aid reached him it was found that he was overcome. Leckie, the remaining member of the party, turned back and reached the outside, seriously affected by the bad air. Leckie asked Brown and Oldham to return with him to the outside, but they were bent on finding the first party, whom they supposed were still in the mine and consequently lost their lives. George G. Udosh and John Litchford went in and brought out Oldham and Brown, and also found Talbott in an unconscious condition. All efforts to resuscitate Brown and Oldham proved futile.

S. B. Cook, one of the victims, is the father of John Cook, an engineer of Bluefield, who pulled the special train with supplies from Bluefield to Pocahontas Wednesday night, when news of the disaster reached Bluefield.

At least forty coffins reached Pocahontas last night, consigned to the Pocahontas Collieries company. As the company maintains an undertaking establishment and carries a full line of coffins, this is taken to indicate that the company expects the death list will exceed half a hundred.

Up to midnight last night, the exact number of men who were in the mine was not known. About a score of mules were killed. There were no evidences of fire in the mine up to a late hour. The Norfolk & Western railroad superintendent at Bluefield late last night wired a report to the general offices of the company at Roanoke that the information he had was that the death list may exceed thirty and that it was hoped that all the bodies would be taken out by today. This estimate of the number of dead, however, is believed to be too low and based on the situation as it appeared earlier in the evening.

EIGHT HOUR DAY.

Railway Mail Association Declares for it and Will Ask Ruling.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—Declaring that eight hours composes a day's work, the American Railway Mail association, at its closing session here last night, adopted a resolution asking the postoffice for a ruling on the question. The association also adopted a resolution commending the Harriman system of railroads for its postal car service.

Officers were elected as follows: President, D. E. Barnes, re-elected; vice president, John Hogan, Atlanta.; secretary-treasurer, George A. Wood, Portsmouth, N. H.

The women's auxiliary of the association also closed its annual convention with the election of these officers: President, Mrs. E. L. Parrish, Detroit; vice presidents, Mrs. S. L. Brown, Dennison, Tex., and Mrs. W. C. Mulford, Cheyenne, Wyo.; secretary, Mrs. C. H. Verity, Cleveland; recording secretary, Mrs. C. E. Crane, Syracuse, N. Y.; treasurer, Mrs. Gilbert H. Worley, Omaha.

Fort Worth, Tex., was chosen by both organizations as the meeting place in 1907.

SLIPPED UNDER WIFE'S SKIRT

How a Notorious Criminal Escaped From Jail in Indiana.

Winchester, Ind., Oct. 5.—Trembling and bent with age, Madison Shockley, perhaps the most noted common thief Indiana has ever produced, is once again within the walls of the Michigan City prison, from which he probably will never emerge alive. Shockley is now 70 years old, and his health is broken.

Shockley's record is a remarkable one. He has just started his sixth term of penal servitude. He has escaped from prison three times and in various counties in the state has slipped from the county jails as though he had a key.

No jailer ever felt safe until he saw Shockley on the way to prison, and then the troubles of the prison officials began.

One of the most unique and remarkable escapes on record was that of Shockley from the Randolph county bastile, during the Civil war, when Shockley made his way to freedom, concealed beneath his wife's skirts.

Shockley was in his prime then and was as agile as an acrobat. As usual, Shockley was in the jail, an old log structure at that time, on a charge of larceny. One afternoon his wife, weeping over her husband's imprisonment, called at the jail.

As was the fashion of the time, she wore a spacious crinoline skirt. Mrs. Shockley remained but a few moments when she left, still weeping and walking slowly. Beneath the bell-shaped skirt was the prisoner, walking on his hands and knees. When the sheriff went to give the prisoners their evening meal he discovered Shockley's absence.

Shockley was first sent to Michigan City for four years in 1861. He escaped in August, 1862, and was retaken in March, 1864. In 1867 he was sent up as Daniel Rice for a term of seven years, but escaped from the prison in November of that year. He was retaken, however, in the following June. He was sentenced on a burglary charge from Miami county again in 1874. In 1881 he was convicted for a fourth time, in Winchester. He received an eight year sentence in 1890 and escaped in August, 1892, only to be retaken a few months later.

He was convicted here recently for the sixth time on a charge of house robbing, and on account of his enfeebled condition this probably will be his last term. His spirit is as daring as of old, however, for during his stay in the jail here this summer he made two unsuccessful efforts to get away.

Shockley often went under the aliases of Daniel Rice and Solomon Hunt. His forte has always been larceny, and he probably has a longer record in this line than any other criminal in the state.

MERRY CHORUS GIRLS ASKED TO LEAVE HOTEL.

St. Louis, Oct. 5.—An invitation to leave the Southern hotel was received by two chorus girls who were playing at a local theater last week, as a sequel to a cold-bottle engagement which was concluded by the incantation of songs in the early morning hours which so disturbed guests that they demanded that the hotel management give the girls short notice.

The young women chose 3 o'clock for the repetition of some of the songs that win them applause before the footlights.

The frame of mind of the guests did not harmonize with the desires of the chorus members, and the night clerk was appealed to.

QUESADA WILL REMAIN AT POST

Accedes to Request to Continue as Cuban Minister.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The text of the letter written by Senor Quesada, Cuban minister to this country, to Secretary Taft, in which he announces that he will remain at his post here as the diplomatic representative of Cuba, was made public last night. Mr. Quesada, having tendered his resignation upon the intervention in Cuba by the United States, was appealed to by Secretary Root, who addressed a letter to him, embodying a request from Secretary Taft and Assistant Secretary Bacon, as well as making a request himself, that Mr. Quesada remain. Mr. Quesada's reply, dated Oct. 3, follows:

"My Dear Mr. Root—I am in receipt of your letter of Oct. 1, transmitting the dispatch sent from Havana to the state department by Mr. Bacon, in which the honorable secretary of war of the United States, provisional governor of Cuba, hopes that I will not resign my position of minister of the republic of Cuba in Washington; states that my services will be of value to Cuba in this great crisis, and feels sure that I will be willing to render assistance in the restoration of my country to her constitutional government, in which letter you add your own personal and eloquent request for me to contribute to the accomplishment of the preservation of Cuban independence.

"Those kind and lofty words have the same inspiring ring of Americanism and fair play as the generous and historical message written to me by that true American, President Roosevelt, on the 14th of last month, wherein he advised the Cuban patriots to hang together and sink their differences, thus assuring the permanent success of Cuba as a republic. Such declarations cannot fail to sustain my hopeful courage, and to confirm my belief in the future of my country, in her liberty, her independence and her capacity for self-government, and in the right of her heroic ones to all those blessings, supported by such staunch and real friends and well wishers as the American people, and the earnest efforts of men like the president and yourself, who helped Cuba when in need and created her a sovereign nation.

"I never doubted for an instant, as you have so timely said, that under the Cuban constitution, and under the treaty by virtue of which the United States is now acting, you intervene but for the 'preservation of Cuban independence.' I am convinced that the American people are not covetous of us; only feel sympathetic concerning our sufferings, and are not anxious for our downfall. I, as well as my people, trust the American administration in this sad hour of Cuba's history. I am convinced that the United States will do what is right by Cuba.

"Your American patriotism has appealed to my Cuban patriotism, and confident as I am that Cuba will come out of this severe trial stronger, and the United States with still greater glory, by her just and unselfish durance and aid, I shall remain in my post while I can serve Cuba, and while I can assist in promoting her relations of confidence and mutual trust with her sponsor before the world, the United States of America.

"For myself, Mr. Secretary, and for the people of Cuba, I thank you for your cordial letter; it is the honest voice, the noble pledge of the great American nation. Faithfully yours,

"GONZALES DE QUESADA."

CRASHES INTO PULLMAN CARS

Military Special Wrecks Passenger Train and Kills Five.

Lansingburgh, N. Y., Oct. 5.—Five passengers were killed outright and a score were injured in a rear-end collision between a regular passenger train and a military special, on the Boston & Maine railroad, directly in front of the Lansingburgh depot, north of Troy, about 5 o'clock yesterday. The dead:

F. L. BLOCK, Peoria, Ill.
MRS. WALLACE E. SHAW, Bath, Me.
MRS. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.
MRS. J. W. DACEY, Arlington, Mass.
MRS. H. S. POOLE, Concord, N. F.

Among those most seriously injured were: W. Van Fassett and wife, Boston; Frank Belcher, Medford, Mass.; George D. Stevens, Winchester, Mass.; Miss Manson, Bath, Me.; Miss Virginia Manson, William Seymour, Kenton, Ohio; Mrs. F. L. Block, Peoria, Ill.; Miss Mason, Bath, Me.

The passenger train was one that leaves Boston daily at 9:30 a. m. for Albany. It consisted of five cars, a baggage car, smoker, day coach and two parlor cars, and was about one hour late when it reached Lansingburgh station, waiting there for a chance to get into the Troy depot.

Without apparently any warning, the "special" came thundering along with eighteen cars and crashed into the passenger train, smashing the last two cars, which were Pullmans, like egg shells. Both cars were swept from the track and rolled down the embankment. The engine of the special kept on for a dozen yards, and then turned turtle, the front end ploughing into the ground and the car behind being telescoped by the tender.

The special was drawing four troops of the Fourteenth United States cavalry, from Fort Ethan to Newport News, where they were to embark for Cuba. The soldiers quickly got to work to rescue the injured. In a comparatively short time most of those pinned down by the wreckage were on their way to the Leonard hospital, near the scene of the wreck.

One man's grief pas pitiable. His name was J. W. Dacey, and he ran up and down the track crying for his wife. In a few minutes her lifeless form was identified. They had been married the night before at Arlington, Mass., and were on their honeymoon, having planned an extended trip.

Engineer Thomas Holleran of the special, who lives in Troy, immediately surrendered himself to the police. He was locked up, and would make no statement. His fireman, whose name is said to be F. A. Brown of Mechanicsville, could not be found last night. The conductor of the special was J. Collins of Lansingburgh.

Lieut. Col. Hardie, in command of the cavalrymen, established martial law in the vicinity of the wreck, and the troopers aided the local police in keeping order.

All of the dead, as far as can be learned, were taken from the two Pullmans, one of which was also used as a sleeping car.

The special was made up of seven Pullmans and eleven horse cars, the latter being in front of the train, directly behind the wrecked engine. There were four troops of cavalry, or about 350 men, and 400 horses.

It's hateful to have to say it but there are shoes made that wouldn't fit a Hottentot.

You wouldn't want shoes like that, of course.

Neither would you wish to wear shoes that would fit a Hottentot. For then they wouldn't fit you.

Every race or section has its peculiar type of foot.

Gotzian Shoes are made after studying for fifty years the Northwestern type of foot.

With ample regard for comfort and wearing quality and honest workmanship—not forgetting style—they are made to suit the type of feet which the big Northwest develops.

METHODIST CONFERENCE

Semi-Centennial Service at Central Park Church, in St. Paul.

Stirring Address by Dr. Long on Duties of Preachers.

Minneapolis, Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Northern Minnesota Methodist Episcopal conference went to St. Paul today to join with the other conference in a union semi-centennial service at Central Park church.

At the Northern Minnesota conference the conference corporation was made a committee to considered the interests of the superannuated fund and report to the conference. F. L. Thompson and J. B. Hingeley and Robert Forbes were appointed a committee to carry sympathies of the conference to Dr. Chaffee, who was sick at his home. Dr. Stewart was appointed a committee to carry greeting to the association of the Congregational churches.

The conference board on deaconesses was appointed as follows: Mrs. I. W. Joyce, Mrs. F. A. Chamberlain, Mrs. G. F. Strait, Reverends S. P. Long, F. L. Thompson, W. H. Gordon, T. W. Stout, E. H. Nicholson and J. B. Hingeley.

William E. Loomis and J. H. Stuntz have died during the year. A committee in charge of the pilgrimage to the grave of Bishop I. W. Joyce was formed consisting of F. L. Thompson, L. T. Guild and J. S. Montgomery.

The following brethren were introduced to the conference by Bishop Wilson, Reverends M. Benson, J. M. Benson and G M Reynolds, James Sanaker of the Norweglan Danish conference; Dr. S. A. Danford of the North Dakota conference; J. A. Palmer of the Anti-Saloon league; Frank Pequette and J. H. Martin of the Indian Mission.

S. S. Tincher and J. H. Dennison were transferred to the conference and have already been in active work.

Rev. Dr. Boswell of the board of church extensionfi made a very fine address on the most efficient work to a very large audience of pastors and laymen.

A Bible lecture was given at 4 o'clock yesterday by the Rev. J. R. Davies. The meeting at night in the church was packed to hear the addresses of Rev. Dr. Robert Forbes and Rev. Dr. J. B. Hingley on the superannuate fund. There was special music by the Hennepin Avenue church choir.

Dr. H. C. Jennings, agent of the Methodist book concern, declared for the open shop in Methodist printing works, and he was loudly applauded by the preachers yesterday. "Any man, either in or out of the union, can work for us, if he can do the work," said Dr. Jennings. An eight-hour day will be recognized in all Methodist printing and publishing houses after Nov. 1, and they will be open shops.

Several superannuated preachers addressed the conference, including Dr. D. J. Higgins of California, 89 years of age, J. L. Taylor, L. D. Brown and Noah Lathrop.

The Women's Foreign Missionary society held its annual meeting, Mrs. W. A. Landis presiding. Mrs. I. W. Joyce read the scripture. The conference secretary and treasurer read their reports. The treasurer reported $5,405.16 raised for missions. Rev. W. H. Easton gave a lecture on the first and second chapters of Galatians.

Bishop Oldham addressed the conference on India, Malaysia and the Philippine islands. Bishop Oldham has been a most successful missionary worker and bishop. In Madras they have over 1,200 native Christians. In the West Indies great poverty existed and the native Christian scould spare little money for churches. A large subscription was given to the work.

The Home Missionary society held its annual meeting in Wesley church and Miss Nellie Snyder of Ohio gave some interesting facts. The work among the Finns is enlarging, and in Minnesota alone there are 18,000 Finns. Mr. R. J. Taylor of Eveleth told of the work being done among this class which was successful and deeply appreciated on the iron range and at Split Rock. Mrs. F. F. Stafford reported an increase of $500 this year over cost. Minneapolis district raised $2,246; Litchfield, $458; Duluth, $416, and Crookston district, $173, a total of $3,447. Miss Jennings of Ohio, national secretary of supplies, stated that some 67,000 garments had been distributed in sixty-five conferences. Miss Della Geggie and Mrs. E. C. Clemans of Duluth welcomed the delegates. Mrs. Geggie, Mrs. Kent and Miss Van Marter spoke at the young people's hour.

Prof. G. Innis presented a statement to the conference regarding Hamline university. The receipts from April, 1905, to the end of April, 1906, were $41,-625.62 and the disbursements were $42,255.88. The university is now free from debt. To enable it to keep out of debt, and keep abreast of the times, the university's friends will for some time need to contribute to contribute some thousands of dollars a year to its income. The recent additions to the faculty, and the enlarging scope of the university's work, will naturally increase the expenses. The need of a larger library, and of safer and more commodious quarters for it, induced the trustees last winter to authorize President Bridgman to undertake the task of securing the money to build a new library building. He secured from Andrew Carnegie a pledge of $50,000 to build a library building, provided the trustees would raise a special endowment of like amount for the purchase of books and the maintenance and up-keep of the library. President Bridgman at once undertook the task of raising the extra $50,000 and has succeeded, so that the new library building and a greatly enlarged library are assured.

One of the chief events of the conference was a rousing and aggressive report from Dr. S. P. Long of the Minneapolis district. Dr. Long reporetd that about $200,000 had been subscribed for new Methodist church buildings in Minneapolis. He then continued to say: "Our ministers should pay less attention in their pulpits to doctrinal decision and more to building up the Christian character and the salvation of their listeners. They should pay more attention to gathering men and bringing them into the church of Christ. There is too much working over old material in your churches. Get out into the highway instead of everlastingly trying to go through a blind alley. The care of young girls of the church should not be turned over to such nursemaids as the Young Women's Christian association. Let the church care for its own youth. The church should plan and work until the Methodist church is able to take care of its own young people without the assistance of other denominations. The salary of the average minister is shamefully low. I am surprised that so many young men are in the ministry. It requires far more grace than it did years ago to enter the ministry. Expenses are much higher for living, with the remuneration little if any better than years ago."

Rev. Dr. Dodds of the Crookston district said of his district: "The Epworth Leagues, the churches and the Sunday schools were never better organized than now for efficient work all over the territory. The benevolent causes have received thoughtful and careful attention from the pastors and churches on their apportionments. There will be a handsome increase of benevolences on all lines, and the missionary offering will exceed that of last year by over $400. The salaries of the pastors have not been reduced on the district by any of the quarterly conferences, but in many instances increased, and all paid in full with scarcely an exception. However, the support of the pastors in the district has been by far too small, for not a circuit should pay less than $500 to its preacher. The people feel that, too. But how are we to accomplish our wish and the people's desire? By patiently and persistently making it possible by showing ourselves worthy of it and creating the conditions favorable to it, by making the church through our efficient toil and the gathering of souls from sin into the fold, strengthen the membership for that coveted blessing so badly needed.

"We have reason to be encouraged touching the spiritual condition of the churches. Gracious revivals were held in many of our charges with splendid results. The most notable were Verndale, Duane, Wadena, Detroit, Crookston, Hewitt, Bemidji, Frazee, Moorhead and Clifford. Many other charges held special meetings with less results in membership. But few charges have failed to increase their numerical strength. The net increase of membership for the year will exceed 250, notwithstanding a steady exodus from our ranks of fully that number who have gone West or to Canada for new homes and church fellowship in other localities. Rev. C. W. B. Ellis, conference evangelist, has done good work in our district, and rendered very efficient service for an Eastern conference, where many were converted and united with the church. Carl B. Alexander did us excellent service in the district, and is a worthy and efficient evangelist. Many were converted to Christ and became members of our church under his leadership. The Woman's Foreign Missionary society has had a steady growth during the year and has raised $341 for missions, over $300 more than they paid six years ago. The Woman's Home Missionary society has been very helpful to our needy pastors, and to people in distress over the new territory of our district. Their benevolent deeds will never be forgotten in many homes of this country.

"We have advanced from thirty-three charges originally to fifty-eight at the present and from a membership of 1,856 including probationers, to over 3,300, and from 2,163 Sunday school scholars to nearly 6,000, and an Epworth league force of less than 300 to over 1,000, and a Junior league, but an infant, to over 950 juniors, and all other benevolences have advanced equally as well; and from a valuation of church property of $55,500 to over $150,000, and a pastoral support, including parsonages and rentals, of $10,500, to over $24,000, notwithstanding the fact that we have enjoyed a steady growth along all lines of church work we regret very much that we could not accomplish all we had planned for, and hoped to do for Methodism in our territory. There are a few other places in the district where houses of worship are needed that we had hoped to erect."

CAR COMPANY GETS VERDICT

Jury Decides in Their Favor in Arseneau Damage Suit.

After having deliberated upon the case for nearly twenty-four hours, the jury in the Arseneau damage suit returned a verdict late yesterday afternoon in favor of the defendants, the Duluth Street Railway company. The case was instituted by Mrs. Margaret Arseneau in behalf of her son, Bertford, who lost his right leg a year ago while riding on a street car in West Duluth. Mrs. Arseneau sued for $30,000.

It was claimed by Mrs. Arseneau and her attorneys that the boy was hurt through the act of a motorman who, they claimed, had kicked the boy violently, causing him to lose his balance and fall under the wheels of the car. The company denied this, however, and introduced several witnesses to prove the falsity of the allegation.

John Jenswold conducted the case for Mrs. Arseneau, while the street car company was defended by Thomas Wood.

COLE'S CLAIMS ANALYZED.

A. L. Cole, candidate for governor, makes certain claims for himself and advances them as reasons why he should be elected governor next month.

Closely analyzed, they group themselves under the three following heads:

1. The fact that he is a Republican and has the Republican nomination.
2. His legislative record.
3. His promises of what he will do if he is elected.

It is true that Mr. Cole is a Republican—at present. He has been a Populist and a Democrat, but he is a Republican now. It is no discredit to him to have been a Populist; the Populists, whatever else they may have been, were earnest and loved their country well. It is no discredit to him to have been a Democrat; many high minded pariots are Democrats. But his frequent changes prove a lack of that balance which is essential in a man whom the people would place in so responsible a position as that of governor. It is true, also, that Mr. Cole has the Republican nomination for governor. He got it, as every man knows, because the interests feared Jacobson, the man who was clearly the choice of the rank and file of the party, and because, headed by Thomas H. Shevlin and his Minneapolis delegation, a stampede was started to Cole in order to beat Jacobson. They were successful in that, and therefore Mr. Cole was successful in his quest of the nomination.

As to Mr. Cole's legislative record, he has done good work for Northern Minnesota, it is true, but there are other members who did as much, and his ideas all came, as The Herald has shown, from Governor Johnson's message to the legislature at the beginning of the 1905 session. In the 1903 session Mr. Cole gave no evidence that he had ever heard of drainage, good roads or immigration. The plans that he helped carry out were not his own, but those of the man he now seeks to supplant.

And as to Mr. Cole's promises, glitering though they may appear, the record for doing things that Governor Johnson has made pales them into insignificance. Governor Johnson has done things, and Mr. Cole promises to do the same things, though he has shown no capacity for improving upon the performance of the man he opposes.

The second and third heads under which the claims of Cole are grouped, therefore, amount to little or nothing. The fight is being made upon the first: that he is a Republican and has a Republican nomination. These reasons alone are not sufficient in this day to win a man a post so important as that of governor of one of the greatest states of the union.

THEIR ORIGIN.

There are several phrases in common political use that are bandied about during every campaign and thoroughly understood by everybody, yet whose origin is involved in obscurity.

The Washington Post, in response to an inquiry, has given what it believes to be the correct stories of how three of these terms came into use.

About the commonest term in this class is that which refers to a public official, and particularly a senator or congressman, as "mending his fences," meaning that he is getting his political affairs straightened up in his district, and strengthening his hold upon the voters. The Post says that the late John Sherman, secretary of the treasury, unconsciously coined this phrase. On one occasion when he was a senator and an election was pending in Ohio which involved the security of his senate seat, he went to his home in Mansfield. While on the way he remarked to a newspaper man who made inquiries that he was going to his little farm to "mend his fences." He meant it literally, but it became a figure of speech and is now in very common usage among thousands who have no idea of its origin.

Another common phrase is "gerrymander," meaning a manipulation of legislative districts so as to make them safely of one party or another. Redistricting of congressional or legislative districts is now almost invariably "gerrymandered," as the St. Louis county legislative districts were when the iron ranges were cut up among all three of the districts to provide Republican votes to offset the possible Democratic majorities in Duluth. The term was derived from Elbridge Gerry, a prominent Massachusetts statesman, who was active and influential not only during the War of Independence, but for years afterward. He was held responsible for a partisan redistricting of his state, an act that was bitterly denounced by the Federalists, who termed it a "gerrymander." The term still lives, though the party that first used it and the man after whom it was named have long since been gathered to their fathers.

For a much more modern but not less common phrase the Post claims joint credit with the late Senator Hanna. In an address to an Ohio convention, in reply to suggestions looking toward tariff revision, the senator said one time: "Stand pat! For God's sake, stand pat!" The Post claims that it recognized the term as fitting the attitude of certain sturdy friends of the tariff, and that it used it at once, without quotation marks, in that sense. However this may be, there is no doubt that its use came from Senator Hanna's appeal, and that it has come to be one of the commonest phrases of recent coinage in the popular language.

A MISTAKEN REFORM.

It is astonishing how impervious to facts and arguments the well-meaning reformers are who have brought about the abolition of the army canteen. No matter how many army officers, who know all about it, testify in behalf of the canteen, the reformers, who don't know anything about it except that they object to the government going into the liquor business, persist in their stand against it.

And yet there is hardly an army officer who will not freely testify that the abolition of the canteen has accomplished more drunkenness, more crime, and ruined more soldiers than the canteen could bring about in a hundred years.

Major General Frederick D. Grant, who is in command of the department of the East, gives such testimony in his annual report, and it is very strong. General Grant is himself a total abstainer, and is no friend of vice. Yet he strongly urges the re-establishment of the canteen at the army posts of the country, for the sale of beer and light wines under strict regulation.

Last year he stated that fully 75 per cent of the trials of enlisted men by court-martial were due to the use of bad liquor imbibed in the evil dens surrounding the army reservations, that have taken the place of the canteens. This year he revises these figures, and stated that fully 90 per cent of the troubles that occur in the army are traceable directly to this same cause.

He is confident that the restoration of the canteen would do much to better conditions, and that it would be an aid to temperance and morality.

The reformers who have brought about the abolition of the canteen meant well, but they have obviously done great harm. Apparently they can see nothing beyond the iniquity of government saloons, as they call the canteens. They do not appear to realize that while the army is made up of a pretty good lot of fellows, there is necessarily a considerable proportion of them that will drink. If they have the canteens, they can content themselves with the comparatively harmless beer and wines that are furnished there under regulations strictly excluding the possibility of intoxication. Deprived of the canteens, they seek the vile dens that are fringing every military reservation in the country, where they are given wretched liquors that eat the linings out of their stomachs and drug their discretion and moral perceptions until they get into serious trouble.

If the reformers who did this thing wish to accomplish real reform, they will ask congress to restore the canteen, not that the soldier may drink, but that if he must drink he shall be compelled to drink the least harmful beverages under the watchful eyes of his superior officers.

NEW JERSEY UNREDEEMED.

Everett Colby, the young New Jersey politician who revolted from the rule of the bosses and who is heading a fight to redeem the state from the rule of corruption that has made its name a stench in the nostrils of society, went down to defeat in the recent primaries, and Senator John F. Dryden, life insurance president and senatorial friend of the corporations, will be re-elected to the upper branch of congress.

He did not get so far in his fight as Novelist Churchill did in New Hampshire. Both were beaten, but Churchill's defeat was a great moral victory, and was attended by circumstances insuring success next time. New Jersey, however, is too closely wedded to the fleshpots of corruption to be redeemed in one campaign or two. Still, young Mr. Colby is not dismayed, and he is yet hopeful that ultimately his state will win its good name back again and become a part of the United States.

The methods used against him and his candidate for senator were characteristic of the elements he was fighting, and they do not redound to the credit of Dryden and his crowd.

One issue in the campaign was the abolition of perpetual franchises, upon which the ring had grown fat. Last year a member of the legislature sent to his constituents reply postal cards inquiring their views on this subject. The friends of perpetual franchises had duplicates of these cards printed, forged names to them, and packed the legislator's mail with cards demanding the retention of perpetual franchises. Colby discovered the trick and exposed it.

This year forged speeches credited to Colby were circulated freely throughout the state containing statements calculated greatly to injure Colby and the movement with which he is associated. Colby asked Senator Dryden to help him run down the man that perpetrated this trick in Dryden's behalf, and the senator evasively replied that it was not his stenographer who did it. Colby asked him, in reply, if it was not the stenographer of a friend of the senator, and Dryden did not see fit to send a reply.

Of course, in a measure, Minnesota people are not supposed to be concerned in state fights in New Hampshire or New Jersey, but the fight against graft, against corrupt political methods, against corporation interference in public affairs, and against the sending of corporation lobbyists to the United States senate, is a fight of all the people of this country, and the residents of one state are as deeply interested as those of another.

It is too bad that Colby's gallant fight has not succeeded better, but such a fight is uphill work against the strongly entrenched forces of corruption in New Jersey. Ultimately victory is certain to attend it, and in the meantime the good wishes of the patriotic citizens of all the states go out to Colby and every other man who is making an unselfish fight for clean government for the good of all the people.

THE PASSING SHOW.

Hear that sharp clatter up the road? That's Jack Frost, and he is coming rapidly.

A news item says a man ate a pound of limberger cheese and died. The story does not go into details, but undoubtedly his neighbors killed him.

The popular impression is that Hearst is much younger than Hughes, his opponent for governor of New York. As a matter of fact, Hughes is 44 and Hearst is 43.

"Every dog has his day," and it looks as though the day of the dog had come now that the government is examining into the materials that compose sausages and other miscellaneous meat products.

Several partisan newspapers that are complaining that Governor Johnson has done nothing to entitle him to re-election are just now giving unmeasured praise to his dairy and food department, which has made the state famous for strict and intelligent enforcement of the pure food laws.

The Walker Pilot is discouraged. It says: "Unless the people can exercise common intelligence in voting under the primary system, it would be far better to return to the rump convention and boss rule." On the same principle, it would be just as logical to argue for the abolition of popular government and a return to despotism.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

The Manufacturers' association of Canada has long been caggitating a protective tariff similar to the one in force in the United States," said F. K. Clark of Winnipeg at the St. Louis. "If the association keeps on hammering away in the future as it has in the past, I believe the desired end will be accomplished. At its recent convention in Winnipeg the matter was taken up and discussed quite thoroughly.

"A great deal has been said about the United States being the natural market for Canadian farm products, yet per head of population the Americans bought only a little more than nine cents' worth of Canadian farm products during the year 1904, while Canadian per head population bought from the United States just thirty-four times as much of the same kinds of farm products. There is no reason for this extraordinary difference other than that the United States has a high protective tariff, while Canada has a low one. The figures are not very encouraging to people who believe the United States is the natural market for Canadian farm products."

"Did you ever stop to think what a great thing the typewriter has been for the American working girl?" said S. N. Carver of Beloit, Wis., at the McKay. "It has been a boon to the business men, but it has also been the means of keeping thousands of working girls out of the factories and garb of a servant girl.

"Probably the majority of girl stenographers would never have become household servants or entered factories if the typewriter had not offered a more pleasant means of livlihood, but it is an undeniable fact that a great many of them would have done so. Even now an inspection of our night schools will show that a large percentage of the girls attending are factory employes.

"One thing the machine has accomplished has been to diminish the available supply of school teachers. Many girls fitted to become teachers of the young idea have turned their attention to the office, and are now making more money than they could teaching, with work all the year around, and more pleasant surroundings. At least I imagine they are more pleasant. It seems to me it would be a good deal more agreeable working in an office, with men on hand to see that your every wish is gratified, if you are pretty, that it would be to wrestle with a roomfull of ignorant, contrary, and generally disagreeable kids day after day. Me for the typewriter every time.

"All the women along about this time of the year are pricing furs," said R. T. Pearson of Fergus Falls, Minn., at the Lenox. "Up here in the North the furrier's window offers an attractive display to feminine eyes. If the attention were confined to the window alone it wouldn't be so bad, but the women insist on going inside, and after they have been there is no hope for the husband, father, brother or whoever else is furnishing the money. Their eyes light upon just the dearest, cutest, sweetest little mink jacket you ever saw, and it is buy that or nothing, if one has any money at all.

"My sister got caught up in nice shape one day last week, all because of her natural woman's love of argument with the shopkeeper. Do you know, I believe women get so much fun out of shopping because it gives them a chance to get into arguments with clerks and proprietors over the prices on goods that they know nothing about. In furs, for instance, the average woman doesn't know whether she is getting the genuine article or not, and might as well keep her mouth closed.

"But to get to my sister. She went into a fur store in the Twin Cities, and became quite enthusiastic over what she saw there. One little jacket in particular took her eye. It had a lot of long pretty tails attached to it, and the fur seemed nice and rich. It had a card telling about its being genuine marten, and the price was $15. Sister thought it was a peach of a garment, but didn't see how genuine marten could be sold for that price. She told the clerk so. The clerk said that if she desired he would ask the proprietor about it. Clerks are so very obliging they must be well paid. Sister said that would be just too lovely for anything, or words to that effect, and the proprietor was called. He looked at the garment and then at the placard. Then he smiled in a fatherly, happy manner and tore the card to pieces.

"'A,' says he, 'there has been some mistake here. Instead of being $15 this card should read $150.' Now wouldn't that jar you? There sister had a chance to get a $150 jacket, brand new, for $15, a clear profit of $135, and her love of argument put the bargain out of business. Just because she didn't know a good thing when she saw it she threw $135 to the winds. Of course, it would have pained me awfully if she had taken the coat and beaten the fur man out of his legitimate profit, but if she had made the purchase at $15, and not known there had been a mistake in the marking, and then, a long time afterwards, found out the real value of the thing—well, there would have been some excuse, don't you know."

Valuable Household Hints.

St. Joseph News-Press: Never allow the cook to wear her diamond ring while kneading bread. The stone will spoil the flavor of the most carefully prepared bread.

A little Portland cement added to oatmeal while it is boiling will give it body.

Cut glass should always be polished with sand paper.

Don't fail to clean the inside of the incandescent lamp bulb.

The odor of cabbage, onions and many other vegetables, while being cooked, is offensive to most persons, but it can be destroyed by coating the stove with rubber.

THE WEATHER.

The showers the weather man talked about came early last evening, and for a time it looked as though some nasty weather was at hand. But the wind was in the northwest instead of the northeast, and that made all the difference in the world. This morning the clouds had vanished, the sun shone brilliantly, and though the northwest wind brought a touch of coolness, it was pleasant in the open air and under the glowing sun. Yesterday's highest temperature was 68 degs, and last night it dropped to 38 degs. The weather man says there will probably be frost tonight, but generally fair weather tonight and tomorrow.

A year ago it was warm and pleasant.

Says Mr. Richardson of the conditions: "Light rains fell during Thursday or last night over the Lake region, Ohio, lower Mississippi and Missouri Valleys, Western Gulf and North Atlantic states as a result of the easterly movement of low pressure areas from Manitoba to Lake Superior and from New Mexico to the East Texas coast, respectively. An area of high pressure overspreads Western states, causing cooler weather in the upper Mississippi, Missouri and Red River Valleys and Eastern slopes of the Rockies, with freezing temperature in Utah, Nevada, Wyoming and Western Canada. The easterly movement of the high pressure area will be attended by fair weather in this section tonight and Saturday and possibly Sunday.

Following were last night's lowest temperatures, as recorded by the weather bureau:

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Saturday: Wisconsin—Fair tonight and Saturday. Cooler tonight.

Minnesota—Fair tonight and Saturday. Cooler in southeast portion tonight.

North Dakota and South Dakota—Fair tonight and Saturday. Warmer Saturday and in extreme west portion tonight.

Upper Lakes—Fresh to brisk northwest winds tonight and Saturday. Fair weather.

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

Chicago Tribune: "I got a bottle of lemon extract at your store the other day."

"Yes? Anything the matter with it?"

"Nothing so far as I can find out, but I'm curious to know what there is in it that makes it taste so much like lemons."

Washington Star: "You railway men consider nothing but money," said the abusive acquaintance.

"You wrong us," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "We are tempted every now and then to let somebody ride free, but the government won't let us."

Judge: "What do you suppose is the cause of Jones getting on in the world so slowly?"

"Pure laziness. That man would actually rather pay rent than move."

Woman's Home Companion: Gunbusta (bald-pated)—My boy, remember that the hairs of our heads are numbered.

Wilfred—Yours must have been numbered twenty-three.

Philadelphia Press: "I've got you down for a couple of tickets; we're getting up a raffle for a poor man of our neighborhood."

"None for me, thank you. I wouldn't know what to do with a poor man if I won him."

Chicago Tribune: "Georgie, what is your father's occupation?"

"He's a lawyer, ma'am."

"His occupation. What does he do for a living?"

"Do? Fur a living, ma'am? Gee! He's a plain cloes p'leeceman wit' a pull."

Who Is It?

Who is the nation's autocrat?
For what prevails, who's standing pat,
If good or ill, alert or flat?
The voter.

Who is to blame when things go wrong,
And public rights sold for a song,
Not given where they should belong?
The voter.

Who is responsible when still
The hands thrust in the public till
Use public frauds for public ill?
The voter.

Who turns from good, true men away,
And lets the rascals have full play,
Without disturbance of their sway?
The voter.

Who lets himself be easily fooled,
By self-appointed bosses schooled,
Until he is completely ruled?
The voter.

Who thinks it is a trouble great
To take much interest in the state,
And on his duty lays small weight?
The voter.

Who grumbles when his taxes grow,
And why they do he does not know,
Nor that he reaps as he doth sow?
The voter.

Who bitter blames and loudly rails,
When each good public measure fails,
And selfish interest e'er prevails?
The voter.

Whose choice sits in lawmaking hall,
Whose voice bids parties rise and fall,
Who is responsible for all?
The voter.

Pure Food Bill.

Pure Food Bill is a healthy chap,
With his notions good and straight;
He drinks his fill
And he eats until
He looks like a load of freight.

But what he eats and what he drinks
Is pure and does no harm:
Whereas the kind
That goes it blind
Must fill us with alarm.

So if we'd be the proper kind
With strength of arm and will,
We will not wait
Until too late,
But whoop it up for Pure Food Bill.

Chicago Record-Herald: Had an Ohio man been in Palma's place there wouldn't have been any resignation.

Fall's Turn.

A change in nature's vaudeville!
As at the signs we look,
We note that autumn heads the bill
While summer gets the hook.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1886.

At a meeting of the Red Wing board of trade yesterday, it was voted to join with Duluth, Rochester, and other places along the line of the proposed Red Wing & Duluth railroad to form a company and begin the necessary survey, obtain right of way, terminal facilities, etc., at once.

The management of the Garden theater has closed its doors permanently. The city is scarcely large enough to support two regular theaters in addition to the Grand.

At a recent meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance union, it was decided to hold a mass temperance meeting on the evening of Oct. 17, at the Grand opera house.

Today is the opening day of the third annual exhibition of the St. Louis County Agricultural society, and the interior of the building presented a busy scene with the numerous exhibitors on hand with their articles preparing them for display.

The past month has excelled any previous thirty days of the year in wretchedly, disagreeable weather. Rain fell on more than half of the days of September, and although there were but five days of frost, there were scarcely any days during which an overcoat was uncomfortable. With the advent of October came a pronounced change in the temperature, and that delightful Indian summer of which Duluth boasts, has already begun.

Frank Irons of Fargo, is in Duluth. He is the versatile writer and manager of Morton & Co.'s real estate office in the Red River valley town. His writings and expressions have become famous throughout the West, and all the Dakota maidens can be heard singing the words of Morton's ads., set to the music of "Sweet Violet" and "Come Into the Garden, Maud."

A Republican mass meeting will be held tomorrow evening at the opera house, when ex-Governor C. K. Davis will speak. He will also speak at the county fair in the afternoon.

Mrs. C. M. Vance has gone to Geneseo, N. Y., to spend several weeks visiting friends and relatives.

F. W. McKinney has returned from the Vermilion mining district.

James A. Paige, the popular Cloquet merchant, is in the city.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Red Wing Republican: "The less you dose yourself, the better," says an exchange. No doubt of it. If you let the doctors dose you it will be better—for the doctors.

St. Peter Free Press: That Minnesota stands for tariff revision has been clearly demonstrated at the last primary election. The Republicans of this state are in favor of a tariff upon a protective basis and they have no time for extremists on either side of the question. Furthermore "They believe that the time is now ripe for revision."

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Over in Milaca they think they have struck gas. Our good friend Bob Dunn must have been calling on his up-river neighbor.

St. Peter Free Press: Some of the biggest hypocrites and lawbreakers are often the most sanctimonious and persistent sticklers for law enforcement.

Crookston Times: The more the railroads refuse to answer now the more they will have to answer in the end.

Aitkin Age: "Damned with a dower of beauty" is the way one of the great writers has referred to a beautiful woman. The plain ones are apt to have a corner on gentle womanliness, consideration for others and general usefulness.

Crookston Times: Charles L. Warner is the man more than any other to whom A. L. Cole owes his nomination as governor. It is due to Warner's work and good organization that Cole's preliminary campaign made him a candidate at all to be considered. The Republican state central committee should have retained his services at whatever cost.

Austin Transcript: It appears from evidence before the interstate commerce commission that the Union Pacific railroad pays the Peavey Grain company 1½ cents a hundred for elevating its own grain in order to get the haulage. Unless such rebating is stopped the smaller elevator men must go out of business. The elevator trust needs and deserves no such unfair advantages.

Grand Rapids Independent: If Congressman Bede will take a bit of well-considered advice he will drop that "Let us love one another" motto of his, and let it stay dropped. It is one of those beautiful bits of sentiment that are all right in their proper places, say in Sunday school, heaven and the like, but don't work for a cent in men's games such as business, war or politics. If J. Adam must have a motto we would recommend to him as a good, sure-working one the dictum of David Harum: "Do unto others as they would do unto you, and do it fust."

Lake Crystal Union: The Republican platform of Minnesota stands for tariff revision. The voter who supports any other ticket but that of revision is fighting the platform of the Republican party.

Red Wing Republican: Whether the world is bright or shadowy depends largely on your capacity to choose the sunny side of the street.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago Tribune: The fewer enemies a man has the less one hears about him.

Some bank balances grow rapidly, but most of them are easily checked.

Talk is cheap, women are fond of bargains—and that's all there is to it.

A bottle labeled "hair bleach" often contains a woman's golden opportunity.

When the other fellow ceases to display any interest it's time for you to shut up.

If a man dresses well and hasn't very much sense, he is usually dubbed a "ladies' man" by others.

Occasionally there are men who would rather pay their debts than be bored to death by bill collectors.

At some period in his matrimonial career almost every man pretends to let out a line of talk in his sleep for the benefit of his wife.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It's mighty funny how much prettier a girl always is in her photograph.

It keeps lots of folk terribly poor dressing well enough to make people think they aren't.

If a man is sentenced to jail, he can serve his term, but he has to die to get over being red-headed.

A queer thing is the way women sneer about how other women aren't truthful about their ages.

About the only person who doesn't seem to think a candidate for office is a liar and a thief is his mother.

The Best of Knowledge.

'Tis better not to know too much
As through the world you go,
Than 'tis to know a lot of things
That really are not so.
—Philadelphia Record.

Just as Profitable to Public.

Pittsburg Dispatch: A dog has succeeded in swimming across the English channel. Some disappointment may be felt that it was not a man that did it. But the benefits to accrue to the world from the fact will be just as great in the case of the dog as the man.

Arms and the Millionaire.

Kansas City Journal: A story is going the rounds of the clubs of a Chicago millionaire who ordered a replica of the Venus of Milo to be delivered at his home. When the case arrived and was opened, the millionaire discovered there were no arms, and threatened to bring action against the railway company for damages. The company sent an official to inquire into the matter, found that the arms were missing—and paid.

What the Wind Says.

The frost is on the pumpkin, wind is in the peek-a-boo,
And it's getting mighty lonesome for the low-necked canvas shoe;
The breezes seem to whisper, coming down the chimney flue;
"You had better don your heavies in the morning."
—Milwaukee Sentinel.

An Invitation.

Oh, there are words in many tongues
That chase away a frown;
But none more sweet within my ken
Than when I start for town
And someone halts his touring car
And hollers "Going down?"
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Fargo Forum: Two years ago Duluth put in force a milk inspection ordinance, and in that time the deaths of infants have been reduced 80 per cent. This alone is sufficient returns for many times the cost of this inspection—to say nothing in regard to the health and comfort of adults.

Austin Transcript: The city council of Duluth two years ago passed an ordinance providing for inspection of cows and their milk. In the two years since the ordinance was put in operation the death rate of infants has been reduced 80 per cent. Inspection pays well.

Grand Rapids Independent: Naughton, The Duluth Evening Herald's excellent cartoonist, comes as near being realistic in his pictures as any of them. If you don't believe it, just watch the little doggie which is a feature of every one of his pictures.

Hibbing Tribune: Supt. Denfeld out-Roosevelts Roosevelt by determining to introduce simplified spelling in the Duluth schools.

Ely Miner: The reason assigned for Duluth passing up the county fair proposition is that so many of its citizens were hustling for the nomination for sheriff before the primaries, there were not enough left to get up the fair and do the work.

Two Harbors Iron Trade Journal: A Duluth preacher proposes to turn "Some Light on the Devil," as that is the title of a sermon he is to deliver. We imagine this will be rather a hard thing to do, as the old man is known to be a pretty good dodger.

Eveleth Mining News: The Duluth Herald is carrying on a crusade for half fare on street cars for school children. When The Herald goes after anything, something is going to happen.

Floodwood Broadaxe: The Duluth Commercial club is a firm believer in advertising in order to promote the city's growth. The advertising of a city has come to be considered as necessary as the advertising of a private business, if an increase in population is desired. It is very noticeable that Duluth is growing rapidly, and its growth has been materially advanced by the liberal use of printer's ink.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The Duluth Herald charges that Mr. Leavitt of the board of control made at least one speech for Dunn two years ago at Litchfield. If The Herald will read the election returns it will probably conclude that Mr. Leavitt did not have enough political influence to count. Why bring up unpleasant memories?

Floodwood Broadaxe: Some of the Duluth politicians don't like it because Jake Jacobson went into Buckman's district and helped to defeat him. Jake don't need to care what the Duluth crowd think of him, if they never did have any use for him, and in fact had much to do in helping to defeat his nomination for governor. The Lac Qui Parle statesman can afford to be independent.

Lake Crystal Union: The bears of the big woods of the North will spend the winter in Duluth.

His Predicament.

Woman's Home Companion: Col. White—Well, well, Mose! I am sorry to find you still sick. From what the doctor told me several days ago I expected to see you up and around by this time.

Mr. Slewfoot—Yassah! Yassah! An' dat's dess what I would-uh been if it wasn't for de scan'alous 'thusiasm of muh wife, sah; de 'thusiasm of muh wife! When de doctor proclamated, much as two weeks ago, dat I couldn't possibly git well, what did dat lady do but whirl in and sell muh raiment and give de money to de missionary fund. Dat's digonally what she done, sah! And right away after dat 'ar illacious event I took a turn for de better, but it wasn't no use! Since den I's dess been uh declinin' yuh on de spiral colyum o' muh back waitin' for de ravens to fotch me anudder out of gyarments so's I can 'pear out in publicity once mo'; and I axes yo', Cuhnel, as man to man, wid all due respeck for de fac' dat yo' am white and I's cullud, what in the name o' goodness am a pusson to do with dat kind of a lady—yassah, what's he guine to do?"

Anoka Union: The meanest gang ever formed in Minnesota is working for Knute Nelson.

The Republicans can elect Roosevelt president—but can they any other man?

Standpat McCleary secured the nomination for congress by the skin of his teeth. Tariff revision the people will have and that pretty quick.

A big business house in the twin cities can send a small package by express for fifteen cents, while a small firm in the country must pay twenty-five. Isn't that discrimination?

THE WORLD OF SPORTS

BIG SERIES AT CHICAGO

Arrangements Complete for Meeting of Cubs and White Sox.

Prospects Are That Parks Will be Hopelessly Inadequate.

As it is now settled that the two Chicago teams will play for the world's championship, the Chicago parks are being rapidly put in shape for that great series.

The games will begin Oct. 9, leaving one day between the close of the regular season and the beginning of the championsalp games.

Demands for seats are already beyond estimate. Both Murphy and Comiskey have received thousands of orders outside of the city for seats.

Chicago alone will turn out enough fans to fill both parks several times over. With all the arrangements that can be made it is safe to say that 40,000 people will be kept out of the parks because of lack of room to meet the demand.

Few people realize that the world's championship games are played under the direction of the National baseball commission. The club owners have nothing to say about the arrangements. The entire proceedings are in the hands of the commission.

An umpire from each league will be assigned to officiate at the games.

Sixty per cent of the receipts of the first four games goes to the players. The winning team gets 75 per cent and the losing team 25 per cent of this 60 per cent. If more than four games are played, the receipts of the excess games are divided between the two clubs after expenses are paid.

The object of limiting the players' receipts to four days is to do away with any suspicion that the players are prolonging the contest for a purpose. This provision makes it out of the question for either team to do any "laying down."

Four years ago the two Chicago teams played a post season series. The Nationals won the first three games, and had a good lead after seven games had been played. The series was dragged out until each team had won seven games, and then the deciding game was not played. This raised such a scandal that it led to the idea that all post-season games should be played under the National commission's management.

The prices of admission will be $2 for box seats; $1.50 for grand stand; $1 for general admission and 50 cents for the cheap seats out on the field.

Where the first game will be played will be decided by tossing up a coin.

The games will alternate between the two parks.

CHICAGO 3; CLEVELAND 1.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—Chicago, the new champions of the American league, celebrated the return home yesterday by winning 3 to 1 in the opening game of the final series with Cleveland. But three regulars appeared in Chicago's lineup, the rest of the team taking a much needed rest. The game was one of the best played here this season, pitchers Feine and Joss especially distinguishing themselves. Donohue's home run was a feature. Score:

Chicago	00000120x	3	4 2
Cleveland	00100000	1	4 0

Batteries—Feine and Roth; Joss and Bemis. Umpires, O'Loughlin and Sheridan.

CLOQUET WILL MEET SUPERIOR

Team From Lumber Town Strengthened Since Last Year.

Cloquet, Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tomorrow the Cloquet Juniors will play the Victors of Superior. The local team has been strengthened considerably since last year through the unceasing efforts of Coach Campbell. The game will begin at 2 o'clock with the lineup for the Juniors as follows:

Fullback, L. Gauthier; right halfback, H. Beasley; left halfback, R. Levings; quarterback, I. McNair; center, H. Owens; right guard, M. Johnson; right tackle, C. McLean; right end, E. Dupont; left guard, L. Simons; left tackle, J. Rogentine; left end, B. Skemp; substitutes, W. Stevens and W. Johnson.

READY FOR SATURDAY

High School Football Team is Put Through Hard Practice.

Members of Scrub Team Make Regulars Fight for Positions.

The last hard practice before the Grand Rapids game tomorrow, was held by the high school football men last evening when the regulars lined up against the scrubs in a regular game, and succeeded in carrying the ball over for five touch downs, four of which, Capt. McDevitt converted into goals, in spite of the hard northwest wind which was blowing.

Before the scrimmage was begun the first eleven was given a thorough drill in signal practice, every play in its repertoire being rehearsed, and they all worked to perfection. In spite of the restrictions of the rules committee designed to make it more difficult to get men into the interference, the Duluth aggregation is putting up a better class of interference than ever before, and the way they get men away around ends, and tear holes through center for their backs is beautiful to see.

Ryan is holding down the quarter back position in fine style and shows every indication of being a heady field general as well as a sure, quick quarter. Caulkins, on the second however, is putting up a great fight for the position and succeeded in getting away around the first eleven's end for an 80-yard run yesterday, almost scoring a touchdown for the scrubs.

Duluth has a better second team than it has had for some time. Once when the first eleven was within a few inches of their goal the second eleven stonewalled, and held the regulars for downs, fighting the ball down the field to their 30-yard line before forfeiting. This was the only occasion however that the regulars failed to make their ten yards in three downs, though kicks recovered by quick work of the linesmen aided them considerably at times.

McDevitt has developed a speed, and skill at half which is even of a higher quality than was expected of him, and the difficulty of stopping his 180 pounds at high speed may be imagined. Cummings is making good in every respect at the other side of the backfield, and McKinley's work at fullback is beyond reproach.

Anderson and Coventry are fighting it out for center. This is somewhat a surprise to Coventry, who had gotten it into his head that he had a cinch on the position, and the result is some fast heady playing in the center of both the first and second eleven's lines. They were both tried out on the first yesterday and both made good in fine style.

Poirier and Crawford played the guard positions and tore through the second's line frequently, while Peterson, with his 188 pounds of beef at one tackle and Paine on the other side of the line are taking care of their positions with great ability.

Clausen has taken Cummings' place at left end, and made some brilliant tackles and runs yesterday, and Bradley at right end gets well into every play and handles his position like a veteran.

"I am very well satisfied with the team's work," Coach Findlay said last night, "as it is quite up to the standard which might be expected at this stage of the season's work. There is of course a lot of room for improvement yet, and I expect to pound a lot more football into them before they play their big games, but I think they are fully equal to the Grand Rapids game Saturday. I don't want any of the men to get the idea that their positions are cinched, for there is not a man on the team who has not got a formidable rival on the scrubs who may replace him at any time."

He gave the boys a short lecture on smoking during training and fouling in a game yesterday, and made his disapproval of each of these features of the game very marked. The boys were kept hard at work on the field until nearly 5:30. This afternoon only light signal practice and work punting and passing the ball will be indulged in.

LAKESIDE FIRE HALL A DISGRACE

Falling to Pieces and is in an Unsanitary Condition.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The resolution requested by the board of fire commissioners, by their secretary, is not only an infringement of the civil service rules, but very misleading on its face. It is intended to influence the aldermen to vote for it, on the ground that the men are perfectly content with their jobs, and desire nothing more than to be allowed to fill them. So far as West Duluth is concerned I know nothing about the conditions in that locality, but with regard to the Lakeside fire hall, perhaps you will allow me a few words. That the members of the fire company in that locality "like their jobs" is true, for the simple reason that they cannot better themselves. Instances are on record where men from the uptown departments preferred to send their resignations to the chief rather than go to Lakeside, but there is not a case where a man who was ordered to the city fire halls refused to jump at the chance. They call it promotion down there, not merely because of the $5 extra per month, but because of the unsanitary condition with which they have to contend. The structure, commonly known by the name of No. 6 firehall, is falling to pieces, has the dry rot, is a blot on the beautiful suburban landscape, and a disgrace to the city of Duluth. Had any one but the city owned the building, the health officers would have closed up the house years ago. Commissioner after commissioner has endeavored to right this wrong, but without success, and it seems that so long as the members of the board are merely figureheads, and the council has the controlling power, neither the firemen nor the residents of Lakeside may look for any help. I know of three men who had to quit their positions on account of sickness caused by the unsanitary condition of the hall.

Then, again, the reason assigned for the grading of the houses instead of the number of years' service of the men, as at present, is a decided breach of the civil service laws. The argument is made that little or no fires occur in that neighborhood, and, therefore, the men have a snap. Have they? Have they not to do the regular amount of routine duty whether a fire occurs or not? The people of Lakeside nearly all own their own homes, and prefer to have their chimneys swept every fall rather than incur the risk of fire. Can the firemen, who are compelled to remain in that firehall until they are called up town by the chief, be held responsible for that? Besides, the obfuscated, antediluvian apparatus with which the men have to work with was out of date years ago, and they are just handicapped that much when a fire does break out. Early in the spring of the present year an alarm of fire was turned in to No. 6 from the Crosley Park district. The firemen responded promptly, but forty rods from the fire hall the chemical stuck hard and fast in the mud, and the horses were unable to move it. The chemical weighs between 5,400 and 5,500 pounds, and in certain times of the year would require a team of four horses—not the worn out old horses that are usually done for service before they are sent out to protect the residents of Lakeside from the fire protection which they are paying sweetly for. If a tenth of the money which property owners are paying for the protection which they are not receiving was placed to the credit of their fire hall we would have not only a fire hall where men could live comfortably and enjoy that happiness which is their constitutional right, but they would have a sufficient amount of men to fight a fire, in the event of such a thing occurring.

This year there have been more and better houses built in Lakeside and Lester Park than for the past five years, but with all the improvements, and the consequent danger of fire, we are still a department of six men. When Duluth annexed Lakeside there were, I understand, eight men in the firehall.

Respectfully yours,
A LAKESIDER.

BRITISHER WAS LUCKY

Fell in Love With Rich Miss January of St. Louis.

Raised to Peerage by King Edward as Lord Leith.

London, Oct. 5.—By entertaining royalty here, a man achieves more fame in one day than he can otherwise hope to attain in a lifetime. Snobbishness may be at the root of it, but the fact remains that it is the shortest and easiest road to distinction.

Of this fact Lord Leith of Fyvie has afforded the latest proof. Until last November he was plain Alexander John Forbes-Leith. His name did not even appear in Who's Who, which is supposed to make some biographical mention of everybody in the kingdom who amounts to anything. When the king took it into his head to confer a peerage upon him, without passing him trough the preliminary stage of knighthood or baronetcy, it awakened little interest, notwithstanding the fact that his new dignity was shared by an American wife. Most of the papers dismissed him with a couple of paragraphs. Had he died two months ago, few papers would have sized him up as worth more than three paragraphs.

But when it became known, a few weeks back, that he was to entertain the king and queen of Spain, the editors took a different view of him. From a small potato among the aristocracy, he was suddenly transformed into a considerable pumpkin. Should he chance to die at any time within the next six months, as a man who had entertained the king and queen of Spain, he would be worth a half a column, at least, in the London papers.

There is a romance in his life which lends an uncommon interest to him. If it hadn't been for Cupid, it is probale that he would now be occupying no more conspicuous position than that of a retired captain in the British navy on half pay.

Thirty years ago, in the summer of 1876, H. M. S. Zealous, the flagship of Rear Admiral Arthur Farquhar, unexpectedly arrived at San Francisco. The Franco-Prussian war was raging and there were possibilities of international complications in the Pacific. Admiral Fraquhar received orders to remain at San Francisco until the political atmosphere had cleared, so that he might be in touch with the cable, should it become necessary to send him urgent orders.

For two months, in consequence, the Zealous remained at anchor in San Francisco harbor, and the officers had little else to do than enjoy to the full the generous hospitality of San Francisco. Among the lieutenants of the Zealous at the time was a young Scotsman, Alex Leith, a strapping fine fellow of the blonde type and uncommonly good looking. Well bred and well born, he soon became a great favorite with the San Francisco girls. But he found his affinity among none of them. Fate had a rich prize in store for him.

One day there arrived at the Palace Hotel, in charge of her aunt, a young woman who, to the attractions of beauty, added that of great wealth. She was Miss January of St. Louis, an orphan just within three months of coming of age, and entering into possession, under her father's will, of something like $1,000,000, besides big iron foundries and steel works.

She and the fair-haired, blue-eyed lieutenant met at a dance on the flagship, and then and there Cupid discharged his shaft and scored a double hit. It was a case of love at first sight on both sides. For once the course of true love ran smoothly, for the heiress had things in her own hands. Young Leith abandoned the path which leads to glory for that which would certainly lead to riches. He left the navy as soon as the red tape formalities could be complied with, and within a few months after his first meeting with Miss January they were married.

On shore, with the advantage of such an excellent start, and the stimulus of American conditionh, Mr. Leith developed into a first-class business man, and in his hands his wife's large steel and iron interests greatly increased in value. He became president of the Joliet and Illinois Steel companies, and later on, the Federal Steel company. These concerns were absorbed by the steel trust at a price which made Mr. Leith a multi-millionaire. During the many years that he lived in America, however, he remained, "in spite of all temptations," a Scotchman. If he had not, he would not now be a peer.

When he returned to Scotland with his wife it was to realize the dream of his youth—to buy the home of his ancestors, Fyvie Castle, in Aberdeenshire, and the many broad acres surrounding it. The price he paid was something like $800,000. "To him that hath shall be given." On the death of his maternal grandfather, a lot more property came to him, the only condition being that he should couple the name of Forbes with that of Leithhence the double-barreled surname he has borne for several years.

Fyvie Castle is one of the finest examples of the Scotch baronial style in the kingdom, and stands much as it did hundreds of years ago. It has five towers, the oldest of which is believed to have been erected in 1297. Bastion, turret, dormer windows and high pitched gables, are also prominent features of the quaint building.

It is unusually rich in legends. Besides a ghost, it boasts a secret chamber and a curse. And the curse has an unhappy knack of coming true. Away back in the dim past, so runs the story, a certain Thomas the Rhymer sought the hospitality of the castle. Thomas added to the gift of poesy that of prophecy and possessed the power of casting evil spells on those who incurred his enmity. As nobody cared to run the risk of displeasing a person so formidably endowed, Thomas could count on getting free board and lodging wherever he went. No tramp of modern times ever found life such a soft snap as did Thomas the Rhymer. But for some reason, perhaps because he wished to put the hospitality of the proud lord of Fyvie to a genuine test, on the occasion of his visit to the castle, he disguised himself as a beggar. In consequence, instead of being invited to come in and take potluck and make himself at home as long as he pleased, or even told to go around to the back door and get some cold victuals, he was ordered to vamoose, in the choicest Scotch phraseology of that day.

Then in his wrath, Thomas the Rhymer launched a fell curse against Fyvie castle. He declared that no laird of Fyvie, as long as Fyvie castle stood, should ever be succeeded by his son. The laird of that time took small stock of the curse, notwithstanding Thomas' reputation as a true prophet, for he had several stalwart sons. But none of them survived to succeed him, and Scotch folk declare it to be a fact that from that day to this the holder of Fyvie castle has never been succeeded by his son.

When Lord Leith bought Fyvie castle, the ghost and everything else appertaining to the historic pile, he laughed at the ancient curse, for he had a son—an only son—in the prime of health, who, he expected, would some day reign over Fyvie. But that son lost his life in the South African war, to which Lord Leith contributed two companies of Lovat's scouts, equipped and maintained at his own expense. It was a terrible blow to him. He is still skeptical as to the curse, but he no longer laughs at it; and his humbler Scotch neighbors firmly believe that it was its power which wrought his son's death.

KING GETS ACQUAINTED WITH SWEDE NURSE GIRL.

Copenhagen, Oct. 5.—A curious incident occurred recently outside Charlottenlund castle, where King Frederick resides in the summer. A well-dressed gentleman addressed a nurse-maid who was playing in the grass with twin children, a boy and a girl, and asked her to whom they belonged. "That is a curious question," replied the nurse in English, for I cannot see why they should interest you."

The gentleman answered, also in English, "I am sorry that I have been inquisitive without introducing myself to you. I am King Frederick, and my sister is Queen Alexandra of England." The nurse at once answered his question, and before leaving the king requested that she should pay his compliments to the parents of the English twins.

ON FOOT THREE THOUSAND MILES

San Francisco Refugees Walk Back to Their Old Home.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 5.—When Mrs. Sarah Rooks left Atlanta shortly over a year ago on her wedding journey to the Golden Gate, she little dreamed that before another autumn came she and her husband, stricken with hunger and the loss of their new born child, would have walked 3,000 miles back to their home to the South.

About sunset Saturday afternoon the once happy couple arrived, having covered on foot the major portion of the distance from San Francisco to Atlanta. The husband was bent with suffering from injuries he received in the great earthquake. The wife, although a young woman, scarcely 23, would have been taken for almost any age, her mouth was so pinched and starved. She wore the last tatter of her trousseau.

"My baby is dead," she explained to a passerby on Whitehall street, "and he is buried somewhere beyond the prairies. I have forgotten the place, it seems such a long time."

Mr. and Mrs. Rooks were happily settled in a little cottage on the margin of San Francisco when the earthquake burst forth and set in motion that strange fate which has since been following them.

About a hundred miles west of the Mississippi the baby died one night and was buried near the roadside. When daylight came the mother was in a fever. The childless parents lay on the edge of the woods until nightfall. Then the teamster took them to the village, five miles farther on. There they were given food and railway fare to a town sixty miles down the road.

This kind of life continued for three months. A week ago they reached Macon and thence set out afoot for Atlanta, where they arrived Saturday. Mrs. Rooks expects to find some of her people here, but from last reports she had not succeeded.

INDIANA BOY STRIKES IT RICH IN ALASKA MINES.

Boonville, Ind., Oct. 5.—Word has been received in Boonville stating that the Juneau gold mines, of Juneau, Alaska, cleared $19,000 during August. This mine is under the superintendence of Herb Hoggatt of Boonville, who owns a controlling interest in the organization.

Wilford B. Hoggatt, also of Boonville, and now governor of Alaska, also holds stock.

It is said that this mine has made a millionaire out of Superintendent Hoggatt. In his youth he was poor.

CONCERNING WOMEN

The nineteenth annual meeting of the Children's Home society was held this morning at the home, and the reports of the officers and chairmen of committees of the board presented. In the absence of the president and vice president of the board, Mrs. M. R. Baldwin presided at the meeting. The report of the secretary was read by Mrs. Edward Hazen, and the treasurer's report by Mrs. L. S. Loeb.

The following committees were also reported by the chairmen: Finance, Mrs. T. J. Davis; house, Mrs. F. H. White, and supplies, Mrs. A. D. Goodman. The matron, Miss Louise Wheeler, presented her second annual report. During the year 152 children have been cared for at the home, and the present number under its roof is forty-five.

A vote of thanks was tendered by the society to the local press, and all who have aided the executive board in its care and management of the home, and also to the retiring officers and working members of the board. The secretary was also instructed to extend written appreciation of thanks to Dr. A. E. Walker and Dr. N. L. Linneman and the members of the advisory board.

The report of the nominating committee was unanimously accepted, and a ballot cast by the secretary for the report as read. The members of the board during the ensuing year will be: Mesdames J. N. McKinley, F. H. White, T. J. Davis, J. H. Williams S. G. Knox, A. D. Goodman, J. B. Richards, J. P. Gordon, J. H. Crowley, C. E. Lum, Edward Hazen, M. R. Baldwin, A. C. Hubbell, W. J. Suffel, F. A. Brewer, S. R. Holden, C. A. Luster, T. F. Cole, G. H. Jones, John Panton and Miss Hoatson.

The new board immediately went into executive session, and the officers for the year were elected and other business transacted.

Luncheon and Bridge.

Mrs. B. F. Myers entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Kitchi Gammi club. The table decorations were in lavender asters, and covers were laid for twenty. In the afternoon bridge was played, and the favors were won by Mrs. W. R. Stone and Mrs. J. H. Upham.

CAMP FIRE

To be Held in Honor of Department President.

This afternoon the Women's Relief Corps of this city is entertaining Mrs. Ida K. Martin of Minneapolis, department president. Mrs. Martin is accompanied by Mrs. Starkweather of the Soldiers' Home Board of Minneapolis, and an inspection of the local corps is being held at Rowley hall this afternoon.

The members of the corps will entertain this evening at a camp fire at the hall in honor of Mrs. Martin, and a cordial invitation is extended the members of the Gorman and Culver posts and the Ladies of Garfield circle to be present. A musical program will be given and a delightful evening is anticipated.

At the annual Fifth District meeting which was held this week at Aitkin at which fifteen of the members of the local corps were present, Mrs. Rachael Ross of this city was elected alternate delegate to the national convention which will be held in June of next year at Saratoga. The meeting was of much interest.

Saturday Club.

The first regular meeting of the Saturday club for the year, will be held tomorrow afternoon at the club room of the library. The leader will be Mrs. C. E. Spring, and a portion of Russian history with a half hour of current events will be the outline of work. The program in detail is as follows:

Alexander I. A liberal and a Reactionist, 1801-1825.
I. Napoleonic Wars.
II. Reforms.
III. Holy Alliances.

First Meeting.

The first meeting of the year of the Forward guild of the First Presbyterian church will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock with the president, Mrs. J. A. Stephenson of 1931 East First street, and a large attendance is desired. The work for the year will be decided upon and Miss Eleanor Thomson will speak of the work possible among the poorer classes of children in the city. An informal hour of runion of the former members and the new attendants will follow, and any of the younger women of the congregation are invited to be present.

Informal Party.

Miss Eva Polinsky entertained last evening in honor of her guest, Miss Ruth Cone of Minneapolis, who is her guest. A delightful evening was passed by the following guests:

Misses—
Bertha Mendelshon, Lizzie Helpern, Bessie Cowels, Annie Oreckovsky, Ray Oreckovsky, Anna Shapiro, Sarah Simon, Tillie Berkson, Sadie Berkson, Sadie Rocklin, Esther Shapiro, Mary Oreckovsky.
Messrs.—
L. Bennett, A. Rocklin, Jaffey, Stineberg, L. Wolf, J. Schwartz, C. Oreckovsky, W. Oreckovsky, Sherwood.

What Retail Markets Offer

Sweet potatoes, 6 lbs. for 25 cents.
Chestnuts, 20 cents a lb.
Quinces, 60 cents a peck.
Mint, 5 cents a bunch.
Tokay grapes, 50 cents a basket.
Shrimps, 35 cents a lb.
Lobsters, 45 cents a lb.
Oysters, 50 and 60 cents a quart.
Fresh beef tongues, 65 cents each.
Frogs' legs, 20 cents a dozen.

If after the kickful career that is lived by your ordinary frog, he enters a land of spirits and a further existence, there will surely be some one there to commend him for the use he has put to the talent of his hind legs. When one comes to think of it there doesn't seem to be anything on earth which is employed in a better way for wider and broader development and growth than a frog's back legs. He simply revels in joy while free, and when some heartlessly finicky person shudders aesthetically at the "g-r-r" which the poor frog emits as he is placed on a fish hook, suffering horribly, he regards it as merely temporay. Does he turn him over and die? Not he, but bravely facing the new conditions he proceeds to use all his talents, namely his hind legs, until Nature comes to his relief and a merciful death soothes his aching body and you go on fishing with a lifeless thing whose spirit was tremenduously admirable, and which, through your cruelty is no more for this earth.

Frogs' hind legs are in the market at 20 cents a dozen. And the other things that the market offers are delightful—shrimps for salads; oysters for stew; lobsters to be fixed a la Newburg; chestnuts and apples for before a grate fire; quinces for preserves; and everything else that a reasonable person could ask for.

The EVENING STORY.

The Mystery of The White Mansion

By Mrs. B. M. Croker.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

One summer I visited my sister Ursula in her new home in South Carolina. She had just married the wealthy Mr. George Middleton, and the newly wedded pair had taken up their abode in the old family homestead.

There were several other relatives and friends visiting at the house at the time of my arrival.

As Ursula's oldest and favorite brother, an extremely kind reception was accorded me by her friends—especially her girl friends.

One afternoon a party of four—two cousins of Mr. Middleton's, myself and a rich financier called Van Boom—had been wading through rice fields after snipe. We were twelve miles from our headquarters and the heat was overpowering, when Van Boom gave out. He was a stout, short-necked, self-indulgent millionaire, who had come South for a "cure."

Having explained the situation to our darkies, a young mulatto, pointing to a long line of trees in the distance, said: "Berry good house still; everything same as in old massa's time, they say. Best stop here."

To this suggestion a white-haired veteran objected, but was silenced by the young man, who had now installed himself as our pioneer.

In ten minutes' time we had arrived before the sunken piers of what had once been a fine gateway, leading to a long, majestic avenue of walnut trees. The avenue wes grass-grown, and at the far end loomed an unexpected sight—a stately white mansion of commanding appearance.

Even the very steps were grass-grown—though the door stood wide. Sitting upon the threshold was a fat negress. In the background were several dusky piccaninies and a shriveled old man.

Our mulatto guide immediately strutted forward and volubly explained our predicament. After a scene of considerable altercation and hesitation, we were invited to dismount, and we were formally conducted upstairs and requested to make a selection of apartments.

I chose a large chamber with two big windows overlooking the avenue. Its four-post bed and open fireplace reminded me of home, which, I believe, was the sole reason that I preferred it.

In one corner stood an old secretaire, priceless to a collector of antique furniture, the stiff, high-backed chairs were to match, and over the chimney piece hung a large Scriptural print in a heavy black frame, representing "The Death of Jehu;" underneath was inscribed: "Had Jehu peace who slew his master?" The window curtains were of faded chintz, and the floor was dark polished oak, in places almost black.

I flung open a window and gazed down the great avenue. The air of the room was close and musty.

An old man entered with a great can of water; as his eyes met mine he shook his head, saying:

"I berry sorry massa take dis room."

"Why?" I asked.

He made no reply beyond a more solemn shaking of his head, accompanied by a lamentable groan, and a call that dinner was ready hurried me below.

A sufficient supply of plate, glass and crockery was forthcoming, and, on expressing our amazement at such luxuries, the negress, showing every tooth in her head, replied:

"House belongs to our massa—he live in Europe—nebber come here."

After dinner we took a short walk and found our steeds installed and picketed in what had once been a rose garden, and comfortably located for the night. A good many peering, dusky faces watched us as we strolled past the roofless stables, and the long lines of half-deserted negro cabins. As we were returning we passed a thicknet of magnollas, and it seemed to me that among the white blossoms there peered forth a black, malignant face. I looked away for a moment, then glanced back. It was gone! What tricks imagination does play! We hear af faces in the fire—that had been a face among the flowers!

When I at last entered my room I was agreeably surprised (remembering the cold chill of the room) to find that a large wood fire had been lit, and was blazing cheerfully up the chimney, illuminating the whole scene. The light caught the lower part of the gloomy print, and threw out in grim relief: "Had Jehu peace who slew his master?"

I was very tired and was soon asleep, undisturbed by the hoarse and clamorous croaking of the frogs in the marsh.

I must have been asleep for a considerable time when, half between sleeping and waking, I was aware of a curious noise, and, by the still bright light of the fire, was not a little astonished to behold the empty rocking chair in vigorous motion!

Presently the chair creaked and was jerked back—the sitter had evidently risen.

With deliberate heavy footsteps he (for it was surely a man!) walked to the door, and an invisible hand shot the bolt with murderous emphasis.

Another silence—the thing moved towards the old bureau, and I heard the clink! clink! of coin; presently I was aware of loud breathing beside me, and consciousness of stealthy touches fingering the bedclothes—of a cautious fumbling with the coverlet, and then suddenly, with a force that made my heart leap—an enormous hand was on my mouth! Before I could move, its fellow had seized my throat with the grip of a steel trap. I struggled fiercely with all my strength; I flung my arms out, but of what use was my feeblo resistance? The air was empty! Yet the terrible hand never once relaxed its hold—my life seemed to ebb away from me—I was—dying—I was sensible that I was in the clutch of Death!

And now I began to realize tha I was about to be taken away and buried. My limp and lifeless body was thrust into what I supposed was a sack—the bolt was withdrawn—I was hauled across the gallery and down the stairs with a bump, bump, bump—then out of the house into the garden and dragged through the high, wet grasses. Death was taking me to a nameless grave.

At last my grewsome journey was ended, and the sole noise that fell on my ears was the thud of a working spade. The digging ceased; the task was evidently complete, slow footsteps came towards me—then—I heard no more.

It was broad daylight when I awoke. I sat up in bed wondering if my experience of the past night had been a dream! My head ached abominably. I felt feverish, anything but refreshed after a long night's rest. The face that confronted me in the looking glass was haggard and hollow-eyed, and I noticed deep red traces of finger marks on my throat! And even as I looked—they faded!

After breakfast I caught sight of the old negro and beckoned to him.

As he approached he looked at me with a curious expression of interrogation in his prominent brown eyes.

"Tell me, uncle, what is the story of the room I slept in last night?"

"No story, massa," rolling his eyes at me. "No story—no story!"

"Come," I said "think again, Uncle Tom. Can't you remember?"

"Oh, massa, I was only picaninny," and without another words he hastily shuffled away.

I was about to pursue him, but I heard a call from Van Boom.

"Come on, Vernon, unless you want to live and die here; we're all waiting."

Back home once more we were welcomed and made much of, especially by the ladies of the party, and treated like long lost, civilized castaways.

Of course, we were compelled to undergo an exhaustive cross-examination as to where we had been and what we had been doing. Van Boom related our experience.

As he described it, I noticed that the general interest waxed with every sentence, and at last Mr. Middleton exclaimed:

"You don't mean to say you've all passed a night at Whitehall, and returned alive?"

"Very much alive," rejoined Van Boom. "What's the matter with the place?"

"I wish I could tell you," replied my sister Ursula. "George" (this to her husband). "you must know something about it—don't you rent part of the plantation?"

"Yes—that's a different thing to renting the house," he replied, evasively.

"Oh, then there is a story?" said Van Boom: "of course there's never smoke without fire."

"Let us have the tale, true or untrue," I urged.

Mr. Middleton deliberately sat down, crossed his legs, clasped his hands and began in a sort of monotone: "Well, years and years ago, I believe, long before we came here, Whitehall belonged to a Mr. Heyward, a man of high English family; he was unmarried and very eccentric."

"Of course, he was eccentric, if he was not married," put in Ursula.

"He was reputed to be rich and a bit of a miser. His health failed, and he was nursed and assiduously attended by a black boy called Sam, a slave who was greatly attached to him and in whom the old gentleman placed the most absolute confidence. Sam waited on him, and sat up nights, and, by all accounts, tended Mr. Heyward as if he had been his own son.

"The story goes on that one evening the two retired together as usual. Next morning when the invalid's coffee was taken to him, his room was empty. He and Sam had both disappeared, and from that day to this, no trace of either the one or the other has ever been found. It was always believed that Mr. Heyward kept an immense sum of money in a certain bureau in his bedroom; but I understand that the contents of this bureau were a severe disappointment to his heirs!

"Naturally, there was an outcry and a strong suspicion of foul play, but whether Sam killed the old man, or the old man killed Sam, or someone else killed them both, was never discovered, and, as the mystery is now buried under the dust of 60 years, no one will ever know the truth."

But—I knew.

There may be someone advertising for employment today who would be worth to you as much as any two of your present employees.

Smart Coiffures Still Feature the Marcel Wave

1 HIGH POMPADOURS ARE STILL FANCIED
2 COMBS, PINS AND CURLS, FEATURES OF HIGH COIFFURE
3 LOW COIFFURE WITH PUFFS

Smart evening coiffures will be simple this coming season and will be so easy to arrange because of the many false curls that are used.

The high style of hair dressing that will be becoming to almost any type of woman has a pompadour in front, marcelled, of course, from which the strands of hair are loosely gathered at the side and drawn into a knot on top of the head. This roll of hair need not be fixed with elaborate care, for the false curls pinned over the knot entirely hide it. With this coiffure a large amber comb with short teeth and a wide high decorative top will be most effective placed directly behind the curls. Ornaments with round or olivelike knobs are smart and add to the appearance of the hair.

Two styles of low coiffures will be worn for evening this season. Both will have puffs at the back of the head that extend from ear to ear, and marcelling is naturally essential, but there the likeness ends, for in front one will be parted over the forehead, while the other will be a small pompadour.

In arranging the hair in a part, the strands already marcelled should be puffed or fluffed so that the effect will not be flat. At the sides, too, the hair should be pulled out and then pinned flat to the head at the back. Over the soft knot at the back the curls are pinned, so that they reach from the crown of the head to the neck, and are particularly attractive. With the exception of making a small, fluffy pompadour, the other fashion of the low coiffure is arranged in exactly the same way.

With either of these styles a broad, wide comb introduced at the top of the curls is stunning ,as are the amber hair ornaments if combs are not desired.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—"In the Bishop's Carriage." Matinee and evening performance Saturday.
METROPOLITAN—"Dreamland Burlesquers."

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Monday, "The Umpire;" Tuesday and Wednesday, "The Lion and the Mouse."

A FEMALE RAFFLES.

Leah Kleschna never understood the nature of her offending until it was taught her by kindness and consideration bestowed, while Nanee Olden, the heroine of "The Bishop's Carriage," understood it all from the first, and gloried in her misdeeds, because she thought she was smart—a sort of female Raffles, who had persuaded herself that her calling was a legitimate one, because she was successful in it—and she was never repentent, or ashamed until Latimer's pure and beneficent affection ushered her into a new atmosphere.

"The Bishop's Carriage" will be at the Lyceum tonight and tomorrow.

SOME NEW BASEBALL SLANG.

There is more new and illuminative baseball slang emitted in one short, five-minute scene in "The Umpire," which will be seen in Duluth Monday, than the average "fan" is able to accumulate in a lifetime. The scene occurs near the beginning of the play, and is dominated by the Umpire, who relates, in a most graphic manner, the incidents of the game wherein he gave a rank decision, and was fallen upon and cast out by the indignant crowd. Under the rough surface of the story there is pretty sentiment, however, for it tells how a flash from a pair of brown eyes in the grand stand caused him to look the wrong way at a close play, and call the runner "out" instead of "safe." The romantic side of "The Umpire" is provided by that unlucky man and the owner of the brown eyes.

TORNADO RAGES

river front, where the Columbia Oil Mill and the Jefferson saw mill were badly damaged. A woman and child were injured by the blowing down of a house at First and Magnolia streets, and a negro in Douglass Parish, was reported to have been picked up bodily by the wind and carried several feet, being badly injured.

The tornado entered the city near Audobon Park, having crossed the Mississippi river from the farming country opposite that point. The wind was accompanied by a low ranging cloud and a heavy rumble. It travelled northwest until it reached the fine residence portion of the city at St. Charles and Napoleon avenues. Here the damage was the lightest done in any part of the tornado's course. From St. Charles the wind proceeded straight ahead to Marlingo and Carondelet streets, where it veered sharply to the northward and in this direction passed out of the city.

The path of the tornado through the city was from thirty to fifty feet wide. This narrow zone was strewn with bricks from demolished chimneys, detached boards, uprooted trees, fallen telegraph poles, and an occasional roof. It was the falling of these objects which caused most of the injuries.

A peculiar feature of the disturbance in the city was the fact that few persons within half a mile of the tornado's path knew there had been a storm, and the local United States weather bureau received first intimation of a tornado from a newspaper reporter.

Forecaster I. E. Cline said the tornado was probably a local disturbance. Buildings damaged included the St. Elizabeth convent on Napoleon avenue, the New Orleans Furniture company, at Belle Castle street, the Jai Alli Roller skating rink and the gas works at Poydras and Magnolia streets. At the gas works a stand pipe was blown down.

Other buildings damaged included St. Stephens (Roman-Catholic) church, a market house in process of construction at Tolodano and Sartoga streets, and the two mills previously mentioned. About twenty-five small houses and cabins were either rendered untenantable or were blown down completely.

A week ago today New Orleans suffered damage from the gulf coast hurricane.

WOMAN WHO HAS PECULIAR FAD

Unusual Effect of Severe Illness, But is Only Temporary.

New York, Oct. 5.—It is not only the workers who sometimes break down and have strange attacks of nerves, which make them do queer things. Too much pleasure, even in a perfectly decorous way, may bring on attacks that require the attention of the nerve doctors. It seems that women in society, who are too devoted to its demands, are sometimes likely to have the freakiest kind of spells.

"One of the strangest cases of that kind that came under my observation," said a nerve specialist, "concerned a young married woman in society, who was not only very beautiful but very much in demand. The summer holiday never meant much rest or recuperation for her. There were generally six weeks in Europe, then Newport and a round of country houses before the season in New York began. One year she came back to the city already tired out and began the daily grind of pleasure.

"It was not long before she was the victim of a most remarkable delusion. She felt that it was absolutely necessary for her to clean her teeth immediately after every meal. Try as she might, it was perfectly impossible for her to control this impulse. After a short while she gave in entirely, and carried around her tooth brush and powder wherever she went.

"As soon as the woman left the table she darted upstairs and made herself comfortable before she appeared again in the drawing room. It must be said that she had very beautiful teeth, of which she had always been very proud and conscious.

"Her struggles with the tooth brush were merely a form of acute nervousness, into which she had been brought by her physical fatigue. A trip to Italy on a slow steamer, and a vacation of several months at the German spas, made her all right.

"Another patient of mine was a very pretty girl, with a very enviable position socially, and other things to make her nervous. One of these was her lack of money, and the importance of making a brilliant match.

"It was necessary for her, from her point of view, to be seen at all the big balls to which she was invited, and not to drop out of the social round at any point. So she kept up until her nerves needed rest. The kind of a rest she gave them served for only a short time. She found that she could not keep her fingers still at any time, and began to knit. She knit at the opera while men talked to her, and she knit in the intervals of cotillions.

"That was not the satisfaction she expected it to be, however, as a means of allaying her nervousness. After a while she came to me and, of course, needed only rest and simple treatment to restore her nerves to their normal state again.

"Knitting is a form of relief that nervous women are very likely to seek. I have a patient now whose home, in which she spends most of the year, is not far from the city. For about two months she is in town.

"Last winter she took it into her head that she could not take the frequent trips to town without some occupation. So she began to knit on the train. It was merely a form of nervousness and she will get over it after a while.

"Another case of women's society nerves, which other persons were disposed to call affectation, came under my observation. I happened to know that it was not affectation, and that the woman really was ill. Otherwise she would never have been willing to expend the time and money on her treatment that she did. Her case had some phases in common with the women who wanted something to occupy their time. She did not knit, but went around with a pet turtle. It was a harmless species of tortoise, and she never went to the theater or the opera without it.

"Women expressed their opinion of her affectation very frankly, and some of them even talked about her sanity. But she clung to her turtle. It was something to occupy her attention and keep her interested just as the knitting had been for the other woman. The first sign of returning health in her case was a wholesome disgust for the tortoise, which she gave to her cook."

This physician said that such cases of nervousness were just as genuine as other that took the form of facial contortions or other more familiar symptoms. Usually they come from the same causes, too. Playing too hard has just as serious an effect on the nervous health as working too hard.

TERRIBLE ECZEMA ON LITTLE BOY

Mouth and Eyes Covered With Crusts—Face Itched Most Fearfully—Hands Pinned Down to Prevent Scratching

MIRACULOUS CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"When my little boy was six months old, he had eczema. The sores extended so quickly over the whole body that we at once called in the doctor. We then went to another doctor, but he could not help him, and in our despair we went to a third one. Matters became so bad that he had regular holes in his cheeks, large enough to put a finger into. The food had to be given with a spoon, for his mouth was covered with crusts as thick as a finger, and whenever he opened the mouth they began to bleed and suppurate, as did also his eyes. Hands, arms, chest, and back, in short the whole body, was covered over and over. We had no rest by day or night. Whenever he was laid in his bed, we had to pin his hands down: otherwise he would scratch his face, and make an open sore. I think his face must have itched most fearfully.

ALFONSO HOHRATH.

"We finally thought nothing could help, and I had made up my mind to send my wife with the child to Europe, hoping that the sea air might cure him, otherwise he was to be put under good medical care there. But, Lord be blessed, matters came differently, and we soon saw a miracle. A friend of ours spoke about Cuticura. We made a trial with Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent, and within ten days or two weeks we noticed a decided improvement. Just as quickly as the sickness had appeared it also began to disappear, and within ten weeks the child was absolutely well, and his skin was smooth and white as never before." F. Hohrath, President of the C. L. Hohrath Company, Manufacturers of Silk Ribbons, 4 to 20 Rink Alley, June 5, 1905. South Bethlehem, Pa.

Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston. Mailed Free, "How to Cure for the Skin."

A Good Book for Six Cents.

It describes your own land, the immediate region you live in—the Northwest. It costs but the postage required to mail it. It is printed on the best of paper, is profusely illustrated, is full of information. It is suitable for your home, for schools or libraries. It is a nice souvenir to send to your friends in the East. It tells of Yellowstone Park, the Bitterroot mountains in Montana, the Quenilut Indians on the North Pacific coast, the Columbia river scenery, the marvelous Puget Sound region, and Alaska. It will be sent to any address for six cents. The book is "Wonderland 1906," published by the Northern Pacific railway, and is for general distribution. Send six cents to A. M. Cleland, general passenger agent, St. Paul, Minnesota, or as many times six cents as you wish copies, with proper addresses and the little volume will be promptly forwarded by that gentleman. Don't wait. The book has an object—to educate and inform the public about the Northwest. Help it perform its mission.

PALMA MADE A REQUEST

Asked for Intervention by America Early in September.

Announcement of This Fact Causes Amazement in Havana.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Secretary Root made public yesterday the correspondence leading up to the intervention in Cuba. The correspondence took place between Consul General Steinhardt at Havana and Acting Secretary Bacon of the state department. An important feature developed in the dispatches was that intervention was asked by the Cuban government as early as Sept. 6, and that as long ago as Sept. 14 President Palma had determined to resign as president of the republic, and that the vice president and cabinet ministers had also determined to no longer continue in office. It is also shown that intervention by the United States has long been planned by the Palma government and was communicated to the state department in a letter by Consul General Steinhardt as early as Sept. 5.

Havana, Oct. 5.—That ex-President Palma early in Sepetmber asked for American assistance in the protection of foreign lives and property is not considered surprising here, in view of his subsequent request upon Mr. Sleeper, the American charge, and Commander John C. Colwell of the cruiser Denver. But that he suggested calling congress to ask for American intervention as early as Sept. 7 is considered surprising, and that on Sept. 13 he officially asked for intervention and had then irrevocably decided to resign, causes amazement.

The correspondence between the state department and Consul General Steinhardt in connection with Cuban intervention reveals the truth of the rumors current here at the time, and which were persistently denied at the palace, ex-President Palma declining even to speak of intervention. Had this correspondence not been published the impression would have continued here that Senor Palma yielded to intervention only after Messrs. Taft and Bacon had found it impossible to reconcile the Cuban differences.

Secretary Root's assertion about giving the republic another trial is regarded, in view of the present outlook, as idealistic rather than practical.

VAST AREA OF FERTILE LAND

In Northern Minnesota That is Awaiting Drainage and Settlement.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Having just returned from a trip up the Minnesota & International railroad, given by the Northern Pacific railway officials, for the purpose of demonstrating to their guests the possibilities of Northern Minnesota as an agricultural district, the value of the territory in its present state, and how the same could be enhanced by the extension of a system of drainage, similar to the one now in operation, but necessarily on a larger scale, I will give you some of the ideas that I have formed. I have not been able to get at a definite amount of land lying idle at the present time in this district that will compare favorably with the district we traveled over, but know of my own knowledge that 15,000,000 acres will not measure the same. No doubt many of your readers will question this, many more will wonder why this vast domain is lying idle, and thousands of our friends, as well as the cream of our foreign immigration, passing on and making homes in the Canadian Northwest, a country not nearly as fertile nor of as many great opportunities.

What we saw in the shape of grains and other products grown on reclaimed swamp lands was a marvel to the advocates of drainage, was beyond comprehension to the men who had taken the stand that Northern Minnesota was mostly sand and rocks. In fact, many of those present could not believe their own eyes, but after mingling with the people of the different towns from Grand Falls to Bemidji, finally became convinced that it was all real, and began to ask why this vast district was so neglected as to drainage and settlement. I had the pleasure of listening to a number of very fine speeches made by members of the party, but was more pleased with one statement made by a party who had been skeptical as to the agricultural possibilities, and consequently unfavorable to drainage, than anything that took place on this trip. This party had been very careful to take samples of soil, and I was very anxious what his conclusion would be in the matter, and when he summed it up was very pleasantly surprised. He stated that a careful analysis of the soil showed that it was rich in a certain bacteria which had to be produced in most of the other districts of the Northwest by fertilizers and cultivation, and stated that without the same, clover and tame grasses were not a success; that the lands we had passed through today, instead of having a lasting quality of a few years, could be made, by a rotation of crops, to be more fertile at the end of ten years than at present, and would keep on improving instead of degenerating, as the soils that lack this certain bacteria must, unless the same is added by fertilizers.

This statement made me wonder whether it would not be possible to have our next legislature provide for a fund of not less than $100,000 annually for a period of ten or twelve years to drain the wet state lands; why we should not have an ample fund for advertising our vast resources, and to keep men at the prominent ports of entry to our nation, to choose the desirable parties to come to this country, and head them this way, where there is ample room for many millions, especially as these foreigners are acquainted with conditions as they exist here, from their own country, and will not only make a success of agriculture, but will in a few years own and control valuable farms, and help to make this country the greatest producer of any part of this great nation. I cannot conceive anything that could be more beneficial than this trip, and the effects will be a stimulus for drainage, which will be followed by immigration and good roads, and in the near future be the means of the upbuilding of this district into an empire beyond the comprehension of the most sanguine of any of its advocates. Thanking you in advance for space and courtesy, I am, respectfully yours,

J. S. GOLE,
Secretary Drainage League.

GETS JAIL SENTENCE

Charles Nowak is Punished for Violating Quarantine Law.

Health Department Intends to Prosecute All Quarantine Breakers.

"I want this man and others to understand that when the health department quarantine a house it means to enforce the quarantine," declared Assistant City Attorney T. J. McKeon, in municipal court this morning, when consideration was given the case of the city against Charles Nowak, of 7 West Ninth street, who was charged with breaking the quarantine.

Nowak was arrested last evening by Health Inspector A. J. Bauers. He was taken to the police station where a charge of drunkenness was also entered against him.

On the motion of Assistant City Attorney McKeon, this morning, Judge Windom suspended sentence on the drunkenness charge and disposed of the other case, that of a violation of the health ordinance.

Health Commissioner Dr. Murray and his inspectors testified that Nowak's house has been quarantined because of a case of diphtheria. They claimed that the department has been repeatedly troubled by Nowak, who would break the quarantine in the morning, hide in some of the saloons all day and go home at night. Yesterday it was determined to put a stop to his action and Inspector Bauers laid in wait and caught Nowak while he was on his way home in a state of intoxication.

Nowak claimed that the doctor attending his child told him he could leave the house to get medicine, but the health commissioner testified that the attending physician made a statement denying that he ever told Nowak he could leave the house. In any event, it was shown that the health department is the proper source to give permission to leave a quarantined house.

Health Commissioner Murray called the attention of the court to the danger that attends the breaking of quarantine before permission is given. He cited one fatal case of diphtheria in the East end residence district, where he could only account for the case through some carelessness in observing the quarantine regulations. He said that the only possible way he could figure it out that the contagion was carried, was by a washerwoman who came from a district where another case had been quarantined.

Nowak urged the court to let him off without punishment. He claimed that his wife is in bad health, and that they have a family of eight children to support. The testimony showed that Nowak had something over $20 on his person when arrested, and the health department will look after the family while the quarantine is in force.

Judge Windom sentenced him to a term of five days in the county jail without the alternative of a fine.

The health department is now exercising extra vigilance with reference to the quarantine regulations and it is stated that any future violations will be treated even more severely.

ROD IN ST. PAUL SCHOOLS.

Corporal Punishment the Only Means of Getting to Bad Kids.

St. Paul, Oct. 5.—Corporal punishment for school children, under the direction of school principals and with the consent of the parents of erring youth, has been authorized at a meeting of the St. Paul school board. The action was taken at the suggestion of S. L. Hecker, superintendent of schools.

Corporal punishment will only be resorted to, however, when "other reasonable means of direction or correction prove ineffective," and the consent of the parents of children marked for punishment must be obtained, before force is resorted to. This consent must be in writing and every case of corporal punishment must be reported to the superintendent of schools.

The action of the school board, according to Superintendent Hecker, was taken as the result of requests from parents who are powerless to enforce the proper behavior of their children, and who think that "lickings" administered by the school authorities might have more effect than the gentle application of the family slipper.

FORMER LEGISLATOR DIES AT FREEPORT.

St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 5.—Frank Benolken, for many years prominently identified with public affairs in Stearns county, died yesterday morning at his home at Freeport. He was for years a member of the county offices. He also represented his district for several years in the legislature.

ASK BURNS' PARDON.

Ceda Falls, Iowa, Oct. 5.—A petition for the pardon of Charles Burns, who shot and killed his father-in-law, Bartlett Stone, during a family quarrel, is being circulated in this city and has been very generally signed. No one so far has raised any objection to the release of the young man, who has served two and a half years. Burns has been a model prisoner. His sentence was for fourteen years.

IOWA HEN AHEAD.

Lays Egg Every Twenty-Four Hours and Twelve Minutes.

Lake City, Iowa, Oct. 5.—After reading of the North Carolina hen which was reported to the agricultural department as having made a national record for itself in laying 276 eggs in one year, E. J. Jasper of Calhoun county now comes to the front with a record made by one of the Plymouth Rock hens of his flock.

The hen, which is a 2-year-old pullet, laid from Feb. 3 to Sept. 25—202 days—a total number of 153 eggs; that is, an egg every twenty-four hours and twelve minutes. The southern hen did the act every twenty-five hours and a fraction.

PREFERRED DEATH TO BECOMING A MANIAC.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 5.—Rather than live and be a raving maniac, Ralph Bolding, who for some time has been engineer in the Elliott hotel, blew his brains out at 1 o'clock yesterday morning as he sat on the edge of his bed in the Elliott annex, on Fourth street.

When found by searchers, after a hunt of almost half an hour, Bolding lay dead in a pool of his blood. It is evident that death came almost immediately. A note left by the despondent man stated that he preferred death to insanity.

STICK PIN COSTS AN EYE.

Kaukauna, Wis., Oct. 5.—"Pete" Husting of Fond du Lac, the well known ball player, was the victim of an accident this week, which made necessary another operation on his eye. While near his wife he turned his head toward her, running one of the combs in her hair into the socket, causing a blood clot, which was removed by a local physician. The pain resulting from the second accident was nearly as intense as that of the first. Mr. Husting intends to be fitted with a glass eye within a few weeks.

FIRST BIG MEN'S MEETING SUNDAY

Miss Ben O'Liel Will Illustrate Life and Customs in Palestine.

The first big men's meeting of the year under the auspices of the Duluth Y. M. C. A. will be held next Sunday afternoon at the First Methodist church when Miss Ben O'Liel of Jerusalem will deliver a lecture on the scenes and life in the Holy Land. The association had intended to hold the meetings at the Lyceum theater, but as the theater can not be secured until after the end of the month, the meeting Sunday and the next one following will be held at the First Methodist church.

Miss Ben O'Liel is a Christian Jewess and has had a wide experience as a lecturer, having appeared in England, Scotland, Canada and the United States where she has been received with enthusiasm. Her work appeals to the general public who are always interested in hearing more about the land of the Jews, and her popularity is shown by the great variety of her engagements during the last few years. She is a gifted speaker and holds her audience in rapt attention througnout her lectures.

In presenting her glimpses of the life in Palestine, Miss Ben O'Liel is assisted by thirty persons arrayed, as is their leader, in genuine Palestine costumes, a different set for each scene. By means of these assistants and the costumes of the natives of Palestine the scenes are made very realistic and give one a much clearer and wider idea of life as it is lived in the Far East.

Aside from the lecture of Miss Ben O'Liel at the meeting, Prof. Raynor, formerly of Montreal, will give an organ recital, and a male quartet will sing several selections. The meeting will begin at 3:15 and admittance will be free, although a collection will be taken up to help defray the expenses.

Miss Ben O'Liel comes to Duluth direct from Chicago where she appeared before the Rock River conference. A large attendance is expected Sunday afternoon. The meeting is for men only.

The Sunday following, J. Smith Darmon of Macomb, Ill., will address the men's meeting on the subject, "The Potter and the Clay." Mr. Darmon was formerly a potter before he took up association work and illustrates his lectures himself.

FLEEING FROM HER HUSBAND

Russian Elopers, Pursued by Raging General, Reach Paris.

Paris, Oct. 5.—Great interest was created here when it was learned that the fugitive Russian lieutenant, Gabriel Essipoff, accompanied by the wife of Gen. Oushkaoff, had arrived here yesterday from New York. They had come on the steamer Savoie, flying from the vengeance of the husband and former friend of Lieut. Essipoff.

The runaways landed at Havre yesterday morning, and arrived at the St. Laurez station last night. They traveled under assumed names, and were accompanied by an elderly woman. The passengers on the Savoie were not aware of their identity, but Essipoff was recognized at the station here. He was completely surprised when addressed, and in reply to inquiries, said:

"I have nothing to say. We wish to be left alone. We are quite happy."

"Do you know Gen. Oushakoff threatens to kill you?" was asked.

"Yes," was the answer, "but he will never find us. We will be gone before he arrives here."

The fugitives then took a cab to a hotel in the Rue De Rivoli, but later changed their quarters several times and succeeded in hiding their tracks. It is believed they intend to take another ocean steamer.

The elopers fled from St. Petersburg several weeks ago, closely pursued by the general, who tracked them to various cities in Europe, and finally reached Hamburg two hours after they had sailed for New York. The general followed on the next steamer, only to find upon his arrival there that his wife and the lieutenant had returned to Europe on the Savoie. Gen. Oushakoff is now on board the steamer La Provence, on his way here.

WILL SELL HIS LAND.

Pavlograd, Russia, Oct. 4.—Count Vorentzoff-Dashkoff, viceroy of the Caucasus, has offered to sell his estate near here to the peasants with the proviso that the allotments shall not be less than ten acres to each purchaser. The estate consists of 80,000 acres.

APPLES ARE PLENTIFUL

Quality Good and Commission Houses Well Supplied.

Supply and Demand of Poultry and Fish Balanced.

The produce market hasn't much new to offer this week, either in prices or eatables. The supply of green goods is pretty well exhausted, although there is a fair supply of green vegetables. There have been no pronounced changes in the prices of any of the offerings.

* * *

Apples are now here in abundance, and from this on until the close of the season will be plentiful. The fruit is of exceptionally fine quality. Most of it up to the present time has been from the Southern states, Missouri and Kansas, principally. No New York apples have been received yet, but they will be coming along in a short time now. The supply from New York arrives via the lakes. The demand is good and the market steady.

* * *

Grapes are a scarcity. No Michigan grapes are on the market, but those from New York will be here in a few days. There is a good supply of Western fruits. Colorado peaches are being received. They are claimed to be the finest raised, and are given a place in advance of any produced in the state of California or elsewhere in the country. The quality is all that could be desired this year.

* * *

One of the first sights greeting the visitor in one of the Michigan street commission houses is a huge pile of pumpkins. They bring appetizing thoughts of big, yellow pies, and the barrels of cranberries standing near by, with vegetables which usually adorn the Thanksgiving tables, remind one that November is fast approaching. Cranberries are now coming along in liberal supply.

* * *

The poultry and fish market appears to be in a satisfactory condition. There is just about enough fish and poultry to supply the demand, and little more. The market stands in no danger of being flooded, and, on the other hand, there is no shortage in the supply. The lake fish were pretty well cleaned out of the local market yesterday, but an incoming boat today will put the dealers in a position to supply their trade. Trout and lake trout are selling at 11 cents, live hens at 10 cents, spring hens at 10½ cents, ducks at 11½ cents, turkeys at 16 cents and geese at 12 cents.

NO MATTER WHAT HE DOES.

Murphy Says Tammany Will Support Hearst Under Any Circumstance.

New York, Oct. 5.—"No matter what Mr. Hearst does, we are going to support him," said Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany hall, last night, when asked in the course of an interview what attitude Tammany hall will assume in case the Independence league nominated candidates in this city for the various judicial, senatorial and assembly offices.

COMMERCE IS IN FEAR

That China's Policy Tends Toward Revival of Old Corruption.

Example of What the New Customs Edict May Restore.

London, Oct. 5.—In a memorandum to the British foreign office the president of the China association has included a highly interesting report on Chinese administration of the customs when unhampered by foreign control. In discussing the recent edict changing the control of the customs, the memorandum expresses the fear that China's policy tends toward a revival of the old corruption. What this means is vividly shown in the report of the acting British commissioner of customs at Santuat, who says in part:

"The Santuao native customs consists of one head office and nine branch stations. Until we assumed charge, these were controlled by individuals who, following the usual Chinese official practice, surrendered a fixed sum annually to the government, appropriating for division among themselves whatever was collected above that amount. As a result, there were many serious irregularities. Bribery and corruption existed everywhere; smuggling was connived at, if not openly permitted; duties were not correctly assessed; there was a complicated system of exchange; certain goods enjoyed preferential rates; the picul was at all times a conveniently variable quantity; examination of cargo was but a figure of speech, and interpretation of the regulations varied in accordance with the amount of money that could be extorted from traders. The fixed sum that had to be remitted annually to the government was Tls. 11,100, including Tls. 2,000 paid to the provincial authorities by the director as the price of his appointment. The collection of this amount gave lucrative employment to nearly 600 persons, of whom 540 were on the official pay list. The director's salary was there given as Tls. 2 to Tls. 3 a month; clerks and writers were apparently considered handsomely paid at Tl. 1 to Tls. 2 monthly, whilst subordinate employes were put down for sums varying between 50c and $1 a month—which, it is stated, they never drew.

"The whole sysetm of collection was extremely involved. In addition to the tariff duties proper, fees were levied on all goods according to thei rsize, destination of provenance, or the nature of their cargo. The variety of these fees was infinite, their name 'legion,' their end—the pockets of the enormous staff; for whilst, in principle, all duties collected were supposed to be rendered to the government, the fees seem to have ben instiutd primarily to supplement the official pay of the employes, which was, as already shown, ridiculously inadequate. The obsolete nature of the tariff itself which, compiled more than a century ago, contains no mention of many of the principal articles of trade, was sufficient excuse for the introduction of certain fees. Others were subscribed by merchants themselves, to purchase partiality of treatment, clearance at night, or quick dispatch—the last an important matter in a place where the movements of boats so absolutely depend on wind and tide. Sometimes what was intended as a temporary or special charge became a fixed and recurring fee; but, generally speaking, any excuse seemed to have served the native customs employes for improvising new taxes, in which they displayed remarkable ingenuity. Thus, the refusal of some examiners to verify—without extra compensation—a cargo of malodorous cow bones led to the institution of what was euphemistically termed a 'handkerchief fee.' Once upon a time some trader desirous of clearing after dark paid a gratuity to certain guardboats, which was thenceforth regularly collected, under the name of 'candle fee,' from every applicant. Boatmen dealing in edible goods having complained that the sampling propensities of the preventive staff cut too big a hole in their profits, a 'spear fee,' intended to mitigate the annoyance, was devised. Such was the origin o fsome of these fees—that of others is lost in the mists of ages; but time and usage may be said to have legalized them all. The worst feature about these fees was the manner of their levy; each one was calculated and collected separately, the offices being divided into numerous compartments, presided over by different clerks each with his particular tariff, and applicants had to visit each compartment in turn. It was impossible to check the amounts leviable; there was always a good deal of chaffering, and the delay to traders may be imagined.

"Our responsibilities at Santuao commenced Nov. 11, 1901. * * * It was soon seen that, in order to obtain any material progress, the nettle must be grasped more firmly. The number of employes was therefore reduced from 540 to 96, the pay of those remaining being substantially increased. 'Squeezing' was rigorously suppressed; smuggling was checked; the movements of boats were more closely controlled; cargo was subjected to proper examination, and attempts were made to stamp out irregularities of all kinds. The result of these measures was soon apparent. During the first year of our administration the revenue rose to Tls. 61,262—nearly six times as much as the fixed annual sum previously reported. In the course of the next two years other improvements were effected. But premier place among the reforms introduced must be given to the revision and amalgamation of the fees. * * * But amalgamation was not always such a simple matter as the above examples would tend to show. Thus, an unlicensed boat, on entering with a cargo of salt fish, paid, besides tariff duty on her cargo, six separate fees, some of which were variable; in addition, she was subject to package and license fees, which had to be calculated in nine different ways, according to whether she carried 10, 20, 30 or more piculs. By the revised method the same boat now pays a fixed license fee of Tls. 0.30 and Tls. 0.1.34 on every picul of her cargo.

"Other improvements followed the amalgamation of fees. The exchange rate of the dollar was properly adjusted. Formerly it varied at the different stations between 900 and 1,000 cash; it is now accepted at all our offices in payment of duties at the fixed rate of 1,068 cash. A book showing, in local currency, the duties and fees leviable on every article usually imported or exported, and the dues on every boat entering the inlet, was prepared, and is on sale to the public. The numerous cubicles forming the old office were done away with; duties and fees are now paid at one place and in one sum, the new method permitting every applicant to know exactly what he has to pay and that he is being correctly dealt with. The time saved in calculation is considerable, and traders are no longer subjected to annoying delays. The staff was further reduced; it now consists of seventy employes, who are comfortably housed and well paid. The cost of collection is kept within reasonable limits, and it is no longer the division of an excessive surplus among a swarm of parasitic drones. It would be, perhaps, too much to assert that irregularities do not exist, but their scope is certainly extremely limited.

"In 1905, the fourth year of our administration, the native customs revenue reached Tls. 81,807—more than seven times the amount formerly remitted to the government. This excellent result must be attributed to an increasingly effective control, to the introduction of salutary reforms, and to that growing sense of confidence among traders which more businesslike methods have inspired."

DESIGNED BY Hirsh, Wickwire & Co.

We are about to publish a new weekly. A magazine so different in purpose and scope and usefulness that people will wonder why it was not published long ago. It seems to us that this great country of ours with all its forcefulness and enterprise can afford to be constantly in touch with itself. We believe that we have discovered a way by which we can give the people something they very much want and something that they now have no other way of getting.

The unique feature of Ridgway's is, that it will be published from fourteen cities simultaneously every Saturday morning. How are we going to do it? Well, here is our plan, and we think it will look as good to you as it does to us. We shall maintain a complete organization in each of the following centers where Ridgway's is published: New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, San Francisco, Washington, New Orleans, Seattle, Atlanta, Denver, Cleveland, St. Louis, Pittsburg, St. Paul and Minneapolis. In each of the fourteen cities there will be a managing editor, with associate editors, correspondents, special contributors, artists, advertising and circulation managers. We intend with the aid of our editors all over the country to get to the scene of every important event at the earliest moment after it has happened. At midnight of the day preceding publication each of the local editors will wire to New York a brief editorial story of the events of his section that he believes will be of interest to the rest of the country. In New York, editorial writers with Samuel Hopkins Adams in charge, will go over these stories, shape them up, being careful not to destroy the local color, and wire three or four pages of finished editorials back to each branch, thus the whole country will contribute to the national editorials. A few hours later Ridgway's will be on the presses in fourteen cities being printed at newspaper speed.

The local news and editorials will be treated just as thoroughly by the local editor for his own section. We have secured the best man obtainable in his district, one who can reflect the life of his section, in Business, Politics, Sports, Finance, Society and Education, week in and out. There will be nothing but clean, crisp, up-to-date news that will keep wide-awake readers alive to the big events that are happening around them.

What about stories and illustrations and general articles? We shall have plenty of them. The best we can buy. We believe in humor and every form of wholesome amusement. Nothing will be left undone to make these features a great success with our readers. We shall seek contributors everywhere. Ridgway's will undoubtedly make a great many literary reputations, just as Everybody's did. We are already able to announce a great serial story by Joseph Conrad, to be called "The Secret Agent." It will begin in the first issue. Mr. Conrad has written sea stories that have made him famous. In The Secret Agent he has entered a new field. It is a story of European Diplomacy. The scene is laid in London, well-known as an asylum for European Anarchists. A story of this kind is necessarily full of action and fascination. The Secret Agent is especially so.

Gelett Burgess will conduct a department of humor, consisting of at least four pages each issue, fully illustrated. It will be kept up-to-date. When you see the first number you will appreciate how good this department is. Mr. Burgess will have the aid of the best artists and illustrators at home and abroad. Another feature of the illustrations will be a sixteen-page section of half-tones printed on super paper, depicting important happenings, local and national. There will be weekly full-page cartoons, true to the topic and the times.

Here are some of the contributors who are now at work for us:

Emerson Hough,	Winston Churchill,
Broughton Brandenberg,	Agnes Laut,
Ernest Poole,	Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd,
Harvey J. O'Higgins,	Jacques Futrelle,
Charlotte Perkins Gilman,	Henry C. Rowland,
Ralph D. Paine,	George W. Ogden,
John L. Mathews,	Lucia Chamberlin,

One of the greatest features of Ridgway's will be the Washington Bureau, under the direction of Martin Egan. We propose to tell you in an interesting way, every week, just what each department of the national government is doing in our service. Mr. Egan will have a staff of twelve associate editors in order to cover every department of the government. There will be special representatives for the Senate, the House and the Diplomatic Service. This Washington Bureau will make us better Americans. We are all interested in our great big government, yet, how much do we know about it?

What will be the policy of Ridgway's?—principally to tell the truth. We shall go for the big things. We shall not try to run down or over anybody. If there are two sides to a question, as nearly always happens, we shall tell the truth on both sides, and our aim will be to tell the truth, not because it pays and not because it hurts, but because it helps. If we give things as we find them the average American citizen can be trusted to reach a very definite conclusion by the shortest possible route. We shall stand squarely on the platform "A Militant Weekly for God and Country."

Ridgway's will be on sale everywhere tomorrow morning. It will be a 64-page weekly, and will be sold at 10c a copy or $5.00 a year. We advise you to get your order in early because advance orders indicate a big demand, and we shall not print beyond immediate requirements. You can buy Ridgway's in the same way as your newspaper or magazine. It will be sold by the newsdealer and the newsboy, on the stand or in the street.

MANAHAN PERSISTS

But Finds Out Little of Omaha Political Contributions.

Also Going Into Matter of Rebates to Some Interests.

St. Paul, Oct. 4.—Efforts to locate a "yellow dog" fund on the books of the Omaha road at the hearing on commodity rates before the railroad and warehouse commission yesterday were futile J. T. Clark, vice president of the Omaha, stated that he did not dispute the testimony of general manager Trenholm that the expenses of some few men had been paid during the La Follette campaign in Wisconsin. L. A. Robinson, auditor of the company, testified at the afternoon hearing that he had looked the matter up and there were twenty men in all whose salaries and expenses had been paid during the campaign.

"And we," declared Thomas Wilson, general counsel for the Omaha, "are both ready and anxious to produce these vouchers."

Mr. Manahan then made demands for the books and vouchers concerned with the payments made through the legal department and the commission is now awaiting an opinion of the attorney general before determining whether the request of Mr. Manahan will be granted.

"How much money in the aggregate did your company spend in the political campaign for La Follette?" was the first question put to Mr. Clark.

Here Mr. Wilson entered a general objection, declaring that Mr. Manahan had no right to conduct the hearing and that the witness did not appear upon Mr. Manahan's subpoena but out of respect to the commission. His objection was not sustained and Mr. Manahan was permitted to inquire into the alleged contributions to defeat La Follette.

Mr. Clark stated that he had no knowledge of any money expended for political purposes himself, but he understood through the testimony of the general manager that such had been the case.

An attempt was then made to show what part Solin Perrin, formerly a counsel for the Omaha at St. Paul has played in the La Follette campaign. Mr. Clark testified that he did not know of any political services performed by Mr. Perrin while he was retained as an attorney or legal adviser of the Omaha.

Here Judge Wilson broke in and stated that rather than contributing money for politics the road had been denounced for not doing so. Mr. Manahan attempted to find out from which sources the denouncements were made but the commission ruled that the question was irrelevant.

Mr. Clark was then asked if he had not talked over the La Follette campaign with Mr. Perrin but on the advise of the counsel he declined to answer the question. He testified that he had not spent any of his own time to defeat La Follette.

"Is it not true that Marvin Hughitt, president of the company, made a contribution out of the funds of the company amounting to $50,000 for a political fund? Was it not to the national campaign fund of one of the parties?"

Mr. Clark declared that he did not know. He was then asked concerning the part M. L. Phipps of Hudson, Wis., had played in the La Follette campaign in the way of acting as an agent for the Omaha. He denied knowledge of the matter.

After the probing for political contributions was completed, the attorneys for the shippers took up the matter of special privileges, which, it is alleged, have been given to certain line elecrors in the Northwest.

"Is it not true that certain advantages are given to the New Richmond Roller Mills of Wisconsin, of which Senator Moser is an officer?"

The witness knew of none nor did he know of any in connection with the business handled for the Nye-Jenks and McCall-Webster grain companies. He was requested to look up the records and determine if any such advantages had been given.

The afternoon testimony was given by L. A. Robinson, auditor of the company. Through him an attempt was made to show how the expenses paid for the men engaged in political work had been credited. He declared that the vouchers did not show on their face how the money had been spent but was credited to individuals. He declared that the total amount spent as referred to by Mr. Trenholm would not amount to $700.

Word was received that Judge Severs, general counsel for the Minneapolis & St. Louis, would answer questions relative to the drawing of the drafts which have been a matter of controversy at several of the recent hearings.

PROPERTY OF CHURCH

Catholic Parishes in France Are Organizing to Secure Titles.

The Vatican is Looking for Relief by the Ministry.

Rome, Oct. 5.—New developments are in sight regarding the conflict between the Vatican authorities and the French officials, just now the principal subject of discussion by Catholics here and abroad, because of the enormous financial interests of the church that are involved. Some of these new phases are such as to cause uneasiness in the Vatican, although they were foreseen as far back as the time when the scheme of the separation law, drawn up by M. Briand, was submitted to the French parliament. It was then feared that if the law were adopted, many in France, claiming some connection with the church, would attempt to organize culturil associations in order to obtain from the government the titles to church property, parochial or diocesan. The event has proved that the fear was well founded.

So far as has been reported, four French priests have organized such associations in their parishes, against the determined stand taken by the pope and the prohibition of the bishops. They are the parish priests of Curley in Meuse, of Putmician in Lot and Garonne, of Bourglvilain in Saone and Loire, and the Abbe Ozouf of Merville in the diocese of Bayeux. Nearly all of these priests, it is said, have been in trouble with their bishops, and thought the best way to get out of it was to assume title to the ecclesiastical property of the parishes, with the aid of the new law and the government officials.

These are but isolated cases. Wholesale attempts to organize such associations have been made all over France by disaffected clergymen. Among them is the Abbe Meillon, formerly an army chaplain, who has started a movement for a French national church, independent of the pope's authority. His plans are to establish the religious associations in every parish, or in as many as possible, and to run the church independently of the Vatican. No alarm is felt here about his scheme, as the Vatican has information of the unpopularity of the abbe, and has received assurances that the plan will fail.

Another movement of the same kind is causing greater uneasiness at the Vatican. It is an attempt by M. Henri des Houx to organizze a Gallican church. He has already the support of about 10,000 lay Catholics. The plan which he has made public contemplates the establishment of an association in every French parish to take title to the church property. It is his avowed purpose, however, to turn over the property afterward to the bishops of the dioceses and the parish priests appointed by them. M. des Houx is well known at the Vatican, having been first secretary to the French embassy under Pius IX. The Vatican authorities believe that he is acting in good faith and for the interest of the church, and although they caused his plans to be severely criticized in the Osservatore Romano, official organ of the holy see, it is general opinion here that the church authorities would be only too glad to obtain title to the ecclesiastical property in France under the new law, without giving official recognition to its provisions. Some prelates even express the opinion that the movement of M. des Houx was started with the full approval of the authorities of the church.

It is certain that hope is still entertained at the Vatican that the French ministry will submit to parliament at its session in November some amendments to the law, making it less objectionable to the church, and preventing schismatic or disaffected corporations from taking title to church property. The negotiations spoken of in this letter last week are still going on in great secrecy, and there is hardly a doubt in Vatican circles that they will bear some fruit.

Just as the troubles which threatened the Spanish government had been successfully settled, though the pleasant relations existing between the Vatican authorities and the royal family, another difficulty looms on the Vatican horizon. It takes the shape of a bill which the British government proposes to introduce in parliament at the coming session, giving full recognition to all religious bodies on the island of Malta. According to an agreement made between the British government and the Vatican over a century ago, when the island came under British control, the Catholic religion was to be the only one recognized; other faiths were simply to be tolerated. Following instructions received from the Vatican, the archbishop of Valletta will issue an official protest against the plan, and in the meantime the good offices of influential English prelates have been enlisted to prevent the passage of the bill.

The congregation of propaganda has just decided to make the diocese of Galveston, Tex., the head of a new ecclesiastical province which shall include the dioceses of Dallas and San Antonio and the vicariate of Brownsville. Mgr. Gallagher, the prelate now in charge of the Galveston district, will be made an archbishop, and as such will enjoy the same privileges as the other eleven prelates of that grade in the United States.

The recall of Mgr. Sbarretti, apostolic delegate in Canada, who is now on his way here, foreshadows great changes among the representatives of the Holy See abroad, which may include the recall of Mgr. Falconio, apostolic delegate at Washington, and his replacement by the Canadian delegate, who had several years' experience as auditor of the Washington delegation. Then there is to be filled the nunciature of Lisbon, which will probably be done by the transfer of the nuncio at Bruxelles. Mgr. Rinaldini, papal nuncio in Spain, will probably leave his post before the end of the year, owing to recent attempts of the liberal ministry to break up the concordat and adopt measures objectionable to the church. Many other changes in papal delegations are looked for.

The new general of the Jesuit order, Father Wernz, will soon start on a tour of inspection of all the houses of the order. The tour may include the United States, it is here reported. If it does it will be the first time that a "black pope" has set foot on American soil. The only plan definitely made is for a visit of a new general to Spain next month. All the Spanish provincials will assemble at the College of Azpeitia, built on the site of the mansion of the Loyola family, of which Saint Ignatius, founder of the Jesuits, was a descendant. Great religious celebrations have been arranged for the visit of Father Wernz, in which the Spanish hierarchy will take a prominent part.

The appointment of a German as head of the Jesuit order has just made people here realize that most of the heads of religious orders who reside in Rome are Germans and add enormously to German influence in church matters. Most of them were elected in the past ten years. The situation points vividly to the new Vatican policy of fostering German interests in the church. The Benedictine order, at least that part of it ruled by the Montecassino congregation, has for its head Father Boniface Krug, a favorite of the German emperor, and its primate is another German, Father Abbott de Hemptinne. Father Ehrle, director of the Vatican library, is a German Jesuit, as are many of the professors in the Gregorian University. Another German, Father Rans, is the superior of the Redemptorists, and their procurator, Father Oomens, is also German. Father Schaeper is procurator general of the Congregation of the Precious Blood, and Father Steyl is superior of the Fathers of the Divine Word. Other German subjects are Father Meyer, superior of the Carmelites; Father d'Andermatt, general of the Capuchin order; Father Reuter of the Minor Conventuals, and the general secretary of the Brothers of Saint John of God.

BELTRAMI COUNTY WHEAT

Pronounced the Best Raised in the State This Year.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Prof. Thomas Cooper of the state school of agriculture at St. Anthony Park, who was here last week and assisted the judges in awarding the prizes at the children's grain growing contest, has written a letter to County Superintendent Regan, in which he states that he has shown samples of the wheat that was exhibited at the contest to seed experts, and that they have pronounced the wheat that won first and second prizes as being the best they have ever seen of any wheat grown in the state this year. This statement from so eminent an authority certainly speaks well for the productiveness of the soil of Beltrami county.

Charles Saxrud and Hans Hanson, who have been jointly operating a threshing rig this fall, report some excellent yields of grain which they have threshed for farmers in Beltrami county.

The field of oats on the poor farm, which has been admired by those who visited the farm, threshed out 238 bushels from the field of about five acres, an average of fifty bushels to the acre.

In Frohn township they threshed grain for J. B. Hanson which averaged fifty bushels to the acre for the wheat, forty-five bushels for the barley, and the wheat, which was of excellent quality, afforded a yield of twenty-three bushels to the acre. They state that this average was maintained by every farmer in Frohn township.

TWO MEN FOUND DEAD.

Employe of the Powers-Simpson Company and a Farmer.

Hibbing, Minn., Oct. 5.—Two sudden deaths have occurred this week, August Osell, an employe of the Powers & Simpson company, was found dead in a shack which he usually occupied. He had been seen the night before when he had been drinking, but apparently not to excess. He was a man about 45 years of age and leaves a wife and three children at Harris, Minn.

Wednesday afternoon John Gustafson, who has had charge of the Niberg farm, five miles south of the city, was found dead in his house on the place. Gustafson lived on the place entirely alone and it is impossible to say how long he had been dead when found. He was in Hibbing Saturday night and purchased some supplies, since which time nothing had been seen of him. He was about 60 years of age and leaves no known relatives.

SOUTHERN TOWN SUES FOR "MALARIA HEDGE."

Calhoun, Ga., Oct. 5.—The controversy between the town of Calhoun and the county commissioners as to the ownership of the pine thicket located about two blocks west of the station will probably come to an end soon.

In 1833 John P. King of Augusta deeded a number of lots in Calhoun to various parties, and to guard the inhabitants of the town against malaria from the mill pond, left a twenty-one acre tract of pines between the mill pond and the town. In the deed on record he specified that the big thicket should remain as town commons and that no timber should be cut from said thicket or lots disposed of without the consent of the judges of the inferior court and John P. King.

The town officials claim that the wording, "shall remain a town commons," placed the ownership in the town, and that in order to prevent the town from ever cutting any of the timber or selling any lots of the property he made it necessary for the town officials to get permission from the county commissioners and himself, while the county officials contend that the wording means that, with the joint consent of the county commissioners and John P. King's heirs, the property can be sold.

Recently the county commissioners and Harry King, heir of John P. King, sold a building lot off the northwest corner of the property to George Gardner. Mr. Gardner began at once to build a residence, when the town enjoined him. At the August term of Gordon superior court Judge Fite sustained the town's claim, and the fight now goes into the supreme court.

The people feel relieved that the ownership of the property will be decided and the contention ended. Should the county commissioners and the King estate gain the decision, the thicket will be sold out in building lots for building purposes. On the other hand, if the town is the winner the thicket will remain as at present.

OPENS CAMPAIGN IN WISCONSIN

John A. Aylward Makes His Keynote Speech at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Oct. 5.—The Democratic state campaign opened here last night, when John A. Aylward, the candidate for governor, spoke on the principles of his party before an enthusiastic gathering in Pabst theater. He dwelt upon both national and state issues and paid a high tribute to William J. Bryan. Mr. Aylward was frequently applauded and his reference to Mr. Bryan caused a great demonstration. He spoke in part as follows:

"I take this first opportunity to give to the Democrats of Wisconsin grateful thanks for the great but undeserved honor they have conferred on me in naming me as their candidate for governor. However, I do not take this as a personal compliment, but rather as an endorsement of the Milwaukee platform and my cordial support of it.

"Let the opening thought of the campaign be one of joy, encouragement and hope for the Democracy of Wisconsin. Tonight, as not for many years, the Democracy of Wisconsin is united.

"The Democratic party, long the conservative party by the trend of events, has become the progressive party. In the national convention at Kansas City in 1900 it was enthused with the old spirit, and with a foresight akin to prophecy, and wrote a new declaration of independence."

Referring to the Kansas City platform, Mr. Aylward spoke of Mr. Bryan as a "matchless statesman and the great commoner."

The money question, as Mr. Bryan pointed out in his recent New York address, he said, is solved to the satisfaction of both parties to the issue.

"The people are awakening to the true situation and to a realization of their rights and power," he continued. "They insist on the basic principle of the Democratic party, and the remedies proposed are:

"First—To subject, regulate and control the railways and other transportation companies to prevent excessive charges, rebates and discriminations, so that, as our platform says, 'they shall be operated for the benefit of the people for whom they were intended.'

"Second—To revise the tariff and reduce it to a revenue basis, to the end that it shall not shelter or foster trusts or monopolies.

"Third—To control, regulate and subject, and if need be to own and operate, the different municipal public service corporations.

"Fourth—To destroy special class legislation and inaugurate the rule of equal rights to all and special privileges to none.

"Fifth—To establish a uniform and equitable distribution of the burdens of taxation."

Continuing, he said: "This is the situation, and these measures of relief are prayed for and demanded by the people. In this situation, which of the great parties shall take up and bear the burden of the people's battle?

"Here lies the duty and the hope of the Democracy as adopted by our solemn declaration of principles and by organic constitution we should be prepared to meet the existing situation.

"In the history of this country there never has been such a reckless waste of the public moneys. Boards and commissions have been multiplied until now we have some thirty-three commissions, each with its members's assistants, clerks and stenographers. The reading of the recent candidate's platform calls for additional commissions. A multitude of useless officers and employes have been fastened upon the state for political purposes.

"For denial of the Republican platform's claims of 'conspicuous economies businesslike administration of affairs of state,' and in support of our charges we appeal to the public records as kept in the office of the secretary of state."

The speaker also dwelt at length on state issues, scoring the Republican administration for the alleged excessive expenses incurred by the various departments of state government.

SHOPLIFTER SWALLOWS PEARLS, BUT DISGORGES.

Paris, Oct. 5.—A shop-lifter with novel methods has been made to disgorge $700 worth of pearls that he had swallowed in a jeweler's shop.

He was a Turkish gentleman and said he wanted a pearl necklace, for which he was willing to pay $2,500, as a gift to his fiancee. The assistant noticed that he seemed to be licking the pearls of one necklace he was examining. It was then discovered that the cord of another necklace had been bitten through.

The Turk was arrested and searched, but no pearls were found on him. He was then taken before a magistrate, who ordered an emetic to be administered. The wily Turk was found to have swallowed two fine pearls, worth $400 and $300.

A MAN'S HEART STOPS BEATING

For a Period of 30 Minutes and Then Resumes.

Yonkers, N. Y., Oct. 5.—Edward McElroen of Yonkers came back to life after lying apparently dead in a hospital for half an hour with stilled respiration, a heart that had ceased beating, and a body that had already grown cold.

The case is one of the most remarkable in the medical annals of the world. Never before, when it had been demonstrated by all known tests of modern surgery and medicine that a body was bereft of life, has it been resuscitated.

But, testifying in the Yonkers police court in the case of the people against Fire Commissioner Burns of Yonkers, accused of assaulting McElroen during a fight seven weeks ago, Dr. George Rublee of St. Joseph's hospital declared that under the eyes of the entire hospital staff the man had returned from death to life.

McElroen, who is over six feet tall and a man of great strength, was taken to the hospital unconscious from two blows which Burns had struck upon his head, inflicting a compound fracture. With the surgeons and nurses of the hospital assembled about the operating table, Dr. Rublee had just begun to drill into the terribly injured skull, when a fellow surgeon told him it would be useless to go further with the operation, as the patient was unquestionably dead.

Dr. Rublee says he applied every known test. McElroen's heart had ceased to beat, and there was no movement of respiration. And, though the candle and a dozen other means by which physicians make sure of death in extreme cases were employed, all hope was given up after half an hour, when it was found that the body was cold.

The physicians began to clean their instruments and sent for a porter to carry the body away.

They were startled by a gasping breath from the operating table. The "dead" man had moved one arm from his side to his injured head, and in a wheezing smothered voice whispered: "For God's sake give me salt!"

The hardened doctors shrank away from the sight of this miracle, and two of the nurses screamed and almost fainted. But in a moment Dr. Rublee hurried back to the operating table.

Something in the instinctive call of nature for help when death and life were battling had prompted the man to cry out for the saline solution, which is known among all medical men as the one drug that comes nearest to restoring life, and the physician ordered a nurse to hurry salt and water and a syringe to the patient.

When the salt had been injected into an artery, the surgeon started artificial respiration. Oxygen and ferum were also injected, and after two hours' hard work, McElroen, although still unconscious, showed sufficient signs of returning life to be removed to a bed, where, with the aid of blankets and powerful drugs artificial heat was put into the body that had been cold, and the heart began to beat.

For several days the big man hovered on the verge of death that had once claimed him, but finally nature and the ministartions of the doctors won their case, and he began to recover rapidly.

The great crowd in the police court gaped in astonishment at the complainant against Burns, as Dr. Rublee told the remarkable story. Although his head is still a mass of scars where his skull was fractured, McElroen appeared as strong and as healthful as ever.

The court was so impressed with the resurrection of the man that he adjourned the case for a week. Spectators say they did not wonder, as it would be hard indeed to pass judgment upon a man who, if he were guilty, had realy killed a man.

FOREIGN OFFICE SILENT.

Says Nothing as to Rumored Recall of French Ambassador to Russia.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 5.—Nothing was obtainable at the foreign office or at the French embassy here regarding the report from St. Petersburg, in the Morning Post of London, that the French ambassador to Russia, M. Bompard, will be recalled because he expressed himself in strong terms against the regime of Premier Stolypin. The statement that M. Bompard will be recalled, however, is generally accepted as true, although the change is attributed rather to the retirement of Former President Loubet, M. Bompard being his personal representative, instead of to criticism of the Russian premier's administration.

S.S.S. DRIVES OUT RHEUMATISM

The aches and pains of Rheumatism are only symptoms which may be scattered or relieved with liniments, plasters, blisters, etc., or quieted with opiates. As soon as the treatment is left off, however, or there is any exposure to dampness, or an attack of indigestion, the nagging pains, sore muscles and tender places on the flesh return, and the sufferer finds that he has merely checked the symptoms, while the real cause remains in the system. The cause of Rheumatism is a too acid condition of the blood, brought on by indigestion, chronic constipation, weak Kidneys, and a general sluggish condition of the system. Waste matter collects in the system each day which nature intends shall be carried off, but when it is left because of a sluggish condition of the system it sours and forms uric and other acids. These are taken up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body to produce the pains and aches of Rheumatism. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism by going down into the blood and driving out the cause and making this life stream rich, pure and healthy. When the blood has been purified and built up by S. S. S. the pains and aches pass away, the muscles become soft and elastic, and Rheumatism driven from the system. Book on Rheumatism and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

ARRESTED IN RUSSIA

Professor Blakeslee of Clark College Tells of His Experience.

His Guide Circulated Manifesto and Jeopardized Party's Safety.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 5.—Prof. G. H. Blakeslee of Clark college gives this account of his arrest in Russia the past summer:

Volokolamsk had the reputation this summer of being a district where the revolutionary feeling among the peasants was particularly strong—therefore it was a place to be visited. There were four in our party, an interpreter, who was a Russian who had lived several years in the United States; his brother, one of the editors of a radical Moscow daily; a guide supposed to be able to put us in touch with some of the more interesting peasants, and myself.

Volokolamsk is one of the farming districts in the province of Moscow, situated about four hours' ride by train west of the city. The drive through the country began not long after sunrise. Two genial peasants were found who agreed to take us all day in their typical peasant wagons, which they partly filled with hay until they looked much like small hayracks. We rode for hours through fields, some of which belonged to peasants, and some to a large proprietor. The almost universal crops were grain, flax and occasionally potatoes; but the yields were very poor.

A peasant village was finally reached, miles away from the railroad, where the unusual sight of city people drew a crowd into the street. The first thing the men wanted to know was whether we had any connection with the police. In this particular hamlet it was evidently fortunate for us that we could prove to their satisfaction that we were in no sense government representatives. They were then perfectly friendly, and gathered about the guide, listening, talking and arguing by turns.

As soon as the discussion began the interpreter said: "These peasants are certainly revolutionary. They are all ready to burn the proprietor's estate." They had several definite grievances, besides the general complaint that they did not have land enough, and that the proprietor either would not sell at all or else would not sell at a reasonable figure. They said, among other things, that they were fined every time their cattle waded to the opposite bank of the stream, which separated the proprietor's land from their own, and that if the cattle happened to get into the edge of the grain on the other bank, the fine was excessively heavy. They had tried to put pressure upon the proprietor by refusing to work for him, but the Cossacks were then sent against them, and several of the young men of the village were arrested and carried off.

In the next village an event had recently happened which had greatly incensed the community. They had elected a certain peasant to be one of their officials, but the election was set aside by the authorities. The peasants elected this same man a second time, but the authorities thereupon resorted to a ruse by which they took this popular peasant away from his home and then arrested him. So this village, unusually prosperous as peasant villages go, was thoroughly dissatisfied; but the peasants evidently had no idea of doing anything in regard to the matter.

Another long drive brought us to a large village where our guide left us, and where it is very probable that he distributed some copies of the Viborg manifesto, the appeal signed by the majority of the Douma immediately after the dissolution, which called upon the people to refuse to pay taxes or to furnish soldiers.

When it was getting dark we stopped in a tavern in another place to get supper. We had hardly been seated before the most intelligent looking young man in the room came over to the interpreter and showed him a copy of the Viborg manifesto, asking him if he had read it. This was a dangerous thing to do, for these proclamations are revolutionary and it is not even safe to have a copy in one's possession.

It was nearly midnight when we reached the village from which we had started in the morning. We tried to find some spot where we could sleep before the 2 o'clock night train came, which would take us back to Moscow. A small mattress was finally found.

It was nearly train time when I was awakened by angry voices. I could see the interpreter in a violent dispute with a Russian official who wore a long, dirty, gray overcoat and had hard, unintelligent features, which were partly covered by a bristly, black beard. He was a policeman. Behind him stood a group of inquisitive yet timid peasants, who had gotten up from their snug corners on the floor to see what was going to happen. Something was wrong, that was clear, and the policeman had come to see about it. The dispute grew more violent, till finally the policeman left the room. "I suppose you know what has happened," said the interpreter, "the police have found revolutionary proclamations in that large village where our guide left us, and this policeman says that we must have distributed them. He wants to know where the fourth man of our party is, for he hears that there were four of us. He is not satisfied with our documents, and demands that we go to the village police station. We have refused, so come along to the depot, for it's nearly time for the train. Perhaps he'll let the matter drop." I thought to myself that in America such a cordial invitation of the police could not be so lightly refused. But at the depot the dirty, gray uniform was again seen; there were two officers this time and they were armed. We might take the train for Moscow, they said, but must stop at the capital town of the district, Volokolamsk, and be examined by the chief of the police there. So we were under arrest in Russia; the only thing we could do was to telegraph to the American consul in Moscow, whom I had called upon a couple of days before and whose letter of identification I had with me.

It was just getting light when we got out at Volokolamsk. Here the policeman kindly allowed us to have breakfast at the railroad restaurant, after which we started for the town where the ispravnik, the chief police official, lives. The drive had its humorous side, for the interpreter and the editor insisted upon arguing the rightfulness of the arrest with the policeman who rode with us. They told him that he ought to be satisfied by our documents, that he had no right to detain us, and that he would simply inconvenience us and get himself into trouble. The poor policeman listened patiently to all this eloquence, and from the expression on his face it was clear that it made some impression upon him. He was in doubt as to whether he had made a big mistake or had succeeded in arresting some particularly dangerous revolutionists who were trying to conceal their identity by foreign papers.

Volokolamsk was formerly a city of considerable importance. It has an old citadel, inside of which are a cathedral, some official residences and a building which is a combined barracks, court house and jail. It was to this building that we were driven. Here our valises were deposited and we were told that we must wait until the ispravnik should come to examine into our arrest. It was now 6 o'clock; we were kept waiting for the appearance of the ispravnik for five dreary hours. Our peace of mind was not increased by being told that the ispravnik suspected that we were revolutionists and would probably detain us some days. There was not much to do while we waited; we walked around some and tried to enjoy the secenery, but we were too tired for that, and while my two companions lay down on the ground and went to sleep, I watched the barracks from which the soldiers were beginning to come out in twos and threes. The prison end of the building was the most interesting, however; the high, sharp-pointed post fence which surrounded the prisonyard looked exactly like some of the familiar pictures in Kennan's book on the Siberian exiles. The prison door opened, and a score of unfortunates tramped off in prison uniform to begin their day's work. There was plenty of time for meditation, and I meditated, and finally felt convinced that I was not in the slightest danger, but that there was some chance that all of us might be detained for two or three days pending a careful examination. That would mean imprisonment behind that post fence.

Finally the ispravnik appeared, and we met him in the court room. He is a handsome soldierly-looking man, and from the first was extremely courteous. He said to me that while we might carry on our conversation in German he had thought it would be more agreeable for me to talk in English, so had brought his wife to act as interpreter, for she had been some time in the United States. "Why did you come into our poor district," the wife asked, "and cause us so much anxiety? What can have been your motive? Didn't you know that these towns are dangerously revolutionary? If you wanted to see the country and the peasants, why didn't you come to us first, and we would have been glad to show you everything." I explained the situation to Mrs. Ispravnik while the editor was delivering a Russian oration on the same subject to Mr. Ispravnik. After reading my documents which officially vouched for nearly every act of my life and which it seems to me, ought to have been examined as soon as we reached Volokolamsck, the suspicion we were foreign revolutionists disappeared. About the same time a telegram came which I rightly suspected was from the governor of Moscow. Consul Smith had very kindly visited the governor, after he had received our dispatch, and had requested him to telegraph for our release. It was now evident that all danger, even of detention, was past, but the copying of the documents and the drawing up of the official papers took some three hours longer. It was past 2 o'clock before we could leave the hall.

The court officials came out of the building with us, and with great kindness acted as our guides in showing us some of the interesting sights of the citadel. The ispravnik's wife invited us to see her garden, and when we arrived there we found that she had prepared dinner for us. We had a delightful time, and found the ispravnik and his family very enjoyable people. The wife finally spoke of the intense anxiety which the revolutionists caused her. "They kill the police officials so often," she said, glancing with anxious pride at her handsome husband: "Every time he leaves home I am in terror for fear that they may bring him back shot or blown to pieces by a bomb. The ghastliness of Russian conditions never struck me with more force.

There was a curious sequel to the story of our arrest. The editor tried to make political capital out of our experiences, and wrote several articles upon the subject in the radical Moscow daily, the substance of them being that the Russian authorities were to blame for this intolerable outrage which had been practised upon an American who was visiting Russia merely for the purpose of studying the country. After a criticism of especial severity, the authorities interfered and confiscated the paper. This cost the daily at least $1,000, and when I left Moscow it was not yet definitely settled whether or not the paper would be permitted to continue, even under a new name and under a different editor.

A Reasonable Plea For The Stomach

If Your Stomach is Lacking in Digestive Power, Why Not Help the Stomach Do Its Work—Especially When It Costs Nothing to Try?

Not with drugs, but with a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach? Scientific analysis shows that digestion requires pepsin, nitrogenous ferments, and the secretion of hydrochloric acid. When your food fails to digest, it is proof positive that some of these agents are lacking in your digestive apparatus.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain nothing but these natural elements necessary to digestion and when placed at work in the weak stomach and small intestines, supply what these organs need. They stimulate the gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been subjected to critical chemical tests at home and abroad and are found to contain nothing but natural digestives.

London, 9th Aug., 1905.

I have analyzed most carefully a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets (which I bought myself at a city chemist's shop for the purpose), manufactured by the F. A. Stuart Co., Temple Chambers London, E. C., and have to report that I cannot find any trace of vegetable or mineral poisons. Knowing the ingredients of the tablets, I am of opinion that they are admirably adaptable for the purpose for which they are intended.

(Signed) John R. Brooke, F. I. C., F. C. S.

There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Their composition is commonly known among physicians, as is shown by the recommendations of 40,000 licensed physicians in the United States and Canada. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, water brash, insomnia, loss of appetite, melancholia, constipation, dysentery and kindred diseases originating from improper dissolution and assimilation of foods, because they are thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are at once a safe and a powerful remedy, one grain of these tablets being strong enough (by test) to digest 3,000 grains of steak, eggs and other foods. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

NO TRUTH IN STORY

That Oliver Herford and His Wife Are Not Happy.

London, Oct. 5.—Up to now, the only notice which Oliver Herford has taken of the ludicrous report, published by a New York paper, to the effect that he and his wife, who were married only last winter, were about to separate, has been to authorize an American press agency to publish a specific denial of the story, for which he declares there is not the slightest foundation in fact.

Ordinarily, there are few people whom it is harder to get angry than the whimsical author of The Bashful Earthquake, but indignation is a mild word to use in describing the feelings of both Mr. Herford and his wife, who are living happily in London at present, over the baseless and cruel report as to a supposed disagreement between them.

"Not only are my wife and I on the best of terms," said Mr. Herford today, in authorizing me to print a detailed refutation of the statements which have been made, "but the first inkling which we had that anything to the contrary had been given publicity was when the American post brought us copies of the scurrilous story printed in New York. This story, which alleged that we had found each other's wit too keen for everyday life has since been copied, in part, by a Manchester journal, and I purpose to take immediate action for libel against that periodical and to institute legal proceedings against the New York newspaper which first printed the fabrication as soon as I can get back to America, which will be about the 30th of this month.'

Like her husband—who, though most of his reputation has been made in the United States, is an American only by adoption—Mrs. Oliver Herford is a British product. Previous to her marriage she was Miss Margaret Regan, the daughter of Thomas Regan, a wealthy resident of London who, prior to his retirement several years ago, was a prominent surgeon-dentist of Manchester. Incidentally, Mrs. Herford has been, for many years, one of the most intimate friends of Cecilia Loftus, and it was, in fact, as the guest of tha popular actress that the former Miss Regan paid her first visit to the United States some three years ago. It was during her second visit to America that she and Oliver Herford met, and after a short courtship they were married quietly at Miss Loftus's flat in New York, Elwyn Barron, who has written several successful novels and plays, being the best man. Witty and charming in manner, Mrs. Herford's talents run in much the same direction as those of her husband, much of her time before her mariage having been devoted to story-writing, several smartly written tales from her pen having appeared in various London periodicals.

DOLLIVER MAKES SLY DIG AT LA FOLLETTE.

Indianola, Iowa, Oct. 4.—Senator J. P. Dolliver paid his respects to "traveling politicians" here yesterday afternoon. He called no names, but nearly every one in the large crowd who heard him said that he was hitting Senator La Follette, who during the past few months has been unsparing in his criticism of his colleagues who refused to support his amendments to the rate regulation bill. Senator Dolliver denounced men who go from one Chautauqua platform to another, branding public officials as unworthy of confidence. He declared that the present administration had done more to expose and punish graft than had been accomplished before in twenty-five years.

STATE SEEKS TO TAX MILLIONAIRE'S ESTATE.

Stillwater, Oct. 4.—The case of the state against the estate of David Tozer for the collection of inheritance taxes on from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000, is being heard here by the probate judge of Washington county. The state claims the tax, despite the fact that the property of Mr. Tozer was made over to a corporation some time before Mr. Tozer's death. The case involves an interesting point involving the inheritance-tax law.

Fred S. Foster, treasurer of Washington county, yesterday married Mrs. David Pringle, one of the popular school teachers of Stillwater.

The city council has appointed a committee consisting of Alderman Ryan, Kelm and Schroeder to confer with the county board with regard to improvements on the city hospital.

AMENDS REGULATIONS.

Railroads Can Ship Where Labels and Stamps Are Not Obtainable.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The secretary of agriculture yesterday promulgated an amendment to the meat inspection regulations designed to cover cases where meats and meat products had been inspected and passed and were ready for interstate shipments but which could not be shipped because of the lack of labels and stamps. Under the new regulations the department will permit the packer to make shipment but he must give a certificate to the railroads that meats have been inspected and passed. The requirement is made that the packer must at once notify the department of the number of pounds shipped, and the place or places to which the meat is shipped, failure to do which will subject the offenders to a fine of $10,000 or two years' imprisonment.

SHOCKED FLAT DWELLERS.

Living Picture Shows by Young Artists' Models.

New York, Oct. 4.—Three young artists' models have so upset a Washington Heights apartment house that eight wives marched eight husbands into a Harlem court to describe the scandalous sights they saw. None of the men wanted to be the one to tell. Finally they offered up as a sacrifice Israel H. Pinner, who, with his wife, lives on the second floor of the apartment building. Pinner told a story of free living pictures shows that caused Magistrate Walsh to adjourn the case until today.

The tenants said they had been seeing all sorts of sights from their back windows, which are directly opposite a flat occupied by the three young women. Investigation proved them to be the Sanson sisters—Caroline, 22 years old; Rhea, 18 years old, and Francis, 16 years old.

Only Miss Caroline appeared in court with her attorney. She denied the charge.

"Of course, in warm weather we might have gone around in kimonos," she said, "but as for that—mercy."

ENDS LIFE AT OLD DESK.

Man Goes Back to Former Place of Work to Kill Himself.

Long Prairie, Minn., Oct. 4.—A. M. Wildman, who had charge of a grain elevator here for a number of years until a few weeks ago, committed suicide. While the young man who is now in charge of the elevator was out on the railroad track, Mr. Wildman entered the office, and sitting in the chair, placed his revolver at his right temple and fired a bullet into his brain. The agent heard the shot and hurried to the office, where he found the man dead, still sitting in the chair with the pistol in his hand. Despondency is supposed to be the cause of the suicide. Wildman was 60 years old. He is survived by a widow.

THRESHER FATALLY HURT.

Young Man Is Frightfully Injured by Boiler's Explosion.

Campbell, Minn., Oct. 4.—Carl Jackson, a young man working with a threshing crew near here, probably was fatally injured by an explosion of the boiler of the engine which was running the threshing machine. The firebox was blown off and the crown sheets blown out, striking Jackson with such force that both legs were broken and his skull probably was fractured. He also was badly scalded by the escaping steam. None of the other workmen was injured. State Boiler Inspector Nelson, who was in town at the time the boiler exploded, went out to the farm where the explosion occurred and decided that it had been caused by low water in the boiler and a heavy fire.

CRAZY MOTORMAN

Runs Crowded Car Across New York at Full Speed.

New York, Oct. 5.—A street car filled with terrified passengers dashed across New York yesterday at full speed, while the motorman, Leo Schwartz, suddenly bereft of his reason stood on the forward platform flourishing a heavy controller bar and threatening to brain any one who approached him. He was finally subdued and the car brought to a stop after a desperate struggle with half a dozen policemen and street railway employes during which several passengers jumped from the swiftly moving car and sustained painful bruises. One of the men who fought the mad motorman was severely injured.

GORDON FURS

IN Fur Garments much depends upon the selection of skins. The Gordon Astrakhan shows a long, flat curl, brilliant luster and dense nap that vies with the beauty of the more expensive Persian Lamb. In wearing qualities the odds are all in favor of the Gordon Astrakhan.

Marie

Gordon Astrakhan Garments

The popularity of the garment pictured here is well earned. While not an expensive jacket, there is an air of affluence about this garment that commends it to those who lean toward luxury and durability that will appeal to the thrifty.

Made from several different grades of fresh-dressed, Leipsig-dyed Astrakhan skins, in lengths ranging from 27 to 40 inches. The prices range from $30 to $65.

WARREN TO BE OPENED

New Arrizona Townsite to be Pushed at Once.

Construction of Street Railway and Utilities to Begin.

Bisbee, Ariz., Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Warren, the new townsite situated three miles from Bisbee, will be thrown open at once and construction will be immediately commenced on the sewer and water system, and street railway from Warren to Bisbee, a route taking in the principal mines of the district. Official announcement to this effect was received this morning by H. A. Smith from L. W. Powell, general manager of the Cole interests.

Warren will become one of the leading towns of the Southwest. Mr. Smith is the founder of the town and one of the heaviest stockholders. There has already been a rush for the lots. Cleveland W. Van Dyke, manager of the townsite, has many telegrams from the East and North from stockholders in the company, reserving business and residence property. W. H. Manning, who laid out the Jamestown exposition, has had charge of the laying out of Warren. The plan of the town is similar to that of Washington.

Over a million dollars will be expended in laying out the town, and in the construction of the street railway and other public utilities.

CITY BRIEFS

Tawney to Speak Here.

The Republican county committee held its first meeting in the Mesaba block headquarters yesterday afternoon. A communication was read to the effect that Congressman James A. Tawney of Winona would speak in St. Louis county during the campaign. Whether he will be in Duluth or on the ranges has not been announced, nor has the date of the speech been decided on. Senators Nelson and Clapp will also speak in St. Louis county, together with A. L. Cole, Republican nominee for governor.

Resumes Work on Main.

John Wanless, the submarine engineer who has the contract for laying the water and gas mains across the Duluth ship canal, began yesterday the work of putting in the flexible joints and connecting up the water main. Owing to the length of the pipe it was found that the strain was too great on the joints when the diver attempted to make the connection and the water department ordered several new ball and socket joints with the idea of installing them at more frequent intervals and thus relieving the strain. The joints have just arrived and their installation in the main will be carried forward as fast as possible.

Now An Excellent Road.

The old logging road between Hibbing and Bear river is now one of the best roads in the county, in the opinion of County Commissioners John Sundeen and E. M. Patterson, who returned yesterday from a trip on the range, where they have been inspecting roads since Monday. Repairs have been made during the summer on the road which has left it in the best of condition. Commissioner Patterson left this morning to inspect the bridge over the Cloquet river on the Vermilion road and this evening Commissioners Kauppi and Sundeen will go out to Floodwood to inspect roads in that vicinity.

Still Many Delinquents.

There are 522 personal property taxpayers who are still delinquent in paying their 1905 taxes and who must pay by November or explain to the judges of the district court the reason why. Citations under the unsatisfied warrants returned last July 23 are now being prepared by Sheriff Bates and after the property owners have explained or failed to explain why their taxes have not been paid, the county will take judgment for the amounts as in any suit of law.

Department Makes Good Showing.

During the month of September stolen and lost property to the value of $1,502 was reported to the police department of this city and the report of the detectives, which has just been completed, shows that $1,129 worth of the property was recovered, or a little more than 75 per cent of it. The detectives investigated, during September, fifteen petit larceny, ten grand larceny and five burglary cases.

A Surprise Party.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Fairfax of 402 East Fifth street, were surprised at their home last evening by a large company of friends. About fifteen couples were present and the evening was spent in card playing. Refreshments were served.

Contractor Fined.

John A. Johnson, the contractor, who is building the Ford livery barn on First street and Second avenue West was fined $5 and costs by Judge Windom this morning for breaking the city ordinance regarding the obstruction of the streets.

THE POLICE COURT GRIST

Several stars appeared on the boards at the municipal court this morning and the session was of more than usual interest.

The first on the program was John McCuen, a woodsman who was before the court less than a week ago and who was at that time given a three-day term in the county jail for drunkenness. Last evening John fell from grace again and an unfeeling policeman rounded him up at the central station. For the sake of variety he was charged with vagrancy.

McCuen freely admitted his former appearance, but claimed he was not a vagrant, because he had money.

"Sometimes a man is a vagrant even if he has money," remarked the court. "How much money have you left John?"

"A little better than $1 Your Honor. You see judge, I came to town about the 17th or 18th of September with $100 money. It was mine to do with as I pleased, wasn't it? I never did any begging. You can ask any of them along the Bowery if I did. It's the only enjoyment us fellows have, who work in the woods."

"Seems to me," interjected Chief Troyer, "that he spent his money pretty fast at that rate."

"Yes," added the court "John was real extravagant."

Questioned further McCuen admitted that when he was let out of jail a few days ago he drew $50 from the bank and spent that amount in having another of his so-called "good times."

John made a strong plea that he be given a chance to get out of town and promised that he would give no further trouble.

Judge Windom decided to take him at his word and imposed a fine of $10 and costs, suspending sentence if McCuen would get out of the city before 2 o'clock this afternoon.

• • •

James Dillon, or "Whistling Jimmie," as he is better known to the court room attaches, made his periodical appearance in court this morning and was called on for the second stunt.

Jimmie began with his usual plea that if the court would only let him off this time he would not touch another drop.

"I've just been in jail twenty days, sir," pleaded Jimmie. "I got out a couple of days ago and earned a dollar and blew it in. If I had $100 I'd have blown that in too. Sheriff Bates thinks a pile of me sir, and I've been helping do the work at the jail. They all think a great deal of me sir, at the jail.

The police report showed that Jimmie, when arrested was quite abusive and threatened to throw a bomb at the officer who arrested him, when he should once more be free.

This explanation made things look a little black for Jimmie and he became rather apprehensive.

"Your Honor can see that I am very feeble?" he declared. "I couldn't harm any one. Just give me a light sentence and I'll not trouble you any more."

"Did you ask for a life sentence?" asked Assistant City Attorney McKeon in mock surprise.

Jimmie was not to be caught napping and the spirit of the Celt cropped out when he came back with his answer.

"Only ninety-nine years, sir."

"Well," said the court, "I'll sentence you to pay a fine of $40 and costs in default of which you will stand committed to the county jail for a period not to exceed ninety days."

"Thank you, sir. Good luck to you, sir," mumbled Jimmie, as he dropped back into his chair resigned to spend another three months at the place where they liked him so much.

The third feature of the program was a specialty by Nelson Nolte, a young man who was arrested on the charge of drunkenness, last evening, and who had some well developed symptoms before morning.

In general appearance Nolte appeared to be rational, but after the rambling story he told, all doubt was dispelled as to his mental condition, and the court gave him a twenty-day jail sentence, with the hope that the enforced restraint would enable him to collect his faculties again.

Nolte claimed he got off a boat at the ore dock, last evening, and that a man, one of the passengers, held him up with a big revolver and took his watch and $7 in money. He claimed that while he was walking up the dock, one of the women passengers, with a rifle, stopped him and took away $14 which he had hidden in his sock. Nolte claimed the woman was accompanied by a big black snake that coiled around and around like a lasso. He was positive that he saw the reptile following her every movement. He further claimed that during his second hold-up the man who first robbed him, and another woman, came up, and the latter wanted to take his suit of clothes, but the woman who robbed him said he was a good fellow and could go.

BUILDING AT BEMIDJI DROPS

Nearly Four Feet While Being Raised and is Badly Wrecked.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—While the building belonging to the Mondeau estate, located on Minnesota avenue, was being raised Wednesday afternoon by means of jackscrews and blocking, the structure dropped a distance of nearly four feet, and was badly wrecked, the glass front being smashed to small bits, the sidewalls more or less damaged, and the contents of the interior almost totally destroyed.

It was by the merest chance that no one was injured by the wreck, although several men were working about the building, and six men were inside on the first floor and one occupied a room on the second floor.

The building has been occupied by Andrew Dahl, who has conducted a saloon business, and he had a large stock of liquors and cigars. J. T. Williams of Bemidji had the contract to raise the building four feet, to conform with the grade established by the city, and he had succeeded in raising it three feet.

ROLLS UNDER CAR WHEELS

Eleven-Year-Old Boy Instantly Killed in West Duluth.

Thrown From Wagon and Head is Crushed by Wheels.

Another story of the circumstances attending the death of 11-year-old Charlie Baum, the West Duluth boy who was run over and killed by a street car at the corner of Fifty-second avenue west and Ramsey street, last evening, was encountered in West Duluth this morning.

According to this later account, the rig in which young Baum was driving was not struck by the car at all. Coming from Fifty-second avenue on to Ramsey street, the boy did not see the car until it was almost on him, as there is a large building at the corner. He turned the rig quickly enough to get it clear of the tracks, but the street has lately been torn up in that locality, in order to lay the new gas mains, and in filling in, the workmen had left a large mound all along the line of excavation. At the crossing a walk of planks, and a rough platform, had been constructed, several inches above the street level, in order to enable people to board the cars, and when the wagon struck this obstruction, it tipped, so that young Baum was thrown off the seat. In the meantime the motor man, seeing the track was clear, had speeded up his car again, and was alongside the rig when Charlie fell. The boy struck one of the car windows, cutting his forehead severely on the broken glass, and then dropped to the ground, the mound throwing his head and shoulders beneath the wheels.

He endeavored to draw back, but the wheels were upon him before he could escape, and his body was shoved along the rails for about a yard before the wheel passed over it, nearly severing the neck and breaking the jaw. Death was probably instantaneous, as he was dead when picked up.

The condition of the wagon and harness bears out this story and it is said that the horse simply stumbled and fell on striking the planking in the road, the shaft being broken in his fall. It is certain that the animal was not struck by the car, as it is in no way injured, and it is possible that its falling caused the wagon to tip, so as to throw young Baum out. The other two boys, young Hobner, who was supposed to be in charge of the rig, and John Burr, his companion, were not thrown out of the rig or injured in any way.

While an older driver would probably not have been caught in such a position, nor would he have been thrown out by the wagon's tipping, the Baum boy did very quick work in getting the rig out of the way, and as the motorman thought that the track was clear, he was apparently not to blame.

The company's representatives were out taking measurements and looking over the ground this morning.

The funeral of the unfortunate lad will be held tomorrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock, from the Asbury M. E. church, and interment will be at the Oneota cemetery.

WOMEN'S MONEY GONE.

Minneapolis Woman's Work in Wisconsin Condemned by Authorities.

New Richmond, Wis., Oct. 5.—Some two score and more women in this city and vicinity are on the anxious seat owing to a decision of the state insurance commissioner, backed up by an opinion of the attorney general, revoking the license of the Modern Protective Association of America, with headquarters in Sayre, Pa. This is a sort of an investment and savings association, according to its literature with certain life insurance features. It has been represented locally for some weeks past by Mrs. Ida A. Crisp of Minneapolis. A thorough canvass of the city and vicinity has been made by her, and a local branch or lodge of the association was to have been organized in this city by her today, with some forty odd charter members.

Mayor S. N. Hawkins, backed up by the action of State Insurance Commissioner Sturdevant, has put his foot down on the proceeding.

Mayor Hawkins and an officer called on the local representative of the association and gave her the first news, so she said, of the action of the state officials. She had had no notice from the home office. She expressed her surprise at the proceeding and declared that she was innocent of any wrong intent in the matter. She declares that she will stay right here and see the thing through, and will put forth her very best endeavors to secure a refund of the money already paid in by the prospective members.

Young Woman Finds Infant's Mangled Body in Her Trunk.

Philadelphia, Oct. 5.—Hidden in a trunk owned by a young woman boarder at the Young Women's Christian association building, at Eighteenth and Arch streets, was found on Saturday last the body of a murdered infant. The arms and legs had been cut off, and from the condition of the body it was evident that the child had been beaten to death. The coroner's office kept the matter secret until yesterday. The authorities entirely exonerate from blame the young woman in whose trunk the body was found, and the officials of the association, who are in a position to know of the physical condition of each of their 300 boarders, are positive that none of them was the mother of the child. The fact that a strict surveillance is kept upon every person entering the building adds to the mystery.

William J. Diehl Changes His Plea to Guilty at La Crosse.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 5.—William J. Diehl, charged with using the United States mails to defraud, changed his plea of not guilty to that of guilty before Judge Sanborn in the United States court. Sentence has been deferred until the December term of the United States court at Madison. The government charged that Diehl operated under the names of the Pine Tree company, ordering supplies from firms about the state, refusing to pay on a pretext that the consignment was defective, and selling the materials to other parties at a value under the market price.

George Forbes, an employe of an automobile company in this city, was arrested by the local police on information from the sheriff at Portage, Wis., charging him with deserting his wife and family. He will be taken back to Portage.

E. M. Behr, charged with the fraudulent use of the United States mails, was free for a few minutes, when Judge Sanborn granted a motion made by the defendant's attorney asking that the indictment be quashed on the ground that the government had not set up sufficient facts upon which to hold the defendant. The defendant was re-arrested, however.

DREAMED HE SAW HIS WIFE KILLED

Strange Story is Told by Murdered Woman's Husband.

Parker, S. D., Oct. 5.—How came Mrs. Harry M. Collins to her death while sleeping peacefully by the side of her husband? Was she murdered by burglars, as her husband declares, or was she the victim of a plot by someone who ransacked the house to give color to the burglar story?

On their face, the facts show that burglars entered the sleeping apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Collins in their farm home three miles from here, chloroformed Mr. and Mrs. Collins and then looted the house without awakening Mr. or Mrs. Collins or the two children, or Earle Collins, aged 17, sleeping in an upstairs room. But there are so many remarkable features of this burglary story that people of this community are casting about for some other explanation.

Collins has told officers that he dreamed, in all its details, of the horrifying death of his wife, and did so on three successive nights preceding the murder.

"One night I awoke with a start," he said, "and found myself with revolver in hand, pointing it at the window through which the robbers afterward entered and chloroformed my wife to death. Before her death I told her of my dream. One night we heard the dog barking, and she said: 'Harry, there are the robbers you dreamed about.' The dog stopped barking and we went to sleep again, but nothing happened that night."

Mrs. Collins was lying dead in bed, a pillow over face and mouth, when Collins awoke Monday morning. He drew the pillow from her face and called to her, but received no response, he says. He shook her, but still she was silent. The two children, aged 5 and 3, were still sleeping quietly in the room. Collins called upstairs to his brother, who immediately came down. The house was topsy-turvy. When Earle came down Collins told him he thought burglars entered the house and chloroformed himself and wife, and that his wife had died from the effects. He said $117 he had drawn from the bank Saturday had been stolen.

Collins rushed from the house in his night attire, and the brother was sent to a neighbor, who called for help. When the brother returned Collins had gone back to the death chamber. He said he had tried to telephone, but found the wires cut outside. When the neighbors came they found a horse saddled in the yard. Collins had said the burglars stole a horse on which to escape. The blanket on this horse showed no marks from the saddle, indicating that no one had ridden the horse. Some say the horse showed perspiration caused by a hard run.

Someone about the house—some say Collins and some say his younger brother—told the county authorities that the window through which the robbers are supposed to have entered was found to have been raised to a height of four to six inches, and that the curtain was still down. The authorities are puzzled to know what manner of man could tear off the screen, break the fastener that held the window down, enter through a space between four and six inches, chloroform Mrs. Collins and her husband, rob the house, ransack the rooms, cut the telephone wires and take a horse from the barn and do all this without rousing Collins or his wife or the babies or the brother sleeping upstairs.

Furthermore, the brother says he detected no odor in the sleeping room when he came down. So far as known, there was no stain on the pillow over Mrs. Collins' face, indicating it had been saturated with any drug.

HIS STORY OF ACCIDENT

Peter Akin Tells How He Fell Into Test Pit.

Several Witnesses Examined in Big Personal Injury Suit.

Peter F. Akin, the young man who fell into an open test pit at the Pillsbury mine near Hibbing a year ago last August, and whose father is suing the Superior Consolidated Mining company, the Oliver Mining Co. and the Roberts-Kingston company for injuries sustained by his son at that time, was on the stand this morning and told the story of the accident as he remembered it. Akin's father demands $20,000 as compensation for the injuries to his son which it is claimed have made him an invalid and a cripple for life.

The young man in relating his story of the accident, stated that he, in company with others, had been working at the mine all night, but stopped at about 2 a. m., as it commenced to rain, making work impossible. Akin was running an engine at the mine at the time, and after the men were ordered to quit he followed another engineer in the direction of the boarding house across a field where test pits had been dug in testing for ore. He was several feet behind the engineer, who carried the lantern, and he could see only a short distance in front. In taking a forward step Akin's feet suddenly went through, and he found himself falling into the pit. He could not remember how long he remained there before he was rescued, but said that it was a long time. He was so bruised and injured that he did not realize where he was until he saw a lantern at the opening of the pit. The rescuers afterwards let a rope down to him which he tied around his body and was hauled to the top.

Akin stated that he had been at the hospital at Hibbing five days and was then taken to his home at Elroy, Wis. He had to walk upon crutches for about six weeks and has always been obliged to use a cane ever since. He testified that his eyes and head pain him nearly every day while his back also troubles him continually.

Mrs. Margaret Akin, the young man's mother, testified as to her son's health before and after the accident, and stated that he had been in the best of health before, but that since he was hurt he has been practically an invalid, and complains continually of pains in his head and back. She said that he has spells about once a week, when his head pains him especially, and when he seems to be out of his mind. On these occasions, Mrs. Akin stated, he often acted in a violent manner, and threw articles of furniture and dishes about the room. She had also caught him walking in his sleep on several occasions since the accident, while before he was injured the boy had never evinced any nervous trouble.

The evidence of Dr. E. H. Parker of Eau Claire, Wis., was introduced to prove the nature of Akin's injuries, and it showed that the chief injury seemed to be to the spine, as two of the vertebrae were slightly out of place. It was Dr. Parker's opinion that the nervous trouble was due to this spinal injury. Dr. Parker has been treating Akin since last spring, and has made several thorough examinations. He has also tested the boy's eyes, and stated to the court that there was a partial loss of vision in both eyes. He stated that the boy's injuries might all have been the result of the fall down the test pit.

The three defendant mining companies, who are represented by C. S. Wilson and C. O. Baldwin, have a number of witnesses who will testify in the case to show that the companies were not negligent, and are not responsible, and it is expected the trial will last for several days.

FIGHTS A BEAR, HAND TO CLAW

Wisconsin Hunter Shoots at Partridge and Hits a Bear.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Elmer Hill of Apollonia had an exciting experience with a bear yesterday while hunting near Cornell. He was out hunting partridges and in firing upon some of them he accidentally struck a bear lying in the thicket. The enraged bruin came out from under cover and made a leap at Hill. Then a hand-to-hand tussle ensued, which finally resulted in a victory for Hill, and the bear hurried into the tall timber. Hill then sank to the ground exhausted from the loss of blood from wounds inflicted by the bear. He was found in this condition by three companions a little later.

TABLE FACTORY BADLY DAMAGED

North St. Paul Factory Partially Destroyed—Loss $30,000.

St. Paul, Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—A fire which started in the finishing department of the North St. Paul Table company, at 10 o'clock last night, caused a damage of $30,000 to the plant within a few hours.

The building, a two-story structure, 100 by 50 feet, the upper portion of which was used for storing the finished product, the lower for oiling and finishing, was destroyed. A smaller building, in which boxes were made for table lids, was also burned. The building containing the machinery was saved.

The fire spread with such rapidity that it soon got away from the volunteer department. Aid was sent by St. Paul.

The factory is owned by John, Joseph and Frank Luger, who have operated the factory for the past twenty years. The loss was covered by insurance.

ASTOR GIRL WEDDED.

Margaret Astor Chanler and New York Newspaper Man Married.

New York, Oct. 5.—Miss Margaret Astor Chanler, great granddaughter of the first John Jacob Astor, was married Wednesday to Richard Aldrich, of New York, at Barrytown, Dutchess county, in the presence of a small number of kinsfolk and friends. The ceremony was performed in the Episcopal church at Barrytown, the nearest village to "Rokeby," the country home of the bride. The marriage was reminiscent of that of a daughter of an English peer, on account of the general rejoicing of the tenantry on the Chanler estate.

Mr. Aldrich is a well-known newspaper man attached to the staff of the New York Times in an editorial capacity.

ORGANIZE CLUB.

Norwegian Republicans Planning to Form Independent Organization.

A Norwegian Republican club will be organized next Saturday night at 1814 West Superior street in the Norwegian Turner hall. The name and the object of the club will be determined at the first meeting, over 150 representative Norwegians having promised to be at this meeting.

It is understood that the club will be an independent Republican organization. This, however, will be decided by the members at the first meeting.

Among those who are interested in seeing an organization of this kind, are: H. B. Knudsen, K. L. Fenny, G. H. Huseby, John Sandberg, Edward A. Thompson, P. Lund, H. Linness, Sivert Agre, L. Mostoe, J. Haugen, Jens Flaaten, J. J. Moe, J. C. Wesenberg, and many others.

SAYS RIVERS WILL FLOAT STEAMERS

Engineer Reports on Big and Little Fork Rivers.

Little Fork, Minn., Oct. 4.—The prospect that the federal government will undertake the improvement of the Big Fork and Little Fork rivers, so as to make them navigable for light draft steamboats, is growing brighter. Maj. R. Davenport, the United States engineer who was sent to make an inspection of the streams, has reported that the possibility of making them navigable is very apparent; that the most necessary requirement is the removal of the boulders that now obstruct the channel at low water. The sandbars in the river are so situated that boats of light draught would have no difficulty in working their way over them.

Maj. Davenport also recommends the construction of a twenty-foot dam at Twenty-Mile rapid. If this dam is constructed it will give slack water sufficient to permit of navigation as far as Flat Rock. Such a dam also would develop a water-power which would be of almost inestimable value to the surrounding country, and would result in the establishment of pulp mills right in the heart of the pulpwood district.

In view of the encouraging report made by Maj. Davenport, commercial bodies of this section expect to urge upon their congressman the necessity of incorporating an appropriation for the improvement of these streams in the next river and harbor appropriation bill.

LONE JUROR HOLDS OUT FOR CIGARETTE FIEND.

Alexandria, La., Oct. 5.—A lone juror, who for sixty hours held out and finally caused a mistrial in the case of Thomas Brady, a white man who lured a young woman into the woods and assaulted her, gives as his reason for being lenient with the prisoner that Brady is a cigarette fiend and, therefore, was not responsible for his actions. He blames the government for allowing the sale of cigarettes, and says that for that reason the government is responsible in a measure for the assault.

BULL WRECKS TRAIN.

New Richmond, Wis., Oct. 5.—Running into a bunch of cattle near here a train so enraged a bull that the animal charged madly at the locomotive, butting it from the track. The baggage car went with the locomotive, but fortunately none of the passengers or employees were hurt. The bull was killed.

There is nothing that takes away the beautiful, womanly charms like a plodding, stooped, awkward carriage. There is absolutely no excuse for that as long as Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea is made. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

RATE MAY BE LOWER

School Taxes Likely to be Less Than Ten Mills.

Increased Assessed Valuation of District is the Cause.

The tax rate for school purposes next year will probably be reduced, and it is likely that it will be under ten mills.

The board will hold its regular monthly meeting this evening, and the rate will be fixed then. While nothing definite can be known until after the meeting, there is every prospect that the rate for next year will be under ten mills, and several of the individual members of the board have given this as their opinion.

Next September a bond issue of $45,000 will fall due and this will have to be taken care of out of the regular sinking fund. This will necessitate a larger levy than usual for the sinking fund.

There will be no necessity for any extraordinary expenditure from the building fund this year, as there are no new buildings in contemplation, and an average levy for this purpose will be all that is needed.

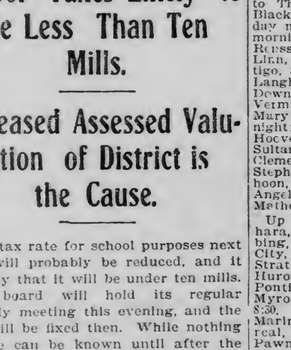

The general running expenses of the district are no lower, and probably a little higher than they were last year, but this will be more than met by the increase in the assessed valuation in city property, which greatly increases the value of a mill.

The rate for school purposes last year was 11.4 mills.

The Superb Universal STEEL RANGE.

SUPERB UNIVERSAL

Without doubt the Superb Universal is the finest High Grade Steel Range made. Note these special features:

Body of Range is made of the best quality, heavy rolled, polished steel, strongly riveted and interlined with asbestos, preventing radiation of heat, making the Range more durable and saving fuel.

White porcelain Lined Oven Door, spring balanced, reflects light into the oven, will not discolor, and is indestructible.

Fire Pot is adapted for burning all kinds of fuel, is fitted with duplex grate, which can be easily removed without disturbing other fire-box fittings, and which, when reversed, forms a perfect grate for burning wood.

Nickel Trimmings are the finest and most elaborate ever used on a steel range.

We invite your inspection of these splendid Ranges. Every Universal fully warranted.

MARINE.

Stranded But is Released.

Mackinac Island, Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer J. W. Westcott, lumber laden, stranded on Round Island, Straits of Mackinac, this morning in a dense fog. The steamer was released later in the day, and proceeded to Milwaukee.

Vessels Scarce at Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Owing to the shortage of vessels in the grain trade for early loading 2 cents continues as the rate on corn to Buffalo. The volume of business, however, shows no sign of increasing and the market will not stand any large supply of tonnage without sagging back to the old figures.

Will Soon Be Released.

Cleveland, Oct. 5.—Wreckers working on the steamer State of Ohio, which stranded on Rattle Snake island two weeks ago, succeeded in moving the boat twelve feet with jacks. Each lift sent the big steamer six inches toward the deep water and it is believed it can be entirely freed from the rocks after it has been lifted about twenty-four feet. With favorable weather it is expected the boat will be afloat in thirty-six hours.

RAILROADS

NEED MORE NICE DAYS

Railroad Contractors Are Hoping Good Weather Will Continue.

A Bad Spell Now Might Seriously Delay Operations.

The fine weather of the last few weeks has been greatly appreciated by the railroad contractors. All of them are anxious to get as far along on their work as possible before cold weather puts a stop to operations, and every nice day counts in opening a way for the completion of the several construction and repair jobs.

The better the weather the more contented are the men, and the more apt are they to stay at work. When rain prevents the crews working, the individual members are not paid, and many days of rainy weather makes them very dissatisfied, and the chances of their quitting altogether are excellent. But with agreeable conditions to work under, and with the good wages now being paid, they are fairly well satisfied, and if treated right may be expected to remain as long as the contractor wants them to.

It is more than usually desirable from the contractor's point of view that the weather remain fair far into the fall, for the reason that the amount of railroad work being done now through the Northwest is greater than during any fall for many years past. It will be impossible to finish many of the contracts before snow flies, but some of them are nearing completion, and with a little time will be finished before winter begins in earnest.

The Red River Lumber company, which is carrying on quite a lot of railroad work, is offering special inducements for laborers. The contracts are in a sandy country and high wages are being paid. When the railroad work is complete the men will be given work in the logging camps of the same company. Wages in the woods this winter will average unusually high.

A good many men who hired out for railroad work in the far West are still coming back to Duluth and the Twin Cities. First they came dropping in singly and in pairs every few days, but now they are arriving daily, and all of them seem glad to get back. They say that for the common laborer this part of the country has got Washington and Oregon badly beaten. Wages are better here and working conditions are much more agreeable. They tell stories of friends who want to get back but who are unable to pay their fares. Some of the latter are returning as hoboes.

CLAIM BREACH OF CONTRACT

Duluth Logging Company Brings Suit Against F. F. Seaman.

The Duluth Logging company, in a complaint filed in district court this morning, asks for a judgment of $1,250 against F. F. Seaman for breach of contract. The case will come on for trial at the November term.

The complaint states that on Feb. 12 last, the Duluth Logging company entered into a contract with Seaman whereby the latter agreed to deliver 500 pieces of cedar piling on or before June 15. It is alleged by the log company that Seaman has failed to carry out his part of the contract, and that it has, therefore, been damaged to the amount of $1,200.

Seaman alleges in his answer to the complaint that he has carried out his part of the contract and that furthermore, on June 1, the Duluth Log company was indebted to him in the amount of $133 for piles and timber, and he asks judgment for this amount. He also asks for a change of venue to Itasca county.

MOBILE HAS NO STORM.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 5.—There was no storm in Mobile at 10 o'clock, but the wind was blowing thirty miles an hour in the lower bay with rain falling. The wind, it was expected, would reach the same velocity in Mobile accompanied by rain and lightning.

BISHOP IS UNPOPULAR.

Valencia, Spain, Oct. 5.—A mob made a manifestation today against the Bishop of Tuy, whose opposition to the government's action in religious matters has led to the decision to prosecute him. Several hours elapsed before order was restored.

WHEAT GOES OFF AGAIN

Liberal Offerings Cause the Weakness in the American Markets.

Flax Declines During an Active Session in Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 5.—Wheat closed weaker in all of the American markets today. Cables were higher and the reports of damage to the Argentine crop by locusts were bullish factors which were outweighed by liberal offerings. Winnipeg, Chicago and New York showed the heaviest declines. Liverpool closed ¼d to ⅜d higher.

The Modern Miller says: "Rains have prevented seeding over large areas of the winter wheat territory, but has put the soil in fine condition to receive the crop and start its growth. After seeding is completed it is expected that farmers' deliveries of wheat will increase. Too much rain in Kansas and Nebraska has damaged wheat in the stock. The quality has been greatly lowered in many localities."

The December option closed ⅜c lower in Duluth, ½c in Chicago, ⅜@½c in Minneapolis, ⅝c in New York, ¼@⅜c in Kansas City and ⅞c in Winnipeg. Comparisons from St. Louis are impossible, there being no session of the market there yesterday. The October option closed ⅝c lower in Winnipeg. The May option closed ½c lower in Duluth, ½c in Chicago, ⅜c lower in Minneapolis and Kansas City and ⅝@⅞c in New York.

Corn was a little weaker in Chicago, the December option closing ½c lower. Corn was unchanged to ⅛c higher in Liverpool. December oats closed a shade higher in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 297 against 216 last year, and at the Minneapolis 481, against 669 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 778 against 885 last year. Chicago received 42 against 25 last year. Winnipeg received 388 against 431 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,342,000 bus., last year 1,262,000 bus. Shipments 561,000 bus., las tyear 571,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 387,000 bus.

Argentina shipments of wheat were 880,000 bus., against 896,000 bus. last week and 640,000 bus. a year ago.

Primary receipts of corn were 558,000 bus., last year 382,000 bus. Shipments 604,000 bus., last year 205,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 179,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of corn were 1,982,000 bus., against 1,300,000 bus. last week and 1,560,000 bus. a year ago.

Wheat was active throughout the session of the Duluth market. The tone was weaker during the latter part. December wheat opened ⅛c higher at 74⅜c, advanced to 74⅝c bid by 9:30, declined to 74¼c by 12:15, rallied to 74⅝c by 12:30 and closed at 74¼c, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday. May wheat opened ⅛c higher at 78⅝c, advanced to 78⅝c, declined to 78⅜c, rallied to 78⅝c and closed at 78⅛c, a loss of ⅛c from yesterday. Durum wheat closed ½c lower and cash spring on a basis of 1¼c over December for No. 1 northern. It is expected that the stock of wheat in store at Duluth will increase 360,000 bushels during the week.

Flax was very active throughout the day but prices were off. Flax closed ⅝c higher in London and Antwerp. Argentine shipment of flax were 248,000 bus., against 408,000 bus., last week and 8,000 bus., a year ago. It is expected that the stock of flax in store at Duluth will decrease 165,000 bus., during the week. October flax opened ⅜c lower at $1.11½, declined to $1.11, rallied to $1.11½ and closed at $1.11⅝, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. November flax opened ¼c higher at $1.11½, declined to $1.11¼, rallied to $1.11½, declined to $1.10⅝ and rallied by the close to $1.11⅜, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday. December flax opened ⅝c lower at $1.09¾, declined to $1.09¼, rallied to $1.09⅝ and closed at that price, a loss of ⅝c from closed at that price, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday. May flax opened unchanged yesterday, May flax opened unchanged at $1.13⅝ asked, declined to $1.13, rallied by the close to $1.13½, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday.

Rye closed 1c higher and the other coarse grains unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Liberal Offerings Overcome Effect of Stronger Liverpool Market.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—The wheat market here today opened quite firm because of moderate strength at Liverpool. Offerings, however, were liberal, and the market soon yielded to the selling pressure, sentiment becoming bearish. Leading commission houses were the principal sellers. Increased receipts in the Northwest had a weakening influence on the market. December opened a shade to ⅛@¼c higher at 75⅛@75⅝c sold at 75¼@⅜c and then reacted to 74¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 820 cars, against 768 cars last week and 919 cars last year.

The market closed weak with December off ½c at 74½@¾c.

Larger receipts than expected had a depressing effect on the corn market. Trading was very quiet. December opened unchanged at 43c, and sold off to 42¾@⅞c. Local receipts were 247 cars with 201 of contract grade.

The close was easy with December down ½c at 42⅞c.

Oats were easier in sympathy with wheat and corn. Pit traders were moderate sellers and offerings were taken by cash interests and commission houses. December opened a shade higher at 34½@⅝c, sold at 34⅜c and then reacted to 34⅜@⅛c. Local receipts were 291 cars.

Provisions were firm on continued light receipts of live hogs. Trading was quiet. January pork was up 5@10c at $13.45 to $13.50. Lard was up 2½c at $7.95. Ribs were 2½@5c higher at $7.22½@$7.25.

Copper Gossip.

Foster to Paine, Webber & Co.: The boiling copper market continued again today, with North Butte, Copper Range and Mohawk leaders. Wolverine and Calumet & Arizona also showed remarkable strength. All the small traders liquidated this morning, but there was such a rush of buying orders that all stock offered was quickly taken, and at the close prices were practically at the highest of the day, especially Range, which will sell at 90 on this hitch. It is a great traders' market, foundation, and the copper stocks should be bought without fear around present prices.

Sturgis to Gay & Sturgis: We have had another boiling copper market with Calumet and Arizona the feature. North Butte, however held its advance. The market shows little signs of letting up and received a new impetus today from an advance in the general list, including Amalgamated. The Steel stocks were very strong and probably the ore deal is near announcement. Copper Range showed a good deal of life and is likely to sell higher. Do not feel like buying tomorrow as a reaction is likely before long.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 5.—The cotton market opened strong and excited at an advance of 17@30 points, which carried prices to a new high level for the season, as a result of much higher Liverpool cables than expected, the uncovering of stop-loss orders on the short side, and a broadening speculative demand. Bad weather in the South and reports of a squeeze of October shorts were the bull factors. There was realizing on the advance, but offerings were taken up and prices held the initial advance, with May selling through 11c. One of the features was an advance of 77 points for December contracts in New Orleans.

Cotton futures closed barely steady; closing bids: Oct., $10.92; Nov., $10.87; Jan., $10.91; Feb., $11.05; March, $11.05; April, $11.08; May, $11.10; June, $11.10; July, $11.12. Cotton spot closed quiet. Middling uplands, $11.10; middling gulf, $11.35. Sales, 1,690 bales.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—Cattle: Estimated receipts today 2,500, steady; beeves $3.90@7.00; cows and heifers, $1.60@5.20; stockers and feeders, $2.50@4.40; Texans, $3.70@4.40; Westerners, $3.50@5.05. Hogs: Estimated receipts 11,000, strong; mixed and butchers, $6.35@6.55; good heavy, $6.50@6.55; rough heavy, $5.95@6.35; light, $6.35@6.80; pigs, $5.75@6.40; bulk of sales, $6.40@6.70. Sheep: Receipts 11,000; market steady; sheep, $3.50@5.30; lambs, $4.60@7.35.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, Oct. 5.—Barrett & Zimmerman's report: The outside call for heavy logging horses has been heavy for the past several days. The lumber companies are buying their winter supply of horses. Canadian lumbermen are in our market for a good supply. There is very little call for any other class but the drafters, and the present prices are holding. C. M. Betts, the horseman, is in our market with a fine load of first-class logging horses.

OPERATED FROM WALL STREET

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 5.—An official of the Wisconsin Central made today the statement to the Evening Wisconsin to the effect that the Wisconsin Central would be operated from Wall street for the present, and would probably be sold to the highest bidder.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

Market Opened Firm and Ruled Higher During Whole Day.

Further Ease in Money—Closing Was Active and Buoyant.

New York, Oct. 5.—Prices of stocks moved irregularly in the opening dealings on a small volume of business. Canadian Pacific fell 1¾ and Pennsylvania, Sugar and United States Rubber, large fractions. A rise of ¾ in Reading and ⅞ in Wabash preferred were the only conspicuous gains.

The selling orders at the outset were soon disposed off, and the buls finding no effective opposition confronting them bid up prices. The most effective buying was in United States Steel and the high priced railroads, including the Harriman and Hill stocks. Eastern stocks reflected little of Reading's strength, and Pennsylvania was decidely heavy. Great Northern preferred moved up 4 points, the Toledo, St. Louis & Western stocks 2, Northern Pacific 1¾, Reading 1⅜, Union Pacific, Chicago & Alton and Smelting 1¼ and St. Paul, Kansas & Texas, Texas & Pacific and Colorad Fuel 1. United States Rubber continued to lose ground, falling 1½.

Prices continued to rise sluggishly except Pennsylvania, which ran off nearly a point on a rumor afterwards contradicted of the death oft President Cassatt. Union Pacific advanced 2 points, Toledo, St. Louis & Western 3 and Amalgamated Copper 1¼. Bonds were firm. There was not enough business done between 12 and 1 o'clock to produce any decided change in prices.

Comparatively little interest was shown in the market outside of the action of the trans-continental group of stocks. Amongst these Great Northern preferred figured conspicuously with a rise of 5½ points. Northern Pacific also improved 2⅜; Union Pacific 2⅜ and St. Paul 2. American Car preferred advanced to 1¼ and the United Steel stocks 1.

The market closed buoyant and very active. The rise in Reading and Union Pacific reached 3, St. Paul and Colorado Fuel 2¼, United States Steel and New York Central 2, Amalgamated Copper 1½ and Pullman fell 2.

HAVE ROOMS AT ST. LOUIS

Democratic County Committee Will Open Headquarters Saturday.

Governor Johnson Will Probably Speak Here on Oct. 25.

The St. Louis Democratic committee will open headquarters on the parlor floor of the St. Louis hotel tomorrow. The executive committee held a meeting this morning and agreed upon A. F. Connelly as clerk at headquarters. B. W. Howe was elected treasurer. The election of secretary was deferred for a time, but until one is chosen Mr. Connelly will do the work of secretary.

Chairman McEwen is receiving a number of letters from range towns, where Governor Johnson spoke, telling of the friendly feeling among the voters resulting resulting from these speeches. Both the Republican and Democratic committees will begin their work in earnest next week, and from now until election day will be busy in the interests of their respective candidates.

It has been decided that Governor Johnson shall speak at the Armory in Duluth during the week of Oct. 22. He will probably be here either Oct. 24 or 25. John Lind may speak in Duluth later in the campaign.

W. H. REYNOLDS IS ARRESTED

William H. Reynolds, a local real estate broker, was arrested today on a warrant charging him with grand larceny in the second degree. The warrant was sworn out by Mrs. Amelia Sexton, of 616 East Fouth street, who charges that Reynolds, while acting as her agent in the sale of some property, appropriated to his own use $500 of her money.

In municipal court this afternoon Reynolds waived examination and was bound over to the next grand jury. His bonds were fixed at $700 which he was endeavoring to get at a late hour this afternoon.

He claims that the transaction in question is perfectly legal, and that he acted well within his rights.

REMEMBERS HIS ANCESTOR.

Flemington, N. J., Oct. 5.—A monument erected here by John D. Rockefeller in memory of his great-great-grand-father was unveiled here today. The ceremony was witnessed by members of the Rockefeller family, who came here to attend the annual family re-union. John D. Rockefeller was not present.

FOUND NEW ALASKAN LAKE.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 5.—G. V. Borchsenius of Madison writes from Nome, Alaska, that while lost in a fog in the Sawtooth mountains recently, he discovered a large lake, which he named Crater lake.

CANANEA IS HIGHER

Calumet & Arizona is Another Feature of Copper Market.

Superior & Pittsburg Also Goes Up During the Day.

Today was another strong one in the copper stock market. North Butte, Cananea Central and Superior went higher during the day and Calumet & Arizona advanced $8 over the closing price yesterday.

Cananea Central sold early in the day at $25.12½, went as high as $27, and closed at about $26 bid. Superior & Pittsburg sold during the early part of the day at $24.75, advanced to $26.75 and closed at about $26.25 bid and $26.50 asked.

There was lively trading in these stocks. In the East, the demand for Superior & Pittsburg is greater than for Cananea Central, it is vice versa, so that the trading back and forth has been brisk. The broker's wires were overcrowded with business all day and the execution of orders were slow.

Calumet & Arizona opened $2.50 higher than yesterday's close at $135, declined to $133, and rallied to $140.50. The closing price was $138 bid and $139 asked.

North Butte maintained its advance and went a little higher than yesterday. It opened at $114.50, sold as low as $114, rallied to $115.87½ and closed at $114.25 bid and $114.75 asked.

Butte Coalition opened at $41.75, declined to $41 and closed at $41.12½ bid and $41.25 asked. Amalgamated opened at $113.62½, sold as low as $113.50, rallied to $114.62½ and closed at $114.50 bid. Anaconda opened ex-dividend at $279.75, advanced to $281.25 and closed at $281 bid.

Denn-Arizona sold at $21 and closed at $21 bid; Keweenaw at $11.75 and closed at $11.50 bid; Warren was strong, selling at $17 and closing at $16.50 bid and $17 asked; Globe Consolidated sold at $7.25 and closed at $6.75 bid and $7 asked; Copper Queen of Idaho sold at $1.75 and closed at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked, and Calumet & Montana sold at $1.75 and closed at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked.

Cliff was inactive and closed at $4.75 bid and $5 asked

FEAR MURDER OF CHILDREN

New York, Oct. 5.—Believing that the "murder doctors," as they called the board of health physicians, were cutting the throats of their children in a public school in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, 1,500 women, nearly all of them Italians, stormed the school building in a mad effort to reach the little ones today. Before the riot had been quelled several policemen had been seriously injured by the infuriated women, and one of the rioters had been arrested.

For several days physicians of the board of health have been examining the eyes and throats of the pupils. A contagious affection of the eyes had spread from the homes of the Italians in the vicinity of the school, and the doctors were directed to make an investigation to learn the cause, and to exterminate the disease.

TERRIBLE WRECK MAY CLAIM ANOTHER VICTIM.

Troy, N. Y., Oct. 5.—The injured in the Boston & Maine railroad wreck at Lansingburgh, yesterday afternoon, and in the hospitals here, number twenty-one, and of the entire list all are doing well, except Mrs. F. L. Block of Peoria, Ill., whose condition is precarious.

WE DO MODERN SHOE REPAIRING.

HEAVY REBATE IS INTIMATED

St. Paul, Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the features of today's hearing before the state railroad and warehouse commission on commodity freight rates in Minnesota was the charge by Attorney Manahan for the Minnesota Shippers' association that the Omaha road had given rebates aggregating $90,000 to the Richmond Roller Mills of New Richmond, Wis. This charge was made in a question to Vice President Clark of the Omaha road, who was again on the stand at the morning session and caused every one present to sit up and take notice.

Mr. Manahan asked Mr. Clark: "Have you any arrangements with the New Richmond Roller Mills of New Richmond, Wis., for shipments over your line?"

"Not that I know of," was the reply.

"Is it not true that the Omaha road paid the Richmond Roller Mills rebates aggregating over $90,000 as shown by the examination of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner Thomas of Wisconsin some time ago?"

"I should say not; that it is not true," said Mr. Clark. "We have a tariff on wheat from Minneapolis to Chicago 10 cents per 100 and then we have different arrangements on wheat shipped to points east of Chicago. By this latter arrangement a receipt is furnished us which gives the shipper a refund."

Mr. Manahan asked if only a small amount was accounted for in this way and was told that the same rule applied to traffic going south and east as well as to northern points.

Mr. Clark said the Omaha did not grant milling in transit privileges to freight going north.

PARENTS WILLING TO NEGOTIATE

New York, Oct. 5.—Renewed efforts were made by the police today to trace the kidnapers of Willie Labarbera, the 4-year-old son of a Second avenue grocer. It was announced that the parents had received from the kidnapers a letter containing a lock of the boy's hair, and a threat to send the boy's head to them if a ransom of $5,000 were not paid by tonight. The parents, though willing to negotiate with the kidnapers, are unable to do so, as in their letters the latter fail to tell how to reach them.

COLE HAS NOT YET DENIED HE LOBBIED AGAINST THE NOLAN DEMURRAGE BILL

Did Not Always Support the Bill in the House.

Cole's Knocking Not Causing Enthusiasm in Rural Districts.

John Dwan of Two Harbors Goes on Democratic Ticket.

St. Paul, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—It has been several weeks since Senator Gjertsen, in a public meeting in Minneapolis, charged Candidate Cole with voting for the Nolan demurrage bill in the house, to keep his record straight, and secretly lobbying against the measure in the senate to kill it. Since that time many letters have been written to Mr. Cole and to the Republican state organization asking if the charge is true or false, but up to the present time no such inquiry has met with a straight forward, implicit denial. Questioners have been told that it was unreasonable to suppose that Mr. Cole was guilty as charged; that he voted in favor of the measure in the house, that he supported it at every stage, and that the charge will be fully met in the future. But he nor they have said in so many words that he did not do it. They dare not do it for fear the truth will be sprung upon them. In fact, their partial defense is not true. When they say he supported the bill at every stage in the house, the record rises up to confound them. When the measure was reported out of the railway committee, it had been amended to death—it was worthless. A minority report recommended that the original bill be placed in general orders, in place of the abortion recommended by a majority of the committee. This minority report was adopted by a vote of 87 to 26, Mr. Cole voting with the majority. Mr. Rockne, who had the bill in charge, moved a reconsideration of the vote.

JAP SEIZED BY RUSSIANS

Sealers Claim Seizure When Seeking Shelter From Storms.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 6.—Advices from Japan state that crews of the sailing schooners Toyo No. 3, and Daifuku, seized by a Russian warship off Copper island have returned to Japan. The captains and mates were imprisoned by the Russians at Petropavlovsk, where the confiscated schooners are lying. The sealers claim they put in under the lee of Copper island where the Russian rookeries are located merely to escape the heavy weather and deny any poaching intentions. They were robbed of all their private property and ill-treated when imprisoned, by the Russians.

RAILWAY FOR PHILIPPINES

Former Alaskan Central Man Named as Chief Engineer.

San Francisco, Oct. 6.—The Philippine Railway company is preparing to push operations in the new roads that are being constructed on the islands of Panay, Negros and Cebu, and W. P. Polland, formerly an official of the Alaska Central railway, has been appointed vice president and chief engineer of the Philippine roads. He will leave San Francisco for the Orient about Nov. 1 to take charge of the new work.

For the construction of the road a large amount of material has been ordered. Eight thousand tons of rails are now on the way to the islands by way of the Suez canal. The entire cost of the Philippine system when completed will approximate about $30,000,000.

HEIR TO FORTUNE.

Lumberjack at Kelliher Will Get a Legacy of $7,000.

Kelliher, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Erick Josephson, a lumberjack, who has been employed about Kelliher for the past two years, has received information stating that he had fallen heir to about $7,000, and notifying him to appear at Blackduck, where the payment of the money would be made to him. The legacy is left him by his father, who recently died in Finland, where the elder Josephson was a noble of high standing and possessed of vast estates.

WORKMEN AGITATING

Signs of Trouble at St. Petersburg Are Again Developing.

Trial of Men For High Treason Cause of Unrest.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 6.—Agitation by the workingmen of St. Petersburg who for some time have been tranquil, has begun again. There were several largely attended demonstrations in various industrial quarters of the city last night on account of the trial of fifty-one members of the council of workmen's delegates, a revolutionary organization which operated during the troublous times of last October and November. These men have been confined for ten months and their trial began yesterday on a charge of high treason, the specifications being preparation of armed uprisings to overthrow the government. Troops occupied the courthouse and the street outside was patrolled by Cossacks.

From the answers of the accused it seems that a remarkably small proportion of them were workmen. Of three successive presidents of the council, Krustaleff said he was a lawyer; Bernstein declared himself a writer; and the third, Knudiansk frankly admitted he was a professional revolutionist. Other members of the council are physicians, engineers, teachers, and students, the last named including three women. The trial will be protracted as there are more than 400 witnesses to be heard.

The council planned to overthrow the government by arming workmen and endeavoring to precipitate a financial crash by means of the December manifesto.

SETTLE THEIR DIFFERENCES

Gould and Harriman Coast Lines Reach an Agreement.

San Francisco, Oct. 6.—The Examiner says today: The Western Pacific and the Southern Pacific have settled all their differences as to right-of-way through the Humboldt river country of Nevada, and the two trans-continental lines will now cross and re-cross each other on their way to the Western coast without any strife. This was determined upon in a recent conference between E. T. Jeffreys, president of the Gould lines, and E. H. Harriman of the Southern Pacific lines.

WILL ATTEMPT A LYNCHING

Mobile Men Will Try to Get Negroes From Sheriff.

Mobile, Oct. 6.—A committee of sixty men left here on the Southern Railroad early today to meet Sheriff Powers of Mobile county, who is returning from Birmingham with two Mobile negroes charged with rape. The committee expected to meet the sheriff and prisoners about thirty miles north of Mobile. It was not known what the program was, but the feeling here was that the prisoners would be taken from the sheriff and lynched or burned outside of Mobile. Two thousand men met the Louisville & Nashville train this morning but were disappointed at the non-arrival of the sheriff and prisoners who had gone by the other route.

Sheriff Powers with the prisoners arrived at Thomasville, Ala., ninety-seven miles north of Mobile. They were scheduled to arrive here at 11:30. There was no militia aboard the train. Much excitement prevailed in Mobile.

NEW POSTMASTERS.

One in St. Louis and One in Aitkin Counties.

Washington, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following postmasters have been appointed: Adolph, St. Louis county—Paul C. Wasserziehher, vice J. A. Lineberg, resigned; Billings, Aitkin county—Fritz H. Ramdorf, vice W. H. Gear, resigned.

DAMAGING FIRE AT CHICAGO.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—The plant of the Chicago House Wrecking company, covering a full square, was badly damaged by fire today. The building was stored with general merchandise and salvage material. The loss is $75,000.

MAY REACH SEVENTY

Possible Number of Dead in Pocahontas Mine Growing.

Excitement Prevents Taking Census of Employes of Mine.

Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 6.—Twenty-nine bodies have been recovered from the west fork of the Pocahontas colleries company mine at Pocahontas, W. Va., and a conservative estimate places the total number of deaths at seventy.

The rescuing party reached the scene of the explosion, but the immense amount of debris and wreckage has hampered the search for bodies. There is no evidence thus far of fire. There is nothing authentic to be learned from any sources as to the actual number of men who perished in the disaster. Usually there are about 100 miners in the section affected by the explosion, exclusive of the drivers, trappers, prop setters and trackmen. The only way to tell how many are missing would be to make a complete census of the company's employes, but the excitement is so great that this can not be done. On the streets of Pocahontas, and wherever men congregate there are estimates made, but they vary. It is said now that it will taken ten days to clear the mine of wreckage and slate.

The most fortunate feature of the catastrophe is the fact that the mine did not take fire. It is equipped with every facility known to modern mining for the safety of its employes.

The town of Pocahontas is plunged in mourning. In a score of homes relatives and friends are watching by the side of dead loved ones. Half a score of men have been put to work digging graves in the same cemetery, and close to the spot where in 1884 more than 200 who had perished in a similar explosion were buried.

At the improvised morgue, Hungarians, Italians and negroes thronged to identify the dead, and as fast as this was done the bodies were placed in coffins and removed to their homes. Enormous crowds gathered here from all over the vast coal fields and all the saloons of the little town were closed. This prevented any trouble.

The mine is reported free from gases and safe for the relief parties to work in. There is considerable debris and wreckage. In one entry seven loaded coal cars had been overturned.

Addresses the Greatest Political Meeting Ever Held There.

Will Greatly Reduce Republican Majority in Beltrami County.

Pays L. G. Pendergast High Compliment—Speaks at School.

Bemidji, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson spoke in the opera house here last evening and was accorded the honor of addressing the largest crowd that ever assembled in this city to listen to a speaker during a political campaign. The house was packed almost to suffocation and many stood in the hallways and on the stairs unable to gain admission.

The governor and L. G. Pendergast, accompanied by A. B. Clair of Grand Rapids, a member of the state Democratic central committee, and John Rellis, chairman of the Democratic committee of Itasca county, arrived from Grand Rapids in the afternoon at 4 o'clock, and were immediately taken to the central school building where the students had been assembled in a body. They sang the state song, after which the governor made a brief speech, commending the children on their excellent appearance and reminding them of their duty to their country and advising them to aim at making good citizens.

A colored concert company had engaged the hall for the evening, but graciously gave way to the arrangements committee and allowed the use of the opera house from 7 o'clock until 8:30. The Bemidji band escorted

WANTED TO GO TO CARNIVAL

Because He Insisted His Wife Shoots Him Fatally.

Rock Rapids, Iowa, Oct. 6.—Because her husband insisted on attending the street carnival at Sioux Falls, Mrs. Bert Smith seized a pistol and opened fire on him today. Smith retaliated and an exchange of shots followed. Smith was wounded in the back and will die. Mrs. Smith received a slight flesh wound in the arm.

WAGNER, DRIVING FRENCH CAR, WINS THE WILLIAM K. VANDERBILT CUP IN INTERNATIONAL AUTOMOBILE RACE

Covers 297 Miles in Better Than a Mile a Minute.

American Cars Not in It at Any Stage of Race.

Two Hundred Thousand People See Great Speed Contest.

Finish Line, Vanderbilt Cup Course, Oct. 6.—Louis Wagner, in a 110-horse-power French car today won the third international automobile road race for the William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., cup, completing the distance of 297.1 miles in 290 minutes 10 and 2-5 seconds, or at the rate of more than a mile a minute.

Vincenzo Lancia, in a 120-horse-power Italian car was second in 293 minutes 28 4-5 seconds.

Antoine Duray, in a 120-horse-power French car was third in 293 minutes 44 4-5 seconds.

Albert Clement, in a 100-horse-power French car was fourth in 301 minutes 59 4-5 seconds.

Camillo Jenatzy, in a 120-horse-power German car was fifth in 304 minutes 38 seconds.

Lancia actually finished the course about three minutes ahead of Wagner who, however, started six minutes later than his rival and had that much margin at the finish.

Only five cars finished the race, but there were fourteen of the seventeen cars that started still running at the time the race was declared off, which was done as soon as Clement had won fourth place.

It was with the greatest difficulty that the crowds were kept back from the course during the last lap. Without regard to personal safety they swarmed over the roads, giving way only when the fast flying racing machines were a hundred yards away.

While France carried away the premier honors of the race, Joseph Tracy of the American team had the satisfaction of registering the fastest lap made. On the fifth round, Tracy drove the 29.7 miles in the remarkable time of 26 minutes 21 seconds. Tracy suffered severely from tire troubles in the first few

FIRES RAGE OVER MILES

San Fernando Watershed in California is Ablaze.

Two Hundred Square Miles Swept Clean—Heavy Loss.

Los Angeles, Oct. 6.—Extensive mountain fires in the San Fernando watershed, round about New Hall and Saugas, twenty-five to forty-five miles from Los Angeles, have been raging since early yesterday morning.

Telegraphic reports from special correspondents state that the fire has burned 200 square miles of watershed, and swept it clean; destroyed the stations of Lang and Humphrey, on the Southern Pacific railroad; caused a loss of $60,000 to the Standard Oil company by the destruction of boiler houses, oil tanks and thirty derricks; consumed ten ranch houses and their outbuildings, together with a large quantity of hay; reduced to ashes thousands of cords of wood and burned up 100 miles of fencing.

The destruction of the power house of the Kern River company caused a stoppage of street car service here for over five hours Friday afternoon.

WILL WITHDRAW ALL COAL LANDS

President to Request Congress to Change the Statutes.

Washington, Oct. 6.—It is understood that the president has finally made up his mind to withdraw all of the coal lands not already taken up from entry under the land laws of the United States. The expectation is that he will by a special message request congress to change the statutes, but that meanwhile he will himself temporarily withdraw the coal lands from further entry.

PRINCESS PATRICIA

Will Wed Grand Duke Michael, the Czar's Brother.

Heir to Russian Throne Until Birth of Czar's Son.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 6.—A marriage has been arranged between Grand Duke Michael, only brother of Emperor Nicholas, and Princess Patricia of Connaught, neice of King Edward. The bethrothal occurred during the grand duke's recent trip to Copenhagen and Scotland, from which he has just returned.

From Copenhagen, Grand Duke Michael went directly to join the imperial party in Finnish waters and to receive his brother's formal approval of the engagement. He was heartily congratulated by all the members of the imperial family. He will leave Russia in a day or two for London, where, after securing the consent of King Edward, the betrothal will be formally announced.

The last visit of Grand Duke Michael to London was during the Boer war, when feeling ran high and he was received with some hostility, but his approaching marriage with the most popular of the English princesses will, it is expected, inspire a different welcome.

Though, until the birth of the infant heir to the Russian throne, the Grand Duke Michael was one of the most eligible of the royal bachelors of Europe, he never figured prominently in matrimonial gossip, except that there was some talk several years ago of his engagement to his cousin, the Grand Duchess Helene, daughter of Grand Duke Vladimir, now the wife of Prince Nicholas of Greece. The Princess Patricia and Grand Duke Michael have been acquainted since childhood and frequently met at the re-unions of the Danish royal family.

According to the Russian custom it will be necessary for Princess Patricia to embrace the orthodox Russian faith, but the difference from the Anglican church is so small as to present no insuperable objections.

Though the dowager empress of Russia and Queen Alexandra are sisters, a direct marriage between the English and Russian reigning houses is almost unprecedented.

MAGOON GETS INSTRUCTIONS

Confers With President and Secretary Root as to Cuba.

Washington, Oct. 6.—Secretary Root and Governor Magoon were in conference with the president at the White House today for some time, the purpose being to instruct the governor relative to his treatment of the Cuban question, when he assumes office at Havana. Gen. Bell, chief of staff, who is leaving Washington this afternoon with Governor Magoon for Havana by way of Tampa, also called on the president. It is now stated that there is no present intention of departing from the program originally outlined, for the dispatch of troops for Cuba and within a few hours it is expected that some of the troopships will be leaving Newport News for Havana. Whether or not other detachments in addition to those originally ordered to Cuba, will be sent, will, it is declared, depend upon Secretary Taft's report on conditions.

NO TRIFLING WITH THEM

Cuban Insurgents Find Out That Americans Mean Business.

Havana, Oct. 6.—A detachment of 200 insurgents today rode into the Caridad suburb of the city of Puerto Principe, waving machetes and threatening people. Twenty American marines from the detachment on duty at Puerto Principe went to Caridad, dispersed the insurgents and arrested thirty-nine of them. Gen. Caballero, the insurgent leader, with 100 men, thereupon proceeded to the headquarters of the commander of the marines and demanded the release of the captured insurgents. Instead of releasing them the Americans disarmed Caballero and all of his followers who could be caught. Thereupon Caballero promised that all the insurgents under his command would disarm.

CALIFORNIA TO HAVE TRIAL

Big Cruiser at Santa Barbara to Undergo Tests.

Santa Barbara, Oct. 6.—The cruiser California dropped anchor here yesterday after a fast and successful trip from San Francisco. Weather permitting the standardization trials over the measured mile course will be made today.

During the last few days there has been considerable fog, and unless the day is absolutely clear the trip will be postponed. On Monday the four-hour endurance run over a straight away course will probably be held.

The trial board went on board the California yesterday to make the regular inspection, preliminary to the trial trip, and although no statement was given out, it is understood that the members were satisfied with all they saw.

Five vessels, including the flagship Chicago, the cruiser Princeton, the destroyers Preble and Paul Jones and the California, are now in port here, and probably will remain during the week.

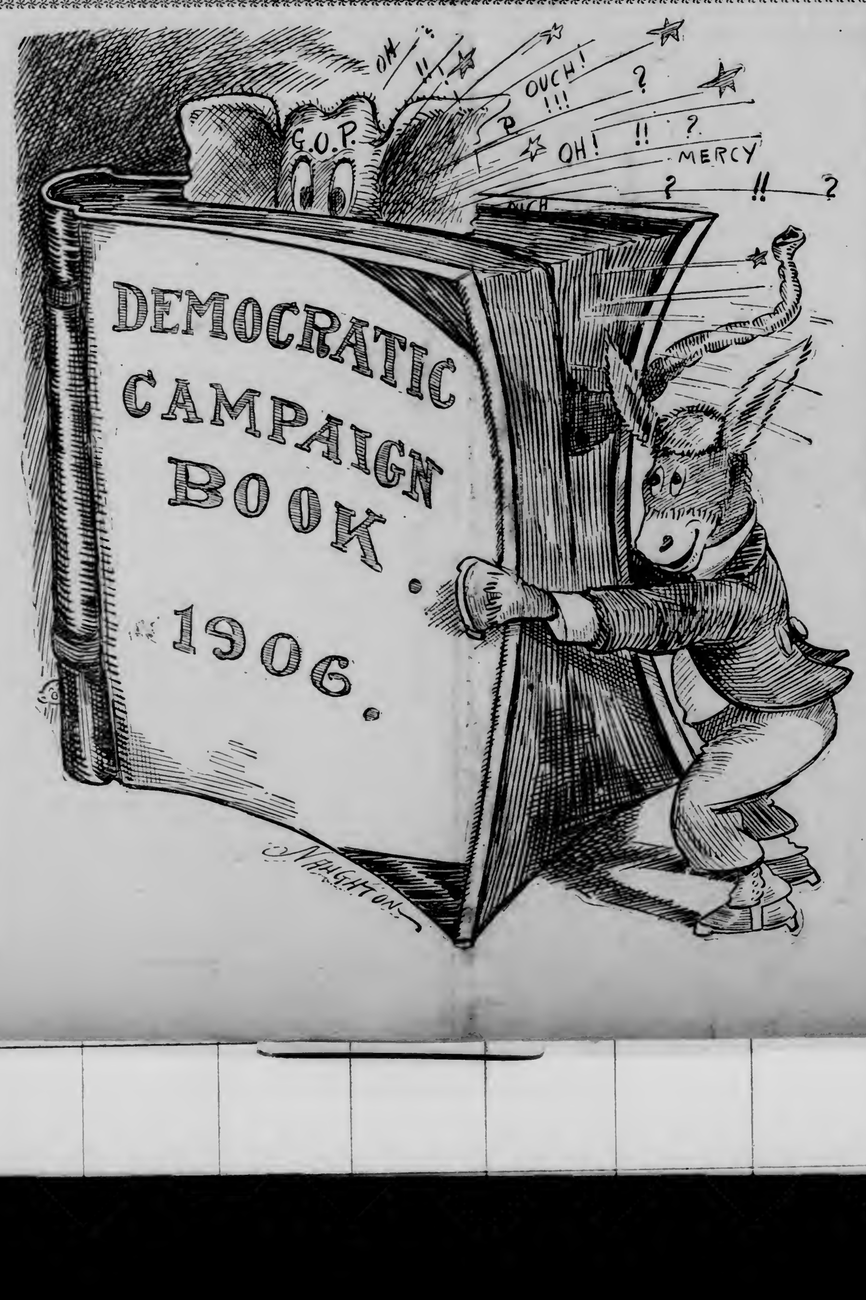

The vessels are constantly maneuvering, and last night the Paul Jones and the Preble were sent to sea to defend the other vessels from a sham attack of an enemy. The entire bay was lighted up by the shifting searchlights, and many people watched the drill.

FELL FROM BRIDGE AND DROWNED

William Berry of Pittsburg Meets Sudden Death at Bemidji.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The dead body of William Berry was found in the water, near the Red Lake railroad bridge, at 9 o'clock this morning. There are no marks on the body, and he is believed to have fallen from the bridge and been stunned, and died in the water. Berry is unknown here. Papers were found on the body by which he was identified. He has relatives living in Pittsburg. The remains were taken to an undertaker's, and will be kept pending the arrival of relatives.

SETTLE THEIR DIFFERENCES

Gould and Harriman Coast Lines Reach an Agreement.

San Francisco, Oct. 6.—The Examiner says today: The Western Pacific and the Southern Pacific have settled all their differences as to right-of-way through the Humboldt river country of Nevada, and the two trans-continental lines will now cross and re-cross each other on their way to the Western coast without any strife. This was determined upon in a recent conference between E. T. Jeffreys, president of the Gould lines, and E. H. Harriman of the Southern Pacific lines.

WILL ATTEMPT A LYNCHING

Mobile Men Will Try to Get Negroes From Sheriff.

Mobile, Oct. 6.—A committee of sixty men left here on the Southern Railroad early today to meet Sheriff Powers of Mobile county, who is returning from Birmingham with two Mobile negroes charged with rape. The committee expected to meet the sheriff and prisoners about thirty miles north of Mobile. It was not known what the program was, but the feeling here was that the prisoners would be taken from the sheriff and lynched or burned outside of Mobile. Two thousand men met the Louisville & Nashville train this morning but were disappointed at the non-arrival of the sheriff and prisoners who had gone by the other route.

Sheriff Powers with the prisoners arrived at Thomasville, Ala., ninety-seven miles north of Mobile. They were scheduled to arrive here at 11:30. There was no militia aboard the train. Much excitement prevailed in Mobile.

NEW POSTMASTERS.

One in St. Louis and One in Aitkin Counties.

Washington, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following postmasters have been appointed: Adolph, St. Louis county—Paul C. Wasserziehher, vice J. A. Lineberg, resigned; Billings, Aitkin county—Fritz H. Ramdorf, vice W. H. Gear, resigned.

DAMAGING FIRE AT CHICAGO.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—The plant of the Chicago House Wrecking company, covering a full square, was badly damaged by fire today. The building was stored with general merchandise and salvage material. The loss is $75,000.

GOVERNOR'S SPEECH AT BEMIDJI MAKES BIG HIT; TOWN WILD OVER HIM

MAY REACH SEVENTY

Possible Number of Dead in Pocahontas Mine Growing.

Excitement Prevents Taking Census of Employes of Mine.

Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 6.—Twenty-nine bodies have been recovered from the west fork of the Pocahontas collieries company mine at Pocahontas, W. Va., and a conservative estimate places the total number of deaths at seventy.

The rescuing party reached the scene of the explosion, but the immense amount of debris and wreckage has hampered the search for bodies. There is no evidence thus far of fire. There is nothing authentic to be learned from any sources as to the actual number of men who perished in the disaster. Usually there are about 100 miners in the section affected by the explosion, exclusive of the drivers, trappers, prop setters and trackmen. The only way to tell how many are missing would be to make a complete census of the company's employes, but the excitement is so great that this can not be done. On the streets of Pocahontas, and wherever men congregate there are estimates made, but they vary. It is said now that it will taken ten days to clear the mine of wreckage and slate.

The most fortunate feature of the catastrophe is the fact that the mine did not take fire. It is equipped with every facility known to modern mining for the safety of its employes.

The town of Pocahontas is plunged in mourning. In a score of homes relatives and friends are watching by the side of dead loved ones. Half a score of men have been put to work digging graves in the same cemetery, and close to the spot where in 1884 more than 200 who had perished in a similar explosion were buried.

At the improvised morgue, Hungarians, Italians and negroes thronged to identify the dead, and as fast as this was done the bodies were placed in coffins and removed to their homes. Enormous crowds gathered here from all over the vast coal fields and all the saloons of the little town were closed. This prevented any trouble.

The mine is reported free from gases and safe for the relief parties to work in. There is considerable debris and wreckage. In one entry seven loaded coal cars had been overturned.

Addresses the Greatest Political Meeting Ever Held There.

Will Greatly Reduce Republican Majority in Beltrami County.

Pays L. G. Pendergast High Compliment—Speaks at School.

Bemidji, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson spoke in the opera house here last evening and was accorded the honor of addressing the largest crowd that ever assembled in this city to listen to a speaker during a political campaign. The house was packed almost to suffocation and many stood in the hallways and on the stairs unable to gain admission.

The governor and L. G. Pendergast, accompanied by A. B. Clair of Grand Rapids, a member of the state Democratic central committee, and John Rellis, chairman of the Democratic committee of Itasca county, arrived from Grand Rapids in the afternoon at 4 o'clock, and were immediately taken to the central school building where the students had been assembled in a body. They sang the state song, after which the governor made a brief speech, commending the children on their excellent appearance and reminding them of their duty to their country and advising them to aim at making good citizens.

A colored concert company had engaged the hall for the evening, but graciously gave way to the arrangements committee and allowed the use of the opera house from 7 o'clock until 8:30. The Bemidji band escorted

WANTED TO GO TO CARNIVAL

Because He Insisted His Wife Shoots Him Fatally.

Rock Rapids, Iowa, Oct. 6.—Because her husband insisted on attending the street carnival at Sioux Falls, Mrs. Bert Smith seized a pistol and opened fire on him today. Smith retaliated and an exchange of shots followed. Smith was wounded in the back and will die. Mrs. Smith received a slight flesh wound in the arm.

FIRES RAGE OVER MILES

San Fernando Watershed in California is Ablaze.

Two Hundred Square Miles Swept Clean—Heavy Loss.

Los Angeles, Oct. 6.—Extensive mountain fires in the San Fernando watershed, round about New Hall and Saugas, twenty-five to forty-five miles from Los Angeles, have been raging since early yesterday morning.

Telegraphic reports from special correspondents state that the fire has burned 200 square miles of watershed, and swept it clean; destroyed the stations of Lang and Humphrey, on the Southern Pacific railroad; caused a loss of $60,000 to the Standard Oil company by the destruction of boiler houses, oil tanks and thirty derricks; consumed ten ranch houses and their outbuildings, together with a large quantity of hay; reduced to ashes thousands of cords of wood and burned up 100 miles of fencing.

The destruction of the power house of the Kern River company caused a stoppage of street car service here for over five hours Friday afternoon.

WILL WITHDRAW ALL COAL LANDS

President to Request Congress to Change the Statutes.

Washington, Oct. 6.—It is understood that the president has finally made up his mind to withdraw all of the coal lands not already taken up from entry under the land laws of the United States. The expectation is that he will by a special message request congress to change the statutes, but that meanwhile he will himself temporarily withdraw the coal lands from further entry.

PRINCESS PATRICIA

Will Wed Grand Duke Michael, the Czar's Brother.

Heir to Russian Throne Until Birth of Czar's Son.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 6.—A marriage has been arranged between Grand Duke Michael, only brother of Emperor Nicholas, and Princess Patricia of Connaught, neice of King Edward. The bethrothal occurred during the grand duke's recent trip to Copenhagen and Scotland, from which he has just returned.

From Copenhagen, Grand Duke Michael went directly to join the imperial party in Finnish waters and to receive his brother's formal approval of the engagement. He was heartily congratulated by all the members of the imperial family. He will leave Russia in a day or two for London, where, after securing the consent of King Edward, the betrothal will be formally announced.

The last visit of Grand Duke Michael to London was during the Boer war, when feeling ran high and he was received with some hostility, but his approaching marriage with the most popular of the English princesses will, it is expected, inspire a different welcome.

Though, until the birth of the infant heir to the Russian throne, the Grand Duke Michael was one of the most eligible of the royal bachelors of Europe, he never figured prominently in matrimonial gossip, except that there was some talk several years ago of his engagement to his cousin, the Grand Duchess Helene, daughter of Grand Duke Vladimir, now the wife of Prince Nicholas of Greece. The Princess Patricia and Grand Duke Michael have been acquainted since childhood and frequently met at the re-unions of the Danish royal family.

According to the Russian custom it will be necessary for Princess Patricia to embrace the orthodox Russian faith, but the difference from the Anglican church is so small as to present no insuperable objections.

Though the dowager empress of Russia and Queen Alexandra are sisters, a direct marriage between the English and Russian reigning houses is almost unprecedented.

MAGOON GETS INSTRUCTIONS

Confers With President and Secretary Root as to Cuba.

Washington, Oct. 6.—Secretary Root and Governor Magoon were in conference with the president at the White House today for some time, the purpose being to instruct the governor relative to his treatment of the Cuban question, when he assumes office at Havana. Gen. Bell, chief of staff, who is leaving Washington this afternoon with Governor Magoon for Havana by way of Tampa, also called on the president. It is now stated that there is no present intention of departing from the program originally outlined, for the dispatch of troops for Cuba and within a few hours it is expected that some of the troopships will be leaving Newport News for Havana. Whether or not other detachments in addition to those originally ordered to Cuba, will be sent, will, it is declared, depend upon Secretary Taft's report on conditions.

NO TRIFLING WITH THEM

Cuban Insurgents Find Out That Americans Mean Business.

Havana, Oct. 6.—A detachment of 200 insurgents today rode into the Caridad suburb of the city of Puerto Principe, waving machetes and threatening people. Twenty American marines from the detachment on duty at Puerto Principe went to Caridad, dispersed the insurgents and arrested thirty-nine of them. Gen. Caballero, the insurgent leader, with 100 men, thereupon proceeded to the headquarters of the commander of the marines and demanded the release of the captured insurgents. Instead of releasing them the Americans disarmed Caballero and all of his followers who could be caught. Thereupon Caballero promised that all the insurgents under his command would disarm.

Covers 297 Miles in Better Than a Mile a Minute.

American Cars Not in It at Any Stage of Race.

Two Hundred Thousand People See Great Speed Contest.

Finish Line, Vanderbilt Cup Course, Oct. 6.—Louis Wagner, in a 110-horse-power French car today won the third international automobile road race for the William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., cup, completing the distance of 297.1 miles in 290 minutes 10 and 2-5 seconds, or at the rate of more than a mile a minute.

Vincenzo Lancia, in a 120-horse-power Italian car was second in 293 minutes 28 4-5 seconds.

Antoine Duray, in a 120-horse-power French car was third in 293 minutes 44 4-5 seconds.

Albert Clement, in a 100-horse-power French car was fourth in 301 minutes 59 4-5 seconds.

Camillo Jenatzy, in a 120-horse-power German car was fifth in 304 minutes 38 seconds.

Lancia actually finished the course about three minutes ahead of Wagner who, however, started six minutes later than his rival and had that much margin at the finish.

Only five cars finished the race, but there were fourteen of the seventeen cars that started still running at the time the race was declared off, which was done as soon as Clement had won fourth place.

It was with the greatest difficulty that the crowds were kept back from the course during the last lap. Without regard to personal safety they swarmed over the roads, giving way only when the fast flying racing machines were a hundred yards away.

While France carried away the premier honors of the race, Joseph Tracy of the American team had the satisfaction of registering the fastest lap made. On the fifth round, Tracy drove the 29.7 miles in the remarkable time of 26 minutes 21 seconds. Tracy suffered severely from tire troubles in the first few

CALIFORNIA TO HAVE TRIAL

Big Cruiser at Santa Barbara to Undergo Tests.

Santa Barbara, Oct. 6.—The cruiser California dropped anchor here yesterday after a fast and successful trip from San Francisco. Weather permitting the standardization trials over the measured mile course will be made today.

During the last few days there has been considerable fog, and unless the day is absolutely clear the trip will be postponed. On Monday the four-hour endurance run over a straight away course will probably be held.

The trial board went on board the California yesterday to make the regular inspection, preliminary to the trial trip, and although no statement was given out, it is understood that the members were satisfied with all they saw.

Five vessels, including the flagship Chicago, the cruiser Princeton, the destroyers Preble and Paul Jones and the California, are now in port here, and probably will remain during the week.

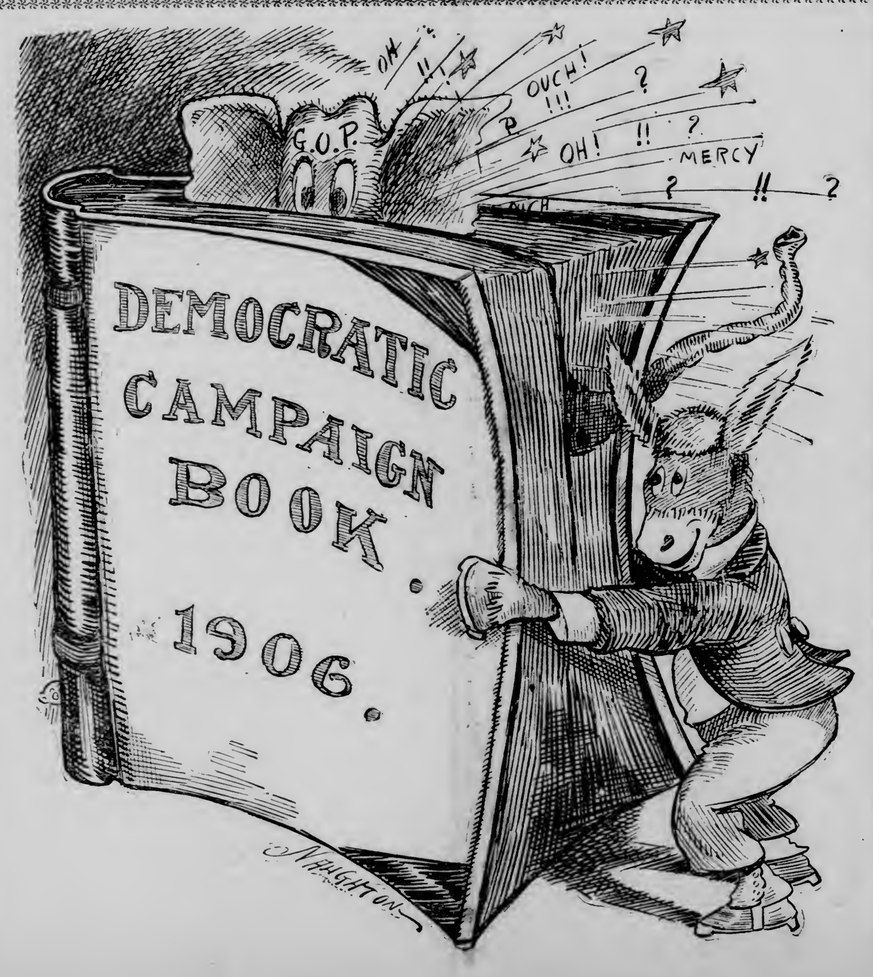

The vessels are constantly maneuvering, and last night the Paul Jones and the Preble were sent to sea to defend the other vessels from a sham attack of an enemy. The entire bay was lighted up by the shifting searchlights, and many people watched the drill.

FELL FROM BRIDGE AND DROWNED

William Berry of Pittsburg Meets Sudden Death at Bemidji.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The dead body of William Berry was found in the water, near the Red Lake railroad bridge, at 9 o'clock this morning. There are no marks on the body, and he is believed to have fallen from the bridge and been stunned, and died in the water. Berry is unknown here. Papers were found on the body by which he was identified. He has relatives living in Pittsburg. The remains were taken to an undertaker's, and will be kept pending the arrival of relatives.

HOLDS RATE TO BE UNREASONABLE

Wisconsin Commission Rules on the Appeal of a Shipper.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 6.—The railway commission this morning rendered an opinion of unusual importance as covering shipments of lumber trimmings and material of analogus character. The opinion comes from the complaint made by W. H. Campbell, of Oshkosh, against the Omaha Railway company. Mr. Campbell had been shipping trimmings of pine lumber for the manufacture of boxes upon which the railroad company has been charging lumber rates. The commission ruled that:

"The application of the lumber rate on the material in question is unreasonable and the carrier must desist in the future from charging such a rate."

In addition to this ruling in the Campbell case the commission has enlarged its findings and made a general order addressed to all railroads operating in Wisconsin in which it says that railways should enter into conference for the purpose of adopting uniform classifications and a rate for the products mentioned.

Let Us Meet

At Miss Lindberg's Luncheon and Tea Rooms, 20 West Superior street (upstairs), and enjoy one of those now famous Table D'Hote Dinners. The days are Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays, and the time from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m.

These dinners have proved a great success. This is a delightful place for dinner parties, and a favorite meeting place for those who desire a first class meal at reasonable prices.

MARKET HAS A REACTION

Copper Stocks Fall Off a Little at the Close.

Superior & Pittsburg and Canenea Central Maintain Steady Tones.

After the strength of the week, the copper stock market reacted today and some of the listed stocks had a weaker tone at the close. But Superior & Pittsburg and Cananea Central maintained steady tones. The poor bank statement depressed the Boston market.

During the day, Superior & Pittsburg sold as high as $27 and Cananea Central as high as $26.87½. At the opening, Superior & Pittsburg sold at $26, advanced to $27, declined to $26.50 and closed at about $26.50 bid and $26.62½ asked. Cananea Central sold early in the day at $26.87½, declined to $26.12½, rallied to $26.50, fell off to $25.75 and closed at $26 bid and $26.50 asked.

North Butte opened at $114.00, advanced to $115 during the early part of the session, declined to $112, rallied to $114 and closed at $113.50 bid and $114 asked.

Calumet & Arizona was steady, opening at $139 and advancing to $140. The closing price was $139 bid and $140 asked. Butte Coalition opened at $41, sold as low as $40, rallied to $41.25 and closed at $40.62½ bid and $40.87½ asked.

Amalgamated opened at $115, declined to $114.50, rallied to $115.37½ and closed at $114.50 bid and $114.62½ asked. Anaconda opened at $281, sold as high as $281.50, declined to $280 and closed at $280 bid.

Keweenaw and Hancock Consolidated had stronger tones today. Keweenaw sold at $12 and closed at $12 bid. Hancock Consolidated closed at $9 bid and $10 asked.

Denn-Arizona sold at $21.50 and $20.75 and closed at $20.50 bid and $21 asked. Warren at $17 and $16.75 and closed at $16.25 bid and $16.75 asked. Globe Consolidated at $7 and $7.25 and closed at $7.12½ bid and $7.25 asked and Copper Queen of Idaho $2 and closed at $2 bid.

Calumet & Montana was inactive and closed at $2 bid and Cliff at $5 bid and $5.50 asked. Black Mountain sold at $9.25 and $9 bid and closed at $9 bid and $9.50 asked.

NOTICE, I. O. O. F.

All members are requested to attend the funeral of Brother E. G. Gustafson, at the hall, 28 Lake avenue north, at 1:15 p. m. Sunday.

CITY BRIEFS

Will Hold Bazaar.

The members of St. Mary's Polish parish will hold a bazar at the hall at Fourth avenue east and Fourth street from Oct. 7 to 15. Careful plans have been made for a delightful week of enjoyment and each evening, games, voting contests and raffles will be held. A large and enthusiastic attendance is anticipated.

In Hands of Referee.

The question of the partition of the property, on West Superior street, owned in common by Carl Riccichal, Mrs. Kate Toomey and others now rests with H. H. Hanford, R. B. Knox and William C. Sargent, referees, who were instructed by Judge Dibell yesterday to determine how the property should be divided. The board was appointed in Riccichal's suit to have the property partitioned. The referees must determine whether the east or west half of the house and lot has a value other than one-half of $11,000, the estimated value of the whole.

Damage Suit Dismissed.

By an agreement reached yesterday Con Desmond dismissed his suit for damages against the Red Cliff Lumber company for the consideration of $400. He was suing for compensation for alleged personal injuries sustained while working for the company and was represented by John Jenswold, Jr. Baldwin, Baldwin & Dancer appeared for the defendant.

Dismisses Suit For $13.

The damage action of Joseph Lamont against J. B. McLain in district court was dismissed yesterday upon the payment of $13 to Lamont. Garnishee proceedings to keep the A. Booth company from paying McLean money due him were also dismissed under the settlement.

Settlement Is Reached.

For the consideration of $500 John Bell, a miner dismissed his suit for damages for alleged personal injuries against the Commodore Mining company and others yesterday. Attorneys John H. Heino and Theodore Hollister represented Bell and Howard T. Abbot the mining company.

The President in Wood.

President Roosevelt in miniature in the form of a wooden statue, perched upon a saddle horse of wood, is the object which many Duluthians have viewed in the windows of the Gately Supply store on Superior street during the last few days. The statue is a work of art of a high order, and shows the president attired in Rough Rider costume. The statue was carved out of basswood by Peter Peterson of Eveleth, a natural-born sculptor, who used only a common jackknife in the work. Mr. Peterson has a large collection of wooden statues of noted men at his home in Eveleth.

Flocks of Robins Noticed.

Large flocks of robins have been noticed today flying about the city, especially in the East end, where hundreds were seen together. Whether or not the robins are marshalling themselves together preparatory to their migratory trip South is not known.

Rev. W. E. Woodruff, state evangelist of the Baptist church, will speak tomorrow at 4 p. m. on "The Primacy of Womanhood." Miss Lois Rogers will sing.

Domestic Science at Y. W. C. A.

Miss Pettingill of the Superior normal school has been engaged to teach domestic science at the Y. W. C. A. and will conduct two classes, one for young women and one for matrons. The first class will be held next Saturday.

Thornton Child Only Victim.

There has apparently been no further spread of diphtheria through the East end as a result of the breaking of quarantine by one or two families. The death which Health Commissioner Murray claimed could be traced to this was that of Clarence Thornton, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thornton of 1514 East Third street, who died Thursday morning. The funeral, as in all cases of contagious diseases, was held within a few hours after the death.

Woman's Alliance Meets Wednesday.

The members of the Woman's Alliance of the Unitarian church will meet at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 12, at the home of Mrs. Joel Colby, 713 East Fourth street.

Jolt Injured His Stomach.

Alleging that an engine collided with the boarding car in which he was eating his breakfast, throwing him against the table and injuring his stomach, Johan A. M. Skarett, a laborer, filed complaint in district court yesterday against the Duluth & Iron Range railway company and asks for a judgement of $5,087. Skarett claims that he was working on the extra gang, laying near Tower, last August 10. He swears in the complaint that his earning capacity of $2.50 per day has been greatly reduced by the injuries he sustained.

Snyder Goes Over Range.

W. P. Snyder of Pittsburg, prominently identified with the Shenango Furnace company, and the iron mining company its controls, has just returned from a trip over the ranges in his private car. He was accompanied by Captain W. A. Barrows, manager of the company's mines. Mr. Snyder is a pioneer furnace man and it was at his Sharpsville furnace that the first good results in converting Minnesota ore into pig iron were obtained.

Dies While On a Visit.

Daniel Bergin, aged 32 years, who was well known in Duluth, died Thursday last at Fergus, Ont., where he went a few weeks ago to visit his parents. John Bergin, a brother, and Daniel Horgan, an uncle, left for Fergus, last evening to attend the funeral which will be held tomorrow. The decedent was employed as a meat cutter at Toben's market for many years.

Try This for Your Cough

Mix half ounce of concentrated Oil of Pine with two ounces of glycerine and half pint of good whiskey; shake well and use in tablespoon doses every four hours. This is the formula prescribed by Dr. A. N. Wallace, the renowned throat and lung specialist who established the camp for consumptives in the pine woods of Maine and whose remarkable cures attracted widespread attention among the medical fraternity. Dr. Wallace declares that it will heal the lungs and cure any cough that is curable and will break up an acute cold in twenty-four hours. The ingredients can be secured from any prescription druggist at a small cost and is easily mixed; the only care necessary is that it be thoroughly shaken.

Be sure not to buy the ordinary bulk Oil of Pine; this will produce nausea on account of the quantity necessary and the impurities that it contains, consequently cannot be effective.

The concentrated Oil of Pine is put up for medicinal use and comes in half ounce vials inclosed in small round wooden cases which protect it from heat and light.

It is also said to be an excellent remedy for lumbago and all forms of uric acid rheumatism. For this purpose it is taken raw; a few drops on sugar night and morning.

LYNCHINGS AT MOBILE

Two Negroes Taken From Sheriff and Hanged by Mob.

Done in Very Quiet Manner—Crimes Were Terrible.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 6.—The crimes committed upon Ena May Fowler, Lillian May Savell, Ruth Sossaman, and attemps on others, were revenged by a party of forty-five men this afternoon in a lonely spot just in the neighborhood of Prichards Station. The leaders ordered the men who were all armed with revolvers, shot guns and rifles, not to fire a shot and the orders were carried out.

Robinson, the negro, who committed the first crimes that startled the people of Mobile and worked them into a fury, was first strung up. He slowly strangled to death. Robinson was jerked up a distance or about fifteen feet, and the rope fastened. According to one of the leaders of the mob, Robinson confessed and called the Associated Press representative over to hear it, but Robinson looked frightened and said that he was not the man. Thompson, the negro, was hanged immediately after Robinson.

Thehanging of the negroes was conducted in a very quiet manner, and during the time it was going on hardly a word was spoken.

The negro Thompson was very sullen, from the time he was taken off the train until the rope was placed around his neck. Neither of the men showed signs of fear, Robinson saying all the time that he was going to heaven.

When Mount Vernon was reached on the trip from Birmingham, eight men, wearing white masks, boarded the train. Five of them covered Sheriff Powers, and Deputy Charles Green with pistols, and told them that they had come for the prisoners. The revolvers of the sheriff and deputy were then taken from them.

The conductor was asked to move all the people in the first-class coach to the rear seats as more of the crowd were going to get on at Platteau. The conductor complied with the request and some of the passengers were also placed in the sleeper. One of the leaders who stood on the platform of the train, heavily masked said that the crowd which had just boarded the train were all business men of Mobile and that their action had been decided upon only after careful consideration.

Nance Olden	Jessie Busley

Like E. W. Hornung, the creator of "Raffles," Miss Miriam Michelson and Channing Pollock have invaded the realm of the professional thief for the central character of their story.

"Raffles" is about the only character in present day drama to whom Nance Olden of "The Bishop's Carriage" can be compared, and there is a wide difference between the two, aside from the one of sex. "Raffles" was a gentleman, born and bred, who stole for the love of excitement.

Nance was a product of the "other half," reared in a home for orphaned children, and thrown on her own resources at an early age. She stole first for food, and then for the love of pretty things, and later from habit and for the excitement of it.

She had never realized the sin of it. In her philosophy it was but the natural way to even up matters. As "Nan, the Nipper" she was widely different from Raffles, the gentleman burglar, and yet in their whimsical philosophy, and in the clever sophistries with which they defended their misdeeds, there is not such a wide variance after all.

Gratitude, a latent sense of honor, and finally love, are the factors which redeem Nance and pull her back from the "darkness" to earn her living by honest labor and finally to become the wife of her friend in need.

The play has been entirely rewritten since it was seen here last year. The last act is new, and makes a more effective ending to the performance than the old one.

Miss Jessie Busley makes of Nance Olden an odd, boyishish, and yet wholly attractive character, with her strange mingling of widely different impulses. Her loyalty to friends is the gold that saves the alloy from being valueless, and it is the one redeeming characteristic of the confirmed little thief of the first act. Love and her sense of gratitude awaken the other fine sentiments latent in her character. Miss Busley is well fitted both by appearance and temperament for the part. She is a nervous, impulsive, and enthusiastic, little woman, and she throws herself into the part with complete abandon. Her work last evening was finished and worthy of commendation.

Byron Douglas as William Latimer hardly looks the part. He would make a first rate leading man in a stock company playing conventional parlor dramas and farce comedies, but he is a little too polished, and a little too melodramatic for the strenuous young criminal lawyer and philanthropist he is supposed to be.

James Keane's work as Tom Dorgan, the thief and the friend of Nance, is very passable, and Same Reed as Edward Ramsey has a rather clever stage "jag."

The Denver Press club could have no fault to find with Ernest C. Joy's portrayal of the stage reporter. He makes him a keen, honorable, and very likeable fellow.

The company is fortunate in the manner in which the minor roles are handled.

JOHN D. RYAN VISITS DULUTH

Butte Copper Magnate and His Wife Stay Few Hours.

John D. Ryan of Butte, the well known mining man whose name has been linked recently in several copper deals with T. F. Cole, was in Duluth yesterday afternoon, accompanied by his wife.

They were on their way to Butte after a stay of some time in the East.

"General conditions of the copper industry are excellent," said Mr. Ryan. "Copper mining is experiencing a wider recognition all the time as a great and legitimate industry for the investment of capital.

"It is becoming more generally recognized that copper mining is a more permanent sort of investment than many have supposed. Out in Montana, the copper interests are all working in harmony to get the best results, and are making more copper than ever before."

He declined to discuss the stocks he is much interested in.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole gave a luncheon for Mr. and Mrs. Ryan at the Kitchi Gammi club. Among those present, besides the hosts, were Mrs. and Mrs. J. B. Cotton, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McLean, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. House, W. J. Olcott, Mr. and Mrs. John Panton, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Wolvin, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hegardt, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Tomlinson and Mrs. L. Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryan left on the evening train for the West.

FULL FORCE OF CURRENT

D. R. McKinley Has Narrow Escape From Being Electrocuted.

Is Thrown to Ground by Touching Electric Light Wire.

D. R. McKinley last night had a very narrow escape from being electrocuted. While working in Patterson's livery stable, Mr. McKinley picked up a blanket, upsetting a pail of water while doing so, and thoroughly saturating the floor. Then grabbing a whip to drive a horse out of the barn, he caught it in the electric light wire, which was hung over a nail at the side of the room, and pulled the light off the nail. It struck something while falling, and went out, and when Mr. McKinley reached for it to turn it on, he in some manner touched an uninsulated portion, and standing on the wet floor received the full force of the current.

He was thrown to the floor and was picked up unconscious and taken to his home, where he was given immediate medical attendance. He was unconscious for several hours, and it was feared for a time that the shock might be fatal, but he is about again this morning.

RUSHING EXTENSION.

Force of Fifty Men Working on New Car Line.

Work on the Fifty-seventh avenue car line extension is progressing rapidly, almost the entire force of the Duluth Street Railway company being concentrated on the work, and a crew of fifty men have been making things fly along the line of the new track.

The welding machine has been stationed on the extension for some time, and the rails are now being welded at the upper end of the line. The track was all laid and the rails spiked some time ago, and as the wires are all in place, the welding will complete the job.

Should the present weather conditions hold out, and nothing unexpected turn up, the officials of the company expect to have the new line ready for service by the end of next week.

The citizens who have been kicking about the condition of Fifty-seventh avenue during the work on the extension, are at last silenced, for the work of repaving the street is being done in a very thorough manner, and the avenue is taking on a very finished appearance.

West Duluth Churches.

ADMITS IT IS A REDUCTION

Railroad Man Concedes Allowance for Elevating Grain is One.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Admission was made upon the witness stand yesterday, before the interstate commerce commission, that an allowance by a railroad of a certain amount to a grain company operating an elevator, ostensibly for the elevating of grain, is in reality a reduction in the freight rate on the grain. This statement was made by D. O. Ives of St. Louis, traffic manager of the Wabash railroad, while testifying in regard to an allowance of 1½ cents per hundred weight, said to have been granted the Peavey Elevator company by the Union Pacific Railroad company.

RAILROADS

SURVEYORS OUT ON LINE

Survey Being Made of Port Arthur-Duluth Connection.

Northern Minnesota Line May Be Part of New Road.

A report from Port Arthur says that railroad surveyors are again out on the proposed line to connect the Port Arthur, Duluth & Western road with some Duluth connection. The dispatch says:

"Last winter a line was run from the terminus of this road south of the international boundary in Minnesota to the northern terminus of the Duluth & Iron Range. Now the engineers are running lines to connect with the northern terminus of the Duluth & Northern Minnesota. Many preliminary lines have been run and the party is still out.

"The Port Arthur road now connects the Canadian head of the lake ports with the old Paulson iron mine on the west end of Gunflint lake, in township 65-4 ,and ends there. The Duluth & Northern Minnesota ends in the northeast corner of township 59-6, leaving a hiatus of about thirty to thirty-five miles between the two. This region is one difficult for railway construction, a portion of it being across lakes that are separated by rooflike ridges of rock, and which lie parallel.

"But it is a mineral region that has been so far almost unexplored, and in time it may prove to contain considerable ore. The construction of the Duluth & Northern Minnesota has been pushed along gradually for logging purposes primarily, but it is a standard-built line, and there is timber enough beyond its northern terminus to insure the construction of the line for a part of the distance to the boundary.

TO BE TRIED IN DANVILLE.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—The indictment charging manslaughter against Will J. Davis, manager of the Iroquis theater, at the time of the fire in that building which cost so many lives, has been set to be tried at Danville, Ill. The date of the trial has not yet been decided upon.

AFTER TWO TRUSTS.

Liman, Ohio, Oct. 6.—According to unofficial but trustworthy reports the grand jury is now probing the alleged lumber and plumber's trust, and a sensational report is expected shortly.

Duluth and Superior harbor workers in the employ of the government were much pleased this week when President Roosevelt's new order extended the eight-hour law to all harbor work, and the announcement will be a welcome one to the labor organizations in the two cities.

Commissioner of Labor Charles P. Neill, who at the direction of the president has had charge of the enforcement of the eight-hour law since last winter, recommended the extension of the law to all the harbor work in a report recently submitted, and the chief executive immediately signed an order carrying out these recommendations. The following, which is the last paragraph of Mr. Neil's report, shows that the eight-hour rule has already produced a noticeable effect:

"I might add that I found that one noticeable effect has already been produced in this matter of the eight-hour law. Contractors fully realize now that the law is going to be enforced with earnestness and they no longer dismiss it as a matter of no consequence. They probably like the law less than ever, but their attitude none the less is rapidly changing into one of becoming respect for the statute."

Joseph Wiles has returned to Duluth after spending a couple of weeks visiting with his brother at Orleans, New York. Mr. Wiles is a member of the local carpenters' union as was also his brother at one time. The latter is now engaged in the meat business in New York.

After an enjoyable hunting trip at Lake Vermilion, S. W. Douglas, of St. Paul, a prominent member of organized labor, returned home this week.

The first week in October has been a quiet one among the labor organizations of Duluth and nothing of note has transpired. The unions are all at peace with their employers and no strikes have been reported for some time.

• • •

There has been some talk in labor circles of organizing a separate Longshoremen's union at West Duluth, and this may be done in the near future, as there are enough longshoremen in that district for a new union. The new organization would of course be affiliated with the Trades and Labor assembly.

ACCUSES WIFE OF CONSPIRACY

Wealthy Milwaukee Man Connects Spouse With Another Man.

Milwaukee Oct. 6.—James L. Gates, the wealthy lumberman and land dealer, whose wife, Gertrude Ruhl Gates, is suing him for divorce, filed his answer to the complaint yesterday, In it he makes some sensational charges. Among others he accuses Mrs. Gates of conspiring with "Harry Mills of Chicago" to get his money through the marriage of Mrs. Gates to him, and also charges wrongful accounts on the part of Mrs. Gates and Mills. The answer first denies all the charges. Gates asserts he never treated his wife cruelly or "endeavored to induce or constrain said plaintiff by violence or in any manner to consent to improper or immoral acts." He alleges he furnishes his wife with a comfortable home and supplied her, not only with the necessities, but luxuries of life. In spite of this, he says his wife left him and refused to return to his home. He denies he is worth $1,000,000, as asserted by his wife. The couple were married in August 1900, and separated last February.

STRONG AND LUSTY AT 76

The Honorable Moritz Ellinger, who has been prominent in literature and politics in New York City for the past fifty years, pays tribute to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the great family medicine and renewer of youth.

MORITZ ELLINGER, 76 YEARS OF AGE.

Mr. Ellinger was born October 17th, 1830, at Firth, Bavaria. He now holds the responsible position of interpreter in the Surrogate's Court of New York City, and was Coroner of City of New York for 6 years.

"After over fifty years of active life, engaged in the various official positions I have filled in the civic, literary, sociological, fraternal and political organizations with which I have been connected, and the various civil positions I have occupied, during all of which time I always found myself mentally bright and physically active.

"I noticed to my deep regret that with advancing years I was becoming weaker and unable to perform many of the duties which required even a moderate degree of physical exertion.

"I had frequently noticed the announcements of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey which appear in the columns of the press, and naturally viewed them, as many casual readers do, as a well advertised nostrum no different from many other similar patent medicines offered to the public and paid no attention to them.

"Some time ago at the suggestion of a valued friend, who based his representations of the hygienic value of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey upon his own personal experience, although sceptical to the extreme, I concluded to test it, and it affords me pleasure to tell you that I have been greatly benefited by its use. I find that not only is it an excellent tonic and stimulant but a valuable invigorant of the system and tends to promote longevity, and feeling rejuvenated, I can truly say with Shakespeare:

"'Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty; for in my youth I never did apply hot and rebellious liquors to my blood; and did not with unbashful forehead woo the means of weakness and debility; therefore my age is a lusty winter, frosty but kindly.'" Moritz Ellinger, 108 W. 131st St., June 20, '06.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic. It builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles and richness to the blood. It brings into action all the vital forces, it makes digestion perfect and enables you to get from the food you eat the nourishment it contains. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children, as it is a food already digested. It strengthens the system, is a promoter of good health and longevity, makes the old young and keeps the young strong. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey contains no fusel oil and is the only whiskey that is recognized as a medicine. This is a guarantee.

Sold by all druggists and grocers, or direct, in sealed bottles only, never in bulk. Price $1. Insist on the genuine, see that the "Old Chemist" trade-mark is on the label. Beware of refilled bottles and spurious malt whiskey substitutes offered for sale by unreliable dealers. They are positively harmful and will not cure. Medical booklet and doctor's advice free. TO IMPROVE WHITE CITY

Duluth Amusement Company Has Begun Work on the Grounds.

Many Novel Features to be Inaugurated Before Season Opens.

Although the first season of the White City has only recently closed, preparations are under way to make extensive improvements before the attraction is opened next year.

The board of directors met this week and it was decided to begin at once to make a number of the improvements planned. These include filling in with sand under the big dancing pavilion and Mystic river building on the bay shore. The contract has been let to Osborn & Co., and a sand pump is already at work pumping sand under the buildings.

The center of the grounds, between the pavilion and the boulevard, is to be cleared of all booths and next season all the concessions will be located along the boulevard. The grounds will be parked, and flower beds, fountains and cement walks will be put in.

Concrete steps will lead up to the boulevard and a concrete retaining wall will be put in to retain the sand in the bank which forms that walk.

The minature railway tracks will be removed from the upper part of the grounds and extended through the lower part. New features are planned for this attraction in the way of tunnels and rustic bridges through which and over which the little train will run.

To meet the demands the boulevard will be extended, widened, and beautified in many ways. Among the new buildings which will be located on the boulevard next season will be a vaudeville theater.

The lake shore, in the rear of the grounds, will be cleaned up and a good walk will be built along the beach. It is planned to make the lake beach one of the popular parts of the White City grounds next summer.

The bay shore is also to be improved and seats will be placed advantageously to accommodate the people when shows will be given on the stage to be erected over the water.

Arrangements are being made to build a number of other new amusement features this winter. Among these will be the roller coaster or "figure eight" as it is sometimes called, the electric tower, and others.

There is talk among the stockholders of the Amusement company, of extending the grounds next season. It is also rumored that the company will build a new and larger dancing pavilion just outside of the grounds and turn the old pavilion into a roller skating rink.

The White City will be on the circuit with the larger amusement parks of the country next season, and it is said that more free attractions will be introduced at the park this coming season than were had last summer.

Within the last few days buildings have been completed on the White City grounds which are to house the animals through the winter. The collection at the present time comprises two black bears, a deer, several wolves, a porcupine, and an owl. Negotiations are under way to secure early next spring the addition of several other wild animals to this feature of the park.

To meet the increased demand for transportation facilities anticipated for next season, the Interstate Traction company will finish double tracking its system on Park Point. At the present time there is a single track from the aerial bridge to the first turn and a single track from the old Oatka beach grounds to the terminus of the line below the White City grounds. Before the amusement season opens next year a second track will be laid giving a double track system clear through. It is stated by an officer of the Traction company that the Park Point line will be extended toward Superior entry just as fast as building activity in that direction seems to warrant.

DEATH RESULTS FROM INJURIES

John Anderson, a Switchman, Dies a St. Luke's Hospital.

John Anderson, a switchman, aged 40 years, who was run over in the Northern Pacific yards at Garfield avenue yesterday, died at St. Luke's hospital last evening. Anderson was riding on the footboard of the engine, it is claimed, and the engine left the rails, the jostling throwing Anderson under the locomotive. His right leg was severed at the ankle, and his hip fractured, and he was injured internally.

The decedent leaves a widow and several children at 125 South Twenty-eighth avenue west. He had been connected with the railway company about fifteen years.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

IN POLITICS

Leading St. Louis county Republicans are asserting that Sheriff Bates made a big mistake in not dropping out of the race for nomination immediately after the publication of the adverse opinions of Attorney General Young and other legal lights. They believe he would have been much better off had he done so. It would have been a graceful thing to do, and would have insured him future political honors that the courts could not have taken from him.

As it is, they say it looks very much as though Mr. Bates were a dead one politically. If Mr. Brady, the Democratic nominee, is the next sheriff of St. Louis county, as many believe he will be, there will be little use in Mr. Bates asking favors at the hands of his party in the future. The indications in this direction may lead to wrong impressions, but that is the way it looks now. Several of the party leaders are quite bitter in their feeling against the present sheriff, and it is not likely that they will be in the mood to grant him favors in the future. Of course, if the mass of voters should think differently, the situation would assume a new complexion.

Brady will be the next sheriff of St. Louis county. There is little doubt in the minds of either Democrats or Republicans on this point. He is understood to make no secret of the fact that he will bring proceedings to get Bates out of office immediately after election, should the Republican nominee be elected. It is said that Mr. Bates and his friends hope to stave off a decision long enough so that Bates may serve the biggest part of the new term, even if the decision is against him, but here again some of the party men disagree with him. An early decision is really looked for. In view of the opinions that have thus far been handed down, it would appear very likely that this decision will be in favor of Mr. Brady.

The matter is looked upon as being of such great importance that it is not probable the judge before whom the case is brought will consent to any delay, even though he be on the most friendly terms imaginable with Mr. Bates. Duluth judges are not that kind. They will want to see that justice is rendered to everybody concerned.

"It would have been a wise and graceful action on the part of Mr. Bates to have withdrawn before the primaries, and given one of the other Republican candidates a chance," said a Duluth Republican yesterday. "Had he done so he would have been in fine shape to ask for nomination and election two years from now, and I think he would have had little trouble in getting both. He could have made public in a letter, clearly stating his position, and announcing that he would be a candidate two years hence. By doing this he would have gained the friendship of the other candidates and the party as a whole.

"As it is, his stand has gotten him into considerable disfavor. The chances of Brady becoming the next sheriff of St. Louis county are very good. This important office will then be in control of the Democrats, which will be a serious blow to the interests of the other party in this county. Bates will be out of a job, with hardly a ghost of a show of ever getting into political office in St. Louis county again. If all this comes to pass, it will be a blow from which he will never recover. It was undeniably foolish of him not to withdraw before the primaries."

For a while this week it seemed almost a certainty that the Republicans would put up an independent candidate in the field against Mr. Bates. This plan has now been practically abandoned, although there is still a small chance that it will be carried through. One candidate was almost on the point of announcing himself, but the labor connected with getting the necessary number of signers to his petition was so great, with a very good chance that he would not even land second place, that he decided not to run. None other has been discovered who feels that circumstances will warrant his getting into the game. It now appears that the fight will lie entirely between Bates and Brady.

Mr. Ferguson of Barker, and Mr. Case of Cloquet, opposing candidates in their district for representative, have been on the anxious seat ever since the primaries. Case was first announced to be the victor, and then the official count gave Ferguson a lead of one vote. Afterwards a local quarrel in Cass county lead to a recounting of the ballots for another candidate, and this recount gave Case a lead of thirty-five or forty votes. Probably this will stand, and if it does, Mr. Case will be the duly elected representative.

N. C. Nelson, formerly representative from Lake county and for a term postmaster at Two Harbors, but lately of Washington, where he has been holding a position secured through the influence of Congressman Bede, was in the city this week on his way to Two Harbors. • • •

L. W. Bills of Park Rapids, Republican nominee for the house, was in the city yesterday. He says that everything looks favorable for the Republican ticket in his part of the state.

• • •

The prospect of N. F. Hugo winning out in his candidacy for speaker of the house are growing brighter every day. The Lamberton Star says: "Representative N. F. Hugo of Duluth, who was defeated by Mr. Clague two years ago, is out for speaker of the house. Mr. Hugo is the logical candidate, and should be selected to wield the gavel during the coming session." The Star is published in the home town of Speaker Clague. Mr. Clague is now understood to be very friendly to Mr. Hugo's candidacy. The former was nominated at the primaries for senator from his district.

Mr. Hugo this week received a letter of congratulation from Clarence C. Dinehart, which the Duluth man values highly. It reads as follows:

"I congratulate you on your success at the primaries. Allow me to predict as pronounced a victory in the speakership contest."

Mr. Hugo returned a few days ago from a trip to the Twin Cities and through Southern Minnesota well satisfied with the outlook for his selection to the position of speaker.

John Dwan of Two Harbors has been offered the place as Democratic candidate for attorney general, and it is understood that he has accepted. Mr. Dwan has been quite prominent as an attorney and in a political way in Two Harbors, and is deserving of the honor. Martin Hughes of Hibbing has also been suggested as a candidate. He has been a hard worker for the party, and probably would bring a lot of votes to the ticket from Northern Minnnesota.

The St. Louis county Democratic committee opened headquarters at the St. Louis hotel today, on the parlor floor. At a meeting of the executive committee yesterday, B. W. It is now expected that Governor Johnson will speak in Duluth during the week of Oct. 21, either on Wednesday or Thursday, Oct. 24 or 25. Ex-Governor John Lind may be here later in the campaign. He has offered his services as speaker, and there is an excellent chance of his being brought to Duluth.

A number of letters have been received by Chairman McEwen expressive of the good work accomplished by Governor Johnson on his recent range tour, and telling of the many new friends he made. The trip was in every way a remarkable success.

• • •

Congressman James A. Tawney will deliver one speech in St. Louis county for the Republicans. The date has not been fixed, nor is it known whether the speaker will appear in this city or on the ranges. Senators Knute Nelson and Moses E. Clapp are also to speak in this county. The nominee for governor, A. L. Cole of Walker, will tour the ranges in much the same fashion as did Governor Johnson this week, but the itinerary has not yet been decided on. Most of the Republican spellbinders will visit St. Louis county in the two weeks prior to election day.

TWO MINERS KILLED,

One at the Fayal and the Other at the Shenango.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 6.—Vincent Fortunati, 37 years old, lost his life in the workings of Fayal No. 4 as the result of an unexpected slide of ore that had been loosened by a blast half an hour before.

As told by Sam Romotello, Fortunati and his partner blasted, and then after what they considered a sufficient lapse of time, went back to trim down the loosened ore. To Baldo, his partner, Fortunati remarked that now everything was all right and suggested that they load the car while the trammers were on the other side of the pillar, in order to get in another car to their credit. This they started to do when a warning came in the shape of a small falling fragment, which struck Baldo in the back of the neck. Fortunati was then struck by a big chunk and covered with two or three tons that came down with it. His chest was crushed by the avalanche of ore.

Fortunati leaves a wife and three children and both parents at Lassa, Ferrato, Italy. The funeral will be held at 1:30 Sunday afternoon. The Italian band will play.

Chisholm, Minn., Oct. 6.—Gregory Swan, an Austrian miner, was killed at the Shenango mine, near here, at 4 o'clock yesterday. He was working in a shaft at the 150-foot level with a companion, when without a moment's notice a large body of ore caved in on the men, killing Swan instantly and slightly injuring his companion. Swan leaves a wife and several small children.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Terrorists in Warsaw murdered a road overseer near the station at Macieowice, on the Vistula railroad and then removed the rails from in front of an approaching mail train. A gendarme however discovered what was going on, flagged the train and averted a disaster.

Gabriel Essipoff, the fugitive Russian lieutenant who arrived at Paris yesterday from New York via Havre accompanied by the wife of Gen. Ouchakoff, finding that their pressence in Paris was known, left the capital hurriedly yesterday afternoon for Marseilles.

A tornado passed over the Mobile & Ohio railroad tracks between Kushlar and Mauvella, Ala., about twelve miles from Mobile. So far as known no lives were lost, but the section covered by the storm was swept clean of trees, fences and houses. Trees were piled on railroad tracks, delaying traffic for over an hour, lumber was driven its whole length into the ground, large holes dug in the earth by the force of the wind and telegraph wires prostrated. Mobile didn't feel the effects of the tornado.

All the injured in the wreck on the Boston & Albany road in Troy N. Y., Thursday will recover, with the possible exception of George D. Stevens of Winchester, Mass. The engineer of the troop train, Holleran, which crashed into the regular passenger train and caused the accident was arraigned yesterday charged with manslaughter in the second degree.

John Michaelson, a terra cotta worker, fell from the top of a fifteen story building in Kansas City yesterday but by a seeming miracle caught a dangling rope after falling fifty feet and escaped injury.

The last open session of the congressional committee to investigate second class mail matter, which has been hearing testimony for several days, was held yesterday in New York. The reading of briefs submitted by W. Greene, on behalf of the United Typothetea of America and Dr. Emanuel Pfuffer, vice president of the Postal Reform league, read briefs and addresses were made by W. E. Blackburn, representing the Kansas Editorial association, and John J. Platt of the New York Republican editorial association.

There have been many desertions from the Eleventh Infantry at Fort D. A. Russell in Wyoming since the order was received for the regiment to go to Cuba and one private, who was shot through the hip last night by a member of a squad of artillerymen who were rounding up deserters, is now in the post hospital. The regiment left yesterday for Newport News, Va.

Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw addressed a large audience at Hamilton, O., last night. The secretary also made a brief address at the Butler county fair.

BRIDGE FALLS WITH STUDENTS

One Killed and Others Seriously Hurt in Wisconsin Town.

Marinette, Wis., Oct. 6.—While twenty-five members of the freshman class of the Oconto high school were standing on a footbridge at Oconto Falls, yesterday afternoon viewing the falls, the structure collapsed, throwing the whole party, including the instructor into the bed of the Oconto river, forty feet below.

One student, John Ballou, aged 14 years, the son of Matt Ballou, was killed. Three students, Viga Stentil, Hazel Denessen and Frank Donlevy, were seriously injured. Prof. Newcomb and several others were also badly hurt, making twenty in all injured.

There was three feet of water in the stream below the falls and this broke the fall and saved many lives. The bottom of the river is very rocky. Many were hurt by stones and by timbers of the bridge.

John Ballou was killed by timbers striking him across the breast. Men in the paper mills on both sides of the river saw the accident and immediately shut off the water and saved the injured from drowning.

WAGNER, DRIVING PRENCH CAR, WINS.

rounds and this cost him dear. He was on his ninth lap when the race was called off.

Wagner, who held the lead from the very first round, came very near to losing the race when twenty miles from the finish, one of his tires exploding. He had a lead of some seven minutes at the time, changed tires and managed to win by approximately three minutes. Lancia, Duray and Clement went through the race without mishap.

The race was run under leaden skies and the start scheduled for 6 a. m., was delayed fifteen minutes by fog.

After this had lifted, there were occasional rifts and bursts of sunshine, but the finish was in a drizzle. The inclement weather had no effect whatever on the crowd. It is estimated that fully 200,000 persons swarmed the course.

Of the seventeen cars that started, the first to come to grief was the Italian racer driven by Dr. Wellschott. His steering gear broke and the car went over an embankment. The machinist, Colombo, was severely hurt. Lawwell of the American team dropped out after the fourth round. He had all manner of difficulties.

Elliott Shepard ran into a spectator at Krugs Corner and fatally injured him. Shepard then broke a crankshaft and dropped out on the seventh lap, when he was running sixth.

Of the fourteen cars that were running at the time the race was called off, all had completed the seventh round, eleven had completed the eighth, eight had completed the ninth, and five had finished the tenth and last.

When Wagner was declared the winner the crowd surged about him and cheered. The band played the "Marseillaise." There were many minor accidents in the great crush at leaving the finish line.

The times of the cars that finished the ninth round, in addition to the five which finished the race were:

Nazarro, Italian, 292:58 3-5.

Cagno, Italian, 306:28 4-5.

LeBlon, American, 312:26 2-5.

Wagner is known as one of the most expert drivers in Europe. He first attracted attention by winning the race for light cars over the Ardennes circuit in 1903. He won the 100 kilometers (62.14 miles) contest at Ardennes, in 62 minutes, 49 seconds. Wagner was a team mate of Hemery, who won the Vanderbilt cup race in 1905, but dropped out after three rounds.

Skips With Charity Fund.

The police would like to find a boss from one of John Runquist's camps near Proctor, who was intrusted with money collected from the men at the camp to pay for the care of Fred Jackson, a woodsman, who broke his leg and was brought to St. Luke's hospital last Tuesday. Jackson was penniless when he received his injury, and his fellow workmen raised quite a sum of money by subscription and gave it to the boss to bring to Duluth. Since that time nothing has been heard of either the boss or the money. The description had of the man who took the money is rather meager. Jackson is recovering slowly at the expense of the county, and it is likely that he will have to be taken care of for a time at the county poor farm after his leg heals, as he will not be able to work until the limb regains its strength.

Ore Boats Delayed By Brisk Wind on the Lakes.

The brisk northwest wind which has been blowing on Lake Superior for the last few days so delayed shipping that there was not a boat at the Mesaba dock yesterday morning to load. This delayed the ore shipments from the range to a considerable extent, and ore trains were few and far between all day yesterday.

Today's list of arrivals is lengthening out rapidly, and it is probable that before night all the delayed boats will be in port, and the docks will be working overtime to make up for the lost time yesterday.

Fierce Gale at Cleveland.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—A gale reaching a maximum of nearly forty miles an hour and accompanied by a heavy rain swept over Lake Erie today. Many vessels were forced to seek shelter. The local weather bureau says the storm will have died out by tonight.

LATE DOINGS IN UPPER MICHIGAN

Negaunee, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Samuel Falardi, a miner employed at the Blue mine, was caught by a fall of earth while at work Thursday, and his back broken. The accident was entirely unexpected, as the place in which the injured man and his partner were working was considered perfectly safe. Falardi was caught while picking down some loose ore from the wal of a stope. The amount of the debris which fell down on him was very little, but it caught him in such a way as to double him backwards and break his back. His partner who was standing a few feet away at the time, escaped without a scratch. The injured man was removed in the ambulance to the Negaunee hospital and an operation was performed in hope of saving the man's life. His condition is considered precarious and it will not be known for a few days yet if he will survive. The injured man makes the third patient who is now being treated in the hospital here for a broken back. The other two are Henry Hill, who was caught by a fall of ground at the Mary Charlotte mine on July 20, and Arthur Kelley, who sustained a fractured spine from a 40-foot fall which he had in the shaft at the Hartford mine last Thursday.

Fred Lacrosse, a young man employed at the Negaunee mine, met with the misfortune of having both his arms broken while at work there. However, he is considered very lucky in having escaped from worse injuries. He had climbed to the top of a pole to adjust the rope which had slipped off a sheave wheel and while he was performing the work the hoisting drum in the engine house was started revolving and the wire cable which Lacrosse had hold of was given a sudden jerk, throwing him off his balance on the pole. He managed to retain hold of the rope with the intention of being carried to the next pole, where he could readily gain his way to the ground. But while he was being carried to the next pole his predicament was discovered and the engine was topped. The jar shook Lacrosse loose, who fel to the ground with the results mentioned above.

Marquette—Islands of the Isle Royale group were in big demand at the government land office, when twenty-four were disposed of to the highest bidders. Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth and Michigan men were competitors. Over half of the islands were sold to Alfred Merritt of Duluth. The bids ranged from $40 to $300. One purchaser was Deane Edwards, son of a Presbyterian clergyman of St. Paul.

Bessemer—Otto Olson's saloon was burglarized early yesterday morning. The front lock was picked and the cash register and safe were opened and $50 in money and a gold watch were stolen. Several thousand dollars was usually kept in the safe, but the bartender carried it home in closing up the saloon. There are no clues.

CITY TO BE PROTECTED

Mayor Cullum Says He and Council Will Exercise Caution.

Willing to Hear All Suggestions on Proposed Railway Franchise.

The question of granting the Wisconsin Central Railway company a franchise to tunnel under Michigan street and use various streets and alleys is one that lies close to the hearts of the Duluth taxpayers because of the strong public sentiment that the city should, in return for these privileges, be given some assurance by the company that it would bear its shares of the street and sidewalk improvements that will be made along its property in the future.

As has been frequently stated, more than $1,000,000 worth of assessable property will be taken off the tax rolls by the company when it enters Duluth, for which the city has no recompense. On top of the loss in taxes the city's general fund will have to stand street and sidewalk improvements along side the company's property, unless some agreement is made before a franchise is given, whereby the Wisconsin Central road agrees to bear its share of the cost of all improvements.

Mayor Cullum has been sought for an interview on several occasions, regarding the administration's attitude regarding the matter, but he has declined to make an extended statement, claiming that there are certain matters which will have to be investigated before he is in a position to speak definitely in regard to the exact rights of the city. However, this morning, Mayor Cullum consented to make a general statement to a Herald representative.

He said:

"I do not believe that the city cares to antagonize or handicap this railroad or any other legitimate enterprise that intends coming to our city, but I do believe that the day of bonuses has passed, and any concern that wishes to do business with us and profit by our prosperity must be given to understand that our welfare should be considered.

"If the state legislature has given the railroads the right to condemn streets and withdraw property from local taxation and absorb the last right of way to the exclusion of other roads, it has been at fault, but if the city neglects to protect what remnant of right it may have in the matter, then its administration will be at fault.

"I can assure the public that the council will not need any special watching on this matter, as the aldermen will not neglect to protect the city in every possible way. The attorneys for the railroad company will, I believe, confirm the statement that I personally served notice on them months ago that while we would be glad to have the company build into this city, yet the interests of the city would be watched very carefully.

"The council and myself will be glad to receive any suggestions upon which we may act. The legal questions are being looked into, and while I cannot say just what right, if any, the legislature has left us we will protect the public as far as possible and will be glad to work in harmony with any civic organization toward that end.

"We have been smarting under what we claim is rank injustice in the withdrawal by the railroads of so much valuable property from taxation. We are obliged to pave the streets around the property, give the companies police and fire protection, and the benefit of all our utilities. Yet this is the law.

"Our delegation to the state legislature might burden themselves with the work of at least modifying this deplorable condition of affairs. I believe that public sentiment would support the lawmakers in their effort to give us some relief. They would have no difficulty in demonstrating the unfairness of this law, or in getting the help of other suffering communities in securing relief, either by constitutional amendment or by legislative enactment."

OCTOBERISTS HAVE PROBLEM

Trying to Steer Between Stolypin Policy and Liberalism.

Moscow, Oct. 6.—The national committee of the Octoberist league, which is in session here to draft a program for submission to the coming convention, is attempting to steer a narrow and difficult course between the approval of Premier Stolypin's policy and the liberalism necessary to win popular support. The document denies that the league is committed to the support of the cabinet, in which it is not represented, and which is committed to repression, but states that as a legal, constitutional party it cannot approve of the wild, indiscriminate assaults of the radical parties upon servants of the government, which at the present time, when there is no hope of the replacement of the cabinet by one less buraucratic and more liberal, merely strikes a blow at all authority, weakens any future ministry and plays into the hands of the anarchists.

The resolution of the committee in regard to the drumhead courtmartials, while it recognizes the necessity for strenuous judicial procedure in fighting anarchists, disapproves of the establishment of summary courts, but declines to aid the extreme parties by using this as a campaign cry.

WE MADE GOOD!

On the 9th of September, a little less than a month ago, the first advertisement of the Copper Belt Mines Co. appeared in the daily papers.

Last week, we bought of The Morse Bros. Machinery Company of Denver.

TWO CARLOADS OF MACHINERY, TOOLS AND SUPPLIES

for immediate delivery at the mines at Lusk, Wyoming.

We have made good, and kept faith with our stockholders. We promised to use the money we received in equipping and developing the mine, and we have done so.

More than that, we have saved between $3,000 and $4,000 in the price of this machinery and from three to six months in time of delivery, because our Mr. Hall went out to Denver on a still hunt for bargains. He looked around and found just what was needed and BOUGHT AT BARGAIN PRICES. Thanks to you we had the money and money talks in buying machinery, as in all else.

The equipment consists of the following in part:

One air compressor, with a capacity of 240 cubic feet per minute at 100 pounds pressure, sufficient to run three machine drills.

One hoisting engine, with power enough to take care of a shaft 1,000 feet deep. Skip and cars—3,000 lbs capacity; 600 feet 3-inch air pipe; 1,000 feet rails. Complete blacksmith outfit, machine shop and tools. Two Sullivan air drills, tools, etc., etc.

The price of this stock will positively be advanced to 25c per share after Saturday night, Oct. 13, 1906.

We are not offering a speculative stock, but rather an investment in a proven mine, that is being worked every day and that will be equipped with a fine plant for work on the Lucky Henry shaft, which is now 300 feet deep in good copper ore, in a vein covered by the company for over one mile, tunnels, etc., within the next two or three months. A mine of merit that will make good. We know the property and are prepared to stand behind every statement we make regarding it.

You may have been hesitating and wondering whether we would make good, or whether we woul fall by the wayside as so many others have done—"died 'bornin'."

If you have any doubts about us or our mine, why not start an investigation today, and get in on the 20c price. There is time if you act quickly.

We had to return subscriptions at the 10c price and again at 15c, that came too late.

We will return the money of the laggards at 20c, too. Remittances must be postmarked not later than Saturdaly, Oct. 13th, to buy stock at 20c cash, 25c on time. It is worth 50c and should go to that price when the machinery is installed and working.

It should go to par in six months from that time.

Let us repeat what we have said so often before, so that it will stick in your memory.

This is a real Copper Mine—a second Greene Consolidated, with copper ore showing on the surface at all points. We are working on the shafts now—and are in ore all the way down. A fair-sized investment now in this stock should keep you in comfort when this mine is fully opened up and our mill is grinding out ore. There is ore enough in those claims to keep us running for years.

We are going after it, the world is clamoring for Copper and more copper. The demand is increasing yearly, let us get together and supply it. Any information you want will be supplied to your entire satisfaction.

CHARGE OF CONTEMPT

Is Brought Against W. H. Reynolds Waiting Trial For Larceny.

Court Desmisses Him With Warning to Be More Careful.

"That troubles never come singly," was never better exemplified than in the case of W. H. Reynolds.

Arrested and bound over to the grand jury yesterday in municipal court, Mr. Reynolds was this morning summoned before Judge Dibell to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court, upon the complaint of Attorney W. E. Whipple, representing Mrs. Amelia Sexton in her suit against the real estate man,

Mrs. Sexton is suing Mr. Reynolds for the recovery of $500 of her money, which she claims was placed in his hands by virtue of a real estate deal. It is claimed by Mrs. Sexton's attorney that the suit was placed upon the calendar for the September term, but that at the beginning of the term, Mr. Reynolds, through his attorney, Marlon Douglas, asked the court to have the case continued over until the next term. This motion was denied and the case remained upon the calendar.

A few weeks later Mr. Reynolds received word from relatives in Michigan that his father was dying and, expecting to be called away to Michigan at any time, Reynolds had the case placed at the bottom of the calendar. He did not leave the city at that time, but when the case came on for trial on Wednesday, Oct. 3, he was again absent from court. His attorney, Mr. Douglas explained to the court at that time that Mr. Reynolds had received a telegram from Michigan the night before and that he had left at once for the bedside of his dying father. It later developed that Reynolds had not left the city and had not informed his attorney that he was still in the city.

At the hearing this morning, Attorney Whipple made the charge that Mr. Reynold's suposed absence from the city were only subterfuges so that the case would be continued over until the next term of court. Affidavits were produced, signed by reliable citizens of Duluth, which showed that Reynolds had been seen several times on each of the occasions when he was supposed to be absent. Mr. Whipple stated that the representations made by Reynolds were false and that they were made only in an attempt to have the case continued.

In defending Mr. Reynolds, Attorney Douglas argued that Reynolds actually did receive a letter and a telegram stating that his father was dying and had expected to leave immediately. When Attorney Douglas stated to the court that Reynolds was out of the city he presumed it was true. Mr. Reynolds gave as a reason that he had not gone, that he couldn't raise the money necessary for the trip. He stated that it had not been his intention to mislead the court or his attorney, and that if the case was called the first of next week he would be on hand.

Judge Dibell decided that it was not a case of contempt, but warned Mr. Reynolds and his attorney, Mr. Douglas, not to allow ignorance of each other's movements to delay the case in the future.

TWO JOHNSONS ON THE TICKET

John W. Johnson Is Socialist Candidate For Governor.

St. Paul, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Today was the last day for filing for candidates who hope to win preference at the state election in November and John W. Johnson, of Minneapolis, filed as a candidate on the Socialist Labor ticket for governor.

The Democrats believe the Republicans have been aiding the Socialists in bringing this about, because the placing on the ticket of a John W. Johnson may lead many to vote for him when they intend to vote for John A. Johnson.

OMAHA ROAD MAKES A CUT

Coal Rates From Duluth and Ashland Are Reduced.

St. Paul, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Omaha railroad today filed with the state railroad and warehouse commission, a new coal tariff embracing a cut on coal rates from Duluth and Ashland, Wis., of nearly 50 cents.

VITALITY IS WONDERFUL

Frank Miller, Shot by Careless Hunter, May Recover.

With a Bullet Wound Through Intestines He is Recuperating.

Frank Miller, the Sturgeon lake homesteader, who was shot through the body by a pot hunter last Wednesday, who survived the long ride by wagon to Hibbing and by rail to Duluth, and whose case was regarded as hopeless by the attending physicians, is reported much better today, and it is claimed at St. Mary's hospital that he has just a fair chance for recovering.

Miller's case is regarded as remarkable, showing as it does the man's wonderful recuperative powers following an injury which would have been certain death in 99 out of 100 cases.

Miller, who was working about his place, was shot from the front by some hunter who is supposed to have taken him for a deer. The bullet pierced the intestines and came out of the body close to the spinal column. For hours he lay unconscious, and it was not thought that he would ever regain consciousness, much less survive the terrible injury.

This afternoon Miller is reported conscious and feeling very much stronger. While he is yet a long way from being out of danger, the chances are said to be much better for his recovery. He is being attended by Dr. Magie.

The nurses state that Miller, though conscious, has said nothing about the accident, nor asked how he came to receive his injury. When he is a little stronger he will be questioned carefully with a view of finding out if he saw or knew of any parties hunting in the vicinity of his homestead.

A. C. M'INTOSH DIES.

Old Resident of Duluth Passes Away After Long Illness.

Alexander C. McIntosh, died this morning at his home at No. 201 Devonshire street after an illness of about a month. He leaves a wife and one daughter.

Mr. McIntosh was one of the city's oldest residents, and has been employed for some time as city bridge foreman and inspector. He came to Duluth about twenty years ago, and has been a constant resident here ever since.

He was a prominent member of the A. O. U. W. and the members will have charge of his funeral services, and will attend the ceremony in a body. The funeral will be held from the residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:00, and interment will be made in the Oneota cemetery.

A. Civi,

The Russian specialist, will open an office at Room 601, Manhattan building, on Monday, Oct. 8th. All kinds of medical massages.

STANDARD MAKES ADVANCE.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 6.—The Standard Oil company today advanced the price of deodorized stove gasoline 1 cent per gallon. This grade of gasoline is now quoted at 15 cents per gallon. Varnish makers and painter's naphtha is also advanced 1 cent per gallon, making the wholesale price 14 cents.

NEWS OF THE WEEK AT THE CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL

Marshall Darrach Will Give His Shakespearean Readings.

Superintendent Denfeld Delivers Instructive Address to Students.

Marshall Darrach of New York, the well known Shakespearean reader will be at the high school Wednesday and Friday evenings, Oct. 10 and 12. On Wednesday, he will present "The Merchant of Venice," and on Friday, "Macbeth."

Mr. Darrach needs no introduction to most of the high school pupils. He has been here before, and all who saw him were so well pleased that they will be delighted to learn that they are to be given an opportunity to hear him again.

To many it would seem impossible that one man could assume the roles of the entire cast of a play and represent them on the stage in an intelligible manner. This is what Mr. Darrach does, and so that an attentive listener can recognize the various characters as they speak. It is only necessary for him to change his attitude, his tone of voice and facial expression, and the man himself seems to be changed.

The Seniors of the high school held their first class meeting Wednesday afternoon, a meeting which they have long been waiting for.

The first business after the meeting was called to order, was the election of the class officers for the coming year. The following were chosen: President, Elmer McDevitt; vice president, Dale Montgomery; secretary, Harriet Stryker; treasurer, Kenneth Cant.

Richard Hodgson was chosen mascot by unanimous consent.

Michael Mickelson and Reynolds Suffel were elected sergeants-at-arms, and Ralph Ely was elected editor-in-chief of the Zenith board. The treasurer reported that the class was just even financially. The sum of $206 was spent on the Junior-Senior, but when all class dues had been collected it was found that the class had sufficient money to pay expenses. As there are no very important financial enterprises this year, except the Zenith, which usually pays for itself, the class ought to keep out of debt this year and have a balance in the treasury next June.

It was decided that President McDevitt should appoint a pin committee to secure pins for all who desire to get them this year. It was also decided that a yell committee be appointed to revise the present yell or suggest a new one, as they see fit, as the members of the class are not all satisfied with the present one.

Marguerite Culkin was chosen as class historian, her work being to write the class history for the Zenith. The appointment of the members of the Zenith board was placed in the hands of the editor, Ralph Ely, who selected the following people to help him in the Zenith work this year:

Assistant editor, Gertrude Hoopes; associate editors, Dale Montgomery, Clare Shaver, Marguerite Culkin, Marie Erd, Susan Stryker, Evelyn Cash, Harriet Stryker, Charles Bradley, Siebel Harris, Tom Manley, Fred Ryan, Monroe Warner, and Elmer McDevitt, honorary member.

William Hicken was appointed business manager and Kenneth Cant assistant manager. It was decided that the class dues should be $1 if paid before Christmas, and $1.50 if not paid until after Christmas.

The Musical society held its first meeting of the year on Tuesday afternoon, when the officers of the association were elected for the year.

Mr. Custance will hold the office of president, according to custom, and the following officers were chosen: Vice president, Harriet Stryker; secretary, Pearl Hector; treasurer, Ralph Ely.

There were almost 150 present, the exact number to enroll being 141. So large a number will assure the association of a full treasury, provided all pay their dues, and should furnish plenty of material for the musical work of the society.

The association will meet every Tuesday night to practise for the concerts, and to take up any other work of the society which may come up during the year.

The music class for those pupils who cannot take it in the sixth period, on account of their studies, will probably be held Friday nights after school.

As attested by the playing of the high school eleven last Saturday, after very little practice, a winning team is going to be turned out this fall. The material is there, all right, and is fast appearing.

The game today is with the Grand Rapids eleven, in this city, and as it is the first game of the season to be played on the home grounds, a large crowd is expected. Although the boys and their supporters expect to win, they are not looking for a walkaway.

Supt. Denfeld spoke to the high school pupils Wednesday morning, urging them to apply themselves to the work of the year without delay.

"We assume," said Mr. Denfeld, "that all of you have come here to do your best, not simply because it is the proper thing to do, but because you wish to become educated men and women. This is the time of year to begin working. Already one-ninth of the school term has passed.

"One of the gentlemen who spoke to you recently deplored the gradual corruption of our language. I wish to reiterate this.

"We talk too much as we please, without regard to accuracy or diction. We use expressions caught on the street, so to speak, and think them pat. Many of you pupils speak lamely in your recitations; you stumble along hesitantly, and are glad when you have finished and can sit down. You should think about this more, and devote greater care to your speech, as it is a very important matter.

"Next in importance to the good speaker is the good listener. Sometimes the power to listen comprehensively is more important than the power to speak well. A thought grasped or lost will make or mar you.

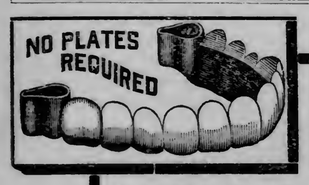

"Good listening implies the power to know just what to appreciate. We must learn to catch the point. This power of attentive listening is an art. It will strengthen your powers of application and concentration. This is the time to sow the seed. If you plant it in the right place it will produce results. You are the future citizens; the salvation of the country depends on the public schools. It is your duty to get all the good you can from them. You can get as much or as little as you desire, and it depends largely upon this art of listening well."

A meeting of the boys of the school was held Friday night in the assembly hall to practice up on the football yells, elect a yell master and work up enthusiasm for the coming game with Grand Rapids. Laird Goodman was chosen to lead the boys in making a show of lung power. Considerable enthusiasm was generated and if the boys just use their lungs as well at the gate, they ought to yell their way to victory.

Mr. Custance played the piano and the boys sang some of the football songs of the school. All those who could not sing were requested to make as much noise as possible. Several members of the team were called on for speeches, and they all spoke of the great help that the cheering was, when they were fighting to win the game. Mr. Phillips of the faculty spoke along the same line, urging all the boys to turn out to the game and help. He spoke of the hard work which it was for the boys on the team to get out and practice every night, and said that their sacrifice in time and labor should be appreciated by the rest.

At nearly all of the large universities and at many of the high schools, the yelling is systematically organized. It was decided that the boys should meet at the high school before the game and march to Third avenue west and Superior street, where they will take the car for the grounds in a body.

ST. Mary's Polish Congregation.

The parishioners of St. Mary's Polish parish have arranged to hold a bazar at their hall, corner of Fourth avenue east and Fourth street, from Oct. 7 to Oct. 15. Such occasion serves as a diversion from their usual routine, and if the generous support of the merchants and general public indicates anything, it will be a financial success. There will be games, voting contests and raffles every evening and a pleasant time is assured to all who attend.

NEWS OF THE NORMAL SCHOOL

Senior Girls Plan Harvest Picnic and Class Play.

On Saturday evening the girls at Washburn hall had a fudge party, delightful in its formality.

The Senior class held an important meeting on Tuesday. After the regular business, plans were made for a harvest picnic, which has become an annual affair, to be given in the near future, and at which the faculty will be guests. Committees were appointed for the picnic.

A committee of three was also appointed to meet with the class counsellor to talk about a class play.

FIGHT AND FALL FOUR STORIES

Cleveland Man and Boy Quarrel With Fearful Result.

Cleveland, Oct. 6.—Clutched in each others arms, two young men fell from the fourth story of the Lake Shore railroad office building, and were hurled to their death on the pavement below at 5 o'clock last evening.

The dead men are J. V Bunts, aged 30, and Harry Wilfred, aged 17 years, both of whom were clerks in the office of the superintendent of motive power of the Lake Shore railroad. Bunts was killed instantly and Wilfred died on the way to the hospital.

The young men had had some trouble previously and a renewal of this late this afternoon led to an altercation between them. It was a result of this that they fell from the window which was open directly in front of them.

During their flight through the air from the fourth story to the pavement in which their bodies were hurled over and over again, neither of the men relaxed the deathlike grasp they maintained from the beginning of the scuffle which led to their fall, and each held onto the other with a deathlike grip until the bodies struck the pavement.

ORE LANDS ARE LEASED

Hill's Deal With Steel Corporation is Formally Announced.

Lease is Perpetual, Holding Until All Ore is Mined.

New York, Oct. 6.—The terms of the lease of the Hill ore properties in Minnesota to the companies controlled by the United States Steel corporation were announced yesterday by E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the corporation. The terms are based on a system of royalties and give no indication of the amount of ore to be taken out of the lands except to show that it is expected to be many millions of tons.

The price to be paid for the first year of the lease is $1.65 per ton delivered at upper lake ports, but this price is to be increased three-quarters of a cent per ton in each succeeding year until the ore lands shall have been exhausted. It is provided also that the United States Steel corporation must take at least 750,000 tons in 1907 and increase the amount mined by 750,000 tons a year for eleven years, until the amount mined annually has reached 8,250,000 tons, at which rate it must continue to take out the ore annually until it is exhausted.

The final agreement was reached at a conference at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., at which there were present James J. Hill, J. P. Morgan, Charles S. Steele, George W. Perkins, Judge E. H. Gary and the legal representatives of the interests concerned. After the conference Judge Gary made the following announcement:

"After long negotiations, a contract has been signed for the acquisition of, on a royalty basis of the Hill ore properties, so-called, by companies controlled by the United States Steel corporation. The quantity of ore has not been accurately determined, but it is a large body. The price to be paid is $1.65 per ton delivered at the upper lake docks, with an increase of three-quarter cents per ton each succeeding year. The minimum agreed to be mined is 750,000 tons for the year 1907 and increases by 750,000 tons per year until it reaches 8,250,000 tons and thereafter continues on that basis. It is believed that the completion of this agreement will result in great benefit to both parties. The lease of the ore land properties practically is perpetual, since it holds until the ore has been exhausted."

The magnitude of this transaction and its effect on the properties concerned as well as upon the iron and steel trade of the country is indicated by the fact that the Hill properties have been estimated to contain from 400,000,000 to 700,000,000 tons of ore. The properties included in this transaction are said to be second in importance and extent only to the Lake Superior iron mines already controlled by hte United States Steel corporation, and it is said that this deal will furnish the steel corporation with a supply of ore for the next fifty years.

The Hill properties included within this lease are believed to comprise a number of properties owned in part by other interests than those controlled by James J. Hill, but the ownership of which was shared with his interests.

Mr. Hill left immediately for the West, after the signing of the papers.

MONDAY WILL SEE IT FINISHED

Disarmament of Cubans Will be Completed Then.

Havana, Oct. 6.—While the disarmament of the rebels will not be completed by tonight, it is now confidently expected that the entire operation will be finished by Monday with the exception of Puerto Principe province, which has been less affected than any other province by the rebellion, but which is now a favorite region for marauding bands which should more correctly be called bandits than rebels.

Although the surrender of guns has not been made compulsory, either by the provisional government or the disarming commission, rebel commanders have all given their followers to understand that it was expected and that the laying down of their arms was a matter of duty. The result of this has been that the number of rifles surrendered is larger in proportion to the number of men disbanded than the government expected. For instance, 800 rebels disbanded in Pinar del Rio province up to yesterday, have turned in 600 guns. Governor Taft regards this proportion rather better than the average, but reports from Santa Clara indicate that nearly all the guns of Gen. Guzeman's command have been surrendered. A great majority of the rebel rifles are old and poor and many dilapidated weapons have been turned in.

In Pinar del Rio practically all the rebels have been disarmed and have returned to their homes. In Southern and Western Havana the work of disbanding is going on steadily, and probably will be completed today. Assistants Secretary Bacon and Capt. McCoy are visiting Eastern Havana today and hope to complete disarmament there without loss of time.

It has been agreed that all the ex-insurgents will be permitted to keep the horses ridden by them in the campaign. In order to prevent substitution on the way home, all the horses have been branded with the marks of the respective commanders. This, however, will not prevent the original owners bringing claims for their animals or the value thereof against the government.

In response to the criticism made by Americans that the Cuban flag was flying over the palace while that building is being occupied by an American governor, Governor Taft said yesterday:

"I am here working for the Cuban republic; therefore, the Cuban flag will fly as long as I am here in that capacity."

THIRTEEN YEARS

Unlucky Number for Dakota Woman.

The question whether the number "13" is really more unlucky than any other number has never been entirely settled in everyone's mind.

A South Dakota woman, after thirteen years of misery from drinking coffee, found a way to break the "unlucky spell." She writes:

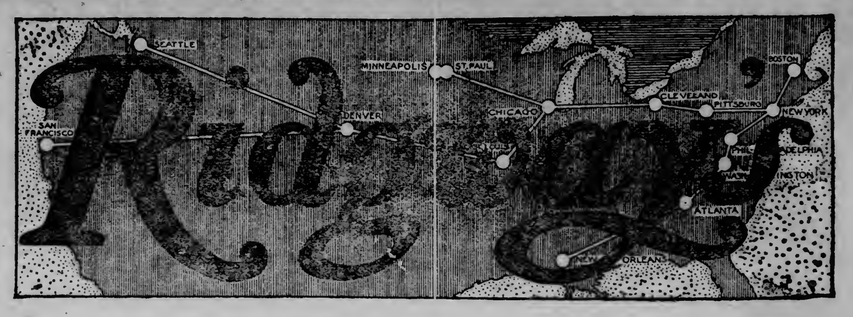

"For thirteen years I have been a nervous wreck from drinking coffee. My liver, stomach, heart—in fact, my whole system being actually poisoned by it.

"Last year I was confined to my bed for six months. Finally it dawned on me that coffee caused the trouble. Then I began using Postum instead of ordinary coffee, but with little faith, as my mind was in such a condition that I hardly knew what to do next.

"Extreme nervousness and failing eyesight caused me to lose all courage. In about two weeks after I quit coffee and began to use Postum, I was able to read and my head felt clear. I am improving all the time and I will be a strong, well woman yet.

"I have fooled more than one person with a delicious cup of Postum. Mrs. S. wanted to know where I bought my fine coffee. I told her my grocer had it and when she found out it was Postum she has used it ever since, and her nerves are building up fine.

"My brain is strong, my nerves steady, my appetite good, and best of all, I enjoy such sound pleasant sleep." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Get the little book in pkg, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a reason."

HUGHES OPENS CAMPAIGN.

Addresses Big Meeting of Voters at Carnegie Hall.

New York, Oct. 6.—The Republican state campaign was formally opened in this city last night with a ratification meeting that attracted a greater crowd than could be accommodated in Carnegie hall. Charles E. Hughes, the gubernatorial candidate, made the principal speech, and the uesual campaign enthusiasm found expression in an outburst of music, cheers and shouts of personal compliment. Several matters touched upon in his letter of acceptance were elaborated on by Mr. Hughes, and he again emphasized that the question before the voters was one of good citizenship rather than of politics.

Lieutenant Governor Bruce, in the course of an address at a meeting at Columbia university, said:

"If the forces arrayed against us can carry this great empire state, the educational, financial and manufacturing center of the country, it will light a fire which will sweep from Maine to California."

FOURTEEN VESSELS THERE.

That Number Now in Cuban Waters and Marines on Duty.

Washington, Oct. 6.—At the cabinet meeting yesterday Secretary Bonaparte presented a map showing the disposition of the naval ships and marines in Cuba and Cuban waters, by which it appears that there are now fourteen vessels of the navy on duty, seven of them being in Havana harbor, and 1,901 marines are distributed at different points in the island. There are 780 marines on the way. One hundred and forty blue jackets also have been landed and are guarding various places. It is expected by the secretary that some of the vessels can be relieved soon.

JUDGE SPOONER

To Take Testimony in the Red Lake Election Contest.

Red Lake Agency, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Spooner will hold a term of court at Red Lake Indian agency, beginning next Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, for the purpose of taking testimony in the election contest case of Saxrud vs. Sibley (involving the Republican nomination for county commissioner from the Third district), and the result will be determined permanently whether or not the much-mooted election returns from the Red Lake precinct will be allowed to be officially counted, or be thrown out and the vote be declared void.

M'CARREN RESPONDS.

Brooklyn Man Says He Made No Threat to Hearst.

Brooklyn, Oct. 6.—With reference to W. R. Hearst's comment upon the statement made by P. H. McCarren, the latter last night said:

"I have sent no letter to Mr. Hearst, but I did send a messenger to him yesterday with instructions to inform him of the probable result in King's county if he should oppose the Democratic judiciary ticket in the Second judicial district. I believe I did suggest that the county would give Hughes about 75,000 majority in the event of his bolting the Democratic ticket. I did not tell him to use the words, 'you do this at your peril.' I made no threats, but merely stated a few facts which I thought might interest Hearst.

"There is nothing I can say to the represented statement of Mr. Hearst concerning his threat to put a third judiciary ticket in the field in King's and the other counties comprising the Second judicial department. As to the probability of the general committee voting to leave Hearst's name off the head of the ticket, the committee will have to decide that."

The senator was asked:

"Will the committee have precedents for leaving off the name of the head of the state ticket?"

He replied:

"My answer to that is that there is no precedent for the head of the ticket bolting the party."

SCHOOL TAX IS REDUCED

Board of Education Sets the Levy at 9.15 Mills.

Provision is Made for Issue of Bonds Falling Due.

The board of education will have $305,000 during the coming year to care for its outstanding obligations and to maintain the school system of the independent district of Duluth.

At its meeting last evening the board decided that this amount should be raised by tax. The rate of school taxes for the coming year will accordingly be 9.15 mills, which is lower than it was last year. Other departments of the municipality have practiced rigid economy, and the school board was anxious to do the same.

Bonds to the amount of $45,000 will mature next September, and the board was anxious to have enough on hand to take care of that and to pay the other expenses of the district. By levying a tax of 9.15 mills, $305,000 will be raised.

The rate is lower than in 1905, and the board felt that it could not be more economical. Of this sum of $305,000, $223,000 is to go into the general fund and $82,000 in the sinking fund. The building fund is to receive nothing, as the board has nothing in contemplation in the way of new buildings.

The committee on administration and finance recommended this rate and the recommendation was concurred in. An aye and nay vote on the question showed all those members present in favor of it. Those present were: Messrs. Moe, Stevens, Hendricks, Cobb, Le Tourneau, Campbell and Codding.

The committee also reported the sale of the $25,000 of bonds which remained unsold from the last issue.

The contract for the wiring in the Nettleton school was awarded to the Burgess Electric company. This concern is to put in the conduit system of wiring for $723.98, and furnish the fixtures for $219.

Bids for this work were received and the lowest was that of the Seaton-Day Electric company. The concern's bid was much lower than any of the others, and a representative, who was present, asked that it be withdrawn, as his firm had made a mistake in the figuring. This was done.

• • •

The report of the superintendent of schools, R. E. Denfeld, contained several recommendations, which were taken up by the board. Upon his recommendation the board granted permission to the Range Teachers' association to hold its sessions in the high school assembly hall, Nov. 2 and 3. The sessions will begin Friday afternoon, and only half a day of school will be held in Duluth, to permit the local teachers to attend the meeting.

• • •

It was decided to purchase a new "program clock" to replace the one now in use at the high school. This clock which is located on the stage in the assembly hall, is for the purpose of automatically ringing the bells for the recitation periods throughout the building. Supt. Denfeld reported that the old one was lax in its duty and demanded constant attention. The new clock is to cost $125.

• • •

The question of telephones in the different schools came up again and considerable time was devoted to a discussion of it. It was decided to remove the telephone in Engineer Larson's office to the office of Principal Smith in the high school. The other pleas for telephone extensions were turned down.

• • •

The teachers in the Horace Mann school have been complaining of the black boards there. They are not of genuine slate and they are in such condition now that they no longer take the chalk, and more than that, are injuring the eyes of the pupils. To remedy this, the black boards in the old Glen Avon school will be removed and installed in the Mann building.

• • •

The reports of the committee on schools and teachers were accepted as read.

The report of the committees on the maintainence of buildings and grounds brought out the fact that bad boys were breaking windows at the Kendall school and that the janitor was so pestered that he was threatening to resign.

Chairman Campbell of the committee recommended that powers of a special policeman be secured for the janitor, but the other members seemed to think that the matter should be disposed of through the parents in the neighborhood. President Codding suggested that if the parents could not keep their children from destroying the school property and abusing their advantages, the school should be closed up. This seemed to strike the board favorably.

The resignation of John T. Bennett as janitor at the Jefferson school was received.

A stationery dealer in West Duluth, in a communication to the board, complained that the teachers prejudiced the scholars against certain kinds of tablets and copy books he had in stock, to the detriment of his business. It developed that the teachers could not dictate to the children as to the brand of materials purchased, only as to the size and character.

• • •

The American Exchange bank was named as a depository of the board.

• • •

Miss Hilma R. Peterson, a teacher employed by the board, desired to be set right in the eyes of the members of the body, regarding her connection with the liquor selling evil on the islands near the Fond du Lac school.

At the last meeting of the board, it was brought out that the islands were hers. She admits that, but says she has been having quite a time proving her claims, and that she is fighting the saloon proposition all the time.

A Certain Cure for Croup—Used for Ten Years Without a Failure.

Mr. W. C. Bott, a Star City, Ind., hardware merchant, is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. His children have all been subject to croup and he has used this remedy for the past ten years, and though they much feared the croup, his wife and he always felt safe upon retiring when a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was in the house. His oldest child was subject to severe attacks of croup, but this remedy never failed to effect a speedy cure. He has recommended it to friends and neighbors and all who have used it say that it is unequaled for croup and whooping cough. For sale by all druggists.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Washington Post: The Scranton people who forced their clergyman to resign because he attended baseball games would probably be delighted to have a Pittsburg millionaire present them with a new pipe organ.

Brooklyn Eagle: John Murray denied hell from a New Jersey pulpit 136 years ago, thereby creating a panic. So well are they getting used to the idea of this deprivation that some ministers are even questioning heaven.

Philadelphia Record: Forty years ago the Sioux were unreclaimed savages. Their name was a terror like that of the Apaches at a more recent date. Ten thousand Christian Indians are now attending the convocation of the Episcopal church on the Santee reservation. Most of them are Sioux, and some of them have traveled 200 miles to attend the convention. All those from distant points are being entertained by the Santee Sioux. It is a splendid result of missions to the Indians.

Boston Transcript: Bishop McCabe would like to have the United States make war on Turkey "on general principles." He would like to see Dewey steam through the Dardanelles and knock the Sultanate to pieces. Such was the burden of Bishop McCabe's discourse before the Detroit Methodist Episcopal conference at Ishpeming yesterday. If one of the ulema should preach at Constantinople that the short and simple way for preventing the United States pestering the sultan about the rights of naturalized citizens was to levy war on Americans, what preachments on ulemadan fanaticism would come from the American press and pulpit.

THE VALUE OF DIAMONDS
Depends upon many things other than the mere size. As the value of a stone depends upon grading, and as most buyers must of necessity be dependent largely upon the integrity and knowledge of the dealer, it is essential that diamonds be selected where scientific grading is assured.
We are often asked to quote a price on a one-karat diamond. In a stock rightly graded, AS OURS IS, this is like asking a horse dealer the cost of a twelve-hundred-pound horse, or a shoe dealer the price of a pair of sevens.
Our prices are based on the actual worth of rightly graded stones, and you get precisely what you pay for. And importing diamonds as we do, you pay less for them here.

CAUSE FOR HIS RETIREMENT

Light Shed on Breach Between Bismarck and Emperor.

Berlin, Oct. 6.—The recollections of the late Chancellor Von Hohenlohe have been published at Stuttgart by direction of his younger son, Prince Alexander Von Hohenlohe. They include extracts from Von Hohenlohe's diary concerning the differences between Prince Bismarck and Emperor William which led to the former's retirement. Von Hohenlohe wrote, March 21, 1890, as follows:

"Berlin—Arrived 1:28 a. m., and went to the house, (of the Duke of Ratibone) where I found an extract containing the emperor's letter to Bismarck and the announcement that he had been created Duke of Lauenburg. I heard that Bismarck's retirement was caused by a genuine breach between the emperor and him. The way in which Bismarck treated the emperor, his discourteous comments about the emperor made in conversations with diplomats and the unfriendly attitude of both was observed when they had business together, and made a separation unavoidable."

The emperor, Von Hohenlohe continued, learned that Bismarck was complaining to the diplomats regarding his majesty's policy toward the question of improving the conditions of the workingmen, and sought to bring influence to bear against a conference.

The relations between the emperor and Bismarck also were embittered through the question of the cabinet order under which the ministers and the emperor came into direct relations. Bismarck was advised that the ministers were seeing more of the emperor than he, and grew jealous, and it became, said the emperor, a question of whether the Bismarck dynasty or the Hohenzollern reigned.

The emperor on April 23 gave Von Hohenlohe an account of the events leading up to the final break of which Von Hohenlohe writes:

"Bismarck wanted a new Socialist law and when the majority parties refused to pass it, to dissolve the reichstag and take energetic measures in the event of strikes and disorders. The emperor would not agree to such a course. He said he would not begin his reign by shooting his subjects; that he would be willing to proceed against strikers, but not until he had heard their complaints and had tried to satisfy their just demands. The emperor ordered a decree called the workingmen's conference, (that of 1890) to be drawn up and laid before the council of ministers, which Bismarck strenuously opposed. Nevertheless the emperor admitted the question to the council, which approved of the decree, notwithstanding Bismarck's opposition."

The newspapers last night printed freely from the recollections, treating them as historical documents of great importance.

The Valparaiso Calamity.

From authetic reports it seems that in the recent earthquake in Valparaiso, Chili, the loss of life and property damaged was proportionately as great as in our San Francisco disaster. These two cities occupied relatively the same position in regard to commercial importance, both being gateways to and from the Pacific ocean. From authentic reports, extending over a period of 53 years, you are fully justified in believing that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a sure cure for all stomach, liver and bowel complaints such as headache, bloating, flatulency, dyspepsia, indigestion, costiveness, biliousness, sleeplessness, nausea, female ills, poor appetite, cramps or malaria, fever and ague. Every sick man or woman ought to commence taking it at once. Good health invariably results. Our Private stamp over neck of bottle.

AUTUMN TRADE IN FULL SWING

Activity in All Lines—Industries Pushed to Limit.

New York, Oct. 6.—R. G. Dun & Co's Weekly Review of Trade today says:

No unfavorable developments have appeared except the damage by storm in the South, which was almost entirely local in effect. Autumn trade is now in full sway, especial activity being reported in dry goods, millinery and footwear. Manufacturing plants are engaged far in advance in all the leading industries, the metal departments making the striking exhibits, and the activity of transporters is shown by railway earnings in September 9.2 per cent larger than last year's figures.

Crop returns are up to expectations, aside from some loss in cotton which caused a violent rise in prices.

Scarcity of most forms of steel and pressure for quick delivery tend to harden quotations, while the rise in pig iron has continued until the inflated position of a few years ago seems about to be attained. Practically all the pig iron furnaces are now in blast and work will soon be started on many new plants of the open hearth variety. Any decrease in demand for structural steel for buildings on account of the approach of winter is more than offset by the urgent needs of car works which are falling further behind with deliveries. High prices continue to prevail for minor metals.

The most important development of the week in the textile industries was the elimination of irregularity in primary markets for cotton goods because of the sharp advance in the price of raw material. Purchasers who had hesitated to place orders beyond immediate needs in the hope that better terms would soon be available changed their attitude abruptly, and endeavored to arrange distant deliveries.

Curtailment of production by scarcity of labor has prevented accumulation in first hands. No support comes from the export divisions, a small sale to India being the only buisenss reported this week.

New England manufacturers of footwear report liberal orders for spring delivery not only from Western jobbers, who have been operating freely for some time, but interest is shown by Eastern jobbers and large retailers from all sections.

Commercial failures this week in the United States are 183 against 188 last week, 200 the preceding week, and 195 the corresponding week last year.

Liabilities of commercial failures reported for September are $6,265,995, as compared with $8,039,547 a year ago.

THE PHARAOH OF THE EXODUS.

Ramises II, 1700 B. C.—4,000 Years Ago.

HIS MUMMY BODY NOW IN GOOD STATE OF PRESERVATION.

Seventeen hundred years before Christ the great Egyptian Ramises II, the Pharaoh of the Exodus, who chased Moses and the children of Israel across the Dead Sea, and who was one of the greatest conquering generals in the world, conquering in his day all of the then semi-civilized nations, was a man of fine physique, a well developed body and an everthinking brain. His mummy today, now nearly 4,000 years old, is lying in a state of perfect preservation in the great Museum of Cairo, Egypt. This great mummy of Ramises II, the remains of 4,000 years of time of one of the most wonderful men that ever lived, has attached to it one of the most interesting histories of the past, and from that time to the present date denotes one continual advancement.

With bare hands and vacant mind he began his struggle with nature and the great problems of life and destiny. The lightning that terrified him with its thunder, and the waterfall, in which he saw the home of the malignant god, is now harnessed by us as he harnessed the waterox thousands of years ago, and that waterfall pulls our electric power as the ox pulls the creaking, two-wheeled cart.

The live man of today is not the man to let the grass grow under his feet, let him be a doctor, lawyer, merchant or tradesman, and while some succeed, others fail, but the percentage of those who succeed outweigh the balance of those who fail. I refer you to a man and master of a great system of medicine; a man who thinks with his own brain and stands on his own resources; a post graduate of some of the best medical schools of the world, has traveled to almost all parts of the earth, has viewed from the tops of the Pyramids the beautiful valley of the Egyptian Nile, has penetrated into the tombs of the most famous kings of the world, has visited the Holylands, the birth of religion and civilization, has traveled extensively in South America, Mexico, knows continental Europe like a book, and has studied his profession in some of the most famous hospitals of the world, has discovered some of the most valuable chemical combinations of this the twentieth century. This man, eminently situated at the top of his profession, a man whose system of treatment for chronic diseases and diseases of the heart, stomach, bowels, liver, lungs, cancer, etc., has never been equalled, a man who is curing his patients when they have been experimented on by others almost unto death. In this I refer you to Dr. Rea and some of the many he has cured.

Henry Nyhouse, Duluth, Minn., cured of chronic catarrh of the stomach, bad blood and general indisposition. Had doctored with a good many doctors and had taken all kinds of treatment, but no relief.

Mrs. H. P. Jacobson, Langdon, Minn., cured of chronic dyspepsia and liver troubles. Cured after all other doctors had failed.

Ole Larson, Wild Rice, N. D., cured in two months of chronic catarrh of the stomach.

Tobias Grady, 831 Lake avenue south, Duluth, Minn., cured of cancer of the lip by one treatment of Dr. Rea's Hypodermic Injection Fluid. The most wonderful and successful cancer cure in the world.

Mrs. Robert Kern, Emerson, Man., cured of appendicitis. Another doctor said she would have to be operated on.

Frank Hughes, Dwight, N. D., cured of cancer of the lip with two injections. This cancer had been cut out several times, but always returned.

Mrs. John Engstrom, Two Harbors, Minn., had a sick baby that many doctors said could never get well. Dr. Rea cured the child in four months.

Nick Wilson, Plum City, Wis., cured of chronic case of piles. No operation. Cured by the hypodermic injection plan.

Thomas Crawford, Niagara, N. D., cured of cancer of the face in two treatments.

E. R. Morgan, Elmwood, Wis., cured of a bad cancer of the face with the hypodermic injection treatment.

George Kothlow, Menomonie, Wis., cured of cancer and bronchial troubles.

John Consbruck, Hastings, Minn., cured of cancer of the face in two treatments.

F. J. Swoboda, Hopkins, Minn., cured of chronic bladder and kidney troubles. Had doctored with all the noted specialists in Minneapolis and St. Paul, and as a last resort was advised to have a surgical operation; this he refused, and went to Dr. Rea, who cured him in eighteen days.

Mrs. Margaret Gangloff, Denison, Minn., cured of a bad skin cancer on the face in one treatment.

Louis Doer, Rannaby, Minn., cured of almost total blindness by cataract. Cured by the absorption method.

C. J. Wendt, Duluth, Minn., cured of chronic eczema over the body. Of two years' standing.

Mae Lynard, Bixby, Minn., cured in three months of chronic nasal catarrh.

William Reid, Little Falls, Minn., cured of cancer of the lip in one treatment.

H. P. Jackson, Morris, Minn., cured of long standing piles. Cured without operation.

Miss Susie M. Zein, Hastings, Minn., cured of chronic blood troubles that had almost wrecked her life.

Charles Jeffs, Owatonna, Minn., cured of tumor on the head and scalp with one treatment.

William McCarty, St. Cloud, Minn., cured of a long standing chronic disease.

C. J. Insley, Ipswich, S. D., cured of varicocele. Had spent hundreds of dollars and had never received any benefit. Cured by Dr. Rea with a few treatments.

William Wolf, Red Wing, Minn., cured of long standing case of piles.

E. P. Morris, Walpeton, N. D., cured of epilepsy. Had tried many doctors and all kinds of treatment, cured by Dr. Rea in five months.

H. P. Ash, Red Lake Falls, Minn., cured of loss of hair and facial eczema, red nose and bad blood.

Miss Mahoney, Wabasha, Minn, cured of bronchial catarrh. Cured to stay cured.

Miss Anna Stevens, Alma, Wis., cured of rheumatism. Had tried all the local doctors, but got no relief from any of their treatment.

(Special to The Herald.)

We are pleased to announce the date of the next regular professional visit of Dr. Rea to Duluth, Minn., at his office at the Spalding hotel, Saturday, Oct. 13, from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. It is evident that Dr. Rea is doing a great and good work in this community, or his visits could not be continued so successfully from one year's end to another. His consultations and examinations for those interested, $1.

HAVE HEARD OF NO DEAL

Local Representatives of Wisconsin Central Co. Continue Settlement.

Directors of Road Will Hold a Meeting Next Tuesday.

Whether or not the Wisconsin Central road has been sold to James J. Hill, E. H. Harriman, the Soo company, or any other big railroad interest or corporation, there has not been the slightest interruption in the condemnation proceedings instituted by the Wisconsin Central company for a right of way into Duluth. The hearing before the appraisers is being continued just the same as before the report of the sale, and within the last two days, Col. W. R. Gillis, who has general charge of the company's affairs in the Northwest, and William Getty, who is looking after the local matters concerning the corporation, have paid out something over $25,000 in settlements for the transfer of real estate to the company for a right of way.

Mr. Getty states that no word has been received by Col. Gillis, or by himself, to discontinue their work nor have they received the slightest information regarding any sale of the road to any other interests.

"This report," says Mr. Getty, "has come out about the same time that similar reports have been published in the several preceding years. Every year a report has been started that the Wisconsin Central road has been bought by somebody and as regularly it has turned out to be a canard. The Wisconsin Central road has been coupled in the papers with the Erie road, the Grand Trunk, the Illinois Central and it is not surprising that it should now be coupled with the Great Northern.

"Of course, there is always the possibility that some deal has been made by which Mr. Hill, Mr. Harriman or some other interests may have broken into the pool and acquired the stock of the Wisconsin Central road, but as far as we are concerned here, neither Col. Gillis nor myself know a thing about any such deal. On the contrary it would seem that if the Hill interests had acquired control that the condemnation proceedings and the settlement proceedings would be the first thing stopped.

"Unless the officials of the company state something for publication there will be no information given out until after the meeting of the directors of the Wisconsin Central road, which will be held next Tuesday. It might be safe to assume that nothing authentic will be known by the public until after that meeting.

THE ORE DEAL.

The great ore deal between the Great Northern railroad and the United States Steel corporation is finally concluded, after many false alarms, and the steel corporation has acquired a vast body of good iron ore upon terms that appear to be profitable both to itself and to the railroad that leases it.

This is a very large transaction, and means much to both parties. To the railroad it means a very pleasant profit, both in the sale of the ore and in carrying it. The price is to be $1.65 per ton, delivered at the docks, which means about 85 cents royalty and 80 cents for the carrying charge. This is to be increased three-quarters of a cent per ton annually. The minimum output will be 750,000 tons in 1907, and it will increase 750,000 tons each year, until it reaches the imposing total of 8,250,000 tons annually. This is prosperity for the railroad and its stockholders, for the miners and railroad men needed to do the work, for those that supply these workmen with the necessaries and luxuries of life, and for the steel corporation, which gets a splendid supply of ore upon favorable terms.

How much ore is covered by this deal the public does not know, but it has been variously estimated at 400,000,000 tons to 700,000,000 tons. This gives the steel corporation control of a vast supply of iron ore, enough to carry on its business for half a century to come, and while there are still independent owners of ore bodies outside the steel corporation, that concern practically now has control of the great fields of the Vermilion and Mesaba ranges.

However close this may approach to a monopoly, the citizens of this part of the state will indulge in no alarms over it. The policy of the United States Steel corporation, so far as it has been manifested in this section, has been broad-guaged and liberal. It pays its men well, it deals fairly with the state and local governments in the matter of taxation, and it has given no evidence that it will ever abuse its power, however great that may become.

This assurance of a larger supply of ore, together with the assurance that it will be moved out rather rapidly, will again call attention to the need of locating manufacturing industries here that will consume some of this ore. It will add more reasons to the many already existing why the steel corporation should interest itself in the establishment at Duluth of such industries. It will be quite in line with the liberal policies the company has heretofore manifested if it does take such action, and it will be greatly appreciated by Duluth and by all of Minnesota.

A WELL CONDUCTED PRISON.

The people of Minnesota have a right to take pride in the manner in which the state prison is being conducted. The biennial report of Warden Henry Wolfer is just out and there are plenty of facts and figures in it to warrant this pride. A state's prison is not a pleasant institution from any viewpoint. It would be ever so much nicer if the state did not need one. But since it has enough refractory people to make it necessary, it is indeed pleasant to find that it is a source of profit to the state and its people, and that it is conducted in a manner inferior to none other in the country.

The most interesting thing about the prison is its binding twine plant, which puts out the best binding twine in the market and undersells the grasping trust that controls the manufacture of this commodity in other states. In the two years covered by the report the state realized a net profit from the binding twine plant of $409,452.87. Besides, the farmers saved in cost of binding twine, by the use of the prison product, $734,973.45, making the total gain to the state and to users of twine $1,144,426.32.

In the two years the prison produced 24,499,115 pounds of twine which it sold for $2,360,194.08, and for which the manufacturers would have asked $3,095,167.53, leaving the gain to Minnesota farmers, $734,973.45, as stated above.

Another interesting fact about the prison is that it does not cost the taxpayers of the state a penny. In fact, it makes money for them. In the year ending July 31, 1906, the cost of maintenance was $167.10 per capita—inmates and officials—while the earnings per capita were $446.98. The excess of earnings over expenses were $279.88, which represents the annual value to the state of each inmate. This was the greatest showing in the history of the prison. In the years from 1879 down to date, the only years in which a profit was made were 1898, 1899, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905 and 1906. In all other years there was a deficit, which the taxpayers, of course, had to make up.

Warden Wolfer, in his report, refers to the fact that the binding twine trust has invaded Minnesota territory by starting a flax twine plant at Hazel Park. He intimates that the proper way to meet this opposition is to let down the bars that now confine the prison industry to this state, and to permit the sale of Minnesota prison twine in other states. This will be meeting the trust on its own ground, and will more than offset the opposition of the trust within this state.

The prison is doing an invaluable work in its competition with the trust that controls the price of binding twine in other states, and the Minnesota farmers shoud appreciate the advantage they possess in being able to buy the best twine at prices very much lower than they could otherwise get it for. It would seem advisable that the next legislature, to preserve and protect this advantage, should permit the prison authorities, in their discretion, to fight the trust ouside if it seems necessary.

WHIPPING SCHOOL CHILDREN.

A news item in The Herald last night said that corporal punishment is to be restored in the public schools of St. Paul. This intelligence will bring up many memories, pleasant and otherwise, in the minds of those of the present generation, in whose school experience corporal punishment was common enough. To many grown people it will be news that corporal punishment has ever been abolished, but it has, mostly, particularly in the metropolitan schools. It is not allowed in the Duluth schools, nor was it allowed in the St. Paul schools until the board of education the other day authorized its use under certain limitations. These are that it shall be resorted to only when other reasonable means of managing the pupils prove ineffective, and then only when the parents of the children consent. These regulations are wholesome, though they did not prevail in the days when most of us went to school.

Then, the teacher "licked" us when we needed it, regardless of any other method of direction or correction, and wholly regardless of whether our parent liked it or not. They generally did like it, somehow, particularly when it was quite clear that we had deserved it, and we generally found that the burden of proof was upon us to prove that we did not deserve it. Parents generally leaned to the belief that we did deserve it.

And, thinking it all over, we shall all have to admit that it did not hurt us any, and that we do not see how unmanageable children can be properly handled in any other way. Most of us will have to admit that it did us good. And if it did us good, are the children of this generation any different? Will it not do them good, too, when all other methods fail?

Of course it can be abused, and it often is abused. No teacher should be permitted to wreak spite out on her pupils through this means. Punishment for school offenses should be as calmly and judicially administered as punishment by the court. The teacher should no more be angry during the process than the judge should while imposing sentence upon a grown offender against the law. Nor should the punishment be "cruel and unusual." A good, old-fashioned trouncing with a leather strap, a hickory bough or the flat of a ruler, is sufficient, and with a certain class of boys beats all other methods of correction.

The parents will consent, in most cases where corporal punishment is needed. If parents of these days are anything like those of other days, they will not only consent to have their erring children whipped in school, but for fear the teacher did not do a good job they will repeat the operation at home.

Under reasonable regulations, corporal punishment is a proper adjunct of the process of training the youthful mind in the public schools.

"PRO BONO PUBLICO."

In the numerous communications that The Herald receives from its friends, there is often a note of apology, as though the writers felt that they were trespassing upon good nature, and were asking a favor in seeking publication for their ideas.

There is no occasion for this feeling. The Herald is always more than pleased to receive and give space to communications containing ideas of interest to the public. It is particularly pleased when these ideas look toward the advancement of local improvement or touch upon the general advancement of society and civilization, as many of them do. The space in a newspaper is valuable, but only for what may be put into it. Very often these communications contain matter of greater local interest than almost any news matter that the day may have brought forth.

As The Herald has often said, it welcomes such letters, and gladly publishes them, surrounding the practice with only a few wholesome and necessary restrictions.

They must contain the names of the writers, "not necessarily for publication, but as a guaranty of good faith."

They should be as compact as possible, and the writers should fall into the newspaper habit of telling what they have to tell in the simplest and most direct manner.

They must not deal in personalities, nor can a newspaper suffer itself to be made the medium of an anonymous attack through which one individual seeks to work out his spite against another.

They must be written upon one side of the paper only.

And they must be on subjects of general interest.

Violation of these simple and reasonable rules means the waste basket every time. But correspondents who have their own ideas on public questions, touching local improvements, politics, sociology or any other line that will be of public interest, and who observe these obviously necessary regulations, are gladly welcomed.

It is a good sign when the people of a community take a live interest in public affairs, and voice their thoughts freely. The only forum in which the average citizen can have his say about local affairs is in the columns of his home newspaper, and they should be always open freely to him for that purpose, subject only to necessary restrictions like those named above. The Herald is very glad to offer its pages to its readers for this purpose, and assures them courteous treatment in this as in all other matters wherein they deal with it.

BE CAREFUL.

These charming autumn days breathe a spell over those members of society a part of whose devotion is wrapped up in guns and dogs. It makes them think of the cool, brown woods where the partridge flutters, and of the warm, brown stubble which the prairie chicken coveys haunt. So they get out their guns and buy loaded shells and, joined by their more than willing hunting dogs, start out on killing expeditions.

It's all right so long as they kill nothing but fair game. Vegetarians and hypersensitive people may complain of the cruelty of even killing the innocent game birds of forest and prairie, but most of us will be satisfied if they confine their killing to these, and do not go to killing our friends and relatives.

It is a sad accompaniment of the annual fall hunting season, that there should invariably be a series of hunting accidents. And every one of them is due to carelessness. There are men and fools, and there is no law to confine the use of guns to the former. The fool likes to hunt as well as the man, and fortunate indeed is the man that does not come within range of his gun.

Since there cannot very well be a commission to inquire into the sanity and sagacity of every prospective hunter, all that can be done is to plead with all of them to be careful. The man of sense is always careful, and the fool is always careless. He drags his gun by the muzzle in going over a fence, and he carries it with the threatening black mouth of it pointing hither and yon, at himself and at his friends and at his dogs. He throws it into the wagon, and he drags it out again, with criminal carelessness. He shoots at every moving twig and leaf, heedless of whether the movement is caused by man, bird or beast. It is pure luck if he comes back home again without a manslaughter to his credit.

The thing for sensible men to do, when they find themselves shooting in company with a fool, is to give him as wide a berth as possible, and to keep out of range. If he insists on hanging around and being careless, it may save human lives and limbs if he is tied up to the wagon tongue while the others hunt in peace and safety.

If everybody would be really careful about their hunting, there would be no sad total of killings and woundings to be footed up at the end of each hunting season. Those who are careful themselves can help much by compelling those in their company to be careful. Human life is too precious to be risked for the pleasure of fools. Far better for hunting parties, when they find that they have a fool hunter along, to tie him hand and foot and leave him in camp, than to let him come along to jeopardize the lives of his friends.

THE PASSING OF PALMA.

There is much pathos in the passing of Palma as president of the Cuban republic. This old man, who has more than rounded out his three score years and ten, has been a leading figure in the Cuban fight for independence, and he began to be a Cuban president thirty years ago. During the ten-years' insurrection against Spain at that time he was made the head of the revolutionary government. It never really governed, so it wasn't much of a position, but it made it peculiarly fitting that when Cuba did, through the help of Uncle Sam, blossom into freedom, he should be elected as its chief executive.

And now, bowed with the weight of years and woe, he passes out from the capitol and goes back to his own home, his government a failure and his people in insurrection against him as he was at one time in insurrection against the rule of Spain. Moreover, it is said that he is poor, and that not even the solace of a comfortable fortune will soothe his declining years.

Small wonder that the news reports, in telling of his pathetic departure from the Cuban capital, say that the tears coursed down his cheeks as he stood upon the rear platform of the train that was bearing him away.

During that insurrection of thirty years ago, when Palma was a younger and a more vigorous man, he was a real patriot, and he suffered for his patriotism. He was captured and confined in a Spanish dungeon in the Pyrenees, where he always spoke of himself to his jailers as the "president of the Cuban republic." When peace was restored Spain banished him from Cuba, and for twenty years he conducted a private school in a small interior town in New York state. When this government was turning the island over to the Cubans, it considered him the ablest and safest man for the presidency, but in the twenty years of his absence from his native land many changes had taken place, and he found himself out of touch with the new generation that had come in.

There seems to be no disposition to attach any great blame to him for the muddle into which the new republic has gotten herself. It was claimed by the insurgents that the elections conducted by him were grossly unfair, and this was largely responsible for the insurrection. But the blame for this will probably be assigned by history largely to the men who surrounded Palma. His present poverty seems to vouch for the honesty of his purposes.

And in the meantime, while Palma is getting settled in his retirement, Governor Taft is arranging things for the bewildered Cubans, and presently they will have a new president of their own. It will be rather a wonder if they treat him much better than they did Palma.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Charles F. Edwards, business manager for Charles E. Blaney's "Young Buffalo, King of the Wild West" company, is in the city a guest at the Lenox. His path is even rougher than that of the ordinary theatrical agent, for it falls to his lot to look after the advance wants of ten full-blood Indians who are carried along with the show, and in many towns he finds the sentiment so strongly against housing Indians that it is no easy task to get his charges located in proper quarters. The company will be in Duluth for a two-night stand, Oct. 12 and 13.

"These are genuine Sioux Indians that we have along with us," said Mr. Edwards, "and we have some interesting experiences with them. Most of them cannot speak English, and we have to employ the services of an interpreter. They are from the Pine Ridge, S. D., agency, and all of them are picturesque figures. They were picked out especially for their looks. Last year we had six of the Reds, and let the government agent pick them out, but we find we get better satisfaction by sending a man to the agency for the special purpose of selecting the men with an eye to the figure they will cut on the stage.

"One of the Indians with the company is Chief Bird Necklace, who is 89 years of age. He was second in command in the famous Custer fight. Then we have Chief Grabbing Bear, who stands 6 feet 3 inches in height. At one time he was chief of the entire tribe of Sioux. Tony Prevost, a halfbreed, is our leading man. He is married to an Irish girl, and for fifteen years was with Buffalo Bill. He looks after the Indians, both for the government and for Mr. Blaney.

"I had quite a time this afternoon getting a hotel for the Indians, but finally succeeded. This is our first visit to Duluth, else we would not have so much trouble. Once we try a hotel with the Reds, there is no trouble afterwards in getting them in, for they really are clean, quiet and orderly. I like to get a place where they can eat and sleep in the same house, on the American plan. In Pittsburg we had them sleeping in one place and eating in another. They were supplied with meal tickets, allowing them each twenty-one meals. These were given them Sunday night, and Thursday morning they showed up and wanted some more. This is an actual fact. The ticket entitled them to a meal whenever they wanted it, and they got into the habit of eating five and six times a day. Whenever the inclination seized them, which was pretty often, they entered the restaurant and had a square meal.

"The Indians like road life all right. During the summer season four of them were at a New York amusement park, in an Indian village.

"I hope I will not be pursued in the next world by fire as I have been in this," said Congressman J. Adam Bede at the St. Louis. He arrived yesterday from Floodwood, Minn., where he delivered a speech Thursday night. "I arrived in the northern village Wednesday. My friends surrounded me and said that if I did not consent to make a speech while there, they would all vote the Democratic ticket. Of course, under these circumstances, I consented.

"The crowd attending was a large one. I had just been introduced to the audience by J. B. Thayer when there was an alarm of fire and everybody, including myself, stampeded for the scene of the conflagration, which proved to be in a barn owned by Herman Hill. The building and contents, valued at $1,500 and uninsured, were a total loss. There was so much excitement that the crowd would not return to the hall, and so I stayed over until Thursday night and made an address then.

"The incident reminds me that, several years ago, just as I had finished a speech in a small town in Iowa, a fire broke out. Later, while speaking to an audience at Milaca, Minn., a fire broke out when I was half through with my speech, interrupting the meeting. At Floodwood the fire began just as I was about to begin talking. I am hoping that the next time the blaze will occur before I reach town."

THE WEATHER.

The Herald's reputation as a prophet is again sustained. Not long ago the "Passing Show" said that pretty soon the evenings would begin making you think of your winter's supply of coal. Last evening was one of them. There was a frost, and the night was downright cold. This morning it was pleasant until it clouded over, and the temperature was milder. Still, fall overcoats are becoming numerous, and there are even a few winter overcoats in sight. Last night the thermometer got down to 32 degs., the freezing point, for the first time this season, and yesterday's highest was 38 degs. The weather man looks for warmer weather tonight and tomorrow.

A year ago today it was cold and gloomy, the first really fall day of the season.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Showery weather continued over the southern states and from the Mississippi valley eastward to the Atlantic during Friday or last night as a result of the movement of the Lake Superior low pressure area to Lake Ontario. Another but minor disturbance is central over Manitoba, attended by some cloudiness from the Dakotas northward and higher temperature throughout most of the Northwest. The barometer is high in the central valleys, the Southwest and far West, causing colder weather from the lake region southwest to Texas with heavy to killing frosts in the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri valleys. Fair and warmer weather is indicated for this locality tonight and Sunday."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

Philadelphia Catholic Standard: Housekeeper—I tell you the price of anthracite these days makes it come hard to the coal buyer.

Wiseman—Yes, but it doesn't make it come hard to the coal cellar. Sometimes it's mixed with bituminous.

Saturday Night Talk

Human Beings as Links.

"I'm only a link" said one of the most useful women in the world laughingly the other day. She was referring to the fact that she had recently been the means of bringing together a youth who wanted to work and an employer of labor who was looking for that kind of a fellow. That is just what she has been doing in one way and another all the 60 years of her modest and unselfish career. A wide acquaintance in the working classes together with an entree into circles of wealth and privilege of acting as a go-between, in almost innumerable cases. So, if there is in her community a middle aged spinster desirous of a position as housekeeper, or a lady wanting a companion for a European trip or a weary mother eager for a helper with her children or a young man anxious for a chance to work for his board while taking a course in architecture or engineering or a Sunday school superintendent seeking in despair a bright teacher for a class of restless boys, it is come to be a matter of course for those acquainted with the situation to say: "Oh, go to Miss Greatheart she'll know the right party."

We all owe a good deal to the people who serve as links between ourselves and something worth having. Think over the good things that have come to you through the years and see if they are not associated with some individuals who served as the medium. The teacher who induced you to choose a certain career, the friend who introduced you to the point where you made connection with some great and inspiring truth—what were they but links you are where you are today. And so in a multitude of lesser instances the human links was equally important even if those who served as such were not always conscious of the favor they were doing you.

One day years ago, a young man was standing on the banks of an Oriental river with two companions. Suddenly a fourth young man appeared. "Behold him," remarked the leader to the other two and there was something in the radiant countenance of the stranger and something in the tone in which their friend referred to him that led the two to follow up the stranger. After cultivating his acquaintance a few hours they went forth to say the same words "Behold" to their own particular friends and from that day to this the Christian church has been recruited because one and onother have been willing to say "Behold," and thus to serve as links between the founder of Christianity and those who had not made his acquaintance.

To be a good link requires, it is true, some self-effacement and much consideknew, accompanied by a young woman started on a journey the other day and just as the train moved out of the station a gentleman entered whom she knew accompanied by a young woman whom he placed in the next seat. Then he introduced the young women, saying, "You'll have a good talk together on your way." Ah, but that was just what young lady number one didn't want, for she was tired. But overcoming her reluctance she entered on a long and what proved to be a mutually interesting conversation. As a result young woman number two is in social settlement work in the Hawaiian islands today. That outcome was furthest from her thoughts when she entered the train and she owes her present place to the fact that her chance acquaintance on the train who knew of the position took pains then and later to guide her to it.

Every good person from Secretary Root going to South America to bind the nations closer together to the lumbleat mother strengthening the ties between her children and God and truth is a link and there is no more honorable calling in life.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1886.

Quite a number of French Canadians met last evening in Forest & Perrault's office and organized the French Canadian Independent Political club. The following officers were elected: Cleophas Tremblay, president; Arthur Mercer, vice president; J. C. Marquis, secretary; Joseph La Farune, treasurer; Argele Pilon, sergeant-at-arms.

Mrs. E. A. Byers, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. L. A. Barber, left yesterday for her home in Illinois.

Rev. P. B. Champagne started last night for a trip to New Mexico. He will go to Chicago, where he will meet Father Stephens, who will accompany him to the Southwest.

Sergeant Brace and family left yesterday for Washington, D. C., being called there by the serious illness of Mrs. Brace's mother. J. C. Van Norman will have charge of the signal office during Mr. Brace's absence.

Samuel J. Randall has just been nominated for congress for the thirteenth time by the Democrats of Pennsylvania.

W. A. Foote, who is building on the lot adjoining the American Express company's office on Superior street, left yesterday for his former home in Fort Wayne, Ind. Mr. Foote will return shortly with his partner and they will open a cigar factory on a large scale in the new building.

George Bell, the government farmer on the Indian reservation near Tower, passed through the city last night en route to St. Paul, with a number of Indians to appear as witnesses in liquor cases.

The arrangements have been changed and ex-Governor Davis will speak at the fair this evening instead of at the opera house, as it was feared the latter plan would work serious financial injury to the county fair.

The Duluth & Iron Range lake extension has at last begun to assume the shape of a railroad. Another fortnight will witness the completion of the grade from Two Harbors to the eastern limits of Duluth. Trains should be running in the early part of November.

Winnipeg is reminded of the old boom days by the return of Hugh Sutherland, president of the Hudson Bay Railway company, from England. He says the Hudson Bay road will be built at once.

A number of persons connected closely and remotely with theatricals were gossiping in a local cafe one night this week and some of the anecdotes they told were interesting—and some of them were of the "I have heard that before somewhere" kind.

"John Luther Long once gave a dinner in Philadelphia in honor of David Belasco, the well known playwright and manager," said the leading man, and Belasco, in the course of a toast, said:

"'Henry DeMille and I, in one of the dramas on which we collaborated, used that strong line from the Psalms of David, "Lord, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph?"

"At a rehearsal the actor to whom this biblical quotation fell ,took DeMille aside.

"'"Look here, Mr. DeMille," he said, "that's a funny line about the triumph of the wicked, ain't it?"

"'"Why, I don't know; I rather like it," said DeMille.

"'"Are you stuck on it," said the actor.

"'"Yes, I confess I am," replied DeMille. "The fact is, it isn't my line. It is David's."

"The actor sneered.

"'"I thought as much." he said, "anyone could tell that that was some more of Dave Belasco's bad English."'"

* * *

"Joseph Jefferson used to be very sensitive on the subject of his retirement from the stage," said the "character old man."

"The interviewer who put the question of farewell to him generally got a sharp, but pleasant reply. I remember that one season a few years before his death, when I was a member of Mr. Jefferson's company, a reporter in the South got the best of him.

"Mr. Jefferson came down stairs in his hotel one morning and was much disturbed to read in a morning paper a long and mysteriously worded article in which the word retired was used in close connection with his name. He knew the managing editor of the paper and went to the newspaper office and made a half-hearted complaint. The reporter was called in and asked where he got the story.

"'The city editor told me to see Mr. Jefferson,' said the young man, 'and ask him if he was going to retire.'

"'Well, did you see him?' asked the editor.

"'No sir,' said the reporter. 'I sent my card up to his room and it was sent back with this written on it: Mr. Jefferson has retired.'

"And the actor took the reporter out and bought him a new hat."

"I was once engaged as 'utility man' for a stock company in Denver," said the "leading heavy." "We opened with a war play in which I had a difficult minor part in every act—each unimportant and each short.

"I got along very well as an "elderly Southern gentleman' in the first act, as a colored servant in the second act, and then I had a quick change to an 'orderly' in the third act. This was where the trouble started.

"I was trying hard to buckle on a sword belt when some one called to me and told me that it was time for me to go on. I hurried to the stage in time to hear the galloping horse effect which signaled my approach. Some one threw Fuller's earth all over to show that I had been riding hard, when my cue came and I rushed madly on with important dispatches for General Allen.

"When I reached the center of the stage and the applause had subsided for this messenger was quite an important personage—I reached into my jacket for the dispatches on which the climax of the play depended. I had forgotten them. It seemed as if all the people in the world were looking at me, and that the revolution of the earth depended on those documents. Again I put my hand into my empty pockets.

"The wait was growing awful, when a brilliant thought crossed my mind. I threw open my shirt, tore off a porous plaster I was wearing and slipped it into the general's hand. The applause that I got was something terrific. The audience thought I had been shot and covered the wound with the dispatches."

Then a newspaper man who was present felt called upon to tell one what he had heard.

"I read this is an English theatrical paper and perhaps some of you fellows have heard it before," he observed.

"That's all right, go ahead," said the crowd.

"A fourth rate actor in London, named Orlando Day, was called in a sudden emergency to supply the place of Allen Ainsworth at the Criterion theater, for a single night," said the newspaper man.

"The call filled him with joy, which was in turn dampened by the fearful thought that, as the play was already in the midst of its run, none of the dramatic critics would not be present to watch and comment on his triumph. He decided to announce the event; so, rushing to a telegraph office, he composed the following message: 'Orlando Day presents Allen Ainsworth's part tonight at the Criterion.'

"This message was sent to all the leading critics. At a late hour of the same day, in the Garrick club, a man produced one of the telegrams and read it to his friends. A chorus of exclamations followed the reading: 'Why, I got the same message.'

"One critic who was present said nothing.

"'Didn't he wire you, too?' asked one of the group.

"'Oh, yes,' said the silent critic.

"'But, of course, you didn't answer it,' said one.

"'Yes. I thought it only polite to send an answer after the fellow had taken the trouble to wire me.'

"'What did you say,' asked the group.

"'I just telegraphed him: "Thanks for the timely warning."'"

* * *

This one was told by the manager:

"My friend, R. C. Herz, disliked his part with Maxine Elliot's company in 'Her Own Way,' so much that several times he handed in his resignation, but each time he was prevailed upon to remain in the company, as he is an excellent actor.

"'The part was a very disagreeable one,' Herz told me, 'and it is impossible to give the character any particular strength. Why, the best line I had was, "I'm rotten all the way through."'

"'And that reminds me that when we were playing in Baltimore an old lady and a very deaf old man were sitting in the first row. As soon as I had used the line I just spoke about, the old man leaned toward his companion and asked in a shrill voice what I said.

"'"He said," the old lady yelled, so that the man could hear, "that he was rotten all the way through."

"'"So he is," said the old man.'"

GOVERNOR'S SPEECH

the governor and his party to the hall, and the meeting was opened, shortly after 7. The hall rapidly filled. P. J. Russell, Beltrami member of the state Democratic committee, presided and introduced L. G. Pendergast, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, who spoke briefly, but feelingly. He wanted everybody to understand that the governor had treated him very kindly in selecting him to be his running mate on the ticket; he was located the furtherest north of any man who aspired of the place of lieutenant governor on the ticket and he would not have received the nomination had not the governor indorsed his candidacy. The governor was his friend. Great applause greeted this statement from Mr. Pendergast, who is very popular here.

Mr. Russell next introduced Mr. Johnson as the home-grown governor, born and reared in the state, of common people and common himself, but withal a great man.

The governor spoke for about an hour and was given close attention and loud and prolonged applause. He said that the Duluth New Tribune had hailed his appearance at Duluth and his trip over the iron ranges as "invading the home of the enemy." He was inclined to believe that the "enemy" had a very peculiar manner of showing his antagonism. He hoped he would meet with the same kind of "antagonism" on this trip. He had learned much during the last four or five days of his running mate, and was almost led to believe that Mr. Pendergast had, single-handed and alone, put down the late rebellion, but, on further acquaintance, he had ascertained from the judge that it had taken the latter three days to reach the battle ground of Bull Run, and that he had returned in one day. This sally brought roars of laughter from the crowd.

Governor Johnson said he was here to give an account of his two years of stewardship. He understood the political complexion of the state and county as being Republican. He hoped the latter day custom of cutting out abuse and vilification would be observed by his opponents in this campaign. He did not want to quarrel with any one who disagreed with him politically. He attributed the present condition of independence of party "strings" to the independent action of President Roosevelt. As governor, he had nothing to do with the tariff, the Philippine question or other national issues, but things that directly concerned the people of the state. A public official should live up to the law. Two years ago the charge was made that Mr. Dunn had broken the law, others contended that he had made as good settlements in the timber trespass cases as was possible. When Mr. Johnson was campaigning then, he made the promise that if elected he would investigate the charges and get every cent due the state. He had instructed Attorney General Young to prosecute every case of trespass and collect every dollar due the state. Many of the companies had came in and desired to settle, but were forced to settle according to law, with the result that $45,000 in cash was collected to the credit of the school fund. Larger firms rebelled and the matter was taken into the courts, with the result that the supreme court upheld the state and treble damages were collected. In fighting the case the companies had retained the original framer of the law for the purpose of proving its unconstitutionality, but to no avail. Probably 100 small trespass cases had been settled, and not one single case can be found since Mr. Johnson was inaugurated as governor where settlement was not made according to law, with the result that nearly half a million dollars will be put in the state treasury to the benefit of the school fund. This he felt should merit the confindence of the people. A net profit in two years of $490,000 on an investment of $10,600 ought to recommend a renewal of the contract.

There were other cases investigated, and he said that in Hubbard county alone before the investigation is through, there will have been collected fully $500,000 due the state on timber trespass in that county alone, and that before finishing the investigation the state will have recovered the enormous sum of $5,000,000. says that the law should be enforced. ing of the law relative to this matter says that the law should be enforce. He should have the courage to say that in event of his election he would personally see that it was enforced. If he was elected, said the speaker, he would serve the state in this manner exactly as he had during the past two years, and would recover every dollar possible belonging to the state of Minnesota and turn it into the treasury.

Relative to transportation rates the governor told of his efforts to obtain lower rates on all kinds of commodities, and stated his stand with the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners, which resulted in voluntary reductions on the part of the railroads, ten per cent on grain, twenty per cent on merchandise and fifteen per cent on coal, saving the people of the state fully $5,600,000 a year. Partisan papers have accused him of doing this for political effect and being tardy in his action. It took time to do this and he had laid the foundation day by day until the time was ripe for action. But two general reductions have even been made in the state and they came during the administration of Mr. Lind and his own. Mr. Van Sant might come to this country and make the same suggestion of tardiness in this matter, but why had not he done something in the matter during his administration which was for four years? He claimed no particular credit for this act. He simply did his duty as any other officer should. He was not the enemy of corporations and railroads, and simply wanted them to make money enough to pay their help well and make a fair rate of interest and profit on their investment. He wanted the conditions between the common carrier and the common people more equitable.

The governor referred to the prominent part he had taken in regulating insurance matter in the state which won for him and Insurance Commissioner O'Brien the credit of President Roosevelt, the first time in the history of the country wherein credit was given to the executive of a state in a message to congress.

He wished to challenge Mr. Cole as to the latter's advocacy of drainage and good roads and state development and showed plainly wherein, as executive of the state, he was a friend of Northern Minnesota, and in fact all sections of the state. Mr. Cole was claiming credit for fathering the advocacy of measures which the speaker had recommended to the state legislature long before Mr. Cole took any hand in state development.

Governor Johnson finished his speech with an eloquent eulogy of the great North Star state and sat down amidst thunderous applause.

After the speech there was a general desire to shake hands with the governor and he was congratulated on all sides for his speech.

He left on this morning's train for Long Prairie and Wadena. He will speak this afternoon at the former place and at Long Prairie tonight.

The governor's speech has caused a sensation here and will turn many votes.

Charcoal Kills Bad Breath.

Bad Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Drinking or Eating Can Be Instantly Stopped.

Sample Package Mailed Free.

Other people notice your bad breath where you would not notice it at all. It is nauseating to other people to stand before them and while you are talking, give them a whiff or two of your bad breath. It usually comes from food fermenting on your stomach. Sometimes you have it in the morning—that awful sour, bilious, bad breath. You can stop that at once by swallowing one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful gas and odor absorbers ever prepared.

Sometimes your meals will reveal themselves in your breath to those who talk with you. "You've had onions," or "You've been eating cabbage," and all of a sudden you belch in the face of your friend. Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of odors, as every one knows. That is why Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are so quick to stop all gases and odors of odorous foods, or gas from indigestion.

Don't use breath perfumes. They never conceal the odor, and never absorb the gas that causes the odor. Besides, the very fact of using them reveals the reason for their use. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges in the first place stop for good all sour brash and belching of gas, and make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, just after you've eaten. Then no one will turn his face away from you when you breathe or talk; your breath will be pure and fresh, and besides your food will taste so much better to you at your next meal. Just try it.

Charcoal does other wonderful things, too. It carries away from your stomach and intestines, all the impurities there massed together and which causes the bad breath. Charcoal is a purifier as well as an absorber.

Charcoal is now by far the best, most easy and mild laxative known. A whole boxful will do no harm; in fact, the more you take the better. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made of pure willow charcoal and mixed with just a faint flavor of honey to make them palatable for you, but not too sweet. You just chew them like candy. They are absolutely harmless.

Get a new, pure sweet breath, freshen your stomach for your next meal, and keep the intestines in good working order. These two things are the secret of good health and long life. You can get all the charcoal necessary to do these wonderful but simple things by getting Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. We want you to test these little wonder workers yourself before you buy them. So send us your full name and address for a free sample of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. Then after you have tried the sample, and been convinced, go to your druggist and get a 25c box of them. You'll feel better all over, more comfortable, and "cleaner" inside.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample pacakage free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 60 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

COLE HAS NOT YET DENIED

and here the enemies of the measure showed their hand; nineteen members who voted for the original measure reversed themselves, and voted against it. Candidate Cole was one of this infamous nineteen, and they came within twelve votes of killing the bill.

Reports from the state are to the effect that Mr. Cole's knocking campaign is not being received with enthusiasm throughout the rural districts. The people know that the state is prosperous, and it will take more than his unsupported word to make them believe that Minnesota farms are being deserted. In fact, such assertions are false on their face, and can be disproved by the census figures of last year. Mr. Cole is diligently preaching that the farm population has decreased from 10,000 to 6,000 in the past year, while for the five preceding years the state census shows the following increase of population in the counties to which he is particularly anxious to apply "state development": Kittson, 1,989; Roseau, 4,197; Marshall, 2,039; Polk, 1,783; Red Lake, 3,760; Norman, 3,131; Clay, 1,515; Becker, 4,115; Wilkin, 1,199; Morrison, 1,693; Benton, 1,344; Otter Tail, 2,354; Mille Lac, 1,810; Aitkin, 2,794; Kenebec, 1,580; Beltrami and Clearwater, 9,521; Itasca, 6,956; St. Louis, (outside city of Duluth) 22,608; Cook, 652; Lake, 1,619; Hubbard, 2,430; Wadena, 1,396; Todd, 2,424; Cass, 3,235; Crow Wing, 2,481; Pine, 3,323; Carlton, 5,270. With the exception of St. Louis, all these are agricultural counties, and in that county Duluth is excluded. The increase in these for the five years is 97,720, or 42.8 per cent. Yet Mr. Cole has the nerve to assert that population is diminishing. There is just about as much foundation for this statement of his as there is for any of the claims he makes. His is the thinnest campaign ever conducted in the state.

The Democraic state central committee has decided to run John Dwan of Two Harbors as attorney general to the place of T. R. Kane, who was named by the Minneapolis convention, but refused to make the run. Dwan is one of the popular northern attorneys and an able speaker. It is thought that he will give great strength to the ticket.

There will be a full meeting of the Democratic state central committee Oct. 25. The Republican committee will likely have a meeting at the same time.

Alvah Eastman declares that the only member of the board of control who really violated the proprieties or traditions of that body is Silas W. Leavett himself, by proposing the resolutions. The state press is realizing now the animus of the attack, and when they consider the character of the two men there is little surprise expressed.

Senator La Follette, in his speeches at Hutchinson and Mankato, showed up the records of Senators Clapp and Nelson by merely telling the people how they voted. Some one asked: "How did our senators vote on the amendment?" referring to the amendment which gave the commission power to ascertain the value of railroad property of the country as a basis for fixing rates and had that passed, it is contended, would have saved the people of this country $400,000,000 annually now paid in excessive rates.

"I've got the record here," replied the enator, "but I have been abused before for reading the record of United States senators and their votes as recorded in the Congressional Record, by the corporation press, and have been charged with abusing my fellow senators. I did not abuse them. I read the roll call."

Then he read the roll call on the amendment and Senator Nelson's name was among forty who voted no and Senator Clapp was recorded as not voting.

This has started many thinking throughout the state and efforts are being brought to bear upon Jacobson to have him run against Nelson, but it is not likely that he will do so. A canvass of the state has shown that, with very few exceptions, all the candidates for the legislature are pledged to Nelson.

Jacobson's present work, it is estimated, is in line with his aspirations to capture the gubernatorial nomination in 1908. There is more of Jacobson lately in the campaign than Cole, and this is quite a significant fact. Never before in the history of a state campaign did one of the stump speakers so overshadow the head of the ticket.

ARE NOT YET OVER THEIR SURPRISE

Cuban Officials Astonished at Palma's Letter to President.

Havana, Oct. 6.—None of ex-President Palma's intimates, save the cabinet officers, his private secretary and Consul General Steinhardt, had any knowledge of Palma's communication in September to the government at Washington, and the greatest surprise is manifested at the fact that Palma actually suggested intervention as a solution. Vice President Mendez Capote, as an attorney, had privately advised certain foreign corporations that in his opinion the necessity for intervention was imminent, but that Palma had asked outright for intervention was not intimated by anybody. It was well known that Palma was nervous and fearful, but it was not generally believed that he was so ready to give up, although it had often been rumored that he was weakening.

VIRGINIA CHURCH GUTTED BY FIRE

M. E. Church Damaged and Only $1,000 Insurance.

Virginia, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The M. E. church, recently improved at a cost of several hundred dollars, was badly gutted by fire at an early hour yesterday morning. The blaze was discovered issuing from the roof. The department was called and reached the scene before the general alarm was sounded. The blaze had gained considerable headway and with one stream of water but little progress was made toward staying the flames. When a second stream was brought into action, however, the blaze was soon conquered. The roof was badly damaged and the walls somewhat, but it is hoped that the latter may be saved.

How the fire started is unknown. A prayer meeting was held in the church Thursday evening, but there was no fire in the stove. As the fire started in the roof it is thought that defective wiring was the cause. The church was recently raised and a stone foundation placed under it and it is possible that the raising damaged some of the wiring.

There was only $1,000 insurance on the building, placed with the Pederson agency, and it is doubtful if this amount will cover the loss.

BOMB FOR PENNYPACKER.

Pennsylvania's Governor Gets What Appears to be Infernal Machine.

Harrisburg, Oct. 6.—A suspicious looking package containing what appeared to be an infernal machine was found in Governor Pennypacker's mail at the executive mansion yesterday. It was about three inches square and resembled in shape a baking powder box. The peculiar appearance of the package excited the suspicion of executive clerk Lynch, who soaked it in a bucket of water for several hours.

Upon being opened it was found to contain a small case resembling a cartridge shell surrounded by black powder and was intended to be exploded by the removal of the lid.

The package was addressed to the governor. On the outside there was a wide red band, on the outside of which was pasted the name "the Ridgeway company, 31 East Seventh street, New York," and this newspaper extract, "help ,help, help."

The "machine" is supposed to have been sent by some practical joker.

HOISTING OF LOGS

From Bartlett Lake Nearly Completed by Backus-Brooks Company.

Northome, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald)—The Backus-Brooks company are nearing the completion of the hoisting of logs from Bartlett lake, and soon the entire lot of logs that were in the lake will have been hauled away. When the company first started to hoist there were 8,000,000 feet of logs in the lake. These logs had been sold to the Tabor Lumber company of Stillwater, to which place they are being hauled, to be sawed in the Tabor mill. The Backus-Brooks people expect to clean up the logs within the next ten days. About fifty men have been employed in the work of hoisting and loading, the logs having been scattered about the lake, making much work in collecting them together.

MINNESOTA'S TRIAL WILL BE SIMILAR TO OTHERS.

Washington, Oct. 6—Chief Constructor Capps and Chief Engineer Rae have recommended that in the coming trial of the battleship Minnesota, the standardized screw method be used as heretofore in other trials. The contract for the construction of the Minnesota provides that her trial should be over a marked course, but it is found impossible to supply naval vessels to mark a course for the four hours' test. All ships during late years have been tried by the other method, and it is expected that the department will approve the recommendation of the officers for the regulation trial.

DO NOT KEEP THE FAITH.

Mormon President Advises Against Sending Children to Berlin.

Salt Lake City, Oct 6.—A long address by President Joseph F. Smith was the principal event at the seventy-seventh semi-annual conference of the Mormon church, yesterday. President Smith talked confidently of his recent trip to Europe. He advised Mormon parents to discontinue the practice of sending their children to Berlin to study, saying that many of the Mormon young people here hold themselves aloof from the church meetings in the German capital. He made no direct allusion to his own indictment for unlawful cohabitation with his five wives, but he said:

"Let every man live such an exemplary life that there can be nothing to be said against him. Let him be true to his people; let him be true to Zion and pure in his ways, and the one God will uphold him whether he is deprived of his liberty or in prison cells."

JOHN UNO SEBENIUS DAIRY FARM ON LONDON ROAD

Trianon Farm One of the Most Complete in the Country.

Cows That Are Worth Small Fortunes in Themselves.

Not many cities in these United States can boast of as complete a dairy farm within their limits as Trianon Farm, at Fortieth avenue east and London road, owned by John Uno Sebenius.

The purpose is to try to use to advantage for himself, his friends and the sick, the beautiful ground he owns, by assembling a herd of strong, healthy cattle to provide first-class wholesome dairy products.

Trianon Farm, named after the country place where Marie Antoinette was wont to play at dairying in France, comprises twenty beautiful acres located on the lake shore and with smooth London road as the boundary on the other side.

The grounds contain, as well as the barns, etc., the home of Grant E. Owens, the dairy expert in Mr. Sebenius' empoly, whose time is all occupied with the supervision of the valuable cattle which have already made Trianon farm well known among cattle fanciers throughout the land.

The new buildings, up to date in every way, were built from specifications by Architect Wangenstein and Mr. Sebenius, who carefully thought out the needs of his place long before a single carpenter was put at work. The construction work was accomplished by Dahlman McDermott of Lakeside.

With the new barn, the watchful supervision of Mr. Owens and the lively interest of Mr. Sebenius, the cows on the Trianon tract can not but lead a happy life and continue to produce the large amount of milk that they have since the well known mining man first turned from ore propositions to delve a little in dairy farming.

The cows at Trianon farm are no ordinary animals. They are not the sort that you can find grazing on the high hillside any afternoon during the summer. They are blooded stock, headliners among the bovine aristocracy.

At present the Trianon herd comprises nineteen cows, of which number, eleven are Guesnseys; six are Jerseys; and two are Holsteins. Ten of the Guernseys are registered in the American Guernsey Cattle club, and one of them, Clara K, has but recently been honored with the advanced register in that well known organization.

Her number is 16740 and her production last year was 8,012.98 pounds of milk, with 412 pounds of butter. Her average test was 5.14 per cent butter fat. The annual production of the greatest cow registered in the club, Yeksa Sunbeam, is 14,920.8 pounds of milk, the average test of butter fat being 5.75 per cent. Her register number is 331, and she is nine years and six months old.

The average test of the entire Guernsey herd at the Sebenius place is 5.1. The tests are made by C. L. McNally of the state agricultural school, for the American Guernsey Cattle club.

The names of the rest of the Sebenius Guernseys, together with their registered numbers, follows: Miss Lily, 14270; Coley, 16093; Ruda, 17255; Dolly, 17254; Pussy Belle, 16098; Quoin of Brookside, 10209; Inez, 10769; Mamie M. II, 15107; and Woodend, 16362. Then there is the gentleman of the herd, the prize bull, Counsel of Birchwood, 10377.

The handsome new barn, which is now being completed, contains everything, or rather will contain everything, that a well-regulated bovine heart could desire or that those who take care of the cows could wish for.

In the first place, there are the latest patent stalls for twenty-five cows. These stalls are divided by iron rail partitions, which can be thrown aside while the stable is being cleaned or bedding for the cows fixed.

The floors are all of cement. The interior is constructed of cement and steel laths and the outside with pressed steel. There are patent ventilators and gutters for draining the refuse.

THE MODEL BARN AND HERD OF GUERNSEY CATTLE.

THE PRIZE GUERNSEY BULL, COUNSEL OF BIRCHWOOD.

A GLIMPSE OF THE NEW BUILDINGS.

In that section of the barn separating the domain of the prize cows from that of the sordid horses and their equipment, are located the box stalls. There are four of them and they are to the barn what private drawingroom compartments are on a first-class sleeping car.

One of these box stalls is the hospital, where the ailing cows will be treated. If a cow has a sore throat or a bad leg, she is to be bundled into the hospital stall and Dr. Owens will prescribe for her.

Another stall is reserved all the time for his majesty, Counsel of Birchwood, the prize bull. Another is for calves and in the fourth will be located the appliances for preparing the feed. Great attention is paid to this, for the cows are worth small fortunes in themselves and they are given the best that can be procured and still agree with bovine tastes.

The creamery is a small building set apart from the barn, but of the same construction. It will contain the separator, boiler room for the washing and sterilizing of bottles and living apartments for two of the caretakers.

On the other side of the barn, is the model chicken house which as yet is uninhabited.

It will be a week or two before the cattle can be moved into the new barn but when they do, they will have one of the most complete and up-to-date homes for cows in the country.

Trianon is a model farm and is therefore not run for profit. The products of the place are sold, but the expense, on so generous a scale is the farm operated, is greater.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

DIVISION ARISES

Members of Railroad Commission Disagree on One Point.

Attorney Manahan's Persistence Makes Them Uncomfortable.

St. Paul, Oct. 6.—Whether inquiry into the matter of alleged rebates can go back three years or since the passage of the Elkins law is the question which must be decided by the railroads commission before the hearing on commodity rates can proceed. Yesterday afternoon Judge Mills, chairman of the commission, announced that the rule which would be observed would be the three-year limit. A few minutes later Commissioner Young dissented from that ruling and admitted the relevancy of testimoney dating back further than three years. Several minutes later Commissioner Staples declared that he had not expressed himself regarding the admissibility of such testimony. This left the ruling in the hands of Commissioner Mills who announced to counsel for the Omaha and for the shippers that the commsision would rule on the matter later.

R. A. Stone, representing the attorney general's office, gave the opinion that the evidence dating back four or five years on this matter was vital and told the attorney for the shippers that he hoped he would get it.

The afternoon session was spent in arguing the question as to whether in this investigation the examination could go back farther than three years. It has been the ruling of the interstate commerce commission that for purposes of detecting the giving of rebates that an inquiry could not date back of three years, or the passage of the Elkins law. Whether in a civil proceeding to determine whether the commodity rates are reasonable that an examination beyond that date can be made is now up for the commission to decide.

One of the stormiest session which the commission has had was started when Mr. Manahan produced an excerpt from a former report of the public examiner showing that the railroads placed back into the gross earnings item returned to the state for purposes of taxation over $6,000,000. This amount comprises certain deductions from the earnings which the public examiner held should be there, and a compromise was reached by which they were returned.

L. A. Robinson, auditor of the Omaha was on the stand at the time, and he was asked if these amounts, or at least an item of over $400,000 credited to his company was not for rebates. On advice of counsel he refused to answer the question, and the commission ruled, the ruling being announced by Commissioner Mills, that the examination could not go back of three years.

The next question was made concerning the $12,000 paid in taxes on this item within the last two years as the result of the investigation on the part of the public examiner.

Judge Wilson of the Omaha, objected to this question as he contended that in an indirect way it attempted to show what had taken place four or five years ago. The question which raised this point was objected to by Judge Wilson again and again, and the witness was requested not to answer it. Mr. Manahan them made a motion that the commission direct the witness to be arrested and instruct the attorney general to enforce their order in the district court. The question of the materiality of this testimony was then raised, and the commission was asked to change its ruling on the matter.

"I contend," declared Mr. Manahan, "that if this amount was paid back to shippers as rebates that it is right to show that in this hearing. If the roads could afford to place these items back again, then they can stand a reduction in commodity rates. I am surprised that this commission should close the door to this valuable examination. The report of the public examiner shows that these deductions were made and we should be allowed to show what they were for. It seems that the public examiner's department is aiding us much more in this matter than the examiners of the commission. A few days ago those drafts of the Minneapolis & St. Louis were shown up and an expenditure of $170,000 revealed. Mr. Hinkley, your examiner, has just been over the books and could not find them. He said afterwards to me, 'I am surprised that they escaped me.' Why is this? Yes, I say, why is all this?"

"Mr. Manahan, I want you to understand that I will not allow this department to be attacked," declared Commissioner Staples.

"Then why don't you rule on the matter or why have you ruled to shut the door on this testimony?"

"I have not so ruled or expressed myself," replied Commissioner Staples.

"I supposed that you are a member of this commission and participate in its ruling, Mr. Staples," replied Mr. Manahan.

Commissioner Young asked Attorney General Stone for an opinion on the materiality of this matter. The other two commissioners took no part in the request and Mr. Stone refused to answer the request unless a majority of the commission joined in it. The other commissioners did not join Commissioner Young but Mr. Stone, off behalf of himself, stated to Mr. Manahan and Judge Wilson that he believed the evidence was material and that the state would at a later date produce witnesses to show that commodity rates should be materially reduced in Minnesota on some of the lines at least.

Then followed a discussion as to whether Mr. Stone was present at the hearing as an advocate for the people of Minnesota or as a legal adviser of the commission. The name of the present case is that of the state of Minnesota against the railroads operating in Minnesota and the contention on the part of the attorney for the shippers was that Stone was there as a prosecutor and so were the members of the commission and that they should not sit as a court in equity and refuse to ask questions inquiring into the reasonableness of the rates.

Judge Wilson and the other railroad attorneys have appealed to the commission to ask questions which will throw light on the matter. Judge Wilson, at the conclusion of Mr. Robinson's testimony, suggested that the commision ask him questions, but the members stated that they had none to ask.

The hearing ended with everyone in doubt as to which party can take the initative. Mr. Manahan stated that his position technically in relation to the hearing might be untenable as he was there at the permission of the commission. Attorney General Stone declared that his office was not ready to appear as advocates, as the legal department of the state was not up on the case as yet. The commission did not see fit to declare its status, whether that of investigator or judge, but adjourned the hearing until next Wednesday, to examine some witnesses from the southern part of the state who have been subpoenaed by the state to appear. This in reality will be the opening of the state's case and the shipper's case will not be continued again until the commission sees fit to pass upon the question as to how far back the examination can extend.

At the hearing yesterday when Vice President Clark of the Omaha road was on the stand he was questioned as follows:

"Has your company any interest in the Peavey elevator?"

"No sir."

"Has your company any interest in any elevator?"

An objection was made and overruled, the witness answering:

"Yes, the company owns several elevators."

"Where?"

"Two at Superior, and three, four or five perhaps on the western division of our line."

Mr. Manahan interrupted the witness and Judge Wilson remarked:

"He spanks me and then he leaves me, turning me over and then turns to the commission."

Attorney Manahan brought out that several elevators are leased from the railroad and Mr. Manahan asked if they were not leased for one dollar.

"Did you pay Bacon and Haven, attorneys at Hudson, a fee for defending a number of attorneys arrested in 1904, for alleged voting at election that fall?"

The objection was overruled.

The witness replied: "Not a dollar."

"Did you authorize the bringing of these Italians from the northern part of the state to vote?"

"I did not authorize it and did not know about it."

"How much did your company allow in the aggregate to the Peavey Grain company for grain doors the past year?"

"I don't know that we allowed them anything."

"They put in a charge of $1.50 a car for doors, don't they?"

"I don't know what the charge is."

The witness said that it was a rule of the shippers to furnish the grain doors, because they could do it much cheaper than the company could.

"Isn't it a fact that your company paid large vouchers to L. Stark & Co. of Chicago, large potato shippers, for lining put in cars in which they shipped potatoes?"

"I think some sums are paid out for this purpose."

"Do you know that no potato shippers here have that privilege? That they pay for lining their own cars?"

The witness did not know.

"Did not your company pay the telegraph bills of certain jobbers in St. Paul and Minneapolis who ordered goods over your line?"

"That practice is followed where men have purchased in large quantities, and if the merchant will order over our line our agent will pay for telegraphing a routing order."

"Those vouchers don't show on their face that they are for routing orders, do they?"

"If they do not then our agent would not telegraph."

Quinsy, Sprains and Swellings Cured.

"In November, 1901, I caught cold and had the quinsy. My throat was swollen so I could hardly breathe. I applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me relief in a short time. In two days I was all right," says Mrs. L. Cousins, Otterburn, Mich. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is a liniment and is specially valuable for sprains and swellings. For sale by all druggists.

ACCUSED BY RAILROAD OF STEALING CORN.

New Orleans, Oct. 6.—Thomas P. Doty, former secretary of the Central Elevator & Warehouse company, was arrested yesterday charged with having appropriated 25,669 bushels of corn last January and with having sold it for $11,037. The arrest was made following an investigation by Illinois Central railroad officials. The connection between the railroad and the Central company was not stated today. Doty was released on $10,000 bond and said he had a right to sell the corn in question.

HEARST NOT LIKELY TO DECLINE NOMINATION.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Democratic State Chairman Connors visited William R. Hearst yesterday, but declined to explain the purpose of his visit. Mr. Connors left last night for Buffalo and his departure gave rise to many extravagant rumors, the most sensational of them being to the effect that Mr. Hearst had intimated to Mr. Connors his intention to decline the Democratic nomination for governor. No foundation for any such report could be obtained from Mr. Hearst or from any other reliable source.

Mr. Connors says there is no truth in the rumor that Hearst would decline the nomination.

DULUTH BOY'S EXPERIENCE

Fell With Train From High Bridge Into Deep River.

After falling with a train from a high bridge into a deep, swift river, escaping a horrible death by climbing through a broken window in the car, and braving death time and again while floating fourteen miles down the river on a piece of wreckage, William H. Balmer, a former Duluth boy is living to tell the story of his terrible experience, though he is yet unable to leave the hospital where he has been confined ever since the accident.

Mr. Balmer is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Balmer of 206 South Eighteenth avenue east and has a wide acquaintance in this city. For several years he was greatly interested in baseball, being a good all-round player and an athlete of considerable local repute. Mr. Balmer left Duluth last December, and has recently been on the road through Kansas and Oklahoma for a Kansas concern. He makes his headquarters at Lawrence, Kan., at which place he is now in the hospital and had not left it a few days ago when he wrote to his parents.

Mr. Balmer was a passenger on the Rock Island passenger train which left the high bridge over the Cimarron river, Oklahoma, the morning of Sept. 18 last, and carried nearly a score of persons down to death, besides injuring twenty or thirty more. The accident happened about three miles from Dover, Okla.

The accident was claimed to be due to the defective condition of the bridge which had swerved out of line by the pressure of the driftwood carried down the swoolen stream.

The train was an hour late and was running at a high rate of speed. The engineer did not see the condition of the bridge until within a few yards of it, when he shouted to the fireman, threw on the air brakes and jumped. He landed on the verge of the river bank and escaped unhurt, but the fireman sustained severe injuries.

The engine, tender, mail cars, smoker and day coach, were hurled to the stream below. The current whirled the day coach down stream until it lodged on a sand bank and the occupants who were left alive and uninjured were helped out through the doors and windows.

The smoker floated down stream submerged all but the top.

Mr. Balmer was in the smoker. He was about to make his way into the day coach when the train went into the river. Realizing the terrible death he faced he kicked out a window and through it fought his way to the top of the stream, where he happened to see some floating wreckage. To this he clung while the current carried him with terrific speed downstream. Six times the wreckage to which he clung struck other floating debric and he was submerged and came near drowning, but the love of life was strong, and he managed to hang on. The wreckage with Mr.

WILLIAM H. BALMER.

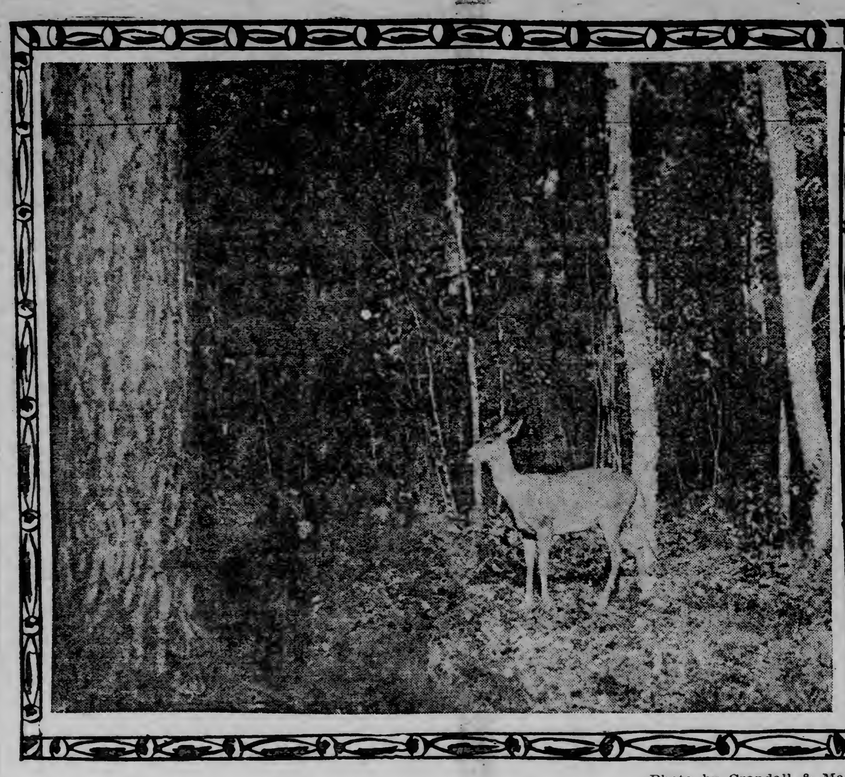

Balmer clinging to it, floated fourteen miles down the river and finally went so close to the bank that he was able to graps some overhanging boughs. That is the last he remembers until he became conscious hours afterward and found himself lying on the bank just out of reach of the water. He roused himself and was able to make his cries for assistance heard by a farmer who was passing some distance away. The farmer took Mr. Balmer home and took the best of care of him until he was able to be moved to the hospital at Lawrence, Kan.

During his terrible ride down the river, Mr. Balmer saw several other persons carried along in a similar manner on wreckage and debris and witnessed the death of one man who became so exhausted that he lost his hold and disappeared in the angry current.

Mr. Balmer has written his parents that he will soon be able to leave the hospital. He says that during his wild ride down the river he gave himself up for lost several times and believes that his final escape is due to the fact that he had a strong constitution and the strength left to pull himself out of the water when he grasped the boughs of the tree, though he does not remember how he actually got out. His experience remains to him a horrible nightmare and he does not expect to forget the scenes he passed through, during the rest of his natural life.

One of the peculiar things about the matter is that his parents, though readers of the daily papers, happened to overlook the account of the accident, some of which mentioned their son as among the passengers who had narrow escapes. They first learned of the accident when they received their son's letter a few days ago. Mr. and Mrs. Balmer are quite thankful now that they did not know of the accident at the time, as they would have been greatly worried until they heard from their son.

RARE TRIUMPH OF THE SNAPSHOT FIEND

The above picture, which will prove of considerable interest to huntsmen after larger game than the featheed variety was taken at the deer lick a short distance this side of Solon Springs, Wis. The photographer posted himself near the path to the lick, and it was but a short time before the opportunity for the above picture presented itself.

The deer was about thirty feet away when the shutter was snapped, but Mr. Crandall succeeded in getting several views, of which the above is the best, before it became frightened and made its escape.

The deer season opens Nov. 10, and a great number of hunters who cannot afford to take two vacations are letting the duck and partridge season slip by unnoticed, intending to go to the woods during the middle of November.

MOST COMPLETE GAME PRESERVE

In the United States is Grand Island in Lake Superior ---Where Longfellow is Said to Have Written "Hiawatha."

Marquette, Mich., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Excepting only Yellowstone Park, Grand Island, in Lake Superior, is the largest and most complete game preserve in the United States. Nestling in the water of the great Inland sea, this picturesque native woodland, with its rockbound shores is a veritable gem of nature.

The early French explorer who gave Grand island its name will never be criticised for his choice, for while nature exhibits her charms in many places along the shores of Lake Superior, her gifts to Grand island have been her best. Approached obliquely from the eastward on the main land, the island presents a strikingly magnificent view, not only in its extent, but in the huge rocks, worn by the wave action of countless years into fantastic shapes that lie at the base of towering cliffs whose summits are topped with the brightest verdure, crowned by forest trees of gigantic growth.

The island is situated three miles north of the village of Munising, the county seat of Alger county, and forms the northern boundary of Munising bay, the only natural land-locked harbor along the coast and large enough to accommodate a vast fleet of ships. Grand island resembles in shape a transposed outline of the state of Louisiana, but here the similarity ends. The island contains but 13,600 acres, or about twenty square miles; it is ten miles long and four miles wide, and its geological formation is unlike any other except that found at the famous Pictured Rocks, on the Lake Superior shore a few miles to the east.

It is this legend-laden spot whereon Longfellow is said to have written his song of Hiawatha, where Indians gathered annually for their councils, where the Jesuit travelers in 1670 left unmistakable evidences of their temporary habitation and where in 1787 the American Trading company maintained its most northern out post. It is this natural garden woodland, dotted with the log cabins of trading days, that nestles in its lap an inland lake stocked with the gamiest bass of the Northwest.

Five years ago Grand island passed into the possession of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company, and its unbroken forests of pine and hardwood have been converted into a game preserve in which nearly every species of game animal and bird native to this latitude can now be found in its native state. The physical nature of the island is especially favorable for the project. Over half of the coast line is bounded by perpendicular cliffs rising to an elevation of from 40 to 350 feet above the level of Lake Superior, forming a perpetual barrier against escape. In some places along the coast line these minuature mountain ranges are broken by deep ravines and gulches, which, in most cases, are sequestered valleys of singular loveliness. Where these valleys open an exit to the lake, game fences have been built to prevent the animals from gaining access to the main land by swimming the channel in summer or crossing on the ice in the winter season. At a point two and a half miles north of the southern extremity of the island, a game fence, twelve feet in height and extending east and west to the shore line, has been built, enclosing an area of about 8,000 acres over which the animals roam at will.

Between two lofty ridges that traverse the island from north to south is a dense cedar swamp, three miles long and one mile wide at its broadest point. This is the natural home of the caribou, which feed upon the dry glutmous mixture commonly called reindeer moss and found in great abundance in this region. The original herd of caribou was brought to the island three years ago from Deer Lake, Newfoundland. There were five animals in the herd. Like their near relatives, the moose, they are slow breeders, but grow to enormous size. There are probably a score of specimens of the moose family on Grand island, one of which has attained its full growth, now being about fifteen years old and weighing 1,000 pounds. The moose were imported from Canada and Northern Minnesota.

Other big game in the Grand Island preserve is a herd of elk. Originally it numbered eleven, but since brought to the island three years ago it has largely increased, the elk being a prolific breeder. Just how many members the herd now contains is not known. An interesting annual event with the elk is the shedding of their antlers, which usually occurs about the first of February. The new antlers push off the old ones, and, when they first appear, resemble scars on the forehead, soon, however, taking the form of black, velvet buttons, about the size of silver dollars. They increase in length only, and by the first of July have attained their full size. At this stage the antlers are soft and flexible, nourished by blood and incased in a thick, tough skin, covered with a velvety fur. This is a critical stage for the elk, and he is careful to avoid contact with anything liable to injure the antlers, for should the skin become broken death by bleeding is among the probabilities. The blood vessels that feed the antlers close up about the middle of July, and the antlers begin to harden.

It is estimated there are over 300 red deer on the island. A large number of these animals made their home there before the Cleveland-Cliffs company acquired title. Later a herd of about fifty was secured from various parts of the state, and the natural increase has been large. There are also many blacktail and mule and antelope, captured in Colorado, Wyoming and North Dakota. The different species of the deer family herd together, as a rule, and summer and winter the island is covered with a network of tracks leading from the places of habitation to the salt licks and the small lake situated in the center of the preserve. The deer feed on maple twigs during the winter, and are also partial to a small bush-like tree konwn as "shintangle," or ground hemlock. Most of the deer have become very tame, and often times are a veritable nuisance to the keepers.

During certain seasons of the year men are employed by the company to carry on a war of extermination against the fox, mink and other small animals which prey upon the game birds. The beaver, however, is allowed to propagate, and many specimens have been brought to the island and given the freedom of its several streams. The native, or rough grouse are plentiful in all parts of the preserve, and the spruce hen, a bird now almost extinct, is present in great numbers.

From Scandinavia two years ago the company inmoprted 150 game birds, also members of the grouse family, and from Manitoba it secured a number of sharp-tailed grouse. The birds secured from the Scandinavian peninsula are known as the capercailzie and orrie. The former is possessed of habits much like those of the partridge native to the Lake Superior region. There are many other species of game birds on the island, among them the English ring-neck pheasant, a bird of highly colored plumage, and the wild turkey. The latter were obtained in the Indian Territory and are the most difficult of all game birds to propagate.

The capercailzie, or "black game bird of Norway," is one of the largest species of game birds in the world, being very hardy and frequently attaining weight exceeding fifteen pounds, but when the birds are young they are easy prey of hawks. The birds are what are known as "rangers" for the reason that while in quest of food they cover a wide expanse of territory. During periods of heavy snowfall they burrow into the snow and remain until the storm subsides before venturing out again. Their food in winter consists chiefly of birch buds and in summer they catch mice and other small animals. They are rated as members of the grouse family, and in habits are much like the partridge.

The preserve in increasing numbers of the various varieties of game fowl has been the means of attracting hawks from a wide area, hence a well-known Marquette county trapper is employed, whose sole duty is to kill every member of the hawk family coming within range of his gun. Outside of the trappers regularly employed in hunting foxes and other animals inimical to the well-being of the game birds, the hawk-hunter is the only man who is permitted to take a gun onto the big game preserves.

A three-mile launch ride from the mainland at Munising brings the visitor to Williams' Landing, on Grand island. This is on the shore of a harbor of refuge, and its marine history is vividly called to one's attention by a sunken schooner, loaded with iron ore, which years ago limped into the harbor too much damaged by the storm to do more than sink just as a place of safety was reached. Twenty feet below the surface it remains, a mournful and spectral sentinel. It was in 1840 that Trader Williams built his home and surrounded it with the protective frontier stockade. Hard by he put up log cabins for his men, and these still stand, though now medernized to some extent.

The shore formation of the island is identical with that of the famed Pictured Rocks, five miles to the eastward. A channel depth of seventy feet is found only 100 feet from shore. In the crevices of the rocks are found brook trout, while occasionally a huge lake trout is discovered to have wandered in from the fishing grounds, four miles away. Around the island a driveway, sixty feet in width, with macadamized surface, thirty feet wide, is being constructed. When completed, this driveway will be about thirty miles in length, but at present only about half of it is built, beginning at a point near the boat landing, on the extreme south end of the island, and extending along the west shore to the lighthouse, on the northern extremity. Of the total 13,000 acres on the island, probably not more than 200 or 300 have been cut over, or even disturbed by the road builders.

The driveway in many places ascends to the top of cliffs that attain a height of 350 feet above Lake Superior, affording a magnificent view of the mainland, as far north as Marquette, thirty-five miles distant. At the highest point on the driveway it is proposed to erect an observatory, 100 feet high, from which visitors will be able to obtain an uninterrupted view of the island in every direction. There are many trails and small roads leading from the main driveway to points of interest on the island. Many of these trails were made by the deer and other animals, and several old Indian trails have been restored. In the woods are hundreds of deer, elk, moose, caribou and antelope—not hundreds of each, but in toto, and every year this colony is increased. The gamekeepers themselves do not undertake to give the number of their charges, but fortunate is the animal whose life line leads him to the Grand Island preserve, and unfortunate the end of the hunter who endeavors to outwit the gamekeepers in their vigilant protection of their wards.

Probably the most inspiring spot on Grand Island is the location of the North lighthouse, at the terminal of the present driveway. The sheer elevation at this point is 235 feet above Lake Superior, and with Superior's 602 feet above sea level, makes North light the highest lighthouse in the world above the level of the sea. Pictured rocks of grotesque outline, rising straight out of the lake, hold back the lashing fury of the water, and break into spray the countless waves.

Almost in the center of the island is Echo lake, covering a square mile, and surrounded by imposing forests of pine and hardwood, marked by many trails down which the deer, elk, antelope and moose come to drink at dawn and evening. In Echo lake were placed last season several thousand full grown black bass, weighing from two to four pounds, and in 1908 fishing will be allowed, with a limit on the catch permitted.

On the east coast of Grand island is Trout bay, famed as a fishing ground, and lined on either side by the pictured rock formation. A path two miles long has been cut along the east shore, and carries the traveler up and down a scenic route not surpassed in the Northwestern country. Here is a table of rock large enough to hold a ten-room house, and just beyond the unceasing washing of the waves has carved out a natural stone bridge design. The beach at Trout bay is ideal.

Scattered over the island are innumerable riding paths, and from the saddle may be viewed scenes denied those who traverse only the main roads. In protection of the game, dogs and automobiles are forbidden on Grand island, and the hunter is also enjoined, but with a camera one may hunt both animals and scenery without limit.

Grand island had for centuries prior to its occupation by the whites been made a place of rendezvous by the Indians, who inhabited the country north and south of the Straits of Mackinac. Maps drawn by Jesuit explorers as early as 1670 are still extant, and the outlines of the island, and the curvature of the mainland as therin shown, are sketched with remarkable accuracy. The American Fur Trading company maintained a trading post on the mainland, opposite the island as late as 1878, and ruins of the stockade and the buildings were visible when Abraham W. Williams took up permanent residence on the island in 1840.

Williams first visited Lake Superior in 1818, and engaged in fishing near Whitefish Point. It was not until 1840, however, that he brought his family to this region. They were passengers on the schooner Mary Elizabeth, and were two weeks in reaching their destination, after leaving Sault Ste. Marie. The Mary Elizabeth was built on the lower lakes, and was taken across the portage at the Sault for use in trading on Lake Superior. Originally the schooner Mary Elizabeth was called the Black Hawk, and during the time of the Black Hawk war the craft was used as a naval vessel.

Williams and his family landed June 30, 1840, occupying temporarily the log houses abandoned by the agents of the American Fur Trading company. Before the summer was over Williams had built a house on Grand island, and later three additional buildings, which were used as a store, blacksmith shop and warehouse. He also built a dock on the south end of the island for the accommodation of ships, and incidentally cleared a tract of nearly 200 acres of land, which he used in farming.

At the time of the arrival of the family, a large village of Chippewa Indians was located on Munising bay. Every spring most of the tribe went to the Soo to engage in fishing in the St. Mary's river, returning in the autumn to prepare for hunting and trapping in the winter. Williams traded with the Indians, supplying them with blankets, clothing and provisions in return for their furs. In the summer of 1844 a large flotilla of canoes, containing Indians, appeared at and landed on Grand island. The party consisted of about 500 warriors, besides women and children, and came from the vicinity of Leach Lake, Minn. Through an interpreter it was learned that the Indians had been at war with the Sacs, or Sauk tribe, but were on their way to the Sault to obtain their share of supplies issued yearly by the government. Delayed by heavy winds on the lake, they had run short of provisions, and were obliged to land and seek food.

Williams' supply of provisions was not large at the time, and during the three days his unwelcome guests remained they consumed almost everything eatable that he possessed. The women of the household spent the night baking bread, while the warriors, in paint and feathers, made the hours hideous with yelling, dancing and their demands for rum. Two French traders from the Red River country landed opportunely at the island, while on their way to the lower lakes. With the traders acting as interpreters, an arrangement was entered into between Williams and the chiefs, whereby the former agreed that as soon as the party were ready to leave, and were seated in their canoes, he would deliver to each chief—twelve in all—one quart bottle of whisky. This program was carried out, and it was with feelings of great relief that Williams and his family saw the last canoe disappear around the point. The canoes were very large, being manned by as many as ten paddlers.

Peterman's Roachfood.

A BOON TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

As the roaches go to the food, enticed by it at night from their breeding places, it eliminates them, large or small.

It has been sent for 20 years to large institutions throughout the U. S. and abroad, with bills not payable unless it did the work to their entire satisfaction.

PETERMAN'S RATMOUSE FOOD. Ready for Use.

Rats and mice made wild by this noxious food alarm others; they will leave the building and not return.

Peterman's Ant Food, a strong food to kill and drive away ants. Large black beetles may also be destroyed by it in one night.

BED BUGS—"Peterman's Discovery" (quicksilver cream) will kill bedbugs that go over where it is painted on lightly; is also a preventative. It will not rust or harm furniture or bedding.

"Peterman's Liquid Discovery," in flexible can, with spout; pressing sides of can will force it in cracks and kill bedbugs and eggs instantly.

Take no other, as time may be even more important than money.

Originated in 1873. Perfected in 1905 by Wm. Peterman, Mfg. Chemist, 54, 56, 58 West 13th St., New York City.

Sold by the drug trade generally, and at wholesale by the Leithhead Drug Co., general distributors for the Northwest.

TAINTED BREATH

Everyone should take care to keep the breath sweet. It is a personal matter that should have constant attention. Nothing is more disagreeable to others than a person with tainted breath. It is usually caused by simple neglect of nature's laws, and is without excuse. Keep the stomach sweet and the bowels open with Beecham's Pills, and the breath is as pure as an infant's. Bad taste in the mouth and coated tongue disappear after Beecham's Pills have been used. Take them occasionally as a sure preventive against tainted breath.

Have You an Extra Room to Heat?

Lodge Comments on Massachusetts and New York Elections.

Says That Democratic Success Would Mean Cossack Government.

Boston, Oct. 5.—Ex-Governor John L. Bates was chairman of the Republican state convention, which met here today for the nomination of candidates to be voted for at the November election.

An incident of the work of organization was a demonstration given Attorney General Moody when he arose to move the appointment of the committee on resolutions.

The platform reported by this committee, after praising the administration of Governor Guild, gives hearty endorsement of the administration of President Roosevelt. The resolutions further declare adherence to the policy of protection, the tariff to be revised when the intrests of the country require it, and urge that representation in congress be reduced in states where there is suppression of the vote. The platform extends sympathy to the Jews of Russia and commends "the efforts of President Roosevelt to devise a just and effective method for building up a strong merchant marine." Opposition is expressed to the ownership of railroads by state or nation.

Curtis Guild, Jr., was nominated for governor by acclamation. The convention by acclamation renominated other state officers as follows: Lieutenant governor, Eben S. Draper; secretary of state, William M. Olin; auditor, Henry E. Turner; treasurer and receiver general, Arthur B. Chapin; attorney general, Dan Malone.

In nominating Henry E. Turner for state auditor, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge characterized the coming elections in New York and Massachusetts as the Austerlitz of American politics.

"It is no exaggeration to say," he continued, "that these elections will decide whether the government of these two states for the next year shall be American or Cossack. They will determine whether these states shall move along the well-tried paths of order and liberty and free representative government, or become the prey of the fomenters of the class allied and the outlaws and Nomads of politics. The effect of Republican defeat this year in these two great states would be felt throughout the country and would shake business stability and confidence in the future to their very foundations.

"We have no concessions to make to the doctrine of those who for the moment have seized upon the Democratic party. We stand by our principles and beliefs without variation or shadow of turning, and we should be unworthy of any man's confidence if we were weak enough to palter with them."

NEW STATE TAX RATE IS FIXED

Levy Will Be 2.78 Mills Against 3.03 Last Year.

St. Paul, Oct. 6.—(Special to the Herald.)—The state tax rate for 1907 will be 2.78 mills. As fixed last year, it was 3.03 mills. Notice of the new rate with its apportionments among the various funds, was today forwarded to the county auditors of the state by State Auditor Iverson.

This was done yesterday, it following the completion of the work of the state board of equalization, which adjourned late Thursday afternoon. The distribution of the levy is as follows:

Fund	Levy	Amount realized
Soldiers relief fund	.0001	$35,000
Funding tax fund	.0902	170,000
State revenue fund	.0912	1,000,000
State road and bridge fund	.00005	42,000
State School tax	1.23	200,000

The levy for the four funds to which the state road and bridge fund has just been added, it being authorized by the last legislature, is 1.55 mills, to which is added the school tax of 1.23 mills. In all, it will realize the state about $2,250,000.

This figure is about $200,000 less than last year and due to the decrease in the revenue fund tax, which has been made possible by the gross earnings tax and other revenues not heretofore realized.

BIG BIRD COMMITTED.

Pleaded Guilty to Assault With Intent to Commit Murder.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Big Bird, the murderously-inclined Indian who attempted to sever the windpipe of another red, near the Red Lake Indian agency, on Sept. 22, and who was taken to Walker and given a hearing on the charge of assault with intent to commit murder, pleaded guilty to the charge, although he made a strenuous denial that he was drunk at the time of the assault. Several witnesses were in readiness to testify to the acts of Big Bird, and would have proven that he was intoxicated, but the old fellow pleaded guilty. He was placed under $1,000 bonds, which he was unable to furnish, and will be committed to jail.

DULUTH BOY'S EXPERIENCE

Fell With Train From High Bridge Into Deep River.

After falling with a train from a high bridge into a deep, swift river, escaping a horrible death by climbing through a broken window in the car, and braving death time and again while floating fourteen miles down the river on a piece of wreckage, William H. Balmer, a former Duluth boy is living to tell the story of his terrible experience, though he is yet unable to leave the hospital where he has been confined ever since the accident.

Mr. Balmer is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Balmer of 206 South Eighteenth avenue east and has a wide acquaintance in this city. For several years he was greatly interested in baseball, being a good all-round player and an athlete of considerable local repute. Mr. Balmer left Duluth last December, and has recently been on the road through Kansas and Oklahoma for a Kansas concern. He makes his headquarters at Lawrence, Kan., at which place he is now in the hospital and had not left it a few days ago when he wrote to his parents.

Mr. Balmer was a passenger on the Rock Island passenger train which left the high bridge over the Cimarron river, Oklahoma, the morning of Sept. 18 last, and carried nearly a score of persons down to death, besides injuring twenty or thirty more. The accident happened about three miles from Dover, Okla.

The accident was claimed to be due to the defective condition of the bridge which had swerved out of line by the pressure of the driftwood carried down the swoolen stream.

The train was an hour late and was running at a high rate of speed. The engineer did not see the condition of the bridge until within a few yards of it, when he shouted to the fireman, threw on the air brakes and jumped. He landed on the verge of the river bank and escaped unhurt, but the fireman sustained severe injuries.

The engine, tender, mail cars, smoker and day coach, were hurled to the stream below. The current whirled the day coach down stream until it lodged on a sand bank and the occupants who were left allve and uninjured were helped out through the doors and windows.

The smoker floated down stream submerged all but the top.

Mr. Balmer was in the smoker. He was about to make his way into the day coach when the train went into the river. Realizing the terrible death he faced he kicked out a window and through it fought his way to the top of the stream, where he happened to see some floating wreckage. To this he clung while the current carried him with terrific speed downstream. Six times the wreckage to which he clung struck other floating debric and he was submerged and came near drowning, but the love of life was strong, and he managed to hang on. The wreckage with Mr. Balmer clinging to it, floated fourteen miles down the river and finally went so close to the bank that he was able to graps some overhanging boughs. That is the last he remembers until he became conscious hours afterward and found himself lying on the bank just out of reach of the water. He roused himself and was able to make his cries for assistance heard by a farmer who was passing some distance away. The farmer took Mr. Balmer home and took the best of care of him until he was able to be moved to the hospital at Lawrence, Kan.

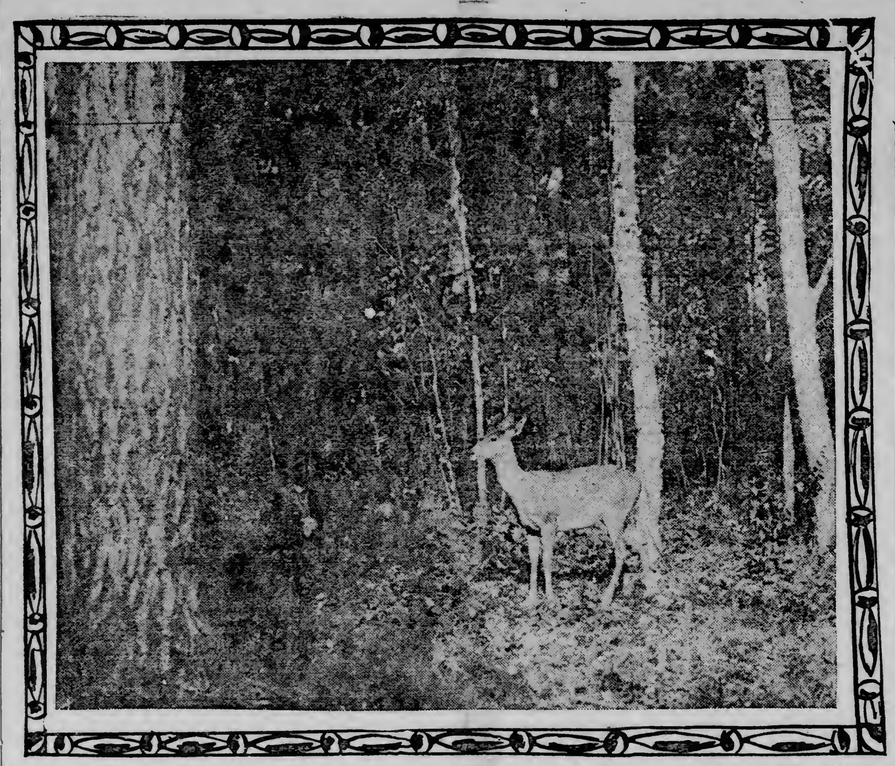

WILLIAM H. BALMER.

During his terrible ride down the river, Mr. Balmer saw several other persons carried along in a similar manner on wreckage and debris and witnessed the death of one man who became so exhausted that he lost his hold and disappeared in the angry current.

Mr. Balmer has written his parents that he will soon be able to leave the hospital. He says that during his wild ride down the river he gave himself up for lost several times and believes that his final escape is due to the fact that he had a strong constitution and the strength left to pull himself out of the water when he grasped the boughs of the tree, though he does not remember how he actually got out. His experience remains to him a horrible nightmare and he does not expect to forget the scenes he passed through, during the rest of his natural life.

One of the peculiar things about the matter is that his parents, though readers of the daily papers, happened to overlook the account of the accident, some of which mentioned their son as among the passengers who had narrow escapes. They first learned of the accident when they received their son's letter a few days ago. Mr. and Mrs. Balmer are quite thankful now that they did not know of the accident at the time, as they would have been greatly worried until they heard from their son.

The above picture, which will prove of considerable interest to huntsmen after larger game than the feathered variety was taken at the deer lick a short distance this side of Solon Springs, Wis. The photographer posted himself near the path to the lick, and it was but a short time before the opportunity for the above picture presented itself.

The deer was about thirty feet away when the shutter was snapped, but Mr. Crandall succeeded in getting several views, of which the above is the best, before it became frightened and made its escape.

The deer season opens Nov. 10, and a great number of hunters who cannot afford to take two vacations are letting the duck and partridge season slip by unnoticed, intending to go to the woods during the middle of November.

MOST COMPLETE GAME PRESERVE

In the United States is Grand Island in Lake Superior ---Where Longfellow is Said to Have Written "Hiawatha."

Marquette, Mich., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Excepting only Yellowstone Park, Grand Island, in Lake Superior, is the largest and most complete game preserve in the United States. Nestling in the water of the great inland sea, this picturesque native woodland, with its rockbound shores is a veritable gem of nature.

The early French explorer who gave Grand island its name will never be criticised for his choice, for while nature exhibits her charms in many places along the shores of Lake Superior, her gifts to Grand Island have been her best. Approached obliquely from the eastward on the main land, the island presents a strikingly magnificent view, not only in its extent, but in the huge rocks, worn by the wave action of countless years into fantastic shapes that lie at the base of towering cliffs whose summits are topped with the brightest verdure, crowned by forest trees of gigantic growth.

The island is situated three miles north of the village of Munising, the county seat of Alger county, and forms the northern boundary of Munising bay, the only natural land-locked harbor along the coast and large enough to accommodate a vast fleet of ships. Grand Island resembles in shape a transposed outline of the state of Louisiana, but here the similarity ends. The island contains but 13,600 acres, or about twenty square miles; it is ten miles long and four miles wide, and its geological formation is unlike any other except that found at the famous Pictured Rocks, on the Lake Superior shore a few miles to the east.

It is this legend-laden spot whereon Longfellow is said to have written his song of Hiawatha, where Indians gathered annually for their councils, where the Jesuit travelers in 1670 left unmistakable evidences of their temporary habitation and where in 1787 the American Trading company maintained its most northern out post. It is this natural garden woodland, dotted with the log cabins of trading days, that nestles in its lap an inland lake stocked with the gamiest bass of the Northwest.

Five years ago Grand Island passed into the possession of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company, and its unbroken forests of pine and hardwood have been converted into a game preserve in which nearly every species of game animal and bird native to this latitude can now be found in its native state. The physical nature of the island is especially favorable for the project. Over half of the coast line is bounded by perpendicular cliffs rising to an elevation of from 40 to 350 feet above the level of Lake Superior, forming a perpetual barrier against escape. In some places along the coast line these minuature mountain ranges are broken by deep ravines and gulches, which, in most cases, are sequestered valleys of singular loveliness. Where these valleys open an exit to the lake, game fences have been built to prevent the animals from gaining access to the main land by swimming the channel in summer or crossing on the ice in the winter season. At a point two and a half miles north of the southern extremity of the island, a game fence, twelve feet in height and extending east and west to the shore line, has been built, enclosing an area of about 8,000 acres over which the animals roam at will.

Between two lofty ridges that traverse the island from north to south is a dense cedar swamp, three miles long and one mile wide at its broadest point. This is the natural home of the caribou, which feed upon the dry glutmous mixture commonly called reindeer moss and found in great abundance in this region. The original herd of caribou was brought to the island three years ago from Deer Lake, Newfoundland. There were five animals in the herd. Like their near relatives, the moose, they are slow breeders, but grow to enormous size. There are probably a score of specimens of the moose family on Grand island, one of which has attained its full growth, now being about fifteen years old and weighing 1,000 pounds. The moose were imported from Canada and Northern Minnesota.

Other big game in the Grand Island preserve is a herd of elk. Originally it numbered eleven, but since brought to the island three years ago it has largely increased, the elk being a prolific breeder. Just how many members the herd now contains is not known. An interesting annual event with the elk is the shedding of their antlers, which usually occurs about the first of February. The new antlers push off the old ones, and, when they first appear, resemble scars on the forehead, soon, however, taking the form of black, velvet buttons, about the size of silver dollars. They increase in length only, and by the first of July have attained their full size. At this stage the antlers are soft and flexible, nourished by blood and incased in a thick, tough skin, covered with a velvety fur. This is a critical stage for the elk, and he is careful to avoid contact with anything liable to injure the antlers, for should the skin become broken death by bleeding is among the probabilities. The blood vessels that feed the antlers close up about the middle of July, and the antlers begin to harden.

It is estimated there are over 300 red deer on the island. A large number of these animals made their home there before the Cleveland-Cliffs company acquired title. Later a herd of about fifty was secured from various parts of the state, and the natural increase has been large. There are also many blacktail and mule and antelope, captured in Colorado, Wyoming and North Dakota. The different species of the deer family herd together, as a rule, and summer and winter the island is covered with a network of tracks leading from the places of habitation to the salt licks and the small lake situated in the center of the preserve. The deer feed on maple twigs during the winter, and are also partial to a small bush-like tree konwn as "shintangle," or ground hemlock. Most of the deer have become very tame, and often times are a veritable nuisance to the keepers.

During certain seasons of the year men are employed by the company to carry on a war of extermination against the fox, mink and other small animals which prey upon the game birds. The beaver, however, is allowed to propagate, and many specimens have been brought to the island and given the freedom of its several streams. The native, or rough grouse are plentiful in all parts of the preserve, and the spruce hen, a bird now almost extinct, is present in great numbers.

From Scandinavia two years ago the company inmoprted 150 game birds, also members of the grouse family, and from Manitoba it secured a number of sharp-tailed grouse. The birds secured from the Scandinavian peninsula are known as the capercalize and orre. The former is possessed of habits much like those of the partridge native to the Lake Superior region. There are many other species of game birds on the island, among them the English ring-neck pheasant, a bird of highly colored plumage, and the wild turkey. The latter were obtained in the Indian Territory and are the most difficult of all game birds to propagate.

The capercalzie, or "black game bird of Norway," is one of the largest species of game birds in the world, being very hardy and frequently attaining weight exceeding fifteen pounds, but when the birds are young they are easy prey of hawks. The birds are what are known as "rangers," for the reason that while in quest of food they cover a wide expanse of territory. During periods of heavy snowfall they burrow into the snow and remain until the storm subsides before venturing out again. Their food in winter consists chiefly of birch buds and in summer they catch mice and other small animals. They are rated as members of the grouse family, and in habits are much like the partridge.

The preserve in increasing numbers of the various varieties of game fowl has been the means of attracting hawks from a wide area, hence a well-known Marquette county trapper is employed, whose sole duty is to kill every member of the hawk family coming within range of his gun. Outside of the trappers regularly employed in hunting foxes and other animals inimical to the well-being of the game birds, the hawk-hunter is the only man who is permitted to take a gun onto the big game preserves.

A three-mile launch ride from the mainland at Munising brings the visitor to Williams' Landing, on Grand Island. This is on the shore of a harbor of refuge, and its marine history is vividly called to one's attention by a sunken schooner, loaded with iron ore, which years ago limped into the harbor too much damaged by the storm to do more than sink just as a place of safety was reached. Twenty feet below the surface it remains, a mournful and spectral sentinel. It was in 1840 that Trader Williams built his home and surrounded it with the protective frontier stockade. Hard by he put up log cabins for his men, and these still stand, though now modernized to some extent.

The shore formation of the island is identical with that of the famed Pictured Rocks, five miles to the eastward. A channel depth of seventy feet is found only 100 feet from shore. In the crevices of the rocks are found brook trout, while occasionally a huge lake trout is discovered to have wandered in from the fishing grounds, four miles away. Around the island a driveway, sixty feet in width, with macadamized surface, thirty feet wide, is being constructed. When completed, this driveway will be about thirty miles in length, but at present only about half of it is built, beginning at a point near the boat landing, on the extreme south end of the island, and extending along the west shore to the lighthouse, on the northern extremity. Of the total 13,000 acres on the island, probably not more than 200 or 300 have been cut over, or even disturbed by the road builders.

The driveway in many places ascends to the top of cliffs that attain a height of 350 feet above Lake Superior, affording a magnificent view of the mainland, as far north as Marquette, thirty-five miles distant. At the highest point on the driveway it is proposed to erect an observatory, 100 feet high, from which visitors will be abiie to obtain an uninterrupted view of the island in every direction. There are many trails and small roads leading from the main driveway to points of interest on the island. Many of these trails were made by the deer and other animals, and several old Indian trails have been restored. In the woods are hundreds of deer, elk, moose, caribou and antelope—not hundreds of each, but in toto, and every year this colony is increased. The gamekeepers themselves do not undertake to give the number of their charges, but fortunate is the animal whose life line leads him to the Grand Island preserve, and unfortunate the end of the hunter who endeavors to outwit the gamekeepers in their vigilant protection of their wards.

Probably the most inspiring spot on Grand island is the location of the North lighthouse, at the terminal of the present driveway. The sheer elevation at this point is 235 feet above Lake Superior, and with Superior's 602 feet above sea level, makes North light the highest lighthouse in the world above the level of the sea. Pictured rocks of grotesque outline, rising straight out of the lake, hold back the lashing fury of the water, and break into spray the countless waves.

Almost in the center of the island is Echo lake, covering a square mile, and surrounded by imposing forests of pine and hardwood, marked by many trails down which the deer, elk, antelope and moose come to drink at dawn and evening. In Echo lake were placed last season several thousand full grown black bass, weighing from two to four pounds, and in 1908 fishing will be allowed, with a limit on the catch permitted.

On the east coast of Grand island is Trout bay, famed as a fishing ground, and lined on either side by the pictured rock formation. A path two miles long has been cut along the east shore, and carries the traveler up and down a scenic route not surpassed in the Northwestern country. Here is a table of rock large enough to hold a ten-room house, and just beyond the unceasing washing of the waves has carved out a natural stone bridge design. The beach at Trout bay is ideal.

Scattered over the island are innumerable riding paths, and from the saddle may be viewed scenes denied those who traverse only the main roads. In protection of the game, dogs and automobiles are forbidden on Grand island, and the hunter is also enjoined, but with a camera one may hunt both animals and scenery without limit.

Grand Island had for centuries prior to its occupation by the whites been made a place of rendezvous by the Indians, who inhabited the country north and south of the Straits of Mackinac. Maps drawn by Jesuit explorers as early as 1670 are still extant, and the outlines of the island, and the curvature of the mainland as therin shown, are sketched with remarkable accuracy. The American Fur Trading company maintained a trading post on the mainland, opposite the island as late as 1873, and ruins of the stockade and the buildings were visible when Abraham W. Williams took up permanent residence on the island in 1840.

Williams first visited Lake Superior in 1818, and engaged in fishing near Whitefish Point. It was not until 1840, however, that he brought his family to this region. They were passengers on the schooner Mary Elizabeth, and were two weeks in reaching their destination, after leaving Sault Ste. Marie. The Mary Elizabeth was built on the lower lakes, and was taken across the portage at the Sault for use in trading on Lake Superior. Originally the schooner Mary Elizabeth was called the Black Hawk, and during the time of the Black Hawk war the craft was used as a naval vessel.

Williams and his family landed June 39, 1840, occupying temporarily the log houses abandoned by the agents of the American Fur Trading company. Before the summer was over Williams had built a house on Grand island, and later three additional buildings, which were used as a store, blacksmith shop and warehouse. He also built a dock on the south end of the island for the accommodation of ships, and incidentally cleared a tract of nearly 200 acres of land, which he used in farming.

At the time of the arrival of the family, a large village of Chippewa Indians was located on Munising bay. Every spring most of the tribe went to the Soo to engage in fishing in the St. Mary's river, returning in the autumn to prepare for hunting and trapping in the winter. Williams traded with the Indians, supplying them with blankets, clothing and provisions in return for their furs. In the summer of 1844 a large flotilla of canoes, containing Indians, appeared at and landed on Grand island. The party consisted of about 500 warriors, besides women and children, and came from the vicinity of Leach Lake, Minn. Through an interpreter it was learned that the Indians had been at war with the Sacs, or Sauk tribe, but were on their way to the Sault to obtain their share of supplies issued yearly by the government. Delayed by heavy winds on the lake, they had run short of provisions, and were obliged to land and seek food.

Williams' supply of provisions was not large at the time, and during the three days his unwelcome guests remained they consumed almost everything eatable that he possessed. The women of the household spent the night baking bread, while the warriors, in paint and feathers, made the hours hideous with yelling, dancing and their demands for rum. Two French traders from the Red River country landed opportunely at the island, while on their way to the lower lakes. With the traders acting as interpreters, an arrangement was entered into between Williams and the chiefs, whereby the former agreed that as soon as the party were ready to leave, and were seated in their canoes, he would deliver to each chief—twelve in all—one quart bottle of whisky. This program was carried out, and it was with feelings of great relief that Williams and his family saw the last canoe disappear around the point. The canoes were very large, being manned by as many as ten paddlers.

Peterman's Roachfood.

A BOON TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

As the roaches go to the food, enticed by it at night from their breeding places, it eliminates them, large or small.

It has been sent for 20 years to large institutions throughout the U. S. and abroad, with bills not payable unless it did the work to their entire satisfaction.

PETERMAN'S RATMOUSE FOOD. Ready for Use.

Rats and mice made wild by this noxious food alarm others; they will leave the building and not return.

Peterman's Ant Food, a strong food to kill and drive away ants. Large black beetles may also be destroyed by it in one night.

BED BUGS—"Peterman's Discovery" (quicksilver cream) will kill bedbugs that go over where it is painted on lightly; is also a preventative. It will not rust or harm furniture or bedding.

"Peterman's Liquid Discovery," in flexible can, with spout; pressing sides of can will force it in cracks and kill bedbugs and eggs instantly.

Take no other, as time may be even more important than money.

Originated in 1873. Perfected in 1905 by Wm. Peterman, Mfg. Chemist, 54, 56, 58 West 13th St., New York City.

Sold by the drug trade generally, and at wholesale by the Leithhead Drug Co., general distributors for the Northwest.

TAINTED BREATH

Everyone should take care to keep the breath sweet. It is a personal matter that should have constant attention. Nothing is more disagreeable to others than a person with tainted breath. It is usually caused by simple neglect of nature's laws, and is without excuse. Keep the stomach sweet and the bowels open with Beecham's Pills, and the breath is as pure as an infant's. Bad taste in the mouth and coated tongue disappear after Beecham's Pills have been used. Take them occasionally as a sure preventive against tainted breath.

Lodge Comments on Massachusetts and New York Elections.

Says That Democratic Success Would Mean Cossack Government.

Boston, Oct. 5.—Ex-Governor John L. Bates was chairman of the Republican state convention, which met here today for the nomination of candidates to be voted for at the November election.

An incident of the work of organization was a demonstration given Attorney General Moody when he arose to move the appointment of the committee on resolutions.

The platform reported by this committee, after praising the administration of Governor Guild, gives hearty endorsement of the administration of President Roosevelt. The resolutions furtaer declare adherence to the policy of protection, the tariff to be revised when the intrests of the country require it, and urge that representation in congress be reduced in states where there is suppression of the vote. The platform extends sympathy to the Jews of Russia and commends "the efforts of President Roosevelt to devise a just and effective method for building up a strong merchant marine." Opposition is expressed to the ownership of railroads by state or nation.

Curtis Guild, Jr., was nominated for governor by acclamation. The convention by acclamation renominated other state officers as follows: Lieutenant governor, Eben S. Draper; secretary of state, William M. Olin; auditor, Henry E. Turner; treasurer and receiver general, Arthur B. Chapin; attorney general, Dan Malone.

In nominating Henry E. Turner for state auditor, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge characterized the coming elections in New York and Massachusetts as the Austerlitz of American politics.

"It is no exaggeration to say," he continued, "that these elections will decide whether the government of these two states for the next year shall be American or Cossack. They will determine whether these states shall move along the well-tried paths of order and liberty and free representative government, or become the prey of the fomenters of the class allied and the outlaws and Nomads of politics. The effect of Republican defeat this year in these two great states would be felt throughout the country and would shake business stability and confidence in the future to their very foundations.

"We have no concessions to make to the doctrine of those who for the moment have seized upon the Democratic party. We stand by our principles and beliefs without variation or shadow of turning, and we should be unworthy of any man's confidence if we were weak enough to palter with them."

NEW STATE TAX RATE IS FIXED

Levy Will Be 2.78 Mills Against 3.03 Last Year.

St. Paul, Oct. 6.—(Special to the Herald.)—The state tax rate for 1907 will be 2.78 mills. As fixed last year, it was 3.03 mills. Notice of the new rate with its apportionments among the various funds, was today forwarded to the county auditors of the state by State Auditor Iverson.

This was done yesterday, it following the completion of the work of the state board of equalization, which adjourned late Thursday afternoon. The distribution of the levy is as follows:

Fund	Levy	Amount realized
Soldiers relief fund	.0001	$85,000
Funding tax fund	.0002	170,000
State revenue fund	.0012	1,000,000
State road and bridge fund	.00005	42,000
State School tax	1.23	200,000

The levy for the four funds to which the state road and bridge fund has just been added, it being authorized by the last legislature, is 1.55 mills, to which is added the school tax of 1.23 mills. In all, it will realize the state about $2,250,000. This figure is about $200,000 less than last year and due to the decrease in the revenue fund tax, which has been made possible by the gross earnings tax and other revenues not heretofore realized.

BIG BIRD COMMITTED.

Pleaded Guilty to Assault With Intent to Commit Murder.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Big Bird, the murderously-inclined Indian who attempted to sever the windpipe of another red, near the Red Lake Indian agency, on Sept. 22, and who was taken to Walker and given a hearing on the charge of assault with intent to commit murder, pleaded guilty to the charge, although he made a strenuous denial that he was drunk at the time of the assault. Several witnesses were in readiness to testify to the acts of Big Bird, and would have proven that he was intoxicated, but the old fellow pleaded guilty. He was placed under $1,000 bonds, which he was unable to furnish, and will be committed to jail.

IMPROVED PROPERTY HAS STEADY SALE IN DULUTH

Demand Continues Strong for Residence Property and a Number of Sales Are Being Closed Up—Inquiry is Also Good for Favorable Building Sites—Z. D. Scott Sells His First Street Home and Begins Building Operations on Another.

There has been a steady selling of Duluth real estate during the week just closed, and the brokers, generally, are feeling well pleased over the present conditions. While the sales have not been large, many of them are what the real estate men would term a "good trade," and the prices are better than the same class of property would have brought a year ago. The strongest inquiry is still for residence property, the demand running from properties worth all the way from $1,500 to $5,000 and $6,000. Owners of residence property who have any inclination to sell, are not now compelled to wait any length of time for a purchaser. The demand is also excellent for good building lots, the sites depending on the choice of the purchaser, and the present sales being pretty well scattered over the residence portions of the city. No sales of centrally located business property have been reported closed this week, although some are claimed to be negotiating with the prospect of an early consummation. The feature of the market this week has been the transactions in residence properties and lots favorably located for building purposes.

Among the recent sales made by Stryker, Manley & Buck are the following: The southeast corner of Seventh avenue east and Second street, comprising a property 125 by 75 feet with three buildings, from W. J. Holmes to Ralph Marotta, for $10,000; a residence property at 1308 East Fourth street, described as the north 100 feet of lot 4, block 82 Portland, from E. J. Swift to E. F. Oppel, for $3,700; a house and lot on the upper side of Seventh street between Second and Third avenues east, from A. D. Tewksbury to I. Weiner, for $1,950; a lot on the upper side of Grand avenue, between Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth avenue west, to A. Larson, for $650; a house and lot at 5225 Colorado street, Lakeside, from Frank Maxwell to John T. Jessen, for $1,800; a house and lot at West Duluth for $700; a house and lot on Ninth street near Second avenue west, for $650; a five-acre tract in section 25-50-15, on the Hermantown road, to John Benson, for $375.

• • •

Z. D. Scott has sold his home at 2218 East First street to Mrs. Berta Schmied, for $7,500. The property is described as lot 5, block 11, New Endion addition, and is located on the lower side of First street, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third avenues east. Mr. Scott has owned for some time two and one-half lots on the northeast corner of Twenty-second avenue east and First street and on this site he has already commenced building operations. The contract for the foundations was awarded yesterday to George Lounsberry.

Albert Stoltz has purchased from J. H. Upham the 100-feet of vacant property at the southeast corner of Fourth street and Third avenue east, the purchase price being $5,500. The property is described as lots 50 and 52, East Fourth street, Duluth proper. Mr. Stoltz has sold to E. G. Schneider, for $2,075, a frame dwelling property on Ninth avenue east between Third and Fourth streets, described as part of lots 1, 2 and 3, block 75½, Auditor's rearrangement.

• • •

William Elder has purchased from G. M. Tallant, a lot on the upper side of First street, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth avenues east, for $2,400. The property is described as lot 11, block 67, Endion.

Mary Kreager has sold J. L. Norman a dwelling and two lots on the lower side of Seventh street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues east, for $2,500. The property is described as lots 5 and 6, block 140, Portland.

• • •

J. N. McKindley, the grain man, has purchased from E. S. Palmer, the 150 foot vacant property at the southeast corner of Twenty-second avenue east and Second street, for $6,000. The property is described as lots 12 and 13, block 6, New Endion, and lot 7, block 10, Endion Park division. It is located on the corner opposite that recently purchased on Second street by Mrs. Julia A. Duncan and A. W. Frick.

• • •

Phillip Z. Mallen has purchased from O. E. Ruhnke a residence property on the upper side of Sixth street, between Third and Fourth avenue east, for $2,500. The property is described as the east half of lot 57, East Sixth street, Duluth proper, First division.

• • •

Anna M. Willard has sold W. D. Bailey, for $3,000, the property, 280 by 100 feet, at the northeast corner of Fifth street and Twenty-sixth avenue east. The property is considered likely in a short time to become a fine building site. It extends from Fifth to Sixth street, on Twenty-sixth avenue.

• • •

O. L. Mather has purchased from A. A. Kerr a vacant lot at the southwest corner of Dingwall street and Twenty-first avenue east, described as the north eighty feet of lots 7 and 8, block 47, Endion. The consideration was $2,000.

• • •

Ferdinand Thurnder has sold Elizabeth McKinnon a dwelling in block 142, Fifth division of West Duluth, for $1,250.

• • •

A. W. Puck, the architect, has prepared plans for a brick residence, to be erected for Dr. W. R. Bagley, at Twenty-second avenue east and Third street, and another for E. B. Ryan, at Twenty-second avenue east and Fourth street.

DON'T KEEP PUTTING OFF THAT GOOD RESOLUTION.

Never in the history of Duluth have conditions more urgently demanded that you put into effect your determination to buy real estate.

Within the last six months prices on real estate have advanced amazingly.

The geographical limitations of Duluth are absolutely definite. Land area will not expand, but the population here is increasing at an appalling rate.

Many people are grasping this situation, and we are selling them lots in Crosley Park.

FACE THE FACTS!

Buy a homesite now, and build a home later, our low prices and easy terms make this possible for the smallest wage-earner.

With such an investment once made you may rest serenely content with whatever comes.

We are still selling Crosley Park lots at last spring's prices and terms, but the prices are bound to advance very soon.

Get in on the ground floor while you still have a chance. You will regret it if you don't.

PRICES—Lots from $25.00 to $100.00 each.

TERMS—$10 cash, balance in 60 equal monthly payments—No interest—No payments when sick.

LA FOLLETTE TO SHOW UP SENATE

Says He Will Lay Bare Secrets of Upper House.

Mankato, Minn., Oct. 6.—In line with the statement which he made at Hutchinson Monday evening, Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin Thursday night revealed from the roll call of the senate the way the two Minnesota senators voted on his amendments to the railway rate bill. He did this in reply to a question asked by a gentleman in the audience.

Senator La Follette said that Senator Clapp was a member of the committee on interstate commerce, which had charge of the bill, and could have reported at any time. Continuing, he said:

"Senators ought to vote each time so as to be proud to have the public know about it. It would be more pleasant to be a good fellow and be slapped on the back in the cloakrooms, but I feel that I will be doing a service to the country by laying bare the secrets of the senate. I believe that it will help representative government, and I propose to do it during the four or five remaining years of my official service. I was told when I went into the senate that I had better get into line, and that I could more easily get legislation through for Wisconsin if I stood in with the steering committee. I replied that I couldn't give my conscience over to any steering committee."

The senator then read the roll call on his amendments to provide for valuing the property of railroads, and to forbid judges to sit on cases where railroads of which they owned stocks or bonds or carried passes were litigants under the law. He emphasized the fact that Senator Nelson voted against the first, while Senator Clapp did not vote; and that Senator Clapp voted against the latter, while Senator Nelson did not vote. He then declared:

"The cleavage between those who serve the corporations and those who serve the people is clearly defined by these roll calls."

The address was on "Representative Government," and was on the Y. M. C. A., lecture course, and the opera house was filled. Many from surrounding towns were present, including ex-Representative Joel P. Heatwole of Northfield and James Manahan, G. F. Loftus and Mr. Schraeder of the Minnesota Shippers and Receivers' association, all three from St. Paul.

The speaker said he was not going to declare for government ownership of railroads. The control of the roads cannot be allowed to continue in the hands of a few men. Not only the rates, but the service must be regarded, and those who own the roads must be compelled to render good, adequate and equal service to all individuals, or the government must own the roads. Absolute state and national control of rates and service must be had, or the people would force government control.

GREEN BAY BOY

Asks $10,000 Damages for Loss of His Right Hand.

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 6.—Frank Phillips, 14 years old, through his father, Wendell Phillips as guardian, has brought suit against the Portage Transit company of Duluth, Minn., asking $10,000 damages for the loss of his right hand. Young Phillips was employed as water carrier on the boat Portage, while she lay at the coal dock in Depere, and was struck by a fifty-pound chunk of ice which the deckhands accidentally let fall while hoisting. The boy was knocked into the Fox river by the force of the blow and remained unconscious for five days after being rescued from the water, besides having his right hand crushed. The boat has been attached at Manitowac.

WHEAT GOES OFF AGAIN

American Markets Have a Weaker Tone Throughout the Session.

Flax is Quiet in Duluth But Prices Go Up.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 6.—Wheat was weak in the American markets again today. Receipts were large and offerings were liberal. Commission houses were heavy sellers in Chicago at the opening. Lower cables also had a weakening influence. Liverpool closed ½d lower. Budapest ½c higher and Berlin ½c higher.

Broomhall estimates the world's shipments of wheat for this week at 10,000,000 bus.

The December option closed ¾c lower at Duluth and New York, ⅝@½c in Chicago, ½@⅝c in Minneapolis and Kansas City and ½c in Winnipeg. Comparisions are impossible on the December option in St. Louis. The October option closed 1¼c lower in Winnipeg. The May option closed ½c lower in Duluth and Kansas City, ⅝c in Chicago, ½@⅝c in Minneapolis, ¾c in New York and ⅝@¾c in St. Louis.

Corn had a weaker tone in Chicago, the December option closing ⅜@½c lower. It closed ⅜d lower in Liverpool. December oats closed ⅜@½c lower in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 336 against 212 last year, and at Minneapolis 476 against 557 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 812 against 769 last year. Chicago received 45 against 41 last year. Winnipeg received 407 against 415 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,272,000 bus, last year 1,232,000 bus. Shipments 580,000 bus, last year 485,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 161,176 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 543,000 bus, last year 340,000 bus. Shipments, 299,000 bus, last year 371,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 61,852 bus.

Wheat was quiet and weak during the entire session of the Duluth market. December wheat opened ⅜c lower at 73⅝c, rallied to 74c by 9:35, declined to 73½c by 10:55, rallied to 73¾c by 11:35, declined to 73⅝c by 11:45 and closed at that price, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday. May wheat opened ⅜c lower at 77¾c, declined to 77½c, rallied to 77¾c and closed at 77⅝c, a loss of ⅛c from yesterday. Durum wheat closed ⅛c lower and cash spring wheat unchanged, on the basis of 1¼c over December for No. 1 northern.

Flax was also quiet in the local market. The foreign markets were weaker, but prices advanced somewhat here. October flax opened ¼c higher at $1.11⅜, advanced to $1.11⅞, declined to $1.11½, rallied to $1.11¾ and closed at that price, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday. November flax opened ⅛c lower at $1.11¾, advanced to $1.11⅞, declined to $1.11¼ and rallied to $1.11½, closing at that price, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday. December flax opened ¼c higher at $1.10, declined to $1.09¾, rallied to $1.10, fell off again to $1.09¾ and closed at that price, unchanged from yesterday. May flax opened ⅛c lower at $1.13¼, advanced to $1.13¾, declined to $1.13⅛ and closed at that price, a loss of ⅛c from yesterday.

October oats and oats to arrive closed ½c lower and the other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard on track, 75⅞c. To arrive: No. 1 northern, 74⅝c; No. 2 northern, 73⅜c. On track: No. 1 northern, 74¾c; No. 2 northern, 73⅜c; October, 74¾c; December, 73⅝c; May, 77⅝c; October durum No. 1, 64½c; No. 2, 62c; November durum No. 1, 64c; No. 2, 61½c; durum on track No. 1, 64½c; No. 2, 62c. Flax to arrive, $1.12; flax on track, $1.12¼; October, $1.11¾; November, $1.11½; December, $1.09¾; January, $1.09; May, $1.13⅛. Oats to arrive, 32½; October, 32½c; rye, 58½c; barley, 37-47c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 336, last year, 212; oats, 25; rye, 6; barley, 55; flax, 117; last year, 72.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Selling by Commission Houses Feature of Opening of Wheat.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—The wheat market today opened active and weak, there being much selling by commission houses and pit traders. The large houses that were selling yesterday were not in the early market today. The receipts in the Northwest, for the first time this year, were larger than for the corresponding day las tyear, and this fact coupled with the favorable weather in the spring wheat section caused an easier feeling in the market. December wheat opened a shade lower at 74¾c and sold at 73⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 857 cars against 627 cars last week and 844 cars a year ago.

The market was weak all day. The low point for December was 72¾@⅞c. The close was weak with December off ⅜@½c at 74½c.

The corn market was weak. Local receipts were larger than had been expected, and the weakness of the wheat market was an influential factor. December corn opened ⅛c lower at 42¾c and sold at 42½c. Local receipts were 357 cars with 210 cars of contract grade.

The market showed no strength during the session, and the close was weak with December off ⅜@½c at 42⅜@½c.

The oats market was easier along with wheat and corn, but trading was not heavy. December oats at the opening were a shade lower at 34½c and declined to 34⅛c. Local receipts were 206 cars.

The provisions market was quiet and steady. The trading was not heavy. January lard was 2½c lower at $7.92½. Ribs were 2½c lower at $7.20. Pork was 5c lower at $13.45.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, Oct. 6.—The flour market is unchanged. Millers are still holding prices at the old level, but if the wheat market continues weak, will re-adjust them. The demand is just about fair, buyers waiting for the low quotations. It wheat should stay steady they would probably come in. Shipments, 60,240 barrels. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat: Traders are considerably puzzled by the action of the market today. There was more weakness than anybody expected during the morning; there was a decided fight around 74c with both buying and selling against privileges. It yooks as if the local short interest has been increased and a lot of long wheat sold out and that all of it has gone into the concentrated holdings which are under the market. The natural conditions have swung a little more to the side of the bears in the shape of increased receipts Northwest. New York dispatches report good buying of futures again export trade and at the same time selling pressures there from the North West. Market looks over sold at the close and it will take but moderate buying to start fair recovery.

Corn—Some Western interests were on the selling side. Dispatches indicate that Iowa and Nebraska corn may move freely on the basis of about 40 cents at Chicago. Kansas City claims that liberal country offerings, but the country looks upon present corn prices very unfavorably and the offerings from the new crop are likely to be limited. Investors will certainly buy the May corn at any concession under present prices.

Oats—Receipts have increased for the week. Stocks will show an increase. The break in wheat encouraged the bears to play for a reaction. There is no more foreign buying. Keeping the short crop in mind and the damage West and Northwest by the rains, would buy these on any little break.

Bank Statement.

New York, Oct. 6.—The statement of clearing house banks for the week show that the banks hold $9,423,125 more than the legal reserve requirements. This is a decrease of $3,117,225 as compared with last week. The statement follows: Loans, $1,052,331,200; increase, $1,158,400. Deposits, $1,031,938,700; decrease $2,720,300. Circulation, $45,749,200; increase $153,400. Legal tenders, $75,153,800; decrease, $2,554,000. Specie, $192,084,000; decrease, $1,243,300. Reserves, $267,257,800; decrease $3,597,300.

Dear "Stockholders:" Please be patient. Proper sanitary precaution requires that the tainted Cliff certificates be treated with alkilite, then kiln dried and fumigated to remove the smell of diabolic sulphuric acid from them before they are distributed.

THE PRODUCE MARKET.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

STOCKS ARE UNSETTLED

But Fluctuations Narrow and the Net Changes Small.

Recessions After the Appearance of the Bank Statement.

New York, Oct. 6.—Opening dealings in stocks were feverish and irregular under the influence of the long expected announcement of the terms of the ore deal. Changes were generally narrow on a large volume of transactions, and realizing was in evidence in some of the speculative favorites. First sales of United States Steel were of 8,000 shares at 49@48⅞ compared with 49 last night; the price then advanced a fraction. Atchison rose ⅝ and General Electric shot up 6¼. Great Northern preferred opened down ¾ and then rallied 2 points. Northern Pacific lost 1 and Baltimore & Ohio ¾.

The stock market became heavy, particularly for the western stocks. Extensive realizing in some of yesterday's buoyant features facilitated the work of the bears in depressing prices. St. Paul and Colorado Fuel 2 and Atchison and Great Northern preferred 1. The downward movement halted before 11 o'clock and there were some sharp recoveries. Tennessee Coal jumped 5, Westinghouse Electric 3, United States Rubber 1⅝, International Pump 1⅜ and Erie and Northwestern 1.

The market closed unsettled and irregular. Trading was listless and prices drifted sluggishly over a narrow range. Recessions after the appearance of the bank statement carried Great Northern preferred 3¼ below last night, Vulcan Detinning preferred 2½, Northern Pacific and Sloss Sheffield Steel 2, New York Central 1¼, Reading and Linseed 1, and United States Steel ⅝. General Electric rose an extreme 7¼ and reacted 2½, Erie second preferred rose 1⅜ and International Pump preferred 1⅝. Erie recovered to 1⅜ above last night and prices hardened for a time in sympathy.

Stock Gossip.

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been irregular but firm. As a rule the fluctuations were narrow and the net changes small. Heavy profit-taking made Steel common heavy. St. Paul was quite reactionary. The bank statement proved disappointing. The statement, although unfavorable, did not hurt the market. The close was quiet and irregular.

• • •

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened quiet and fractionally lower. There was no news of importance and the bank statement was not regarded as a factor. The ore deal having been consummated and rumors of other deals pending, which favor the bull side, there was not much selling except realizing. However, the market closed dull and slightly lower. With the stringency of the money situation obliterated, there seems to be no obstacle in the way of a better market.

• • •

Boston to Gay & Sturgis: The following editorial will appear in the Boston Financial News this afternoon: "No subject is of more interest and importance to the business and financial interests of the country than currency reform. The present financial system of the country is laughed at by European financiers and banking institutions and it is totaly inadequate to meet the needs of the day, and the business of the country would suffer tremendously were it not for the very liberal interpretation of his authority by Secretary Shaw." This is absolutely wrong. The secretary of the treasury or other properly constituted authority should not be obliged to go outside the written law in order to protect business interests.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 6.—The cotton market opened weak at a decline of 1@2 points under active selling for both accounts which was promoted by lower cables than expected and light frosts in the Southwest that had been feared. After selling off to a net decline of about 25@26 points, however, the market was rallied about 10 points by private cables reporting Liverpool 4 points higher on the curb and subsequent fluctuations were irregular on trade of weak character. Prices in the middle of the morning were about 20@22 points lower. More or less rain was reported over the belt, but precipitation was light as a result.

Cotton futures closed barely steady. Closing bids: Oct., $10.48; Nov., $10.47; Dec., $10.48; Jan., $10.53; Feb., $10.61; March, $10.69; April, $10.72; May, $10.76; June, $10.75; July, $10.84. Spot closed quiet 30 points. Middling uplands, $10.80; middling gulf, $11.05. Sales, 1,400 bales.

Copper Gossip.

Sturgis to Gay & Sturgis: With the exception of Old Dominion, the market was slightly reactionary today, reflecting the end of the week of profit-taking by the professional traders' element. The tone of the market was strong at the close and we expect further rise next week after a reasonable reaction. The general market was reactionary after the early strength, owing to surprising bank statement which was entirely contrary to all estimates. Copper metal is so scarce there is lack of necessary curtailment of electrical plans now under consideration.

Foster to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was a little of a disappointment. The bank statement was poor and stocks were freely sold on both markets. Stop orders were reached in North Butte, Copper Range and Butte Coalition, and the decline was rapid in all three stocks. We think, however, they are all in much better position now and should be bought now. We will have the big market in copper stock next week.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, Oct. 6.—Barrett & Zimmerman's Report: The week's horse market has been very active with some heavy buyers in the market for large orders. Lumber men are on the lookout for their usual supply of loggers, and are buying enough to make their usual quota. Receipts are heavy on the big logging horses and the sales are large enough to maintain an even market. The general market is more active at the following unchanged prices:

TRANSPORT SHERIDAN IS FINALLY FLOATED.

San Francisco, Oct. 6.—A cable message received in this city from Honolulu states that the United States army transport Sheridan has been floated. The transport ran ashore near Barber's Point on Aug. 31. The vessel was floated on Oct. 1, but commenced to founder and was re-beached near Pearl harbor.

NEW CRUISER NORTH CAROLINA IS LAUNCHED.

Newport News, Va., Oct. 6.—The new and powerful armored cruiser North Carolina was successfully launched today from the yards of her builders, the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock company, in the presence of 10,000 persons. The ship's sponsor was Miss Rebekah Williams Glenn, daughter of Governor Glenn of North Carolina, who was present with his staff and an escort of prominent North Carolinians.

PAINFULLY INJURED.

Ashland, Wis., Oct. 6.—Oscar Smith, express messenger on the Wisconsin Central, was injured in a peculiar manner Wednesday, and will be laid up for several weeks. By the lurching of the train Mr. Smith was thrown against the side of the car and his revolver accidentally exploded, the bullet tearing its way through Mr. Smith's right leg. He was taken to Rinehart's hospital.

MAN BURNED IN BARN.

Mankato, Minn., Oct. 6.—Early yesterday morning a barn, owned by a man named Miller, was partially burned, and this forenoon, on further investigation, the remains of an unknown man were found in the hay mow badly burned. It is supposed that he went to sleep there with a l

REPORT OF JOHN D. CAMPBELL,
Nevada's Foremost Mining Engineer,
ON THE
Eagle's Nest Fairview Mining Company

Goldfield, Nev., Sept. 16, 1906.

To the President and Directors,
The Eagle's Nest Fairview Mining Company,
Goldfield, Nevada.

GENTLEMEN:—

I beg to submit a brief report on the surface showings of the property owned by you in the Fairview District, consisting of the Tisson, Eagle's Nest No. 1, Lookout, and Lookout No. 1 claims.

This property is bounded on the north by the Dromedary Hump Mining Company, on the southeast by the Fairview Eagle Mining Company and the Nevada Hills Mining Company, and on the southwest by the Fairview Mining Company—in fact, it is in the center and surrounded by the best properties in Fairview.

My examination of this ground was made for the purpose of deciding where we should do our permanent work and required quite a lot of consideration on account of the many good ledges which traverse our ground. I finally decided on a tunnel to be driven on a ledge which crosses the Tisson, where we found an excellent showing. The tunnel starts at the hill on which the ledge crops and will continue on its strike a distance of 150 feet to our objective point—the apex of the hill and directly under the location post of the Tisson. The ledge crops the entire distance and shows ore at the grass roots running $60 to $85 a ton. A second ledge running northeast and southwest and cropping for 200 feet, showing $30 to $40 a ton, will be intersected by this tunnel at a depth of over 100 feet.

On the Lookouts are several good-looking quartz ledges, which assay from a few dollars up, and which will be thoroughly prospected at once.

On the Eagle's Nest No. 2, there is a fine showing of manganese ore, and within a few feet of our line high-grade shipping ore is being sacked on Wingfield's property.

In conclusion, I would state that in my opinion this is a first-class mining proposition and one of the very best showings in Fairview.

Respectfully sumbitted,
JOHN D. CAMPBELL,
Consulting Engineer, Vice-President and General Manager.

REPORT OF JOHN D. CAMPBELL,
Nevada's Foremost Mining Engineer,
ON THE
As-You-Like-It Manhattan Mining Company

Goldfield, Nev., Sept. 22, 1906.

To the President and Directors,
As-You-Like-It Manhattan Mining Company,
Goldfield, Nevada.

GENTLEMEN:—

In accordance with your instructions I beg to submit to you a brief report on the "As-You-Like-It" group of claims, owned by the As-You-Like-It Manhattan Mining Company, and situate in the Manhattan Mining District.

This group consists of four claims, namely: The "As-You-Like-It," "Lizzard Fraction," "Keystone" and "Juniper" lode mining claims, lying within a short distance of the Union No. 9 mine of the Dexter group and in the immediate locality of the Little Grey, Indian Camp, Stray Dog, and other well-known mining properties of the camp. The area of the property comprises approximately 60 acres of valuable mineral ground.

During the past month exhaustive surface exploration has been in progress, with the result that three veins of ore have been disclosed that prospect well at grass roots. With a view to exploring these veins at depth, three shafts have been put down—the deepest one having attained a depth of 39 feet. The bottom of this shaft shows values across its entire width and is all vein matter. This is known as the "As-You-Like-It" shaft, and will be continued as permanent workings to systematically explore the ore bodies at depth.

The "Juniper" shaft is down 37 feet and also prospects in gold for the entire width of the shaft. A depth of 17 feet has been reached on the shaft of the "Keystone" claim of the group, exploring a vein that traverses the Indian Camp mine and crops on the northwest portion of the "Keystone." This vein also shows gold in several different places along its strike.

The location of the property in the immediate vicinity of such well known and thoroughly proved mines as the Stray Dog, Indian Camp, Jumping Jack, Union No. 9, and Little Grey gives to it very great prospective value and warrants the prosecution of exhaustive development work so as to make a permanent dividend-paying proposition.

Respectfully sumbitted,
JOHN D. CAMPBELL,
Consulting Engineer, Vice-President and General Manager.

Both of these stocks will be listed on the important exchanges of San Francisco, Salt Lake, Goldfield and New York immediately after subscriptions are closed, and will, beyond a doubt, at once command a premium.

We recommend both stocks as high-class speculative investments and probable big future dividends-payers.

Reservations should be made by telegraph, to insure consideration, and remittances in full, by bank draft or certified check, must be forwarded immediately after allotment is made. Otherwise allotment will be rendered void. The right is reserved to reduce or refuse any subscription tendered.

AT THE LAKE COPPER MINES

Force at the Keweenaw to be Increased and Houses to be Built for Employes---Michigan Turning Attention East.

Houghton, Mich.. Oct. 6.—As an evidence of the energies which will attend mining operations at the Keweenaw Copper company as soon as the Keweenaw Central will have completed its line from Mohawk to Lac la Belle, that company has taken initiatory steps to house the increased force to be employed, and has let the contract for six new double dwelling houses. Work on these will be commenced immediately, and the chances are that they will be ready for occupancy before the winter will have set in strongly.

The new houses will each contain twelve rooms, and will be modern in every respect. The contract will represent an outlay of about $12,000. Next spring the company proposes to go at things even more strongly, and will erect quite a number of new dwellings for employes who will be taken on as soon as the mine is in a position to care for more men.

According to the statement of Capt. Hoatson, general manager of the mining operations of the Keweenaw company, it is the intention to add a large number of men to the pay roll this fall. This will be done as soon as the railroad is operating, and make it possible to increase the force with the best results. It is one of the company's plans to push the work as it never was done before in this district, and this will require more men.

It is not believed that there will be much difficulty in securing all the miners that are desired for work by the Keweenaw company. It will have opportunities for advancement not obtainable in other mines in this district, and for this reason men will be more willing to take the positions offered.

The people heavily interested in the Keweenaw company have the greatest faith in their property, and believe it is destined to become a big producer in a very short time. The recent developments on the Empire tract did much to strengthen this faith. The showing made is of such a nature that there is an immense tract of land which is known to have good copper values.

Operations for the time being are centered at the Medora shaft, but it is understood that as soon as this has attained depth, several other shafts will be started at different points, and vigorously pushed. Nothing definite has been announced on this subject, but it is known to be one of the plans of the management.

The work on the railroad is being rushed, and there is no doubt but that the line will be in operation between Lac la Belle and Mohawk some time before the first of November. The rails are now being laid from Mohawk north and will soon reach Phoenix. The Keweenaw Central will connect with the Mineral Range at Mohawk for the time being.

It is expected that the grading for the line to Calumet from Mohawk will be completed some time during the fall by the Byers company, but the steel will not be laid until next spring. The Mandan division will be completed about the middle of next month.

The Michigan is turning with serious attention toward the thorough exploration of its extensive territory of inactive ground lying between its most easterly workings and its eastern boundary. This policy has been induced by the maintenace of persistent values in the Branch vein as it extends eastward

MANY RUMORS ABOUT THE WARREN

Management to Come Under Personal Supervision of Thomas F. Cole—Work on Street Railway to Start—Shattuck's Daily Output of 200 Tons to be Increased.

Bisbee, Ariz., Oct 6.—Many rumors have been current within the past few days in regard to the Warren Realty & Development company, some stating that the company was to be absorbed by the Calumet & Arizona Mining company, and others giving various reasons for the unusual activity in the stock of the Warren company. A report to the effect that the management of the company is to come under the personal supervision of Thomas F. Cole was confirmed on reliable authority. Just what details in connection with the matter are being arranged at the present time it could not be learned.

In regard to the report that the Warren Company is to be absorbed by the Calumet & Arizona company, no confirmation could be obtained. The report that there is to be a change in the immediate management of the company was supported by the fact that all of the local merchants having accounts against the Warren Realty & Development company were requested to submit the same at the Bakersville office of the company by 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. This was done, and it is thought that all of the accounts are being cleaned up preparatory to turning over the company to the new management.

Work on the street railway will start within the next thirty days if the plans of the management of the Warren Realty & Development company are carried out. A rumor to this effect was confirmed at the office of the company at Bakersville.

A persistent report to the effect that much ore had been encountered in the drill hole at Warren could not be verified at the office of the company. The drills have been pulled and at present the only work being done is on the Lone Star claim.

Superintendent Pattison is devoting his energies toward making of Shattuck one of the big producers of the Warren district. Notwithstanding the fact that Shattuck has been hampered by the enforced use of a hoist of small capacity, the daily output is now close to 200 tons daily. The new, big Allis-Chalmers hoist is on the ground and installation should be completed by Oct. 15 or Nov. 1, when the daily output will be put up to 300 tons daily. By the first of the year Shattuck promises an output of 500 tons a day. Sinking from the 800 level began this week.

Sinking at the Denn, which was suspended some time ago on account of the inability of the pumps to cope with the flow of water, has not yet been resumed. It is expected that new and larger pumps will be installed soon. Drifting toward the dividend fault still progresses. The drift is now in a distance of about 250 feet and the formation encountered is porphyry.

• • •

Work on the shaft and in the drift at the Cochise has developed nothing new during the week just past. The shaft is now down to a depth of 760 feet. The water in the bottom seems to be impregnated with copper.

Recently the water at the Briggs and Hoatson shafts has increased materially, but with the pumping facilities at hand it will be no trouble to take care of the increased volume.

At the Briggs ore of an excellent character has been encountered in the drift which is being run from the Calumet & Pittsburg property to the Hoatson shaft. A stringer of ore several feet thick was encountered during the early part of the week, and is still in evidence.

At the Hoatson shaft a large quantity of ore is being hoisted, and is being unloaded on the dump at the present time to await the completion of the ore bins which will be started very soon. Ore has been encountered at several points in the Hoatson during the week, and indications in this shaft are very favorable.

The output of the Calumet & Arizona smelter will probably equal the output of last month. An additional blower and engine has been contracted for, and will be installed in the smelter as soon as they arrive. The contract calls for delivery before the first of the year.

At the Copper Queen smelter there has been no attempt to push the production this month because of a shortage of coke. The furnaces are all in good condition, as the plant generally, but the non-arrival of coke daily required that great quantities of the fuel should be taken from the reserve coke piles and to handle all of this with a steam shovel delayed matters. Work on No. 10 furnace is going on slowly, but it is not being rushed. It is expected that this furnace will be complete and ready for operation by the 10th of December.

• • •

Mr. Worthington, a prominent mining engineer, who is assayer for the Calumet & Arizona company, was in Benson last Sunday night and took the stage Monday for Reddington, where he went to inspect copper property for the company, which is held under bond and will be paid for should Mr. Worth-

IN THE CANANEA DISTRICT

Development Showing Good---Green Smelter Turning Out Nearly 4,000,000 Pounds Per Month---Trouble About Cananea-Duluth Stock Issue.

Cananea, Mexico, Oct. 6.—Several prominent mining men have visited Cananea during the past two weeks, and all have expressed great surprise at the wonderful progress which has been made in the camp within the past year. Great activity is being displayed in all of the camps surrounding Cananea, and many promising properties are being developed.

Lindsey, Talbot, Randolph, and associates have commenced development on the Neuva Cananea property situated about twelve miles from the Cobre Grande shaft, and it is reported that the property is fully justifying the confidence which these men have placed in it. These same men also intend to develop the Bonanza de Cobre property which they have owned for some time. It lies near Puertocitos. This property was denounced several years ago, and is expected that title will be granted very soon. As soon as the title is secured development will be prosecuted vigorously under the supervision of Major A. Hoover, a man of extensive mining experience. Hoover has had charge of the work on the property which Randolph and Talbot own in the Arizpe district, and also near Nogales.

In speaking of the Bonanza de Cobre Mr. Lindsey said that he would not take $2,000,000 cash for it at the present time, without a stroke of development work done.

A number of Bisbee people are interested in the Bonanza Extension property which is situated in the center of the Bonanza de Cobre property.

From the southern end of the copper belt come the most encouraging reports. The Ortega Mining company have a very promising showing on their property, and the Arizpe people have a mine already. The Arizpe property is developed at the present time to the extent that the Greene property was when the present coporation was formed. At the Cananea Eastern property an important ore body was opened up this week.

Smelter Superintendent Shelby has the reduction situation very well in hand, and the output will easily equal that of last month, namely about $4,000,000 pounds of copper. The new smoke stack at the converter is a success, and another will be erected very shortly. In the near future two more stacks will be erected, and at that time all of the fumes will be easily taken care of.

The sintering machine at the converter, the invention of former Superintendent Lloyd, is operating very satisfactorily, and is the means of saving a great deal in the production of copper. This invention eliminates a great deal of waste by putting the ore in such condition that it is ready for the furnace, and no roasting is necessary.

Report has it that plans of development on the American property of Cananea Central are fast approaching completion, and that another month may see 1,000 men at work. At the present every working of the America is busy, and they are sending to the surface ore of high grade, with everything underground growing better and better, both as to extent and quality of the ore bodies. All the teams that can be secured are at work hauling ore to the smelter. As yet it has not been possible to secure transportation facilities allowing of much increase over the 40 tons a day shipments which have prevailed for a couple of months.

Nothing is being done at the Cananea-Duluth property, but Supt. Tal-

A REMARKABLE SILVER VEIN

Is Discovered at the Property of the Nipissing Mines Company---Most Wonderful Mineral Discovery of the Century.

Cobalt, Ont., Oct. 6.—Capt. John R. De Lamar and Ambrose Monell, president of the International Nickel company, both of whom are directors in the Nipissing Mines company, are now at the latter property in Cobalt for the purpose of opening up the new bonanza vein No. 49. This is the richest and most remarkable silver vein ever discovered. It has been stripped for over 150 feet and for 70 feet of this distance the vein has widened to a surface showing of from 28 to 64 inches. Assays of this ore have shown an average value of over 50 per cent silver and a number weighing a little over two tons which has just been taken out contains $300 worth of silver. This vein is acknowledged by mining engineers who have seen it to be the most wonderful mineral discovery of the century. Ever since its discovery crowds have flocked to the Nipissing camp to inspect this mining marvel and it has been necessary to station armed guards at 49 veins night and day.

A careful estimate of this "giant" silver vein made by mining men and geologists together shows the existence of ore body containing fully $4,000,000 in silver values, if it goes only to a depth of 50 feet below the surface and continues in width and values in keeping with its present showing. The depth of 50 feet only is mentioned solely because of the fact that adjacent ledges have been worked on this property to a depth of 50 to 60 feet and show fully as good values at the bottom as were indicated when the veins were first stripped. According to the careful estimation of geologists of note there is every likelihood that the silver bearing veins throughout the entire Cobalt district will reach a depth of at least 600 and probably 1,000 feet, before there is any material change in values.

The Nipissing company is carrying forward the work of mining on a larger scale than ever before. The marvelous developments of the past two months on the property have shown beyond any question that years will be spent in the complete development of their enormous acreage. In consequence a large central compressor plant is under order and will be very shortly installed. New and large drill equipment is on the property and a central shaft is being put down on ledge 49 which it is purposed to continue to a depth of at least 500 feet. The shaft is being sunk at ledge 26, the remarkable values from which have almost been overlooked since the mammoth 49 ledge was discovered, is already down to a depth considerably below the frost line and work can be continued here without interruption throughout the winter. At the 70-foot level of this latter shaft drifts will be run into the three veins which converge near this point. The output of silver from 26, which has been over $200,000 to date, will be more than doubled before the close of the coming winter.

Superintendent Linney was criticised in certain quarters because of his very firm belief that the installation of an hydraulic plant would result in much more rapid and economic working in the way of stripping and uncovering new veins. This plant has now been in operation for nearly two months and has demonstrated beyond any question its practical economy under the peculiar conditions existing at the Nipissing property, fully half a dozen veins having been brought to light by the hydraulic giants along the lake shore. The work of opening these veins has already begun. Although there are now over 200 men employed on the property, the force is not yet sufficient to carry forward the work as rapidly as conditions warrant, and new men are still being added to the force. While the heavy frosts and the rapid approach of winter acts as deterents to the work of prospecting, deforesting and road building, there has been ample preparation for continuing and increasing activities throughout the winter months. It is wholly probable that the output for the winter will average over $250,000 a month and may very materially exceed this figure. Everything points to the likelihood of Nipissing continuing its record of shipping more than fifty per

MORE NEW COMPANIES FOR BUTTE

Two About to be Launched — Three Claims Secured by One Company—Three Large Companies Settle Their Rights —The East Butte Company is Busy.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 6.—The organization of new mining companies to operate in the Butte district is not yet a thing of the past, which is evidenced by the fact that there are now two that are about to make their bow before the public. One of the companies will be known as the "North Butte Extension." The organizers of this corporation have acquired three claims, two of which are said to be the Kentucky and the Chief Joseph, both of which are near the North Butte property. One of the promoters of the enterprise stated last night that the proposed company was negotiating for other claims and would soon have them tied up, provided everything went right. Eastern men, assisted by Butte men, are back of the embryonic enterprise. The other purposed company has practically closed its work in connection with the acquisition of ground, but has not yet given the public any information concerning its possessions or its intended operations. It is said that the ground acquired lies in a good place and will undoubtedly make good when developed. This company will probably be a close corporation. It is understood that it does not intend to sell stock, but will pool the whole works for three years and develop its claims in the meantime. All of those who sold property to the corporation have agreed to take their pay in stock and hold the stock for the period stated. It is understood that two or three Eastern men will supply the development fund for a portion of the stock and pool their holdings with the others.

At a special meeting of the Boston & Montana company stockholders the mineral rights of this company and the Red Metal company were amicably adjusted, and hereafter each company will know just where it stands in reference to ore bodies which the Boston & Montana claimed and Heinze claimed when the two latter were battling for supremacy. The rights adjusted were those pertaining to the Minnie Healey, Leonard, Mountain View, Pennsylvania and some lots in the Fausett addition. With the exception of the veins of the Pennsylvania, the determination of the issues was along lines already published; that is, each company will mine within the vertical lines of the claims involved. In the case of the Pennsylvaia a trade of veins was made, but the trade was satisfactory to both sides and there is no danger of friction in the future. The veins of the Minnie Healey and Leonard are the most important, for the latter includes those of the Piccolo, Gambetta and Dayton mines, three of the greatest copper-silver ore producers within the realms of the Boston & Montana's possessions.

The stockholders of the Parrot Mining company also met for the purpose of ratifying the agreement entered into a few weeks ago in regard to the settlement of the dispute that floated to the surface during the Heinze regime as to the ownership of the blue vein of the Parrot. By the terms of the settlement the Parrot company will have the right to work the blue vein inside of certain boundaries drawn downward, and the owners of the Nipper mine will have the right to work within vertical lines designated. In other words the Parrot will work all of the vein within the lines of its Parrot claim and the other companies will work it in their Nipper ground. The companies have now settled all of their differences and we will hereafter work in peace and harmony without the fear of anything apexing in the Rarus or any other claim.

The East Butte company, which is operating east of the Belmont and also northeast and southwest, is busy. Its concentrator is in operation on ore from the various shafts in operation under lease. Two tables are shaking out concentrates and the crusher and mixers are running full blast. The plant has not changed appearance since the company bought it, although it was reported that it had been enlarged.

At shaft No. 1 sinking is progressing nicely with three shifts of men, and at the other main shaft, near the Yankee Boy, good headway is making. The company intends to connect these shafts at depth. In doing this work other veins of ore will undoubtedly be cut, for there are numerous bodies in that section.

It is understood that the Cosgrove lease on one of the pieces of ground owned by the company turned out pretty well last month. This ground, or rather the shaft, is located north of the street railway track at a point almost opposite the main shaft of the company and has been productive.

The Glengarry mine, situated southeast of the main shaft of the East Butte, is again quiet, the lessees who attempted to make something out of the upper levels having failed to connect with anything better than wages. The shaft on the Glengarry is about 800 feet deep. The upper levels of the property were productive, but the lower workings were not, an iron horse, it is claimed, that was totally barren of copper having been encountered below the 600-foot mark. The shaft was sunk by F. A. Heinze several years ago.

The Belmont mine, bought by the Anaconda company from the Butte Coalition company a few months ago and located in the heart of the Parrot section, is yielding considerable second class ore now. It is coming from the north drift on the 900. The vein is supposed to be the one which the company worked through the shaft on the Cambers, about 100 yards north of the Belmont. The latter is not in operation at present, having been closed down a few weeks ago. The Cambers shaft is only 200 or 300 feet deep, but the company can raise on the vein and get the ore up to the point at which the Cambers was worked.

Ore is coming from shaft No. 1 of the East Butte Extension and it is good ore. The bin is about half full. South of the bin there is a pile of second-grade or concentrating ore that will be sent to the Washoe plant in the near future. It contains between 50 and 100 tons, and in view of the fact that there is considerable ore of better grade mixed in it the average of the pile will not be bad. This company also has a pile of first-class ore at No. 5. Enough water is coming from the various shafts in the district to run a good-sized concentrator, and if leached

HIGH-WATER MARK SCORED

For Northern Nevada in Purchase of Nevada Group ---Copper Finds in the Florence Are Arousing Interest.

Goldfield, Nev., Oct. 6.—Three hundred thousand dollars is the price paid by the principal owners of the Tonopah Mining company to Seymour and associates for the Nevada Wonder group, the original discovery in the new camp at Wonder. The parties to this transaction met this week in Fallon, where the ownership of this property passed hands for what establishes the high-water mark of mining transactions in Northern Nevada.

The Nevada Wonder property, and those which adjoin it, promise to rival the Tonopah mines in richness and permanency. On the original discovery a tunnel which taps the ledge at a depth of fifty feet has opened up twelve feet of $100 ore identical in value and appearance with that opened on the surface, the discovery of which started the stampede to this new camp.

On the North Star group, owned by Patrick, Elliott & Camp of Goldfield, this same ledge has been opened up at several points on the surface, giving the same uniform value of about $100 per ton. On the Jack Pot group, adjoining the North Star, $300 ore is being sacked.

The passing of ownership of the original discovery has given a tremendous impetus to the district, and this, coupled with the fact that shipping ore has been opened up in thirty different places, makes the camp of Wonder today the most sensational scene of mining activity.

News has reached here of a wonderfully rich strike that has been made in the Rathburn-Frost lease on the Johnnie Consolidated property, at Johnnie, sixty miles below Beatty. Chunks of ore weighing twenty pounds and more, containing easily one-eighth free gold, have been mined. The lease has proved rich from the start. A shaft has been sunk 100 feet and the vein drifted in for seventy-five feet. It has shown a thickness of from one to three feet and the ore taken out has been running all the way from $500 to $5,000 a ton. The Fred Bowler lease is another important one. The owner recently sold sixty sacks of ore for a little more than $50,000 and he estimates that he is taking out of the mine over $1,000 a day, net. Johnnie Camp is on the line of the railroad between Las Vegas and Bullfrog and there is lively skirmishing for ground there at the present time.

Much interest is being taken here in the Fairview district. John D. Campbell, manager of the Eagle's Nest company's properties, announces that a tunnel has been started to cut at some depth the ledge from which ore is being mined at the surface. This property is wedged in between the Dromedary Hump, the Eagle and the Nevada Hills. The Nevada Hills bonanza is reported to be growing bigger and richer all the time, and now that it is easier to get teams, shipments are being made with greater regularity. The tunnel being driven to cut the vein 200 feet under the upper workings has not yet connected with the ledge and the opinion is that the dip has flattened out a little.

The Frances Mohawk Leasing company paid a dividend of 5 cents a share, or $50,000, this week. The treasury contained approximately $200,000 when the distribution was ordered. This lease has been in operation less than four months. The ore shipped is running from $300 to $700 a ton in carload lots.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Homestake Pays Another $100,000, Making About a Million in Dividends so Far This Year--- Remarkable Results Secured.

Lead, S. D., Oct. 6.—The Homestake Mining company has just declared its 393d dividend of 50 cents a share, amounting to $90,200. This makes a total for the nine months in this year of $982,800 and a total to date for this company alone of $15,315,950. The latter figures do not include the dividends paid by other companies which are now included with the Homestake, but which before the consolidation paid large amounts in dividends. Taking into consideration not only the dividends paid by the Homestake, but also those paid by other allied companies, the amounts turned over to the shareholders run well up into the twenty millions.

The Homestake continues to treat over 4,000 tons of ore daily, which runs less than $4 a ton. A remarkable saving of values is effected, however, as 75 per cent of the assay value is recovered on the plates by amalgamation, 15 per cent more at the sand plates and another 5 per cent will be added to the total recovery after the slimes plant at Deadwood is completed, which will effect a total recovery of about 95 per cent.

Work at the slime plant is going on satisfactorily, and it is thought it will be running at half capacity some time in October. This plant will be operated throughout by electricity secured from the Consolidated Power & Light company. The Homestake is operating several of its workings now by means of electric power and is constantly increasing the number so run. It has completed its own powerhouse at Englewood, which supplies electricity to three of the mills. This plant is run by water power, and the electricity is consequently produced very cheaply.

The renewed activity at the Pluma property is good news to the people of this vicinity. For several years this property, though considered good, has been idle. It has a large acreage and a mill, and the development work which has been done has shown up large bodies of good ore. Superintendent Fillon has a force of men at work renovating and repairing the mill, and as soon as this is completed miners will be put to work in the present shaft, which has reached a depth of 500 feet, and also at the south end of the property where a new shaft will be sunk to an equal depth with the expectation of tapping the ore body.

Deadwood, S. D., Oct. 6.—Encouraging reports come from the district along Spearfish creek near the Victoria and the Eleventh Hour properties. The latter company is making preparations to dispose of the bonds which were voted at the last meeting. The company has an indebtedness of $29,000, and creditors have subscribed for bonds to the amount of $21,000.

The work of patenting the ground will commence at once, and after it is paid for there will still be a balance in the treasury of about $20,000 with which to continue development work. At the stockholders' meeting the number of directors was increased from five to seven.

The Victoria company is contemplating a consolidation with the Victoria Extension, which has a large amount of rich ore on its ground. The two properties lie sufficiently near each other so that the ore from both can be worked at a reasonable cost at the mill on the ground of the Victoria company.

THE LAKE SUPERIOR IRON RANGES

Twenty-Three Mines in Operation in Iron County, Menominee Range, Eight New Shafts Being Sunk—Shortage of Labor Hampering the Marquette Mines.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—According to the annual report of the mine inspector for Iron county, Menominee range, there were in operation during the year ended, September 30th, the following named properties. Dunn, Great Western, Kimball, Tobin, Bristol, Fairbanks, Crystal Falls, Lamont, Riverton, Dober, Baltic, Youngs, Baker, Nanaimo, Caspian, Hemlock, Michigan, Mansfield, Hiawatha, Armenia, Fogarty and Hollister. The number of men employed averaged 1,966, of whom 1,307 were at work in the Crystal Falls field, 510 in the Stambaugh valley, and 110 in the Iron River district. There were fifteen fatal accidents. Seven new shafts are being sunk in the Iron River-Stambaugh field, and one at Crystal Falls. Eighteen diamond drills are at work, all but four at Iron River and Stambaugh.

The Hilltop mine has been stripped and the machinery sold for old scrap. It was necessary to dynamite the larger pieces. The Hilltop in a Steel corporation property. The ore in stock was shipped out this year. At Crystal Falls, the Corrigan-McKinney people are building new stocking grounds for the ore that will be hoisted from the Tobin mine this winter. These grounds are located to the west of the Tobin shaft, the old grounds to the east of the pit being undercut now and unsafe for stocking purposes. A steam shovel is at work digging into the hill so as to make a level spot about 100 feet in width and 500 feet long. The locating of the stocking ground so far from the shaft will necessitate a long haul when the ore pile grows to the west, but this inconvenience will be overcome by a power tram.

G. L. Woodworth, general superintendent of mines for Rogers, Brown & Co., was on the Marquette range recently, arranging for the resumption of operations at the Ohio mine, near the Beaufort property. The company operated the mine a few years ago, but it was not worked long, as the demand for the class of ore produced fell off. There is an extensive deposit at the Ohio and the property could be made a larger producer without heavy outlay. The equipment and buildings are in good condition. It is reported that the Cleveland-Cliffs company is shortly to resume operations at its Webster mine, near the Ohio.

Shortage of labor is still hampering the Marquette range mines when they are straining every effort to catch up on their shipments of ore and to do all the work possible before freezing weather sets in. In particular the operations at the North Jackson, where mining was resumed only recently, are being conducted on a much smaller scale than the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company, which owns the property, would like to see. Mining from one of the open pits on this property was resumed ten days ago. Only a small force is employed, but if all the help needed was to be had every man there was room for would be put to work. The ore is a hard hematite, and as fast as it is taken out and loaded onto cars it is taken to the new crusher plant, recently completed for the Cleveland-Cliffs company near the open pit of the South Jackson mine, to be reduced before being shipped. Mining will be continued at this property at least until the close of navigation.

The crusher at the South Jackson is not yet operating as smoothly as it will when the newness of the machinery has worn off, but at present between 1,000 and 1,200 tons of ore are being treated each day. The plant is being operated night and day, and will soon be in trim to handle double its present daily output. Besides the ore from the North Jackson, the hard ore from the Moro mine is being crushed. The shipment from the Moro averages about twenty-five cars each day. The drainage tunnel, on which work was started late last fall, has reached a point in the hillside through which it is being extended where the turn will be made to connect it with the shaft between the crusher plant and the open pit of the South Jackson mine. The point where it will strike the shaft is sixty feet below the surface and the tunnel will drain the entire ore body above its level. A drift will be extended from the shaft, a short distance above the tunnel, into the ore body, and the ore will be milled out up to the surface and dumped directly from the drift into skips lowered to receive it. This ore, without any further handling, will be hoisted up the shaft directly into the crusher from which it

HEINZE ACTIVE NOW IN UTAH

Figuring on Adding Other Territory to the Eagle and Blue Bell---Mercur Annual Report---Daly-West Improvement.

Salt Lake, Oct. 6.—Utah mining circles are beginning to realize that F. A. Heinze is in the field. During the week it has been learned that important disclosures are being made in the Bingham Consolidated company's Eagle and Blue Bell property at Tintic, and it has also been discovered that Frank L. Sizer, a well known mining engineer, has been placed in charge of that property. The oracles declare that Mr. Sizer would no more think of holding a position as superintendent of the mine than would Mr. Heinze himself, so other reasons for his presence there have been sought. It is now said that Mr. Heinze is figuring on adding other territory to the Eagle and Blue Bell, and that Expert Sizer has been placed in the field to get a line on the value of adjoining mines which Mr. Heinze may want.

The Utah Development company, operating the Red Wing mine, has been shipping a large quantity of concentrates which carry about 35 per cent lead, together with some copper, silver and a little gold. The company has not yet built its own mill and was obliged to send about 1,000 tons of low grade ore to a custom mill because it was in the way.

It is reported that considerable native copper has been found in the Fortune. This is one of the producing mines adjoining the Ohio Copper on the east.

The annual report of the Consolidated Mercur company is just out. The report shows that the gross value of gold produced by the Golden Gate mill was $849,181.32; from the Manning mill, $21,705.82, making a total of $870,887.14. There was some income from ground rent, Gold Belt water dividends, and Manning mill royalty, so that the total income was $880,381.91. The expenses for the year were $767,594.72, making the net earnings $112,727.15. There were some additional expenses for construction amounting to $8,104.34. The dividends for the year were $100,000.

The mill treated 302,806 tons. The average saving was $2.80 per ton. The tailings showed an average value of a little over 95 cents a ton. This gave a value of $3.76 per ton, which was 19 cents lower than the average of the previous year. The total cost of treating the ore per ton was $2.48. The net profits, therefore, were 32 cents, or 4 cents less than they were the year previous. The company proposes to add another roaster this year so as to increase the capacity of the mill. The manager hopes to have six roasters running continually.

According to the financial statement, the balance of assets June

AT THE LAKE COPPER MINES

Force at the Keweenaw to be Increased and Houses to be Built for Employes---Michigan Turning Attention East.

Houghton, Mich., Oct. 6.—As an evidence of the energies which will attend mining operations at the Keweenaw Copper company as soon as the Keweenaw Central will have completed its line from Mohawk to Lac la Belle, that company has taken initiatory steps to house the increased force to be employed, and has let the contract for six new double dwelling houses. Work on these will be commenced immediately, and the chances are that they will be ready for occupancy before the winter will have set in strongly.

The new houses will each contain twelve rooms, and will be modern in every respect. The contract will represent an outlay of about $12,000. Next spring the company proposes to go at things even more strongly, and will erect quite a number of new dwellings for employes who will be taken on as soon as the mine is in a position to care for more men.

According to the statement of Capt. Hoatson, general manager of the mining operations of the Keweenaw company, it is the intention to add a large number of men to the pay roll this fall. This will be done as soon as the railroad is operating, and make it possible to increase the force with the best results. It is one of the company's plans to push the work as it never was done before in this district, and this will require more men.

It is not believed that there will be much difficulty in securing all the miners that are desired for work by the Keweenaw company. It will have opportunities for advancement not obtainable in other mines in this district, and for this reason men will be more willing to take the positions offered.

The people heavily interested in the Keweenaw company have the greatest faith in their property, and believe it is destined to become a big producer in a very short time. The recent developments on the Empire tract did much to strengthen this faith. The showing made is of such a nature that there is an immense tract of land which is known to have good copper values.

Operations for the time being are centered at the Medora shaft, but it is understood that as soon as this has attained depth, several other shafts will be started at different points, and vigorously pushed. Nothing definite has been announced on this subject, but it is known to be one of the plans of the management.

The work on the railroad is being rushed, and there is no doubt but that the line will be in operation between Lac la Belle and Mohawk some time before the first of November. The rails are now being laid from Mohawk north and will soon reach Phoenix. The Keweenaw Central will connect with the Mineral Range at Mohawk for the time being.

It is expected that the grading for the line to Calumet from Mohawk will be completed some time during the fall by the Byers company, but the steel will not be laid until next spring. The Mandan division will be completed about the middle of next month.

The Michigan is turning with serious attention toward the thorough exploration of its extensive territory of inactive ground lying between its most easterly workings and its eastern boundary. This policy has been induced by the maintenance of persistent values in the Branch vein as it extends eastward

MANY RUMORS ABOUT THE WARREN

Management to Come Under Personal Supervision of Thomas F. Cole—Work on Street Railway to Start—Shattuck's Daily Output of 200 Tons to be Increased.

Bisbee, Ariz., Oct 6.—Many rumors have been current within the past few days in regard to the Warren Realty & Development company, some stating that the company was to be absorbed by the Calumet & Arizona Mining company, and others giving various reasons for the unusual activity in the stock of the Warren company. A report to the effect that the management of the company is to come under the personal supervision of Thomas F. Cole was confirmed on reliable authority. Just what details in connection with the matter are being arranged at the present time it could not be learned.

In regard to the report that the Warren Company is to be absorbed by the Calumet & Arizona company, no confirmation could be obtained. The report that there is to be a change in the immediate management of the company was supported by the fact that all of the local merchants having accounts against the Warren Realty & Development company were requested to submit the same at the Bakersville office of the company by 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. This was done, and it is thought that all of the accounts are being cleaned up preparatory to turning over the company to the new management.

Work on the street railway will start within the next thirty days if the plans of the management of the Warren Realty & Development company are carried out. A rumor to this effect was confirmed at the office of the company at Bakersville.

A persistent report to the effect that much ore had been encountered in the drill hole at Warren could not be verified at the office of the company. The drills have been pulled and at present the only work being done is on the Lone Star claim.

Superintendent Pattison is devoting his energies toward making of Shattuck one of the big producers of the Warren district. Notwithstanding the fact that Shattuck has been hampered by the enforced use of a hoist of small capacity, the daily output is now close to 200 tons daily. The new, big Allis-Chalmers hoist is on the ground and installation should be completed by Oct. 15 or Nov. 1, when the daily output will be put up to 300 tons daily. By the first of the year Shattuck promises an output of 500 tons a day. Sinking from the 800 level began this week.

Sinking at the Denn, which was suspended some time ago on account of the inability of the pumps to cope with the flow of water, has not yet been resumed. It is expected that new and larger pumps will be installed soon. Drifting toward the dividend fault still progresses. The drift is now in a distance of about 250 feet and the formation encountered is porphyry.

* * *

Work on the shaft and in the drift at the Cochise has developed nothing new during the week just past. The shaft is now down to a depth of 760 feet. The water in the bottom seems to be impregnated with copper.

Recently the water at the Briggs and Hoatson shafts has increased materially, but with the pumping facilities at hand it will be no trouble to take care of the increased volume.

At the Briggs ore of an excellent character has been encountered in the drift which is being run from the Calumet & Pittsburg property to the Hoatson shaft. A stringer of ore several feet thick was encountered during the early part of the week, and is still in evidence.

At the Hoatson shaft a large quantity of ore is being hoisted, and is being unloaded on the dump at the present time to await the completion of the ore bins which will be started very soon. Ore has been encountered at several points in the Hoatson during the week, and indications in this shaft are very favorable.

The output of the Calumet & Arizona smelter will probably equal the output of last month. An additional blower and engine has been contracted for, and will be installed in the smelter as soon as they arrive. The contract calls for delivery before the first of the year.

At the Copper Queen smelter there has been no attempt to push the production this month because of a shortage of coke. The furnaces are all in good condition, as the plant generally, but the non-arrival of coke daily required that great quantities of the fuel should be taken from the reserve coke piles and to handle all of this with a steam shovel delayed matters. Work on No. 10 furnace is going on slowly, but it is not being rushed. It is expected that this furnace will be complete and ready for operation by the 10th of December.

IN THE CANANEA DISTRICT

Development Showing Good---Green Smelter Turning Out Nearly 4,000,000 Pounds Per Month---Trouble About Cananea-Duluth Stock Issue.

Cananea, Mexico, Oct. 6.—Several prominent mining men have visited Cananea during the past two weeks, and all have expressed great surprise at the wonderful progress which has been made in the camp within the past year. Great activity is being displayed in all of the camps surrounding Cananea, and many promising properties are being developed.

Lindsey, Talbot, Randolph, and associates have commenced development on the Neuva Cananea property situated about twelve miles from the Cobre Grande shaft, and it is reported that the property is fully justifying the confidence which these men have placed in it. These same men also intend to develop the Bonanza de Cobre property which they have owned for some time. It lies near Puertocitos. This property was denounced several years ago, and is expected that title will be granted very soon. As soon as the title is secured development will be prosecuted vigorously under the supervision of Major A. Hoover, a man of extensive mining experience. Hoover has had charge of the work on the property which Randolph and Talbot own in the Arizpe district, and also near Nogales.

In speaking of the Bonanza de Cobre Mr. Lindsey said that he would not take $2,000,000 cash for it at the present time, without a stroke of development work done.

A number of Bisbee people are interested in the Bonanza Extension property which is situated in the center of the Bonanza de Cobre property.

From the southern end of the copper belt come the most encouraging reports. The Ortega Mining company have a very promising showing on their property, and the Arizpe people have a mine already. The Arizpe property is developed at the present time to the extent that the Greene property was when the present coporation was formed. At the Cananea Eastern property an important ore body was opened up this week.

Smelter Superintendent Shelby has the reduction situation very well in hand, and the output will easily equal that of last month, namely about $4,000,000 pounds of copper. The new smoke stack at the converter is a success, and another will be erected very shortly. In the near future two more stacks will be erected, and at that time all of the fumes will be easily taken care of.

The sintering machine at the converter, the invention of former Superintendent Lloyd, is operating very satisfactorily, and is the means of saving a great deal in the production of copper. This invention eliminates a great deal of waste by putting the ore in such condition that it is ready for the furnace, and no roasting is necessary.

Report has it that plans of development on the American property of Cananea Central are fast approaching completion, and that another month may see 1,000 men at work. At the present every working of the America is busy, and they are sending to the surface ore of high grade, with everything underground growing better and better, both as to extent and quality of the ore bodies. All the teams that can be secured are at work hauling ore to the smelter. As yet it has not been possible to secure transportation facilities allowing of much increase over the 40 tons a day shipments which have prevailed for a couple of months.

Nothing is being done at the Cananea-Duluth property, but Supt. Tal-

A REMARKABLE SILVER VEIN

Is Discovered at the Property of the Nipissing Mines Company---Most Wonderful Mineral Discovery of the Century.

Cobalt, Ont., Oct. 6.—Capt. John R. De Lamar and Ambrose Monell, president of the International Nickel company, both of whom are directors in the Nipissing Mines company, are now at the latter property in Cobalt for the purpose of opening up the new bonanza vein No. 49. This is the richest and most remarkable silver vein ever discovered. It has been stripped for over 100 feet and for 70 feet of this distance the vein has widened to a surface showing of from 28 to 64 inches. Assays of this ore have shown an average value of over 50 per cent silver and a number weighing a little over two tons which has just been taken out contains $30,000 worth of silver. This vein is acknowledged by mining engineers who have seen it to be the most wonderful mineral discovery of the century. Ever since its discovery crowds have flocked to the Nipissing camp to inspect this mining marvel and it has been necessary to station armed guards at 49 veins night and day.

A careful estimate of this "giant" silver vein made by mining men and geologists together shows the existence of ore body containing fully $4,000,000 in silver values, if it goes only to a depth of 50 feet below the surface and continues in width and values in keeping with its present showing. The depth of 50 feet only is mentioned solely because of the fact that adjacent ledges have been worked on this property to a depth of 50 to 60 feet and show fully as good values at the bottom as were indicated when the veins were first stripped. According to the careful estimation of geologists of note there is every likelihood that the silver bearing veins throughout the entire Cobalt district will reach a depth of at least 500 and probably 1,000 feet, before there is any material change in values.

The Nipissing company is carrying forward the work of mining on a larger scale than ever before. The marvelous developments of the past two months on the property have shown beyond any question that years will be spent in the complete development of their enormous acreage. In consequence a large central compressor plant is under order and will be very shortly installed. New and large drill equipment is on the property and a central shaft is being put down on ledge 49 which it is purposed to continue to a depth of at least 500 feet. The shaft is being sunk at ledge 26, the remarkable values from which have almost been overlooked since the mammoth 49 ledge was discovered, is already down to a depth considerably below the frost line and work can be continued here without interruption throughout the winter. At the 70-foot level of this latter shaft drifts will be run into the three veins which converge near this point. The output of silver from 26, which has been over $300,000 to date, will be more than doubled before the close of the coming winter.

Superintendent Linney was criticised in certain quarters because of his very firm belief that the installation of an hydraulic plant would result in much more rapid and economic working in the way of stripping and uncovering new veins. This plant has now been in operation for nearly two months and has demonstrated beyond any question its practical economy under the peculiar conditions existing at the Nipissing property, fully half a dozen veins having been brought to light by the hydraulic giants along the lake shore. The work of opening these veins has already begun. Although there are now over 200 men employed on the property, the force is not yet sufficient to carry forward the work as rapidly as conditions warrant, and new men are still being added to the force. While the heavy frosts and the rapid approach of winter acts as deterents to the work of prospecting, deforesting and road building, there has been ample preparation for continuing and increasing activities throughout the winter months. It is wholly probable that the output for the winter will average over $250,000 a month and may very materially exceed this figure. Everything points to the likelihood of Nipissing continuing its record of shipping more than fifty per

Two About to be Launched — Three Claims Secured by One Company—Three Large Companies Settle Their Rights —The East Butte Company is Busy.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 6.—The organization of new mining companies to operate in the Butte district is not yet a thing of the past, which is evidenced by the fact that there are now two that are about to make their bow before the public. One of the companies will be known as the "North Butte Extension." The organizers of this corporation have acquired three claims, two of which are said to be the Kentucky and the Chief Joseph, both of which are near the North Butte property. One of the promoters of the enterprise stated last night that the proposed company was negotiating for other claims and would soon have them tied up, provided everything went right. Eastern men, assisted by Butte men, are back of the embryonic enterprise. The other purposed company has practically closed its work in connection with the acquisition of ground, but has not yet given the public any information concerning its possessions or its intended operations. It is said that the ground acquired lies in a good place and will undoubtedly make good when developed. This company will probably be a close corporation. It is understood that it does not intend to sell stock, but will pool the whole works for three years and develop its claims in the meantime. All of those who sold property to the corporation have agreed to take their pay in stock and hold the stock for the period stated. It is understood that two or three Eastern men will supply the development fund for a portion of the stock and pool their holdings with the others.

At a special meeting of the Boston & Montana company stockholders the mineral rights of this company and the Red Metal company were amicably adjusted, and hereafter each company will know just where it stands in reference to ore bodies which the Boston & Montana claimed and Heinze claimed when the two latter were battling for supremacy. The rights adjusted were those pertaining to the Minnie Healey, Leonard, Mountain View, Pennsylvania and some lots in the Fausett addition. With the exception of the veins of the Pennsylvania, the determination of the issues was along lines already published; that is, each company will mine within the vertical lines of the claims involved. In the case of the Pennsylvaia a trade of veins was made, but the trade was satisfactory to both sides and there is no danger of friction in the future. The veins of the Minnie Healey and Leonard are the most important, for the latter includes those of the Pierce, Gambetta and Dayton mines, three of the greatest copper-silver ore producers within the realms of the Boston & Montana's possessions.

The stockholders of the Parrot Mining company also met for the purpose of ratifying the agreement entered into a few weeks ago in regard to the settlement of the dispute that floated to the surface during the Heinze regime as to the ownership of the blue vein of the Parrot. By the terms of the settlement the Parrot company will have the right to work the blue vein inside of certain boundaries drawn downward, and the owners of the Nipper mine will have the right to work within vertical mines designated. In other words the Parrot will work all of the vein within the lines of its Parrot claim and the other companies will work it in their Nipper ground. The companies have now settled all of their differences and will hereafter work in peace and harmony without the fear of anything apexing in the Rarus or any other claim.

The East Butte company, which is operating east of the Belmont and also northeast and southwest, is busy. Its concentrator is in operation on ore from the various shafts in operation under lease. Two tables are shaking out concentrates and the crusher and mixers are running full blast. The plant has not changed appearance since the company bought it, although it was reported that it had been enlarged.

At shaft No. 1 sinking is progressing nicely with three shifts of men, and at the other main shaft, near the Yankee Boy, good headway is making. The company intends to connect these shafts at depth. In doing this work other veins of ore will undoubtedly be cut, for there are numerous bodies in that section.

It is understood that the Cosgrove lease on one of the pieces of ground owned by the company turned out pretty well last month. This ground, or rather the shaft, is located north of the street railway track at a point almost opposite the main shaft of the company and has been productive.

The Glengarry mine, situated southeast of the main shaft of the East Butte, is again quiet, the lessees who attempted to make something out of the upper levels having failed to connect with anything better than wages. The shaft on the Glengarry is about 800 feet deep. The upper levels of the property were productive, but the lower workings were not, an iron horse, it is claimed, that was totally barren of copper having been encountered below the 600-foot mark. The shaft was sunk by F. A. Heinze several years ago.

* * *

The Belmont mine, bought by the Anaconda company from the Butte Coalition company a few months ago and located in the heart of the Parrot section, is yielding considerable second class ore now. It is coming from the north drift on the 900. The vein is supposed to be the one which the company worked through the shaft on the Cambers, about 100 yards north of the Belmont. The latter is not in operation now—present having been closed down a few weeks ago. The Cambers shaft is only 200 or 300 feet deep, but the company can raise on the vein and get the ore up to the point at which the Cambers was worked.

Ore is coming from shaft No. 1 of the East Butte Extension and it is good ore. The bin is about half full. South of the bin there is a pile of second-grade or concentrating ore that will be sent to the Washoe plant in the near future. It contains between 50 and 100 tons, and in view of the fact that there is considerable ore of better grade mixed in it the average of the pile will not be bad. This company also has a pile of first-class ore at No. 5. Enough water is coming from the various shafts in the district to run a good-sized concentrator, and if leached

HIGH-WATER MARK SCORED

For Northern Nevada in Purchase of Nevada Group ---Copper Finds in the Florence Are Arousing Interest.

Goldfield, Nev., Oct. 6.—Three hundred thousand dollars is the price paid by the principal owners of the Tonopah Mining company to Seymour and associates for the Nevada Wonder group, the original discovery in the new camp at Wonder. The parties to this transaction met this week in Fallon, where the ownership of this property passed hands for what establishes the high-water mark of mining transactions in Northern Nevada.

The Nevada Wonder property, and those which adjoin it, promise to rival the Tonopah mines in richness and permanency. On the original discovery a tunnel which taps the ledge at a depth of fifty feet has opened up twelve feet of $100 ore identical in value and appearance with that opened on the surface, the discovery of which started the stampede to this new camp.

On the North Star group, owned by Patrick, Elliott & Camp of Goldfield, this same ledge has been opened up at several points on the surface, giving the same uniform value of about $100 per ton. On the Jack Pot group, adjoining the North Star, $200 ore is being sacked.

The passing of ownership of the original discovery has given a tremendous impetus to the district, and this, coupled with the fact that shipping ore has been opened up in thirty different places, makes the camp of Wonder today the most sensational scene of mining activity.

News has reached here of a wonderfully rich strike that has been made in the Rathburn-Frost lease on the Johnnie Consolidated property, at Johnnie, sixty miles below Beatty. Chunks of ore weighing twenty pounds and more, containing easily one-eighth free gold, have been mined. The lease has proved rich from the start. A shaft has been sunk 100 feet and the vein drifted in for seventy-five feet. It has shown a thickness of from one to three feet and the ore taken out has been running all the way from $500 to $5,000 a ton. The Fred Bowler lease is another important one. The owner recently sold sixty sacks of ore for a little more than $50,000 and he estimates that he is taking out of the mine over $1,000 a day, net. Johnnie Camp is on the line of the railroad between Las Vegas and Bullfrog and there is lively skirmishing for ground there at the present time.

Much interest is being taken here in the Fairview district. John D. Campbell, manager of the Eagle's Nest company's properties, announces that a tunnel has been started to cut at some depth the ledge from which ore is being mined at the surface. This property is wedged in between the Dromedary Hump, the Eagle and the Nevada Hills. The Nevada Hills bonanza is reported to be growing bigger and richer all the time, and now that it is easier to get teams, shipments are being made with greater regularity. The tunnel being driven to cut the vein 200 feet under the upper workings has not yet connected with the ledge and the opinion is that the dip has flattened out a little.

The Francoe Mohawk Leasing company paid a dividend of 5 cents a share, or $50,000, this week. The treasury contained approximately $200,000 when the distribution was ordered. This lease has been in operation less than four months. The ore shipped is running from $300 to $700 a ton in carload lots.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Homestake Pays Another $100,000, Making About a Million in Dividends so Far This Year--- Remarkable Results Secured.

Lead, S. D., Oct. 6.—The Homestake Mining company has just declared its 393d dividend of 50 cents a share, amounting to $99,200. This makes a total for the nine months in this year of $992,800 and a total to date for this company alone of $15,315,950. The latter figures do not include the dividends paid by other companies which are now included with the Homestake, but which before the consolidation paid large amounts in dividends. Taking into consideration not only the dividends paid by the Homestake, but also those paid by other allied companies, the amounts turned over to the shareholders run well up into the twenty millions.

The Homestake continues to treat over 4,000 tons of ore daily, which runs less than $4 a ton. A remarkable saving of values is effected, however, as 75 per cent of the assay value is recovered on the plates by amalgamation, 15 per cent more at the sand plates and another 5 per cent will be added to the total recovery after the slimes plant at Deadwood is completed, which will effect a total recovery of about 95 per cent.

Work at the slime plant is going on satisfactorily, and it is thought it will be running at half capacity some time in October. This plant will be operated throughout by electricity secured from the Consolidated Power & Light company. The Homestake is operating several of its workings now by means of electric power and is constantly increasing the number so run. It has completed its own powerhouse at Englewood, which supplies electricity to three of the mills. This plant is run by water power, and the electricity is consequently produced very cheaply.

The renewed activity at the Pluma property is good news to the people of this vicinity. For several years this property, though considered good, has been idle. It has a large acreage and a mill, and the development work which has been done has shown up large bodies of good ore. Superintendent Fillion has a force of men at work renovating and repairing the mill, and as soon as this is completed miners will be put to work in the present shaft, which has reached a depth of 500 feet, and also at the south end of the property where a new shaft will be sunk to an equal depth with the expectation of tapping the ore body.

Deadwood, S. D., Oct. 6.—Encouraging reports come from the district along Spearfish creek near the Victoria and the Eleventh Hour properties. The latter company is making preparations to dispose of the bonds which were voted at the last meeting. The company has an indebtedness of $29,000, and creditors have subscribed for bonds to the amount of $21,000.

The work of patenting the ground will commence at once, and after it is paid for there will still be a balance in the treasury of about $20,000 with which to continue development work. At the stockholders' meeting the number of directors was increased from five to seven.

The Victoria company is contemplating a consolidation with the Victoria Extension, which has a large amount of rich ore on its ground. The two properties lie sufficiently near each other so that the ore from both can be worked at a reasonable cost at the mill on the ground of the Victoria company.

THE LAKE SUPERIOR IRON RANGES

Twenty-Three Mines in Operation in Iron County, Menominee Range, Eight New Shafts Being Sunk—Shortage of Labor Hampering the Marquette Mines.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—According to the annual report of the mine inspector for Iron county, Menominee range, there were in operation during the year ended, September 30th, the following named properties. Dunn, Great Western, Kimball, Tobin, Bristol, Fairbanks, Crystal Falls, Lamont, Riverton, Dober, Baltic, Youngs, Baker, Nanaimo, Caspian, Hemlock, Michigan, Mansfield, Hiawatha, Armenia, Fogarty and Hollister. The number of men employed averaged 1,966, of whom 1,307 were at work in the Crystal Falls field, 510 in the Stambaugh valley, and 110 in the Iron River district. There were fifteen fatal accidents. Seven new shafts are being sunk in the Iron River-Stambaugh field, and one at Crystal Falls. Eighteen diamond drills are at work, all but four at Iron River and Stambaugh.

The Hilltop mine has been stripped and the machinery sold for old scrap. It was necessary to dynamite the larger pieces. The Hilltop in a Steel corporation property. The ore in stock was shipped out this year. At Crystal Falls, the Corrigan-McKinney people are building new stocking grounds for the ore that will be hoisted from the Tobin mine this winter. These grounds are located to the west of the Tobin shaft, the old grounds to the east of the pit being undercut now and unsafe for stocking purposes. A steam shovel is at work digging into the hill so as to make a level spot about 100 feet in width and 500 feet long. The locating of the stocking ground so far from the shaft will necessitate a long haul when the ore pile grows to the west, but this inconvenience will be overcome by a power tram.

G. L. Woodworth, general superintendent of mines for Rogers, Brown & Co., was on the Marquette range recently, arranging for the resumption of operations at the Ohio mine, near the Beaufort property. The company operated the mine a few years ago, but it was not worked long, as the demand for the class of ore produced fell off. There is an extensive deposit at the Ohio and the property could be made a larger producer without heavy outlay. The equipment and buildings are in good condition. It is reported that the Cleveland-Cliffs company is shortly to resume operations at its Webster mine, near the Ohio.

Shortage of labor is still hampering the Marquette range mines when they are straining every effort to catch up on their shipments of ore and to do all the work possible before freezing weather sets in. In particular the operations at the North Jackson, where mining was resumed only recently, are being conducted on a much smaller scale than the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company, which owns the property, would like to see. Mining from one of the open pits on this property was resumed ten days ago. Only a small force is employed, but if all the help needed was to be had every man there was room for would be put to work. The ore is a hard hematite, and as fast as it is taken out and loaded onto cars it is taken to the new crusher plant, recently completed for the Cleveland-Cliffs company near the open pit of the South Jackson mine, to be reduced before being shipped. Mining will be continued at this property at least until the close of navigation.

The crusher at the South Jackson is not yet operating as smoothly as it will when the newness of the machinery has worn off, but at present between 1,000 and 1,200 tons of ore are being treated each day. The plant is being operated night and day, and will soon be in trim to handle double its present daily output. Besides the ore from the North Jackson, the hard ore from the Moro mine is being crushed. The shipment from the Moro averages about twenty-five cars each day. The drainage tunnel, on which work was started late last fall, has reached a point in the hillside through which it is being extended where the turn will be made to connect it with the shaft between the crusher plant and the open pit of the South Jackson mine. The point where it will strike the shaft is sixty feet below the surface and the tunnel will drain the entire ore body above its level. A drift will be extended from the shaft, a short distance above the tunnel, into the ore body, and the ore will be milled out up to the surface and dumped directly from the drift into skips lowered to receive it. This ore, without any further handling, will be hoisted up the shaft directly into the crusher from which it

Figuring on Adding Other Territory to the Eagle and Blue Bell---Mercur Annual Report---Daly-West Improvement.

Salt Lake, Oct 6.—Utah mining circles are beginning to realize that F. A. Heinze is in the field. During the week it has been learned that important disclosures are being made in the Bingham Consolidated company's Eagle and Blue Bell property at Tintic, and it has also been discovered that Frank L. Sizer, a well known mining engineer, has been placed in charge of that property. The oracles declare that Mr. Sizer would no more think of holding a position as superintendent of the mine than would Mr. Heinze himself, so other reasons for his presence there have been sought. It is now said that Mr. Heinze is figuring on adding other territory to the Eagle and Blue Bell, and that Expert Sizer has been placed in the field to get a line on the value of adjoining mines which Mr. Heinze may want.

The Utah Development company, operating the Red Wing mine, has been shipping a large quantity of concentrates which carry about 35 per cent lead, together with some copper, silver and a little gold. The company has not yet built its own mill and was obliged to send about 1,000 tons of low grade ore to a custom mill because it was in the way.

It is reported that considerable native copper has been found in the Fortune. This is one of the producing mines adjoining the Ohio Copper on the east.

The annual report of the Consolidated Mercur company is just out. The report shows that the gross value of gold produced by the Golden Gate mill was $849,181.32; from the Manning mill, $21,705.82, making a total of $870,887.14. There was some income from ground rent, Gold Belt water dividends, and Manning mill royalty, so that the total income was $880,381.91. The expenses for the year were $767,594.72, making the net earnings $112,727.15. There were some additional expenses for construction amounting to $8,104.34. The dividends for the year were $100,000.

The mill treated 302,806 tons. The average saving was $2.80 per ton. The tailings showed an average value of a little over 95 cents a ton. This gave a value of $3.76 per ton, which was 19 cents lower than the average of the previous year. The total cost of treating the ore per ton was $2.48. The net profits, therefore, were 32 cents, or 4 cents less than they were the year previous. The company proposes to add another roaster this year so as to increase the capacity of the mill. The manager hopes to have six roasters running continually.

According to the financial statement, the balance of assets June

The primary teachers of the city were hostesses at a reception last Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. C. Berry of 12½ Chester Terrace, at which Miss Lucinda Washburn was the honored guest. Miss Washburn left the first of the week for Ripon, Wis., where she will pass the winter. She has been a teacher in the Duluth schools for the past sixteen years and after her resignation this fall the primary teachers of the city planned the delightful reception in her honor.

The hall and reception room was brilliant in decorations of mountain ash berries and their foliage and red candles added a charming touch to the decorative scheme. In the dining room, lavender and white asters were used with white candles. Receiving the guests were Mrs. Berry, Miss Murdock and Miss Grace Ely, with the guest of honor and assisting about the rooms were Miss Abbott, Miss Jessie Nichols, Miss Carter and Miss Hollinshead. At the punch bowl in the dining room, Miss Bessie Bunting and Miss Richards presided.

During the receiving hours Flaaten's orchestra played and more than 100 guests called.

One of the most delightful of the many affairs given during the past two weeks in honor of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Powell was the bridge and dancing party last Saturday evening, at which Mr. and Mrs. John Panton entertained at their home on East Second street. The game was played at twelve tables, and the favors were won by Mrs. A. B. Wolvin and Mrs. W. H. Salter, and the man's prizes were taken by Mr. Powell and R. M. Sellwood. The ball room was brilliantly decorated in red, white and blue, and Flaaten's orchestra played for the informal dance, which was enjoyed until 12 o'clock.

Miss Belle Simonds entertained at bridge Wednesday afternoon at her home on West Second street in compliment to Miss Anna Dickinson. The game was played at four tables and the favors were won by Mrs. Rowland Starr and Mrs. H. F. Williamson, and Miss Dickinson was presented with the guest prize.

Clubs and Musical

The first meeting for the year 1906-1907 of theArt History class of which Mrs. Robert Morris Seymour is leader, will be held Wednesday morning of next week at 10 o'clock at the club room of the library. A most attractive program of study has been prepared and the opening lecture on "Art Appreciation" will be an open meeting and any one interested is invited to attend. The course in continuation of Mrs. Seymour's series on "The Development of Culture" will be on "Renaissance, a Race Movement" and the First term will comprise the following lessons:

1. Humanism: the literary temper of the Renaissance in Italy, France, Germany, and England, from the standpoint of comparative history.

2. The characteristics of Renaissance architecture; the great architects of Italy; historic styles in Florence, Milan, Venice, Rome.

3. Palace decoration; passion for figure design and decoration; design in velvets, silks, and decorated leather. Furniture workshops not studios.

4. Painting and sculpture as related to architecture in Italy.

5. The Renaissance under the Valoi; magnificent chateaux built; Francis I, Henry II; interior decoration and furniture; the Louvre Fontainebleau, etc.

6. The Bourbons; Louis XIV; civilization of the period; prosperity and wealth; first grand court; palace building; distinguished designers of furniture.

7. The Bourbons (continued); Louis XV; "Rococo; the regency; frivolity and elegance; effect upon decorations and furniture; great designers; Watteau, court painter.

8. The Bourbons, (continued); Louis XVI; reaction; more classic forms; lack of wealth; modesty and finer taste. White and gray furniture; walnut and cane; gilded chairs; empire mahogany and brass.

9. The Renaissance in Germany; individualism; architecture; influence of the French Renaissance in Germany; palace of Sans Souci, etc.

10. The Renaissance in the Netherlands; birch architecture of Holland and Belgium; grand place at Brussels; Rubens.

After the holidays the subject will be continued with "The Renaissance in England and America" as the subject of study, and will cover Queen Anne, Georgian and colonial periods in architecture, Chippendale, Sheraton, Hepplewaite and other great designers of furniture. This course will be of special value to those who are planning to attend the Jamestown fair which is to be held next summer and will be a revival of provincial, colonial and federal styles of architecture, furniture and handicraft.

Thus far only the morning class has been arranged for.

The opening of the seventh season of the Matinee Musicale took place Monday at Steinway hall before a large audience. The outlook for a most successful year is promising and a large membership was received at the reception which followed the short musical program. The first regular meeting will be held Oct. 15, at the First Methodist church, when organ and oratorio music will be studied, the club members being assisted by Horace W. Reyner.

The artists announced for the year are the Olive Mead quartet on Nov. 2 and Herbert Witherspoon, Dec. 11.

The first social meeting of the year of the Twentieth Century club will be held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the clubroom of the public library. The reception is to be held in honor of Mrs. J. L. Washburn, president of the Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs, and Miss Mary B. Statham, president of the Twentieth Century club.

The members of the women's clubs of the city and others interested are invited to be present. A short address will be given by Mrs. Washburn.

A business session will be held at 2:30 o'clock when a successor of Mrs. William Schupp will be appointed by the board. Mrs. Schupp will leave soon to make her home at Winnipeg and her leadership of the Literature class of the club will be filled at that time. Opportunity will be given the members during the afternoon to secure their tickets and year books.

Buttons of All Styles and Kinds Worn This Fall

Plaid buttons in glass and enamel are the most original of the many new kinds that will be worn this coming season, which is to be preeminently a button season, for no coat, whether of fur or cloth, or even a shirtwaist, will be smart unless trimmed with some kind of decorative buttons.

The plaid buttons are most unusual, though quite pretty, and will harmonize splendidly with the Scotch plaid suits to be popular this fall. These buttons are decidedly gay with alternate wide and narrow stripes in dep blues, dark reds, forest green, combined in all sorts of widths. All of these buttons are round with metal backs and most of them are quite large, though they can be bought in any size from the dimensions of a silver dollar to that of a ten-cent piece. In enamel, these Roman and Scotch plaid buttons are even more effective than in glass, for each stripe is edged with a fine threadlike piece of gilt that adds a brightness that will be particularly attractive on a dark cloth coat or suit. They, too, are round and most of them ares hown in the extremely large sizes.

Almost as unique as the plaid styles are the automobile metal buttons that are sure to be popular with all women, and men too, who go in for motoring. For, besides being unusual they are serviceable and large enough for practical use on driving coats. These new "auto" buttons have a finely cut touring car stamped directly in the center with the rest of the surface perfectly plain and smooth. In imitation silver and dull or bright gilt they are effective and will be most appropriate for the heavy fall and winter coats that will be worn when motoring.

Of the more elaborate buttons that sell for $4 and $5 apiece none is handsomer nor more effective than the one resembling a cameo cut in ivory. They will be stunning worn on dark sable, mink or seal coats. One of the most effective of these styles shows a cupid's head wearing a peaked cap. The head is so chiseled in the ivory that it appears to have just pushed through, leaving the edges ragged where the hole was made. The button is round, of course, and about as large as a fifty-cent piece—quite a convenient size for a winter coat.

Another pattern in ivory that is exceedingly pretty has a rose growing on a vine with leaves in clusters on the stem carved into the surface. The work on this floral decoration is so delicately done that even the thorns on the stem are visible. Orchid buttons in ivory are stunning and as the sizes are a trifle smaller than either the rose or cupid designs, these will probably be much used on afternoon frocks of light colored cloths.

Jet buttons, flat in shape and intricately faceted or cut round, will be in great demand this autumn, for they, like the hair and neck ornaments of the same material, no longer are indicative of mourning and so of course may be generally worn. On wraps or suits in black, white or light colors these jet buttons will be decidedly attractive, and as they are made in all sizes, can be used on waists and skirts as well as heavy outdoor coats.

Japanese buttons in the royal medallion china—famous for the exquisite combinations of yellows, greens, reds, blues and purples—will be worn on coats and the small sizes on silk waists and dress frocks. The designs on these odd buttons are curious, for some represent bunches of flowers, others baskets of fruit, while sketches of Japanese children playing in bloming chrysanthemum gardens decorate some of them. The sketches are minature, of course, and are visible only when closely scrutinized.

Buttons set in imitation precious stones and surrounded with pieces of glass to look like diamond settings will be worn again this fall. They will be used on evening and dressy afternoon frocks only, for they are more like jewelled broaches than practical buttons.

For reception frocks metal buttons with a lace-like background, on which there are enamel flowers, in pink, yellow and white, will also be worn.

Square enamel buttons that look like mosaics will be smart on tweed and novelty cloth suits, and little buttons in enamel or metal, plain or with points, are to be favorites for trimming shirt waists and children's clothes.

MURDER WILL OUT

By Edith Austin.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

I was a youth of 17 when my grandfather died, hence my recollections of him are quite distinct and mature.

I was orphaned in my infancy and from my earliest recollection my grandfather had made me his constant companion. He was an itinerant preacher of Western England—his circuit calling him from walled Chester on the west to the hovels of the charcoal burners in mid-England; and during the years of his itinerancy I followed him in the pursuance of his duties through sun and rain and winter gale.

I repeat this in order to explain just how I regarded my grandfather in the light of a certain hereditament he left to me, his diary, but which he expressly forbade me opening until I had passed my twenty-fifth birthday.

There were many things I witnessed and heard in my boyhood for which I could find no explanation until I broke the seal of this book wherein the magnitude of my grandfather's very soul stands revealed. The first entry in the diary is as follows:

My beloved grandson, in this diary are recorded events writ down for thy especial edification. Without comment I leave it with thee to judge whether I have been the victim of a terrible mind disorder, or whether I am gifted with perceptions beyond the usual ken of man.

It was in the first years of my study of the occult, long before thou hadst come to gladden thy grandsire's heart, that I was journeying to Blore Heath. When night came down fate led me to the door of a desolate inn slowly dropping to ruin in the perpetual shadow of a grove of oak.

The aged host greeted me most cordially, for at his inn guests were not frequent and therefore the more welcome. In the parlor back of the denuded bar I found his old wife and his daughter, the only other persons about the place, moving silently here and there preparing the evening meal.

The daughter was young and tall and straight and strong and her hands were coarsened with outdoor work for, it appeared, she was now the burden-bearer of the family. Her face had a haggard, drawn expression in spite of its natural beauty; and her pretty, waving hair was tucked carelessly under a widow's cap, as though personal appearance was no longer of any moment to her.

After the supper was cleared away, the aged parents entertained me with reminiscences of a past glory, of when the inn was new and the great tide of travel used to pass its door. Then in saddened tones they told of how the opening of a new thoroughfare had diverted custom to other hostelries. So when the daughter was married to a well-to-do young farmer they closed the inn, perforce, and went and made their home with her.

But one ill-fated day the newly-wedded husband rode away to a neighboring market town and never returned. There was a rumor started, though no one could learn the source thereof, that he had been seen at Chester embarking for America; but the young wife could not give the story credence. A diligent search was instituted, but from the hour that he had mounted horse at the market and departed, supposedly for home, no trace of the missing man could be discovered.

After due time the farm and tenements passed into the possession of the next heir-at-law, a cousin of the husband; an dthe old couple with their dowerless daughter, returned to the deserted inn now racked and wrecked with storm and long neglect.

"Thou canst see the gables of the farm over yon above the trees," said the mother, "and we might be living there now 'mid comfort and plenty if Lisbeth would only hearken to us and wed with Garver Hallard, the cousin who succeeded to the estate. He is a right honorable yeoman, and hath favored Lisbeth since they were children in pinafores. But Lisbeth hath a base distrust of him, and treats him coldly when he would come to woo—and he that willing to do for her own parents," and here the weak, uncertain old voice rose to a reproachful wail.

Then Lisbeth, lifting her sorrow-laden eyes to a portrait of her husband on the wall, said: "Mother, thou need'st not grieve for the rich living at the farm beyond Whitsand de. That day I promise to give my hand to Garver Hallard an' he still desires it."

"I would not coerce thee, daughter, against thy own good," quavered the mother in almost childish glee.

Then a gloomy silence fell like a funeral pall over us, and we sat about the fire absorbed in our own thoughts until there came the sound of a quick step up the pathway and an imperative knock at the door, and Garver Hallard entered. He was a dark, hard-featured, harsh-spoken man whom any tender young woman might well have shunned.

The ancient host hastened with tottering steps to bring a flagon of home-brewed for this favored guest, while Lisbeth placed a chair for him—perhaps accidentally, perhaps with a purpose—so that he should face the portrait of her departed husband. He shifted his position uneasily.

I could not understand it then, but I intuitively felt that he was a man with a guilty conscience. And in the light of the recent narration, I fell to comparing his features with those of the picture hanging above his head. As my gaze wandered from one to the other, there came to me a sense of a presence in the room, a conviction I could neither define nor evade; and while I strove to analyze critically this impression a strange metamorphosis seemed to come over my senses and I felt myself drifting, as it were, into a state of double consciousness. Garver Hallard's tones still rang out clearly, but with an untrue, metallic sound, whilst the eyes in the picture seemed to have become suddenly animated, and appeared to gaze down appealingly at me.

Still with that sense of a divided ego, with the voices about me echoing vaguely through my brain, I thought myself riding along a country road, sunken and scarred deep with old cart ruts, a road I had never traveled before. Under the influence of this unseen force, I appeared to come to where the crumbling shell of an ancient oak spanned the path. I reached into the hollow trunk and drew forth a spade corroded with rust, and rolling the log away, I began to dig into the damp, soft earth. In my trance I continued to throw the dirt to the right and to the left until from out the brown loam appeared the face in the picture. Then the feverish vision broke, and I emerged as from a hypnotic spell to find the old couple discussing eagerly with Garver Hallard concerning the wedding settlement, the while Lisbeth gazed hopelessly into the expiring embers on the hearth.

This synthesis of psychic suggestions—I dared not call them more—so deeply impressed my mind and so harrassed me that I thought of scarce aught else when the next morning I started out to follow my itineracy, preaching the peace on earth of which this world knows little, until the time was come for me to return to read the marriage service over Lisbeth and Garver Hallard.

I had stopped the night at the market town of Oswestry, a day's journey from the inn, and when I rode away in the morning I galloped over a goodly number of miles before I gave small heed to my surroundings. Gradually I became aware of something familiar in the landscape, though to my ken I had never passed that way before, and I began to think that for me memory and madness must be moving hand in hand, for here was the deeply rutted cart road I had traveled in my vision of the inn, and before me lay the steep ascent.

Again, as in my vision, I felt my volition chained by some higher power, and in obedience to an overwhelming impulse I turned aside from the highway.

When I came upon the fallen oak, in a tremor of mingled awe and expectancy I reached into the hollow trunk and searched among the dead leaves and woody fragments for the spade which I did not doubt but I should find concealed therein; and after I drew it forth I paused to verify each stamp which time and the elements had set upon blade and handle, as I had remarked them erstwhile in my vision. As I rolled the log back from its hollowed bed I espied among the crumbling bits of bark the remnant of a glove, with the initial H embroidered upon the wrist. I hastened back to Oswestry and raised a hue and cry that murder had been committed.

Accompanied by a sheriff and posse and a motley crowd of excited citizens, I returned to the spot—my absence of explanation unnoticed in the frenzy of the hour.

With the exhuming of the body an unusual phenomenon was discovered to have taken place. The waters of the little brook close by had permeated through the soil to the corpse of the murdered man, and, acting upon the tissues, had preserved it with life-like features. Both I and those with me who had known him in life recognized in him Lisbeth's husband who had so mysteriously disappeared four years before. A stab in the back that penetrated to the heart told how he had met his death.

When I went on to the inn to prepare the widow and her parents for the bringing home of the husband so long dead, I found Garver Hallard and a few guests who had been invited to the wedding impatiently awaiting me. Lisbeth had been tricked out in bridal white, but her expression was that of deepest despair.

The guests ranged themselves decorously about the room, in expectation of my performing the ceremony, and Garver Hallard stepped forth to claim his bride.

"In view of the news I bring, the marriage would better be postponed a while," I said low, yet so that all might understand. "Lisbeth, I bring thee sad tidings of thy last husband."

Then I said that the body was found, and Hallard staggered back against the bar as though I had dealt him a blow. There came a great fear into his narrow eyes, his swarthy features grew livid; and after I had told my tale, he asked with quivering lips and voice if any clue to the assassin had been discovered; and I, bearing the glove in mind, did look him level in the eye and answer him shortly "Yes."

In the confusion of the laying out of the dead man and the impanelling of a coroner's jury, Garver Hallard escaped from the house and from the vengeance of man. But his account is with God! He keeps it, and He will settle it when the dial points the hour!

The wedding feast did furnish for the funeral baked meats and the wedding guests were the wallers.

With the disappearance of Hallard, Lisbeth, as the only heir-at-law, again came into the estate that her husband haunted the earth to restore to her; and now that his body was laid in a consecrated grave, his restless wrath seemed to find peace beyond the portcullis of the Borderland, in that Heaven, that Nirvana of our hopes, we pray.

Here ended the first entry in my grandfather's diary.

Simple Method by Which to Cure a Smoky Grate

Don't be annoyed with smoky grates this fall. Don't think that because the flue is defective and throws smoke into the room, or does not draw properly, that there is no remedy, for according to a flue expert few chimneys built for fireplaces are so constructed that they can not be fixed to give entire satisfaction.

"A grate flue with angles is bound to is curved and smooth the free outward unless the inside surface of the chimney five degrees. To make sure that the passage of smoke is obstructed, with the result thath it strikes the angles of the flue and will be thrown back into the room. There should be nothing but curves in a fireplace flue when it is impossible to build it straight or funnel shape, and these rounded corners should not slant more than forty-five degrees. Tomake sure that the chimney is smooth inside it should be lined with terracotta piping and it would be well for every housewife who has been troubled with bad flues to find out whether or not the chimney is properly lined.

"If there are no angles and the inside of the flue is smooth then the most prolific cause of smoky grates are eliminated and the trouble is probably in the masonry or perhaps in the height of the chimney.

"It may be well for every woman to know that a flue to draw satisfactorily must come directly into the centre of a fireplace, for when it does not there are always eddies of smoke at one side of the grate. Most important of all, however, is the size of the flue, for unless it is one-fifteenth as large as the fireplace there will be difficulties in burning either wood or coal. No flue should ever be smaller than eight inches square in a grate that is about thirty inches long and the same number of inches in width. In larger fireplaces the chimney is proportionately larger, and experienced builders make the big grates low but wide instead of on square lines, as with small fireplaces.

"Where a chimney does not draw it is often the result of a shutting out of air by high houses, and to overcome this the flue must be built at least as high as the surrounding buildings. This difficulty is frequtnly complained of in old houses around which tall buildings have been constructed. Occasionally it is necessary to run up a flue fifty feet above the roof to get the air necessary to make a fire burn and carry off the smoke.

"Where a grate fire does not throw out as much heat as is should from the amount of fuel consumed the reason is usually because the flue is more than one-fifteenth the size of the grate, and so the effect of much heat is lost, being drawn up the chimney by the draft. When the flue is too small for the grate, a smoky room is generally the result.

"If a grate smokes when the first fire of the season is started a woman should not be alarmed and think that this difficulty will continue throughout the year, for until bricks and mortar are warmed through all chimneys, no matter how perfectly constructed, will throw smoke back into the room. As soon as the flues are warm, however, the smoke will pass out freely. Many housekeepers who realize that cold chimneys smoke, invariably put burning paper into them and in this way take off the chill before starting a fire at the beginning of the fall or winter seasons, or when thef lue has not been constantly used in cool weather.

"Many flues smoke simply because they are filed with soot and need to be cleaned by a chimney sweep. At the beginning of each autumn season all grate flues should be thoroughly swept.'

Fashions That Are Modish in School Girls' Garments

GARMENTS FROM R.H. MACY & Co. PHOTOS BY JOEL FEDER.

Chinchilla cloth as a material for children's coats has taken on new life, and quite a number of the latest models are developed from this serviceable fabric. In order, too, that all tastes and forms may be suited, there are garments of all lengths to choose from, beginning with the smart, natty looking reefer and box coats, through the half and three-quarter tourist looking wraps down to those full length, in the most mannish cuts, so much so, in fact, that it is difficult to believe at a glance, that the long, loose overcoat with its regulation man's collar and pockets is really intended for misses' wear at all, following so closely, as it does, the lines of a youth's heavy top coat.

Still I am told these models are finding favor among the high school girls, who are looking for a coat that shall be warm, roomy and comfortable. The same thing is shown in gray mixtures, but these seem to lack the style shown in those built from the rich navy blue chinchilla. To save the grays from the too tourist styles an emblem is worked o nthe sleeve, and this may effect the purpose, at the same time it looks to me a little incongruous, though I should like it on the navy, that is, on the shorter models, the long top coat not being improved by such a decoration.

The new rain coats, a garment indispensable in the school girl's wardrobe, come in the same materials as last year—cravenette and covert cloth—but changed in style. No pleats or other fulness are seen, but simply a long sack, straight and seamless down the back, with under arm and shoulder seams, closing double breasted down the front and sleeves in large coat shape. The only trimming is a two inch strap of the goods, neatly stitched, which runs from each shoulder seam, but back and front to the edge of the coat, giving the shapeless looking wrap some semblance of the figure wearing it.

Mothers with girls at the age that was formerly known as the "awkward age"—a period that has disappeared as surely as that there are now no elderly women—will welcome a smart school frock known as the intermediate size, neither a girl's nor a misses', and dubbed the Junior College. This model, I am told, is cut lacking an inch everywhere, and on every edge of the misses first size; also, that quite a number were sold to very small women, who find even misses' sizes too small, girls as a rule taking larger sizes when growing than when matured. This is especially true of shoes and corsets, as every mother knows.

A cosey looking dark red serge was made up into one of these suits, the skirt in four gores, each width suggesting a double box pleat, the hem tailor stitched twice. The bodice was similarly pleated from the shoulders and showed a square of white at the neck, which was an agreeable relief. The sleeves were full bishop, stitched to form cuffs, and the belt was a stitched band of cloth. Though simple it was exceedingly stylish, its beauty depending entirely upon cut, stitching and pressing.

For girls up to twelve years of age a frock showing a good deal of style and excellent lines is in navy blue Panama of a good quality, in one piece style, joined at the waist line, pleated from the shoulders and closing down the left side. The neck is cut away to display a small gulmpe of bright Scotch plaid silk, while the bishop sleeves are, too, of the contrasting material, small cape sleeves of the Panama overlapping these. There is absolutely no other trimming, all edges being beautifully tailor stitched. The belt is of the blue.

Then another model for girls of this age is a French model, cut somewhat on the lines of the Panama, but made for wear over a wash gulmpe, the upper edge and down the closing being cut into sharp points, bound with a fold of velvet matching the material of the frock, while a small velvet button, set into each point, conceals a hook corresponding with an eye on the gulmpe securing the two—frock and gulmpe. The gulmpe shows bishop sleeves and so does the frock originally, but are afterward cut into points on the other edge of arm from shoulder to wrist, then bound with the velvet and connected with the buttons, the white sleeves showing between the slashings. This would be bright and pretty if made of dark green plaid, the velvet green, and the buttons flat, bright brass ones, a little less than a 10 cent piece in size, the loose velvet belt being drawn through a brass buckle to match.

Dainties for the School Lunch Basket

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

When the picnic basket finds it about time to run to cover, the school lunch baskets are brought forth, more or less reluctantly, from their summer seclusion and the house mother begins cudgeling her brains for something to tempt the capricious appetites of the various members of her student body. At a picnic almost everything goes, the desideratum being "full and plenty," and that hearty.

For the school lunch the trick is to put as much nourishment as possible in a compact space, and make that so attractive to eye and palate that every crumb will be disposed of.

While it is a part of the duties of a waitress to put up the schol lunches they taste a "lot" better if mother attends to it herself. A waitress performs her duty in a perfunctory manner; so many slices of bread and butter, so many pieces of cake and to all alike. The mother who gives loving attention to her self imposed task remembers each child's physical needs and individual preferences, and varies the contents of the different baskets accordingly.

Beware of Stuffy Odors.

In catering successfully to the school lunch basket beware monotony and avaunt smells.

Nothing takes away the appetite so quickly as a close, "stuffy" smell when the basket is opened. Every night after school the basket should be opened, everything removed, crumbs brushed out and the cover left open over night to air. Never send the same napkin over two days running. Paper napkins are pretty and so inexpensive that a fresh one each days costs an infinitesimal sum. If the child prefers a linen napkin have small ones and give a clean one daily. A fruit knife, a small glass with a screw top for carrying custards, preserves, salad or a bit of pudding from day to day, and an individual spoon are all the equipment needed. Buy waxed paper in quantity and wrap up each sandwich, piece of cake, pickle or olives in that, so that there need be no intermingling of flavors.

While a hot, light lunch is the ideal thing for a growing child, the schools where this is made possible are as yet few and far between. In time this will come, meanwhile the cold lunch must possess a nutritive value that will keep the physical condition up to the standard and make mental development possible. An underfed, anaemic child cannot do good work mentally. The ideal cold lunch should include bread and butter, with an appetizing acompaniment of meat, cheese or eggs, prepared in varied forms, fruit and easily digested sweets. Pickles and condiments as well as rich pastries are to be avoided.

Breads for the Lunch Basket.

The selection of bread for the school sandwiches is an important matter, and should be suited to the requirements of the individual child. For some, grahams and brown breads are of distinct advantage, while to others they may do harm. It is not what is eaten but what is assimilated that nourishes the body. For steady diet, fine whole wheat bread is undoubtedly best, containing as it does the mineral elements needed for the building up of bones and teeth. It is easy of digestion, and creates no irritation of the digestive or nervous system as coarse graham bread is apt to do. Rye bread, which also contains a high percentage of phosphates and iron, is wholesome ,though a child is apt to tire of it for steady usage. A cream loaf of fine wheat, is also nourishing and delicate. Milk rolls lightly baken, split open and filled with whatever filling may be desired, corn meal muffins, beaten biscuit, nut breads and baking powder biscuits cut out with a tiny cutter may all be used to vary the daily menu. Crusts of bread may be trimmed off or not as preferred. Where they are delicately browned and tender they are both toothsome and economical. This is the good old Quaker teaching. The bread must be sliced thin and evenly, however, to make it appetizing.

Fillings for the Sandwiches.

These are legion. Meat fillings are usually better, minced fine and seasoned. Exceptions are wafer thin slices of fowl or rare roast or a piece of tender, juicy steak shaved crosswise in thin slices. If the meat is minced leave neither gristle, chunks of fat nor slivers of bone in to discourage appetite.

Nut sandwiches are always timely, and a jar of nut butter kept on tap will prove useful many times. Any nuts may be used. The easiest way to prepare them at home is to run them through the meat chopper. Then they may be moistened with cream, olive oil (and this specially fine for a child with any tendency to pulmonary troubles), melted butter or mayonnaise. Add salt to season and make more digestible, and spread.

Cream cheese mixed with chopped nuts makes an excellent sandwich, while a moist gingerbread sandwich with a filling of cream cheese and nuts is something to remember.

Sweet Sandwiches.

Most children have a prominent sweet tooth, and a moderate amount of sugary things are good for them, especially in cold weather. To many boys especially a pudding sauce sandwich appeals very strongly. A bit of hard sauce left over from the dessert of the preceding day may be utilized, or butter and sugar creamed and flavored with current jelly or strawberry preserve. White bread is best to use with this filling. Molasses sandwiches made of buttered brown bread with molasses spread between are not to be despised if the fingers can be washed after eating, nor yet well buttered bread spread with a thick layer of moist brown sugar. Best of all are the maple sugar sandwiches, the buttered slices holding between them a thick layer of scraped sugar.

Other sweet sandwich fillings are dates stoned and pounded to a paste, jam and marmalades of various sorts, nut and fig sandwiches made by adding chopped English walnuts to a fig paste. This paste is made of chopped figs cooked to a paste with a little water and flavored with orange or other fruit juice.

In Packing the Lunch Basket.

In packing the lunch basket let fruit come first, and this never two days the same, unless later an apple is taken for "steady."

Today let there be a cluster of grapes wrapped in oiled paper, a luscious peach or pear, a plump banana, an orange separated in sections, leaving a bit of the rind to hold them together, a couple of plump figs steamed and sugared, a handful of dates or cluster of fat raisins. Tomorrow change the bill for a trio of meaty plums, a handful of nuts or a carefully baked apple, with its core of sugar and cinnamon. Of course this latter must be carried in a cup and be eaten with a spoon.

Cup Filling for the Lunch Basket.

Other delectable dainties to be carried in cups are cup custards, rice and tapioca puddings, chocolate blanc mange, lemon and fruit jelly.

It is a good plan when putting up the autumnal store of quinces, peaches, grapes, crab apples and the like to fill a number of small egg cups or glasses, especially for the lunch box, and keep them on a shelf apart for the purpose intended. Even if you elect to buy two or three dozen small glasses for this purpose you will find it money well invested.

Salads for the Lunch Box.

An occasional salad for the lunch basket will bring its reward. We all know that olive oil is expensive, and a mayonnaise not to be wasted; but it is cheaper after all than cod liver oil and much more welcome. If you have a little chicken, roast veal or lamb left over from dinner, cut up a half cupful with its bulk in celery or lettuce, marinate with lemon juice or vinegar, toss lightly with mayonnaise to moisten and add to the luncheon. A potato or fish salad with a boiled cream dressing is also appetizing.

Cakes for School Lunches.

If possible, bake patty pan cakes for the lunch basket. They are so easy to pack, so tempting to eat, especially when their brown sides support a lovely frosted top. And just here are some good plain cake receipts, just the very thing for patty pan cakes.

Sponge Cake Patties.

Break two eggs into a cup, then fill up with cream or milk. Pour into a mixing bowl, add a cup of sugar and a cupful and a half flour that has been sifted, with two teaspoonfuls baking powder. Beat all together for ten minutes, flavor with vanilla, lemon or orange, and bake in lightly greased patty tins, about ten minutes.

One-Egg Cake.

Beat to a cream one-half cup butter and one cup sugar; add one well beaten egg, two cups flour, sifted, with two teaspoonfuls baking powder, and one cup sweet milk; flavor to taste; mix well and bake in patty tins in a hot oven.

Ginger Cup Cake.

Cream together one-half cup butter and one cup sugar; add two eggs, well beaten, a cup and three-quarters flour, sifted, with a level teaspoonful baking powder, one-half cup milk and a half tablespoonful ginger; bake in small pans, adding, if you like, two or three raisins or pieces of nut to each little pan just before setting in the oven.

San Diego Hermits.

Beat together one cup butter and two cups sugar; add two eggs, well beaten, one cup sweet milk, one teaspoonful soda, dissolved in a little warm water, and one teaspoonful each cloves and cinnamon; add one cup fruit, English currants, raisins, seeded or chopped; prunes, minced fine, or nutmeats, and flour to mix as soft as possible; it will take about six cups; roll out rather thick for cookies and cut in shapes with a cooky cutter.

Dainty Matinee of China Silk and Lace

A charming matinee of white China silk trimmed with French Valenciennes is shown in the illustration. From a shallow yoke the material is accordeon pleated, the lace first being set entre deux in points. Lace insertion trims the yoke and is set into the sleeves, while the edging finishes the bottom of sleeves, matinee and the neck. It takes about three and a half yards of material, one yard wide, eight yards of insertion and five yards of lace.

New Arm Bracelets for Holding Up Long Gowns

As long gloves continue to be worn this fall and early winter a new arm bracelet has been introduced for the purpose of keeping the gloves from slipping down, and have quite taken the place of the glove garters which had a certain vogue during the summer. These bracelets are so constructed that they give with the movements of the arm and so do not hinder the action of the muscles. In gold they are most attractive, even the less expensive styles have a charm all their own.

Cosmetic Beauty Waters to Freshen and Tone Skin

By MARGARET MIXTER.

One of the least understood of all toilet requisities is the use of cosmetic and toilet waters and vinegars, which add so materially to the comfort, attractiveness and well being of women generally. Not that the use of strong perfumes is advised, quite the contrary; but there are innumerable waters of cosmetic value which in use exhale a certain fragrance from the body which is most delightful and which is one of the charms of true femininity.

There is no great difficulty in preparing these cosmetic liquids at home—in fact, generally speaking the art is a simple one, the exception being in the matter of toilet waters from fresh flowers, which require more care.

One of the most valuable of bath waters, the origin of which is attributed to Sarah Bernhardt and which is said to have a wonderful effect upon the skin, rendering it white and firm, acting as a sensitive to the nerves, is altogether a fine skin tonic. There may be exceptions to its use in the case of women whose skin is inclined to cutaneous eruptions; otherwise the results from its use are most gratifying.

Take one-quarter pint of alcohol—the recipe can be doubled or tripled if desired—one ounce each of spirits of camphor and ammonia, two and a half ounces of sea salt and one pint of boiling water; mix thoroughly and always shake before using. If a woman comes in tired from a day's shopping, a long walk or any other wearying exertion, apply the tonic to the face and arms and it will magically remove all of that "tired" feeling and put one in fine condition for the evening.

Another delightful and refreshing bath water, which is said to come from Portugal, is made from two and one-half ounces each of eau de rose and eau fleur d'orange, one and a quarter ounces of eau de myrte, one-half drachm of essence of ambergris and one-quarter drachm of essence of musk. After thoroughly commingling the ingredients keep closely corked in a bottle for a week in the dark—it were better if it remained even two weeks—then pour off the clear liquid. A little poured into the basin of water in which the face is washed will revive and freshen the complexion wonderfully.

Some women who have good complexions suffer from relaxed tissues and a coarse skin and for this condition nothing is better than a good toilet vinegar to be added to the bath water. One of the best of these is made from six grammes of oil of bergamot, five grammes of oil of citron, six grammes of extract of lavender and three-quarters of a pint of white wine vinegar. Mix together and allow to remain for ten days then filter. In using, dilute the water with four or five parts of rose or distilled water, or freshly boiled water is equally good. In applying to the face add the tonic to warm or hot water, wash the face thoroughly, dashing it up about the neck, then cleanse with cold.

At this season of the year, when tan and freckles are the result of a summer at the seashore or mountains, a good skin whitener and freckle remover is in demand. A formula which has come down to us from the Parisian perfumers of long ago and which has stood the effect of time is claimed to have marvellous beautifying properties, not only whitening the skin and but removing freckles and bringing a fresh, rosy color to the surface.

It is composed of all sort of delicious ingredients and can be made from six grams of oil of bergamot, two and a half grams of oil of citron and the same of oil of Portugal; one and a half grams of oil of neroli and a half gram of pettitgrain; three quarters grams of oil or rosemary, one drop of attar of roses, one and a half drachms of balsam of tolu and one pint of rectified spirits of wine. After the ingredients have infused for two weeks filter. Fifteen to twenty drops to a quarter of a glass of warm water makes a delightful lotion to be applied to the body with an atomized while the body is wet from the bath.

If one desires to obtain a toilet vinegar of some favorite odor made from fresh flowers, herbs or other aromatic substance, add three or four ounces of fresh flowers to one pint of strong white wine vinegar. Allow this to stand for a week, shaking up vigorously each day. Strain by expressing all the odor from the flowers and if the water be not strong enough more flowers or herbs may be added and the process repeated. Other toilet waters may be made by adding fifteen to twenty drops of one of the essential oils to one pint of white wine vinegar.

Gowns for the Young Debutante

By A. T. ASHMORE.

It is not at all too soon for the debutante to be planning her outfit for the coming winter's campaign, and, especially if her allowance is not large, she should begin at once to decide just how she can invest so as to get the best results. It is, of course, much better to have only a few costumes, each one perfect in its own way, than to have a number of gowns all more or less mediocre in style. With a little careful planning a most attractive outfit can be had for comparatively small expense, but one must select durable materials and models that are smart but not too conspicuous.

In planning the best use of the money that can be expended on the wardrobe, the actual necessities must first be provided and then whatever is left over can go toward completing the outfit. First in importance is a smart reception and calling costume of silk and velvet, for there are numberless coming out "teas" this first winter which must be regularly attended and then, too, this costume must do for luncheons matinee parties and all formal afternoon affairs.

A three piece gown of light gray, red—if becoming—or an odd shade of blue cloth are all good shades, but if a dark color is preferred, velvet or velveteen are smarter than cloth. There should be considerable white on the bodice, so that without the jacket the dress will be sufficiently elaborate for a formal incheon. Perhaps the best investment is a handsome black velvet suit, the only drawback to which is that it will wear so long, but this may prove too expensive for a year when so many new costumes must be provided and the cloth suit can be just as effective.

Naturally the receiving gown is of most importance, and the pretty afternoon dress will generally suffice, as it can be worn for receiving at all the teas and can also be used as a theater gown. It is better to have this distinctively a high gown for it will be constantly worn, and a guimpe dress is not apt to fit as well as when the bodice is made all in one piece. This dress should be white, but the material is always a subject of much consideration. A soft silk is sure to make up attractively and be most serviceable. White cloth makes a most useful dress but by some is thought rather old for a debutante. Chiffon is fascinatingly soft and pretty, but cannot stand a great amount of wear. White lace is charming, but only a good quality is attractive and this is apt to make an expensive gown.

It would scarcely be possible to get along the first winter without at least two evening gowns. Of these, one should be white, which will not be as easily remembered as a decided shade, although the white may be quite as handsome and elaboratly made. The other gown had best be of some pale shade of pink, blue, green or whatever color is most becoming. If there can be a number of gowns, conspicuous shades may be selected, but with a limited number the gowns must be pretty but not too striking. One satin dress is almost obligatory, for it is comparatively easy to keep a satin gown in order, while chiffon, lace or net have to be constantly freshened and continually mended.

An evening wrap is so very important that it is astonishing how often it is left unprovided for. Silk, satin and chiffon wraps are all much in vogue at present, but th emost serviceable cloak to be had is of white cloth. Particularly if a white cloth gown is decided upon for afternoons, a white wrap practically gives another costume, for, worn together, the wrap and dress will make a smart theater costume and can often be worn instead of the dark cloth or velvet suit for luncheons and receptions.

Black and White Evening Gown Is Most Useful at This Season

By A. T. ASHMORE.

A handsome evening gown is perhaps less necessary just at this time of year than at any other season, but all the same it is never safe to be without at least one elaborate evening dress. It is seldom that any evening dress made up last spring is in fit condition even for a dinner gown by the autumn, and anyway a spring or summer frock never looks just right now. Therefore the only way out of the difficulty is to have made up at once a costume that is now suitable for any sort of evening wear and which later on, when the ball and opera season commences, can be converted into a useful dinner dress.

Perhaps the most serviceable evening gown is a pretty flowered silk brocade. This dress need not be very expensive, for just now, between seasons, there is not the same demand for elaborate costumes. Then, too, a figured or flowered silk requires little trimming to be effective, but if that trimming has some little originality the form will look very smart and "Frenchy." The soft plain silks and satins are also delightfully serviceable, for they clean so readily and are not being constantly torn, a great relief after one has been wearing perishable summer fabrics for some months.

It has always been a theory that one should never be without one smart black dress. Fifty years ago it was the black silk or surah "Sunday-go-to-meetin'" frock, but today the theory only holds good in the evening outfit, for all black is thought sombre for the daytime save for deep mourning. A handsome black or black and white evening gown is now the most useful gown imaginable, for it is appropriate on an infinite variety of occasions and if kept in good order look smart until literally worn to shreds. Today black spangled net is the favorite evening gown; the net robe is laid over two and often three inner petticoats of chiffon net and finally silk, and these skirts must all have extra flounces at the feet so as to give a pretty and graceful flare.

The half fitted empire—the net laid over a perfect princess slip and the material caught down all the way about the waist and hips save just in the center of the back—can be made charmingly graceful since it is more attractive than in any other texture.

It is true that a number of women have adopted this empire model quite extensively, but by no means is it to be as popular as the princess dress has been. Nor is the princess gown out of vogue—far from it, although wide girdles and narrow belts are all still in fashion. No woman is willing to restrict herself to one particular style of dress, for there must be variety in all departments.

A white lace gown is sure to be both useful and attractive and the debutante especially should unquestionably have such a gown in her outfit. A pretty model for a lace dress has a bodice of white brocade ribbon of some delicate coloring, with shoulder straps and long sash ends of the same ribbon. A bit of the silk can also be turned about the lace sleeves to carry out the color. The skirt may be entirely of the lace, finished perhaps with some bow knots or rosettes of the ribbon laid on just above the hem. If there is a flounce it can be headed with a soft roll of the ribbon and caught up here and there in little rosettes. A young girl will find a white lace dress to fill the same place as will her black dinner gown later on.

Matinee Petticoats and Peignoirs

Specially made petticoats that are really more elaborate than the most elaborate dress skirt are favored for matinee wear, accompanied by dainty matinee jackets, which may or may not match the skirt, as one pleases. The smart shops are showing what they are pleased to term "matinee petticoats," these in silk or fine bastistes, cut with sweeping trains and to be worn with other skirts somewhat simpler, but none the less beautiful.

The illustration shows a charming example of these matinee skirts, elaborated as only the French know how, with countless bands of fine hand run tucks inclosing lace insertions and heading wide lace ruffles. The trimming extends quite up to the hip line. The matinee is made of all-over English embroidery, cut in a loose shape, short in the back and dipping sharply in the front. The pattern of the embroidery is cut out in scallops, and these edged with ruffles of the lace that decorate the skirt. The bell-shaped sleeves are similarly finished. A soft chou of satin ribbon is placed at the left throat closing, this ribbon, in a sea shell pink, being the only touch of color in the costume.

China silk seems particularly suitable to these dainty, clinging room garments, although a soft finish chiffon taffeta is sometimes used. In lace nothing seems quite so pretty as the Point de Paris, which, while it is decorative, makes no pretentions to being any more expensive that it is. Imitation Valenciennes is always pretty, and when the insertion and edging are combined with bands of tucked material makes a most effective decoration.

Shirring seems almost essential in garments of this sort, for the reason that it not only aids in obtaining the correct lines, but is an important adjunct in their decoration. Every woman should have at least one garment of this nature in her wardrobe, and it need not be necessarily expensive. There are many cheaper materials that may be substituted for the silk and which will be quite as effective, if not so elegant.

Decorative Color Scheme for Furnishing Library

A library done in rich brown and soft yellows will harmonize with almost any combination of colors in an apartment, and in addition will be artistic if the tones shading from deep brown to bright orange and light canary are prettily blended.

As much depends upon the paper used on the walls and upon the floor covering both should be carefully selected to correspond with each other as well as with the furniture and hangings.

If light brown canvas or burlap put on the walls in panels is too expensive, then two-toned cartridge paper will be an excellent substitute and if the two shades are sharply contrasted in either narrow or broad stripes the effect will be most pleasing.

The ceiling, to prevent the room from being too dark, should be done in a soft yellow that will tone to advantage with the side walls.

As a basis for the furniture, and the real foundation of the setting of the library, the floor covering must be in a shade and of a quality of material that blends with everything and yet is not noticeable, for nothing will spoil the effect of a room as much as a rug or carpet that is of a color or pattern that is constantly obtruding itself upon the occupants and making them conscious of its design.

In this brown and yellow room a mottled brown velvet filling should be in harmony, if it is not too expensive, otherwise the floor may be stained and one large, square ingrain rug in striped browns—light and dark—or several small ones used to keep the floor from looking bare.

As shelves for books are one of the essentials in a library, the arrangement of them is usually considered more important than the chairs, table, and bric-a-brac that are necessary to properly furnish such a room and make it artistic as well as comfortable.

The number of shelves required depends naturally upon the books to be placed on them and upon the wall space that can be utilized. If made of pine boards at home these shelves, placed in rows, one above the other, (the largest at the bottom), are effective when built in from the floor to a height of about four feet, so that the topmost one can be readily reached. Stained brown and covered with silk curtains dropped from a brass rod attached to the top of the highest shelf, this improvised book case will really be an ornament to the room, and if sheer China silk in a soft yellow that makes an artistic blend between the brown mottled floor and the two-toned paper in brown is used, the effect will be charming. Besides, these curtains over the shelves help protect the book bindings from dust and wear and so are practical as well as decorative.

Then, too, the top shelf may be used as a plate rail for bric-a-brac, and if there are quaint and curious pieces of brass, hand made, hammered or in antique finish, and vases or other pottery in the yellow arts and crafts style the ornamentation will not only be in keeping with the character of the apartment but decidedly effective.

The furniture for this room must be in brown, and in a medium sized flat or apartment heavy leather or large frame and upholstered pieces are really out of place, so that for harmony wicker or willow lounging chairs and deep, wide seated ones that are comfortable for reading may be secured for reasonable prices in the natural color and then stained at home to correspond with the surroundings. A table in dark oak or in the Flemish mission finish should mark the center of the room, and if convenient it should be of an oblong shape.

A couch or divan in a library is always desirable and if a cover in soft brown velour is used, with pillows of bright old orange, deep gold and the varying shades of brown piled on in confusion, it will be an artistic addition to the room. The pillows, many of which should be put on the couch, may be made of inexpensive pieces of denim, canvas and burlap, any one of which comes in tones of yellow and brown that will be effective. Just for contrast one or two handsome cushions should be used in the pile. A striking one of golden silk, with a deep brown ruffle, or finished with a cord and tassel, would be attractive, as would also a lemon colored silk pillow with a touch of old orange at the corners.

At the doors portieres of yellow or brown jute or arras cloth simply made with the hems turned outward in the popular mission fashion, and cream—almost yellow—net curtains at the windows should complete the furnishing of a most attractive and artistic library.

THE CONVENIENT MR. CLIFTON

By Louise Llewellyn.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles).

The debutante of three months faced her older girl friend across the little table piled with books and magazines. One pretty slippered foot was curled under in the great maroon chair, and a slender, nervous hand played with the embroidered moon-flowers in her imported Japanese kimona.

Her friend and confidant had just laid aside her jacket and, adjusting her veil above serious eyes, she offered sympathy in a voice that suggested something of her own state.

"I suppose this is what they call being in love," said the girl in her first season. "Do you really think Tom cares? Did you see him looking at my new diamond? Do you think he will pay no more attention to me when it gets around that I'm engaged to papa' old friend? Tell me, dear, did he ever say anything to you about me?"

"A girl," said the older friend, "should always have two love affairs, a major and a minor. Now the oldish man you're engaged to doesn't of course count—when it comes to being in love, and all that. He'll be a fine husband and you'll have everything ond—"

"Oh, yes, of course, I wouldn't think of marrying Tom. I'm really, in my mind, happy about marrying such a wonderful, rich, brainy, at-the-top kind of man, but still—"

"The trouble is you need another love affair. You think too much about Tom. You should have one more in your following. There's little Clifton, now."

"But he's yours—"

"Yes," said the friend, "so he is. But I don't need him. I'll manage it for you. You see, I've got two already and I'm in love with both of them—much in love with Jack and comfortably in love with Dick, who flatters me and makes me uncomfortable and jealous. Now, of course, one is jealous of but one man at a time. The minor affair is the soothing one. The major is always a heart interest in one's superior or equal mentally, you know; the minor is always solace derived from the devotion of one's inferior—don't you see?"

"And marriage and engagements have nothing to do with either?"

"Not often," said the elder friend. "Not often. They're just practical, natural arrangements that make for material comfort in the end—just like having a mother and a father and sisters and brothers. What you need is a new interest to take your mind off Tom."

"So I do," admitted the debutante. "You see, in the morning the first thing I think of is the post, to see if he's sent a note or something. Then all forenoon I won't go out of the house, fearing he may telephone or send a box of flowers; in the afternoon at every ring of the bell I jump out of my wits, thinking maybe—you know! Then if all day he hasn't sent a word I sit trying to talk with somebody and don't seem to remember what they are trying to say. Of course Mr. Martens—the man I'm going to marry—papa's old friend, thinks it's because I'm shy and young and 'up in the clouds,' as he says. But it's just Tom, all the time."

"Then Mr. Clifton's the antidote. I'll give him to you this very evening.

"But he wants to marry you."

"Just a habit, my dear. If I should accept him he'd be frightened awfully. I'm four years older than he is, and—well, come over home with me to dinner—he's going to call tonight. He's disgustingly rich, you know, and not so bad to look at, and the way he pays a girl attention before people simply makes one her own superior."

The debutante began to dress hurriedly, laughing with the novelty of the idea. Tom was for the moment forgotten, and when the maid announced "Mr. Martens," she made excuse that she was out and sent the card to her mother.

"He loves blue," instructed the older friend. "Wear that blue crepe. And he likes to talk about dogs. He's imported a lot of bull terriers. Talk about dogs, and—and well, yourself. He's awfully sympathetic."

"Isn't it a shame that a girl ever has to marry and spoil it all?" asked the debutante of her friend as they took their places in the latter's neat brougham, bound for the theater a month later. "This is what I call perfect happiness, having three men in love with one girl. Oh, I'm just too happy for anything. Tom is terribly jealous of Mr. Clifton and Mr. Martens just attends to his own business and never interferes with anything, except to send me beautiful presents. Mamma says I need not announce my engagement until after the summer. I've got a plan."

"I'm going to marry Jack in September," announced the friend. "You see what you did for me when you let me give Mr. Chilton to you. Maybe you think I didn't work for you, dear."

The debutante pouted. "He didn't seem to need so much coaching from you. Why, he thinks you're dead in love with him still."

"Well, I call that downright ungrateful of you, to let him think that after all I've done for you."

"What do you care what he thinks when you're going to marry Jack in September?"

"What do I care? What do I care? Why, September is several months away. I may want Mr. Clifton back for all you know."

"Well, then," said the debutante, "you can't have him. I'm engaged to him."

"Engaged? But Mr. Martens—"

"I'm going to break with him for awhile and be engaged to Mr. Clifton—just for the summer—then I can make it up if mamma makes an awful fuss. Of course I'll marry Mr. Martens—but just for the summer—"

"And Tom?"

"It's because Tom simply never will propose unless he thinks I'm going to marry Mr. Clifton. He doesn't seem to bother his head over Mr. Martens—so I'm going to try somebody else—there's a dear—don't interfere with my nice little plan."

And they alighted in front of the theater.

A THOUGHTFUL GIRL.

"What did you bring your pocketbook for?" asked the nice young man when he and the top floor girl with the pug nose started for Coney Island. "I can put your key in my pocket."

"I didn't bring it on account of the key," said the top floor girl. "I have $3 in here. I thought we might need it before we got back."

"Well!" exclaimed the nice young man. He looked as if he would like to say more, but was prevented from further utterance by sheer indignation.

"Oh, you needn't get angry," said the girl. "It has happened before under circumstances fully as propitious as these.

"Once I went on a pleasure jaunt down the bay in care of an escort who, to all appearances, had money enough to carry us through all kinds of emergencies. It seems, however, that I overestimated his affluence.

"Fortunately I took my own pocketbook along, not as a matter of precaution, but from mere force of habit. Just before we started home Mr. Jinks began to eye my purse covetously.

"'What is the matter?' I asked. 'Are we stranded?'

"Mr. Jinks confessed that we were.

"'A fellow spends so confoundedly much at these places,' he said. 'I went broke before I knew it.'

"'Well,' said I, 'I have a little change with me. We can use that to get home on.'

"Since then I have made it a point to carry my own pocketbook. When people go to those dreadfully expensive places I think it well to provide for all possible contingencies beforehand, don't you?"

The nice young man looked depressed.

"Yes, I do," said he. Presently he added: "Will you excuse me a minute? I want to run in here and get a bunch of cigars before we start."

The pug-nosed girl waited till the nice young man had got out of sight and hearing before she said anything.

"You shouldn't have told him that," she said, then. "It worried him. I shouldn't be at all surprised if he has gone to borrow some extra money from somebody."

"I know he has," returned the top floor girl serenely. "I meant him to. That is the reason I told that story. I always tell it. I don't want to take any chances on getting stranded again."

HOUSE OF WHALEBONE.

Not very lone ago there was on the Lancashire coast, England, a cottage and boathouse that were made almost entirely from the remains of a score or so of whales that had been driven ashore some years before, says the Kansas City Journal. The framework of the edifice consisted wholly of whalebone, and the dried skins of the huge creature were neatly and strongly fastened as a covering for walls and roof. There is another building of exactly the same kind in Scotland, and in this case the skulls of the whales and some of the heavier bones are used with great effect as outside ornaments.

CIGAR ASH AS MEDICINE.

A youth named Rougier, who in his time has played many parts, has just been arrested in Paris on a charge of fraud. Rougier was formerly a plate washer at a restaurant, but he was ambitious, says the Kansas City Journal. In turn he became a chemist's assistant and banker. When the banking business became monotonous Rougier blossomed forth as an "American specialist," undertaking to cure every known complaint by means of his wonderful remedies. Rougier is said to have had many clients. The remedies, it is aserted, chiefly consisted of cigar ash. Yet so extraordinary is human credulity that in his room were found a number of letters, written in good faith by many of his patients, testifying to the marvelous curative effect of the remedies. The majority of the patients were women.

STYLE AND COMFORT COMBINED FOR THE TRAVELLER

THE MODE OF THE MARCHIONESS

Grace, Comfort and Serviceability Are Cleverly Combined in Models Recently Received from Paris—Plaids and Plain Cloths Both Favored—Hints Borrowed From the Stage—Trimmings Imperative—Full Sleeves Softly Draped.

The separate wrap is destined to dominate the clothes question for street and all outdoor appearances for the coming season, a dictum that will be welcomed by the smartly-gowned woman and her of slenderer purse with about equal enthusiasm.

Seldom is it that fashion so cleverly combines style and economy, as is made possible in this way. For one thing, the present vogue of dainty little frocks for indoor wear, made from those pretty silks—and, by the way, the silken shirtwaist suit is reappearing under many new guises among Paris models—that are not so supple as heretofore, and not by any means as stiff as rumor threatened us with in the earlier weeks of the season, will go charmingly under a separate wrap, while if the ordinary coat and skirt suit be retained for street wear, a complete change of costume is necessitated.

They are long, all long, those new models—that is, they seem quite long when compared to the smart little wraps that ruled the summer season. Three-quarters and seven-eighths lengths prevail; but the tall woman—and she is less in the minority today than ever—will undoubtedly take to the full-length style, that completely covers up the gown, and so serves to detract a trifle from her apparent height.

So far as shape, however, is concerned, it would seem as though Madame La Mode had said: "Go as you please. If full and loose affairs suit you best, well, order those; if the tightly-fitted designs, that define the figure smartly, are more becoming to your allure, well, command your tailor to follow that style. All that is demanded is that you suit your own particular style and build to the very best and most becoming result."

The French makers are leaning mightily to that smart bias seam down the center of the back, with which they assuredly do secure some of their most fetching effects. In closely-fitted skirts, too, one can readily tell the French cut by the presence of this seam, and a more alluring flare was never achieved than they turn out by this means.

Plaids are held in the highest esteem abroad, and some of the designs and colorings displayed are artistic in the extreme. Pastel tints are mostly favored, and the melange of colorings is such as was surely designed by a master of tints and nuances.

For example, one smart coat illustrated on this page has the ground in a pearly tint of gray, and this is barred and crossbarred in hair lines that show a delicate lilac, a mauve and a soft, rich violet tint—a scheme of coloring that is exquisitely emphasized in a scant application of a medium tint of cloth that fairly embodies all of the three shades quoted.

The clan tartans of Scotland, with all of their historic memories, are among the more popular of novelties. For quite sometime the makers of the mode have been leading up to those, and ably have the manufacturers of cloths, tweeds, meltons and other materials suitable for development in comfortable separate wraps seconded those efforts. The Clan MacKenzie, Clan Gordon, Clan Stuart, Clan MacTavish and other of the quieter combinations that employ soft greens, browns and blues for a background, and depend for distinction upon bars and hairlines of more brilliant coloring, are in the highest favor, and deft touches of plain cloths that will either contrast or harmonize with the round are employed with charming results.

The little Capucine coat is one of the novelties that cannot fail to meet with an enthusiastic reception. Suited alike to the maid and the matron, to the girl of 16 and the woman of 60, one will see it time and again during the season. It requires cloth of a good quality, however, for its best expression; so that it bids fair to escape the overweening popularity that has killed off too many of our charming modes long ere their appointed time was run.

Trimmings are highly important in the new scheme of things, where the wrap is concerned. Their mode of application is usually planned so as to emphasize the best lines of the coat, and many novel applications assert themselves. Pockets, too, are delightfully numerous and convenient, and are tucked in just where one might least expect to find one, so clever is the cut.

The Belmore Coat.

One of the prettiest designs that has appeared so far in the more practical class of autumn and winter wraps is that which is known as the Belmore. Combining, as it cleverly does, the charms of the fitted and the semifitted modes, it is sure of an enthusiastic acceptance from the woman of taste. In the illustration it is shown developed in one of those smart Irish tweeds, which fashion favors so strenuously this season, the choice being in strict accord to the vogue that is so liberally accorded to all things Irish. The ground is a pretty pearl gray, one of the light tints that do not show dust readily, and this is plaided in open design by hair lines in lavender and violet, presenting to a charm the combination of delicate colors that is really the keynote of this season's style. A hint of the preference for mannish modes that asserts itself strongly in imported models is seen in the cut, and is further emphasized in the mannish collar and lapels, that are faced in a dull shade of violet cloth. The back and sides define the figure sharply, while the double-breasted fronts are managed with a dart that curves from the shoulderline down to the side seam below the waist, and makes for a delightful effect of curved slenderness. Pockets are deftly tucked into the cloth applique that covers this dart, below which the side seams flare sharply.

THE MODE OF THE MARCHIONESS.

Copied from a most attractive stage wrap worn by the "Marchioness" of the piece at the Theatre Gymnase, Paris, the design has been reproduced with the title of the Marchioness, thus recalling the triumphs of the original wearer of the design. A model that will prove especially effective for well nigh every kind of figure, the professional designer, as well as the home dressmaker, will find many hints and possibilities for reproduction. The fit over the shoulders is made with what is in truth a yoke, but so cleverly cut that one overlooks the fact that it is merely a square yoke. Under this the garment takes the fullest of circular cuts, falling in sweeping folds that measure a goodly five yards at the hem. The center front and center back are both braided in a serpentine design, the pattern increasing in size as it descends. The sleeve is especially novel, full at the top, and with the fulness falling in graceful lines to below the elbow, until it drops into an elaborate cuff. This latter item is really in two pieces, the upper one in velvet and the lower of braided cloth, each reversing the cut of the other. A flat collar in velvet shows embroidered appliques, as does the velvet portion of the cuff, and the little strap tabs, that fall from the yoke, are softened with dainty little touches of velvet and embroidery.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH DRESSIER DEMANDS.

For those who still cling to the style of coat and skirt to match, even in the heaviest winter costumes, this smart model, really a separate coat, but made up with an unlined skirt to match when so desired, will commend itself. One of the lighter-weight meltons is used, braids are called upon to add their smart effects, and the touch of velvet at collar and cuff makes for the softening element that the mode demands.

The back is fashioned with a full complement of seams, each with a pleat deftly tucked in, that is pressed flat and released after the hip curve is passed. The side seams are treated after the same fashion, while the fronts accentuate that smart shoulder dart that in the newer mode is made to curve in the most fetching manner. Braid trimmings are posed on each seam, calling attention to the perfection of cut and finish that the tailored work is expected to show up to perfection. The fronts present a panel cleverly combined in the double-breasted fastening, and pockets are ingeniously cut into the applique of cloth that finishes the line of the shoulder dart.

Like all of the separate wraps that are a la mode, the seven-eighths length is followed. This really gives all the warmth and protection that a full-length wrap affords in winter weather, while at the same time eliminating the extra weight of cloth entailed in the added inches displayed by the full-length wrap.

STYLE AND COMFORT COMBINED FOR THE TRAVELER.

The vogue of plaids will be firmly established by the time that those delightful imported models, which owe their charm to the clever inspiration of famous Parisian designers, have been reproduced for the fastidious American woman. Made up in a material most difficult to handle artistically, this charming little wrap is none the less well calculated to appeal to those who seek the individual in dress. The famous Clan MacTavish tartan—all of those clan tartans of Scotland are catalogued according to the families who originated and wore them in feudal times—is used. Its dark brown background, crossed and recrossed with varying stripes in scarlet, blue, gold and a faint green, is delightfully soft in coloring, the weave being one of the thick woolen ones in which the color takes on a somewhat subdued tint in the weaving. One might almost refer to the design of the wrap as a sleeved cape, for the coat is cut upon full circular lines, the back hanging in fluted folds from the shoulders and the side seams flaring widely in the same effect. The fronts are comfortably double-breasted, fastening with large fancy pearl buttons as big as a silver dollar; while the sleeve is full at the top, to taper into a closely fitted cuff at the wrist. The capucine hood is piquantly lined with a scarlet sedo silk, making for a charming effect when drawn over the hair, and patch pockets complete the convenience of this fetching capucine wrap.

Trifles Light as Air.

THE MINOR DETAILS OF DRESS will count for far more in the coming season's mode than they have done for a long time. True, the small accessories—the collar, gloves, shoes, etc.—have always been important; but with the vast vogue to which trimmings are laying claim there are many and more pitfalls for the unwary than heretofore.

Braids and passementeries are promised extreme prominence, and there are some charming designs wrought out in braids exclusively that to see is to order. Variations upon the Greek key and the Walls of Troy patterns are many, and one of the most pleasing is shown in braid, in bias bands of taffetas or satin, and worked out in ribbon velvet.

Embroidered chiffons, with irregular edges, are to be seen in vast variety at the trimming centers; and the multitude of designs shown in embroidered silks is simply bewildering. Pierced, cut-out and embroidered cloth bands are on view, and one can have the same design matched up in bands of one, two and four inches wide, this making easy the task of meeting the fad for graduated trimmings.

Some exquisite pieces of embroidered kid, suede and a heavy satin are already shaped for vest and cuff requirements, while the collar to most of those is of the high-standing variety and already tacked to the vest. In those dainty details ribbon embroideries, chiefly in shaded effects, still reign, although clever and effective use is made of coarse and heavy metallic threads that are couched down flat to the foundation rather than used to make stitches of themselves in the usual way. Small and fine cords are used after the same fashion, and even a thick and heavy chenille proves desirable applied in this wise upon a coat or skirt.

With the long, or, at the most, demi-traine, skirt firmly established as a feature of the newer modes, it behooves the fastidious dresser to pay close attention to the skirt bindings and hem finishes. The best makers employ a deep facing of velveteen, cut on the bias, and preferably of the new waterproof kind. Upon a gown that is destined to see quite some service this facing is oftentimes four to six inches deep, while half that depth is considered sufficient for a smart woolen walking skirt.

Those who still cling to braid bindings will welcome a novelty that has found its way to most notion counters. This is a braid with a double bias velveteen edge, this well corded, so that it makes a desirable finish for a street or everyday gown. Experts advise shrinking the straight length of braid before sewing on, as it sometimes will shrink a trifle if a wetting be postponed until after the skirt has been worn.

ROBE GOWNS are more attractive than ever. Present styles favor their making muchly; and both hand embroiderers and the bonnaz machines have each done their uttermost to further the fad.

Satin-faced broadcloths are shown in what one might well imagine to be all-over braided designs, done in fine cords and finer soutache. Self-coloring is the rule in this work; although there is occasionally an example seen with metallic threads introduced into the pattern. A very smart robe in sheima cloth of a milky brown has deep brown soutache relieved with fine silken cords in willow green and a pale pastel blue. A changeable bronze-green-brown—there seems to be no better way of describing it—metallic thread is couched down all through the braiding, and makes for a charming glint of brightness in the pastel coloring in which both the gown and braiding are executed.

SIDE LACINGS appear on many of the new shoes. The tie with vamp of dull black kid and the upper in white, laced on the outer side through three eyelets with white ribbon reappears in a heavier sole for autumn wear. Many of the high shoes are laced on the inner or the outer side, though the first mentioned would seem to be a somewhat awkward way of getting at the lacing. High bronze boots are being shown for evening wear; and those either button all the way across in single or crossed straps, or else are scalloped into straps all the way up, those straps caught together with a silken ribbon for lacing. In some few instances where such boots are worn with a delicately colored evening gown, the silken hose and the lacing ribbon match the gown, and make for a pretty contrast with the gleaming bronze kid.

FACE VEILS, with tucks and tuckings for their trimming appurtenance are making a strenuous bid for favor. Since the tucks must all be run in by hand, it will readily be seen that there is little or no danger of this little fad waning for a while because of an undue amount of popularity.

CHINESE EMBROIDERIES continue in high favor for the achievement of that touch of richness which even the plainest and most severe tailor-made gown demands nowadays. As collar and cuff, or as vest or edging, there simply must be some little bit of handwork displayed. The coarser kinds of crocheted lace—they are all known as Irish, but any connoisseur in lace can tell instantly the Irish make from that which the Italians, Bulgarians and Assurians turn out—is made some use of; but richly colored embroideries, judiciously used, is better.

In New York the bootblack's business is being rapidly developed. A company offers to send its bootblacks to the houses of its customers to attend to the shoes of one or any number of persons. Payment is made by ticket, and a distinction exists between a shine and a polish, the former costing 5 cents and the latter 10 cents.

The Modish Point of View

BELTS ARE A MATTER OF MOMENT when one comes to consider new gowns. "To be or not to be" is the question where the belt is concerned. Shall the new entrant in the wardrobe be fashioned after the close-fitting princesse model that despises the belt, after the Empire design that disdains it, or shall the corsage and skirt method—which features the belt or girdle—which incidentally the very best makers abroad are not only using, but even pushing—be followed, and perhaps a better outline for a none-too-good figure be achieved.

These be questions that every woman among us must decide for herself; and that only after she has critically viewed her proportions, her pose, her carriage—in fact, made a complete study of what the French so expressively term son allure—from every possible angle in a triple mirror. No matter what other piece of furniture be lacking in the boudoir or the dressing-room, the triple mirror should be prominent. There is no more truthful and candid friend than this same, albeit it never takes exactly the same method of informing one of faults and imperfections as doth that other candid friend—of feminine persuasion.

Many a woman who deplores her figure would present a far better appearance if she would but learn to stand after the correct physiological way. In this the shoulders are not thrown back, as she usually fondly imagines—a trick that when she tries it usually results in her "standing so straight that she bends backward"—but it is the chest that is thrust out, the chin held high; then the shoulders naturally fall into position, the abdomen flattens itself, and the balance of body weight falls where it properly belongs, partly on the hips and partly on the feet.

For the woman who has fallen into the slovenly way of holding her body, and who "sits on her spine" when she falls into a rocking chair, thus making the abdomen prominent in front, shortening the waistline at front and sides only to make it seem interminable in the back—this woman must exaggerate the "chest out" position at first. She would better try it in the privacy of her own room at first, well corseted, and simply keep it in mind that the bust is to be thrust forward. It will be a revelation to such to find that the abdomen sinks in of itself, and that there is absolutely no strain whatever upon the small of the back. The chin held high, too, will bring one little wholesome strain upon the muscles of neck and throat; and a double chin—or an understudy, as one witty woman terms her second chin—will soon wear itself away. Where such does not exist, the possibilities of acquiring one are delightfully lessened in holding the chin well up; and the entire body benefits from the better pose.

But to return to the matter of belts and their consideration. It is simply hopeless for the woman whose figure has been allowed to fall from grace to attempt either the princesse or the modes of the First Empire. Those of the Second Empire will prove far more becoming to a faulty figure. The corsage and skirt, united by a ceinture of some sort, is far and away the safest mode for the average woman to follow.

One of the cleverest dressmakers in New York relates a tale of woe in connection with one of her wealthiest clients, a lady who, to judge by appearances, has long passed her first youth. Her figure, at any rate, would seem to prove that she left her green and salad days behind her—and a long way behind, too. However, she would insist upon ordering a copy of an exquisite empire gown by Doeuillet, an embroidered mousseline de sole affair, in which pale blue, maize and lilac were the leading colors. The model plainly indicated a sheath-fitting princesse slip of corn-colored silk beneath, the outer robe of embroidered mousseline taking the empire form.

The matron stood well enough whilst the measurements were being taken, and she seemed to carry well in mind the importance of pose while being fitted. But judge of the dressmaker's horror when she saw her client wearing the gown at a smart evening reception, forgetting all about a correct carriage and marching along with her figure all doubled up like a jackknife, the shoulders sloushed, the chest sunk in, the abdomen thrust forward and the back hollowed in! And that in an empire gown, too! Every trace of modishness had vanished. The erstwhile smart creation of the dressmaker was reduced to a ridiculous caricature, and its wearer seemed to be wearing at a formal function an extraordinarily elaborate bedroom negligee!

AT THE LYCEUM

"The Lion and the Mouse" Should Prove One of the Events of the Season.

What will prove a genuine dramatic treat will be the presentation here, on Tuesday and Wednesday, by Henry B. Harris, of the phenomenally successful play, "The Lion and the Mouse," which is now in the twelfth month of an uninterrupted run at the Lyceum theater, New York, and which has made new records in theatrical annals by being the only play to run through an entire summer season in New York city without a single break.

"The Lion and the Mouse" is from the pen of Charles Klein, the author of "The Music Master."

Mr. Klein has taken as his t heme the political and money interests of the country, pitting them against honesty and social problems. That a sinble man can amass a fortune of a thousand millions during his lifetime is argued in Mr. Klein's play to be impossible if honestly done. John Burkett Ryder, the central character of the play, believes that no one has a right or liberty to interfere in any way with his colossal schemes, and because a judge of the supreme court renders decisions unfavorable to his interests, Ryder removes him from the bench. Tampering with the honesty of a supreme court judge brings forth a complication of circumstances which, as Mr. Klein has woven them, holds the interests of the audience at fever pitch until the last curtain falls.

Mr. Harris has selected an exceptionally fine cast to interpret the roles and the play, which will doubtless prove one of the dramatic events of the season.

"THE UMPIRE."

Football Game Between Chorus Girls Feature of Musical Comedy.

In the second act of "The Umpire," which will be seen at the Lyceum, Monday evening, there is a football game that arouses a storm of enthusiasm in every audience that sees it. Twenty-two young girls line up in complete football armour and engage in a regular contest that is much in earnest as many intercollegiate games. There are runs around the ends, double passes, mass plays on centre, scrimmages, and a half a dozen other gridiron proceedings accomplished as skillfully as if a pennant were at stake, and it occasionally happens that the play becomes so sincere that time has to be called while the bruised halfbacks nurse their injuries.

The perfect illusion of the game is due to the fact that the players were coached by no less authority than Prof. A. A. Stagg, athletic director and football coach of the University of Chicago.

Among the musical numbers in "The Umpire" which are particularly popular are, "You Look Good to Father," "Cross Your Heart," "The Umpire is a Most Unhappy Man," "Let's Take a Trolley," and "The Drums of the Fore and Aft," the latter being a dashing military march, done with great spirit by fifty girls.

MOVING PICTURES.

Selection of Films This Week is Exceptionally Good.

The patrons of the Lyceum theater will witness an unusually fine program of moving pictures tomorrow. As is customary, all subjects shown will be new.

"The Wonderful Rose Tree," a finely colored film, exhibiting the different classes and colors of this beautiful flower, is only one of this selected list. "The Little Watch Seller" is a story picture most dramatic and thrilling, showing in six tableaux this sympathetic story, which appeals to all. The comedy list this week is among the best in this line obtainable.

"The Evil Doers' Sad End," "Annie's Love Story," "The Barber's Revenge," "Fresh Bath," and "Mr. Casey and His Neighbor's Goat," are a few of the many comedy films which go to make up this week's program.

LYCEUM NOTES.

News of Coming Attractions to be Seen in Duluth.

R. W. Priest representing Maude Fealy in "The Illusion of Beatrice," has been in Duluth all week, making arrangements for his star and play to appear at the Lyceum, Oct. 16 and 17. Mr. Priest while here arranged to present 500 Duluth schol girls with copies of Miss Fealy's photograph autographs.

James O'Neill will appear at the Lyceum, Oct. 18, in "The Count of Monte Cristo." John G. Magie is Mr. O'Neill's promoter of publicity, but Mr. Magie has not reached Duluth as yet as he is assisting in the arrangements for Mr. O'Neill's new play, which will hardly be ready for the Duluth engagement. "The Count of Monte Cristo," though old, is standard and Mr. O'Neill's old Duluth friends will be pleased to see him in this play again.

Klaw & Erlanger's company in John Philip Sousa's new military opera, "Free Lance," is coming to the Lyceum, Oct. 19 and 20, with the original cast, production, and the entire show just as it was produced in New York at the beautiful New Amsterdam theater last spring. The cast will include Joseph Crawthorn, Jeanette Lowry, Nellie Bergen and all of the other stars. The "Free Lance" has several new Sousa marches in them usic and the story is really quite ingenuous as it contains a double plot. There is a cast of 100 and a special orchestra.

Florence Gale and Harry Beresford are stars coming to the Lyceum soon.

Robert Edeson in "Strongheart," will make his first appearance in this play at Duluth and Superior the latter part of October. Mr. Edeson is one of America's best actors and with his play "Strongheart" has appeared in many of the high priced theaters of this country. His dates are Superior, Oct. 29, Duluth 30 and 31.

Bertha Gallatin, a rising star, will present at the Lyceum Nov. 1, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." Both the star and the play are new to Duluth though they have been commented upon favorably elsewhere.

Florence Roberts, the Western actress who appeared at the Liberty theater, New York, for four weeks during the past summer, is coming to Duluth for the first time since she became a star, Nov. 2 and 3, and will present here, her new play, "The Strength of the Weak." Gus and Max Rogers in "Rogers Brothers in Ireland," will come to the Duluth Lyceum Nov. 9 and 10. This is the second appearance of the Rogers Brothers at Duluth. They carry a splendid company and give a great entertainment.

The seat sale for Leoncavallo at the Lyceum is already quite large and mail orders are being received from a number of out of town people. The Duluth engagement is Thursday, Nov. 8.

Manager C. A. Marshall of the Lyceum has arranged with the Duluth Y. M. C. A. to present a number of the best known speakers in America at the Lyceum on different Sunday afternoons during the coming winter. The first lecture will be by Dr. H. W. Sears, Oct. 28. Other speakers to follow are President Northrop, S. A. Long, A. W. Hocks, Beauchamp, Coy, George A. Baine, Dr. Roa Gray Dr. Mitchell, Governor Cummins, Maude Ballington Booth, and others. These lectures last season were patronized to the capacity of the Lyceum and undoubtedly they will be very largely attended this year. Shepard's pictures will be presented at the Lyceum every Sunday night during the coming year, and on afternoons when the theater is not used by the Y. M. C. A. for this lecture course, they will also be presented.

FRED MACE,
As "The Umpire" at the Lyceum.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Novelties on Broadway---"The Prince of India"---The Puck of Shakespeare and of Annie Russell---The Straw Man.

New York, Oct. 6.—Three centuries and more before the dramatization of Lew Wallace's "Prince of India" the English stage witnessed the story of "The Turkish Mohamet and Hiren the Fair Greek." "Down, down, dogs!" cried the Ancient Pistol, quoting from the popular drama of George Peele, "Have we not Hiren here!" and the timorous hostess besought him to "aggravate his choler." But though Bully Bottom saw fit in behalf of his audience to aggravate his voice until he roared it as gently as any sucking dove, Pistol was not of his cooing kidney. "Die, men! Die like dogs!" he barked. "Give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren here!" It is in a similar vein that the purveyors of the spectacle at the Broadway interpret their calling. And not only the actors bark, but the scenery. For once the drama has gone to the bow-wows.

This time, however, the bow-wows do not spell demnition. The scenery—the real protagonist in such a production—is for the most part muddy and unillusive, but in sheer acreage it is impressive. The lights are flat and garish, but in some cases it is better to dazzle than to charm. And in the final act, which represents the fall of Constantinople before Mahomet and the union of the Grecian maiden Irene with her Turkish lover, there is a mighty clamor of arms, a breathing of operatic passions. The production lacks both the novelty and the sheer excitement of the dramatization of "Ben-Hur," but it seems likely to achieve no little popular success. We have Hiren here, and there are plenty of those for whom the pins of drama are worth more than its crowns. And so to mettle more attractive.

Never in the memory of the present generation of playgoers has there been a production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" which was, on the whole, more respectful of the text, more illusive as regards its scenic features and more capable in the acting than that with which the new Astor theater lately opened. Never has Puck been rendered with such taste, spirit and imaginative feeling as in the person of Miss Annie Russell, and, by the same token, never has the poetic element in Miss Russell been so potently in evidence.

It has been said that she lacks the dash of sheer deviliry, the spice of demoniac abandon. But since when has Robin Goodfellow, the merry wanderer of the night, been anything but a kindly and a helpful spirit? Puck is a goblin, but not a goblin damned; and it is so that Miss Russell interprets him—as likewise, beyond reasonable doubt, the beardless boy who created the part on the boards of the Globe. Her greatest triumph, in fact, is the manner in which she denotes the light masculine grotesquery of the sprite, at once friendly and impish. It is many centuries since creative artists have returned the gargoyle as a creature of guarded delight; but in this matter, as in many another, Shakespeare was of the middle ages. In Caliban the element of poetry and philosophy, which so charmed Browning, is less obvious than his grotesque appearance. This "monster—a man or a fish * * * he smells like a fish; a very ancient and fishlike smell * * * legged like a man and his fins like arms * * * no fish, but a salamander," might be own brother to the Devil of the Cathedral of Lincoln or to the Demon of Paris. And so Miss Russell's Puck, with his flaring, Mephistophelian eyebrows, his slanting eyes, his jaunty, manlike stride from the heels, at once abrupt and raythmical, his flinging of arms and his scratching of toes, is a creature of the amiably grotesque imagination, in which poetic feeling mingles with delight of the uncouth.

Such defects as there are in the production arise, as it seems, from ignorance. In the invention of business the actors are as reckless as ever. The Athenian lovers play hide and seek among the columns of the audience chambers of Theseus. Bottom and his crew, while casting their play, make mummery with classical masks which countless reference words in the text show to have been undreamed of by Shakespeare and which they do not use in their actual performance. But to many of the obvious demands of Shakespeare's text and stage cerft they pay no heed.

Whatever the comparative merits of the ancient and modern theater, there can be little doubt that in the case of this play certain notable advantages lie with the stage composed of an amphitheatrical platform backed by an alcove with a proscenium. In Titania's scenes the lack of a remote and curtained bower proves an almost fatal handicap. When the back of the stage is occupied by shrubbery, shading into a backdrop painted in perspective, the bower of the fairy queen is of necessity placed forward; and in the present production it has the further disadvantage of being in front of a solid cluster of trees which occupies the center. The rehearsal of the artisan actors and the vociferous distress of the Athenian lovers thus take place in the nearest proximity to the supposedly sleeping queen. Nor is the situation bettered by the fact that Bottom twice offers to sit down on her and is prevented by some occult prohibition—to indicate, as it seems, that she is invisible. Though unseen, Titania can hardly be supposed to be unseeing—and unhearing. For such absurdities in the action the pictorial realism of the modern stage is scant compersation.

Surprising as well as distressing is the fact that there is less dancing than the text plainly calls for. When Titania enters her first words to her train are: "Come, now, a roundell and a fairy song." The commentators have made it sufficiently evident that a roundell was a circular dance accompanied by singing, and the song which presently follows in the text is obviously intended for such accompaniment. The two stanzas were perhaps sung while the fairies stood in a ring about the bower, but the choruses are clearly meant to be attended by a circular dance, with the nodding queen in the center of it. This is attested by, and in turn attests, the fact that the alcove stage was spacious—quite two-thirds as wide as the ordinary run of modern stages.

In the whole range of the first folio there is no more illuminating stage direction than that near the opening of the fourth act—"Musicke Tongs, Rurall Musicke;" yet it is quite disregarded. Titania has just said, "wilt thou hear some music, my sweet love?" The orchestra of the fairies is at the clown's command, and the sound of their voices. But the ass, whose utmost delight is to have his muzzle scratched, has no taste for these. "I have a reasonable good ear in music," he answers, with fatuous and unctuous vanity; "let us have the tongs and the bones."

The bones are the very instrument of delight subsequently exploited by our negro minstrel. What their sister instrument, the tongs, were may be found by following the reference of the commentators to the British Museum. As a dramatist Shakespeare has here given us one of the most exquisitely comic touches in his portrait of the weaver. As a purveyor of musical spectacle he called for a clownish time—perhaps also a clownish dance—in fine contrast with what had preceeded. Could anything be more deliciously fitting than to introduce here a chorus of goblins dancing to the strains of the jewsharp and the clappers? Artistically it would be worth a wilderness of property owls and bats, of electrical flowers, electrical glowworms and interpolated business.

Mrs. Langtry may not be able to open her season in vaudeville in this country next week. Mrs. Langtry is billed as the bright particular star for the opening of the Fifth Avenue theater by the Keith-Proctor management. Her titled father-in-law, Sir Henry DeBathe, is reported to be in a critical condition at his country estate near London, and in the event of his death Mrs. Langtry will hasten back to England, as her husband succeeds to his father's title upon his death.

It was a hazardous experiment for Fred Stone to appear before the public, which had taken to its heart of hearts his straw man, in a new part which reveals his unupholstered face and form. But in "The Red Mill," by the aid of the book of Henry Blossom and the music of Victor Herbert, he has done it not only without disaster bpt with positive triumph. It is a long time since American librettists and composers have given us as evenly admirable as this. The scenery is as rich and quaint as it is beautiful. In the second act, which takes place in the hall of a Dutch burgomaster, the key of color is struck by the Delft til-

THE METROPOLITAN

The Merry Maidens, Headed by Sam Rice, Will be the Burlesque Attraction Next Week.

Headed by Sam Rice, of "Peezy Weezy" fame, the Merry Maidens come to the Metropolitan opera house tomorrow afternoon for an engagement of a week. They arrive early tomorrow from St. Paul, where they have been amusing the patrons of the Star theater. With them are many trunks of costumes and truck loads of scenery which are used in the two productions, "The Heir to the Hoopla" and "A Necktie Party."

"The Hair to the Hoopla" is a good-natured burlesque of Paul Armstrong's famous comedy, "The Heir to the Hoorah," which has not been seen in Duluth yet. "A Necktie Party" is described as a merry gun play. In both of them Sam Rice undertakes the leading comedian roles and he is said to be funnier than he ever was.

The ollo is composed of vaudeville acts given by high-salaried and well known performers. These include the marvelous Ferrell Brothers, in their laughable gymnastic absurdity, "Flips and Flops;" Johnson and Jerge, who write their own parodies and sing them too; Edyth Murray the darling of the gallery gods; Burton and Burton, sketch artists; Patti Carney, vocalist, and Ward and Raynor in an entirely new sketch.

The musical numbers are said to be the latest hits from dear old Broadway, with a few Clark street on the side. The value of them is greatly enhanced in the singing by a large chorus of fair young things, who are different from all other chorus girls.

There will be matinees tomorrow, Tuesday, Thursday (ladies' day), and Saturday.

AT THE BIJOU

Remora and Graceta, European Acrobats, Are Featured in Strong Bill at This Popular Little Theater.

One of the best balanced vaudeville programs that the Bijou theater has had in some time will be seen next week. Demora and Graceta, European acrobats, will be featured with their sensational and daring gymnastic feats, performing tricks never before done by any acrobats. These clever artists are recent comers to this country, having recently made their first appearance at Proctor's New York theater. A pleasing act will be that of Tulsa, "The Girl with the Big Brown Eyes," who does a clever lightning change act. She also knows how to sing, and her act has been a big hit the past week at the Unique theater, Minneapolis, and received great praise by both press and public. An especially good comedy act will be presented by Rentfrow and Jansen, entitled "The Second Mr. Fiddle," which offers an abundance of good clean comedy and clever character acting. Fitzhugh and Bessie Lee will present a new illusion called" A Roman Sybil's Dream," which is said to be very fine. A feature of the illusion is the manner in which Mlle. Lee floats from the stage and is suspended in mid-air. Electric effects are used throughout the tableaux in the act.

Another good feature will be Neola, artistic juggler and balancer, who performs the hardest of tricks with the greatest of ease and grace. Jack O'Toole will render "Someone Looks Good to Someone," the very latest song hit, which will be illustrated with beautiful colored views.

The moving pictures will show "The Subpoena Server," which is one of the funniest chase films ever shown on canvas. Matinees are given daily at 2:45, and evening performances at 8 and 9:30. Seats may be ordered for the evening performances by either 'phone. Special school children's matinee will be given Saturday afternoon and all scholars under fourteen years of age will be admitted for 5 cents. The regular progarm is presented on Sunday afternoon and evening.

ring of wall and fireplace and is carried out in the costumes into a symphony of harmonious blues. There is enough of plot and not too much. The comedy business is fresh and the lines many of them genuinely witty. The songs are sparkling and the music, if not of any signal originality, is in charming good taste.

It is Mr. Stone, however, who, now as always, is the center of delight. In figure and face he is as erect and handsome as his Straw Man was gorgeously unhinged, but he is scarcely amusing. At times he lapses into his old boneless dancing, to the deight of an audience still hungry for his creature of straw. One of his funniest new scenes is that in which, having boasted of linguistic acomplishments which he did not possess, he is obliged to take the post of guide, and explain in seven languages to parties of tourists the legend of the red mill. It is a bit of business worthy of Lou Fields at his best. Later he and Montgomery disguise themselves as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson and give a parody of Mr. Gillette's play, which remains funny even in the shadow of its many predecessors. An actor more fitted by nature to travesty the lanky Sherlock has never come down the pike.

It is when the two appear as a pair of Bowery boys in fistic conflict over their ladies that Mr. Stone is at his best. A more hilarious bit of acrobatic clowning has not been seen since Shivers portrayed in his own person a game of profesional ball. Mr. Stone's rendering of the effects of the blow which knocks him out of time so convulsed the audience that it roared to have the scene again, and was hardly dissuaded by the comedian's pitiful protest in dumb show and his manifest lack of wind.

Clever this actor is in the highest degree, but it is not his cleverness that endears. It is the sheer joy and vitality of his spirits—the rarest gift of the comedian. His face is evidence in itself of the happiness of all living, and every attitude of his extraordinary limbs is an embodied delight. It is much that he is with us again, and more that he has proved himself versatile as he is funny.

Can New York support two houses giving grand opera in the highest style of art? Yes, says Oscar Haummerstein. No, says Herr Conried. The deciding vote will be given by the music loving public of the city and the verdict will be known some months later.

One thing is certain. Between Hammerstein and Conreid New York is to have an opportunity of seeing and hearing the world's greatest artists, and pretty nearly all of them in one season. New York is amply able to and perfectly willing to pay for its amusement and uplifting, and if both impressarios keep their promises and provide the very best the chances are that Mr. Hammerstein's judgment will be vindicated and it will be found that the city wil lsupport two opera houses. The fact that the government subsidies are necessary to support grand opera in European capitols has no bearing on the case. No European city has so large a class of people who are able and willing to pay for what they want as New York. Mr. Hammerstein is pretty nearly right when he says: "New York can and will support anything that she wants. The only question to be considered is one of quality. New York wants the best of everything. Musically it is the most exacting city in the world. It demands and gets the best singers. The European cities are not so particular. In Hamburg I heard a tenor with a lisp, yet the house rose to him. In New York the house would fall on him." Europe stood aghast at the idea of two great opera houses in New York. It had never heard of such a thing and it couldn't understand. The fact that we will have two great opera houses and all the great singers means that New York has become the greatest musical center in the world.

A number of old friends have closed their New York engagements. Chief among them is Warfield in "The Music Master." This play has had the most phenomenal run New York has ever known. There is a note of regret about it all, not only because it is always unpleasant to say good-bye to old friends, but for the more practical reason that the Bijou was crowded at every performance. During the last week thousands were actually turned away, unable to procure seats. Last Saturday evening's performance, which brought Warfield's phenomenal run to its brilliant end, marked also the ending of the twenty-fifth month, his 108th week and his 635th consecutive performance in New York. No star or play, in one engagement, ever has played to so many people or so much money, or has established a record of absolute capacity from the first night to the very last of his engagement.

Another favorite who goes is Fritzi Scheff in "Mlle. Modiste." She wound up her present New York engagement with a week in Harlem. Her run is worthy of special note, though it cannot compare in length or financial results with that of Warfield.

William H. Crane entered Monday night upon the final of the limited run of "The Prince of Money," in the Garrick theater. The character of Joe Troublett, which he presents with much care and elaboration of the various phases and such keen appreciation of its dramatic qualities, is a decidedly attractive one that figures in one of the most beautiful love stories that has been seen on the modern stage. It must be confessed, however, that the play has not caught the popular fancy as it deserved. The modern theater-goer requires "thrills." If they are accompanied by a good play, well and good, but the thrills must be there, regardless of the merits of the play. I understand that Crane and Miss Ellis Jeffrey, who has failed to win the success she has anticipated in "The Dear Unfair Sex," are to join forces.

Henry W. Savage, during his recent trip to Europe, made arrangements for the production of some of his American musical comedies in Paris. "The Yankee Consul" will be the first piece to be tried, and this will be produced at the Folies Marigny early in October. "The Prince of Pilsen" will follow; also "The Sultan of Sulu," which will be played in Paris under the direction of Victor de Cottens.

Richard Mansfield is engaged in rehearsing his company in the New Amsterdam theater. The first play in rehearsal is "Peer Gynt." Miss Adelaide Alexander, for two years leading woman for Ben Greet's Shakespeareau players; Miss Ada Gilman, Miss Alice Warren, Alfred Hudson, Cecil Magnus, Bernard de Santelys and James L. Carhart have been added to the Mansfield list of principal artists. Mr. Mansfield's season begins in Chicago on Oct. 29, when "Peer Gynt" will be given in its entirety for the first time on the English stage.

The newly erected Lincoln Square theater, Sixty-sixth street and Broadway, will be opened on Tuesday, Oct. 30, with Edward Peple's play of Western life, entitled "The Love Route," now running in Chicago. The first theater in New York built under the new exterior city fire laws, it has been declared by the examining officials to be the most substantial theater in the world.

There is a well-organized movement on foot to establish among the members of the theatrical profession a California club. It is estimated that fully 500 prominent actors, managers and playwrights now in New York hail originally from California. The originator of the movement to establish the organization is Edward Stevens, a comedian, who began his career on the coast.

Rev. Tom Dixon wins the first brush in his suit to recover money paid to Paul Potter the dramatist, as advance inducement to collaborate with him in making a dramatization of Dixon's story, "The One Woman." In the trial in New York last week Dixon demonstrated that he had paid Potter $500 to secure his services, but that the latter had not lived up to the terms of his contract. The court ordered that the advanced money be returnde to the preacher.

George Ade is writing a new play for Manager Dillingham which will be called "Artie." The stories that form the basis for this new play were originally published in a Chicago newspaper and attracted early attention to Ade as a humerous writer.

Laura Jean Libbey has formed a partnership with Charles E. Blaney and will work with the latter upon the dramatization of her most popular stories with a view of having them produced by the author-manager. Miss Libbey has furnished indirectly a lot of melodramatic stage material and now gets into the game upon her own resources. It is said that dramatic versions of several of her older successes are well under way, and will be brought out from time to time. As the novels run up into big numbers, the Laura Jean Libbey supply is well nigh inexhaustible.

Mrs. Carter's immediate future has been fixed by her new manager, the suave and resourceful C. B. Dillingham. Her next appearance will be in "Cleo," a new drama from the pen of Edwin Milton Royle. It is said to be a modern story, with scenes laid in this country and France. Fred Latham will stage the new play for Mrs. Carter. It will be her first attempt away from the guiding care of David Belasco, and much interest centers in the new undertaking upon that account.

Louis Mann and Clara Lipman are to add a revival of "All on Account of Eliza" to their present vehicle, "Julia Bonbon," and will alternate the weeks of their tour in the different plays. It is said that Miss Lipman encouraged by her first success in the latter play, has in mind a new musical comedy which she is putting in shape for their use next season.

Anent a recent tragedy in which the stage was linked Clara Morris was approached by a sensational newspaper and urged to write an article under the headlines "The Man at the Stage Door." In refusing, the great emotional actress, whose ability as a writer need no recommendation, replied in the following characteristic manner:

"I never knew but one man at the stage door, and he was a judge. You wouldn't want me to soil his ermine, I am sure. And let me tell you, good Mr. Editor, that the man at the stage door is also the man at the door of the newspaper office, at the door of the stenographer's office, and the department store and the factory. Wherever there is the working woman there is the man at the door. The stage is no worse than any other field of livelihood earning for women. Anywhere, everywhere, on the stage, or at the desk, or at the washtub, it depends upon the woman. No, sir, I will not traduce my profession."

"Brigadier Gerard," the interesting new comedy by Arthur Conan Doyle, author of the immortal "Sherlock Holmes," in which Charles Dillingham is presenting Kyrle Bellew at the Illinois theater, Chicago, for two weeks beginning last Monday night, treats of certain incidents that occurred in that inconceivable Napoleonic past, when France, like an angel of wrath, rose up, splendid and terrible before the cowering continent of Europe. The age was rich in material for romance and setting aside historical work or the biographies of the leaders, there is much evidence written by the actual fighting men themselves, which describes their feelings and their experiences. The imaginary figure of Gerard, which Arthur Conan Doyle has evolved, has already won admirers in those who have perused the author's romance, "The Adventures of Gerard," and although the elements in the comedy are not recorded in the romance, the same delightful atmosphere obtains and the hero is the same brave and debonaire soldier with the same imperturbable self-confidence that admired or disfigured his character. The adventure, which the author has introduced into "Brigadier Gerard," deals with Gerard's mission to Paris in the winter of 1814 to secure for Napoleon certain state documents that were in the archives, and which Talleyrand, who had turned against his old master, and was forming a provisional government, was about to seize. Gerard's self-confidence and egotism landed him into the power of Talleyrand, out of which he is only able to escape by the aid of the Comtesse de Roquelaure, who is equally devoted to the emperor. By Gerard turns up bemusing accident, and forces the emperor to confess that he has failed in his mission only to discover that he has secured the papers without knowing it, and that in spite of himself, he is a skilled diplomat. The series of adventures through which Gerard passes are said to be treated in a comedy spirit and the author has not apparently overlooked the Gascon Hussar's gift of gorgeous, sentimental feeling towards the ladies. The four acts of the comedy are laid respectively at a farm house near Fountainbleau, in the boudoir of the Comtesse de Roquelaure, in the salon of Talleyrand, and in Napoleon's study. The leading lady for Mr. Bellew this season is popular Miss Ida Conquest, and other members of the large company supporting him are Elsie Ferguson, Henry Hardmen, Frank Connor, G. Poulton, Guy Nichols, Edgar MacGregor.

Manager Henry W. Savage gave a "professional dress rehearsal" at the Garden theater, New York, last night of Reginald DeKoven's new romantic opera "The Student King" for the benefit of the members of his different companies that were playing in and near New York. "The Prince of Pilsen" company, headed by Jess Dandy, Pauline Cuzeman, Jeanette Bageard, J. Hayden-Clarendon and sixty others, from the Grand Opera House; "The College Widow" company with Gertrude Quinlan, Evelyn Vaughan, Adeline Dunlap, Louise Forde and the rest from the Montauk theater, Brooklyn; Harry Bulger and "The Man from Now" company from the New Amsterdam; Raymond Hitchcock and his "Galloper" company from Newark, together with the English Grand Opera company now rehearsing "Madam Butterfly" in New York, attended in a body. These professional dress rehearsals constitute a popular feature of the early season work each year with Mr. Savage. The only companies that were unable to be present to hear the talented little German prima donna, Lina Abarbanell and the rest of "The Student King" company, were two "College Widow" companies now on tour and "The Stolen Story" company that is playing in Chicago.

Louis Evan Shipman, the author of the new war-time play, "On Parole," which is now being presented by Edward A. Braden's company in the larger Southern cities, is a well-known writer of plays. Two years ago he wrote "D'Arcy of the Guards" for Henry Miller, which was a great success, and which is to be produced by George Alexander in London during the present season. He also collaborated with Winston Churchill, the brilliant novelist, in writing "The Crisis," which James K. Hackett appeared in for two seasons. Mr. Shipman is a graduate of Harvard university, has a fine home at Cornish, N. H., and besides writing plays, is a contributor to current literature. Only last month he left off stumping that state for his friend Winston Churchill, who was a candidate for Republican governor of New Hampshire, to go to New York and superintend the rehearsals of "On Parole." Churchill's candidacy was started as a joke, but at the Republican state convention, which was held in Concord last week, he came very near being nominated, and much of his gains were due to the assistance Shipman gave his canvass.

Wilton Lackaye has opened a most successful season in his own dramatization of Victor Hugo's great story, "Les Miserables," under the direction of William A. Brady, and is at present playing the largest cities of the Middle West. Mr. Lackaye calls his adaptation "The Law and the Man," and he is said to have made a really remarkable play out of the Hugo fiction. During the season Mr. Lackaye will produce at least two new plays, and is scheduled for a New York run.

The first Ibsen production of the season was made by Wright Lorimer at the Colonial theater, Boston, the play being "The Wild Duck." Mr. Lorimer played Hjalmar Ekdal. "The Wild Duck" is regarded as one of the strongest of the Ibsen plays, and this was its first performance in America. Mr. Lorimer's success in the part was so great that it is the intention of Manager William A. Brady, under whose direction Mr. Lorimer is now presenting "The Shepherd King," to bring him to the Manhattan theater in November for a series of special Thursday matinees.

The success of "The Tourists" at the Majestic, New York, has upset the bookings of the numerous attractions of the Shuberts seeking New York openings. Virginia Harned in Sardou's "The Love Letter," and Lena Ashwell in "The Shulamite," were booked for the Majestic, but "The Tourists" remains indefinitely. Under the new arrangement, Miss Harned in "The Love Letter" appears at the Lyric theater, commencing Monday, Oct. 8, for three weeks, to be followed by Miss Lena Ashwell in "The Shulamite," three weeks later, and for a like period.

Blanche Bates shows, in the way she depicts the joys and sorrows of the heroine in Belasco's remarkable California play, "The Girl of the Golden West," that she has an amazing grasp of the well-springs of human emotion and the intelligence to reflect them with thrilling intensity of purpose or with the lightness of touch of the daintiest ingenue. As an actress who attains effects by legitimate methods, she holds one of the first places on the English-speaking stage. Hence her recent contributions to a symposium of views on the ethical purpose of the drama is of more than passing interest, especially that part of it which defines the scope and limitations which she thinks should be observed in the use of the purely mechanical elements in a play. She wrote:

"Novel combination of effects, dazzling decorations, tricks of the stage, are employed by the truly great dramatist merely as accessories—the means to an end; as the painter, though he is able just as well to express his ideas in charcoal, naturally employs colors. If they are made the first consideration, or the emotions to be exploited are trivial or common-place, the dramatist has mistaken his mission, and the audience will instinctively feel his want of sincerity. The ethical purpose is always apparent in plays produced by genfuses like the late Sir Henry Irving or Mr. Belasco.

She then illustrates her meaning by an adroit analysis of the series of famous Belasco plays, in which she exposed the ethical purpose underlying each work with a skill that would make her an ornament to the critical fraternity in front.

David Belasco wrote his first drama at the age of 14. It was called "Jim Black, or The Regulator's Revenge," and was acted by his boyhood companions, with himself in the leading role. But it is a wide gap that separates "Jim Black" from the artistic spirit of "The Girl of James R. Dee left last night for New York, where he will take in the Vanderbilt races.

WHEN YOU DEED AWAY YOUR AUTO.

Senator Knox, in his picturesque mansion at Valley Forge, was recently asked what he thought of the movement in France toward the simplification of legal French—the simplification of the wording of wills, deeds, mortgages, etc.

"I think that this movement is a wise one," said the senator. "I think that in English, too, many documents would be the better for simplification. Much of our legal phraseology is uselessly prolix and redundant. Why, if you want to deed a man an automobile, instead of writing simply 'I give you this automobile,' it is necessary to write something like this:

. . . ' 'I give you all and singular, my estate and interest, right, title and claim, the advantage of and in that automobile, with all its 60-horse power engines, cylinders, tonneau, tires, cushions, direct drive, sliding-gear transmission, three speeds and reverse and all rights and advantages therein, with full power to drive, speed, race or rent the same automobile, or give the same away, with or without its said engines, cylinders, tires, cushions, sliding-gear transmission, anything heretofore or hereinafter, or in any other deeds, instrument or instruments, of what kind or nature soever to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.' DO YOU KNOW ESPERANTO?

New Language Growing Popular---Its Adoption Urged as the Universal Tongue --- International Congress of Esperantist to Meet at Jamestown.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 6.—Do you know Esperanto?

If not you probably will some day, for it is the instrument with which scientists propose to batter down the barriers of nations, that all men may speak one tongue and be brothers.

It is worth while to give Esperanto serious consideration before it is absolutely forced upon us, for it is no fad, but a practical linguistic structure, erected according to scientific principles and upon the true, fundamental laws of grammar. It must not be counfounded with "Volapuk," which never was practicable, and which passed into a deserved oblivion after a brief existence, as a fad.

Freshmen entering college this fall may find Esperanto included in the curriculum, before they matriculate as seniors, and if this be realized, the language will be taught in the primary grades of the public schools, as is now being done in Switzerland. In American colleges there are already more than fifty Esperanto clubs, made up of students and members of the faculty, while all educational societies and journals are devoting thought and space to it. In Europe hundreds of thousands of people speak, write and read it, and at the Esperanto congress, held at Bolougne-sur-Mer in 1905, 3,000 persons, representing fifteen countries, attended.

Even Japan has taken it up, and its Esperanto association has undertaken a propaganda under the direction of a committee, composed of three editors, professors from the Imperial universities and high schools, and the secretary of the Japan Foreign Trade association, with the result that a grammar in Japanese character is ready for the press.

By special order, the officers of the French army are studying the new language, and it is proposed that every government officer of the French nation, whether of the army, navy, diplomatic service or other branch, shall be able to read, write and speak in Esperanto, as the government sees in it the international medium of official intercourse, which is soon to become universal.

Canada, England, Italy, Spain, Russia, Sweden, Belgium, Roumania, Algeria and India, all have long ago taken up the study, and the most enthusiastic Esperantists are the men who have international business to transact. In Germany trade workers, as lithographers and printers, have adopted the language officially, and it will be used in their congresses and conventions.

In Spain the army has adopted it, and at Valence a regular school is kept for instruction of military officers, while at Geneva, in Switzerland, thousands of the population speak Esperanto, and delight in it.

Bohemia has sent an Esperanto section to the Earl's Court exhibition in London that has attracted great attention in England, and the English press is devoting columns of space to its discussion, and no word is said except in favor of it as the greatest medium yet discovered for the promotion of the world's fraternity.

At this rate we may soon look for an Esperanto literature, for in Geneva they are singing songs and acting dramas in the new tongue, and an Esperanto publication tells its devotees weekly the news of the world and the progress of the language, while Freemasons, Christian Endeavorers and other societies of world-wide scope advocate its study for use in the international congresses and correspondence.

It is therefore, not to be thought of that a great educational exposition like that to be held on the shores of Hampton Roads near the city of Norfolk, Va., in 1907 in celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the settlement of Jamestown should overlook the development and propagation of this wonderful language, and, to the end that Esperanto may be officially introduced to the American people the Department of Congresses and Special Events have invited the Esperantists of the world to meet in international congress at the Jamestown exposition. They will also be invited to make an exhibit and will be given a special day and permission to draw up a program to suit themselves. If the very bands play in strange tongue on that day you'll know its Esperanto.

The study of the creation of Esperanto is extremely interesting. After the failure of Volapuk Dr. Zamenhof, a Russian Savant, took up the study of a universal language, and writing under the name of Esperanto, developed the artificial tongue which has made him famous. He recognized that if a new language was to be made attractive it must be made easy and he first set about constructing a grammar that might be mastered in an hour. He eliminated all rules not absolutely required in the construction of a logical sentence and ignored entirely all exceptions.

His next concern was the vocabulary for it is the great number of roots, the vast variety of words, that puzzles most the student of a foreign language. As a case in point take the expressions we have in English to set forth the ideas suggested by the one conception of death: dead, deadly, to die, mortal, to kill, to murder, suicide, to commit homicide, mortally, etc. Zemenhof rid himself of this great number of roots by selecting one and by means of a system of prefixes and suffixes he made the one root serve for all others. He thus compiled a dictionary of two thousand roots selected from the widest known languages and they are so wisely and judiciously chosen that the Esperanto vocabulary is sufficiently extensive for every purpose and its apearance seems familiar to people of every nationality. The employment of the prefixes, which number only half a dozen and the suffixes, of which there are thirty-two, in conjunction with these roots enables the student to extend his vocabulary to the point that the most delicate shades of meaning may be expressed. It follows, therefore, that Esperanto has the advantage over any other language in the facility with which its construction admits of the forming of new words; and in this lies its greatest charm.

Professor J. L. Borgerhoff, of the Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, in a recent communication in a recent construction of Esperanto to the editor of the Atlanta Constitution explains briefly and lucidly the mechanical working of the device for forming words. He says: "To take the word "death' for example: the key word is "Mort"; remembering that in Esperanto all nouns end in O, all adjectives in A, adverbs in E, infinitives in I, that contraries are formed by prefixing "Mal"; that the prefix "sen" means without; that the suffix "Ant" marks the agent (ocrresponding to the English "Ing", and that the suffix "Ig" means to cause, we get the above root: morto, death; morta, mortal; morti, to die; morte, mortally; mortano, the dying man; mortanta, dying; mortl, to cause death or kill; mortigo, murder; mortiganto, murderer; mortigi, death dealing; malmorta, living; senmorta, immortal; sen morto, immortality, etc.

The conjugation of verbs, which is the great stumbling block in the study of all languages presents no difficulty whatever in Esperanto. In the first place there are no irregular verbs; secondly there is only one ending for each tense; thirdly the number of tenses is reduced to a minimum mainly past, present, future, and conditionally.

The infinitive of all verbs ends in "I"; the present always in "As"; the past always in "Is"; the conditionally always in "Us"; these endings are the same in the singular and the plural.

Professor Borgerhoff pronounces Esperanto the easiest to learn of all languages and says that a student should be able to speak it fluently after two months study. The navy department of the United States has, but recently ordered the study of Esperanto to be placed in the curriculum of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, thus recognizing its value as an adjunct to a thorough naval education.

NAMES TO CONJURE WITH

Remarkable Perpetuation of the Names of Naval Heroes in the U. S. Navy.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 6.—A glance at the pages of the newly issued official list of officers of the United States navy giving the name, rank and present duty of the 3,500 warrant and commissioned officers of the United States navy are still to be found on the active list of this department.

Many of the ships of war that will come to the Jamestown exposition to be held at Hampton Roads near Norfolk, Va., in 1907, will have among their officers men bearing these famous names. Many of the owners of these celebrated patronymics are either direct relatives of the men who first made the names famous or else relatives through colateral descent. Some of the bearers of the famous names are no relation to the men who have made those names famous. Others have gained their chief claims to fame in other military service than that of the United States. It is none the less interesting, however, to notice how many Drakes and Nelsons there are among the officers of Uncle Sam's navy.

The first name which has already been big in public fame to appear on this long roll of honor is that of Ensign W. David Worth Bagley, who is a brother of Worth Bagley, who was killed on the decks of the torpedo boat Winslow while bravely fighting in the harbor of Cardenas, Cuba, during the Spanish-American war. Ensign Bagley is now attached to the gunboat Concord.

A few names below on the list on the naval register is the name of Midshipman Arthur Barney, who bears a name made famous by a gallant American seaman in the war of 1812. There are three Barrys still keeping on the naval list, another name made famous in the same war.

Still farther down the list is the name of Augustine Toutant Beauregard, a relative of the Gen. Beauregard who attained fame on the Confederate side in the Civil war. He is a member of the first class at the naval academy and hails from Texas. The name of Commodore Belknap, who was prominent in the troubles in which the United States was involved for many years along the Asiatic coast is still borne on the rolls of the navy by Reginald R. Belknap, a lieutenant commander, and James L. Belknap, an assistant surgeon.

The name of Commodore Biddle, another hero of the war of 1812, is still carried in the United States navy by William P. Biddle, a colonel in the marine corps, and Clement D. Biddle, a surgeon. Blakely's fame is recalled by Lieut. John R. Y. Blakely, Ensign Charles A. Blakely and Boatswain Frank D. Blakely.

The military fame of the Capron family attained in the Spanish-American war, is recalled by the name of Midshipman Webster A. Capron, who recently resigned from the navy. There are seventeen officers bearing the name Davis, so the naval fame of Davis is reasonably secure. Below the name of Davis appears in alphabetical order the name of Leonard J. De Ryder, which although spelled differently, recalls the gallant Dutch admiral who swept the British from the narrow seas of the British channel. Below his name appears that of one of the most gallant sailors who ever lived. There are four Drakes in the Navy Register. Thus the name of the man the Spanish branded as a pirate, and whom good Queen Bess said was a man after her own heart, is well represented in what Fred T. Jane ranks as the second greatest fighting navy in the world. The name of Fremont, the Pathfinder of the Rockies, is commemorated by that of Commander John C. Fremont, his son, and Lieut. John C. Fremont, Jr., his grandson. That of Commander Foote, famous for his operations along the Mississippi river during the Civil war, is recalled by Percy W. Foote, an Ensign now attached to the cruiser Baltimore.

Paymaster McGill R. Goldsborough's name recalls that of the commodore who was active in the operations of the Federal fleet along the Southern Atlantic coast during the Civil war. The name of Commodore Hull who whipped the British ship Guerrierre in the War of 1812, is recalled by that of Harry F. Hull, an assistant surgeon, and Leroy C. Hull, a gunner. The name of Commodore Lawrence is still recalled by Willis W. Lawrence, a midshipman of the first class at the naval academy.

Esek Hopkins, the first secretary of the United States navy is represented still by William Hopkins, a captain in the marine corps. Sidney S. Lee, a second lieutenant in the United States marine corps, is a grandson of the famous soldier, Robert E. Lee. A son of Gen. Arthur McArthur, Lieut. Arthur J. McArthur, is now attached to the battleship Ohio. Douglas C. MacDougal is a lieutenant in the marine corps. He is a son of that Douglas McDougal, who in 1864 in the covette Wyoming, while looking for the Confederate privateer Shenandoah in the Straits of Shimonoseki, near Japan, whipped single-handed three Japanese steam frigates which had already whipped a Dutch and a French squadron combined.

The Japanese vessels attacked him while the Wyoming was ahore. Nothing daunted, however, McDougal with well directed shots pierced the boiler of the biggest Japanese ship, the Lancefield, which had to draw off. The others, a bark and a brig, were soon obliged to turn tail and run for the shelter of the forts.

Mackenzie's name is still born on the rolls by Rear Admiral Morris R. S. Mackenzie and Allan S. Mackenzie, a chief gunner. The famous name of Manly is found among the M's of the register. Midshipman Mathias E. Manly is now attached to the battleship Kearsarge. There are five Nelsons in the navy but none of the name of Horatio. There are three officers of the name of Morris in the navy. Midshipman Joseph M. O'Brien recalling the famous name and fame of O'Brien resigned from the navy last year. The likewise famous name of Nicholson is also recalled in the persons of Commander Reginald F. Nicholson now attached to the bureau of navigation and Paymaster Rishworth Nicholson now attached to the Mare Island navy yard in California.

The battle of Lake Erie is recalled by the name of Rear Admiral Thomas Perry, retired and pharmacist's Mate Louis Perry, now attached to the receiving ship Wabash at the Boston navy yard.

The most brilliant name on the navy list today is that of Porter. There are three descendants of Captain David Dixon Porter who commanded the frigate Essex in her famous cruise in the Pacific in the war of 1812. David Dixon Porter a great grandson of the Captain Porter of the Essex is now a captain in the marine corps and at present stationed at Annapolis. Carlyle P. Porter a grandson of the first Captain Porter is a retired lieutenant colonel in the United States marine corps. Theodoric Porter, a captain in the navy, is another grandson.

In the person of Walter B. Noa, a lieutenant, the United States navy boasts of having a lineal descendant of the first seafaring man known to history. In the lapse of centuries the letter H has been dropped from the end of his name but that does not impair Lieutenant Noa's value to the marine corps to which he is attached. The name of Preble who commanded the squadron sent to subdue the Barbary pirates is recalled by the name of Frank H. Preble, a chief carpenter.

That of Commodore Rodgers who quelle the Barbary pirates is borne by five U. S. naval officers ranging in rank from Rear Admiral Frederick A. Rodgers down to Ensign John A. Rodgers. There is a Selfridge on the list, in the person of Duncan I. Selridge now attached to the battleship Virginia. Two names below in alphabetical order is the name of John E. Semmes, a second lieutenant in the marine corps. There are five Stewarts in the navy three midshipman and one ensign. Robert E. Thornton, of famous name, is a midshipman in the third class at the naval academy. The laurels of John Paul Jones will be well looked after should there be any fracas in which the U. S. navy is involved for there are no less than seventeen Jones in the list of officers. The laurels of the Smith family are equally well protected for there are forty-seven Smiths among the officers of the navy.

Richard A. Wainwright, Jr., is a son of the man who commanded the Gloucester in the battle of Santiago. The battle between the Merrimac and the Monitor is recalled not only by the appearance of the name Buchanan, who commanded the Merrimac but also the name Warden recalling that of the commander of the Monitor. Until recently there has always been in the navy a representative of the Truxtum and Decatur families.

The Americans need not fear there is any dimunition of the old fighting stock in the navy. There are still plenty of able officers ready and competent to uphold the honor of the flag.

INDIANS GREAT JOKERS.

Not Sullen and Solemn as Novelists Have Depicted.

Kansas City Journal: Said a woman from the land of sage brush and buttes the other day:

"People make a great mistake if they believe the Indian to be a sullen and unhumorous sort of individual, who sits for hours without moving a muscle and who never, never laughs.

"Rubbish! And like so much of the rubbish that is current about the Indian, Fenimore Cooper is responsible for it all.

"Whether the noble red man has changed in temperament during the last fifty or sixty years I do not pretend to know, but the fact remains that the present day Indian in Montana is a good deal of a wag, loving to josh and cracking his jokes with an enjoyment that leaves no doubt as to his sense of humor.

"A few years ago I was engaged to teach school in a tiny village in Southern Montana. The schoolhouse, a little one storied log shack with a mud roof out of which grew weeds and grass, stood on the edge of the prairie, about half a mile from what we called the town, and something less than five miles from a large Indian reservation.

"It was lonely at best, even when the children—I had only twenty in the winter—were playing in the schoolyard. One day what was my surprise to see a young Indian, clad in a bright red blanket, with eagle feathers on his head and a string of buffalo teeth around his neck, standing outside one of the little square windows, staring in at me with all his eyes.

"He could not have been over eighteen. I was old enough to be his mother.

"I was sharpening lead pencils at the moment. After he had watched me for a couple of minutes, an amused expression on his bronzed face, he turned to a youngster who was playing near.

" 'How many pony?' he asked, with a grin, motioning toward me.

"The lad doubled up with mirth at the idea of selling teacher for an Indian squaw, but managed to straighten his face long enough to reply:

" 'Seven.'

" 'All right,' responded the Indian, winking. 'I go fetch 'em.'

"And he jumped on his pony and cantered off, apparently post haste for the seven ponies.

Of course, he never came back. Teacher remained an unclaimed bargain on the hands of her pupils till a call came to go to the North Yakima reservation. But the Indian had his little joke all the same.

"At that time the North Yakima reservation was policed by Indians. One day a couple of Indian policemen arrested two Irish tramps, it being a criminal offense in those days for an outsider to enter the reservation except on business.

"The Irishmen were terribly scared. Visions of scalpings and slow roastings over beds of redhot coals jostled one another in their horrified brains and their trepidation increased when they were brought by their captors into the presence of a cruel looking old chief, who sat rigged out in all his bravery, before a blazing fire in his tepee.

"They expected nothing less than to be scalped and eaten then and there, when the old Indian, fixing them with his glittering eyes, grunted out:

" 'Huh! Make good Irish stew!'

"And that was the worst punishment that befell the guilty pair.

"A year or two ago I happened to be at Knowlton, Mont., on my way to Ekalaka, about 600 miles to the south, when I learned that there was a pilgrim, as they call all strangers from the East, who wanted to go to Ekalaka, too. That was before the stage line was started.

"He was afoot, and having trudged all the way from Miles City, a distance of thirty or forty miles, was weary and lame. But the poor fellow did not know the way to Ekalaka and I did; so after the friendly Western fashion which will not leave a white man in distress I told him we would go along together.

"I knew the ranches all along the way, and I planned to stay the first night with some friends who lived about twenty-two miles east of Knowlton. My companion, who said his name was Rafferty, could find accommodations in their bunkhouse, I was sure.

"Well, three hours out of Knowlton it came on a pelting rain. Going at a foot pace, as we were, Mr. Rafferty riding my broncho sometimes while I walked and I riding sometimes while he walked, we were soon drenched to the skin. The gumbo, too, was beginning to make traveling a very sticky and slippery business when unexpectedly we came upon an Indian tepee, with a buck, a squaw and three or four children crouched over a handful of smoking embers inside.

"I told my companion I was going to remain there for the night. He objected strenuously. I think he was afraid for his scalp, but I told him I should not stir another step, and at last, with an ill grace, he entered the tepee.

"The buck eyed us gravely as I explained in Indian how we had been caught in the deluge. Then Rafferty, plucking up his courage, remarked to the Indian, with an affection of careless ease:

" 'Very wet, John.'

" 'Very wet, John,' returned the Indian, without stirring an eyelash.

"Early the next morning, having slept soundly all night, wrapped up in a blanket in the Indian's little smoke tepee, in company with my host and hostess, their four children with my two dogs and my pilgrim, I was standing beside my broncho, refolding my saddle blanket, when up comes Mr. Indian.

"Motioning with his thumb over his shoulder toward Rafferty, who was scraping the gumbo off his cowhides, he asked, in a stage whisper, winking with a delightfully funny air:

" 'Where you pick up that 'Very Wet?'

" 'I have found the Indian sociable when in congenial company, and quick not only to catch the point of others' jokes, but to make jokes himself. If he seems slow and stupid it is the white man's fault."

COON HUNTING.

Lippincott's: The officers of the English squadron prepared for their recent visit to this country by an exhaustive study of so-called American slang, that they might enjoy that "delightful American humor" over which the English have recently become so enthusiastic.

During their stay at Annapolis, a coon hunt was arranged for their benefit, the officer in charge explaining to them that it was a sport highly thought of and native to the Southern states.

As they rode along, one of the Englishmen remarked: "You hunt these coons with dogs, I think?"

His host assented and the Englishman continued: "They are found in the woods and are often caught in trees, aren't they?"

"They are," replied the American, "but how do you come to know so much about coon hunting?".

"Oh," said the visitor, with an air of conscious pride, "I've read 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' you know, and all those articles that have come out in the papers lately, but to tell the truth, I didn't think it was allowed by the authorities no matter what the nigger had done."

CRITICISED THE QUEEN.

The queen of Roumania, better known as "Carmen Sylvia," has many gifts. In addition to being a writer she is a musician and in her youth was something of a singer. Of this last gift an amusing story is told. Praised by flattering courtiers, her majesty almost thought herself a second Patti, says the Kansas City Journal. But she is nothing if not practical, and she therefore visited, in strict incognita, a celebrated singing master. He listened gravely to his visitor's rendering of a test song, and then said: "You have, madame, no voice at all, though much musical feeling. I could train you for the operetta, but to be candid, you haven't a face worth anything." Her majesty is said to have been naturally disappointed, but too kind hearted to disclose her identity; and it was only after some little while that the over-frank maestro learned that he had been unwittingly guilty of lese majeste.

TOOTHPICK CACTUS.

Mexico has a cactus which grows toothpicks; another, ribbed and thickly set with toothpick spines, which furnishes the natives with combs; there is another cactus, the long curved spines of which resemble fishhooks; there is another which is an almost perfect imitation of the sea urchin; still another resembles a porcupine; there is another covered with long red hair whien is nicknamed the "redheaded cactus."

Sometimes it may be as important to one man to find a quick purchaser for a second-hand desk as it is for another man to find a purchaser for a carload of perishable freight. In either case it usually happens that a Herald want ad. is "the best broker."

THE UNIQUE INSPECTION SYSTEM OF DENMARK

"What We Have Lost Abroad We Must Win at Home," the Motto Adopted by Late King Christian and People After Disastrous War With Prussia--Gradual Growth of Excellence in Products Under Its Influence--Severe Penalties for Infraction of Rules---System in Inspection---Building a Port for Accommodation of Butter Trade---Meat Inspection Established Last Year.

By DEXTER MARSHALL.

(Copyright, 1906, by Dexter Marshall.)

Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 6.—"What we have lost abroad we must win at home."

With this epigram the late King Christian, then a young man, saddened but not discouraged by defeat in the conflict with Prussia, which had taken away from Denmark the provinces of Schleswig and Holstein, philosophically summed up the situation and tersely pointed out their duty to his adopted people.

Nobody knows who originated the saying. Certainly it was not the king. But no matter who first uttered it, both he and the Danish nation unhesitatingly adopted it for their motto. Impoverished in purse and sore in spirit, they might easily have gone from bad to worse, but with their new motto ever in mind, and with the aid of their natural buoyancy and ability to smile and begin over again after a terrific knockdown blow, they set about the task of rehabilitating themselves without further ado.

Today, while they cannot boast of multi-millionaires by the score, while their army is only a handful of uniformed men and their war vessels make only a tiny fleet, the Danes are one of the happiest, most lighthearted, most evenly prosperous people in the whole world. In proportion to population, their agricultural exports are larger than those of any other nation, the total amounting to $84,000,000 annually.

Translated, these figures are highly significant. Denmark's population is only 2,500,000 in round numbers; not more than 750,000 in excess of Chicago's, only a little more than half that of the Greater New York, and not greatly in excess of a third of the Greater London's. For every man, woman and child Denmark annually exports agricultural products worth nearly $36. She makes other exports worth $6,000,000 a year, the grand total being $90,000,000, so that her gross per capita exports are $36 a year.

The exports from the United States in 1905 amounted to $1,491,744,641; an enormous total, but far below Denmark's per capita, being under $17 or a dollar less than half as much.

How Denmark has reached this high commercial level is of special interest to the people of the United States and their government at this time.

The vast differences existing between Denmark and the United States, the latter having a population more than thirty fold as large as the former, are too obvious to need recounting, but they are similar in one noteworthy respect. Both depend largely upon agriculture for their foreign trade. Denmark almost exclusively. Each is able to produce much more food than it needs and each needs a steady market for its surplus in order to be prosperous. To get its market, each must have the confidence of the food-buying nations.

Denmark took the first decisive steps to secure this confidence in 1888, twenty-three years after the close of the war with Prussia, when the government began to guarantee the quality of the butter produced upon the Danish farms. Eighteen years later, the United States is now preparing to do the same thing for the products of the great packing houses at Chicago and elsewhere.

Denmark's Inspection Methods.

While the guarantee of America's surplus food products will be an immensely greater task than Denmark's in the same line, the difference is due only to the fact that our products are vastly greater in quantity than Denmark's. This may require some radical variation in details of inspection, but the end to be reached is exactly similar in both cases. How Denmark manages her inspection has just been related to me by Rudolf Schou of this city, counselor to the Danish minister of agriculture, Ole Hansen.

Mr. Schou is also president of the Danish Export association. By virtue of his position he is the government chief of practically all the Danish inspection of export products; the present personal head and front of the entire scheme of the Danish government's guarantee that has been of such immense value to the people of the little country. What he says, therefore, carries the weight of authority.

"Denmark's chief inspected exports," said Mr. Schou, "are butter, bacon and beef in that order. Eggs are sent out of the country in great quantities also, and many Danish horses are likewise exported, mainly to Germany, where they are in great demand as draught animals. The horses are not inspected, the German buyers, like David Harum, being amply able to take care of themselves. As nature has placed certain eggshell's contents without rendering the egg unsuitable for export, Danish eggs are not inspected either.

"At the present time Denmark's butter exports amount to 176,00,000 pounds a year, the value expressed in figures being $42,000,000, almost half the total, or between $17 and $18 per capita. The exports of bacon are worth $23,000,000 yearly, or a little less than $10 per capita; of eggs, $7,000,000; of horses, $6,000,000, and of beef, $4,000,000. Malt barley leads in the remaining $6,000,000 of exports.

Since the butter exports are larger than any others," said Mr. Schou, "the inspection of the milk and the cream from which it is made, and of the butter itself, just before it is sent abroad, demands the attention of many more persons than are required to look after the pork products and the beef.

"The milk and cream inspection is placed in the hands of the police and the local sanitary authorities. It is their duty to see that the cows are housed in clean and sanitary quarters, and that all butter intended for export is made from cream that has been pasteurized or sterilized by subjection to a temperature of 55 deg. centigrade; that no preservative (such as boric acid) except common salt, is used; that there is no admixture of margarine, etc.

"In each commune there is an official corresponding in some ways to the coroner in an American city or town. He has no judicial power, but he conducts inquiries before the courts. He is often a peasant farmer, and so jealous of the strenuously won reputation of Denmark's butter that he may be relied upon invariably to carry out the law to the limit.

"Obvious violations of the rules as to sanitation may be detected by the police on visiting the creameries and farms, of course; they are rare, because of the ease with which they may be found out. Failure to sterilize the cream before making it into butter is another matter. It can be detected by chemical analyses only, and for this purpose samples must be taken. They are regularly obtained from all the creameries. Infraction of the rules in any of these things is punishable by a fine of from 10 to 200 kroner, or $2.80 to $56. Repeated violations may be punished by heavier fines, even by imprisonment.

"The regulations are more severe regarding the adulteration of butter with margarine. That is not because we in Denmark believe there is anything intrinsically injurious in margarine. In fact, we know there is not. It is eaten by thousands of Danes every day of their lives, especially by the farmers, because it is cheaper than butter. In fact, its use by the peasants is one of their chief economies.

"But our entire scheme of government inspection and guarantee was organized and has been perfected in order that the products shall be sold for exactly what they are, not only when exported, but to the buyers here in Denmark, and, consequently, we take every possible precaution.

"For instance, while butter is packed in small round barrels holding about 110 pounds each, margarine must be packed in oval barrels. It must be of lighter color than butter. Each package must bear a label telling just how large a percentage of butter fat is incorporated into the contests, which must not exceed 15. A placard stating that margarine is sold must be displayed conspicuously in every shop where it is dealt in. Each purchase of margarine must be wrapped in oiled paper, on which the word 'Margarine' is printed in large blue letters.

"The penalty for the first violation of the margarine regulations is a fine of 50 kroner only, but for the second offense the offender must be sent to prison. The judge, who is also the chief of police, has practically no alternative; he may neither commute nor suspend sentence, unless it can be shown that the violation occurred through error or ignorance. The term of imprisonment under the margarine law may be from three months up, but in addition the offender must be prosecuted under the ordinary criminal law for selling godds which are not as represented, the penalty being fifteen months' additional punishment; so that the least possible punishment for selling margarine as butter is eighteen months.

"Furthermore, the offender's name must be published in the newspapers, and this part of the penalty is dreaded almost as much as the imprisonment, since its subjects the offender to general derision and dislike. The use of too much butter fat in margarine is also punishable by severe penalties, and so is the use of too high color. To help the margarine makers in the matter of color the Government furnishes color cards carefully prepared by hand, the inspectors being furnished with similar cards to use in their work.

"A new regulation goes into effect October 1, which makes it unlawful to transfer either butter or margarine from the original package, or to offer it for sale in any other way than from the barrel in which it is first put up. The penalty for violating this regulation may be a fine of from 100 to 500 kroner.

"The final inspection of butter for export is mostly done at Copenhagen and Esbjerg, though there are also exports from Odense and Aahaus. Six men, three inspectors and three assistants, are required. Violations are now very few, and have been for years.

How Inspection Was Introduced.

"There are now 1,314 dairies and creameries in Denmark. Some of them are known as 'Herre-Gaarde' or gentlemen's farms, and they are exactly what the name indicates—large estates owned by men of title or position. The others are practically all co-operative establishments.

"Co-operative butter making in Denmark was brought about," said Mr. Schou, "when the centrifugal separator, now in use in first-class dairies the world over, was introduced. A farmer on a small scale could not afford to own a separator, so he would combine with several of his neighbors and buy one. This led to co-operative creameries, run much as the creameries in the United States are carried on, and the gradual abolition of the churn and other old-fashioned methods in butter making.'

Before the adoption by King Christian and his people of the national motto, what is now the principal Danish industry was in an exceedingly primitive state. The milk was kept in earthen pans, often set on shelves close under the ceiling of the family living room, which might be tenanted also by various domestic animals, pigs, chickens, etc.

Even then a surplus of butter was produced and exported. Owing to its uneven quality, however, much of it being away below first grade, prices were uncertain, and the returns received by many farmers were very unsatisfactory.

Mr. Schou gave a rapid account of the gradual introduction of sanitary methods: of apparatus for cooling the cream by the use of running water—as it was used by our own farmer grandfathers, who sought always to locate the dairy where a 'spring house" could be a feature—and, later with ice; of the gradual development of the present methods of packing; of the sale of the butter, etc: Before this evolutionary period began, there were many more horses than cows in Denmark, and a much larger acreage than now was devoted to the raising of grain. From its beginning to the present, the energies of the entire nation, from the King and the government down, seem to have been devoted to the task of "winning at home what had been lost abroad."

Prof. Johannes Fjord, a commonsense scientist, who, in 1874, developed the use of ice in butter making, is today counted among the important benefactors of the people. So is Theodore R. Segelcke, whose efforts led to the use of the thermometer in order that the proper temperature might be maintained in all the stages of butter making. Segelcke was instrumental also in the introduction of methodical records, and memoranda regarding the butter product obtained from a given quantity of milk, the breeds of cattle from which the best results were obtained, etc.

It was Segelcke's personal initiative that brought about the government inspection of butter and the government's guarantee of its quality. So grateful are the Danes to Prof. Fjord that they have erected in Copenhagen a statue of him which stands in front of the Veterinary Training school, a mute witness to the regard in which his work is held by his countrymen.

Denmark's Meat Inspection.

Denmark's efforts to rejuvenate herself from within were not confined to a re-organization of her dairy industries. Close and intelligent attention was also given to the development of the meat industries.

There was a fair demand for Denmark's hogs in the old days from Germany, the hogs being sent to Hamburg, where they were slaughtered, and the product sent to England under the name of Hamburg hams and bacon. Then came the exclusion from Germany of Danish pigs, exactly as American meats of all kinds have been shut out, and on similar allegations that the bacon made from them was unfit.

This led a number of Hamburg slaughtering concerns to remove to Denmark. It also led to the establishment of co-operate abattoirs in this country, exactly as co-operative dairies have been established.

Likewise it led to the transformation of the Danish pig. Originally he was a dark colored, big boned, hardy animal, running to leanness, especially in the islands, of which there are hundreds, Seelam, on which Copenhagen is situated, being the largest. The hog of Jutland, Denmark's part of the continent, is somewhat smaller of bone and more inclined to make fat. As the chief market to be sought was England, hogs of various English breeds were imported, particularly from Yorkshire. Today the Denmark hog has smaller bones, fattens more rapidly, and makes meat of a better flavor, while retaining much of the hardiness that was its chief old-time characteristic.

From time to time the German restrictions were modified so that the Danish export market underwent various changes, but today England takes most of the bacon made here, as it does the greater bulk of the Danish butter. The percentage of the latter sold in England and Scotland, by the way, is 88; of the bacon, more than 90.

As with the butter, so with the bacon. The Danish government found it necessary to guarantee the quality, and in order to do that a carefully worked out system of inspection has been established.

Meat inspection did not come, however, until years after the inspection of butter. Power to inspect fresh and "green salted" meats was given in 1893, but not carried out till 1897. Power to inspect bacon was granted in 1903, but not carried out till a little more than a year ago. The extension of the inspection system to Danish meat products was due to the efforts of L. Wulff, permanent secretary to the minister of agriculture. The inspection of the slaughter houses, where cattle and sheep as well as pigs are killed, is done by a staff of trained veterinarians, seventy-two in number, forty-nine being of the first grade and twenty-three of the second or assistant grade. There are besides two inspectors of the veterinarians, who travel about "checking up" the work of the latter.

These report to and are under the immediate control and supervision of Prof. Bernhard Bang, chief of the veterinarians, who is celebrated throughout Europe for the success with which he has been able to combat tuberculosis in hogs and cattle.

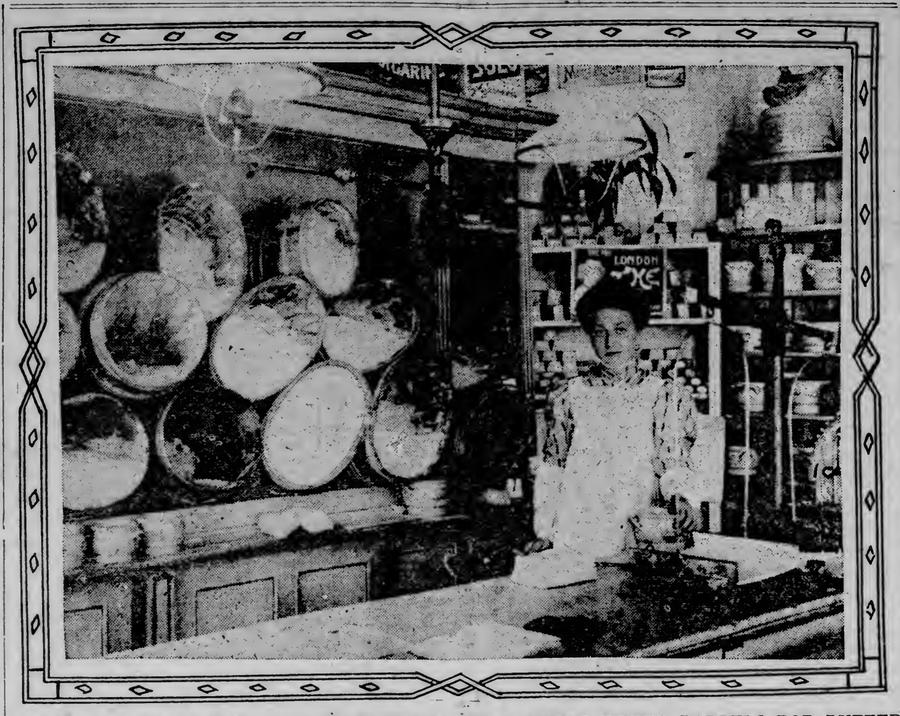

The regulations under which the corps of veterinarians work are rigid and the stamping of the various grades of meat, whether for home or foreign consumption, is obligatory. Those who break the regulations are dealt with by the courts on complaint of the veterinarians, and the penalities are strictly enforced.

It should not be understood that the evolution of Danish inspection, either of dairy or meat products, has been accomplished without some creaking of the wheels, nor that the government has borne all of the expense. Much, both in directing the movement and financing it, has been due to the Royal Agricultural society, to various national bodies, such as the Agricultural committee, and to many local organizations. The amount of money annally spent by the government in the various schemes for making the motto first formulated by King Christian an accomplished fact is 150,000 kroner (about $40,000).

altogether of the system in its entirety

There are those who do not approve and at times there have been serious differences in the Cabinet as to the best policy to pursue, but as a whole the people are more than satisfied. Today the Ministry of Agriculture is one of the busiest, most important of the various governmental departments. Its work does not compare in magnitude with that of the agricultural department in Washington certainly, but it has seventeen distinct lines of activity, including a "Konsular" of Agricultural Chemistry, one devoted to the diseases of plants, offices in London and Hamburg, and so on.

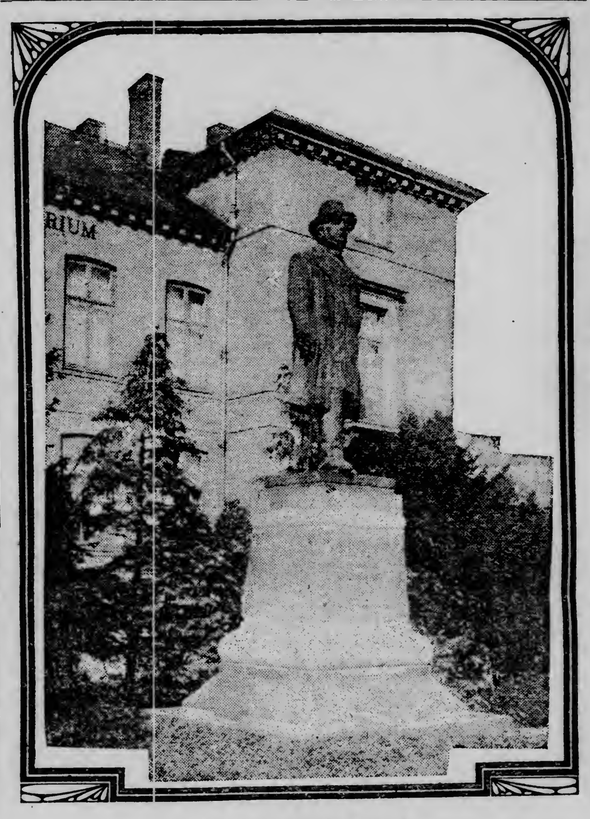

There are also various committees and commissions, and since the movement began there have been established in every county annual exhibitions somewhat resembling the county fairs we all know about in the United States. Perhaps they more nearly resemble the English cattle shows; at all events they are known as "dyrskuer" or "deershows." The exhibits do not include specimens of cooking, needlework, worsted, knitting, water color drawings, "God bless our home" mottoes, horse racing, nor a thousand other features of the American county fair that might be mentioned.

In place of the horse races there are exhibitions of draft horses and their best performances, and instead of exhibits showing the product of individual cows there are exhibits showing how much butter fat may be produced from given quantities of cream, etc. Premiums are given as at American county fairs. Agricultural implements and machinery are shown, also, but solely as "permitted" for advertising purposes, no premiums being granted.

The new King is as interested in the development of the country's resources as his father was before him, and often visits the dairies and the "deershows" he also makes occasional personal inspection of the slaughtering and packing houses. Denmark has learned the lesson of cleanliness so well that these are very generally in good condition. It is unnecessary to state that they always are when the king is expected.

The Butter Port of Esbjerg.

Denmark has done many things to help her farmers besides inspecting and guaranteeing her products. Finding that the trip to England from Copenhagen, which is away to the aest, was too long, the government has created the port of Esbjerg on the western coast of Jutland, thereby reducing the time consumed in transportation many hours. Esbjerg is not a vast port, like Hamburg or Antwerp, but it serves its purpose admirably, putter deliveries in England now being possible in almost a day's less time than formerly. There are now butter steamer sailings five times a week from Esbjerg; daily sailings will begin in the near future. The port is also extensively utilized as a fishing harbor.

I have spoken of the habit the farmers have of using margarine instead of butter and of shipping the latter to England because of the saving they can make that way. This practice is general, not only in the rural districts, but also in the cities among the working people. The Danish farmers also economize by eating American bacon and selling their own for export. So high is the reputation enjoyed by Danish bacon in England that it commands a better price there even than much of the English bacon. I am assured by Mr. Schou that in substituting bacon from the United States for the native product for their own eating, the farmers are able to save at least 20 per cent, and perhaps more. It is also with eggs, many of the Danish farmers selling their entire production for export and importing eggs from Russia to eat themselves.

I have already explained the lack of inspection of Danish eggs, but, profiting by their experience with butter, the farmers here have got into the habit of looking out for the main chance with amazing cleverness. England wants its eggs very white. The eggs of Spanish fowls are whiter than any others, consequently the canny Dane raises practically no other poultry, and, knowing that to ship eggs abroad would ruin his trade, he is very careful to make his shipments daily. The frequent sailing of the butter steamers and their short passage to England insures the delivery of the eggs there inside of two or three days after they are gathered, warm, from the nests.

It hardly need be said that the extension of the inspection idea has met with opposition at practically every step. With regard to margarine, however, the opposition did not come from tht manfacturers, as it always has in America, but from the farmers. They wanted the production of margraine prohibited altogether, but, now that the demand is so great for their butter, and they can use the margarine at the big saving mentioned above, they agree with everybody else that the margarine inspection has been a good thing. The recent adoption of the plan to inspect bacon leaves little to be inspected in the way of Denmark's agricultural products, though if the farmers should ultimately go extensively into chicken raising for the foreign market, the inspection of poultry will undoubtedly be introduced.

Notwithstanding the intense practical nature of the modern Dane as shown by his methods in pushing his foreign trade, he is at heart a sentimentalist. This isevidenced by the fact that accurate representations of the "Lur," a musical horn used in Denmark before the dawn of history, are stamped on every package containing Danish butter or bacon put up for the export market. The only specimens of the "Lur" in existence were dug up some years ago and are now carefully preserved in the Royal Museum.

THE LATEST BOOKS AND MAGAZINES

"Listener's Lure," by E. V. Lucas—"Every Man a King," by O. S. Marden—"The Rainy Day Railroad War," by Holman F. Day—"Breezy," by J. George Fredrick.

In "Listener's Lure" the author, E. V. Lucas, has made letters and telegrams his means of telling his story, and until you read it you will not realize what an incredible amount of character portraiture, of delicate touches of personality, and of finer humor, can be expressed in that manner. It is a love story, with a plot not very complicated but full of interest, and it is admirably and entertainingly told. In some of the letters there is a charming vein of quaint philosophy, in others there is a vein of real humor, and others are made to furnish some travel sketches that are exceedingly diverting. The book is published by the Macmillan company, New York, at $1.50.

"Every Man a King; or, Might in Mind-Mastery," by Orison Sweet Marden, editor of Success Magazzine, is a book that ought to be in the hands of every young man—or young woman, for that matter—and of everybody not too old to have lost all ambition and energy. Dr. Marden's practical advice on success in life, in pointed paragraphs and meaty editorials, are familiar to most readers, through frequent quotation by newspapers. The book is a powerful plea for the mastery of self and the training of latent forces to the highest ends. Chapter headings that will give an idea of the purpose and analysis of this book are as follows: "How Mind Rules the Body," "Thought Causes Health and Disease," "Mastering Our Moods," and "The Power of Cheerful Thinking." It must not be judged from these titles that it is a "crank" production. It is eminently sane and eminently sensible. It is practical, useful and entertaining. It is published by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., New York, at $1.

"The Rainy Day Railroad War," by Holman F. Day, is a stirring story of the way in which a trusted young civil engineer overcame the bitter opposition that met his efforts to build a short line of railroad in the pine woods. It is full of incident, and the young hero does not lack for excitement during the progress of his work. While not necessarily a boy's story, it is a book that boys will like, and that will do them good rather than harm to read. It is published by A. S. Barnes & Co., 11-15 East Twenty-fourth street, New York, at $1.

"Breezy," by J. George Frederick, is one of McClure, Phillips & Co.'s "Little Comic Masterpieces," and it is worthy of a place in that diverting series. It is a short story of a young man so full of nervous energy that he turned the grocery store in which he found employment upside down and shocked his staid superiors with his revolutionary ideas. Results, however, he attained in a striking manner, and his push carried him far. It is an entertaining little volume, good for half an hour's pleasant reading. It is published by McClure, Phillips & Co., New York, at 50 cents.

"All the Year in the Garden," compiled by Esther Matson, is a dainty rosary of pretty thoughts from the poets, one for each day in the year, breathing the spirit of outdoors in musical numbers. It is a year-book with a happy outdoor thought devoted to each day, the total result being a series of refreshing pages packed with enough sweet air to lighten the mustiest city apartment. The poets of old and the poets of today are drawn upon, and every lover of nature and every admirer of fine thoughts daintily expressed will find delight in the volume, which is done in special decorative type, with a number of full-page illustrations. It is especially adapted for gift purposes. The book is published by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., New York, at $1.

"The Pitfalls of Speculation," by Thomas Gibson, is published by the Moody corporation, New York; price, postpaid, $1.10. The keynote of Mr. Gibson's little but important work may be held to be struck in the foreword which faces his opening chapter: "So great are the opportunities offered by speculative changes, that, with proper methods and self-control, the poor man cannot afford to overlook them." While the public attitude toward speculation is undeniably hostile there has been a modification of harsh judgment of late, for a more general knowledge of such matters has spread, and as it has come gradually to be understood that speculation is not only a safe but a legitimate business when business methods are applied to it. And it is in fulfilment of a duty to the public that Mr. Gibson has set down in order certain facts which will lead to a correct line of thinking, and has pointed out the reasons for the failure of 80 per cent of the speculators as well as the methods by which the minority have succeeded.

The book deals entirely with marginal speculation, a subject on which our stock of authoritative literature is meager. The late Charles H. Dow, the founder of the Wall Street Journal, was a pioneer along several lines of financial writing, and was one of the first to write of market matters from the position of the speculator of moderate means. His were newspaper articles, however, and not intended for book publication. Since Mr. Dow's time no writer had appeared to handle the subject of marginal speculation with anything approaching the knowledge of the subject, the breadth of view and the hard-headed, common-sense treatment that Mr. Gibson devotes to it.

"The Italian in America," by Elliot Lord, special agent of the United States census; John J. D. Trenor, chairman of the immigration committee of the National Board of Trade, and O. S. Barrows, secretary of the Prison Association of New York, is a book designed to prove the value of the Italian immigrants to this land of their adoption. It makes a splendid showing for them, too, and should go a long way toward dissipating the prejudice that undoubtedly exists against them in certain quarters. It shows that they have contributed much toward the development and civilization of this country, and explains away many of the senseless prejudices that have grown up regarding them. It is published by B. F. Buck & Co., 109 Fifth avenue, New York.

The Wagner drama of "Tannhauser" has been retold in English verse by Oliver Huckel. The many readers of Mr. Huckel's poetic paraphrases of "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin" will anticipate this companion Wagner book with pleasure. It is printed and bound in the same artistic style of its predecessors; while the literary quality of the poem itself easily sustains the author's reputation. When "Parsifal" appeared, critics were agreed that this was the first genuinely poetic version to be published in America. "Lohengrin," son of "Parsifal," was naturally a fitting successor; while there is much in the "Tannhauser" story which suggests the first of the trilogy.

The revolt of this errant knight from the powers of evil; his second downfall; the devotion of Elizabeth; and the final redemption, unite to form one of the noblest spiritual dramas in any language, and to give complete demonstration of Wagner's masterly powers as a dramatic poet. Aside from the musical interest of this play, therefore, "Tannhauser" is worthy a place in every well-chosen literary; and the present English poetic version is the first to fill the need adequately. Published by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., New York, at $1.50.

A story with a mystery in it, a mystery that keeps you guessing all the time, and that does not unfold itself until the proper time, and that time well along after the unread leaves are getting thin, is the kind of a story you want to take your mind off your troubles, and to keep your interest alive through a few hours of steady reading. Such a story is "Blindfolded," by Earle Ashley Walcott. It is a story of mystery pure and simple, with a plot not too complicated to be wearying, and yet involved enough to pleasantly stimulate your interest. In short, it is a mighty readable yarn. It is illustrated acceptably by Alice Barber Stephens, and it is published by the Bobbs-Merrill company, Indianapolis.

James Clarence Harvey, author of "In Bohemia," has written a bright, catchy little volume of toasts and bons mots, "Over the Nuts and Wine," which will be published during the month by H. M. Caldwell company of Boston. Unlike most of the toast books of the day, the matter is entirely original, and no better author could have been procured than Mr. Harvey, one of the best known of our cosmopolitan after-dinner speakers. Typographically, the book is most attractive with its dainty border designs in light green. The volume is bound in the shape of a bucket, showing the top of a bottle protruding from the ice, and there is enough bright, sparkling wit inside the covers to warrant the use of the champagne bottle represented in the cooler.

The cloth volume commends itself especially to teachers and students, while the finer binding makes an excellent little gift or souvenir for a special occasion.

The October number of Ainslee's completely justifies its claim to be "the magazine that entertains," and it is the only periodical that does so. The novelette is a very original story, though it deals with a familiar theme, New York society, under the title of "A Maid and Her Money;" it is by Alice Duer Miller. May Sinclair's remarkable story, "Audrey Craven," which has been running serially in Ainslee's, is concluded with a dramatic and unexpected climax. W. A. Fraser's notable series of racing stories is also concluded with "A Race Card." A very charming child story for grown-ups is "When She Was an Only Boy," by Marion Hill; it is a story that will delight women readers. A story with a strong pathetic appeal is "Monsieur," by T. W. Hanshew. Anne Warner, whose work has been steadily growing in popularity, has an interesting tale in "The Very Bottom of Her Purse."

The new editors of The American Magazine have done well with their first number, the October issue. They have not departed from its decidedly interesting and significant; they have given it life and strength. One of the important contributions to the October number is an article on "The Power of the Press" by Mr. Dooley. Its facts are references to Grover Cleveland, Bryan, Roosevelt, Miss Tarbell, Lincoln Steffens, Ray Stannard Baker and others that make lively reading. The cartoons add to the gaiety of the magazine. William Allen White preaches a great sermon in his article on "The Partnership of Society." It is the brilliant Kansas novelist and essayist at his best. Samuel Hopkins Adams, who can enliven interest in anything, writes most entertainingly of "Dynamite: The Power Untameable." Lincoln Steffens tells a New York police story. Leonard Keene Hirshberg, of Johns Hopkins University, describes "Popular Medical Fallacies."

These little insects that well nigh pester us to death through the day and through the night are the basis of a delightfully humorous story by Harvey Sutherland entitled "Our Intimate Enemies," which is running in The People's Magazine. The "enemies" are none other than these little creatures, but Mr. Sutherland's articles treat the subject from so new a viewpoint and in such a witty and humorous fashion as to make the series as interesting and absorbing as a piece of good fiction. This series is only one of the many pleasant and readable articles that make up the 192 pages in the October People's.

Once in awhile we run across a story that stays in our memory. Such a one is the little sketch by Charles Fort which appears in the current number of Smith's. "And now the Old Scow May Slant as It Pleases" is its odd title, and the quaintness and sweetness of the tale bear out the promise of the title. This number of Smith's, both in appearance and contents, is the finest that has been issued so far. It is the largest in bulk of any magazine of the month, and it has a wealth of illustration that makes it something of a curiosity. There are two separate and distinct art sections, one on tinted paper and the other on heavy calendered paper. Besides this, the magazine is illustrated profusely throughout.

For those who like adventure stories, with plenty of incident, the Popular Magazine has a peculiar attraction this month. There are several big features, notably the beginning of a new series of short stories by K. and Hesketh Prichard, whose "Don Q." tales made such a profound impression when they were published two years ago. Then there is the first half of a two-part racing story by W. B. M. Ferguson—unquestionably one of the brightest and most absorbing stories of the race-track ever written. Too many, the novelette, "The Night Pumper at Green River," will be classed with the most remarkable offerings in the month's magazines. In the same issue appears one of those droll stories of T. Jenkins Rains "The Philosophy of Raw-Dog"—which, by the way, is not a Western yarn, as the title would seem to suggest, but is an episode in the life of a South Sea trader who tried to make a unique deal with a cannibal chief.

Stories of newspaper life that have made any lasting impression are few. One that will be certain to be remembered opens the October number of the Smart Set. William R. Lighton is the author, and he has chosen the appropriate title of "The Rules of the Game." The great human note in the story will make a strong appeal to every reader, and the clever way in which the plot is manipulated will win admiration. For the many short stories in this issue we have only praise. The Smart Set's fiction is always notably refreshing—nothing antiquated seems to be permitted in its pages. James Hopper, who has become so well and favorably known through his Philippine stories, contributes to this number a remarkably fine tale, entitled "A Jest of Fate." There is wonderful pathos in this story, which is relieved at the end by a delicious touch of humor.

The strongest feature of the October Delineator, aside from the fashions, which are splendidly shown, is the opening of the Countess Von Arnhim's new serial story, "Fraulein Schmidt and Mr. Anstruther." It is now publicly announced that the Countess Von Arnhim is the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden." The serial stories, "The Diary of a Baby," by Barry Pain, and "The Chauffeur and the Chaperon," by the Williamsons, merrily continue. J. J. Bell contributes another "Wee Macgregor" episode, and other contributors of short stories are Ralph Henry Barbour, George Middleton, Florence E. Wilkinson and Ponnie A. Nedwill. John Vance Cheney is represented by a poem, "Hallowe'en." The kitchen department, under the direction of M. Joan Marie Devaux, presents the second course of "A Perfect Dinner," some "Recipes for Cooking Game," more "Favorite Recipes of Famous People," and seasonable advice about peppers, melons and grapes.

In the October number the name of the well-known Tales has been changed to Transatlantic Tales, which is certainly a more distinctive name, as this magazine publishes nothing but translations of the present works of the leading European and Oriental writers. The Engineering Magazine for October opens with a very interesting paper by Alfred Sang, pointing out the great practical value which would lie in a good industrial museum. This sort of "perpetual exposition" would present a graphic and easily read history of industrial progress, and would save much of the time and effort now wasted, through ignorance, in worthless inventions and in freak revivals of long-discarded ideas. Another most important contribution is by Edwin J. Prindle, showing clearly what protection a patent affords its owners, and especially the astonishing extent to which trade and manufacturing combinations are legalized in the United States by the monopolies conferred by patent rights.

The second number of the semi-monthly North American Review maintains the high standard established by the first. It opens with the second instalment of chapters from Mark Twain's autobiography. Prof. Brander Matthews, who is prominently connected with the movement for spelling reform, discusses "Reforms and Reformers." John Barrett urges the adoption of measures which will bring about the most desirable relations between "The United States and Latin-America." In an article entitled "Suffrage—A Right," Ida Husted Harper deprecates the withholding of the suffrage from women. Urbain Gohier forecasts "The Next French Revolution." Charles A. Conant describes the European conditions which aid American financiers in "Selling American Securities Abroad."

Marian Bonsall, the associate editor of The Housekeeper who has been in Japan for practically a year studying the home life for lessons which may be adapted by the women of our own land, has returned to America and the first of her series of articles appears in The Housekeeper for October. This article tells of the simplicity of the home life. Although many Americans and European women have been entertained in Japanese homes, very few have ever really shared for any length of time the home life of a family of the upper classes. While the statement cannot be absolutely verified, it is probable that this honor has been extended to but two foreigners, Miss Bacon, author of Japanese Girls and Women, and Miss Bonsall. Therefore, while it may be said that the knowledge in America of the Japanese national life is quite extended, due to exploitation from various sources, the actual knowledge of the home life of the middle and higher classes is correspondingly scant.

In Scribner's magazine for October Ernest Thompson Seton tells the remarkable story of the Buffalo from the earliest historical records to the practical extinction of the great herds. He estimates that the primitive buffalo population of this country was once sixty millions. Wholesale slaughter and the advance of civilization which has driven up their ranges for cattle has reduced this number to less than two thousand. Mr. Seton estimates that the care which is taken of these is leading to a small increase to their numbers. Nothing could be more interesting than his account of the life of these great herds on the plains. The article is illustrated with many drawings by Mr. Seton. A first hand account of the burning of Washington by the British in 1814 is given in the letters of Margaret Bayard Smith. This remarkable woman pictures with unusual minuteness the whole catastrophe. Edward Penfield, the artist, describes and pictures in colors a journey which he took through rural Spain on horseback. The story "Sheltered by John Fox, "A Knight of the Cumberland," is continued with more of the amusing experiences of the Northern girl in the mountains, where she falls in with a shrewd politician of an unusual sort.

There is an element of novelty, often amounting to surprise, in the contents of the October Century. The article on "The Human Side of the Czar" is, perhaps, of most general interest. This is a personal narrative, by Mrs. Amalia Kussner Coudert, of her experiences in the palace while painting the portrait of the Russian Emperor—the political character of the world now most in the public eye. Reproductions of her miniatures of the imperial family add to the attractiveness of the sketch. In the light of the growing interest in American art, Annie Nathan Meyer's record of "What American Museums Are Doing for Native Art" makes wide appeal. Dr. Robert Bennett Bean supplements his paper in the September Century on "The Birth of the Negro" by another on "The Training of the Negro," which is likely to attract attention North and South. "The Dog Police of European Cities" is full of information and fresh interest; and there is the first account of "The Japanese Pilgrimage to the Buddhist Holy Land," the writer, Count Otani, being the chief of the Buddhist cult in Japan. Langdon Warner's personal narrative of "Khiva from the Inside," a vivid description of strange adventure, is illustrated from photographs made by Mr. Warner, probably the first ever secured in that out-of-the-way spot.

The World To-Day for October is notable for the large number of beautiful illustrations it contains. Few, if any of the higher-priced periodicals excel this 15-cent magazine in this regard. The variety of the articles is also notable. Particularly timely are those on "The Anti-Foreign Uprising in Mexico," by Edward M. Conley, who speaks with authority, having been Vice Consul General of the United States at the City of Mexico, and "Trades Unions in Politics," by Thomas Sewall Adams, of the University of Wisconsin, who comments on the entrance of the American Federation of Labor into politics and its probable effect. In view of the present interest in the pending elections of governors, senators and congressmen, the sketches of some of the candidates are also timely.

Lippincott's October number opens with its usual complete novel which, it will be remembered, was a strong feature with this magazine long before other periodicals discovered its value. Its title this month is "Lips That Were Sealed." Its author, Alma Martin Estabrook, is a healthy-minded young woman who gaily acknowledges that she "writes in broad daylight after substantial breakfasts." The promise of spice, which is implied in the words "Lips That Were Sealed," is amply fulfilled in this story of men and women of today. The author's types are vigorous and fresh; besides, she has a "pretty wit" all her own. The crux of the plot leaves the reader in exciting doubt until the last—an evidence of good art. There is motion rapid enough to please the most exacting; and there is emotion aplenty without lapsing into soft sentimentality. Altogether Miss Estabrook has produced that which may be read in an evening and remembered for a lifetime. "Lips That Were Sealed" should give the October Lippincott's a big sale—not to speak of the other contents, which are really above the average of even Lippincott's.

McClure's for October is full of keen vigorous articles and delightful fiction. First of all comes Lincoln Steffens' masterly study of the juvenile court of Denver, with its picturesque stories of "bad kids," and its vivid, human portraiture of Judge Lindsey, the man who has created a new method of dealing with juvenile offenders. Burton J. Hendrick continues his history of life insurance in "The Raid on the Surplus," a remarkable story of extravagance, waste and graft. George K. Turner tells how Galveston has cut down her city expenditures, cleaned and lighted her streets, and controlled disease and vice under a new form of city government—a political experiment which every citizen of America ought to study. C. P. Connolly, in the third chapter of "The Story of Montana," relates the dramatic story of Whiteside's exposure of Clark's bribery of the Montana legislature—a narrative of exciting incident and splendid movement.

A permanent representation to be maintained at Washington during the sessions of congress, in the interest of the people of the United States, to oppose the lobbies maintained by the "special interests," is the proposition put forth in Success Magazine for October. The editors of this magazine have outlined plans for the formation of such an organization, and have secured acceptances from a number of prominent men to act as a governing committee. Henry Beach Needham describes the need for such a lobby as this at Washington, in an article, "The People's Lobby," in which he attributes the great difficulty in obtaining beneficial legislation to the obstructing efforts of the corporation attorneys, whose arguments are welcomed by legislators to the exclusion of pleas on behalf of the people.

In the October World's Work Isaac F. Marcosson tells of "The Beginning of Reform in Packingtown." The article is the result of a first-hand investigation of the new conditions in the beef packing industry in Chicago. It shows how the great packing houses have begun to clean up, and gives a comprehensive explanation of the working of the new government inspection rules. In "Labor in Politics," M. G. Cunniff gives a vivid picture of the labor campaign in which President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor is endeavoring to overthrow the "enemies of labor." Dr. I. A. Hourwich, special commissioner of the World's Work to Russia, shows intimately "The Russian Revolution in Process" which is an orderly account of the awakening of the people against the autocracy.

The October number of Country Life in America is the annual housebuilding number. It tells how to build a country house (at various prices), what to put into the house, the prevailing architectural taste. The supreme feature of this issue is the selection of perfect country houses by four of the leading architects of the United States. Mr. Wilson Eyre and Charles Barton Keen of Philadelphia, John M. Carrere of New York, and Guy Lowell of Boston, have combined to select twenty-three representative country houses that out of their wide experience have appealed to their artistic taste. These houses were built by many different architects, they are geographically diversified, they range from a cost of $3,500 to a cost of $50,000.

The October Pilgrim has all the earnestness characteristic of the after-vacation season. It has three exceptionally strong special articles, the first touching on The Gateway of China, entitled "The Patrol of the Yangste" by William A. McKinney, who has spent some years in the very heart of this great and awakening nation. South America just now is in the popular mind in a most prominent way. John T. Kerrin, who for several years had extensive business relations with the South American republic writes most graphically on "Commercial Relations with South America." This alone is worth the price of the magazine. "Three Every Minute" by Howard B. Grose, gives an insight into the immigration question, which is broad minded and statesmenlike.

The steady improvement which The Home Magazine has shown from month to month since its ownership by the Bobbs-Merrill company is marked by another forward step with the issuance of the October number. The contents are particularly seasonable and timely and in illustrative and pictorial features all efforts have been eclipsed. Grace McGowan Cooke furnishes an interesting and lively story of the Southwest called the "The Wire Cutters." The illustrations are by W. H. D. Koerner, whose prize-winning pictures in the American Art Annual brought forth such praise from Anthony Comstock. Angus MacDonall's illustrations for "The Ghost and the Rabbit's Foot," a curious story of a Hallowe-en, by Crittenden Marriott are fitting complements to the narrative. A new interest is given to "Romance Island," —that very excellent serial by Zona Gale,—in the October installment, by strange complications that are as surprising as they are mystifying.

The control of tuberculosis in cattle is one of the most important questions before the American public. One in every seven of our population is tuberculous. Beef, pork and milk all carry the tubercle bacillus. Dairy cows may transmit the disease in milk to calves and children for a year before they are suspected of being tuberculosis. The important thing is how to control this dread disease, and the leading article in October Farming on "The Menace of Consumption in Our Cattle and Hogs" is a compilation of the opinions of the principal authorities on this subject.

The October number of the Garden Magazine is the fall planting manual, a double number, with a beautiful cover in three colors portraying a charming garden scene in which asters and phlox lend the chief colors and eighty superb illustrations in the text. It is in every way a remarkable number, replete from cover to cover with suggestive material for taking advantage of the opportunities of the season. As this is the time for planting bulbs for spring flower, a large portion of the text is naturally devoted to this group of plants. The articles on "The Best Tulips" and "The Best Daffodils" are the ideals as guides for the amateur. The authors, Peter Zugger and A. M. Kirby, two of the most expert bulb men in the country, have made careful selections of the really best varieties for the amateur gardener.

That highly successful venture in literary housekeeping conducted by Kate Douglas Wiggin and Nora Archibald Smith in their beautiful old colonial summer home, Quilicote-on-Saco, in Hollis, Me., was recently marked by a quaint festival celebrating the setting of the weather-vane on Quilicote barn. In a lively article in the Woman's Home Companion for October the two distinguished chatelaines of Quilicote give a full account of the songs and ceremonies that marked their unique festival, showing that the "setting of the vane" may be just as appropriately celebrated as "the hanging of the crane" and other house-warmings of the past.

The Popular Science Monthly for October opens with an article by President David Starr Jordan of Stanford university, entitled "The Earthquake Rift of 1906." This is one of the most authoritative studies of the recent California earthquake, and has the advantage of being written in the clear and interesting way that may always be expected from President Jordan. The article is very extensively illustrated. The second of a series of articles by M. Poincaire, probably the greatest of mathematicians now living, treats the measurement of time. Prof. E. O. Sisson of the university of Washington gives an account of the extent to which Francis Bacon anticipated the modern university.

The elaboration of the mantelpiece and its influence upon interior finish is one of the leading articles in Wood Craft for October. A Southern workman presents his view of the lumber selection problem as it strikes his particular locality. A Northern manufacturer has an article on the forestry situation as it appears from the standpoint of the factory. A progressive lumberman of the West submits the result of a careful study of the woods of the Pacific coast, the use of fir, spruce and hemlock for interior finish. The second installment of an article on veneer takes up the question of cost and critically analyzes the possibilities of various woods and the contrasting merits of veneer and solid stock.

Gilbert Parker's new novel, "The Weavers," which is promised to be the most thrilling story he has ever written, opens the October number of Harper's Magazine. The story deals with a young English Quaker who is punished by his fellows in the Society of Friends for beating a man and kissing a woman. Even in this first instalment the reader feels the onrush of a powerful drama of human temptation and conflict. In this same number is an important paper by Dr. Henry van Dyke on "The Americanism of Washington," in which Dr. van Dyke presents his own interpretation of true Americanism. Pomeroy Bigelow contributes an illustrated article on "The Last of a Great Sultan," in which he describes his visit to the hereditary sultan of "all Borneo and the bulk of the present Malay archipelago." In a charming paper on "The Music of Bird Songs," Henry Oldys supplies the musical notation of many bird songs, and reveals the birds as genuine musical composers. S. H. M. Byers gives an interesting narration of the adventures of "The Last Slave Ship" that brought African negroes to America, describing the descendants of those slaves and their squalid homes in Alabama.

Stories of the corruption of New York's city government have been frequent, legal exposes of municipal rottenness have caused New Yorkers to shudder, but never before has such plain, unvarnished analysis of the inefficiency of one branch of the city's machinery been published as appears in the Broadway Magazine for October under the title "The Worst Conducted Business in New York." It is the story of how the officials charged with the collection of the city's income—an income larger than the income of the steel trust, the biggest trust in the world—shiftlessly and criminally neglect their simple duty and allow the city to be annually "done" out of nearly twenty millions of dollars in taxes. Robert Adamson, who tells this story, is in a position to know. For many years he has been one of the New York World's most trusted lieutenants. He has studied the problem for many years, is thoroughly familiar with all the phases of his subject, absolutely knows what he is talking about.

The Reader Magazine for October presents the first of its series of articles upon "The South American Situation," one which will take foremost place among the more important articles of the current periodicals. The paper treats of the great sub-tropical city of Rio del Janeiro in a most informing fashion, vividly pictures its odd foreign customs, gives familiar pen portraits of its brilliant journalists and its history-making diplomats, chats delightfully of the shopping street, the Rua do Quovidor, and of what one may see on that quaint meeting place for all true Brazilians; tells of fashions in dress and manners; and gives, on the more serious side, an authoritative digest of commercial affairs in Rio and touches on the extent of North American trade with Brazil. Considerable space is devoted to an interesting description of the eighty-million-dollar boulevard which "Rio" is constructing upon property formerly occupied by plague-spotted slums. Few cities of the United States can point to such a remarkable step toward civic betterment. Rio in summer is now as healthful as and a cooler place than New York city. The article is illustrated by numerous photographs.

Every American business man has reason to be interested in the leading article in the Atlantic for October. "Commercial Panics, Past and Future" is the title, and the author is A. D. Noyes, financial edtior of the Evening Post. Just at present, when we are riding on the top wave of prosperity, it is well worth while to take a look ahead. Another panic year will be due before long; Mr. Noyes believes that if we can find out the causes that bring about such a disaster, we can control them—at least to some extent. The same number contains a timely political article by John H. Latane on the "Forcible Collection of International Debts." Precisely what the "Drago Doctrine" stands for, what the situation was which forced it into being, and what our position should be in future crises of the same character—these are some of the important points covered.

The October issue of the Technical World magazine is a woman's number, and women in technical work are featured on every page. What women are doing today along technical lines is entertainingly told in the stories indicated in the following partial list of leading articles: "Women in Technical Work," William Hard; "The Coming Sex," Walter Hope; "Women of the Wild," primitive feminine types caught by the camera; "War's Gentle Ally," Day Allen Willey; "Ladies Unafraid," William Ward; "Bread-Making by Machinery," Carol A. Stewart; "Sisters of the Arts and Crafts," Delia Austrian; "The Needle in the Navy," Lillian E. Zeh.

The House and Garden for October contains many interesting articles, including the following: "Rose Valley: A Community of Disciples of Ruskin and Morris," Mabel Tuke Priestman; "The Octagon," Bound Brook Park, Essex county, N. J., Rossiter & Wright, architects; "Italian Decorative Iron Work," the Marquis Peruzzi Medici; "German Model Houses for Workmen," William Mayner of the American consulate general, Berlin; "Beaulieu Abbey," Dowager Countess De La Warr; "Garden Accessories," Loring Underwood; "Some October Flowers," Eben E. Rexford; "Groton—Past and Present," Elizabeth Prescott Lawrence; "Frauds in Old China," Reginald Jones; "Children's Playgrounds," L. L. Smith; "Garden Work in October," Ernes. Hemming.

THE NEW BUTTER HARBOR OF ESBJERG.

clude specimens of cooking, needlework, worsted, knitting, water color drawings, "God bless our home" mottoes, horse racing, nor a thousand other features of the American county fair that might be mentioned.

In place of the horse races there are exhibitions of draft horses and their best performances, and instead of exhibits showing the product of individual cows there are exhibits showing how much butter fat may be produced from given quantities of cream, etc. Premiums are given as at American county fairs. Agricultural implements and machinery are shown, also, but solely as "permitted" for advertising purposes, no premiums being granted.

The new King is as interested in the development of the country's resources as his father was before him, and often visits the dairies and the "beershows" he also makes occasional personal inspection of the slaughtering and packing houses. Denmark has learned the lesson of cleanliness so well that these are very generally in good condition. It is unnecessary to state that they always are when the king is expected.

The Butter Port of Esbjerg.

Denmark has done many things to help her farmers besides inspecting and guaranteeing her products. Finding that the trip to England from Copenhagen, which is away to the east, was too long, the government has created the port of Esbjerg on the western coast of Jutland, thereby reducing the time consumed in transportation many hours. Esbjerg is not a vast port, like Hamburg or Antwerp, but it serves its purpose admirably, butter deliveries in England now being possible in almost a day's less time than formerly. There are now butter steamer sailings five times a week from Esbjerg; daily sailings will begin in the near future. The port is also extensively utilized as a fishing harbor.

I have spoken of the habit the farmers have of using margarine instead of butter and of shipping the latter to England because of the saving they can make that way. This practice is general, not only in the rural districts, but also in the cities among the working people. The Danish farmers also economize by eating American bacon and selling their own for export. So high is the reputation enjoyed by Danish bacon in England that it commands a better price there even than much of the English bacon. I am assured by Mr. Schou that in substituting bacon from the United States for the native product for their own eating, the farmers are able to save at least 20 per cent. and perhaps more. It is also with eggs, many of the Danish farmers selling their entire production for export and importing eggs from Russia to eat themselves.

I have already explained the lack of inspection of Danish eggs, but, profiting by their experience with butter, the farmers here have got into the habit of looking out for the main chance with amazing cleverness. England wants its eggs very white. The eggs of Spanish fowls are whiter than any others, consequently the canny Dane raises practically no other poultry, and, knowing that to ship eggs abroad would ruin his trade, he is very careful to make his shipments daily. The frequent sailing of the butter steamers and their short passage to England insures the delivery of the eggs there inside of two or three days after they are gathered, warm, from the nests.

It hardly need be said that the extension of the inspection idea has met with opposition at practically every step. With regard to margarine, however, the opposition did not come from tht manfacturers, as it always has in America, but from the farmers. They wanted the production of margraine prohibited altogether, but, now that the demand is so great for their butter, and they can use the margarine at the big saving mentioned above, they agree with everybody else that the margarine inspection has been a good thing. The recent adoption of the plan to inspect bacon leaves little to be inspected in the way of Denmark's agricultural products, though if the farmers should ultimately go extensively into chicken raising for the foreign market, the inspection of poultry will undoubtedly be introduced.

Notwithstanding the intense practical nature of the modern Dane as shown by his methods in pushing his foreign trade, he is at heart a sentimentalist. This isevidenced by the fact that accurate representations of the "Lur," a musical horn used in Denmark before the dawn of history, are stamped on every package containing Danish butter or bacon put up for the export market. The only specimens of the "Lur" in existence were dug up some years ago and are now carefully preserved in the Royal Museum.

"Listener's Lure," by E. V. Lucas—"Every Man a King," by O. S. Marden—"The Rainy Day Railroad War," by Holman F. Day—"Breezy," by J. George Fredrick.

In "Listener's Lure" the author, E. V. Lucas, has made letters and telegrams his means of telling his story, and until you read it you will not realize what an incredible amount of character portraiture, of delicate touches of personality, and of finer humor, can be expressed in that manner. It is a love story, with a plot not very complicated but full of interest, and it is admirably and entertainingly told. In some of the letters there is a charming vein of quaint philosophy, in others there is a vein of real humor, and others are made to furnish some travel sketches that are exceedingly diverting. The book is published by the Macmillan company, New York, at $1.50.

"Every Man a King; or, Might in Mind-Mastery," by Orison Swett Marden, editor of Success Magazine, is a book that ought to be in the hands of every young man or young woman, for that matter—and of everybody not too old to have lost ambition and hope. In it Mr. Marden's practical advice on success in life, in pithy paragraphs and meaty editorials, are familiar to most readers, through frequent quotation by newspapers. The book is a compilation of what are the mastery of self and the training of latent forces to the highest ends. Chapter headings that will give an idea of the purpose and scope of the book are as follows: "How and What to Eat Body," "Thought Causes Health and Disease," "Mastering Our Moods," and "The Power of Cheerful Looking." It must not be judged from these titles that it is a "crank" production, it is eminently sane and eminently sensible. It is practical, useful and entertaining. It is published by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., New York, at $1.

"The Rainy Day Railroad War," by Holman F. Day, is a stirring story of the way in which a trusted young civil engineer overcame the bitter opposition that met him when he undertook a short line railroad in the pine woods. It is full of backbone, and the young hero does not lack for excitement during the progress of his work. While not necessarily a boy's story, it is a book that boys will like, and that will do them good rather than harm to read. It is published by A. S. Barnes & Co., 11-15 East Twenty-fourth street, New York, at $1.

"Breezy," by J. George Frederick, is one of McClure, Phillips & Co.'s "Little Comp. Masterpieces" and it is worthy of a place in that diverting series. It is a short story of a young man so full of nervous energy that he turned the grocery store in which he found employment upside down and shocked his staid superiors with his revolutionary ideas. Results, however, he attained in a striking manner, and his push carried him far. It is an entertaining little volume, good for half an hour's pleasant reading. It is published by McClure, Phillips & Co., New York, at 50 cents.

"All the Year in the Garden," compiled by Esther Matson, is a dainty rosary of pretty thoughts from the poets, one for each day in the year, breathing the spirit of outdoors in musical numbers. It is a year-book with a happy outdoor thought devoted to each day, the total result being a series of refreshing pages backed with enough sweet air to lighten the mustiest city apartment. The poets of old and the poets of today are drawn upon, and every lover of nature and every admirer of fine thoughts daintily expressed will find delight in the volume, which is done in special decorative type, with a number of full-page illustrations. It is especially adapted for gift purposes. The book is published by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., New York, at $1.

"The Pitfalls of Speculation," by Thomas Gibson, is published by the Moody corporation, New York; price, postpaid, $1.06. The keynote of Mr. Gibson's little but important work may be held to be struck in the foreword which faces his opening chapter: "So great are the opportunities offered by speculative changes, that, with proper method and self-control, the poor man cannot afford to overlook them." With the public attitude toward speculation is undeniably hostile there has been a modification of harsh judgment of late, as a more general knowledge of such matters has spread, and as it has come gradually to be understood that speculation is not only a safe but a legitimate business when business methods are applied to it. And it is in fulfilment of a duty to the public that Mr. Gibson has set down in order certain facts which will lead to a correct line of thinking, and has pointed out the reasons for the failure of 90 per cent of the speculators as well as the methods by which the minority have succeeded.

The book deals entirely with marginal speculation, a subject on which our stock of authoritative literature is meager. The late Charles H. Dow, the founder of the Wall Street Journal, was a pioneer along several lines of financial writing, and was one of the first to write of market matters from the position of the speculator of moderate means. His were newspaper articles, however, and not intended for book publication. Since Mr. Dow's time no writer had appeared to handle the subject of marginal speculation with anything approaching the knowledge of the subject, the breadth of view and the hard-headed, common-sense treatment that Mr. Gibson devotes to it.

"The Italian in America," by Elliot Lord, special agent of the United States census; John J. D. Trenor, chairman of the immigration commission of the National Board of Trade, and O. S. Barrows, secretary of the Prison Association of New York, is a book designed to prove the value of the Italian immigrants to this land of their adoption. It makes a splendid showing for them, too, and should go a long way toward dissipating the prejudice that undoubtedly exists against them in certain quarters. It shows that they have contributed much toward the development and civilization of this country, and explains away many of the senseless prejudices that have grown up regarding them. It is published by B. W. Huebsch & Co., 109 Fifth avenue, New York.

The Wagner drama of "Tannhauser" has been retold in English verse by Oliver Huckel. The many readers of Mr. Huckel's poetic paraphrases of "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin" will anticipate this companion Wagner book with pleasure. It is printed and bound in the same artistic style of its predecessors, while the literary quality of the poem itself easily sustains the author's reputation. When "Parsifal" appeared, critics were agreed that this was the first genuinely poetic version to be published in America. "Lohengrin," son of "Parsifal," was naturally a fitting successor; while there is much in the "Tannhauser" story which marks it one of the trilogy. The revolt of the errant knight from the powers of evil; his second downfall; the devotion of Elizabeth; and the final redemption, unite to form one of the noblest spiritual dramas in any language, and to give complete demonstration of Wagner's masterly powers as a dramatic poet. Aside from the musical interest of this play, therefore, "Tannhauser" is worthy a place in every well-chosen library; and the present English poetic version is the first to fill the need adequately. Published by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., New York, at $1.50.

A story with a mystery in it, a mystery that keeps you guessing all the time, and that does not unfold itself until the proper time, and that time well along after the unread leaves are getting thin, is the kind of a story you want to take your mind off your troubles, and to keep your interest alive through a few hours of steady reading. Such a story is "Blindfolded," by Earle Ashley Walcott. It is a story of mystery pure and simple, with a plot not too complicated to be wearying, and yet involved enough to pleasantly stimulate your interest. In pleasantly stimulate your interest. It is short, it is a mighty readable yarn. It is illustrated acceptably by Alice Barber Stephens, and it is published by the Bobbs-Merrill company, Indianapolis.

James Clarence Harvey, author of "In Bohemia," has written a bright, catchy little volume of toasts and bons mots, "Over the Nuts and Wine," which will be published during the month by H. M. Caldwell company of Boston. Unlike most of the toast books of the day, the matter is entirely original, and no better author could have been procured than Mr. Harvey, one of the best known of our cosmopolitan after-dinner speakers. Typographically, the book is most attractive with its dainty border designs in light green. The volume is bound in the shape of a bucket, showing the top of a bottle protruding from the ice, and there is enough bright, sparkling wit inside the covers to warrant the use of the champagne bottle represented in the cooler.

The October number of Ainslee's completely justifies its claim to be "the magazine that entertains," and it is the only periodical that does so. The novelette is a very original story, though it deals with a familiar theme, "New York society, under the title of "A Maid and Her Money;" it is by Alice Duer Miller. May Sinclair's remarkable story, "Audrey Craven," which has been running serially in Ainslee's, is concluded with a dramatic and unexpected climax. W. A. Fraser's notable series of racing stories is also concluded with "A Race Card." A very charming child story for grown-ups is "When She Was an Only Boy," by Marion Hill; it is a story that will delight women readers. A story with a strong pathetic appeal is "Monsieur," by T. W. Hanshew. Anne Warner, whose work has been steadily growing in popularity, has an interesting tale in "The Very Bottom of Her Purse."

The new editors of The American Magazine have done well with their first number, the October issue. Their policy is interesting and significant; they have given it life and strength. One of the important contributions to the October number is an article on "The Power of the Press" by Mr. Bookey." There are references to Grover Cleveland, Bryan, Roosevelt, Miss Tarbell, Lincoln Steffens, Ray Stannard Baker and others that make lively reading. The cartoons add to the gaiety of the magazine. Wilbur Nesbit Allen White presents a great sermon in his article on "The Partnership of Society." It is the brilliant Kansas novelist and essayist at his best. Samuel Hopkins Adams, who can write interestingly on any subject, has the most entertainingly of "Dynamite: The Power Untameable." Lincoln Steffens tells a New York police story. Leonard Keene Hirshberg, of Johns Hopkins University, describes "Popular Medical Fallacies."

These little insects that well nigh pester us to death through the day and through the night are the basis of a delightfully humorous story by Sutherland Rae, called "Our Intimate Enemies," which is running in The People's Magazine. The "enemies" are none other than these little creatures, but Mr. Sutherland's articles treat the subject from so new a view-point and in such a witty and humorous fashion as to make the series as interesting and absorbing as a piece of good fiction. This series is only one of the many pleasant and readable articles that make up the 192 pages in the October People's.

Once in awhile we run across a story that stays in our memory. Such a one is the little sketch by Charles Fort which appears in the current number of Smith's. "And now the Old Scow May Slant as It Pleases" is its odd title, and the quaintness and sweetness of the tale bear out the promise of the title. This number of Smith's, both in appearance and contents, is the finest that has been issued so far. It is the largest in bulk of any magazine of the month, and it has a wealth of illustration that makes it something of a curiosity. There are two separate and distinct art sections, one on tinted paper and the other on heavy calendered paper. Besides this, the magazine is illustrated profusely throughout.

For those who like adventure stories, with plenty of incident, the Popular Magazine has a peculiar attraction this month. There are several big features, notably the beginning of a new series of short stories by K. and Hesketh Prichard, whose "Don Q." tales made such a profound impression when they were published two years ago. Then there is the first half of a two-part racing story by W. B. M. Ferguson—unquestionably one of the brightest and most absorbing stories of the race-track ever written. To many, the novelette, "The Night Patrol at Green River," will be classed with the most remarkable offerings in the month's magazines. In the same issue appears one of those droll stories of T. Jenkins Hains —"The Philosophy of Raw-Dog"—which, by the way, is not a Western yarn, as the title would seem to suggest, but is an episode in the life of a South Sea trader who tried to make a unique deal with a cannibal chief.

Stories of newspaper life that have made any lasting impression are few. One that will be certain to be remembered opens the October number of the Smart Set. William R. Lighton is the author, and he has chosen the appropriate title of "The Rules of the Game." The great human note in the story will make a strong appeal to every reader, and the clever way in which the plot is manipulated will win admiration. For the many short stories in this issue we have only praise. The Smart Set's fiction is always notably refreshing—nothing antiquated seems to be permitted in its pages. James Hopper, who has become so well and favorably known through his Philippine stories, contributes to this number a remarkably fine tale, entitled "A Jest of Fate." There is wonderful pathos in this story, which is relieved at the end by a delicious touch of humor.

The strongest feature of the October Delineator, aside from the fashions, which are splendidly shown, is the opening of the Countess Von Arnhim's new serial story, "Fraulein Schmidt and Mr. Anstruther." It is now publicly announced that the Countess Von Arnhim is the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden." The serial stories, "The Diary of a Baby," by Barry Pain, and "The Chauffeur and the Chaperon," by the Williamsons, merrily continue. J. J. Bell contributes another "Wee Macgregor" episode, and other contributors of short stories are Ralph Henry Barbour, George Middleton, Florence E. Wilkinson and Pomnie A. Nedwill. John Vance Cheney is represented by a poem, "Hallowe'en." The kitchen department, under the direction of M. Jean Marie Devaux, presents the second course of "A Perfect Dinner," some "Recipes for Cooking Game," more "Favorite Recipes of Famous People," and seasonable advice about peppers, melons and grapes.

In the October number the name of the well-known Tales has been changed to Transatlantic Tales, which is certainly a more distinctive name, as this magazine publishes nothing but translations of the present works of the leading European and Oriental writers. This magazine has authors in every country who are watching and exploring its literature as travelers are investigating its lands and forests.

The Engineering Magazine for October opens with a very interesting paper by Alfred Sang, pointing out the great practical value which would lie in a good industrial museum. This sort of "perpetual exposition" would present a graphic and easily read history of industrial progress, and would save much of the time and effort now wasted, through ignorance, in worthless inventions and in freak revivals of long-discarded ideas. Another most important contribution is by Edwin J. Prindle, showing clearly what protection a patent affords its owners, and especially the astonishing extent to which trade and manufacturing combinations are legalized in the United States by the monopolies conferred by patent rights.

The second number of the semi-monthly North American Review maintains the high standard established by the first. It opens with the second instalment of chapters from Mark Twain's autobiography. Prof. Brander Matthews, who is prominently connected with the movement for spelling reform, discusses "Reforms and Reformers." John Barrett urges the adoption of measures which will bring about the most desirable relations between "The United States and Latin-America." In an article entitled "Suffrage—A Right," Ida Husted Harper deprecates the withholding of the suffrage from women. Urbain Gohier forecasts "The Next French Revolution." Charles A. Conant describes the European conditions which aid American financiers in "Selling American Securities Abroad."

Marian Bonsall, the associate editor of The Housekeeper who has been in Japan for practically a year studying the home life for lessons which may be adapted by the women of our own land, has returned to America and the first of her series of articles appears in The Housekeeper for October. This article tells of the simplicity of the home life. Although many Americans and European women have been entertained in Japanese homes, very few have ever really shared for any length of time the home life of a family of the upper classes. While the statement cannot be absolutely verified, it is probable that this honor has been extended to but two foreigners, Miss Bacon, author of Japanese Girls and Women, and Miss Bonsall. Therefore, while it may be said that the knowledge in America of the Japanese national life is quite extended, due to exploitation from various sources, the actual knowledge of the home life of the middle and higher classes is correspondingly scant.

In Scribner's magazine for October Ernest Thompson Seton tells the remarkable story of the Buffalo from the earliest historical records to the practical extinction of the great herds. He estimates that the primitive buffalo population of this country was once sixty millions. Wholesale slaughter and the advance of civilization which has taken up their ranges for cattle has reduced this number to less than two thousand. Mr. Seton estimates that the care which is taken of these is leading to a small increase to their numbers. Nothing could be more interesting than his account of the life of these great herds on the plains. The article is illustrated with many drawings by Mr. Seton. A first hand account of the burning of Washington by the British in 1814 is given in the letters of Margaret Bayard Smith in this remarkable woman pictures with unusual minuteness the whole catastrophe. Edward Penfield, the artist, describes and pictures in colors a journey which he took through rural Spain on donkey back. The short serial by John Fox, "A Knight of the Cumberland," is continued with more of the amusing experiences of the Northern girl in the mountains, where she falls in with a shrewd politician of an unusual sort.

There is an element of novelty, often amounting to surprise, in the contents of the October Century. The article on "The Human Side of the Czar" is, perhaps, of most general interest. This is a personal narrative, by Mrs. Amalia Kussner Coudert, of her experiences in the palace while painting the portrait of the Russian Emperor—the political character of the world now most in the public eye. Reproductions of her miniature of the imperial family add to the attractiveness of the sketch. In the light of the growing interest in American art, Annie Nathan Meyer's record of "What American Museums Are Doing for Native Art" makes wide appeal. Dr. Bennett Bean supplements his paper in the September Century on "The Birth of the Negro" by another on "The Training of the Negro," which is likely to attract attention North and South. "The Dog Police of European Cities" is full of information and fresh interest; and there is the first account of "The Japanese Pilgrimage to the Buddhist Holy Land," the writer, Count Otani, being the chief of the Buddhist cult in Japan. Langdon Warner's personal narrative of "Khiva from the Inside," a vivid description of strange adventure, is illustrated from photographs made by Mr. Warner, probably the first ever secured in that out-of-the-way spot.

The World To-Day for October is notable for the large number of beautiful illustrations it contains. Few, if any of the higher-priced periodicals excel this 15-cent magazine in this regard. The variety of the articles is also notable. Particularly timely are those on "The Anti-Foreign Uprising in Mexico," by Edward M. Conley, who speaks with authority, having been Vice Consul General of the United States at the City of Mexico, and "Trades Unions in Politics," by Thomas Sewall Adams, of the University of Wisconsin, who comments on the entrance of the American Federation of Labor into politics and its probable effect. In view of the present interest in the pending elections of governors, senators and congressmen, the sketches of some of the candidates are also timely.

Lippincott's October number opens with its usual complete novel which, it will be remembered, was a strong feature with this magazine long before other periodicals discovered its value. Its title this month is "Lips That Were Sealed." Its author, Alma Martin Estabrook, is a healthy-minded young woman who gaily acknowledges that she "writes in broad day-light after substantial breakfasts." The promise of spice, which is implied in the words "Lips That Were Sealed," is amply fulfilled in this story of men and women of today. The author's types are vigorous and fresh; besides, she has a "pretty wit" all her own. The crux of the plot leaves the reader in exciting doubt until the last—an evidence of good art. There is motion rapid enough to please the most exacting; and there is emotion a-plenty without lapsing into soft sentimentality. Altogether Miss Estabrook has produced that which may be read in an evening and remembered for a lifetime. "Lips That Were Sealed" should give the October Lippincott's a big sale—not to speak of the other contents, which are really above the average of even Lippincott's.

McClure's for October is full of keen vigorous articles and delightful fiction. First of all comes Lincoln Steffens' masterly study of the juvenile court of Denver, with its picturesque stories of "bad kids," and its vivid, human portraiture of Judge Lindsey, the man who has created a new method of dealing with juvenile offenders. Burton J. Hendrick continues his history of life insurance in "The Raid on the Surplus," a remarkable story of extravagance, waste and graft. George K. Turner tells how Galveston has cut down her city expenditures, cleaned and lighted her streets, and controlled disease and vice under a new form of city government—a political experiment which every citizen of America ought to study. C. P. Connolly, in the third chapter of "The Story of Montana," relates the dramatic story of Whiteside's exposure of Clark's bribery of the Montana legislature—a narrative of exciting incident and splendid movement.

A permanent representation to be maintained at Washington during the sessions of congress, in the interest of the people of the United States, to oppose the lobbies maintained by the "special interests," is the proposition put forth in Success Magazine for October. The editors of this magazine have outlined plans for the formation of such an organization, and have secured acceptances from a number of prominent men to act as a governing committee. Henry Beach Needham describes the need for such a lobby as this at Washington, in an article, "The People's Lobby," in which he attributes the great difficulty in obtaining beneficial legislation to the obstructing efforts of the corporation attorneys, whose arguments are welcomed by legislators to the exclusion of pleas on behalf of the people.

In the October World's Work Isaac F. Marcosson tells of "The Beginning of Reform in Packingtown." The article is the result of a first-hand investigation of the new conditions in the beef packing industry in Chicago. It shows how the great packing houses have begun to clean up, and gives a comprehensive explanation of the working of the new government inspection rules. In "Labor in Politics," M. G. Cunniff gives a vivid picture of the labor campaign in which President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor is endeavoring to overthrow the "enemies of labor." Dr. I. A. Hourwich, special commissioner of the World's Work to Russia, shows intimately "The Russian Revolution in Process" which is an orderly account of the awakening of the people against the autocracy.

The October number of Country Life in America is the annual housebuilding number. It tells how to build a country house (at various prices), what to put into the house, the prevailing architectural taste. The supreme feature of this issue is the selection of perfect country houses by four of the leading architects of the United States. Mr. Wilson Eyre and Charles Barton Keen of Philadelphia, John M. Carrere of New York, and Guy Lowell of Boston, have combined to select twenty-three representative country houses that out of their wide experience have appealed to their artistic taste. These houses were built by many different architects, they are geographically diversified, they range from a cost of $3,500 to a cost of $50,000.

The October Pilgrim has all the earnestness characteristic of the after-vacation season. It has three exceptionally strong special articles, the first touching on The Gateway of China, entitled "The Patrol of the Yangste" by William A. McKinney, who has spent some years in the very heart of this great and awakening nation. South America just now is in the popular mind in a most prominent way. John T. Kerrin, who for several years had extensive business relations with the South American republic writes most graphically on "Commercial Relations with South America." This alone is worth the price of the magazine. "Three Every Minutes" by Howard B. Grose, gives an insight into the immigration question, which is broad minded and statesmenlike.

The steady improvement which The Home Magazine has shown from month to month since its ownership by the Bobbs-Merrill company is marked by another forward step with the issuance of the October number. The contents are particularly seasonable and timely and in illustrative and pictorial features all efforts have been eclipsed. Grace McGowan Cooke furnishes an interesting and lively story of the Southwest called the "The Wire Cutters." The illustrations are by W. H. D. Koerner, whose prize-winning pictures in the American Art Annual brought forth high praise from Anthony Comstock. Angus MacDonall's illustrations for "The Gaost and the Rabbit's Foot," a curious story of a Hallowe-en, by Crittenden Marriott are fitting complements to the narrative. A novel interest is given to "Romance Island," —that very excellent serial by Zona Gale,—in the October installment, by strange complications that are as surprising as they are mystifying.

The control of tuberculosis in cattle is one of the most important questions before the American public. One in every seven of our population is tuberculous. Beef, pork and milk all carry the tubercle bacillus. Dairy cows may transmit the disease in milk to calves and children for a year before they are suspected of being tuberculosis. The important thing is how to control this dread disease, and the leading article in October Farming on "The Menace of Consumption in Our Cattle and Hogs" is a compilation of the opinions of the principal authorities on this subject.

The October number of the Garden Magazine is the fall planting manual, a double number, with a beautiful cover in three colors portraying a charming garden scene in which asters and phlox lend the chief colors and eighty superb illustrations in the text. It is in every way a remarkable number, replete from cover to cover with suggestive material for taking advantage of the opportunities of the season. As this is the time for planting bulbs for spring flower, a large portion of the text is naturally devoted to this group of plants. The articles on "The Best Tulips" and "The Best Daffodils" are the ideals as guides for the amateur. The authors, Peter Zuger and A. M. Kiner, two of the most expert bulb men in the country, have made careful selections of the really best varieties for the amateur gardener.

That highly successful venture in literary housekeeping conducted by Kate Douglas Wiggin and Nora Archibald Smith in their beautiful old colonial summer home, Quillcote-on-Saco, in Hollis, Me., was recently marked by a quaint festival celebrating the setting of the weather-vane on Quillcote barn. In a lively article in the Woman's Home Companion for October the two distinguished chatelaines of Quillcote give a full account of the songs and ceremonies that marked their unique festival, showing that the "setting of the vane" may be just as appropriately celebrated as "the hanging of the crane" and other house-warmings of the past.

The Popular Science Monthly for October opens with an article by President David Starr Jordan of Stanford university, entitled "The Earthquake Rift of 1906." This is one of the most authoritative studies of the recent California earthquake, and has the advantage of being written in the clear and interesting way that may always be expected from President Jordan. The article is very extensively illustrated. The second of a series of articles by M. Poincaire, probably the greatest of mathematicians now living, treats the measurement of time. Prof. E. O. Sisson of the university of Washington gives an account of the extent to which Francis Bacon anticipated the modern university.

The elaboration of the mantelpiece and its influence upon interior finish is one of the leading articles in Wood Craft for October. A Southern workman presents his view of the lumber selection problem as it strikes his particular locality. A Northern manufacturer has an article on the forestry situation as it appears from the standpoint of the factory. A progressive lumberman of the West submits the result of a careful study of the wods of the Pacific coast, the use of fir, spruce and hemlock for interior finish. The second installment of an article on Veneer takes up the question of cost and critically analyzes the possibilities of various woods and the contrasting merits of veneer and solid stock.

Gilbert Parker's new novel, "The Weavers," which is promised to be the most thrilling story he has ever written, opens the October number of Harper's Magazine. The story deals with a young English Quaker who is punished by his fellows in the Society of Friends for beating a man and kissing a woman. Even in this first installment the reader feels the onrush of a powerful drama of human temptation and conflict. In this same number is an important paper by Dr. Henry van Dyke on "The Americanism of Washington," in which Dr. van Dyke presents his own interpretation of true Americanism. Poultney Bigelow contributes an illustrated article on "The Last of a Great Sultan," in which he describes his visit to the hereditary sultan of "all Borneo and the bulk of the present Malay archipelago." In a charming paper on "The Music of Bird Songs," Henry Oldys supplies the musical notation of many bird songs, and reveals the birds as genuine musical composers. S. H. M. Byers gives an interesting narration of the adventures of "The Last Slave Ship" that brought African negroes to America, describing the descendants of those slaves and their squalid homes in Alabama.

Stories of the corruption of New York's city government have been frequent, legal exposes of municipal rottenness have caused New Yorkers to shudder, but never before has such plain, unvarnished analysis of the inefficiency of one branch of the city's machinery been published as appears in the Broadway Magazine for October under the title "The Worst Conducted Business in New York." It is the story of how the officials charged with the collection of the city's income—an income larger than the income of the steel trust, the biggest trust in the world—shiftlessly and continually neglect their plain duty and allow the city to be annually "done" out of nearly twenty millions of dollars in taxes. Robert Adamson, who tells this story, is in a position to know. For many years he has been one of the New York World's most trusted lieutenants. He has studied the problem for many years, is thoroughly familiar with all the phases of his subject, absolutely knows what he is talking about.

The Reader Magazine for October presents the first of its series of articles upon "The South American Situation," one which will take foremost place among the more important articles of the current periodicals. The paper treats of the great sub-tropical city of Rio del Janeiro in a most interesting fashion, vividly pictures its odd foreign customs, gives familiar pen portraits of its brilliant journalists and its history-making diplomats, chats delightfully of the shopping street, the Rua do Quovidor, and of what one may see on that quaint meeting place for all true Brazilians; tells of fashions in dress and manners; and gives, on the more serious side, an authoritative digest of commercial affairs in Rio and touches on the extent of North American trade with Brazil. Considerable space is devoted to an interesting description of the eighty-million-dollar boulevard which "Rio" is constructing upon property formerly occupied by plague-spotted slums. Few cities of the United States can point to such a remarkable step toward civic betterment. Rio in summer is now as healthful as and a cooler place than New York city. The article is illustrated by numerous photographs.

Every American business man has reason to be interested in the leading article in the Atlantic for October. "Commercial Panics, Past and Future" is the title, and the author is A. D. Noyes, financial editor of the Evening Post. Just at present, when we are riding on the top wave of prosperity, it is well worth while to take a look ahead. Another panic year will be due before long; Mr. Noyes believes that if we can find out the causes that bring about such a disaster, we can control them—at least to some extent. The same number contains a timely political article by John H. Latane on the "Forcible Collection of International Debts." Precisely what the "Drago Doctrine" stands for, what the situation was which forced it into being, and what our position should be in future crises of the same character—these are some of the important points covered.

The October issue of the Technical World magazine is a woman's number, and women in technical work are featured on every page. What women are doing today along technical lines is entertainingly told in the stories indicated in the following partial list of leading articles: "Women in Technical Work," William Hard; "The Coming Sex," Walter Hope; "Women of the Wild," primitive feminine types caught by the camera; "War's Gentle Ally," Dagy Allen Willey; "Ladies Unafraid," William Ward; "Bread-Making by Machinery," Carol A. Stewart; "Sisters of the Arts and Crafts," Della Austrian; "The Needle in the Navy," Lillian E. Zeh.

The House and Garden for October contains many interesting articles, including the following: "Rose Valley: A Community of Disciples of Ruskin and Morris," Mabel Tuke Priestman; "The Octagon," Bound Brook Park, Essex county, N. J., Rossiter & Wright, architects; "Italian Decorative Iron Work," the Marquis Peruzzi Medici; "German Model Houses for Workmen," William Mayner of the American consulate general, Berlin; "Beaulieu Abbey," Dowager Countess De La Warr; "Garden Accessories," Loring Underwood; "Some October Flowers," Eben E. Rexford; "Groton —Past and Present," Elizabeth Prescott Lawrence; "Frauds in Old China," Reginald Jones; "Children's Playgrounds," L. Smith; "Garden Work in October," Ernes. Hemming.

SPORTS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO IS THE WINNER

Of National Pennant for First Time in Twenty Years.

Great Games When the Two Chicago Teams Come Together.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 6.—It looks very much as if Chicago would hog the whole business this year in the way of major league championships, including the world's honors. It's twenty years since Chicago won a National league pennant, and the honors taken by the Chicago Americans were not really major league victories.

There was a time when Chicago was having more than her share of good luck in the way of champion teams—that was the time when the late Mike Kelley was doing phenomenal stunts for the lake city team. Since Kelley's time there was nothing doing in the pennant line until your Uncle Charley Murphy, a Cincinnati man, followed the advice of Frank Chance, a player, and landed the money.

Jim Hart's failure to win a pennant for his team was one of the principal reasons why he gave up the game at the time he did.

In '69 Cincinnati went wild over their team that won from all comers and were real champions. That's about thirty-seven years ago, and Cincinnati has worked ever since 1882 to land a major league pennant, this year having the highest-priced manager in the game to work out the problem, but there is nothing doing, and Cincy is just as far off as ever. When I predicted last spring that Hanlon had no chance with the men selected for the task, several scribes said: "Just wait until this fall and Hanlon will have the laugh." Nothing doing in the laugh line, boys, this fall for Sir Edward. Cincinnati has been twenty-two years in major league ball, with a record of 1,321 victories to 1,431 defeats, failing to break even by about five games a year. Cincinnati was a member of the National league in 1876, the first year of the organization, and started off with the tail-end honors, winning but nine games out of sixty-five games played. The next year Cincinnati won 17 games out of 72 played before being expelled for nonpayment of dues. In '81 the Cincinnati club was expelled for violating the baseball law about selling liquor on the grounds. Cincinnati has welcomed every opposition to the National league with the exception of the American league, and I am not sure but what lovers of the sport in that city would enjoy the games of the younger organization.

The press of Cincinnati give their club loyal support both winter and summer, sending men on the road with the club from two evening and one morning paper. No club receives the free advertising that Cincinnati does. The owners are liberal to a fault, and never leave a stone unturned to strengthen the club, yet such is the luck in baseball that the team is farther away from the pennant than it was last year, and Cincinnati will have to sit and wait until some of the strong clubs weaken before having a chance for the big prize even with Mr. Hanlon teaching a lot of clever youngsters.

In the Chicago Nationals, Charley Murphy has a look-in for the big money for two or three years at least.

Nothing has ever taken place in baseball more pronounced than the beating Chicago gave New York this season when they won fifteen out of the twenty-two games played, and Chicago showed up best right on the Polo Grounds. This means that Messrs. Brush and McGraw must revamp the Giants and practically have the New York boys sized up to build up a new team before they can hope to hold the Chicago outfit, who have the New York boys sized up to a fraction. It took Frank G. Selee to lower the colors of the great Baltimore team led by Hanlon in '97, and nine years later a Selee lieutenant, Frank Chance, turned the trick on John McGraw, a graduate of the Hanlon school. It was a case of cleanest ball playing beating out the win-tie-or-wrangle element in both cases, as it was in '97, when the whole country applauded the Boston victories over the Orioles.

If the Chicago teams come together one is sure to witness the cleanest kind of baseball in up-to-date manner by two fast fielding teams, and one fine hitting team in the Nationals.

It will be unfortunate if Comiskey's boys have to face their clever rivals with a badly broken up team. Isbell would be missed more than any of the other players, while Tannehill displayed winning qualities this season that no other third baseman surpasses. In the East we also look on Sullivan as the prince of catchers when it comes to inside work and a knack of killing base running. Pat Dougherty is more than likely to put on one of his good streaks during the post series. He is the only member of either team who has tasted a world series, and when put to the test was a prime factor in the result, as a member of the Boston team, when they met Pittsburg. Boston's first victory was by a score of 3 to 0, the score of the final game, Dineen pitching both games, and in the first game Dougherty made two home runs, the first the longest hit ever made by a left-handed batsman at the American grounds in this city. Dougherty can look like the worst player in the business one game and the next game look like the king of the profession. Left-handed pitchers will bother the Cubs most, and the Socks have a pair of good ones, when right, which will off-set somewhat the batting advantage of Charley Murphy's boys.

It looks very much as if New York was out of the race in the American Lergue, and I think it would be a big mistake not to accept the challenge of the New York Giants to a post series.

The baseball public must ever be considered and the New York fans are anxious to have their two teams meet this fall.

Just now the Giants look like a row of shattered vases to the polo ground rooters, while the Highlanders stand for gameness in baseball, with too many changes for final results.

The major league clubs are growing wise to the fact that the time to try out the young material is in the fall and not the early spring, when the youngster is sure to look better than the veteran who takes it easy at the start to finish strong and get the money for another season. There are tricks in all trades.

SPORTING COMMENT

The Putridity of Our Sports.

(Ed. Note.—In this series of articles, Mr. Muckrake Orbust, will fearlessly wield the scalpel, and ruthlessly lay bare ,in his own slashing style, the reeking rottenness that seeps through every department of our national sports. This is the first of the series, and the others will follow whenever Mr. Orbust feels like writing them, or until the muck gives out.)

PINOCHLE.

Seated on two cracker boxes at the corner tobacco and confectionery store, two aged and feeble old men sat pondering over a board placed across their knees.

In the center of the room stood a cast iron cuspidor choked to the brim with peanut shells and cigar stubs, while around it in widening circles were marked the varying degrees of accuracy of the great army of tobacco chewers.

The old men fumbled with their cards, oblivious to their surroundings. The cards were filthy. Any unprejudiced eye could see that they would be fairly alive with microbes and reeking with muck.

The old men's clothes were ragged and marked with grease spots.

The air was musty with the smell of stale tobacco and cheap candy.

These were the conditions under which the great game of pinochle was played. To this had the great national sport fallen.

Presently one of the old men took aim at the cuspidor, loosed half a pint that got the bulls eye, and wiped off his whiskers.

"It's your game, Bill," he said. "I get high, low and the jack."

Here was the shame of pinochle laid bare. These were the conditions to be faced. What is the remedy?

The remedy indeed is at hand. It lies with the city authorities. Let them appoint a municipal pinochle inspector for the elevation and purification of the great game, and rigidly enforce an ordinance regulating the conditions under which it may be played. Compel the players to use clean cards, discard flat cut, get new cuspidors, and play only amid sanitary surroundings. Then will the game be restoed to its high standard and flourish like a green bay tree.

(The next article in the series may be on "The Shame of Bridge Whist," and then again it may not.)

The Great Chicago War.

Extract from a school history of 2007 A. D. "In the fall of 1906, or, as some historicans claim, in the fall of 1907, the city of Chicago was reft by a great Civil war between the two factions known as the South and West sides.

"The causes of this disruption in what was then the rich, commercial center of the West, Duluth being as yet a comparatively small city, are lost to history.

"Prof. Deadone, the eminent historian from the pleasant, little village of Superior, a suburb of Duluth, claims that the war began as the result of the keen rivalry between certain gladiators who participated in the game known as baseball which was later suppressed under the reign of Roosevelt as being too barbarous a sport. This version, while a plausible one, cannot be confirmed, and Prof. Deadone probably bases his history on the fact that Chicago was at that time a very rich and wicked city, although now it occupies much the position of a railroad junction for Duluth.

"The revolution was short lived, lasting but a few days. It was agreed between the two factions that they should be represented by picked athletes, who would do battle with clubs.

"Unfortunately the accounts of the struggle, as portrayed in the records of that time, are unintelligible, containing such extracts as the following:

"Walsh was surely the candy kid, and he had the Microbes swatting the ambient for six spasms. They got to him in the seventh—.

"Brown was surely there with the goods, and he was clipping the corners—.

"The Sox couldn't have found Reulbach with a sidewalk. He had them faded to a gentle whisper."

Prof. Owhat A. Mummy inclines to the belief that the fierce struggle for supremacy between the warring factions, must have made the historians of the time temporarily insane, and there seems to be much in support of his theory. Many of the words in the records are familiar, but the manner in which they are used, and the rhetorical constructions are entirely without meaning. Prof. Liveguy, who was formerly on the staff of the now defunct Chicago university, claims to find a similarity between the records and the works of the novelist Henry Chances, who is believed to have lived at about that time.

"Whatever the outcome of the great Civil war may have been, it probably had something to do with the decline and fall of Chicago, for shortly after that time, or about the year 1910, we find Duluth gradually supplanting her former rival as the great commercial metropolis of the western country."

Chance For Dope Fiends.

Are the Indians going to take advantage of the new rules, which favored a fast and lighter team than was customary in former years, and down the Gophers in the big game at Minneapolis next month? That is a question which will give the dope fiends a chance to figure during the next six weeks.

BILL SQUIRES.

Australian Heavy---Weight Boxer, Coming to This Country.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Bill Squires, champion of Australia, has decided that as Jack O'Brien has concluded not to go to fight him, he will come to America to take on Jack and incidentally any other fighter who croses his path.

Just how good is Squires is, of course, a matter of conjecture, as we have only Australia's word for it, but if he follows in the footsteps of other fistic products of that country—and what a list it is, with Fitzsimmons, Peter Jackson, Young Griffin, Dan Creedon, Jim Hall and the rest—then he will bear considerable watching.

WAS BEATEN ONLY TWICE

Johnson, Colored Heavyweight, Now After Jeffries' Title.

All Big Boxers Have Met With Setbacks, Including Jeff.

New York, Oct. 6.—Truly, the typewriter of the heavy weight has been busy these days. Between O'Brien, Burns, Hart, Berger, Schreck, Kaufman and Jeannette, there has been so much cross-firing that the demand for commas, colons and adjectives seems far greater than the supply. Periods aren't in the running at all. But with all the firearms, edicts, pronunciamentos and ultimatums that have been issued within the past fortnight, it looks as though several interesting matches between the big fellows would result. A new warrior, with glistening lance and fiery steed, has entered the lists and hurled defiance into the very faces of the belligerent heavies, one Sam Fitzpatrick. The old-time manager is sending Jack Johnson along at a lively rate and promises that the colored heavyweight champion will never earn the sobriquet of "The Forgotten One," if he can help it. At the present writing it looks as though Fitz has the others "whipping up" hard. He intends to keep up the fast pace he has set and they will either give him a chance for his man or he will begin to ask questions. It is a fact that the white heavyweights have been sidestepping the big colored fellow for a long time, and he finds it hard to get work. There is no question but that he is a capable man and rates up with the best of them. When one looks over his record, it is startling. Just as he was turning "pro," six years ago, Joe Choynski gave him his bumps, and since them, although he has engaged in fifty-odd bouts, he has had but one decision given against him. That was the one in San Francisco with Marvin Hart, a year and a half ago. Johnson claims to this day that the decision was unjust, and that Hart would never consent to meet him again.

While it is true that Johnson never has mought Corbett, Sharkey, Fitzsimmons or McCoy, it was not his fault, because he always was ready to sign up if they were willing. But he has beaten a number of strong young fellows, including Jim McCormick, George Lawler, Joe Kennedy, Jim Scanlon, Jack Jeffries, Klondyke, Pete Everett, Frank Childs, George Gardner, Denver Ed Martin, Sam McVey, Sandy Ferguson, Joe Butler, Jim Jeffords, Walter Johnson, Young Peter Jockson, Joe Jeannette and a score of others. Some of these he has beaten twice, and others three times. The reason his performances have never been given the publicity that was given those of Peter Jackson is because the latter was well handled and boosted along by prominent sportingmen who knew their business from the how-de-do to the bood-bye. With Johnson it has been different. He seldom has been hooked up right, and some of his most important fights never were heard of outside of the localities where he fought them. But people are beginning to recognize his ability and become wise to the fact that he has lost but one bout out of the last fifty. No heavyweight in the ring today and none in ring history has a cleaner record in proportion to the number of real battles fought, possibly excepting Jeffries, who has engaged in twenty-two bouts and has never been decided against except that time with Jack Munroe in Butte. Just look roughly over the records of some of the more prominent heavyweights and it can be seen at a glance that none of them have done any better than this same Johnson, who is now attracting the attention that his performances seem to warrant.

The great Peter Jackson was beaten in Australia by Farnum and again in San Francisco by Jim Jeffries; Bob Fitzsimmons lost to Jim Hall, Jack O'Brien and twice to Jeffries; Jim Corbett took second money from Tom Sharkey, Bob Fitzsimmons, Billy Welsh and twice from Jeffries; Sharkey was beaten by Ruhlin and Jeffries twice each and knocked out by Fitzsimmons; Ruhlin was beaten by Yank Kenny, Kid McCoy, Sharkey, Joe Kennedy, Fitzsimmons and Jeffries; Kid McCoy had it handed to him by Billy Steffers, Jack McCormick, Ted White, Jack Root, Tom Sharkey and Jim Corbett; Charley Mitchell was taught how to take a joke by John L. Sullivan, Dominick McCaffery and Jim Corbett; Joe Choynski took his lesson from Corbett, Goddard, Sharkey, Maher, Walcott, McCoy, O' Brien, Carter and Burley; Al Kaufman won an even half dozen fights, but when he boxed Jack O'Brien he heard the referee say "You lose, Al;" Berger has fought but once professionally, and it will be necessary to wait a while before we can pull the clock on him; Jack O'Brien found out what the loser's end meant when he took out stacks with Hugo Kelly and Young Peter Jackson; Tommy Burns saw Jack O'Brien, Twin Sullivan and Mike Schreck run away with decisions; Schreck has been spurned by Bezenah, Furey, Hugo Kelly, O'Brien, Stift and Jack Sullivan; Peter Maher lost to Fitz, Goddard, McCoy, Choynski, Ruhlin, Carter and several others; Jack Twin Sullivan dropped some of his tinsel when he met Jack O'Brien and Kid McCoy; Marvin Hart didn't tell any riddles the night he boxed George Gardinar, Tommy Burns, Jack Root or Wild Bill Hanrahan; Joe Goddard didn't smile much when he met Owen Sullivan, Theodore Van Buskirk, Jim Jeffries, Tom Sharkey, Peter Maher, Harry Laing or Denver Ed Smith; Paddy Slavin knew that gloves with hands in them were being thrown promiscuously around the ring on the evenings he encountered Bob Armstrong, Charlie Mitchell and Peter Jackson, and so it goes on down through the list. All of them, except Jeffries, know what is it to have their laurels knocked off, and when we say that Johnson's record is as clean as anybody's fighter, it is no exaggeration, as the above dope will prove. It won't be long now before he will get a chance to show what he can do against the boys with the big names and reputations.

It is a pleasure to be able to announce that Willie Fitzgerald is keeping up his winning streak. Last week he did another quiet leap over into New England and took Amby McGarry's scalp for the second time. The Fighting Harp is one busy gent these days and always on the job when there is a bout in sight. It is this willingness and the fact that he always mixes it up that makes a hit with the spectators and draws the crowd. He likes to wade in and walop like Kid Lavigne used to do. Walloping in boxing is like batting in baseball; it pleases the fans and a right swing to the head is very much like a three-base hit with the bases full when it comes to arousing enthusiasm. Fancy sparring is pretty to lok at just like sensational fielding is on the diamond, but it is that rough, strenuous action that electrifies the stands and brings out the cheers. Any time iFitzgerald comes to the bat it is a case of hit it out if he can, and he doesn't care much for the bunt game. There was some talk of putting him on with the Indian, Joe Gregg, but nothing has come of it so far.

"When T. Clarence McGrath, he of the gladsome raiment and sparkling harbor lights, was down at Staten Island training Sharkey for the Jeffries fight at Coney, he was the instigator of many a quiet josh and he generally managed to get away with them," said Elmer Tenley, the monologist, who was a constant visitor at the quarters. "But one time he was handed a package that twisted him so badly that he was obliged to step to one side to keep from walking in front of himself. There was a party they called Muckles who used to loaf around the gymnasiura and besides doing odd chores in a comedy way, used to do the drinking for the whole party. One of those fingers who always have a quiet wobble on, but, if you ask them to take a drink, will hold up their hands in horror and say: 'Oh, my! I never touch anything but timid drinks. Truly, you must excuse me.' The night of the fight we were all ready to go over to the arena and T. Clarence bought a half pint of brandy to have in the corner in case it was needed. As he was about to put it in the grip he asked the boys standing around if any of them wanted a swig, merely as a matter of politeness. Of course, everybody said 'no,' when finally Muckles cut in and said: 'I never drink, Tim, but I'll just moisten my lips if you don't mind.' He took the bottle, elevated it to an angle of about 45 degrees and let the contents gurgle down his throat until scarcely a drop remained. After he handed the bottle back empty, Tim said: 'Maybe you're right; maybe you're right; maybe you can't drink whisky, but say, kid, you'd soon learn.'"

BRITT IN SWEET SLEEP.

Native Son is Going to Fight Gans and Nelson.

San Francisco, Oct. 6.—Jimmy Britt confidently expects to meet Joe Gans for the $25,000 purse offered by the Goldfield Athletic club for the battle during Christmas week. Jimmy already has commenced to wear a hole in the country roads on account of the prospect of meeting Gans.

"I am just taking a little constitutional," explained Britt. "I intend to do about three weeks' solid training just for the fun of the thing. Before the fire I use dto train every day at the club, but since then my opportunities for getting exercise have been limited. But from now on for three weeks at least, I will hit into the work steadily. No, I am not doing this because there is a prospect for a fight. I am thinking more about a big business deal I have in hand just at present than I am about fighting.

"All my fight arrangements are in the hands of my brother, Bill. He attends to that end of the game. I am not particularly anxious to fight anybody, as I have decided to embark in a business enterprise involving a matter of $50,000 or more, but I am still in the fighting business and think I can lick any man in the world at the lightweight limit. I would like a crack at Battling Nelson, as the fight at Goldfield proved to me that my defeat at his hands was purely a fluke. If Gans had fought him the way I did, that is, slam bang with Nelson and slugging with him, I think he would have tired in ten rounds. There was more fighting in the Colma fight than there was in the Goldfield affair."

CHICAGO'S BLEACHERS

The Crowd Would Not Stand Any Bulldozing by Police.

Visitor Found Interesting Material in the Yelling Crowd.

A Kansas City man spending his vacation in Chicago, says the Star, paused in a stroll through one of the big hotels to read this poster:

BASEBALL TODAY:
NEW YORK vs. CHICAGO.

"The Giants and the Cubs," he said to himself. "Can't afford to miss it. I'll take a ride out to the ball park, get a good seat in the grand stand and see the great national game as it's really played."

Near the ball grounds, an hour later, the visitor from Kansas City saw a crowd of half a hundred boys typical of Chicago. They were immovable, like an island, on the edge of the swiftly moving stream of people. In the center of the crowd of boys was a man. He was fastening a stout cord to a post, a cord that held securely two box kites that were soaring high above. They could be seen for blocks. Suspended from them rode a big yellow banner bearing one word "Mugsy."

"Mugsy McGraw of New York," the man from Kansas City said to a chance acquaintance, "who hasn't heard of 'Mugsy?'"

Men and women were struggling good naturedly for places in line before the ticket windows. Perspiring policemen tried to maintain order. Just then a man came out and hung up a sign near the ticket window telling the crowd that the grand stand was filled and that only standing room remained. The Kansas City man read the sign with other hundreds.

"It's the bleachers for mine," he murmured as he pushed forward, money in hand. A moment later, perched high on the sun-kissed boards, the Kansas City man looked out over a prairie of faces and heads and shoulders that seemed to stretch for blocks on all sides of the diamond. He thought he had never seen so many people in one place.

"Not much of a crowd today," a man sitting alongside of him volunteered.

"Goodness me—" began the Kansas City man, about to suggest that all Chicago was taking a holiday.

"Only about 35,000 inside," the Chicago man remarked, "and not more than 5,000 outside that can't get in. Why yesterday there were—"

"They're off," yelled a big man from the board of trade. The Kansas City man looked into the dim distance. He could see forms moving about the place where he thought the home plate ought to be.

"Jack's up," the Chicago man shouted. The visitor from Kansas City moved to the edge of the seat.

"Greatest first baseman and manager in the big league," the Chicagoan said. "Hit it out, old kid." The game was on.

A "GUY" WITH $10.

"Ten dollars New York wins." The voice was husky. The Kansas City man looked. He saw standing on a seat, five rows ahead of him, a big fellow with a flushed face, waving a $10 note above his head.

"Aw sit down," the crowd yelled.

"T'row him out," some one suggested, pleasantly.

"Wat yer tink dis is," came a high keyed voice, "a horse race?"

Then above the voices of the crowd a wag far back on the bleachers sang out:

"Say, you guy with the ten spot—which way're you going home?"

The Missouri man saw a young fellow who carried a small-sized clothes basket—pushing through the bleacher crowd. The basket held many sacks of peanuts and popcorn. This young fellow didn't say "Please buy my popcorn." Not he. His tones and manner were business-like.

"Who's next now?" he yelled. "Be quick about it now. What's yours? Popcorn? How many? There, 10 out of two bits, you've got your change. Look out up there."

He moved through the crowd, making change with the left hand, holding a stack of nickles and dimes like packs of cards, and dealing off the top by wiggling his thumb. He threw the sacks right and left, wherever the order came from. Spectators had to catch them, and he caught the money they threw back at him easily, without moving. His supply was exhausted in a few moments. The Kansas City man looked and wondered. He had seen popcorn sold at baseball games, but never like that.

Just then a big, burly policeman pushed a man who was walking along in front of the stand.

"Cut that out," the crowd yelled in one voice.

"Do you know that man he shoved?" the Kansas City man asked, somewhat surprised.

"Never saw him before," the Chicagoan replied, "but we don't stand for any bulldozing here." Then, as the officer, recognizing his mistake, threw out his chest and planted his feet wide apart to hold his ground, the bleacherites began jeering at him.

"Show yer aut'ority," a wag yelled, with an unmistakable Irish voice, and the crowd laughed. A moment later a small boy passed in front of the policeman.

"Hit him wid yer club," the crowd roared. The policeman was glad to move on.

When the rays of the sun were slanting over the field the crowd swarmed out of the stands for the exits. The game was over. The Kansas City man fell in with the throng and was carried along like a chip on the tide. Shoes dusty and collar wilted, he fought to get a place on an "L" train going into the city. Panting, he grabbed a strap and swung there while the train sped along.

"Great game," a man at his elbow said. He looked around and saw the speaker. It was the man who had sat beside him in the bleachers.

SILER AN OLD TIMER.

Veteran Referee Began Boxing Forty-Five Years Ago.

It was just sixty years ago that George Siler began his life in New York city. In 1880 he began boxing, and met some of the best men in America at all weights in the feather class, his own weight being around 112. In 1871 he issued a challenge to the world, but it was not accepted.

In the following year he boxed with Dooney Harris, ex-champion middleweight, for a period of fourteen weeks at the Grand Opera house, New York city. He then went on the road with Billy Warden, meeting all comers at 115. Following this tour of a year and a half more, he became a boxing instructor and has taught in various parts of the country for twenty years, with frequent intervals.

From 1880 to 1885 he was superintendent of Iron Pier, at Coney Island, and the following year went to Chicago, where he taught boxing until 1891, when, as he expresses it, "I broke into newspaper work." Since then he has contributed to the sporting columns of all the leading newspapers and magazines in the country, and at present being a member of the sporting staff of the Chicago Tribune.

For a period of five years he was referee at all of the contests at the Chicago Athletic club, and he also refereed all of the fights in Chicago Wright's fair year; at Roby, Ind., which is just across the Illinois state line, and really a suburb of Chicago.

The first big fight that he refereed was the Fitzsimmons-Maher match in Mexico. Then followed the Fitzsimmons-Corbett match at Carson City, the McGovern-Pedlar Palmer match for the bantam championship, at Tuckahoe, N. Y.; the Fitzsimmons-Jeffries, the Jeffries-Sharkey and the Frank Erne-Jack O'Brien matches at Coney Island.

He was asked to referee the Britt-Nelson match, but refused. The last championship fight at which he officiated were the Kid Carter-Tommy Ryan, at Fort Erie, Ont., in 1902; the Jimmy Gardner-O'Keefe match, at Indianapolis, and the "Honey" Melody-Jack Dougherty match at Milwaukee.

FRANK MORSE

Again to Coach Minneapolis Central High School Football Team.

Minneapolis, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—A line on the progress of the Minneapolis Central high school football team is always of interest to the Duluth followers of the pig-skin, as the Minneapolis aggregation is the principal opponent of the Duluth high school team.

The high school football teams of the Twin City circle have been busy for the last week, in trying out against their various alumni teams.

Frank Morse, coach of the Minneapolis Central squad, and who had resigned, saying that under no condition would he again take charge of the team, was so disgusted with the playing of the Central team against the alumni, that he immediately informed Capt. Green that he would consider his former decision and again take charge of his former players.

Central high of Minneapolis again has hopes of placing another champion team in the field, considering the return of the veterans, Bresky, Putman, Tobin and Capt. Green; but Schraeder, the first half back, who had returned, was informed by the faculty that he was ineligible because of being over 21 years of age; this being one of the new rules strictly enforced this year by the various high chool teams of the state.

The Minneapolis boys have not arranged a very extensive schedule, but rather consider the Duluth game the most important one of the year. And this fact evidently shows the fear of the strength developed by Findlay, and his excellent coaching of the Duluth Central high school team.

BRITISH

Turf Still Interested in the Doings of American Trainers.

The methods of American trainers still arouse the interest of English racing. "Ranger," in the Illustrated Sporting News, in writing of the ways of the trainer from over-seas, says:

"They are hard workers, early risers, clever stablemen. A visitor to downs or heath may find them out at this season by 5 a. m., or earlier, since they have the first coolness of the morning, its beneficient dew and its generally wholesome influences. Horses thus worked are not asked to do much galloping. They are, perhaps, kept out for as long as two hours and a half, walking and pottering about or picking grass after a necessary canter or so; some are stripped and rubbed down in the open air—it must be a delightful experience—ere returning to their stable. That seems to be a sort of specialty with the foreign trainers, who believe in a consistent out-door treatment as far as practicable, and, judging by results, their argument is sound enough. They are not beaten by a want of fitness when they bet.

"A feature of the American trainers' practice is that they bestow special attention and study to the question of horses' food. More hot mashes are given to them than are prescribed by the English code, which generally provides for a warm mash on Saturday nights as being adequate for all practical purposes. Three or four such feeds each week may be conceded by the 'foreigners,' and any trouble in relation to scouring is apparently surmounted with ease."

VALUABLE COLT

Is Dick Welles---Maud Gonne Dead a Turney Farm.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 6.—Turney Brothers, the Paris, Ky., turfmen, have had the misfortune to lose by death the very valuable suckling colt by the sensational Dick Welles, out of the flying Maude Gonne, by The Commoner. The noted mare was bred back to Dick Welles last spring. Her first foal, a yearling brown filly, is by Captain Sigsbee, the sire of Martin Doyle. True Boy and Cottontown, and is a youngster of much promise. Turney Bros. have but two other yearlings this season by Captain Sigsbee, which, for its limited chances in the stud, is proving a big success as a sire. He is a son of imp. Candlemas, the sire of Irish Lad, and his grandam is Brilliantеen, by War Dance. The latter was an own sister to the famous race mare L'Argentine, and she traces to Mavis, the grandam of the great Joe Daniels. It is the No. 9 family of the Bruce low figure system. Capt. Amos Turney says up to the time Martin Doyle, Cottonwood and True Boy were foaled, Captain Sigsbee had not been bred to as many as ten mares in his entire stud career, and the fact that his owners have now but three yearlings by him illustrates how limited his chances have thus far been as a sire.

VISITORS ARE HUSKY

Grand Rapids Players Fully Equal the Locals in Weight.

Game at Athletic Park Should be a Hard Battle.

At 6:30 last evening, accompanied by a small but enthusiastic bunch of rooters, the Grand Rapids football aggregation struck Duluth, and the players have been spending the intervening time resting up for this afternoon's contest with the Duluth high school boys.

They are a husky-looking bunch of punters, averaging 150 pounds per man, which is every ounce as much as the local aggregation can produce, and they are preparing to give the Duluth eleven about as warm a game as they care to run up against.

It is certain, at any rate, that the game will be no walk-away, and if the locals make the three touchdowns which they have figured out ought to be theirs, they will win them only by the hardest kind of fighting. With a prospect of a good, hard game like this, and the first appearance of the Duluth team at home, there should be a good big crowd on the Athletic park field this afternoon.

Last evening was spent by the Duluth team in hard signal practice, no scrimmage work being indulged in for fear of an injury to some of the players. All the plays were working fairly well before they left the field, though there is much room for improvement. Fumbling, the ever-present evil at this stage of the season's work, is not as conspicuously absent as might be wished, and some of the plays get into motion rather slowly.

The fight for center has not been settled yet, the line-up given by Capt. McDevitt today) or Breitenstein; and Corbett, when he was right, was unbeatable.

With this bunch of has-beens, unknowns and nonedscripts, Hanlon went to Macon, Ga., in March, 1894, and started to drill some baseball sense into them individually and to weld his material into a team in all that the world implies. For two weeks in Macon and for two weeks in New Orleans the gang was put through the paces morning and afternoon, and was taught more baseball than they ever dreamed of. The hit and run was originated right in Macon at that time, and was tried with success time and time again in the contests with the Southern league clubs. The squeeze play was there perfected, as well as the triple steal, which was pulled off the other day by the New York Giants with so much eclat and hailed as a brand-new trump. There were lots of others, too, Hanlon giving much of his attention to what is known as "inside" work—that is, the work which is done when the team is at the bat.

"The members of the Baltimore club off the field were like one happy family. All of the boys were palls. There were no cliques, no factions. "Go get the runs," was Hanlon's motto. Another, and the one which really meant the secret of the club's success, was "Do just what the other fellows don't expect you to do." I have seen one of the weakest batters on the team go to the plate with the bases full and two hands out and bunt the ball. And he scored the man from third, too, just because the other fellows were not looking for it.

When the team returned to Baltimore to open the season of 1904 with the New York Giants, Hanlon was "under cover." He would make no prediction for the club save to say that he thought his men would finish in the first division. The best known baseball scribes in the country laughed at this prediction. Among these were Tim Murnane and Jake Morse of Boston. The very best Baltimore could get, they said, was eighth place in the 12-club outfit.

In the parade to the baseball grounds on the opening day—brass bands, flags, cheers and all sorts of frills—the writer rode in a carriage with C. P. Taylor of the New York Herald, Joe Villa of the New York Sun and George Stackhouse of the New York Tribune. None of these men had the Orioles placed any better than ninth, New York, of course, was to win the pennant. They talked of the great condition of Rusie's arm and of how Charley Farrell was lining them down to second. They offered to bet three to one that New York would win the opening game, with no takers. But, much to the disgust of "Nick" Engel, Judge Cullum, De Wolf Hopper, Digby Bell, Marshall Wilder and about 600 other New York rooters who had accompanied their club to Oysterтown, McMahon and Robinson outpointed Rusie and Farrell, and Baltimore won the first game. Not only that, but they won all the rest of the series, and the Gothamites left town a dejected and a poorer lot.

In the first inning of this game the hit-and-run was tried for the first time in the big league, and John Montgomery Ward was the victim. Jennings had reached first base with one out. The sign was given and Jennings made a bluff to steal. Farrell shot the ball down, and Ward, who was playing second, covered the bag. This was what Kelley, who was at the bat, wanted to know. On the next ball pitched Jennings started for second in earnest and Ward ran over to take the throw. Kelley banged the ball to the position that Ward had just vacated and Johnny tried to reverse but couldn't. The ball rolled out to right field, Jennings kept on to third, and on Tiernan's throw to catch him there Kelley sneaked down to second. Brodie, next up, hit safely and two runs scored.

"You can't beat that kind of baseball," Ward said to the writer at his hotel after the game.

The squeeze play—which means for the man on third to start toward the plate with the pitcher's arm, and the batter to bunt the ball—was also tried by this gang first, as was the triple steal, which means the same play with the bases full. The Orioles didn't forget, either, to rake up forgotten tricks of bygone days that were good ones, and to make them good again.

One of these said to have been invented by the celebrated Mike Kelly, of Chicago and Boston, was tried successfully upon one occasion the writer remembers by Keeler, in Chicago. Big Bill Lange, now in retirement in California, was at the bat, and he hit one of those furious drives of his that sent right between the first baseman and the bag. The ball curved pretty nearly to the foul line, and Lange, who could run like a quarter horse, was pounding away to stretch it into a three bagger. Keeler, playing right, was digging just as fast after the ball. Suddenly "Wee Willie" grabbed up the sphere, passed it in to Reitz, who shot it to third, and Lange was nailed by McGraw by fifteen feet.

After dinner that night the Baltimore boys were sitting in front of the Tremont house when Lange strolled up. Approaching Keeler he said:

"Willie, I take off my bonnet to you for doing one of the fastest bits of fielding that I have seen for many a day. I have made a dozen of those hits to that corner this season and they all have been good for three bases, and some of them for home runs."

"That's all right, Bill," replied Keeler, "but the ball I threw you out with wasn't the ball you hit. I have had a ball planted there in the grass for two days, just waiting for you to soak one of your drives. Was you sore?"

Was Lange sore? Well, yes! But there was nothing to do for the game was over and it had been finished with a ball which had never been put into play by the umpire.

Another good trick of this aggregation was exemplified in their success at catching a man napping off second base. This was worked by the pitcher, catcher, second baseman and shortstop. With a man on second the pitcher would turn and throw to nail him. Jennings, at short, would take the throw and fool such the base runner. This attempt would be made several times unsuccessfully.

Then Jennings would lead the way up the base path toward third, leading the base runner at the same time to believe that all efforts to catch him had ceased. Suddenly the catcher would give the signal, and Reitz, who had been playing away off second, almost in short right field, would make a dive for the bag, the pitcher would whirl and throw the ball, and Mr. Baserunner would be dead on the spot. This plot was consummated repeatedly.

When Baltimore won the championship in 1894, having won eighteen straight games on the last Western trip and having lost but one game on that whole trying journey, all Baltimore turned out to meet them upon their return. There was a parade several miles long, the streets and houses were decorated and illuminated; they had a grand reception at the Fifth Regiment Armory and a gala banquet at the Hotel Rennert. The celebration continued for several days, and if training was ever broken it was broken right there. Then New York came along and beat the champions for the Temple Cup, but this did not detract much from the glory which had already accrued to this collection of dark horses.

Baltimore was baseball crazy that year and for three years afterward, but the achievements of that famous club practically killed baseball in the town for many years to come. The public was spoiled. It wanted the best baseball to be had or none at all. "Too much of a good thing" is as true in baseball as in other more momentous affairs. Now the Monumental City is represented by a good club in the Eastern league, with auburn-topped Hughey Jennings as the only reminder of those days of glory.

And it will be a long, long time before such a team as that one ever steps upon a diamond again.

SLICK BASEBALL TRICKS.

Baltimore Champions of Early 90's Were a Great Aggregation.

Baseball enthusiasts who have watched the game carefully and faithfully for the last five years are prone to the opinion that the game, as played in the American and National leagues today, is faster and more scientific than any baseball which the world has ever seen, says the Washington Star. But fans of, say fifteen years' standing, as well as many players who are still doing great stuits in the big leagues and who took part in the historic struggles of the ear / '90s, declare that there never was such ball before and never will be such ball again as that which was put up in the twelve-club league during the year [illegible], 1895 and 1897, when the Baltimores, New Yorks, Bostons and Clevelands, to say nothing of the other eight teams, were battlin gfor supremacy.

Hanlon went to Baltimore from Pittsburg in 1893, when the Baltimore team was, to put it mildly, pretty punk. Hanlon fired all the old-timers, retained the promising youngsters and got out and hustled for more. Among those whom he retained was McGraw, though Barnie had in the previous summer, been upon the point of selling Mac to Anson for $400.

The writer was, during all the years mentioned, the baseball editor of a leading Baltimore newspaper, and he saw every game the Baltimore team played, at home and away from home, from the spring practice trips through the South to the post-season series, and he claims that all there was or is in "slick" baseball he saw in that time.

Hanlon never had a lot of stars on his team, that is, to start with. True, they all developed into stars, but that came later. In 1893 the club made a mediocre showing in the race, but it got out of the tail-end hole when "Foxy Eddie" began to make some of his celebrated trades at the end of that season, those trades in which the other fellows seemed to get the worst of it. He sent Shindle and Treadway to Brooklyn in exchange for Brouthers and Keeler. Shindle had been a good third baseman and a poor sticker both for Detroit and for Baltimore, but he was going down hill. Treadway was a hog-wild batter whom Hanlon had obtained from California at the same time he got Catcher Bill Clarke, late of Washington fame, and second baseman Reitz. Treadway could run just about as fast as Clarke, but he wasn't the all-round player that Clarke was. Brouthers, though an old-timer, did good work for Baltimore with the stick, and as for Keeler, everybody knows what Keeler has become. Then he was a third baseman, and a left-handed thrower, at that—a most serious handicap for a man playing that position. Hanlon put him in right field. Jennings came from Louisville, with First Baseman Harry Taylor thrown in, and Billy Barnie, who had gone to manage Louisville, got, in return for these two, one Tim O'Rourke, and whatever became of Tim after he left Louisville nobody seems to know.

Jennings, who is now manager of the Baltimore Eastern League club, developed into what was probably the most brilliant shortstop that ever played baseball, though some still argue that Herman Long, of Boston, was his equal, if not his superior. Kelley, now captain of the Cincinnatis under the management of his old leader, was purchased from Pittsburg for a song, as was Brodie from St. Louis, and these two turned out to be able to fill the left and center gardens as acceptably as any other two outfielders in the league. Kelley was a great batter; Brodie was a good one.

Hanlon, during his stay in Baltimore, always had the same catchers—Robinson, the old stand-by, and one of the best that ever wore a mask; Clarke, a good substitute, and Bowerman, now New York's star, who very seldom got a chance. Four men played first base at different times—Taylor, Brouthers, Carey—also known in Washington—and Jack Doyle. Reitz, from California, led the second basemen one year, McGraw, of course, was on third. Steve Brodie and Stenzel were in center during theese different seasons.

Of pitchers through the three championship years and the following year, when Baltimore lost the championship to Boston by a margin of one game, there was a long string. Among them was McMahon, Gleason, now captain and second baseman of the Philadelphia National league club; Arthur Clarkson, Hemming, Esper, Baker, McNabb, Pond, Inks, Mullane, Hawke, Brown, Nops and Joe Corbett. There may have been some others, but of all this list there were only two really first-class men—McMahon and Corbett. McMahon was the equal of any twirler of those days, not barring Rusie, Meekin, "Cy" Young (the same old "Cy"

ODDS FAVOR NATIONALS

Betting is 5 to 3 That They Will Defeat Sox.

Will be Test of Two Distinct Types of Baseball.

Only two more days of the baseball season in the big leagues remain, and by Monday the regular games will be over for another year.

The post season series for the world's championship between the two Chicago clubs will last at least four days and perhaps a week longer, and the interest of the fans in all parts of the country is now centered on these games.

For some reason the Cubs appear to be the favorites in the betting, the odds run about 5 to 3 that they will win the series. Just why this is the case is difficult to see, unless it is because of their superior batting, but it remains to be seen whether this batting will continue against the great corps of pitchers on the pay roll of Comiskey.

The Sox, on the other hand, have earned the title of the Hitless Wonders. There is not a slugger on the team, and the Sox have been winning their games all year on fast, tricky, work on the bases, snappy fielding and grand team work.

Game after game the Sox would have fewer hits than their opponents and yet win out.

The Sox also undoubtedly have the greatest staff of pitchers in the American league. In White and Altrock they have two of the greatest southpaws in the country, and Walsh's work has also been gilt edged.

Opposing this great trio, the Cubs have such men as Brown, Reulbach, Taylor and Lundgren.

It will be a battle between two of the greatest baseball machines this country has ever seen, and also a test of the two different types of baseball.

All records for attendance are likely to go glimmering, and preparations are being made to accommodate the greatest crowds in the history of the game. Last year the accommodations were inadequate for the post season series between the same two teams, and last year neither of them had a pennant. This year Chicago is baseball crazy, and fans will come from all parts of the country to witness the games.

The following interview with Comiskey, published in the Chicago Journal, may be of interest to the fans:

"Scientific baseball won the American league pennant for the White Sox. That is the answer I make to all those who ask me how we did it. Many people seem to think that there are better ball clubs in the American league than the Sox. I cannot follow their figuring.

"The team that goes through the entire season and wins the most games is the best team. There is nothing to it except such a conclusion. My team has had the hardest fight of any team that ever won a pennant. We have had none the best of it at any stage from the umpires.

"There is no smoke without fire and when in addition to the statement of my own manager and players, I read in every paper on the circuit where the American league ball is played, that the Sox are being robbed I am inclined to believe there is some truth in these persistent reports.

"But we have won the pennant and we can forget anything like a few umpires.

"Last spring I said I didn't see any good reason why the flag shouldn't come to the South side park again this fall. It has come, but it was a harder fight than I had anticipated. We had more than our share of hard luck in the way of injuries.

"But we made a grand rally in July, and after that I could see but little chance to lose. The finish was drawn pretty fine, but that is a good thing for baseball.

"We had to be up on our toes every minute for the last month. The strain has told, and now the Sox will have a chance to breathe easily.

"I want to sidestep a few of the bouquets thrown at me, and say that Spieder Jones has been manager of the team all the year, is at the present time, and will continue to be so for the rest of the season. He is a great baseball general and has done wonders with the team. All the praise is due to him.

"People who say our team is lucky to win have not followed baseball or they would know that we were unlucky not to have had the pennant cinched before now. If any team ever had all the bad luck it was ours, but we won in spite of bad luck and other obstacles. My heartiest congratulations to Jones and every member of the team.

"Now let the Cubs look out. We will be there next week, and Chance and his players will know they have been to a ball game every day the two teams play."

BLAINE UNABLE TO GET GAMES

Superior Football Team Has But One Contest Scheduled.

The only game on the schedule of the Blaine high school team is due to come off this afternoon with a mixed city team from Eveleth. This is the only contest which the Superior manager has been able to get, his numerous letters to outside teams, remaining, in the majority of cases, unanswered, either on account of other teams not caring to run up against Blaine's great weight or because they do not wish to encounter the Superior boys' football methods.

North Side, which walloped them to the tune of 50 to 0 last fall, just when they began to have dreams of a national high school championship, was their last hope, and a letter was received from them this week to the effect that their schedule was already too full to take on a team of Blaine's caliber.

In regard to the Duluth game, things are decidedly unsettled as yet. Principal Lynch had a conference with Principal Smith, and Faculty Supervisor of Athletics Phillips of Duluth this week, and no agreement was reached. The chief point of difference was that Superior wants to allow men to play who have been out of school for a number of years, and returned this fall to play football. Duluth also objects to the Buchanan boys on the ground that they have played in games, which if not actually professional, would not have received the sanction of the Interscholastic Athletic association, but they have agreed to disregard the ruling if August and Henderson who have been out of school for a number of years be ruled out for the Duluth game. The Blameites were to have given an answer to this, by the end of the week, but up to this morning nothing had been heard from them.

There may be someone advertising for employment today who would be worth to you as much as any two of your present employees.

JUST RIGHT FOR DUCKS

Weather Conditions Are Now Perfect for Good Sport.

Partridges Are Reported Very Scarce in Their Usual Haunts.

This kind of weather ought to bring ducks down from the North.

The sportsmen have been patiently waiting for a heavy frost to make hunting conditions right, and from this time there should be some good sport to be found in the wild rice fields around Duluth.

Sportsmen who have been up over the new line of the Duluth, Virginia & Rainey Lake road, say that the country is one of the greatest duck hunting grounds ever opened up. In some of the lakes near the line of the new road, the wild rice is very thick, and the ducks are to be seen in thousands. It is the virgin country for the duck hunter, and for first class sport is probably the best district within reach of Duluth.

The partridges appear to be very scarce this season. Reports from the range towns are to the effect that very few birds have been seen this fall, and but few hunters have been successful in bagging any in the usual haunts close to the towns. Further back in the woods they are doubtless more plentiful, but each year, apparently, it is necessary to go farther for them than the year previous.

The deer season will open in abut five weeks now, and already a number of sportsmen are looking forward to it. Many deer are being killed by pot hunters on the range, and along the line of the two range roads.

FOOTBALL AS PLAYED

In Australia Regarded as Greatest Game of Gridiron Sports.

Interesting Facts in Connection With the Sport Described.

All kinds of sports find favor in Australia, so much so that visitors to that island continent of contrariness, where the native birds have no song and the flowers no smell, sometimes wonder how its inhabitants find time for the more serious pursuits of life. Horse racing, cricket, rowing, golf, tennis, swimming, baseball, and last, but not least, football, all have their following, and in their seasons crowds of enthusiastic attendants at the games. The equable climate of the country, with not too hot a summer and a mild winter, permits the majority of these pastimes to be carried on practically the year round. The most popular sport, not even excepting the national game of cricket, in which Australians have held their own with their mother country, is undoubtedy football. In horse racing, with the starting gate and numbered saddlecloth, and in swimming, with the famous "crawl" stroke, Australians have, in their devotion to sport, thought out many improvements and newer methods. The game of football, as played in the four Southern states of Victoria, Tasmania, South Australia and Western Australia, and familiarly termed the "Australian game," is entirely different from English Rugoy or the association game known as "soccer." In the opinion of its followers they have evolved a game which, while possessing many of the best points of both Rugby and soccer, is infinitely superior to either. It is only fair to say that this belief is not shared in by the followers of football in the older state of New South Wales, where English Rugby is played, or by the New Zealanders, who carried all before them in England last year. The international matches between New South Wales and New Zealand invariably draw an immense crowd to the Sydney cricket ground.

The founders of the Australian game were three old Rugby boys, who thought that an improvement could be made on the game of their school days. They desired to make the game more open and freer, to avoid the scrimmages in which brute strength and weight play such an important part, and to make drop kicking the strongest feature of the game. The history of the game has been one of evolution. From time to time the rules have been altered and modified in minor details, but in the main the game retains today all the features imparted to it by its founders. It is free and open, full of snap and action, exciting to the onlooker, and fast and strenuous enough in all conscience to the player. The most radical departure made from the Rugby and soccer games was the abolition of "off-side." There is no "on" or "off" side in the Australian game; a player is in the game all the time unless it is the odd moments when he is measuring his length on the grass. The abolition of "off-side" has brought about a system of playing to one another which demands skilful and accurate kicking, and the side which is strongest in this combination play generally wins the game as against brilliant individual effort. The game is played generally on one of the numerous cricket grounds, with eighteen men on a side. The dimensions of the playing field are 150 yards long by 120 yards. On either side of the goal posts parallel with them, at a distance of fifteen yards, are behind posts. An unsuccessful kick for goal going between the goal posts and the behind posts counts one point for a "behind," a clean goal counts six points. Thirteen of the eighteen players are placed, that is, take up certain positions, goal keeper, back, center half back, center, half forward, forward and goal sneak, and three wing men on either side, back, center and forward. The remaining five players are termed followers, and on them, particularly if the ground is greasy or slippery, falls the brunt of the work. Some captains elect to have only four followers, and give one of the number a roving commission, strengthening some weak spot with him, or, if the tide of success is rolling with them, sends the rover forward to strengthen the attack.

The opposing players take up similar positions so that each of the player will take advantage of the free kick to allow his side to get forward or to their positions. If a player secures a "mark" within forty yards of his opponent's goal he will place the ball and try for goal, or, if he prefers it, try a drop kick. Under ordinary conditions from that distance he is expected to score twice out of three times. Goals are frequently dropped from the field at longer distances. The ball in play may be knocked on with the hand, but not thrown on, and handing a ball well in the ruck play by the followers counts for a lot. If the ground is wet and slippery footwork takes the place of the hand ball and the instructions will be to kick on the ground and not try picking the ball up. The game is played in four quarters of twenty minutes each, with an interval of fifteen minutes at half time. This equalizes any advantage to be obtained from wind conditions.

The direction of his side is entirely in the hands of the captain, who generally plays half back, and who uses his judgment in altering the position of any of his men. With a team that has been playing together for a season the men drop into their places instantly, and little instruction is required. Center is the most responsible position in the field. As the ball travels back and forth with great rapidity much of the work falls on his shoulders. He must be a sure "marker"—that is, catcher—a good kicker, either place or drop, and is all the better for being a tall man, as he has an advantage when going up in the air for a catch. The wing men are, of course, chosen for their speed, and often much of the prettiest play is seen between two well-matched fast opponents on the side lines. The forwards must be accurate kickers able to snap the ball out of a rush by the followers and kick quickly and straight. The goal sneak hovers around his opponents' goal. He must be quick as a flash when he gets his chance, for as a rule he is well watched. Interference is allowed in the game, "shepherding your man" is the Australian term for it. Frequently a fast, dodgy runner, well shepherded, will take the ball right down the ground and land it well in his opponents' territory. Besides the drop kicking and marking, or catching, speed is the greatest feature of the Australian game. On the slightest sign of the ball being held onto or wrestled over the umpire will sound his whistle and start the game along by bouncing the ball in the middle of the followers. The best umpire is the one who fusses least and interferes as little as possible with the game. A man must be in the pink of condition to last through the eighty minutes of fast play in the course of a game, the essential features of which are speed and activity. Roughness has as far as possible been eliminated from the Australian game, though now and then accidents happen. The opportunities for roughing an opponent can only be obtained by the sacrifice of one's own play, and the player who goes for the man instead of for the ball quickly gets dropped out of his team. It is impossible to adequately convey an idea of the opportunities in it for brilliant individual play, combined with concerted action of the whole team. Beside it soccer appears tame and spiritless and the Rugby game slow and ponderous.

THIRD GAME OF THE SERIES

Duluth Soccer Team Will Meet Minneapolis Players Again.

Tomorrow afternoon in Minneapolis the Duluth-Superior Pickets will play the third game of their series with the Clan Gordons of that city. Local enthusiasts are willing to give large odds on the Head of the Lakes aggregation, as they played a much faster game than the Clan Gordons on the local field three weeks ago, and lost in the two contests played at that time on account of inferior work on the part of Goaltender Patterson. Knapp, a new man with long experience in the position and a considerable reputation in soccer football circles, has been signed to hold the place down tomorrow, and this department of the game will be well attended to.

These two teams are admittedly the fastest in the Northwest now, and are very evenly matched, so one of the best games of this variety of ball which has been seen in this section of the country for a long time is looked for in the Mill City tomorrow.

The line-up follows:

Dul.-Superior.	Position.	Minneapolis.

How to Cure a Cold.

The question of how to cure a cold without unnecessary loss of time is one in which we are all more or less interested, for the quicker o cold is gotten rid of the less the danger of pneumonia and other serious diseases. Mr. B. W. L. Hall of Waverly, Va., has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for years and says: "I firmly believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be absolutely the best preparation on the market for colds. I have recommended it to my friends and they all agree with me." For sale by all druggists.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the City Clerk of the City of Eveleth, St. Louis County, Minnesota, up to Tuesday, October 16, 1906, at 8 o'clock P. M., for the erection and completion of two frame residences, to be built at the pumping plant at St. Mary's lake, according to plans and specifications on file at the office of the City Clerk, Eveleth, Minn., Duluth Builders' Exchange or at the office of the architects, Bray & Nystrom, Duluth, Minnesota.

All bids must be accompanied by a certified check for $250.00, payable to W. J. Davey, City Treasurer, said check to be forfeited by the successful bidder in case he fails to enter into the contract and furnish a satisfactory surety bond in an amount equal to the contract price agreed upon, within five days after the award.

The city council of the said City of Eveleth reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

The sealed proposals must be marked "Bid for erection of residences at pumping plant," and addressed to the undersigned at Eveleth, Minn.

By order of the City Council of the City of Eveleth Minn.

SILER AN OLD TIMER.

Veteran Referee Began Boxing Forty-Five Years Ago.

It was just sixty years ago that George Siler began his life in New York city. In 1890 he began boxing, and met some of the best men in America at all weights in the feather class, his own weight being around 112. In 1871 he issued a challenge to the world, but it was not accepted.

In the following year he boxed with Dooney Harris, ex-champion middleweight, for a period of fourteen weeks at the Grand Opera house, New York city. He then went on the road with Billy Warden, meeting all comers at 115. Following this tour of a year and a half more, he became a boxing instructor and has taught in various parts of the country for twenty years, with frequent intervals.

From 1880 to 1885 he was superintendent of Iron Pier, at Coney Island, and the following year went to Chicago, where he taught boxing until 1891, when, as he expresses it, "I broke into newspaper work." Since then he has contributed to the sporting columns of all the leading newspapers and magazines in the country, and at present being a member of the sporting staff of the Chicago Tribune.

For a period of five years he was referee at all of the contests at the Chicago Athletic club, and he also refereed all of the fights in Chicago World's fair year; at Roby, Ind., which is just across the Illinois state line, and really a suburb of Chicago.

The first big fight that he refereed was the Fitzsimmons-Maher match in Mexico. Then followed the Fitzsimmons-Corbett match at Carson City, the McGovern-Pedlar Palmer match for the bantam championship, at Tuckahoe, N. Y.; the Fitzsimmons-Jeffries, the Jeffries-Sharkey and the Fitz-Ruhlin-Jack O'Brien matches at Coney Island.

He was asked to referee the Britt-Nelson match, but refused. The last championship fights at which he officiated were the Kid Carter-Tommy Ryan, at Fort Erie, Ont., in 1902; the Jimmy Gardner-O'Keefe match, at Indianapolis, and the "Honey" Melody-Jack Dougherty match at Milwaukee.

FRANK MORSE

Again to Coach Minneapolis Central High School Football Team.

Minneapolis, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—A line on the progress of the Minneapolis Central high school football team is always of interest to the Duluth followers of the pig-skin, as the Minneapolis aggregation is the principal opponent of the Duluth high school team.

The high school football teams of the Twin City circle have been busy for the last week, in trying out against their various alumni teams.

Frank Morse, coach of the Minneapolis Central squad, and who had resigned, saying that under no condition would he again take charge of the team, was so disgusted with the playing of the Central team against the alumni, that he immediately informed Capt. Green that he would consider his former decision and again take charge of his former players.

Central high of Minneapolis again has hopes of placing another champion team in the field, considering the return of the veterans, Breisky, Putnam, Tobin and Capt. Green; but Schraeder, the first half back, who had returned, was informed by the faculty that he was ineligible because of being over 21 years of age; this being one of the new rules strictly enforced this year by the various high school teams of the state.

The Minneapolis boys have not arranged a very extensive schedule, but rather consider the Duluth game the most important one of the year. And this fact evidently shows the fear of the strength developed by Findlay, and his excellent coaching of the Duluth Central high school team.

BRITISH

Turf Still Interested in the Doings of American Trainers.

The methods of American trainers still arouse the interest of English racing. "Ranger," in the Illustrated Sporting News, in writing of the ways of the trainer from over-seas, says:

"They are hard workers, early risers, clever stablemen. A visitor to downs or heath may find them out at this season by 5 a. m., or earlier, since they have the first coolness of the morning, its beneficient dew and its generally wholesome influences. Horses thus worked are not asked to do much galloping. They are, perhaps, kept out for as long as two hours and a half, walking and pottering about or picking grass after a necessary canter or so; some are stripped and rubbed down in the open air—it must be a delightful experience—ere returning to their stable. That seems to be a sort of specialty with the foreign trainers, who believe in a consistent out-of-door treatment as far as practicable, and, judging by results, their argument is sound enough. They are not beaten by a want of fitness when they bet.

"A feature of the American trainers' practice is that they bestow special attention and study to the question of horses' food. More hot mashes are given to them than are prescribed by the English code, which generally provides for a warm mash on Saturday nights as being adequate for all practical purposes. Three or four such feeds each week may be conceded by the 'foreigners,' and any trouble in relation to scouring is apparently surmounted with ease."

VALUABLE COLT

Is Dick Welles---Maud Gonne Dead a Turney Farm.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 6.—Turney Brothers, the Paris, Ky., turfmen, have had the misfortune to lose by death the very valuable suckling colt by the sensational Dick Welles, out of the flying Maude Gonne, by The Commoner. The noted mare was bred back to Dick Welles last spring. Her first foal, a yearling brown filly, is by Captain Sigsbee, the sire of Martin Doyle, True Boy and Cottontown, and is a youngster of much promise. Turney Bros. have but two other yearlings this season by Captain Sigsbee, which, for its limited chances in the stud, is proving a big success as a sire. He is a son of imp. Candlemas, the sire of Irish Lad, and his granddam is Brilliancteen, by War Dance. The latter was an own sister to the famous race mare L'Argentine, and she traces to Mavis, the grandam of the great Joe Daniels. It is the No. 9 family of the Bruce low figure system. Capt. Amos Turney says up to the time Martin Doyle, Cottonwood and True Boy were foaled, Captain Sigsbee had not been bred to as many as ten mares in his entire stud career, and the fact that his owners have now but three yearlings by him illustrates how limited his chances have thus far been as a sire.

VISITORS ARE HUSKY

Grand Rapids Players Fully Equal the Locals in Weight.

Game at Athletic Park Should be a Hard Battle.

At 6:30 last evening, accompanied by a small but enthusiastic bunch of rooters, the Grand Rapids football aggregation struck Duluth, and the players have been spending the intervening time resting up for this afternoon's contest with the Duluth high school boys.

They are a husky-looking bunch of punters, averaging 150 pounds per man, which is every ounce as much as the local aggregation can produce, and they are preparing to give the Duluth eleven about as warm a game as they care to run up against.

It is certain, at any rate, that the game will be no walk-away, and if the locals make the three touchdowns which they have figured out ought to be theirs, they will win them only by the hardest kind of fighting. With a prospect of a good, hard game like this, and the first appearance of the Duluth team at home, there should be a good big crowd on the Athletic park field this afternoon.

Last evening was spent by the Duluth team in hard signal practice, no scrimmage work being indulged in for fear of an injury to some of the players. All the plays were working fairly well before they left the field, though there is much room for improvement. Fumbling, the ever-present evil at this stage of the season's work, is not as conspicuously absent as might be wished, and some of the plays get into motion rather slowly.

The fight for center has not been settled yet, the line-up given by Capt. McDevitt last evening giving the position for today's game to either Coventry or Anderson. It is probable that Coventry will be put in, however.

The line-up of the teams which are facing each other on the Athletic park gridiron this afternoon is as follows:

Duluth.	Position.	Grand Rapids.
Clausen	le	W. Mar
Paine	lt	Peterson
Poirier	lg	Alton
Coventry or Anderson	c	Polley
Crawford	rg	Tuel
Peterson	rt	O. King
Bradley	re	Seamans
Ryan	q	R. Mar
Cummings	l	Craemer
McKinley	fb	Meyers

SLICK BASEBALL TRICKS.

Baltimore Champions of Early 90's Were a Great Aggregation.

Baseball enthusiasts who have watched the game carefully and faithfully for the last five years are prone to the opinion that the game, as played in the American and National leagues today, is faster and more scientific than any baseball which the world has ever seen, says the Washington Star. But fans of, say fifteen years' standing, as well as many players who are still doing great stuits in the big leagues and who took part in the historic struggles of the early '90s, declare that there never was such ball before and never will be such ball again as that which was put up in the twelve-club league during the years 1894, 1895, 1896 and 1897, when the Baltimores, New Yorks, Bostons and Clevelands, to say nothing of the other eight teams, were battling for supremacy.

Hanlon went to Baltimore from Pittsburg in 1893, when the Baltimore team was, to put it mildly, pretty punk. Hanlon fired all the old-timers, retained the promising youngsters and got out and hustled for more. Among those whom he retained was McGraw, though Barnie had in the previous summer, been upon the point of selling Mac to Anson for $400.

The writer was, during all the years mentioned, the baseball editor of a leading Baltimore newspaper, and he saw every game the Baltimore team played, at home and away from home, from the spring practice trips through the South to the post-season series, and he claims that all there was or is in "slick" baseball he saw in that time.

Hanlon never had a lot of stars on his team, that is, to start with. True, they all developed into stars, but that came later. In 1893 the club made a mediocre showing in the race, but it got out of the tail-end nabit. Then "Foxy Eddie" began to make some of his celebrated trades at the end of that season, those trades in which the other fellows seemed to get the worst of it. He sent Shindle and Treadway to Brooklyn in exchange for Brouthers and Keeler. Shindle had been a good third baseman and a poor sticker both for Detroit and for Baltimore, but he was going down hill. Treadway was a hog-wild batter whom Hanlon had obtained from California at the same time he got Catcher Bill Clarke, late of Washington fame, and second baseman Reitz. Treadway could run just about as fast as Clarke, but he wasn't the all-round player that Clarke was. Brouthers, though an old-timer, did good work for Baltimore with the stick, and as for Keeler, everybody knows what Keeler has become. Then he was a third baseman, and a left-handed thrower, at that—a most serious handicap for a man playing that position. Hanlon put him in right field. Jennings came from Louisville, with First Baseman Harry Taylor thrown in, and Billy Barnie, who had gone to manage Louisville, got, in return for these two, one Tim O'Rourke, and whatever became of Tim after he left Louisville nobody seems to know.

Jennings, who is now manager of the Baltimore Eastern League club, developed into what was probably the most brilliant shortstop that ever played baseball, though some still argue that Herman Long, of Boston, was his equal, if not his superior. Kelley, now captain of the Cincinnatis under the management of his old leader, was purchased from Pittsburg for a song, as was Brodie from St. Louis, and these two turned out to be able to fill the left and center gardens as acceptably as any other two outfielders in the league. Kelley was a great batter; Brodie was a good one.

Hanlon, during his stay in Baltimore, always had the same catchers—Robinson, the old stand-by, and one of the best that ever wore a mask; Clarke, a good substitute, and Bowerman, now New York's star, who very seldom got a chance. Four men played first base at different times—Taylor, Brouthers, Carey—also known in Washington—and Jack Doyle. Reitz, from California, led the second basemen one year, McGraw, of course, was on third. Steve Brodie and Stenzel were in center during theese different seasons.

Of pitchers through the three championship years and the following year, when Baltimore lost the championship to Boston by a margin of one game, there was a long string. Among them was McMahon, Gleason, now captain and second baseman of the Philadelphia National league club; Arthur Clarkson, Hemming, Esper, Baker, McNabb, Pond, Inks, Mullane, Hawke, Brown, Nops and Joe Corbett. There may have been some others, but of all this list there were only two really first-class men—McMahon and Corbett. McMahon was the equal of any twirler of those days, not barring Rusie, Meekin, "Cy" Young (the same old "Cy" today) or Breitenstein; and Corbett, when he was right, was unbeatable.

With this bunch of has-beens, unknowns and nonedscripts, Hanlon went to Macon, Ga., in March, 1894, and started to drill some baseball sense into them individually and to weld his material into a team in all that the world implies. For two weeks in Macon and for two weeks in New Orleans the gang was put through the paces morning and afternoon, and was taught more baseball than they ever dreamed of. The hit and run was originated right in Macon at that time, and was tried with success time and time again in the contests with the Southern league clubs. The squeeze play was there perfected, as well as the triple steal, which was pulled off the other day by the New York Giants with so much eclat and hailed as a brand-new trump. There were lots of others, too, Hanlon giving much of his attention to what is known as "inside" work—that is, the work which is done when the team is at the bat.

The members of the Baltimore club off the field were like one happy family. All of the boys were pals. There were no cliques, no factions. "Go get the runs," was Hanlon's motto. Another, and the one which really meant the secret of the club's success, was "Do just what the other fellows don't expect you to do." I have seen one of the weakest batters on the team go to the plate with the bases full and two hands out and bunt the ball. And he scored the man from third, too, just because the other fellows were not looking for it.

When the team returned to Baltimore to open the season of 1894 with the New York Giants, Hanlon was "under cover." He would make no prediction for the club save to say that he thought his men would finish in the first division. The best known baseball scribes in the country laughed at this prediction. Among these were Tim Murnane and Jake Morse of Boston. The very best Baltimore could get, they said, was eighth place in the 12-club outfit.

In the parade to the baseball grounds on the opening day—brass bands, flags, cheers and all sorts of frills—the writer rode in a carriage with O. P. Caylor of the New York Herald, Joe Villa of the New York Sun and George Stackhouse of the New York Tribune. None of these men had the Orioles placed any better than ninth. New York, of course, was to win the pennant. They talked of the great condition of Rusie's arm and of how Charley Farrell was lining them down to second. They offered to bet three to two that New York would win the opening game, with no takers. Much to the disgust of "Nick" Engel, Judge Cullum, De Wolf Hopper, Digby Bell, Marshall Wilder and about 600 other New York rooters who had accompanied their club to Oystertown, McMahon and Robinson outpointed Rusie and Farrell, and Baltimore won the first game. Not only that, but they won all the rest of the series, and the Gothamites left town a dejected and a poorer lot.

In the first inning of this game the hit-and-run was tried for the first time in the big league, and John Montgomery Ward was the victim. Jennings had reached first base with one out. The sign was given and Jennings made a bluff to steal. Farrell shot the ball down, and Ward, who was playing second, covered the bag. This was what Kelley, who was at the bat, wanted to know. On the next ball pitched Jennings started for second in earnest and Ward came over to take the throw. Kelley banged the ball to the position that Ward had just vacated and Johnny tried to reverse but couldn't. The ball rolled out to right field, Jennings kept on to third, and on Fleman's throw to catch him there Kelley sneaked down to second. Brodie, next up, hit safely and two runs scored.

"You can't beat that kind of baseball," Ward said to the writer at his hotel after the game.

The squeeze play—which means for the man on third to start toward the plate with the pitcher's arm, and the batter to bunt the ball—was also tried by this game first, as was the triple steal, which means the same play with the bases full. The Orioles didn't forget, either, to rake up forgotten tricks of bygone days that were good ones, and to make them good again.

One of these said to have been invented by the celebrated Mike Kelly, of Chicago and Boston, was tried successfully upon one occasion the writer remembers by Keeler, in Chicago. Big Bill Lange, now in retirement in California, was at the bat, and he hit one of those furious drives of his that went right between the first baseman and the bag. The ball curved pretty nearly to the foul line, and Lange, who could run like a quarter horse, was pounding away to stretch it into a three bagger. Keeler, playing right, was digging just as fast after the ball. Suddenly "Wee Willie" grabbed up the sphere, passed it in to Reitz, who shot it to third, and Lange was nailed by McGraw by fifteen feet.

After dinner that night the Baltimore boys were sitting in front of the Tremont house when Lange strolled up. Approaching Keeler he said:

"Willie, I take off my bonnet to you for doing one of the fastest bits of fielding that have seen for many a day. I have made a dozen of those hits to that corner this season and they all have been good for three bases, and some of them for home runs."

"That's all right, Bill," replied Keeler, "but the ball I threw you out with wasn't the ball you hit. I have had a ball planted there in the grass for two days, just waiting for you to soak one of your drives to the right-field corner."

Was Lange sore? Verdays! But there was nothing to do for the game was over and it had been finished with a ball which had never been put into play by the umpire.

Another good trick of this aggregation was exemplified in their success at catching a man napping off second base. This was worked by the pitcher, catcher, second baseman and shortstop. With a man on second the pitcher would turn and throw to nail him. Jennings, at short, would take the throw and try to touch the base runner. This attempt would be made several times unsuccessfully.

Then Jennings would lead the way up the base path toward third, leading the base runner at the same time to believe that all efforts to catch him had ceased. Suddenly the catcher would give the signal, and Reitz, who had been playing away off second, almost in short right field, would make a dive for the bag, the pitcher would whirl and throw the ball, and Mr. Baserunner would be dead on the spot. This plot was consummated repeatedly.

When Baltimore won the championship in 1894, having won eighteen straight games on the last Western trip and having lost but one game on that whole trying journey, all Baltimore turned out to meet them upon their return. There was a parade several miles long, the streets and houses were decorated and illuminated; they had a grand reception at the Fifth Regiment Armory and a gala banquet at the Hotel Rennert. The celebration continued for several days, and if training was ever broken it was broken right there. Then New York came along and beat the champions for the Temple Cup, but this did not detract much from the glory which had already accrued to this collection of dark horses.

Baltimore was baseball crazy that year and for three years afterward, but the achievements of that famous club practically killed baseball in the town for many years to come. The public was spoiled. It wanted the best baseball to be had or none at all. "Too much of a good thing" is as true in baseball as in other more momentous affairs. Now the Monumental City is represented by a good club in the Eastern league, with auburn-topped Hughey Jennings as the only reminder of those days of glory.

And it will be a long, long time before such a team as that one ever steps upon a diamond again.

Ball Magnate Here.

W. H. Yawkey of New York, owner of the Detroit American league baseball team, is in the city today on his way to the Mesaba range. He is planning a hunting trip to some part of the north country, but has not fully made up his mind as to where he wants to go.

Hibbing and Return $2.20.

Via Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway. For St. Louis County Fair and Indian Summer Race meet, Hibbing, Oct. 5 to 8, inclusive. The Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway on these dates will sell round trip tickets at one fare, good returning until Oct. 9, 1906. Two trains daily. Observation-cafe car on both trains.

ODDS FAVOR NATIONALS

Betting is 5 to 3 That They Will Defeat Sox.

Will be Test of Two Distinct Types of Baseball.

Only two more days of the baseball season in the big leagues remain, and by Monday the regular games will be over for another year.

The post season series for the world's championship between the two Chicago clubs will last at least four days and perhaps a week longer, and the interest of the fans in all parts of the country is now centered on these games.

For some reason the Cubs appear to be the favorites in the betting, the odds runabout 5 to 3 that they will win the series. Just why this is the case is difficult to see, unless it is because of their superior batting, but it remains to be seen whether this batting will continue against the great corps of pitchers on the pay roll of Comiskey.

The Sox, on the other hand, have earned the title of the Hitless Wonders. There is not a slugger on the team, and the Sox have been winning their games all year on fast, tricky, work on the bases, snappy fielding and grand team work.

Game after game the Sox would have fewer hits than their opponents and yet win out.

The Sox also undoubtedly have the greatest staff of pitchers in the American league. In White and Altrock they have two of the greatest southpaws in the country, and Walsh's work has also been gilt edged.

Opposing this great trio, the Cubs have such men as Brown, Reulbach, Taylor and Lundgren.

It will be a battle between two of the greatest baseball machines the country has ever seen, and also a test of the two different types of baseball.

All records for attendance are likely to go glimmering, and preparations are being made to accommodate the greatest crowds in the history of the game. Last year the accommodations were inadequate for the post season series between the same two teams, and last year neither of them had a pennant. This year Chicago is baseball crazy, and fans will come from all parts of the country to witness the games.

The following interview with Comiskey, published in the Chicago Journal, may be of interest to the fans:

"Scientific baseball won the American league pennant for the White Sox. That is the answer I make to all those who ask me how we did it. Many people seem to think that there are better ball clubs in the American league than the Sox. I cannot follow their figuring.

"The team that goes through the entire season and wins the most games is the best team. There is nothing to it except such a conclusion. My team has had the hardest fight of any team that ever won a pennant. We have had none the best of it at any stage from the umpires.

"There is no smoke without fire and when in addition to the statement of my own manager and players, I read in every paper on the circuit where American league ball is played that the Sox are being robbed I am inclined to believe there is some truth in these persistent reports.

"But we have won the pennant and we can forget anything like a few umpires.

"Last spring I said I didn't see any good reason why the flag shouldn't come to the South side park again this fall. It has come, but it was a harder fight than I had anticipated. We had more than our share of hard luck in the way of injuries.

"But we made a grand rally in July, and after that I could see but little chance to lose. The finish was drawn pretty fine, but that is a good thing for baseball.

"We had to be up on our toes every minute for the last month. The strain was cold, and now the Sox will have a chance to breathe easily.

"I want to sidestep a few of the bouquets thrown at me and say that Fielder Jones has been manager of the team all the year, is at the present time, and will continue to be so for the rest of the season. He is a great baseball general and has done wonders with the team. All the praise is due to him.

"People who say our team is lucky to win have not followed baseball or they would know that we were unlucky not to have had the pennant cinched before this. If any team ever had all the bad luck it was ours, but we won in spite of bad luck and other obstacles. My heartiest congratulations to Jones and every member of the team.

"Now let the Cubs look out. We will be there next week, and Chance and his players will know they have been to a ball game every day the two teams play."

BLAINE UNABLE TO GET GAMES

Superior Football Team Has But One Contest Scheduled.

The only game on the schedule of the Blaine high school team is due to come off this afternoon with a mixed city team from Eveleth. This is the only contest which the Superior manager has been able to get, his numerous letters to outside teams, remaining, in the majority of cases, unanswered, either on account of other teams not caring to run up against Blaine's great weight or because they do not wish to encounter the Superior boys' football methods.

North Side, which walloped them to the tune of 50 to 0 last fall, just when they began to have dreams of a national high school championship, was their last hope, and a letter was received from them this week to the effect that their schedule was already too full to take on a team of Blaine's caliber.

In regard to the Duluth game, things are decidedly unsettled as yet. Principal Lynch had a conference with Principal Smith, and Faculty Supervisor of Athletics Phillips of Duluth this week, and no agreement was reached. The chief point of difference was that Superior wants to allow men to play who have been out of school for a number of years, and returned this fall to play football. Duluth also objects to the Buchanan boys on the ground that they have played in games, which if not actually professional, would not have received the sanction of the Interscholastic Athletic association, but they have agreed to disregard the ruling if August and Henderson who have been out of school for a number of years be ruled out for the Duluth game. The Blairites were to have given an answer to this, by the end of the week, but up to this morning nothing had been heard from them.

There may be someone advertising for employment today who would be worth to you as much as any two of your present employees.

JUST RIGHT FOR DUCKS

Weather Conditions Are Now Perfect for Good Sport.

Partridges Are Reported Very Scarce in Their Usual Haunts.

This kind of weather ought to bring ducks down from the North.

The sportsmen have been patiently waiting for a heavy frost to make hunting conditions right, and from this time there should be some good sport to be found in the wild rice fields around Duluth.

Sportsmen who have been up over the new line of the Duluth, Virginia & Rainey Lake road, say that the country is one of the greatest duck hunting grounds ever opened up. In some of the lakes near the line of the new road, the wild rice is very thick, and the ducks are to be seen in thousands. It is the virgin country for the duck hunter, and for first class sport is probably the best district within reach of Duluth.

The partridges appear to be very scarce this season. Reports from the range towns are to the effect that very few birds have been seen this fall, and but few hunters have been successful in bagging any in the usual haunts close to the towns. Farther back in the woods they are doubtless more plentiful, but each year, apparently, it is necessary to go farther for them than the year previous.

The deer season will open in abut five weeks now, and already a number of sportsmen are looking forward to it. Many deer are being killed by pot hunters on the range, and along the line of the two range roads.

FOOTBALL AS PLAYED

In Australia Regarded as Greatest Game of Gridiron Sports.

Interesting Facts in Connection With the Sport Described.

All kinds of sports find favor in Australia, so much so that visitors to that island continent of contrariness, where the native birds have no song and the flowers no smell, sometimes wonder how its inhabitants find time for the more serious pursuits of life. Horse racing, cricket, rowing, golf, tennis, swimming, baseball, and last, but not least, football, all have their following, and in their seasons crowds of enthusiastic attendants at the games. The equable climate of the country, with not too hot a summer and a mild winter, permits the majority of these pastimes to be carried on practically the year round. The most popular sport, not even excepting the national game of cricket, in which Australians have held their own with their mother country, is undoubtedly football. In horse racing, with the starting gate and numbered saddlecloth, and in swimming, with the famous "crawl" stroke, Australians have, in their devotion to sport, thought out many improvements and newer methods. The game of football, as played in the four Southern states of Victoria, Tasmania, South Australia and Western Australia, and familiarly termed the "Australian game," is entirely different from English Rugby or the association game known as "soccer." In the opinion of its followers they have evolved a game which, while possessing many of the best points of both Rugby and soccer, is infinitely superior to either. It is only fair to say that this belief is not shared in by the followers of football in the older state of New South Wales, where English Rugby is played, or by the New Zealanders, who carried all before them in England last year. The international matches between New South Wales and New Zealand invariably draw an immense crowd to the Sydney cricket ground.

The founders of the Australian game were three old Rugby boys, who thought that an improvement could be made on the game of their school days. They desired to make the game more open and freer, to avoid the scrimmages in which brute strength and weight play such an important part, and to make drop kicking the strongest feature of the game. The history of the game has been one of evolution. From time to time the rules have been altered and modified in minor details, but in the main the game retains today all the features imparted to it by its founders. It is free and open, full of snap and action, exciting to the onlooker, and fast and strenuous enough in all conscience to the player. The most radical departure made from the Rugby and soccer games was the abolition of "off-side." There is no "on" or "off" side in the Australian game; a player is in the game all the time unless it is the odd moments when he is measuring his length on the grass. The abolition of "off-side" has brought about a system of playing to one another which demands skilful and accurate kicking, and this side which is strongest in this combination play generally wins the game as against brilliant individual effort. The game is played generally on one of the numerous cricket grounds, with eighteen men on a side. The dimensions of the playing field are 150 yards long by 120 yards. On either side of the goal posts parallel with them, at a distance of fifteen yards, are behind posts. An unsuccessful kick for goal going between the goal posts and the behind posts counts one point for a "behind," a clean goal counts six points. Thirteen of the eighteen players are placed, that is, take up certain positions, goal keeper, back, half back, center, half forward, forward and goal sneak, and three wing men on either side, back, center and forward. The remaining five players are termed followers, and on them, particularly if the ground is greasy or slippery, falls the brunt of the work. Some captains elect to have only four followers, and give one of the number a roving commission, strengthening some weak spot with him, or, if the tide of success is rolling with them, sends the rover forward to strengthen the attack.

The opposing players take up similar positions so that each of the placed men finds an opponent at his elbow and the game is a series of individual duels, backed up by the efforts of the eight or ten followers. The central umpire plays a very important and arduous part in the game. When the ball goes out of bounds at the side lines he must be there to throw it in and the players must allow it to touch the ground before it is in play. The umpire starts the game by bouncing the ball in the center of the ground and from that moment till his whistle calls "cease play" he is never still. The ball used is the regulation sized English Rugby, torpedo-shaped, but not so much as the American ball. Running with the ball is permitted, but it must be bounced on the ground every seven yards or so, but in this respect the judgment of the umpire decides the case. Flagrant infringement of the rule he will penalize by awarding a free kick to the opposite side. It might be supposed that having to thus handle the ball a player would not make much speed, but this is a mistake, for with continual practice he will on a dry turf run as fast as with the ball under his arm in Rugby style. When tackled a player must drop the ball, for holding on unnecessarily the penalty is a free kick. Pushing an opponent from behind is forbidden and so is deliberately running into him while he is waiting to make a "mark," that is, to catch the ball. "Marking" is a strong feature of the Australian game, as the catch from either an opponent or one of his own side, if the ball has not been touched in transit, entitles a player to a free kick. If anywhere near the center no time is lost, but the ball is at once kicked on, and if the enemy is pressing near his goal the player will take advantage of the free kick to allow his side to get forward or to their positions. If a player secures a "mark" within forty yards of his opponent's goal he will place the ball and try for goal, or, if he prefers it, try a drop kick. Under ordinary conditions from that distance he is expected to score twice out of three times. Goals are frequently dropped from the field at longer distances. The ball in play may be knocked on with the hand, but not thrown on, and handing a ball well in the ruck play by the followers counts for a lot. If the ground is wet and slippery footwork takes the place of the hand ball and the instructions will be to kick on the ground and not try picking the ball up. The game is played in four quarters of twenty minutes each, with an interval of fifteen minutes at half time. This equalizes any advantage to be obtained from wind conditions.

The direction of his side is entirely in the hands of the captain, who generally plays half back, and who uses his judgment in altering the position of any of his men. With a team that has been playing together for a season the men drop into their places instantly, and little instruction is required. Center is the most responsible position in the field. As the ball travels back and forth with great rapidity much of the work falls on his shoulders. He must be a sure "marker"—that is, catcher—a good kicker, either place or drop, and is all the better for being a tall man, as he has an advantage when going up in the air for a catch. The wing men are, of course, chosen for their speed, and often much of the prettiest play is seen between two well-matched fast opponents on the side lines. The forwards must be accurate kickers able to snap the ball out of a rush by the followers and kick quickly and straight. The goal sneak hovers around his opponents' goal. He must be quick as a flash when he gets his chance, for as a rule he is well watched. Interference is allowed in the game, "shepherding your man" is the Australian term for it. Frequently a fast, dodgy runner, well shepherded, will take the ball right down the ground and land it well in his opponents' territory. Besides the drop kicking and marking, or catching, speed is the greatest feature of the Australian game. On the slightest sign of the ball being held onto or wrestled over the umpire will sound his whistle and start the game along by bouncing the ball in the middle of the followers. The best umpire is the one who fusses least and interferes as little as possible with the game. A man must be in the pink of condition to last through the eighty minutes of fast play in the course of a game, the essential features of which are speed and activity. Roughness has as far as possible been eliminated from the Australian game, though now and then accidents happen. The opportunities for roughing an opponent can only be obtained by the sacrifice of one's own play, and the player who goes for the man instead of for the ball quickly gets dropped out of his team. It is impossible to adequately convey an idea of the opportunities in it for brilliant individual play, combined with concerted action of the whole team. Beside it soccer appears tame and spiritless and the Rugby game slow and ponderous.

THIRD GAME OF THE SERIES

Duluth Soccer Team Will Meet Minneapolis Players Again.

Tomorrow afternoon in Minneapolis the Duluth-Superior Pickets will play the third game of their series with the Clan Gordons of that city. Local enthusiasts are willing to give large odds on the Head of the Lakes aggregation, as they played a much faster game than the Clan Gordons on the local field three weeks ago, and lost in the two contests played at that time on account of inferior work on the part of Goaltender Patterson. Knapp, a new man with long experience in the position and a considerable reputation in soccer football circles, has been signed to hold the place down tomorrow, and this department of the game will be well attended to.

These two teams are admittedly the fastest in the Northwest now, and are very evenly matched, so one of the best games of this variety of ball which has been seen in this section of the country for a long time is looked for in the Mill City tomorrow.

The line-up follows:

Dul.-Superior.	Position.	Minneapolis.
Knapp	goal	Calquhoun
Blackadder	rfb	Redmond
Campbell	lfb	H. Shaw
Sheriff (Capt.)	rh	H. Reese
McDougall	ch	Cochran (Capt.)

Linesman for Duluth-Superior, Archie Gray; for Minneapolis, Alex Murray.

How to Cure a Cold.

The question of how to cure a cold without unnecessary loss of time is one in which we are all more or less interested, for the quicker a cold is gotten rid of the less the danger of pneumonia and other serious diseases. Mr. B. W. L. Hall of Waverly, Va., has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for years and says: "I firmly believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be absolutely the best preparation on the market for colds. I have recommended it to my friends and they all agree with me." For sale by all druggists.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the City Clerk of the City of Eveleth, St. Louis County, Minnesota, up to Tuesday, October 16, 1906, at 8 o'clock P. M., for the erection and completion of two frame residences, to be built at the pumping plant at St. Mary's lake, according to plans and specifications on file at the office of the City Clerk, Eveleth, Minn., Duluth Builders' Exchange or at the office of the architects, Bray & Nystrom, Duluth, Minnesota.

All bids must be accompanied by a certified check for $250.00, payable to W. J. Davey, City Treasurer, said check to be forfeited by the successful bidder in case he fails to enter into the contract and furnish a satisfactory surety bond in an amount equal to the contract price agreed upon, within five days after the award.

The city council of the said City of Eveleth reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

The sealed proposals must be marked "Bid for erection of residences at pumping plant," and addressed to the undersigned at Eveleth, Minn.

By order of the City Council of the City of Eveleth Minn.

ED. SKEEL, City Clerk.

LEAD AND ZINC PROPERTIES

In Southwestern Wisconsin Invested in by Many Upper Peninsula People---Shaffer and Spencely Are Showing Up Well.

Ishpeming, Mich., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—There are perhaps a greater number of Ishpeming people financially interested in lead and zinc properties of Southwestern Wisconsin than can be found in any other place in the upper peninsula. Several companies have been organized here the past few months, while considerable stock in other development and mining corporations has been sold in this city. Last week there was launched the Pine Tree Lead & Zinc company, with Ishpeming and Negaunee men holding a majority of the stock, and which has already determined it property to contain a large body of ore, and now the Spencely Lead & Zinc Mining company has been organized by the officers and directors of the Shaffer Development company, floated here a few weeks ago.

The Spencely property comprises 110 acres, and since the options to it were secured, zinc ore, as well as lead, has been located by two churn drills, which are operating day and night. In fact, one has been encountered in fifteen of the nineteen holes bored to date. The company has been organized with a capitalization of $100,000, divided into 100,000 shares. The same officers control both the Shaffer and Spencely, with the exception that two new members have been added to the board of directors of the Spencely. They are Capt. G. A. Anderson of Negaunee and R. A. McKinney, purchasing agent of the American Sheet & Tin Plate company, of Pittsburg, who is already largely interested in the district. The other directors are James J. Jopling, Marquette; James Clancey, W. H. Hopkins, A. J. Youngbluth, Frank Harper, Ishpeming; E. C. Anthony, James H. Rough, Negaunee; D. T. Morgan, Republic; C. T. Hampton, Iron Mountain.

One of the largest lead deposits yet discovered in Wisconsin has been found on the Shaffer. It is nine feet in thickness and only twenty-six feet from the surface. It has been decided to start mining for the lead as soon as the machinery can be installed. After working out a portion of the lead deposit the shafts will be continued to the zinc, which is some distance lower. The shaft will be 5 by 8 feet in size, the largest in the district. The company controls 264 acres. Two churn drills will be kept in operation on this tract, and two on the Spencely, it being the intention to test both properties thoroughly.

It is the claim of those interested that not only the Shaffer, but the Spencely will be one of the biggest mines in Wisconsin within a few years. The Spencely is only one mile east of the famous Kennedy mine, the richest in Wisconsin, now in operation fourteen years under the present management. The latter property was worked for a long time prior to 1860 and it was abandoned as having been depleted of its lead deposits, but there are today more lead and zinc in sight there, tha nat any previous time in its history. The Kennedy pays $7,000 a month in dividends. It is not for sale, nor is there any stock on the market. It is believed that the Ishpeming men have struck an extension of the cross veins of the Kennedy at the Spencely.

The deposit at the Spencely has been proved up a distance of 210 feet, the depth of the ore body ranging from seven feet in the first hole to twenty-six in the last. Ore running as low as 5 per cent in jack can be mined with a profit, but very few of the operators are bothering with mineral that does not go above 8 or 10 per cent. Both the Shaffer and Spencely ore assays from 10 to 20 per cent.

There is great activity in the Plattville district, over fifty drills in operation in Benton and New Diggins township alone, to say nothing of those in other parts of the district. The mineral district, so far as can now be ascertained, is within the limits of five counties, covering a distance of 2,000 square miles. New deposits are being discovered almost every day. Within the past two weeks no less than sixteen deposits have been found in Benton and New Diggins townships alone. The district is growing rapidly, and every person there, from the oldest to the youngest, is saving money to put into mining ventures. Values of lands are increasing steadily, though they are not being boosted as strongly as one might imagine. It is no wonder that high value is placed on some of the lands near the proved-up mineral formations when it is considered what handsome returns some of the farmers are receiving in royalties. The Empire is a good example. A few years before the mine was discovered the ten acres upon which it is located could be bought for $900. The property is only capitalized at $30,000, and in the two years it has been operated it has paid $185,000 in dividends while the land owners have received $33,000 in royalties. The mine is earning 200 per cent per annum on the price of the original stock, which was $60 per share. There is one excellent feature about zinc, and that is that in its finished product it cannot be used but once. The demand for it is growing rapidly. The United States Steel corporation controls 50 per cent of America's output. Prior to a year ago the corporation was exporting zinc, but for nearly a year past this country has not produced enough of the metal to supply the demand at home, and the big company is now importing instead of exporting. The same condition is true in New England. The zinc mines of Spain have been worked so long, and they have reached such a great depth and are being operated in such a crude way, that they are now being abandoned and will probably never be wrought again. The deepest of the Spanish properties are a mile into the earth.

THE WILD TRIP OF BEN LUCE

Across Nevada's Deserts to be Among the First to Reach the New Gold Mining Camp of Fairview.

Goldfield, Nev., Oct. 6.—That the quest for gold does not make more madmen than history chronicleth is surprising when one hears the tale told here in Goldfield of Ben Luce's wild trip, last spring, across Nevada's deserts to be among the first to reach the new gold mining camp of Fairview—a story of extreme exertion, and physical endurance almost superhuman, followed by the keenest possible disappointment, caused by the loss of his bank roll by theft, resulting in his failure to purchase one of the properties he set out after. Luce, acting upon a bit of inside information, picked up from the indiscreet utterances of an assayer, learned of the great gold discovery at Fairview last spring, and left for the scene before the news had gotten out. His subsequent experiences and reverses would have caused many another to turn back in utter disgust, and illustrates pointedly how vacillating is the hand of fate when it comes to showering riches in the way of gold mines on the searchers after the precious metal. Momentarily a millionaire, then again a sturdy desert prospector, and again a man of wealth, Luce has swept about the entire gamut that comes to a man who follows the fortunes of the gold hunter.

Luce was, by actual count, the fifth man in the new camp. When he arrived he had the pick of the entire district to select from, including the Nevada hills, the Eagle's Nest and the Fairview Eagle. He looked the ground over and decided that the Eagle's Nest was the best property, from surface mineral evidences in sight. In a few minutes he tied this group of claims up with an option for purchase at a few thousand dollars, by paying down a few hundreds. This materially depleted his available supply of cash, but he succeeded in securing an over-night option on the Nevada hills and the Eagle. He then rolled himself up in his blankets for a night's rest, after having been on the go across miles of blinding, shimmering sand waste and barren ash-gray lava buttes. Wearied by his exertions, he slept soundly.

When he awoke his wallet was gone, and the next morning he was unable to pay down the deposit on the Nevada hills and the Eagle. The old prospectors who had located the claims refused to accept his check, and property that has since proved to be worth three to four million dollars slipped from his grasp.

Luce, in his determination to secure the properties, hired a special automobile that had brought another party of millionaire mine operators to the scene of the excitement, and made a record run during the afternoon and night to Goldfield, the chauffeur driving at terrific speed across the level lands that skirt the foothills of this desert country. A five-minute stop was made at Austin for more gasoline, and an average rate of fifty miles an hour was made into Goldfield. Paying a tribute that would almost purchase a new machine, Luce in fifteen minutes was on his way back to Fairview—well supplied with funds. Again the nerve-racking speed of the automobile was measuring off the miles between him and a fortune of millions. But when he arrived and tendered payment on the Nevada Hills and Eagle, he learned that during his absence these properties had been quickly picked up by later comers.

Development work on the Nevada Hills was begun at once, and in ten days it was shipping high grade ore to the smelters. Since then it has proved to be the biggest mine of its age in the world, with a vein of gold and silver ore averaging $1,500 per ton across five feet. Then came development work on the Eagle, and this turned out a million-dollar bonanza in six weeks time. Luce, apparently, had lost out all around. His hard luck in failing to secure these two great properties, which could have been his for a few hundred dollars each and which he could have turned within ninety days at a profit of millions, discouraged him and those interested with him, and for several months they would not do so much as to go and look at the Eagle's Nest. Luce sold out his interest during the summer for a song, retaining only a few thousand shares of stock in a corporation formed to operate the claims, Henry Peery, associate of Sam Newhouse, the millionaire mine operator of Salt Lake; L. M. Sullivan of the L. M. Sullivan Trust company, of Goldfield; and Governor Sparks of Nevada, were the purchasers. The property was sold for less than $200,000 to the present owners, and Luce's share, after paying his partners, was less than $40,000.

Six weeks ago, development work was begun on the Eagle's Nest, and pay ore has been opened in three places that proves the property to have a surface showing surpassing that of even the Nevada Hills and the Eagle. Luce's good judgment in selecting the Eagle's Nest as the pick of the camp is being vindicated and that, in a measure, compensates him for the misfortune that came his way.

The Eagle's Nest Fairview estate is rapidly developing into a great mine. In a recent report made on the property by JJohn D. Campbell, formerly consulting engineer for the Schwab interests in Nevada, the following excerpts appear:

"The estate of the Eagle's Nest Fairview Mining company is surrounded by the best mining properties in the camp. It is bounded on the southeast by the Nevada Hills and Fairview Eagle, or Wingfield group, and on the north by the Dromedary Hump—all of which are producing high grade ore. An examination of the territory was made for the purpose of deciding where permanent development work should be started and required some time on account of the many good ledges that traverse the acreage. It was finally decided to drive a tunnel on a ledge that crosses the Tisson claim, where an excellent showing is in evidence. The tunnel starts at the base of the hill, on which the ledge crops and will continue on its strike a distance of 150 feet to the objective point—the apex of the hill and directly under the original discovery point. The vein crops the entire distance and shows great quantities of ore at grass roots carrying gold contents of $60 to $85 a ton. A second ledge running northeast and southwest and cropping for 200 feet, showing $30 to $40 ore, will be intersected by this tunnel at a depth of over 100 feet. On the Lookout claims, belonging to the same company, are several good-looking quartz ledges that assay from a few dollars up and which will be thoroughly prospected. On the Eagle's Nest No. 2, there is a fine ledge of manganese ore showing, and within a few hundred feet of the company's line, high grade shipping ore is being mined and sacked on the Wingfield property. The Eagle's Nest Fairview presents one of the best mine showings in Fairview and gives every promise of developing intc one of the great mines of the state of Nevada."

Luce is in Salt Lake City now. Unbounded confidence that his original judgment was right has returned to him, and he declares he was hoodooed on his first trip to Fairview and he hasn't worn it off yet.

AMERICAN MINING CONGRESS

To Meet in Denver This Month and Attendance Will Be Large---Tunnel Being Driven Into Bald Mountain.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 6.—Much interest is being taken in the American Mining congress, which will meet in Denver Oct. 16 to 19 inclusive. A bill will be discussed providing for the punishment of promoters of illegitimate mining enterprises. The committee to draft the bill includes United States Senators Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin and Fred T. Dubois of Idaho, Congressmen Eben W. Martin of South Dakota, and Governors George C. Pardee of California and Joseph W. Folk of Missouri. The attendance of practical mining men will be large, and the meeting will be one of much importance.

The Up-To-Date Gold Mining company is driving a tunnel into Bald Mountain in Boulder county. In penetrating 150 feet the bore has cut through the great iron dyke, connected with which are the richest veins of the district. The objective is an old crater whose sides are covered with float carrying $2 to $15 gold a ton. In an early day the region was abandoned, as ore carrying less than $30 a ton could not be mined profitably. The Caribou silver mine, in that locality, was closed by the slump in values, seriously affecting all the other mines, after yielding $10,000,000. The silver market value now encourages the reopening of the mine.

Providence, R. I., capitalists are behind a movement to crowd development on the properties of the Dome Rock, Colo., and Pike's Peak, Palisades and Capizone companies, Cripple Creek. A vigorous development policy will be pursued during the next year. The company owns 2,000 acres north of the known mineral belt of the camp.

The Golden Cycle Gold Mining company has acquired control of the stock of the United States Gold Mines company of Cripple Creek, in a deal representing $350,000. The United Gold Mines company was organized four years ago by the Woods Investment company through the merger of several leading companies. The mine involved include the famous W. P. H., Wild Horse, Trail, Trachyte, Deadwood, and others, on Bull and Battle mountains. These mines have produced $1,000,000 worth of ore.

The Golden Cycle company recently bought several hundred acres of coal land east of Colorado Springs, including mines supplying Colorado Springs market, ostensibly for fuel for the Golden Cycle cyanide mill now being built near the city at $300,000 cost. The company has thus become second in importance only to the Portland, while covering twice the area. Much interest centers in its plans for the development of its great estate.

The September output of Cripple Creek and other Colorado camps will exceed that for the same month of 1905.

The Carpenter lease on the Pharmacist mine, Cripple Creek, is in a mud vein at 185 feet depth, which carries free and rusty gold values. The mud, after hoisting, is slowly dried by wood fire. Shipments have returned $20 to $60 a ton.

The Louisville mine, Leadville district, is in large bodies of zinc ore in upper and lower workings. The advance in zinc has led to an increase in the force at work on this property.

Returns from shipments from the Accident claim on Gold Hill, Cripple Creek, give $1,200 gold a ton. The mine is owned in Brooklyn, N. Y. The ore is coming from a seam opened at 250 feet depth.

THE LAKE COPPER MINES

from shaft B, and also more recently by a fine showing made within the last month on the Calico lode at shaft C, which lies east of shaft B and is the most easterly opening that the Michigan has developed. The distance from shaft C to the eastern boundary is over a mile and includes the Old Bee, Superior and Nassau properties.

On all of these old properties there are quite extensive openings, driven thirty to fifty years ago, when the object of all search was mass copper, and ground that is now recognized as very profitable was then rejected.

Beginning with this week the daily rock production of the Allouez was increased to 800 tons. This will mean an additional profit to the company, which on the former basis of 600 tons stamped daily was earning a neat sum monthly in addition to paying for all operating expenses. The company also has been under quite heavy expense in the attempts to reach the ledge through the overburden with its shaft No. 2. This work, which was unsuccessful where the overburden was first attacked, has now been brought to a successful issue. The new location decided upon after a good deal of preliminary work has proved all that the operations promised. The overburden is very solid and it is hoped that the intervening space will be penetrated and cribbed from surface to the ledge within a very short time.

• • •

Exceptionally rich ground is being opened in the bottom of No. 3 shaft of the Adventure mine. This shaft, which is now down to the twelfth level, has been showing steady improvement with depth. Not only are the lodes better mineralized but the formation is more uniform and indications are that at still greater depth the value of the veins will enhance to a still greater extent. Everything about the mine is moving along smoothly. The force is being gradually increased, and arrangements have been made for electric trimming in No. 3 shaft. This will greatly facilitate work and at the samo time reduce the cost.

• • •

Operations at the Michigan mine are progressing nicely. A lot of heavy copper is being taken out and the rock which is being forwarded to the stamp mill is of a very satisfactory nature. The force has been added to until practically both shafts have been filled out, a number of new men being put on this week. Production has been increased and is now averaging about 600 tons of rock daily.

Of the 50 veins which have thus far been uncovered on this property fully half of them have been developed to depths ranging from twenty-five to sixty-five feet. With only one exception, and this was nothing but a stringer on the surface, the veins have continued to show steady widths and values as they went down. Some of them indeed are really richer at the bottom, and in several instances veins seem to be widening out in depth.

There is a very general misunderstanding with reference to the surface value of the veins throughout the district. Without exception the surface showing for a depth of perhaps three or four feet contains a larger percentage of silver, with less of the baser vein matter, than is the case at ten or twenty feet. To the geologist the reason for this is clear at once. The erosion and decomposition of centuries has worn away the baser minerals at the surface, leaving a noticeably larger percentage of the white metal in the outcropping. To such an extent has this decomposition occurred in certain instances that surface nuggets have shown assay values of fully eighty-five per cent silver in several cases. This has given rise in certain quarters to the hasty opinion that the veins were shallow throughout the district, when as a matter of fact these values have almost universally continued steadily in depth.

There is no longer doubt even in the minds of the most skeptical that Cobalt is one of the wonder camps of the continent and that it will continue as an increasing prominent factor in silver mining for many years to come. Many of the men in a position to know from careful personal research throughout the camp during this summer predict that the marvelous development of some of the leading properties will sink into insignificance by comparison with the greater values which the development work of the spring and summer of 1907 will bring to light.

Certain it is that the richly mineralized area has already proven to be much larger than was believed last spring. It may not be too much to predict that in a year or two the activities of the Cobalt district will be duplicated in Bucke and Lorrain townships in the territory to Portage Bay, and possibly in the Temagami Forest Reserve. Activity in the new districts of Boston township, ninety miles to the north and in the territory adjacent to Lake Opasitica in the province of Quebec, is steadily increasing and not a few former Cobalt prospectors are still going into the new Eldorado. The future possibilities of this Northern Ontario country from a mining standpoint are most interesting to contemplate.

RUMORS ABOUT THE WARREN

lington's report be satisfactory, says the Benson Press.

The fact that the Calumet & Arizona company has bought and paid for the entire Clark and Scanlan holdings at Mammoth and that it is buying other property between Benson and their Mammoth investment, along the line of the proposed Phoenix & Eastern railroad, none of which can be worked to advantage until the road is constructed, appears significant, in connection with the fact that the management of the Calumet & Arizona is on intimate terms with the Phelps-Dodge people and in view of the recent statement that the Santa Fe system and the Southwestern company are working in unison on extensions.

It will not be long before there will be something doing down the valley in the way of railway construction from Benson to Winkleman, a stretch of ninety miles through a fertile valley with mountains bearing copper ore on both sides, and a great coal field at the farther end.

The Phoenix & Eastern railroad at present terminates at Winkleman, which is just across the Gila from where the San Pedro joins that stream and a mile from Dudleyville, and is about ninety miles from Benson.

The property recently purchased by the Calumet & Arizona company from Clak and Scanlan is on the west side of the San Pedro river, about thirty miles up the river and sixty miles down the valley from Benson.

MORE NEW COMPANIES

properly it could be used for this purpose.

The South Butte Copper Mining company, which controls a group of claims south of the old Colorado smelter, has decided to sink a shaft 1,000 feet deep on the Virginius claim, which lays about the center of the group. The contract for the hoisting plant was let Wednesday night.

• • •

Development work in the Ohpir mine, located at the foot of Dakota street and under bond to the Butte Central & Boston Copper corporation, is progressing rapidly and the workings above the 500 are showing considerable ore. The shaft is 500 feet deep and the company is crosscutting north and south at that depth. The fact of the south opening is in about 110 feet and that of the north about 30 feet.

• • •

An air of mystery prevails at the Reins. The company is not giving out any information in regard to what it is doing, but occasionally some one tells how the crosscut is going at the 900 and what the south and north veins on the 1,200 show in the way of ore and vein matter. The company is working all right and is hoisting some ore, but the entire time of the engine is not consumed in this part of the work. Shares of stock in the company, once peddled at $2.50 each, are now offered at $1.10 and might be bought for $1 if the person holding them were properly approached. These shares cost all the holders more than this sum, however, and they are not willing to sell at such a low figure. By and by, the shaft will be sunk an additional 300 feet; then there might be more ore in sight.

• • •

The shaft on the property of the Butte & Michigan company is 180 feet deep. A station will be cut at the 200-foot mark. Development has been hampered some recently by reason of insufficient pump capacity, but from now on the sailing will be good, for a new pump, ordered some time ago, was delivered Friday. A 400-gallon pump will be placed on the 200-foot station. This will handle the entire flow for the present, but the chances are that when the veins are cut deeper the flow will increase. However, the 400-gallon pump will stand at least a 300-gallon increase; so the company is prepared to take care of anything that runs into the shaft. The Butte & Michigan company is composed of Butte and Michigan men. Its property is located about a mile southeast of the poor farm and is promising.

• • •

Development on the property of the Calumet & Butte Development company, east of the Altona or Brundy ground just south of Columbia garden canyon, is progressing. The company is now driving a crosscut north at the 200-foot mark on the purpose of intersecting and opening two veins, one of which is about 25 or 30 feet from the shaft and the other about 75 feet. Some stringers of copper have been cut in the opening, and Savin Lisa, one of the officers of the company, says the ore carries from 4 to 5 per cent to 10 per cent copper. He says the ground is looking first-class and indications point to the opening of a copper mine. The company has two claims, the Richelieu and Albert; the work is on the former.

• • •

The Bullwhacker company is driving two crosscuts from its shaft, one at a depth of 200 feet and the other at 400. It is not generally known how far the openings are in, but the one on the 200 is said to be about 35 feet long. Both are going south, but are to be turned east shortly, which is the direction of the vein. The company is making splendid headway in the development of its ground, and would not surprise the public if it struck a large vein of copper sulphide ore at any time.

IN THE CANANEA DISTRICT

bot says that whenever the word is given there will be plenty of ore to ship.

It is reported from a usually reliable source that the occasion of the closing down of the Cananea-Duluth two weeks ago was irregularities which had been discovered in connection with the issues of stock of the company. According to this report certificates of stock have lately come into evidence on the market bearing the signatures of the vice-president and the assistant secretary of the company, but not the signatures of the president and secretary of the company. These certificates are said to have been issued a few days before the final papers in connection with the transfer of Cananea-Duluth to Cananea Central was made. How many of them are out is not known. Effort is now being made to ascertain this important point. Until the information is known nothing can be done with the Cananea-Duluth books. General confusion is made and until it is cleared up there is little likelihood that the mine will be touched.

HIGH-WATER MARK SCORED

the Florence and mining men are beginning to wonder if, with depth, all of the gold mines of the camp will not carry good percentages of the red metal. It is not expected that the present strike will develop enough of the red metal to make the gold and silver in the ore a by product.

Arrivals from Tenabo, in the old Bullion district, are telling of the wonderful strikes being made and a number of Goldfield's hustlers are already in possession of ground there. E. H. Mead and others have got in on the gold belt, while R. F. Colburn has a fine silver lead property from which he is already shipping to the Salt Lake smelters.

In the Gold Quartz company's property, a short distance from Tenabo, a crosscut of the ledge at a depth of seventy-eight feet shows over twenty-five feet of $500 ore. Seven sets of leases have been awarded. There are over 500 people in the district now, and it is said to be growing fast.

Some excitement is being caused by the copper discoveries at Palisade, on the line of the Southern Pacific railroad. Great ledges of high grade ore have been opened within a few hundred yards of the railroad tracks and everybody is marvelling that the ore could have gone undiscovered so long in a place where people were tramping over it daily and where the ledges have been scored by the rushing waters of the Humboldt river.

The word copper is becoming almost as commonplace as gold on the streets of Goldfield now. The Yerington country, in Lyon county, is beginning to attract attention here and the probabilities are that in another year half of the big gold operators will be in copper mining. The great showings being made by the Nevada-Douglas, Mason Valley, Yerington, Copper, Bluestone and other properties, and the splendid facilities for mining, milling and smelting which the country offers, are attracting attention.

Just about as attractive is the Ely district, but the fact is recognized that the big companies first in the field have too much of a call on the water of the country for outside interests to get in and do much now. At and around Yerington and the Walker Lake region it is said there is water for everybody, power for all, and fertile valleys capable of sustaining great populations. In addition, it is said that the mineral bearing zone is greater by far than that of Ely, while the ores are of uniformly better grade. Where two or three big companies will dominate Ely, it is said that the Yerington region will soon boast of a dozen or more.

HEINZE ACTIVE IN UTAH

30, 1905, including cash on hand and in the bank, and bullion in transit, supplies on hand, and accounts receivable, amounted to $122,512.24. For June 30, 1906, the balance of assets was $127,195.05, showing a gain of $4,682.81.

During the past week there has been still further inquiry as to the cause for the advance in Daly-West stock. There is nothing of any importance yet to report. The manager of the Ontario told your correspondent that the condition of the drain tunnel was favorable. He said, however, there was no prospect of its being opened under thirty days, and that it would likely take sixty or ninety days to drain the mines, so that it will probably be nearly two years before the time of the caving before the mines are again in normal condition. The Ontario mine is meeting expenses from the shipments in the upper workings. The Daly mine has some low-grade milling ore, but no strike has been made of high-grade ore. The cause for the advance in these three stocks is undoubtedly found in the fact that it is expected there will be quite an advance when the drain tunnel is completed.

There has been considerable talk of building a railroad from Sandy to Alta, which is to afford a better outlet for the ores of Alta camp. It is reported from the East that work has been started on the railroad. Diligent inquiry here, however, does not reveal any signs of such work. It is doubtful whether the road will ever be built. It is the opinion of those who should understand the situation that the road will not be built by the present company which is promoting the enterprise. In fact, it is stated that the manager has expressed his opinion that such a road would not be feasible.

It has been reported from the East that a strike was made in the Eagle & Blue Bell. Nothing has been given out here regarding it. The property is developing very systematically and should prove a valauble asset for the Bingham Consolidated company.

The local officers of the Nevada-Douglas Copper company have been spending a week or more at the property and have been arranging for the building of a power plant, which will furnish them with electricity cheaper than that produced for the Bingham mines. The mine itself is showing up one of the greatest copper properties in Nevada, according to the reports from the superintendent.

THE LAKE SUPERIOR IRON

will pass into cars spotted to receive it. The guaranteed capacity of the crusher is 4,000 tons every twenty-four hours, and it will easily be able to care for all the hard ore mined by the Cleveland-Cliffs company at its Ishpeming and Negaunee mines.

A few days will see the completion of the spur track from the Cascade branch of the Northwestern road to the Empire mine, south of Negaunee. With the line in commission, no time will be lost in getting the crusher plant and new hoisting machinery, it being planned to make considerable shipments before the close of the navigation. The work done on the mine, since operations were resumed this spring, has been confined to sinking a new and larger shaft about the old one, and to a greater depth, also crosscutting and raising. This was done so that no time would be lost, after the new machinery and crusher plant were installed, in getting out the ore on the milling system. Something like 75,000 tons are now in readiness for mining, and if it is found possible all of this will be taken out and shipped before the boats stop running. With the close of the shipping year, the same plan of work will be followed until the season opens again next spring, so that the force now employed at the mine will be kept on all winter. It is calculated that an additional 300,0000 tons of ore will be opened up by next spring. The sand capping on the surface has nearly all been stripped off, and the ore can be milled out clear to the surface. Although an area of over 25,000 yards of earth was stripped in removing this sand, the task was a comparatively easy one, as the average depth of the earth was only four feet.

The Cleveland-Cliffs company is to sink a shaft two miles eastward from its producing properties at Swazy, in the district to the south of Negaunee. Mine buildings and boarding houses are to be constructed and a lively little location built up. The property is known as the Smith. Ore has been found, and while the quantity may not be large enough to warrant a very large expenditure on surface, the work may result in the finding of something more valuable. This company has expended a very large sum of money in exploring the Swazy range. It has had many tracts under option, has given up many and has retained a small number. It hopes to get its money back by the finding of deposits that will be satisfactory in size and quality.

It is reported that the Volunteer mine, which is owned by Senator Alger of Detroit, and was last operated by the Steel corporation is to resume operations. A start was made recently in loading ore from the old rock pile at the Volunteer for shipment by rail to Escanaba. The work is being done under contract and it is stated that something like 6,000 tons will be shipped in this manner. The Oliver company has a steam shovel at work loading ore from the old stockpile at the Volunteer. Loading with the aid of a steam shovel has been going on there for a good share of the summer, but there is still enough ore remaining to keep the shovel employed until the close of the season.

Advices from the Canadian Soo are that the plant of the Algoma Steel company—one of the Lake Superior corporation's principal subsidiary concerns will be turning out rails at the rate of 750 tons a day before the end of the year. In August, the output was 17,865 tons compared with 11,997 tons for August, of 1905. The rails net between $32 and $33 at the mills, and contracts are on hand, which will keep the plant operating at its utmost capacity until June next. The Algoma plant has hitherto confined its attentions to rails only, but arangements are now being made with a view to manufacturing structural material, billets, wire, etc., on an extensive scale. An open hearth plant is in process of erection. The initial capacity will be 200 tons a day. The extension to the Algoma works when completed will, in addition to the other steel plants in operation in the Dominion, permit Canada to be practically entirely independent of United States steel material, on which there is a tariff of $7 a ton. The Hamilton Bridge company is about to begin work on the erection of the open hearth furnace building at the steel plant.

Capt. James Rowe, who has been in charge of the Atlantic iron mine at Iron Belt, Gogebic range, for several years, has taken the position of head mining captain of the Osceola Consolidated copper properties at Calumet. Capt. Rowe worked in the old Osceola as a miner many years ago. Axel Erickson, for many years timber foreman at the East Norrie mine, has been appointed head mining captain at the Atlantic, succeeding Capt. Rowe.

THUMPING HEADACHES

Many Duluth Women Have Them, But Few Know the Real Cause.

Dull, thumping headaches,
Sick, prostrating headaches,
Dizzy, whirling, blind headaches—
Point to disorders of the kidneys,
Tell of uric poisons in the blood.
Narcotics may ease the pain
But won't cure the cause.
Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidneys,
Remove uric poisons, purify the blood,
Banish headache, backache, urinary ills.
Here's Duluth testimony to prove it.

W. W. Scott, operator on the St. Paul & Duluth railroad, and living at 128 Sixty-sixth avenue west, Duluth, Minn., says: "I have already recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. I told in the statement made in 1898 how I had suffered with dull aching pains through the loins and kidneys. From the constant sitting position required in my work my back became so lame and sore that I could scarcely straighten. The kidney secretions were irregular and annoying. At times severe headaches would strike me and I was feeling worse than ever when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice. I began using them, and as I have stated, in my previous testimonial, they so thoroughly regulated the kidneys, removed the backaches, headaches, pains and weakness that I have felt like a different man. I have never had a return of any of these symptoms and have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills again and again."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Beaudette

Beaudette, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Miss Margaret Nelson has charge of the millinery department at Hyland's store.

Miss Young, the teacher of our school, has found it necessary, on account of crowded conditions in her room, to refuse the admittance of new pupils. Arrangements are being made to fit up the vacant room of the Rogers building for a new school room.

James Mason, John Hopgood and J. C. Reinhart of Grand Rapids, Wis., entered filings on valuable black spruce claims before United States Commissioner Albert Berg on Tuesday last.

The ferryman, Ed Eck, is the happy father of a bouncing baby boy, who arrived at their home Wednesday morning, Sept. 26.

Rev. O. L. Grefthen left last Sunday evening for International Falls and Fort Frances. He held services at the latter place Tuesday evening, and on Wednesday evening officiated at the wedding of Charles F. Brantz and Miss Nellie Olson. The wedding was a very pleasant affair. Mr. and Mrs. Bartzz reside at International Falls, Minn.

Rev. O. L. Grefthen held services at Stratton, Ont., last Sunday.

The old gentleman, Mr. Cathcart, who had the misfortune to break his leg last Fourth of July, is again seen on the streets, and by the aid of his crutches he gets along fairly well.

John Lewing returned from Wabanaca Thursday. He is interested in a farm at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith of Williams were here last Friday. They intend to rent a house and spend the winter here.

J. L. Williams of the Pioneer store has engaged R. L. Ostrander to assist him in his store.

H. B. Insdall of Pitt was a Beaudette visitor on Monday last.

Mrs. John Dundas' brother, John Tough, is very sick with typhoid fever.

Hell Clementson of Rapid River was in town this week.

Dr. F. H. Smart left for Winnipeg on a flying business trip Wednesday.

Mrs. Maud Prosser of Graceton is here on a short visit.

Alonzo Wheeler's wife, who has been ill at a hospital at Winnipeg, is now able to come home. Mr. Wheeler left for Winnipeg last Thursday.

C. R. Gould was at Warroad last Saturday evening. He reports an enjoyable time.

W. A. Wright has been appointed collector for the Modern Woodmen Protective association.

A very enjoyable party was given last Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Mary Asmus, whose home is a short distance out of town. The guests from here were: Miss Fuller, Annie Nye, Adeline Handy, Agnes Patterson, Miss Tombs, Messrs. Emil Engerbertson, Tom Cathcart, William Cathcart, A. G. La Vassar, C. R. Gould, Henry Halstrett and William Harper. The evening was spent in games played and in conclusion, which was especially enjoyed by the gentlemen, was the elaborate lunch.

Harry Curry, who has charge of the fisheries on the lake of the Woods, was a Beaudette visitor this week.

Peter Oseth spent Sunday on the Wabanaca creek.

Louis Setterholm is ill with typhoid fever.

Leo Peck, who has had charge of the pharmacy department of the Beaudette drug store, left this week for his home at Argyle. Leo's health has been failing, so he intends to winter in Southern climes.

Frank Collias is preparing to put a concrete foundation under his hotel, and also to install a heating plant in the basement. When this is done Collins will have one of the most up-to-date hotels in this part of the state.

A long-felt want is expected to be filled by James Y. Ramsey, who has gone to Warroad to purchase a well-boring outfit. Good, clean water is what Beaudette needs.

R. W. Jones, formerly of Rock Island, Ill., is engineering the laying of the sewer pipes at East Beaudette.

It has been reported that C. O. Hanson that township 160-26, about eight miles up the Rainy river, in Itasca county, has been organized this week and a set of officers has been elected.

The Rainy river planing mill has not been able to run on account of the shortage of cars, due to the wreckage of the bridge thirty miles from Port Arthur.

Wood fires have been raging along Rapid and Rainy rivers. The rain last Tuesday practically destroyed the fire.

Mr. Mathews of the Shevelin-Mathews Lumber company arrived from his trip to the Twin Cities last Wednesday.

J. H. Winterfield of St. Paul was seen on our streets last Thursday.

Hon. Albert Berg left Friday morning for Winnipeg and returned the same evening.

Tom McDonald of Duluth was a Beaudette visitor last Thursday.

There will be a change in train service. The regular train will be installed again, and there will be a day service.

The band boys met last Tuesday evening to reorganize and elect officers. Axel Miller was elected manager and F. E. Johnson secretary and treasurer.

The garden growers ought to rejoice, and those who have not tried to raise vegetables should do so, since the vegetables reach such luxuriant growth. Nice ripe tomatoes weighing seven-tenths of a pound, cabbages measuring 24 inches across, and the finest of potatoes are raised near here.

James A. Mathews left for Winnipeg on business Sunday morning.

Thomas H. Shevlin of Minneapolis was elected an honorary member of the commercial club at its last meeting.

The case of the State of Minnesota ex rel. T. W. Cathcart, plaintiff, vs the village council of the village of Beaudette, being an action in quo warranto brought against the village to test the validity of the acts of incorporation of the village of Beaudette, was decided by Judge McClenahan last week, who held that the village was not legally incorporated, and the council had no right to hold office and execute the duties of such offices. The incorporation was begun under the General Statutes for 1894 and completed under the provisions of the Revised Laws of 1905, and as a consequence the acts of incorporation were not legally conducted under the provisions of either statute, and besides, territory separated from the village proper by a meandering stream was taken, and this was held to be not adjoining territory, as provided under the statute. A stay of proceedings was granted for a period of sixty days, but it is not known as yet whether an appeal will be taken. A meeting has been arranged between the contending factions, in which it is sought to effect a compromise of the differences existing between the new and old town. In case an appeal is not taken, the village council will be in a bad position, as they collected about $6,000 in license money, and nearly all this has been already expended, so it is sought to arrange some manner of settlement to protect the council.

Ed Arnold, representing the Itasca Cedar company, has purchased from T. M. Cathcart about forty acres of land containing a valuable growth of cedar, for a consideration of $100 an acre. The company will establish a large yard and buy and sell all kinds of cedar poles and timber. The land lies west of town. A spur will be laid from the main track of the Canadian Northern out to the yards.

Miss Rundall, accompanied by Cashier Albert Hedberg of the Warroad State bank, are visitors at the home of Hon. Albert Berg this week.

Several of our local nimrods were down at the Lake of the Woods after ducks last week, but they report them none too plentiful at present, as the northern flight has not begun as yet.

L. F. Muncey, auditor of the Canadian Northern, of Winnipeg, was here last week examining the books at the station, and found everything in good shape.

J. E. Edwards of the department of commerce and labor came over from Warroad on government business Monday.

Aurora

Aurora, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Oliver Iron Mining company sent a special car over to the Stephens mine Tuesday and took all but about thirty of the laborers to Mountain Iron, where they will be employed about three weeks, when they will be returned to the Stephens.

Owing to delay in receiving some of the material the new M. E. church will not be completed until the last of this week. It is a very neat structure. Besides the auditorium there will be a study for the pastor at the rear of the pulpit. The seats will be on an incline so that all the congregation can plainly see the speaker in the pulpit.

Business is comparatively quiet in Aurora at present, but a revival is expected as soon as the men begin to arrive to go into the different lumber camps.

The new grocery store adjoining that of J. W. Olson & Co., owned by Mr. Wendell of Eveleth, is completed and occupied by the Italian grocery firm formerly located in J. G. Roop's building.

John Runquist has completed the Meadow mine spur and is moving his outfit to Elba where he will do the grading for a new spur.

Olof Helstrom was in Virginia and Biwabik on Wednesday.

R. J. McGhee attended the council meeting Tuesday evening and departed for Virginia on the Wednesday evening train.

H. J. Nathanson of Virginia was in the city Wednesday.

Justice A. P. McRae of Mesaba, was in town Tuesday attending a meeting of the school board.

John Johnson and Herman Gullickson made a visit to Mesaba Tuesday.

Mrs. Frank Abramson and sons are visiting friends and relatives in Duluth and Superior.

J. Weiner visited friends in Virginia Wednesday evening.

The lady teachers in the public schools have clubbed together and will rent a residence and keep house for themselves during the winter.

Charles Olson has completed the work of grading the public school grounds, which now presents a very sightly appearance. Grass seed has been sown and next season a fine lawn is expected to result.

Kelliher

Kelliher, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Miss Agnes Johnson, teacher in district No. 91, spent Saturday here, the guest of her mother.

Miss Josephine Dobie spent Saturday at Blackduck, visiting friends and doing a little shopping.

Mrs. Alexander Deschano spent Saturday in Bemidji visiting friends and relatives.

Peter Larkins visited at the county seat this week.

B. Y. McNary's new house is now completed and Mrs. McNary is expected this week from Little Falls, where she spent the past six weeks the guest of relatives.

J. W. Murray was a Bemidji visitor Saturday last.

The Ladies' Aid society gave a supper in the church building Saturday evening which was largely attended and proved a financial success.

T. M. Craig's new barn on Gould avenue is nearly completed. Mr. Craig will put in a fine line of livery rigs and good drivers.

Oscar L. Thompson's new dry goods and grocery store opened to the public Wednesday morning.

"Joe" Dobie of Rockolt, Wis., has accepted the position of chief clerk in the dry goods department of Thompson's new store.

J. P. Johnson has started to lay the foundation for his new two-story frame store building on Main street. Mr. Johnson expects to have the place ready for business by Nov. 15.

Ole Johnson of Shuley has purchased the Scott residence on Fourth street for a consideration of $500 and will move his family in from Shuley at once.

Gill Bros. of Bemidji have leased the Sterling place on Main street and will put in a complete line of gents' furnishings.

Landlord Scott of the Hotel Kelliher gave a dance last Saturday in the dining room of his popular hostelry. A large crowd was in attendance and a most enjoyable time was had. Music was furnished by the Blackduck orchestra.

Duluth and Twin City business men, Senator Clapp, J Adam Bede and officials of the Minnesota & International railroad came in on a special train Tuesday evening and spent a few minutes in our city.

Landlord Smith reports that he will commence immediately to build a three-story addition to his popular hostelry. The addition will be 24x38, three stories high, and will be fitted up in a most modern manner, equipped with electric lights, water works and telephone system.

Work on Kelliher's proposed system of water works will commence this week. All contracts are let and contractors are getting their material on the ground. Residents of the village are promised electric lights for Christmas eve. Kelliher's new $6,000 school will also be ready by that time, when it is planned to have a big celebration in the school auditorium. There will be speeches by the mayor, by members of the school board, Representative Hanson and Hon. Halvor Steneroon have been invited to attend. Kelliher with a population of 350, a $6,000 school house, $10,000 water and light system, a fine church building, three large stores, two good hotels and new buildings going up every day, is fast forging ahead and will soon outclass Blackduck, once the best town in Northern Minnesota.

Men are wanted by the loggers in this vicinity. The Beltrami Cedar & Land company have parties out stating they want 500 cedar men and men for general woods work. R. E. White and Ross & Ross also need from 500 to 800 men and there is a present pressing demand for at least 3,000 men. Wages are good. All the companies are paying from $25 up and board, while men working cedar by the piece are making from $5 to $8 a day clear. Carpenters are in demand. Money is plentiful and Kelliher is enjoying a small boom. Iron prospects are getting better every day and two more drills are expected on the ground soon.

Burglars broke into Rose's resort one night last week and carried off the cash register. There was $50 in the drawer, and a diligent search was made the next two days for the register and the next time the house in an auto was found back of the house in an old root cellar unlamaged and the contents intact. No clews could be found as to who did the job, though Detective Kelley worked on the job for several days. Doors and windows were all securely fastened and it is thought that the one of the inmates did the trick and becoming chicken hearted dumped the register before reaping any benefits.

Biwabik

Biwabik, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to the Herald.)—The remains of the man who was killed by the cars at Allen Junction last Saturday night were buried here Wednesday at the expense of the county. Nobody saw the accident but it is supposed that the unfortunate was killed while either boarding or alighting from a moving ore train. On the body was found a ticket on St. Mary's hospital in Superior drawn in favor of Orvill James Huribert and a receipt for dues to Dr. Lourin's hospital in Virginia drawn in favor of Ed. Fisher and signed "M. S. Ry. by H. J. P." Nothing further could be learned by Deputy Coroner Seeley as to the man's residence or relatives.

Messrs P. B. Bissett and J. E. Riley, who went to the state capital last week to see about the desired loan from the state for building two new school houses in this district, found that the reason for the delay was a lack of money in the state school fund. Captain John Gill of the Oliver Iron Mining company, who has been ill for several days, is much improved in health.

The Duluth, Rainey Lake & Winnipeg railway has extended its passenger service as far north as Gheen, about 15 miles north of Ashawa. The train leaves here in the morning at the usual hour, 11 o'clock, but returning, arrives at 2:20, two hours later. Gheen and Haley are the two new stations on the line. The change is greatly appreciated by the farmers living in that neighborhood.

Father Fannum and Echart of the Dominican order have been engaged for the past week in holding a mission at Our Lady of Lourdes church in this city, lecturing each evening to large audiences on the various sacraments and sacrifices of the Catholic faith, and explaining in a very lucid manner the origin of the different customs and usages of the church. Both men are very fluent, earnest, entertaining and convincing speakers and their lectures show a remarkable knowledge of human nature. The mission will continue tonight when the missionaries will leave for other fields.

The Duluth, Rainey Lake & Winnipeg railway will run a hunters' excursion over its line Sunday, Oct 7.

Mrs. J. G. Watt entertained at a harvest luncheon last Saturday afternoon at the Bay opera house for her guest, Miss Agnes Shiel of Chicago. The hall was artistically decorated in bunting, asters, autumn leaves and pumpkins. The ladies were accorded the privilege of using the club parlors where Mrs. J. H. Crowe received the guests. About seventy were present. After all had arrived they were escorted into the hall where tables were placed in a circle, each decorated with a huge bouquet of asters and autumn leaves placed in a pumpkin. The effect was very pretty. Whist was played. Mrs. Simons carried off first honors, Miss Helen Houk winning the consolation prize. After several games had been played luncheon was served. Proctor

Proctor, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the railroad yards, the beginning of preparations for winter is in evidence. With its new engine st house, ne inga shops and mill and vastly improved yards, the company is in better condition than ever before to take care of its rolling stock and enable its employees to work in comfort during the cold weather.

On Tuesday, J. O. Brand, foreman painter, moved his force and equipment into the commodious portion of the new building assigned to the paint shop. This division of the building is 66½ by 90 feet, well lighted, and arranged with a 33 by 20 foot concrete basement which is to be furnished with steel tanks for supplies of paints and oils. The shop has concrete floors, with cement surface. The walls and roof are white, to improve the light. All shelving, benches and lockers are to be steel. Adjustable scaffolding is to be installed between the trucks.

In the mill division of the same building, the machinery is being set, and when this is in operation which will be in a few days—the locomotive part of the plant will be complete. The new car shops are said to be on the progress and the new 24 stall house, east of the shops have been brought to grade by a 6-foot fill of gravel, and the new engine storage house is being filled with gravel to grade, and will soon be ready to have the tracks laid. During the coming winter, the company's property back of the new depot, as well as the adjacent portion of Second street, is to be raised six feet with gravel. Tracks for coach and freight yards will then be put in back of the depot.

Much inconvenience is being caused the school management by the lack of room to accommodate the large number of pupils enrolled in this year. The new building for the East side is still in the future. The Seventh and Eighth grades are crowded into a store building on the East side and the lower grades, which occupy the school building, have been divided into two sessions, one holding in the morning, the other in the afternoon, giving each pupil only one-half day's school each day.

Monday evening the village council held its regular meeting in the hall. All members were present. Bills were allowed to the amount of $885.02, of which $170 was for monthly salaries, $65 for new sidewalks, $95.30 election expenses, village supplies and miscellaneous. The treasurer was ordered to transfer the balance in the hall rent fund to the poll tax fund, which had been overdrawn. A number of hotelkeepers were present upon summons of the board of health and were ordered to clean up their premises, which have become a menace to health. A number of other citizens were present also, and considerable discussion followed on the necessity of a system of sewerage for the town. For the time being, the proprietors of the obnoxious places were ordered to clean up and deposit their garbage in watertight barrels and have them emptied three times a week. The semi-annual report of the village treasurer was read and accepted. It shows that the balance on hand on Sept. 20 was $6,851.72.

The treasurer was ordered to transfer the balance in the hall rent fund to the poll tax fund, which had been overdrawn. A number of hotelkeepers were present upon summons of the board of health and were ordered to clean up their premises, which have become a menace to health. A number of other citizens were present also, and considerable discussion followed on the necessity of a system of sewerage for the town. For the time being, the proprietors of the obnoxious places were ordered to clean up and deposit their garbage in watertight barrels and have them emptied three times a week. The semi-annual report of the village treasurer was read and accepted. It shows that the balance on hand on Sept. 20 was $6,851.72.

CAN YOU FIND THE CAPTAIN?

"A wreck! A wreck!" cries sailor;
Nor cries he all in vain,
For in the stormy waters,
A small boat's torn in twain.

Ah, brave is the true captain,
Who ne'er in life knew fear,
And he will save the wrecked ones:
Can you find him? He is near.

When "The Chums" Traveled above the Clouds.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Fred and Ned were such close friends that they went by the name of "The Chums" everywhere. When you saw Ned you were sure to see Fred, and vice versa. They were seatmates at school, they were in the same classes, and out of school they were inseparable friends.

If the mother of one of the boys wanted her son she would invariably send a messenger to find "The Chums," knowing that one could not be found without the other.

"The Chums" lived in a little town at the foot of the Rocky Mountains, and many a climb they had over the great heights and through the deep canyons round about. One Saturday morning they decided to make a journey on burroback up one of the most formidable mountains of the range—a mountain that few people ever ascended on account of the steepness and narrowness of the trail. Their elders shook their heads and told them it was not safe to go in the fall of the year, as the snowstorms set in so early on the mountains, but "The Chums" put forth all their powers of argument and won the day.

"You boys must be back in time for school on Monday morning," their parents had said, and "The Chums" promised to return to the village on Sunday, sometime before or after sunset or sunrise. Not very definite, perhaps, but they wanted to be on the safe side. Besides, if they named an hour and failed to arrive on time by the clock they knew how their mothers would worry and fret about them. So they gave themselves 10 hours in which to vary one way or the other.

With enough luncheon to last two days, their trusty rifles, a bottle of matches and two blankets, they mounted their little mountain beasts and started by daybreak up the long, winding and really dangerous trail leading to a peak that saw the sun rise full two hours before they saw it in the village below. And the sure-footed little burros—the "Rocky Mountain mocking birds," as they are called out there—went so slowly that the boys almost despaired of ever reaching the top of the mountain unless they should have a week at it. And how perverse the little beasts did behave, too. They seemed determined to walk as near the dangerous downhill side of the trail as they possibly could. And more than once a forefoot would crumble the dirt from under it, sending the loose dirt a thousand feet below, and almost causing the precipitation of beast and rider to the sudden terror of the latter and the seeming non-indifference of the former.

About sundown "The Chums" reached cloud line. And they hadn't stopped en route except to eat a little luncheon and drink from a sparkling mountain stream. They could tell that they were among the clouds, for a soft white fog enveloped them and the moisture made their hair limp. The temperature also became colder and colder as they descended, and they buttoned their coats close round them to keep from shivering.

"We must make the top tonight," said Fred. "Tomorrow morning early we've got to start home, you know, if we reach there on scheduled time."

But just as he spoke the clouds became so dense about them that the wise little burros stopped stock still, refusing to go another step till they could see their way better.

"Well, I'm for getting off and reconnoitering a bit," said Ned, dismounting as he spoke.

"I'm with you," agreed his chum, which might have been expected, since they were always of one mind.

"What shall we do with these beasts?" asked Fred, holding to the bridle of his burro.

"Can't we tie them to a boulder?" replied Ned.

"Yes, if we can find one."

A great, ragged rock was soon located in the path just a few feet above, and to this the boys forced the burros to go, tying their bridles about one projecting corner till they should go ahead a little way and find the trail.

"It's not very safe to leave these animals here," said Ned, "for if they should get loose they'd stampede for home in a jiffy."

"Then we'd be in a pickle, wouldn't we?" laughed Fred.

"As well as in the clouds," responded Ned. "But come on, pard, let's get a move on before it gets dark."

The boys carefully crept onward and upward toward the summit of the old mountain. More than once they came across great obstacles in the shape of boulders. They would crawl round or over these and go on. The higher they went the steeper and more uncertain the trail became, but the clouds were thinning some, which proved to the boys that they were getting above them. After about an hour's climb they stood at the point of their destination—the summit of the mountain. All about them was cold, quiet and serene. No sound disturbed the almost melancholy stillness, and no trees, no clouds nor boulders of any size were there to loom up and cut off any part of the wondrous view. Above the stars and moon gleamed in the clearest sky they had ever seen. Below them the clouds formed a sea of bluish-white, cutting them off from the world, apparently.

"My, this is worth the effort," said Ned, in a low, reverential tone. "How close we seem to heaven."

Fred made no reply, but stood breathing in the beauty of the grand and solemn sight. At last he spoke: "It's too bad to live in the valley when this is here."

"But, pard, I s'pose we'd get tired of this peak—nearly all the year clothed in snow—if we had to stay here. Not much room for a game of football, eh?" And Ned laughed.

"Well, if a fellow should chance to fall too near the edge it would be his last game, I reckon," replied Fred. "But we'd better return to our steeds. I feel a bit uneasy to leave them there."

After one more good look at the miles and miles of cloud sea beneath them and the starry heavens above them "the chums" set off down the mountainside to find their burros. Before they had gone very far the clouds lifted, thinned and evaporated, leaving the mountainside and the valley far below unshrouded and in plain view. The boys stopped to exclaim their admiration of the picture. "Great, grand, wonderful!" were a few of the adjectives that slipped from their tongues.

And the moon in all her glory sent forth a light that was almost equal to a cloudy afternoon. The boys, full of enthusiasm, went down and down, finding it much more difficult to descend than it had been to ascend.

"Gee, but I'll be glad to reach those little beasts!" said Fred. "I sure can do justice to one of those big sandwiches I saw your mother put into the basket. And then, after finding a safe spot—a level place large enough to hold us and the steeds—we'll wrap in our blankets and take a sleep above the clouds."

"I doubt the finding of a level spot six inches square," laughed Ned. "If we sleep it will have to be lying uphill. In fact, we'll be almost standing, leaning against the mountain for a wall, as it were."

"Believe I could sleep standing without any support behind me, I'm so tired and sleepy," said Fred. "Truth is, I don't want to descend any more mountains for a coon's age. It wasn't so bad coming up."

"Well, I reckon not," said Ned. "We didn't walk very far, if you'll remember. I believe those steeds of ours carried us a part of the way."

"Well, I'd almost forgot about those burros. I do hope they are still at the place where we left them," said Fred. "Wish we hadn't lugged these guns along. They're getting awfully heavy, and we haven't needed them."

"Yes, but a fellow never knows when he might have a call for them," responded Ned. "All the mountain lions aren't killed yet. I've heard that one was seen on the south side of this mountain last week."

And so they trudged on and down, talking to pass the time away. After going a distance of what seemed to them several miles they began to wonder if they had got onto the wrong trail, for no burros had they yet found.

"No, we couldn't have got on another trail," said Ned, "for there is but one on this side of the mountain, you know."

Then Fred stopped suddenly and caught hold of his companion's arm. "Say, pard, do you suppose we could have got started—started back on the wrong side of the mountain?"

Something like fear seized Ned. Then he said: "I don't remember coming to that immense boulder that we had to crawl round near the summit, do you? It does look a bit off, I declare."

But being brave fellows they went right on, following the steepest and most crooked trail it had ever been their misfortune to go over. Almost exhausted, they found themselves at a miner's cabin about midnight. Tapping on the door, they asked the old miner who opened it if he could tell them where they were.

Yes, they were on the south side of old Mount M——, about half-way up.

"You mean about half-way down," laughed Ned, "for we've spent this much of the night in descending."

"Now, what'll we do about our burros?" asked Fred. "The poor little beasts will stand there and wait and wait for us. It's a measly shame that we're such a pair of greenies."

But it was decided that they could not possibly go back for them that night, so they contented themselves to stay with the old miner the remainder of the night and return to their "steeds" the following morning.

Bright and early, after breakfast with their good host, "the chums" started back over the tedious trail of the night before. After the long climb and then the descent on the other side, they arrived at the place where they had left their burros. But no burros were there. The ground where they had stood showed signs of the animals' uneasiness, and they had succeeded in loosening their bridles and had taken themselves off.

"Well, after all our consideration of them, the little beasts hadn't enough consideration for us to await our return," cried Ned. "Don't catch me wasting my strength and time on them again, I can tell you."

"Well, it's walk home, and without a bite to eat, too," said Fred in a hungry tone. "Gee, mountain climbing isn't what——"

"We must take the bad with the good, pard," said Ned. "Besides, I'd do it all over again to see the pictures we saw from the top. Nothing really good is to be had without a struggle, you know."

"You're a true philosopher, pard," his friend returned. "It's never any use crying over spilled milk. But—look!" and he pointed to two slowly moving objects that came into view as they turned the corner.

"Our steeds, thank goodness!" cried Ned. And, sure enough, there, a few feet ahead of the boys, in the trail walked the two little burros, who, having spent the night alone, had probably given up the return of their young masters and had started home to give the alarm. Wise little beasts—if people do call them stupid.

Oh, Woe!

An apple small and green
And hard as flint was seen
A-hanging on a tree.
A little chap from town
With stones did knock it down,
In wicked glee.

Inside his pocket tight
He hid it out of sight;
Then homeward ran.
That apple green he ate
When it was very late.

Alley Tad's Fairy Story. By Maud Walker.

He was small, thin and pale, was "Alley Tad." If you had asked him his age he would have astonished you by saying, in his weak, treble voice, "I'm 14 goin' on 15." He blacked boots and shoes for a living and his place of business was on the street, in the park, or, as he would say, "Any ole place whur a customer can be spotted."

Alley Tad had no parents and one little girl who lived in the same alley tenement that roofed him would tell other children that "Alley Tad never did have no maw nor paw, but was jest sprouted in an old goods box back in the alley." And all these children believed the story. But the little girl, whose name was Nan, was not responsible for the strange story of Alley Tad's origin; it was the fellow himself who told it to her and she relied upon what he said. But all the same it made Alley Tad a hero among his comrades. He was leader of "the gang," as he was wont to call the band of some two or three dozen alley urchins like himself, and, like himself, half starved and in rags.

It was the pleasure of "the gang" to have parades at night between the policeman's rounds, for not one among them but feared the great, red-faced, well-fed "cop," who glowered at them whenever his eye fell upon them. Even Alley Tad forgot his bravery and leadership when the sound of the blue-coated officer's step was heard coming round the corner.

One night—a night so sultry and close that a parade was out of the question—the children gathered in front of Alley Tad's door to decide upon some form of amusement. The old woman with whom Alley Tad lived was out to get a breath, sitting on the step in her gray calico wrapper and slip-shod slippers, without hose. Her thin face bore the signs of hard work and trouble, but a kindly expression shone from her pale blue eyes. She had found Alley Tad one cold morning lying asleep in a box at her door, some old straw under him and a faded shawl over him. Alley Tad could not have been over three weeks old; so said all the neighbor women who had little ones of their own. The old woman had put the baby to her heart and held him there till her own warm flesh had taken the chill out of his shivering little form. "Bless it's pretty looks, if it lives I will keep it for my own. I never had no husband nor children. I've always been poor old lonesome Mag. But please Providence, I'll have this'n if it lives." So had the old woman spoken. And the little waif had lived against poverty and sickness, and the old woman had been true to him, too. What little she earned she had lavished upon the child, the only being in all the world she had to love. And when Alley Tad had got old enough to go to work she had spared him even then, for she had a mother's pity and love for him. And it was the old woman that held the big, warm place in Alley Tad's heart, a heart almost too big for the undersized body.

Beside the old woman on the step Alley Tad seated himself after about a dozen of "the gang" had assembled. "You kids can set about on the pavement," said Alley Tad, as cordial as a host in his circumstances and training was expected to be. "Me an' her will keep the gran'stan' seats." And he nodded his head toward the old woman as he said "her."

Pretty soon the pavement about the door of the tenement was covered with the sitting figures of little boys and girls, all as quiet as mice. They all stood in awe and reverence of Alley Tad and the old woman.

"Now, owin's to the heat—which is the fiercest ever—we'll not have the reg'lar parade of the Tenth Infantry," announced Alley Tad. "We'll have a fairy story instead, an' I'll be the teller."

A little sigh of assent ran round the crowd on the pavement and Nan, the center of the group, exclaimed: "Make her a real fairy story, Alley Tad, or make her nawthin' at all."

"She'll be real, shore enough," promised Alley Tad. "An' now all mind your manners an' keep your lips buttoned. I'm about to begin."

The old woman looked fondly on her pet, settled her bent back comfortably against the doorsill, while Alley Tad leaned back, put his hands in his pockets and began without further preliminary.

"Once on a time when I was in the country——"

"Wuz you ever in the country?" asked one of the listeners, a boy about Alley Tad's size and half his years.

"Now, there you go," cried Alley Tad. "I won't stan' for no interruptin', I won't. The nex one what speaks out while I've got the floor will be asked to find his way home. See?"

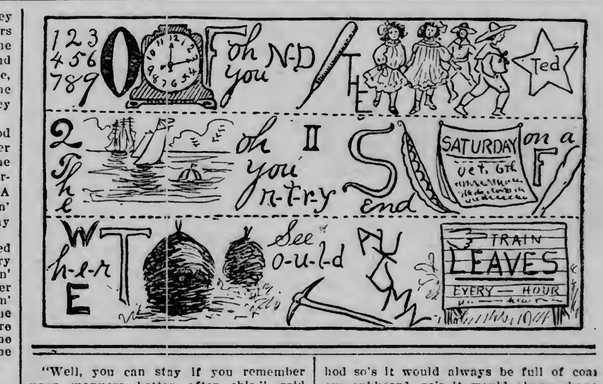

No response came from the crowd. The boy who had, in a moment of forgetfulness, interrupted the flow of Alley Tad's words was half crouching behind a big girl, fearing the wrath of the Leader.

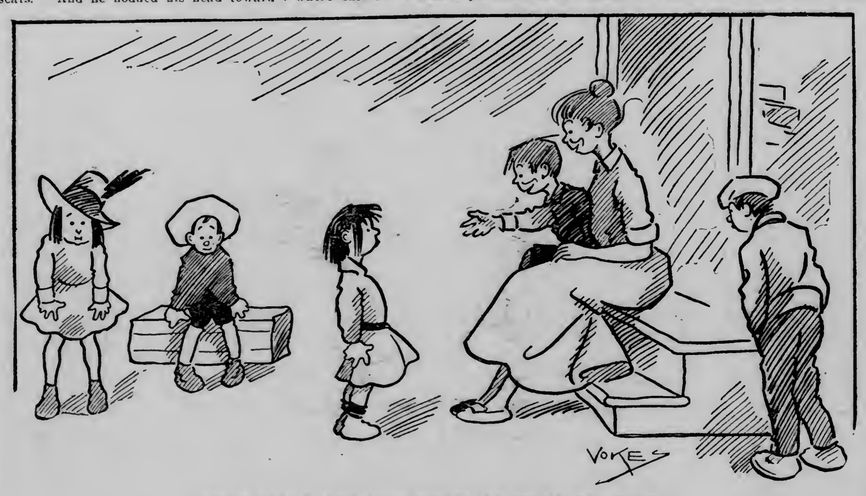

"Now, I'll continy frum whur I begun," said Alley Tad. "An' I'll look for every mother's son an' daughter to keep the peace. As I was sayin', once on a time when I was in the country, out where farmers is raised just like us is raised in the city, I was walkin' along thru a field full of watermelons, pears an' grapes, when a beautiful lady came approachi-ing me from behint a tree full of cucumbers. 'Little boy,' says she, 'have you any wish to make on this beautiful summer day? If so,' says she, 'jest speak it out, for I'm a fairy queen an' I grant the wishes of good little children.'

"Of course, you kids may believe 'nt I was surprised. 'Y, she had wings growin' right out of her shoulders, all full of white feathers. She flopped 'em when she talked and they fanned away the mosketeers and flies. I set down on a watermelon to rest and think what I wanted most. Then I decided I'd like to have all the ice-cream and herrin' 'nt I could eat. But I wanted enough for two, for less she could have some I wouldn't want none neither." And Alley Tad looked tenderly out of the corners of his eyes at the old woman on the step beside him. A flush of pride and tenderness passed over her wrinkled face, but she did not break the silence. She had not forgotten her manners, as Alley Tad would say.

"Well," continued Alley Tad, "the good fairy said 'all right,' and she waved her wand and flopped her wings, and from the clouds came raining down a hunderd herrin's an' about a barrel of ice-cream. A big spoon was stuck in the ice-cream, an' the fairy tole me to eat, which you may better believe I did.

"When I'd et about a peck I stopped to get my breath; then I asked the fairy if I could have another wish or two, an' she said I could. So I went in fer wishin', an' I wished for a wagon an' horse to Lawd the good things into the city so as She could have some before the ice-cream all melted. Almost the minit the wish left my mouth there come

"We'll have a fairy story instead, an' I'll be the teller."

"Well, you can stay if you remember your manners better after this," said Alley Tad, becoming lenient. "But a second offense means 'tracks fer home.' See? Now, I'll try once more, an' I don't wan't another member of The Gang to break in, either.

"After I tied the horse to the cucumber tree I went back to where the fairy stood, and, lo and behold! she had cut a watermelon. There it was, as crisp and red and juicy as anythin' you ever saw. Her an' me et it all. Then she said to me: 'What else do you want, little boy?'

"Well, sir, I thought an' thought for a minute or so. Then I said, 'I'll take a new suit of clothes from the top of my head to the sole of my feet! An' what do you all think? In another minute I saw comin' from the sky a big bundle which fell right in my lap. I undid it and saw the finest suit—with a vest—that any kid my make ever had. It was a beauty. I just run off behind a grape tree and put it on. Then I comes back to the fairy queen. She said I looked swell, too. Then she said, 'Make another wish, little boy.'

"I wish you'd get a new dress an' bonnet for Her,' I said. An' sure as daylight, down from the sky dropped a trunk with a fine green silk dress for Her an' a blue plush bonnet all trimmed in red flowers. An' there was a pair of new stockin's an' a pair of shoes. That Fairy didn't do no foolin', I tell you.

"Then I decided I'd fill the hansom cab an' go home to the city as fast as I could drive, for I was anxious for Her to see what all I was bringin' her. The good fairy queen helped me to pick from the trees cucumbers, oranges, bananas, plums, grapes, an'—an'—an' great big years of green corn. Then we dug a lot of tomatoes an' potatoes an' put 'em all into the hansome cab. Then, in my new suit and shinin' new shoes, I got in to start for home. 'Anything else, little boy?' asked the fairly queen. 'Yes'm,' I answered. 'I'd like it if you could make Her an 'me so strong that we'd never be tired any more an' so rich that we'd never get hungry an' be without fire in the winter, if you please.'

"Well, the good fairy said she thought she could fix it all right. She said she'd come to our house at night an' touch Her an' me with her wand an' make us strong an' well, so's we'd never get tired any more. An' she said she'd touch our coal hod so's it would always be full of coal, our cubboard, so's it would always have bread, pork chops, sweet potatoes an' cake in it. Then I thanked her an' picked up the lines an' drove off down the road, leavin' the fairy queen standin' under the cucumber tree."

Alley Tad paused, wiped the sweat from his face with his sleeve and looked round on the faces of his hearers. "I'm done," he said. "That's the end of my fairy story."

Nan stretched her arms and looked at Alley Tad inquiringly. "May I speak?" she asked.

"Shore; go ahead," permitted Alley Tad.

"Well, I'd a-wished for an otter-mobile an' a lot of candy."

"An' I'd wished for a drum an' some skates," declared another member of "the gang."

"Hist! There comes the cop," warned Alley Tad. "If you all don't get off the pavement he'll make it warm for you."

"The gang," springing to its feet, ran off in various directions as the bluecoat came round the corner. Alley Tad had made no mistake in the sound of the footfall.

After all was quiet and the tread of the policeman growing faint in the distance, the old woman put her arm about the shoulders of Alley Tad and said: "I do wish that fairy story had been a true one—for my little kid's sake, not for mine."

"Oh, it will come true if I live long enough," replied Alley Tad, his eyes on a faraway star that shone over his head. "I mean to be the good fairy myself an' bring everything to you that you want, so I do. If I didn't ever have no paw an' maw horned to me, you've been both, shore you have. An' I don't mean to forget it. I'll stick by you when I'm growed up an' rich, that I will."

Nothing to Brag of.

Oh, you needn't strut and brag so big,
And hold your head so high.

There 're others just as elegant,
Without having to half try.

You say that those pants are your first?
Well what of that?—Goodness!
Why ,ever since my first birthday
I've been dressed in a dress.

And still I never strut and brag,
And try to show off great.
Of all the things in Christendom
It's boys in PANTS I hate.

Words That Hear.

Did you ever count the number of words which have ears? Now, this question may sound absurd, but nevertheless there are many words which possess each an ear. Not a pair of ears, mind you; but one ear. A few of the words that are so blessed are given here. After reading them over, try to find as many more as you can: Tear, smear, dear, fear, hear, near, rear, pear, drear and bear.

You will notice that the ear always comes at the end of the word.
